THE CHAIRMAN next gave "The Senate," copying the toast with the name of Hon. David Christie, who briefly responded, "The Commons" followed, which was done justice to by Mr. Storton.

THE CHAIRMAN, in complimentary terms, then proposed "the Strangers" who have come from a distance and who are the guests of the evening.

Editorial Items.

Sir Peter Tait, the great army officer, and a gentleman well-known to Canadian Volunteers who have gone to Wimbledon, is a candidate for the representation of the Orkney and Shetland Isles in the House of Commons.

By the wholesale creation of Peers, Prince Bismarck has so leavened the Upper House of the Prussian Diet that the Country Reform Bill, hitherto persistently rejected by the aristocratic branch of the legislature, has at last finally passed that body, and it only requires the Emperor's signature to become law.

The Montreal Herald, speaking of Mr. S. H. Blake's appointment as Vice-Chancellor, pertinently remarks that "it must be admitted that a political party which sees all the celebrities of the Chancery Bar amongst its opponents must feel that a great mass of the best intellect of the country is against it."

The Cornwall Gazette says that it is no secret that Sir George Cartier's English physicians look upon his recovery as hopeless, and in consequence the firm of Cartier, Pominville & Betourney is being wound up, Mr. Pominville having been appointed Collector of Customs at Montreal vice Delisle, pensioned in the prime of life, for his services to the moribund regime, and Mr. Betourney having received a Judgeship in what should be "French Manitoba."

At a celebration, a few days ago, at Fort Garry, of the golden wedding of the father of "General Lepine" who figured so prominently among the rebels during the difficulty in the North-West, and who presided at the murder of Thomas Scott, there were present, and taking a prominent part in the festivities of the occasion, Archbishop Tache, Hon. Mr. Sward, Rev. Father Proulx, Hon. Joseph Royal, Joseph Dubue, M.P., and Louis Riel, all of whom made speeches on the occasion. This was a strange mixture, in that company, of divines, honorables and murderers.

Mr. Cauchon has done the only thing possible under the circumstances to escape the ignominy of parliamentary expulsion, and has resigned his seat in the Legislature. A new writ has been ordered for Montmorency, and it is said that Mr. Cauchon will again be a candidate.

Danger to an Arctic Expedition.

Great fears are entertained for the safety of a Swedish expedition sent under the direction of Professor Nordenfalk, the well known Arctic explorer, with a view of spending the winter at Spitzbergen and discovering from that starting point the open Polar sea. In the last days of August the expedition, consisting of three vessels—the Polna, Gladan and Onkel Adam—was at the Norwegian islands on the Norwegian islands, on the northern side of Spitzbergen, and as the northeastern island of the archipelago was unapproachable on account of ice, the leaders resolved to enter the Hinlopen Sound, between that island and Spitzbergen, with a view of reaching Lomneby. The Polna with the Gladan in tow was seen to pass, on the first of September, Verlegenbuk, the northernmost point of Spitzbergen (eighty degrees latitude) and two days later the Onkel Adam passed the same point. It must have been the intention of the leaders to make Lomneby their winter quarters, and to fulfil this the Gladan and the Onkel Adam would have to unload their cargo and return as soon as possible only the Polna being prepared for wintering. But a telegram sent on the 30th of October from the Governor of Tromsø to the Norwegian Department of the Interior, states that nothing has been heard since the beginning of September of the two vessels, and it is feared that they are, together with six Norwegian sealers, caught in the ice. If that should be the case it is supposed that the men have left the vessels and taken to the boats and that they have sought refuge on the western coast of Spitzbergen, where they have some chance of finding as yet open waters. As rather more than one hundred lives are at stake, the Norwegian Government has resolved to send out from Tromsø one of the steamers built for whaling and sealing; and as the shipwrecked are sure to have shaped their course towards certain well-known places on the coast, some hope may be entertained of their being saved.

DR. LIVINGSTONE'S BROTHER.—The editor of the Hamilton Spectator had an interview the other day with Mr. John Livingstone, of Listowel, brother to the celebrated African traveler. Mr. Livingstone was on his way home from New York, where he had gone to meet Mr. Stanley, the discoverer of his distinguished brother. Mr. Livingstone exhibited to us several interesting African mementoes, which his brother charged Stanley to deliver to his relatives resident in Canada. Whilst Mr. Livingstone was in New York, he was entertained at a banquet in Delmonico's, given by the Herald club, a club composed exclusively of gentlemen connected with the Herald newspaper. He was also entertained at another banquet in the same place, by the American Geographical Society, and addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting at the Cooper Institute. Stanley speaks of his reception by all classes of British society in the most flattering terms, and though he has no exalted opinion of the geographers who sit in London and trace out on the map of Central Africa an arbitrary system of geography to suit their own views, his intercourse with the great body of the British people was of the most agreeable and cordial nature. Dr. Livingstone hopes to return to England before the end of 1874, and soon after he will visit Mr. Bennett in New York and his friends in Canada.

VOLUNTARY LIBERALITY.—It is stated in a late Scotch paper, that at the opening of a new Presbyterian Church at Campbelltown, the collection at the door throughout the services amounted to the very large sum of $10,075! When we consider that this large sum was given voluntarily at the door, and not in the stand-and-deliver fashion too often practiced in this country, it speaks well for the liberality of the congregation.

On the night of the Boston fire a dealer in boots and shoes, finding that the fire had reached his rear store, said to a few stragglers who had assisted him: "You may as well help yourself to boots." One fellow took a pair the merchant handed him, and, after glancing at them said: "You haven't got a pair of slim evens, have you?" An explosion next door prevented a response.

The Philadelphia iron masters propose to erect an iron monument to Horace Greeley in Fairmount Park.

A few days ago a serious skating accident occurred at Cincinnati. The rink was crowded when the ice gave way, and a large number were precipitated into the deep water. Eight ladies were extricated in an insensible condition.

DeWitt Talmage said in his discourse on Sunday, Mr. Greeley's death ought to be a warning to overworked literary men. He told me ten days before his nomination at Cincinnati that he had not had a sound sleep in 15 years.

FRIENDS IN COUNCIL—BYE NEWS FROM ARD-GOWAN—THE SUDDEN JOURNEY.

"Hang it," said Harry, "after all it was foolish in me to feel so bad over the business. Manby's lecture and your brotherly love have got me out of the feeling which threatened to grow morbid, and now I am thinking of the matter in its delightful aspect. Accept my congratulations, George, on the discovery that has been made; you know no one can more sincerely rejoice over it than I do, not only on the fact that your heritage is discovered, but on account of that heritage itself. To think that you should turn out to be the son of George Morrar! And yet, now that the truth has come out, how wonderful that we never suspected it."

"How could we, or how could any one," answered George. "Everything was against the truth being guessed at. The marriage of George Morrar was entirely unknown. How, then, could it be imagined that the dead lady was his wife, and her child his son? Then, to make the truth difficult of discovery, the turning up of Garrett with the so-called widow and child of George Morrar prevented any one's thoughts from going in such a direction."

"No doubt of it—the infamous wretch. But how clear all is made to us now, and how well we understand the visits of Garrett to this place to learn the state of Walley. No wonder that he dreaded the return of his reason."

"Ah," said George, "and how the circumstance of the shipment of the negro girl is explained. She was Milley, my mother's black servant girl. She came over, no doubt, expecting to find her mistress—my mother—at Ardgowan."

"Ha! a light comes to me," said Harry. "That must have been the time when my father was made aware of the fraud, so successfully executed by Garrett and Rangoon. Up till then, he must have been as much their victim as any one; but I have heard from the servants that, one day, a negro girl came to the house, and my father went with her to Ardgowan; that she was never seen again; that after that he and Nathan Garret were amazingly friendly, and that we no longer in straightened circumstances. Oh, I see it all as if it were written in a book before me. He heard Milley's story, learned the truth, went with her to the mansion and confronted the conspirators. But Garrett was not yet done; he had another card to play. He gave my father to know of your existence, and then their iniquitous compact was made. The poor, helpless Milley was cruelly betrayed, and shipped off, as the sailor told you, and they shared the spoil between them. Depend upon it, George, that is the way of it."

George was inclined to hold Harry's opinion as sound, for it also gave explanation of the conversation between Garrett and the Captain which George overheard on the day of his arrival at Ardgowan. We know how truly the youth had devined; but nearly all that was made known to them that day must have been pretty shrewdly guessed by the reader long ere this, who, we doubt not, fully anticipated the nature of the revelation which Walley would make were his reason restored.

"What a wonderful Providence has been in it all!" said George, "after some moments of silent musing. How distinctly the Divine hand can be traced guiding and governing events! How wonderful, for instance, that I should fall into the care of Kenneth and Lucy! Oh, could they have known whose child it was whom they adopted, how glad at heart would they have been!"

"They know it now," said Harry, with solemn emphasis. "They know it ere we did, and I doubt not received your parents' thanks when they met in heaven. But, as you say, the working of a beneficent Providence is clearly seen, and the more longer we think of it. It is seen in us two being brought together; in my marriage with Caroline, whom I loved before I knew she was the daughter of Kenneth Bruce; in your going to Ardgowan and meeting and loving Lillias; in our friendship formed with Manby, by which we were brought to Walley at the moment when he declared your parentage; in short, the Providential chain is seen joining itself link by link, till now it is complete in a result which will establish justice, abolish fraud, and consummate happiness."

"Yet," remarked George, "this same Providential working has an opposite and at first sight more perplexing aspect. In the various occurrences we have noticed, how can we escape the thought that Providence was arranging the skein which itself had tangled. We must not confine Providence to what seems only beneficial and protective; we must recognize it also in the dark and destructive. There was a Providence, I suppose in the storm which raged on the Ayrshire coast when the Eglantine was wrecked, which brought the vessel near the shore at the time, which sent her on the rocks and drowned the crew and passengers all but Walley and myself, and which cast Walley into madness for twenty years, thus producing those untoward circumstances which made Garrett's plot possible. Don't you think so?"

"Well," returned Harry, rather taken aback, "I suppose we can't allow that these things took place in defiance of Providence, though I confess it is difficult to reconcile them with our idea of Divine goodness. The unravelling is more in harmony with that than the tangling."

CANADIAN MONTHLY.—The December number of this periodical completes the first year and second volume. We are glad to see that the publishers have received such encouragement as to warrant them in promising not only that they will keep up the magazine to its present standard, but that they will make improvements and increase its attractions. This is very encouraging and is a good proof that a really good magazine, of purely Canadian manufacture, both literary and otherwise, will receive sufficient support to make it a paying enterprise. We expect to learn that the subscriptions to the new volume are largely in excess of those for that now finished. The most readable article in the December No. is Prof. Goldwin Smith's paper on the Labor Movement. There are also other interesting papers as will be seen by the contents:—Garmina (concluded); The Labour Movement; The Game of Checkers; Current Events; Stanley's Discovery of Livingstone; On the Law of Progress; Book Reviews; Literary Notes, &c. Copies for sale at the book-stores.

FROZE TO DEATH.—A coroner's inquest was held at Norwood on Tuesday on the body of Aaron Chapin, a cabinet-maker, formerly of Colborne, Verdict: "The deceased, Aaron Chapin, came to his death by exposure to intense cold while in a state of delirium, produced by prolonged alcoholic imbibition, on the night of Monday, the 9th inst."

Shrinkage of Cut Cordwood.
Since Mr. Creech was brought before the Police Court a few days ago, on a charge of selling cut and split wood by short measure, and the statement of the Police Magistrate on that occasion that a cord of wood (128 cubic feet) when cut and split should measure 150 cubic feet, there has been much excitement and dissatisfaction among the wood consumers of the city who at once settled down to the opinion that they were being systematically swindled by wood dealers. Those who said that a cord of wood when cut and split would measure less than the original 4 feet wood, were laughed at and ridiculed. However, yesterday, Captain Harbottle, of the City Wood Yard, No. 110 York-street, determined he would put the matter to a practical test and prove a thing or two to the surprise of the lieges. So in the presence of several members of the press, and a number of others, the usual wood-rack (4x4) for the purpose of measuring exactly half a cord and an inch over was solidly and as densely packed as possible with sound split body wood especially selected from a large pile. So tightly were the sticks pressed together that no interstices could be seen, and as there was not a limb in the pile, probably not a more just half-cord of wood was ever piled. The half cord frame measured fully sixty-four cubic feet. The steam saw then started, and in ten minutes the pile was sawn in three lengths; in two minutes more the splitting machine had reduced it to stove wood. Captain Harbottle and two men now went to work and piled the sawed and split wood back into the half-cord frame, which had been more than level. The wood was fitted together as closely and tightly as possible, and instead of filling the frame two or three feet above the top, only filled it level to two tiers—the third tier having been piled one-third of the way up—making 64 and 3-27ths cubic feet, instead of 64 as it was when four feet long. Our readers may be sure this announcement was received with astonishment. There was half a cord of wood nearly fifteen cubic feet short, simply by being cut and split.

At the point one of the delivery wagons was drawn into the yard and the box carefully measured—being 9 feet 10 inches in length, 3 feet 4 inches in width, and 2 feet 5 inches in depth, equal to 79 cubic feet and a very small fraction of a cubic foot. Into this the wood was thrown in the usual manner, and the wagon bed was heaped full and covered by several inches. Here was a half cord of wood that started at 64 feet, shrank to 49 feet, and then increased to 79 feet.—This practical test was surprising enough our readers may be sure.—Hamilton Times.

As the work of clearing away the ruins of the Boston burnt district progresses, immense quantities of wool are dug out, and piled loosely in the streets to an immense height. The recovered wool has a most unsavory odor, but it can be cleaned and utilized.

BREAKFAST—EPPE'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills.—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Each packet is labeled "James Eppe & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Eppe's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).

If a man wants a Bottle of Whisky, let him buy it and take it home like a man, and not sneak home with a bottle of "Bitters" or "Cordial," and pretend that it is medicine. If he wants a tonic that is something better than a temporary stimulant, he should get a bottle of Peruvian Syrup (an Iron Tonic), that will vitalize the blood and give durable strength to the system.

M. Poncelet, in his great work, "The Universe," says that "Anatomically and physically speaking, the human mechanism is very rude and coarse compared to the exquisite delicacy revealed in the organization of certain animals. But in us, the intellect, the real sceptre of the universe predominates over the apparent imperfection of matter. Through it man alone approaches the chosen creatures who shine near the throne of the Eternal, and form a bond of union between heaven and earth. A grand and philosophic truth. Were man to conform more to the laws of health and of nature, and be less addicted to the gratification of his passions, it would not be necessary to advertise Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites as a restorative for the powers of the brain and nervous system, while the world's progress in enlightenment would indeed be marvellous.
