THE LAWYER'S FAREWELL TO HIS MUSE.

Sir W. Blackstone, whose name has become, perhaps, more familiar than any other in the mouths of English lawyers, was born on the 10th of July, 1723, after the death of his father, and he lost his mother before he was twelve years of age. His uncle, Mr. Thomas Bigg, an eminent surgeon in London, took charge of his education; and at the age of seven years he was admitted into the foundation of the Charter-House. When he attained the age of fifteen he had risen to the head of the school, and was at that early period of life admitted a Commoner of Pembroke College, Oxford. His progress both at the Charter-House and at Oxford, was distinguished, and he was elected to an exhibition both at the school and at the college. Having selected the law as his profession, he became a member of the Middle Temple on the 29th of November, 1741. Hitherto he had applied himself exclusively to literary and scientific pursuits; but in entering upon the severer studies of his profession, he conceived it necessary to abandon the more pleasing avocations to which he had devoted himself. The feelings which this change induced he has expressed in the following lines, remarkable for the elegance both of the style and of the sentiment.

As by some tyrant's stern command,
A wretch forsakes his native land,
In foreign climes condemned to roam,
An endless exile from his home;
Pensive he treads the destined way,
And dreads to go, nor dares to stay;
Till on some neighbouring mountain's brow
He stops, and turns his eye below;
There, melting at the well-known view,
Drops a last tear, and bids adieu;
So I, thus doomed from thee to part,
Gay queen of fancy and of art,
Reluctant move with doubtful mind,
Oft stop, and often look behind.
Companion of my tender age,
Serenely gay, and sweetly sage,
How oft thou wert my constant guide,
By verdant hill, or shady glade,
Where fervent bees with humming voice
Around the honeyed oak rejoice,
And aged elms, with awful bend,
In long cathedral walks extend!
Hailed by the lapse of gliding floods,
Cherish'd by the warbling of the woods,
How blest my days, my thoughts how free,
In sweet society with thee!
Then all was joyous, all was young,
And years unheeded roll'd along;
But now the pleasing dream is o'er—
These scenes must claim me now no more:
Lost to the field, and torn from you,
Farewell—a long, a last adieu!
The wrangling courts, and stubborn law,
To smoke, and crowds, and cities draw;
There selfish faction rules the day,
And pride and avarice throng the way;
Dissonant taint the murky air,
And midnight confounding glare!
Loose revelry and riot bold
In frighted streets their orgies hold;
Or when in silence all is drown'd,
Fell murder walks her lonely round;
No room for peace, no room for you,
Aisle, celestial nymph, adieu!
Shakespeare no more, thy sylvan son,
Nor all the art of Addison,
Pope's heaven-strung lyre, nor Waller's ease,
Nor Milton's mighty self must please:
Instead of these a formal band
In furs and coils around me stand,
With sounds unsoft, and accents dry,
That grate the soul of harmony.
Each pedant gaze unheeds his store
Of mystic, dark, and discordant lore;
And points with tottering hand the ways
That lead me to the thorny maze.
There, in a winding, close retreat,
In Justice doomed to fix her seat;
She keeps the wandering world in awe;
And there, from vulgar sight retired,
Like eastern queens, is much admired.
Oh let me pierce the recret shade,
Where dwells the venerable maid!
There humbly mark with reverent awe,
The guardian of Britannia's law;
U'fold with joy her sacred page,
(The united boast of many a sage,
Whence issued through uniform appears
The wisdom of a thousand years.)
In that pure spring the bottom view,
Clear, deep, and regularly true,
And other virtues thence imbibe,
Than lurk within the hid secret;
Observe how parts with parts unite
In one harmonious rule of right;
See countless wheels distinctly tend,
By various laws, to one great end;
While mighty Alfred's piercing soul
Perceives and regulates the whole.
Then welcome business, welcome strife,
Welcome the cares, the toils, the strife,
The vice-wind, the pore-blind sight,
The toil by day, the lamp by night,
The tedious forms, the solemn page,
The pert dispute the dull debate,
The duncy haunch, the bustling hall;
For thee, fair Justice, welcome all!
Thus, though my noon of life be past,
Yet let my setting sun at last
Find out the still the rural cell
Where sage retirement loves to dwell!
There let me taste the home-felt bliss
Of innocence and inward peace;
Untainted by the guilty bribe,
Un-need and the busy strife;
No orphan's cry to wound my ear;
My honor and my conscience clear;
Thus may I calmly meet my end,
Thus to the grave in peace descend!

FRIENDS.

Every thing that Cicero has said in his treatise De Amicitia is very fine, and very good, and very true; but he does not seem to have been altogether aware of the fulness of meaning contained in the word friend. A man invites a few friends to dine with him. They come—they eat, they drink, they talk, they criticize, they depart. They have praise and blame for the cook, and they speak leavened of the wine, and, in nine cases out of ten, somewhat censoriously of the host. For a while he has been ten orations in his liberality, or too rigorously in his hospitality; and he seems almost required to ask pardon of those whom he has fed for the manner in which he has fed them. Then, the entertainer becomes in his turn the entertained, and takes his turn also in the delights of calumny, criticism and friendly commiseration. These are friends by the table, created by the various combinations of fish, fowl, and wine, closely adhering so long as that last which holds them together; but that falling, they fall, and depart, and separate.
A man grows rich and rises in the world. Thereupon all his neighbors and acquaintance congratulate him upon his good fortune, and are ready, in the plenitude of their wisdom, to teach him how to spend his newly-acquired wealth. And he that, before his prosperity, secretly knew that he had a friend in the world, is now informed how delighted his countless friends are to hear of his success.

A man grows poor and sinks in the world. Forthwith he hears, or he may hear, if he have patience to listen to them, sage lectures upon prudence, and many edifying discourses on discretion. And he receives many a humiliating lesson, and observes many an altered look; and he has a great deal of pity and very little help; and he is recommended in the most delicate manner imaginable to not to spoil the pleasures of his prosperous acquaintance by his unprosperous presence; and while he fancies that he has not a friend in the world, he is given to understand that his friends are very sorry for him, and his friends, as all his friends ought to do something for him; but unfortunately he has tried his friends, all out.

A man, just beginning life, marries a woman whose family is not so good as his own. Thereupon, father and mother, and uncles and aunts, and brothers and sisters, and cousins, first, second, third, and fourth, put themselves into an unanimous passion; co-operate in a system of unanimous sulks; insult the young woman and scold the young man, more especially if the newly-married couple is in need of any assistance or continuance. And then, when the protracted couple are suffering under the pangs of poverty, and the mortifications of desertion and solitude, the world's end, with a most edifying gravity, "The young gentleman's friends did not approve of the match."

A young man comes to his fortune as soon as he comes of age. He buys horses and dogs, and runs races, and lays bets, and plays at cards, and sometimes wins and sometimes loses; he gets into scrapes and fights duels; and he finds himself none the richer for his winnings, and much the poorer for his losses; and if he cannot spend or lose his money fast enough himself, he has myriads of friends, who will borrow it of him, and do their best to assist him in dispersing it. Then at last he smashes, or is done up, and then all the world, with its long moral pliz, says—What a pity it is that his friends led him to such extravagance!
At midnight there is a noise in the streets, women are shrieking and men are hallooing, and some are calling for help; and there is a well-dressed man sweating at a constable who attempts to hold him, and the well-dressed man has obviously been rolled in the dirt; his hat is as flat as a pancake, his eyes are as red as herrings, and his tongue is like a weather cock in a whirlwind, and he must be trussed like a boiled rabbit before he can be managed; and all the account he can give of himself the next morning is, that he had been dining with a few friends.—London Atlas.

INVASION OF ENGLAND!!!—This is no longer a bugbear! The days of a coast guard, signal stations, batteries, and volunteers, the nights of sudden alarm and hasty armaments, are now over. This is no flat-bottomed-boat-expedition lying at ease in its own harbours. No army of diversion manœuvring on its own shore before it "meditates the blue profound." The enemy has landed on our coasts. The threat is put in execution. The Duke of Brunswick has landed! He is here! Our readers will share the agitation and alarm we feel. He was fired at from the heights of Dover, but he stood our cannonade, entered the harbour amidst the smoke of our broadsides, and effected a landing in spite of our batteries. He who was laughed at a few months ago for talking loud nonsense, of calling England to account, and of demanding justice from the German diet, has now shown us what it is to be laughed at. With one carriage and three servants, on board of a Dutch steam-boat, this Jason of the present day, has come to Colchis alone, but in himself a host.—Who shall deny the breech that he has ventur'd for? Who will dispute that he is fitted for a sheepish enterprise? We should have called his courage Quixotism—we should have reproved his boyish exuberance, but, confident in his undaunted and personal prowess, we may taunt but cannot hope to repel him. This is the age of adventure. "There is sore another flood towards, and these couples are coming to the ark." Of all animals, it seems the menagerie of England will have to boast most of the royal nature. It is rumoured abroad that a congress is approaching, and we may prophesy that it will be held in St. James's, not by ambassadors, plenipotentiaries, ministers, or charge d'affaires, but by Kings in their own proper person; not concerning what is to be, but to concert what might have been.
Oh come you in peace here or come you in war?
Young hero of Brunswick? What a name to run away with! In reverence for the glorious memory of Minden, Dettingen, and Quatre Bras, assume no title state. Hide thy diminished head under some less honourable appellation. Re-assured by more correct information of thy pacific intentions, our alarm sinks into opposite feeling, for nothing that is contemptible can inspire fear. We wish to learn that gunpowder should have been wasted in saving such a "shorten hearing." The name of Brunswickers, as a party word, was hateful in our ears; but, as borne by the brave burghers who have cast thee out, it becomes a title of honour, eminent and enviable.—Id.

NAUTICAL NOMENCLATURE.—A clever article in the current number of the United Service Journal, plausibly and humorously accounts for the variety of names in the Navy List, by the different taste of each first Lord of the Admiralty in succession. A Nimrod in that department immortalized his fox-hounds in the British Olympos by imposing on "men-of-war" the names that distinguished the inhabitants of his kennel; he gave us the Boxer, Biter, Bouter, Boller, Bisk, Cracker, Di-hor, Hasty, Haver, K, Hearty, Jasper, Pinner, Peiter, Rover, Rolla, Kanser, Snapper, Swinger, Sully, Ticker, &c.—His Lordship's successor was a classic, and bequeathed to "Jack" a legacy of jaw-breakers, such as Andromache and Agamemnon, Bellerophon and Polyphemus; and Aggrieved by the blue jackets into Andrew Mackey, Ezg and Bacon, Billy Ruffian, and Polly Infamous! Conquest supplied a glut of Gallicisms, amongst which Jack contrived to find Belly Squeaks (Belliqueux), Jenny Rooks (Geneveux), and Dead-woe (Delaigneur). The reign of braggadocio succeeded, and the very name of a ship was equal to a broad-side. Amongst other thunders we find Redoubtable, Impregnable, Invincible, Implaceable, Formidable, and all the ables but peaceable. Next came the naturalist lord, who flouted Rein-deers, Rattlesnakes, and Raccoons, "Flattered the Volcians" with Bozards and Bustards, and stuffed a Crocodile into his catalogue. Lastly came Lord Melville, to pour into old ocean a second edition of his mighty feeders. He gave the Tigris, Indus, Euphrates, Ganges, Orontes, and even the Spry, the Liffey, and the Shannon. Well might the tars call his lordship a fresh-water sailor. As to the Spanish names, the writer whimsically observes that a Trafalgar he boasted that a broad-side from his ship shivered the stern of St. John, while another discharge had nearly sent the Santissima Trinidad to the devil.

KING JOHN.—This monarch, who had scarcely a redeeming quality in his constitution, conferred essential benefits on England, by the attention he paid to the extension of agriculture; as well as by his anxiety to improve the breed of horses in his dominions. To him we are unquestionably indebted for the foundation of our now unrivalled draught-horses. Aware of the superiority in bulk and strength of the Flemish steeds, he imported a hundred of their finest stallions. Such was his ardour for improving and increasing the numbers of strong horses, that he never failed to possess himself of every steed which became noted for its physical powers. He even accepted strong chargers in lieu of rent for crown lands, and for payment of forfeitures, and renewal of grants. It was his chief ambition to render horses of the superior kinds as perfect as possible, for the improvement of his cavalry, the pomp of tournaments, and the pleasures of the chase. His personal stud was both numerous and excellent.—Authentic Anecdotes of Horses.

The ridges on the tops of hills and in heights where corn will not grow, are ascribed, in popular legends, to the time of John. The Pope having cursed the fertile lands of England, the excommunicated King (says the legend) had recourse to the Lurens heights, and thus extended the domain of agriculture.

SOLON'S LAWS.—In the third year of the 46th olympiad, Solon being archon, the land owners and citizens, debtors and creditors, were in open feud. Solon was called upon to legislate. His first step was to arrange matters between debtor and creditor, which he accomplished by altering the standards, and lowering the rate of interest. He then deprived the nobility of a portion of their former power, by dividing all the people into four classes, regulated by property; thus, while he introduced a democracy, founding a new aristocracy. The nobility, as possessors of the largest properties, as the sole members of the court of Areopagus, as possessors of the priest-hoods, and directors of religious ceremonies, still retained an ample degree of influence. By the establishment of the Council of Four Hundred, an annually rotating college, he at once gave to many families an interest in the new order of things, that there remained no chance of its being totally subverted. He finally made all the people swear not to make any alteration during the next ten years, deeming that period sufficiently long for habituating them to the new constitution.—Dr. Lardner's Cabinet Cyclopaedia.—Outlines of History.

Of this number, 1,393 reside in the parishes, and 805 in the parishes. 3,900 are licensed curates. The following statement of their stipends affords a melancholy picture. Six curates receive under 200; 59 under 300; 173 under 400; 441 under 500; 592 under 600; 399 under 700; 415 under 800; 458 under 900; 153 under 1000; 539 under 1100; 69 under 1200; 207 under 1300; 52 under 1400; 32 under 1500; 162 under 1600; 26 under 1700; 15 under 1800; 5 under 1900; 3 under 2000; 17 under 2100; 2 under 2200; 2 under 2300; 2 under 2400; 3 under 2500; 4 under 2600; 1 under 2700; 2 under 2800; 1 under 2900; and 1 under 3000. There are 43 who receive the whole income of the benefices they serve. Two receive one half of the income, and one is paid two guineas each Sunday. With respect to the gross value of livings where the incumbents are non-resident, it is stated that there are 2,496 under 3000, and 1,233 of the value of 3000 and upwards.—Atlas.

Wool.—The foreign Quarterly Review has an article on the German Wool Trade, from which we gather the following facts: From 1814 to 1819, the annual amount of wool imported into England from Germany increased from 3,555,145 lbs. to 4,557,938 lbs.; and in 1825 it was no less than 23,110,822 lbs. At the same periods the annual amounts of wool imported into England from N. S. Wales were 32,971, 7,264, and 1,693,512 lbs.—Some of the N. S. W. wool is said to be fully equal to the best from Saxony. Great efforts are now made to improve the breed of sheep in Russia, as well as in Silesia, Bohemia, Poland, &c. Merinos are also spreading into Italy. Spain has lost her credit; many of the best flocks of merinos were driven to France by Napoleon's Generals, and those that remain, have become so degenerate, as not to be worth more than one third as much as the same stock of sheep in Germany. The average weight of a German merino fleece is from 2½ to 3 lbs.—The average annual production of wool in England is 111,160,000 lbs.—American paper.

THE HONORABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY.

On Monday this ancient regiment mustered numerous in the Artillery ground, for the purpose of being inspected by His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, the Colonel. Owing to the unfavourable state of the weather, and his Royal Highness being in delicate health, the regiment was formed in the Armoury house, where his Royal Highness was received with the honors due to his rank; after which his Royal Highness produced the warrant of his most gracious Majesty the King, bearing date the 21st of August, (his Majesty's birthday), declaring himself the Captain General, and his illustrious brother, the Duke of Sussex, Colonel; and confirming to the corps all its ancient privileges.

The corps dined together in the Armoury house; his Royal Highness presiding at the banquet.

This Company is of very remote antiquity, and received particular marks of the Royal favour so early as the reign of Henry VIII., and has been especially recognised by succeeding sovereigns; Charles II., when Prince of Wales, and James II., when Duke of York, became Members of the Company; and after Charles succeeded to the throne, he appointed his brother James the Captain General, which appointment he held after he ascended the throne. Upon the accession of William III., that Monarch declared himself Captain General; and his successor Queen Anne, appointed her Royal Consort, the Prince George of Denmark, to fill that office. George I. conferred on his son, the Prince of Wales, the rank of Captain General, who retained that office after he ascended the throne, and until his death. George III. in like manner declared his late Majesty, when Prince of Wales, the Captain General, and he, as his great grandfather had done, continued to hold the command after his succession to the throne, and until his death.

A great number of Illustrious and Noble Personages have also at different times enrolled themselves members of the Company, and among others, Prince Rupert, the Dukes of Albemarle, Buckingham, Ormond, Norfolk, Somerset, Northumberland, and John of Marlborough, and the Lord Chancellors French and Gailford.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF BELGIUM.—No country in all Europe has been the theatre of so many revolutions as that part of ancient Gaul, called Belgium. We shall recapitulate here the principal traits of its history, dating it from the middle age.

It was in the year 1106, that Godfrey Count of Louvain, having received from the Emperor Henry V. the investiture of the Duchy of Lower Lorraine, assumed for the first time the title of Duke of Brabant, and from that period the country began to be considered as a separate State.

In 1218, Henry II., one of the successors of Godfrey, granted by his testament to all the cultivators of Brabant their liberty, who were always considered serfs according to the law of the German Empire before. He delivered them from the tax of mortmain, and ordered that, like the inhabitants, they should be judged only by their own Magistrates. This testament of Henry II., has been constantly appealed to during all the insurrections which have taken place under his successors.

These popular commotions were sometimes so violent, that the Kings of France saw, or conceived, themselves obliged to interpose. Thus Philippe le Bel gained in 1304 the battle of Mons en Puelle against the Brabanters or people of Flanders; Philip de Valois in 1328, that of Cassel; and Charles IX. in 1382, that of Rosbeck; but at that period the Kings of France were already invested with the Supremacy (Suzainete), as Lords Paramount of Brabant; a feeble indemnity made by King John to Philip le Hardi (the Bold), his fourth son, for the impolitic cession of the country, John being immediately the heir of Philippe de Rouvre, the last Duke of the first House of Burgundy.

By an act of imprudence, for which his children paid very dearly, King John, says the President Lemaire, instead of preserving so important a domain, gave it to one of his sons, by way of a separate settlement (apanage); to revert to the Crown in definitive devisable. Thus it happened, by the arrangement that a French Prince became the head of the race of the second House of Burgundy; which proved, in the sequel, so fatal to France during the long wars she had to wage against England.

Charles le Temeraire dying, in 1477, without any male issue, his States ought to have reverted to the Crown of France, but they passed to the House of Austria, by the marriage of Mary of Burgundy, the daughter of Charles with the Archduke Maximilian, son of the Emperor Henry III. The Emperor Charles V., who issued from this branch, united the Netherlands to the Spanish Monarchy; and it was under the reign of his son Philip II. of Spain, that those disturbances broke out which after the most obstinate struggle of 80 years duration, terminated in the complete and absolute independence of the Northern part of the Netherlands (the seven United Provinces).

The Southern part, properly called Brabant, and now more commonly styled Belgium, remained under the dominion of Austria—at first of the Spanish, and subsequently of the German branch.
Louis XIV. repeatedly conquered Brabant and Flanders. Louis XV., whose armies were commanded by the celebrated Marshal de Saxe (the natural son of the King of Poland and Elector of Saxony) and the Countess of Koenigsmark, likewise conquered it entirely, and began even to penetrate into Holland by Ter-gen-op-Zoom and Maestricht, when by a condescendence more generous than political, he restored those provinces to Austria, in 1745 by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle.

Belgium remained subject to Austria under the reign of the Empress Maria Theresa, but revolted, in 1789, against her son Joseph II. The brother and successor of this Emperor, Leopold II., succeeded in restoring his authority in these Provinces by the influence of concessions rather than by the force of arms, although he had made a disadvantageous peace with the Turks, giving up Belgrade and other important fortresses, for the purpose of turning his whole force against Flanders; but they were shortly afterwards conquered by the French armies from his son Francis II., the present Emperor of Austria. From the year 1794 they constituted part of the French Republic and Empire till 1814—that is to say, for 20 years.—London Morn. Herald.

INCENTIVES TO INDUSTRY.—As animal power is exhausted exactly in proportion to the time during which it is acting, as well as in proportion to the intensity of force exerted, there may often be a great saving of it by doing work quickly, although with a little more exertion during the time. Suppose two men of equal weight to ascend the same stairs, one of whom takes only a minute to reach the top, and the other takes four minutes; it will cause the first little more than a fourth part of the fatigue which it costs the second, because the exhaustion is in proportion to the time during which the muscles are acting. The quick over-er may have exerted, perhaps, one-twentieth more force in the first instance, to give his body the greater velocity, which was afterwards continued, but the sloth supported his load four times as long. A healthy man will run rapidly up a long stair, and his breathing will scarcely be quickened at the top; but if he walk up slowly, his legs will feel fatigued, and he will have to wait some time before he can speak calmly. The rapid waste of muscular strength which arises from continued action, is shown by keeping the arm extended horizontally for some time; few can continue the exertion beyond a minute or two. In animals which have long horizontal necks, there is a provision of nature in a strong elastic substance on the back or upper part of the neck which nearly supports the head without muscular exertion at all.—Arnott's Elements of Physics.

BYRON'S MARRIAGE.—Mr. Galt, in his life of Byron, just published, makes the following severe but apparently just observation on his Lordship's marriage:—"His marriage was the rock on which his whole after life wrecked; to use Lockhart's expressive words—'If there be one cause which comes to earth drenching the crowd, with all the stream of hell hot about it, it is an ill assorted marriage.' It seems to us a most affected delicacy, which in such a case would abstain from seeking grounds whereon to form an opinion, or expressing it when formed. Lord Byron was all his life before the public eye; and those who shared his celebrity, must share it whether as a matter of vanity or annoyance. We think there is no sort of reproach to be drawn on Lady Byron's actual conduct; but the explanation of the whole is, that she had no love for her husband—one of that kindly and feminine affection which makes all the excellence it finds, and softens away the very fault it discovers. The very fact that, on such slight grounds as those of late, she had not hesitated to throw the most odious imputations on the dead, shows at least how little of attachment or forgiveness enters into a temper whose seeing at most is cold and unfeeling. Most singularly is the only safety of domestic content; such a wife might as perfectly be provokingly not there as few women who would not be required to exhibit, to her husband, she is not alive! If you had the shifting variety of temper, she seems to have not been appreciated nor admired his genius, and certainly had no love for himself; but the last sentence of conclusions is in the words of her servant's children, that her Lordship was the only woman who could not manage him."

CONTEMPT IS the greatest of monsters, as well as the root of all evil. I have once seen the man that tried to save charges!—What I have seen children to a doctor, and have an opportunity to be a doctor, that may come to I know not what? No; not he; valuing life less than twenty shillings. But, indeed, such a man could not, well, set too low a price upon himself; who though he lived up to the chin in bags, had rather die, than find in his heart to open one of them, to help to save his life. Such a man is a "fido de se," and deserves not a Christian burial. In some sense he may be compared to Paroli's lean king; for all he has done him no good. He commonly wears his clothes till they leave him, or that nobody else can wear them. He affects to be thought poor, to escape robbery and taxes; and by looking as if he wanted an alms, excuses himself from giving any.—He ever goes late to markets, to cover buying the worst; but does it because it is the cheapest. He lives on the cliff. His life were an unexpurgated punishment to any ten per but his own; and no greater torment to him on earth, than to live as other men do. But the misery of his pleasure is, that he is never satisfied when getting, and always in fear of losing what he cannot use. How stily he has lost himself, that becomes a slave to his servant, and exalts him to the dignity of his Maker! Gold is the god—the wife—the friend, of the money-mongers of the world.—William Penn.

Montebello said, when eulogising the diplomatic in possibility of Talleyrand—"If while he is talking with you, he should get a kick behind, his face would not皱皱 it to you."

The Observer.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1830.

By way of New York, we have London dates to the 15th October, which enable us to state that Continental affairs begin to assume a more settled and agreeable aspect. It is thought that WILLIAM, Prince of Orange, will be called to preside over the destinies of Belgium, in its new and independent government, and from Antwerp has issued a Proclamation in very becoming terms. It speaks volumes in favor of the policy pursued by France, that notwithstanding the sympathy which she could scarcely avoid manifesting in Belgian affairs, she has resisted all proposals of re-negotiation, and all applications for her aid having met with a determined refusal, can hardly fail to bring the turbulent and refractory spirits at Brussels to a better mind.—Besides all this, the debate in the French Chambers, having for its object the total abolition of capital punishments and the general amelioration of the criminal code, with every probability of being carried into effect, must be highly gratifying to the friends of humanity all the world over. At the same time we are not yet prepared to calculate on the permanence of the present Government of France, and of the reign of LOUIS PHILIPPE, though acknowledged by the Pope as he has lately been, but what form of government may ultimately be adopted, and what family may eventually succeed to the throne, we consider as still very problematical. It was never our belief that a transition would at once be made to a Republic; the ORLEANS family is popular and may conciliate the French to the idea of a limited Sovereignty; or a popular Regency may be appointed to manage the government for the legitimate heir, the young Duke of BOURBON. Few seem to cast their eyes to the young NAPOLEON; nor would he, educated in the bosom of the Imperial family of Austria, and filled with ideas of the autocratic glories of his father, ever have such feelings or habits as to fit him for being the chief of a popular government. He is said even to want talent: at all events his party in France is not strong either in property or respectability; and it labours besides under the disadvantage of knowing nothing either of its chief's dispositions or character.

The British Parliament was to assemble on the first of the present month. We may, therefore, expect soon to be enabled to publish the King's opening Speech. It is pleasing to learn that amid all the commotions that are agitating other nations, the people of Great Britain are enjoying the blessings of internal tranquillity, and that the industrious manufacturing and labouring classes are getting employment, though it be not so lucrative as might be wished. When men are usefully and honestly employed, they have little time or inclination to brood over their hapless individual circumstances, or to hatch schemes fraught with danger to the public peace. And when men are struggling to get their minds reconciled to the evils of their lot, they create for themselves advocates in every bosom, should their trials come to be so aggravated as to be beyond the limits of patient endurance.

WEATHER.—Within these two days past, we have had the first serious indications of the coming winter. Yesterday morning the Thermometer was at 20. In the evening a drifting snow storm set in from the East, and a few sleighs were sported, but this morning the air is comparatively mild, and the winter covering is rapidly disappearing.

CIVIL APPOINTMENTS.—Messrs. Wm. Barberie and Oliver Cougle, to be Commissioners, in conjunction with A. E. Botsford and Robert Scott, Esquires, to explore the new line of road on the North Eastern end of Portage Mountain, in King's County, in the room of Mr. George Pitfield, whose appointment has been cancelled.—Royal Gazette, 19th November.

MIRACLES, NOVEMBER 16. We deeply regret to announce the death of the Rev. James Thompson, late Pastor of St. Andrew's Church, which took place on the 11th inst. He had a fair, full, and ten children, to lament their irreparable loss. Any eulogy from us to the memory of that truly worthy man, may appear to the public superfluous, to strangers—the language of panegyric, but to those who knew him, for short of reality. He modestly yet sincerely played his unimpeachable integrity—his mild and unassuming manners—endowed him to all—and we add, as a husband, a father, a friend, or a minister, there is no person in this community, whose loss will be longer revered, than that of the late Mr. Thompson.

Melancholy Accident.—On the 1st inst., as Capt. Perkins of the brig Hyperion, was coming ashore in his boat along with five men, the wind being very strong from the south-east, and the boat under canvas, it upset a considerable distance from the shore.—The Master and Steward left the boat, having got hold of two oars, made an attempt to reach the land with that support, while the other four sailors clung to the boat with great difficulty. It was a considerable time ere any assistance could be rendered, when at last a Canoe arrived and rescued the Steward scarcely alive; but his wounds to relate Capt. Perkins sank at that moment and perished.—The rest were all saved. The neglect of the crew for the loss of their Commander was excused in an extraordinary degree. His youth, appearance, and gentlemanly deportment, seemed to render him promising to society.—Albion.

VARIETIES.

THE DIVORCE.—A married couple determined to be divorced; but not being able to agree, with respect to the disposition of the children, referred the dispute to an agent, to whose arbitration they respectively agreed to submit. "We have three children," said the husband, "I insist upon keeping two." "But," said the mother, "have a right to two; the care of one will be more than sufficient for you." "There is no way of settling this dispute," said the agent, with the true gravity of a Judge, "but by waiting for the birth of a fourth child, you can then separate upon equal terms. This decision restored good humour. The contending parties embraced, and the idea of a divorce was forgotten.

LOVE MARKS.—During the reign of England's maddest queen, it was the etiquette for a man professing himself deeply in love, to assume certain outward marks of negligence in dress, as if too much occupied by his passion, to attend to such trifles; or driven by despondency to a forgetfulness of all outward appearances. In particular, his garter were not to be tied. Thus Shakespeare, in "As you like it":—"Then there's no sign of my uncle's marks upon you; he taught me how to know a man in love. Then your hose should be ungartered, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeves unbuttoned, your shoes untied, and every thing about you decent a careless desolation."

JOSEPH'S BEAUTY.—According to the Mussulmans, Joseph was so handsome that no woman could see him without falling in love with him; which is some excuse for the extreme passion conceived for him by Potiphar's wife, whose name is not given in the Bible, but whom the Mussulmans call Zuleikha. As they had heard of her in Egypt, and as the ladies of the country disappeared especially of her having given her heart to a slave, she invited a party of them to come and eat pomegranates with her. The ladies were all at table when Joseph made his appearance; and were so dazzled and agitated by his beauty, that not knowing what they did, they cut their fingers instead of the pomegranates!—Monsieur de Montesquieu, in "Les Loix," says, "That, said he, 'is all perhaps that you can perceive; I hear her sigh.'"

LE BRUN.—He possessed, in a great degree, that warm imagination and enthusiasm which stimulate the efforts and increase the raptures of an artist. Some one said in his presence, of his well known picture of the Magdalen, "That the centric beautiful virgin was really something." "That," said he, "is all perhaps that you can perceive; I hear her sigh."

RECRUITING SERVICE!—since the arrival of the 53d regiment in Glasgow, there have been married 477 privates, 4 sergeants, and 7 corporals!

A man going in a cart to be hanged, was told he might live, if he would marry a certain virgin of a woman. Like a man of sense, he said, "Let me look at her first." When brought forward, he eyed her: "Snap nose! thin lips! red hair!" exclaimed he—"drive on, Jack!"
