Archives of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol ➡ (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▼ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

La bibliothèque des Archives

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole ➡ signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▼ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

No. 3.

HAMTON, 2ND MAY, 1860.

To the Congregation of The Macnab Street Presbyterian Church, Hamilton.

Infamous conduct of Robert Hopk's, Alexander McKenzie, Donald McLellan and others, your elders virtually headed by David Inglis, your minister.

The usual monthly meeting of the teachers of your Sabbath School, took place last evening, and after the matter was disposed of, David Inglis, your minister rose, and looking at Hopkins, said, "You want me away," and left the meeting—and of conduct he has never pursued hitherto at these meetings: who, with his said language, clearly shows his knowledge of and concurrence in the infamous proceedings which were to follow. Such conduct however from a creature, who swore that he believed doctrine to "be the truths of God," which at the very moment of his oath he did not believe, (as I have already explained to you) is simply to be expected.

My sister has been a teacher in the School for some years. Not the slightest fault has been found with her hitherto, on the contrary praise has been given to her, for her exertions on behalf of the School. And to show Hopkins' view of my sister's conduct, before my first letter to you, he took his daughter from Mrs. Watson's class, and placed her with my sister, saying, he would be much better taught: and she is still with my sister.

Scarcely ere David Inglis left the said meeting, Alexander Mackenzie, one of your elders, rose and moved a resolution to expel my sister from the school, and made a furious speech, charging my sister with speaking ill of Inglis, Hopkins and himself, and that she had been trying to pervert the minds of the children and their parents against them. When he sat down, a similar course of conduct was pursued by Hopkins, Davidson and some others of that gang. As soon as my sister somewhat recovered herself from such a sudden brutal attack, (wholly without notice to her, but evidently all well arranged by Inglis, Hopkins, and those foul creatures,) asked what she had said about Inglis, Hopkins, McKenzie, and the perversion of the children, &c., after insisting upon the charges being proved, and that general alterations should not be taken, at length one James Miller said, that met my sister on a Sabbath afternoon recently, returning home, visiting an absent scholar, who made the remark to him, "that Inglis had surely some object in view in visiting the Sabbath School to-day, as he very seldom comes near it," or words to that effect. My sister asked if that was not true; the admission had to be made of its truth, and that Inglis had sadly neglected the Sabbath school: but he—Miller, thought my sister spoke the language in a disparaging manner." Thus were the first charges refuted, as there had nothing else to say,—these charges being as they all well knew, infamously false.

The next charge was made by William Davidson, the Saddler. That my sister had consulted with him to some of the Teachers, for an erroneous prayer made by him in the Sabbath school. This my sister at once admitted, and cited the prayer, which was, "that we might all suffer on the cross as our Saviour suffered, and all be raised from the dead as our Saviour was raised," and asked, if that prayer was not blasphemous, and appealed to one or two persons there, if they did not hear it, none of whom would speak, but William Christholm, one of your deacons, on being again closely reminded by my sister of his language, said that he heard Davidson using wrong language in a prayer, since made by him in the Sabbath school. These creatures then finding that Davidson's said grossly blasphemous prayer could not be denied one saying by way of excuse it might be a mistake in him, forsook that charge.

One McIntosh, a salesman in Osborne's grocery, brought up the charge that my sister has spoken "so much nonsense" about the Sabbath school library books, that he "was disgusted," and did not attend the meetings. As to that charge, my sister at once admitted, that she had repeatedly brought up before the Teachers, at their meetings, the very improper books which were in the Sabbath school library; that a number of the books were wholly unfit for a Sabbath school; that in consequence a committee was appointed to examine same, composed of Hopkins, McKenzie, Skinner, and herself; that upon such examination a number of books were found wholly unfit for a Sabbath school—improper books; that she, with consent, took several of them, and placed in the library an equal number of books, at her own expense; that Hopkins did likewise; and that he, Hopkins, declared that one book which he took was so bad, that in order to make an example before his family, he burned it; that these books were put in the library by Donald McLellan, the then Superintendent of the School, out of his shop; for which he was paid by the congregation; that as the school much wanted books, she—my sister—called upon a number of the congregation for a subscription to provide books, which with one or two exceptions, was liberally responded to; that over 80 books were therewith purchased, (all of which my sister at her own expence covered, as well as over 100 volumes of the old books,) a few from the person in charge of the works of the Board of publication of our church, (the great portion of the works sent to my house by Mr. Skinner, belonging to said Board, being more or less corrupted with the Millenarian heresy, were refused—a fact which doubtless accounts for the failure of Inglis' pet scheme, who selected the books,) and the residue from Donald McLellan; that this was a work of great trouble to my sister, upon whom it chiefly fell, owing to the mass of trash kept by McLellan, but the Committee did not wish to pass his shop, and the best selection was made out of what he had. All these facts finally had to be admitted. Hence that charge fell to the ground.

Finally, they were driven to the real cause of their fiendish hostility to my sister, namely, my last letter to you; and which had repeatedly before this time been spoken of by some of these creatures. Hopkins who was chairman, then said to my sister, that if she would say, that "she did not sympathize with me in the matter, they would not expel her." This my sister indignantly rejected, as an outrage on humanity, that a sister should have no feeling for a brother; and that I had not used her name in my letter, nor said any thing about the Sabbath School therein, and that my actions afforded no grounds for expelling her. However, these foul beings all banded together, and well arranged beforehand with Inglis, who as already remarked, basely skulked from his duty, for upwards of an hour threatened my sister in every possible conceivable way, to get her to say, that she "had no sympathy for me," and they would not expel her. James Dingwall, a carpenter; one of your deacons, saying, that if my sister would only say "that she would do what she could to bring me back from my errors, as to my said letter, he thought probably the teachers would be satisfied." And when this additional foul suggestion failed, John Brown, a drill Sergeant, another one of your elders, desired to know if the Session would not take up the matter against her, thereby indirectly (more vile than if direct,) villainously threatening her with expulsion from the church, unless she would say, that she had no sympathy for me: that also failing, Hopkins again at near the hour of eleven at night, repeated the brutal offer to my sister, that if she "would just say that she had no sympathy for me, that she would not be expelled;" which being again rejected, the following persons voted in support of that fiendish, heartless offer, namely: Alexander McKenzie, Donald McLellan, John Brown, McIntosh, Angus Sutherland, one of your deacons, Angus Sutherland, a blacksmith, James Miller and Alexander Davidson, with Hopkins as chairman. And my sister was thus expelled from the sabbath-school, by Elders of a Christian Church, because she had the feelings of a human person,—the feelings of a sister for a brother, and dared maintain the same.

Human language fails in the attempt to comment upon such fiendish heartlessness.

These foul beings were most lovingly harmonious last night, in this their iniquity. It is only however a short time since said McKenzie and McLellan were elected Elders; and McLellan thereupon strongly and bitterly opposed before the Session McKenzie's ordination as an Elder, upon the ground that McKenzie was dishonest in money matters; and he cited one case in proof thereof, that he McKenzie had attempted to cheat Mr. John Judd, of this city—a chandler.

Further at present I say not.

Yours faithfully,

COLIN D. REID.

3RD MAY.

Additional infamous conduct.

I on behalf of my sister, this morning applied to the Secretary of the Sabbath School, for a copy of the resolution, expelling her from the school. Whereupon he said, that he could not give it to me, as McKenzie had called on him yesterday morning, and said to him,—“Miss Reid will be wanting a copy of the resolution, but don't give it to her;” but that he would call on Hopkins the Superintendent, and ask him about it. Thereafter he the Secretary called at my office and informed me, that he had called on McKenzie and Hopkins, and that both of these persons ordered him not to give to my sister a copy of the resolution; and that therefore he could not.

What think you of this conduct? These wretches knew their guilty foul conduct would not bear the light,—as villainy loves darkness.

C. D. R.
