

CHATHAMITES ALL FEEL BOOMING OF BUSINESS

Are Unanimous in Hearty Assertion That Industry Is Stabilized.

POPULATION GROWS

This is the seventh of a series of articles reporting the facts of business conditions in Western Ontario towns and cities. Previous articles have dealt with inquiries in Stratford, St. Marys, St. Thomas, Woodstock, Ingersoll and Sarnia.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Reporter

Chatham, Oct. 23.—Prominent citizens of Chatham, the Maple City, are both hearty and unanimous in their declaration that business and industry are in a stabilized condition.

"Chatham has been well blessed," observed Walter Watts, manager of the Dominion Bank, "because, as a matter of fact, Chatham has never had hard times."

That observation sounded the keynote of The Advertiser's inquiry into Chatham's business. In fact, business conditions here are working full time, that there is practically no unemployment among the bona fide residents, that the town is coming back from the United States, that the population shows an increase over last year, that the city did a nice tourist business this year, that the building is about on a par with last year, that there are few vacant houses, that the bank savings deposits are increasing, that there is a great demand for stocks and bonds, that retail business is very good, that the farmers' crops have been very heavy this year, and that the future of Chatham is bright with promise.

Retail Trade Good. "Retail business is very satisfactory and back to normal," stated Mr. Watts, "while the majority of our industries have never been busy. We have five banks and one loan company in Chatham, and all are doing a good business. In fact, business has been particularly good during the past 18 months. There has been a great demand for bonds, and in many cases these have been purchased by coming back from the United States, that the population shows an increase over last year, that the city did a nice tourist business this year, that the building is about on a par with last year, that there are few vacant houses, that the bank savings deposits are increasing, that there is a great demand for stocks and bonds, that retail business is very good, that the farmers' crops have been very heavy this year, and that the future of Chatham is bright with promise.

"Business is improved in Chatham and getting back to normal," asserted Ald. A. L. Thompson, manager of the Canadian Fertilizer company, "and we are in very good shape industrially. Chatham did a very brisk tourist business this year. Improvements were being made in the Longwoods road this year, interesting somewhat with the traffic, but these have placed the highway on a really permanent basis and should increase the tourist trade next year. The Canadian Fertilizer company has done a good year's business, and we are making an addition to our plant. Our business in Chatham fertilizer, special fertilizer, and other fertilizers, has been growing steadily during the past 11 years, and we are now producing 10,000 tons of fertilizer each year. We have an export trade to the United States, and with the demand for fertilizer increasing there is every indication of an advance in our business."

Will Employ More. "Conditions in Chatham are better today than they have been for some time," affirmed Charles A. Glick, manager of the International Harvester Company of Canada, Limited, "and skilled labor is drifting back from Windsor and Detroit. We are very busy, with 150 men employed, and

Guard the Baby Against Colds

By Keeping Baby's Own Tablets in the House at All Times.

To guard the baby against colds nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a mild laxative that will keep the little one's stomach and bowels working regularly. It is a recognized fact that where the stomach and bowels are in good order that colds will not exist, that the health of the little one will be good and that he will thrive and be happy.

Thousands of mothers have become convinced through the actual use of the Tablets that there is nothing to equal them in banishing constipation and indigestion, breaking up colds and simple fevers, expelling worms and making teething time easy. Among the thousands who praise Baby's Own Tablets is Mrs. Alex. J. Perry, Atlantic, N. S., who says: "I always keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house as I know of no other medicine for little ones to equal them."

Even Fire-Boxes In Election Use

Canadian Press Despatch, Windsor, Oct. 23.—Remains of eight days were ordered today by Magistrate W. E. Gundy in police court at Windsor in the cases of Alvin Black and Jack Pentland, both of Windsor, publicity and campaign managers for the two candidates in West Essex, who are charged with breach of a city ordinance prohibiting posting election propaganda on fire alarm and police signal boxes. The cases will be disposed of after the election.

We have a nice program for the coming year. We will be busy all next season and we plan to increase our list of employees up to 200 or more in the spring. We do a coast-to-coast business in our goods, which include wagons and sleighs and trucks and truck cabs."

"We have been very busy," said Guy Sprague, manager of the Dowsley Spring and Axle company, "and the prospects continue to be good. Our business is coast-to-coast, and last year we are now employing 140 men and adding to that number every year. Our product—wagons and automobiles—springs—sold from coast-to-coast."

"We are working full time, with about 200 men," said Alex Jewess, Hayes Wheel Company of Canada, Limited, "manufacturing nearly 4,000 automobile wheels each day, 96 per cent of which are for export business and 85 per cent through Henry Ford to Denmark, Belgium, Chile and the Argentine."

"There is lots of business," declared A. L. Stewart, superintendent of Libby, McNeil and Libby of Canada, Limited, "and conditions in Chatham are very good. There is very little unemployment, in fact, it has been hard to get good help. We have been manufacturing and bulk buying of olives and mince, canned and bulk krait, sweet pickles, catsup, beans with pork and peas, and the outlook is very bright. We have been growing stronger every year and now have 200 hands, about 500 of them girls, employed in our plant full time. We have a coast-to-coast trade and also an export business to Great Britain."

Future Promising. "We are going nicely under way," remarked Wm. M. Gray, manager of Colonial Traders, Limited, a company just recently organized to manufacture and export goods, "and the future gives every possible promise for a good business."

The Dominion Sugar company is just in the midst of its beet grinding season, employing 500 men at the factory, with an additional 2,000 men engaged in the harvesting of beets in the surrounding area. The company's business is expected to be a record this year, and the company is making an addition to its plant.

The Canadian Leaf Tobacco company has just moved to Chatham, with H. W. Jackson and Y. T. Jackson in charge. The company, which did not ask the municipality for a single favor, though the city voluntarily put in a railroad switch and hydrant, has just received its first order for 100,000 pounds of tobacco for next year's tobacco crop. "The tobacco company," stated Mr. Watts, "has laid plans for a considerable acreage of tobacco for next year, and the company's coming to Chatham should mean a wonderful impetus to the business of the city and surrounding country."

Business Flourishing. "Business is very good," said Spencer Stone of Spicer Stone, Limited, drygoods merchants, "and business has picked up remarkably during the past two months. We have seen in business in Chatham for 15 years now and for the past 25 years we have not done any credit business at all and our business has flourished."

According to Mr. Watts, merchants are being asked for less and less credit in Chatham, while Foreman's drygoods store, "Progress and Prosperity Sale," and Charles Austin's department store purchase of additional accommodation and improvement at a cost of $30,000 or more, speaks a clear-cut answer as to the general business trade.

Chatham's population this year is 14,142, compared with 14,118 last year. The following table shows the population of Chatham for the past 10 years, as follows: 1922, 13,663; 1921, 13,663; 1920, 13,663; 1919, 13,663; 1918, 13,663; 1917, 13,663; 1916, 13,663; 1915, 13,663; 1914, 13,663; 1913, 13,663.

Other active industries in Chatham include the following: Chatham Machine Limited, Glover's Dairy, C. and J. Hadley company, British-American Oil company, Canada Concrete and Cement company, Chatham Machine and Steel Manufacturing company, Kent Canning company, Walker Fell Overall company, Excelsior Knitting Mills, Weaver's Knitting company, McKenough and Trotter, Limited, H. Taylor company, Limited, American Pad and Textile company, Motor and Coach company and Rennie Seeds company.

Skull of Animal That Roamed Over World Before Dawn of Time Rests In City Museum

Collection Gathered by Dr. Woolverton One of Most Interesting in Canada.

FILLS WHOLE FLOOR

Is Fruit of Lifetime of Enthusiastic Endeavor as Specimen Hunter.

Carefully and methodically assembled on the top floor of a stately old residence on Grand avenue, London has one of the most unique and interesting private museums in the Dominion, if not on the whole continent.

Every citizen of London has heard at one time or another of the wonderful collection of Dr. Woolverton; indeed, his fame as a collector has spread far beyond the confines of his home city, which is one of the reasons why his collection continues to grow faster than he can find room to properly array it. But, although his visitors are many, comparatively few Londoners have had the opportunity of viewing the many objects of beauty and absorbing interest which he has assembled in these treasures.

Such an experience recently fell to the lot of an Advertiser representative who sought out Dr. Woolverton at his home with a request to be allowed to view his collection. And as a result of the interesting hour or more which followed, an impression was indelibly registered that there was something here which could most profitably be placed at the disposal of every resident of the city, especially the children and young people, who could be provided to properly display the many examples of the beauty and wonders of nature which are there assembled in this collection.

Thousands of Relics. But of all this Dr. Woolverton had little to say as he led the way from his home to the museum, which is a large two-story building on the corner of Grand and Chestnut streets. It is a fine specimen of a public museum for London, and is self-evident. One could not help wondering if citizens realize how much they are missing through the lack of some such institution.

A whole section is given up to ornate and minerals of almost endless variety, including some agates, wondrous in their polish and coloring. Petrified woods and weeds also find a place along with a petrified apple and a petrified bird.

Not the least interesting and valuable part of the museum is the section given up to Indian relics. Many of the specimens would bring joy to the heart of any red-blooded boy who has ever dreamed of thrilling encounters with the red man. They include numberless specimens of flaked arrow heads, both for war purposes and for hunting. Both arrow heads and tools were flaked from a substance called Chert, and not from flint as popularly believed. Dr. Woolverton explains. There is no true flint in this part of America. Other fast, and as the tide was rising, he was drowned before his plight was known.

Cases Are Crowded. Other natural curiosities there are by the thousand. Each case contains enough specimens to fill about three cases in the ordinary museum. There are stone hammers (Eoliths) from Grimsby, perfect twelve-sided garnets from Parry Sound, marine curios, such as the saws of sawfish, swords of swordfish, teeth of sharks, sperm whales and walrus, sea-horses, sea-urchins, starfish, eggs of starfish and skates, and a silica sponge from the Philippines, a very rare specimen, indeed.

BOARD OF EDUCATION LETS CONTRACT FOR NEW SCHOOL

Business Is Blue According to Map. Putherbough Firm Will Erect New Collegiate Institute Building.

LOWEST OF FIVE. John Putherbough and Sons will construct the new east collegiate institute, according to a recommendation made by the building committee of the board of education at a meeting yesterday afternoon. The Putherbough tender was the lowest of five submitted. William Skelly was given the contract for plumbing, heating and ventilating, his tender being $39,219.

The building committee met at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, with Chairman S. F. Lawason presiding. All members were present. Before tenders were opened it was decided that if the lowest bid were below the price stipulated in the bylaw passed last winter, then there would be no further paring down of specifications.

Plumbing, heating and ventilating tenders were made by William Skelly, Noble & Risch, Eggert & Company, and Bennett & Wright. Putherbough & Sons, London, Petherbough Construction Company, Hamilton, G. H. Thomas & Sons, Limited, Galt, John Hayman & Sons, Limited, London, and J. J. Nichols, London. The highest bid tender was $29,000.

Last winter a bylaw was passed providing for the raising of $250,000 for school purposes in the east end. As the contracts awarded yesterday amount to $256,219 it is likely that the school board will seek to pare down the specifications to conform with the bylaw price.

PLEDGES TRUTH IN JUG OF WINE

Maurice Kisses Bottle in Court After Night Out. Canadian Press Despatch, Windsor, Oct. 23.—The decorum of Magistrate Gundy's court was seriously upset today by hilarity when Hector Maurice, 36 years old, kissed an empty wine jug instead of the Bible when ordered to take the oath before he gave evidence in his own behalf on a charge of drunk driving.

"Kiss the book," he was ordered. Maurice, confused, picked up the wine jug, an exhibit in his case, and kissed it, resounding throughout the court. Several women in the audience approached a state of hysterics. A fine of ten dollars and costs, with an order to pay thirty dollars damages to a car which he collided, was his penalty.

SAILING YACHT SINKS. Associated Press Despatch, Genoa, Italy, Oct. 24.—The three-man crew of a U. S. sailing yacht, name not given, is reported to have been rescued when the boat went down in a storm near Savona.

NEW PASTOR AT KNOX INDUCTED

Rev. Malcolm McArthur Formally Welcomed by Large Congregation.

One of the largest United church congregations in South London, Knox church, Wortley road, formally received its new pastor last night, when, in the presence of a congregation that packed the church building, Rev. Malcolm McArthur was inducted into the "spiritualities and temporalities" of the charge.

The Rev. A. E. M. Thomson, president of the London conference of the United church of Canada, presiding over the worship of the evening, led in prayer. Then came the solemn moment when Rev. W. H. McIntosh, in his capacity as chairman of the Middlesex presbytery of the same church, handed the keys of the building to the new minister, signifying the induction into the responsibilities and burdens of the pastorate of Knox church, London South.

The preacher of the evening was Rev. D. C. MacGregor, of St. Andrew's United church. He put before the pastor and people the problems of the church of God faces at the present day. "There are such problems facing the church and the world," said the preacher, "as evidenced by the friction and trouble in the Oriental countries and the chaotic state of affairs among the European nations."

"In order that the church may solve these problems, whose only solution is the gospel of Christ," continued Dr. MacGregor, "she must keep in ever closer contact and communion with her Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. In her relations with the world she must keep herself unswayed by the friction and trouble in the Oriental countries and the chaotic state of affairs among the European nations."

Military Relics. Students of early Canadian history would find much to interest them in the collection. Dr. Woolverton has been curator for the London and Middlesex Historical society for the past 25 years, and has gathered many interesting relics of early days. Among them might be mentioned bayonets used by troops of Sir Isaac Brock in the war of 1812, canister, grape-shot and chain-shot, and some of the good old-fashioned 6-pound round shot fired by General Yeol at the retreat of the American army at Stony Point. A large collection of coins contains specimens of the early copper tokens issued by the provinces, and paper money issued by the Canadian government at the time of the rebellion of 1837.

Nothing short of a book on the subject would do full justice to Dr. Woolverton's life work. It is distinctly unfortunate that London has no building where such a collection might be placed on display to the benefit of the whole community.

EXPERT ON MINES LOOKS TO CANADA

After Seeing Resources Sir Alfred Grant Sees Splendid Chance For Capital. Canadian Press Despatch, Ottawa, Oct. 23.—It is obviously in the interest of Canada, with its enormous mining possibilities, that British capital be obtained for development purposes, declared Sir Alfred Hamilton Grant, of London, England, distinguished statesman and authority on mining, who was interviewed here today after inspecting various properties in Northern Ontario in which he is interested.

The object of the mining group in which Sir Alfred is interested was to create a real Anglo-Canadian market, he said. English capital interest in Canadian mining would be utilized in exploration, "taking the inevitable risks, but to establish equality of treatment."

The London market had had 15 trials during the last twelve months, Sir Alfred said, and there were other attractions, such as the fact that it was hoped, however, steadily to awaken interest in London in this important field.

ATHLETES ARE GUESTS OF TECHNICAL SCHOOL

F. S. Lawason, Chairman of Board, Presents Medal Won by Douglas Westman.

The boys' and girls' athletic societies entertained the track team of the inter-school meet to a banquet in the technical school last night, when the medal won by Doug. Westman, as senior champion, and the ribbons won at the meet were presented. The banquet was under the supervision of the domestic science department. The tables were appropriately decorated by hurdles and school colors.

Principal Beal made reference to the splendid showing of the team, under the supervision of Miss Fendlergast and Mr. Goodman. F. S. Lawason, chairman of the board, presented the medal, donated by himself, to Doug. Westman, commenting on the fact that the latter had broken three records. The ribbons were presented by Geo. T. Copeland, chairman of the athletic committee. The presentation was followed by a singing and informal dance and was closed by the school song and the National Anthem.

Towpath Measures Value of White As City Member Declares Labor Speaker

Dr. Stevenson States White's Record Entirely Devoid of Anything For London.

CANDIDATE SPEAKS

Colbert Attacks High Tariff As Solution To Unemployment. The value of Frank White in the House of Commons to London is well illustrated by the occasion on which he set government machinery in motion to determine who owned the towpath from his summer home on Lake Huron to the lakeshore, Dr. H. A. Stevenson, ex-M.L.A., declared at a public meeting held in the east end town hall last night in the interests of John Colbert, labor candidate.

Two hundred people heard seven speakers appeal to the working class of London to place their own representative in the federal house. Addresses were given by Ex-Ald. John Ashton, Ald. T. Clift, Dr. H. A. Stevenson, H. B. Asplund, Mrs. J. F. Thomson, Arthur Mould, and the candidate, Ald. Frank McKay acted as chairman.

"White's record in the House of Commons is entirely devoid of any energy expended for the people of London," Dr. Stevenson declared. "One time he wanted to know who owned the towpath from his home to the lake. He took up the country's time and that of many employees just to find out about that towpath. His official interest in the district never went further, as far as records of the house show."

"Will anyone tell me what Mr. White has done for the city while he sat in the house?" Dr. Stevenson asked at another period in his short talk. Laughter greeted the question. "Tell asleep on the job," one labor man replied.

"He has done nothing," came from another part of the hall. In his address, Mr. Colbert, the candidate took direct issue with Mr. Ashton and Mr. Clift, who were claiming that a high tariff will solve the unemployment question.

"They point to the United States as an example of benefits derived from high tariff," he asserted. "If high tariff will solve unemployment, then why hasn't it alleviated that labor trouble in the U. S.? Unemployment there is as bad, if not worse, than in Canada."

Drawing attention to the large advertisements the Conservative party was placing in newspapers, Mr. Colbert declared that the entire expense is borne by manufacturers who are waging a secret battle for protection. "Each manufacturer has received its allotment in this nefarious propaganda scheme. Manufacturers are certainly not losing money when they can afford to spend one million dollars in a political campaign."

"Wake up London," was Mrs. Thomson's message to the electors. "You Labor men mind your own business until election time, and then you allow someone else to step in and mind it for you," she exclaimed.

The speaker said that a million dollars in a political campaign is only a drop in the bucket. Why belong to a trades union if you don't live up to its principles and back Labor at election time? he declared. The tariff question is only revived once in every four years, and it is not a hoodwinked Labor, ex-Ald. Ashton charged. Neither the Liberal nor Conservatives could ever sympathize with Labor on account of their capitalistic structures, he declared.

Ald. Clift, in appealing for a united support for Mr. Colbert, drew a cheer from the assembly when he hailed the Labor candidate as "London's next M.P."

FREED IN MURDER CASE. A Janisse of Windsor, acquitted of the charge of murdering Clayton McMullin. His wife was last week found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the same case.

BYLAW ON ZONES IS NOW MODIFIED

Conforms With Opinions Expressed at Ward Meetings—To Adopt Seymour Report. The complete report of Horace L. Seymour, town planning expert, will be printed and copies provided for every member of the London town planning commission. The report will be discussed at the November meeting of the commission, and, according to opinion expressed at yesterday afternoon's meeting the report will be adopted.

The proposed zoning bylaw has been modified to conform with opinions expressed at ward meetings held last winter. The commission is practically unanimous on zoning, though the degree of the bylaw has yet to be established.

Yesterday afternoon the commission received a petition from R. L. Baugh and others, asking that north Richmond street be ruined as a residential district. The petition was favorably discussed, and its content conforms with zoning plans.

MUCH IS WASTED ON VENTILATION

Public Health Experts Think Saving Could Be Effected on Schools.

From 10 to 15 per cent of the construction costs of schools and other public buildings can be saved by cutting out needless ventilation systems, according to Dr. W. S. Downham, medical officer of health for London, who has just returned from a big public health conference at St. Louis, Miss.

"Dr. Greenburg of New Haven, Ct., brought the matter of extravagant ventilating systems before the convention," Dr. Downham says. "He urged the old type of ventilation as the more efficient. I had a long talk with him afterwards. The convention was quite impressed with Dr. Greenburg's recommendations. The argument was very favorably considered."

According to Dr. Greenburg and others who took part in the discussion, much money is wasted on excessive ventilation systems in schools. These systems are operated from the basements of the buildings by janitors, who are not in a position to know the exact needs of each room.

Air that is much too warm for healthy conditions is forced into rooms to offset cold air drafts. The extreme currents of hot air are as bad for the health as older systems. "Raise the windows when fresh air is necessary," suggests Dr. Downham. "The windows should be above radiators. All the ventilation system that is needed is to have rooms of a sufficient size, good heating facilities and a chance for the cold air currents to push over the radiators and go out through holes cut in the opposite wall."

OYSTER EXONERATED IN TYPHOID OUTBREAK

London's M. O. Says Ordinary Bivalve Used Is Quite Harmless.

The quiet, well-behaved oyster of the orthodox school, is as harmless as can be. He's as harmless as the ordinary bovine variety of milk, for instance. He does not wantonly spread disease, much less was he the parent of that unwanted child, the typhoid epidemic, which spread through large American cities last year.

"Don't blame the oyster," says Dr. W. S. Downham, medical officer of health for London, who returned yesterday afternoon from the St. Louis convention of the American Public Health Officers' association. "There's a bootleg variety of oyster that should be looked on with suspicion, but the companies which have facilities for properly caring for oyster beds can be relied on."

A big part of the St. Louis convention, which commenced the first part of this week, was devoted to a discussion of the oyster. Public health officers and representatives of the companies were present and all the habits of the reclusive bivalve were laid bare. The oyster was not found wanting in sanitary qualities. He was given the stamp of approval at the convention.

HIGHWAY OPENING DELAYED.

Although scheduled to open today, the Prof. Line road to St. Johns will not be ready for traffic till Nov. 1, it was learned today. When the road was in about 200 yards of completion, construction was delayed for over a week, hence the failure to open the highway as scheduled.

LITTLE ADDRESSES PUBLIC LETTER EXPLAINING WHY HE IS CANDIDATE

Has national reasons and civic reasons for offering to represent London—Cannot follow Mr. Meighen in slandering Canada—Unity of all nine provinces first need—Wants action for London after eighteen years of neglect.

Fellow Londoners:

I am a candidate for election as your representative in the federal parliament, and the purpose of this letter is to outline my reasons and to ask you, if you feel satisfied with them, to vote for me.

Every member of parliament should have a double duty: first, to work for the benefit of Canada as a whole; second, to secure for his own constituency every advantage in the way of public buildings and business publicity consistent with proper economy. My reasons for wishing to be elected as London's representative may therefore be divided into these two classes—national reasons and civic reasons, or Canada reasons and London reasons.

1. NATIONAL REASONS.

(a) Canada's Prosperity.

As a businessman (a manufacturer and a wholesaler) all my own personal interests depend on Canada's prosperity. From my own experience I tell you plainly that the most hurtful handicap our business and the business of Canadians in general has encountered has been the wall of depression and ruin which Mr. Arthur Meighen and his political assistants have spread, not only throughout Canada, but throughout the United States and Great Britain. That propaganda of failure and despair has done all Canada a cruel and unpatriotic injustice. It must be silenced because it is untrue. In spite of it, Canada, in the last two years, has fought her way up from war difficulties, which our American neighbors never experienced, until the Canadian dollar today is at par, our exports now exceed our imports by millions of dollars, business throughout the country is on the move, and as the chief economist of the Royal Bank said here a few days ago, "Canada is on the threshold of the greatest period of prosperity in her history."

There is only one course for a Canadian. It is to boost Canada instead of knocking her; to welcome and encourage business instead of discouraging it. That is my course and the course of the Prime Minister whom I am supporting. As a Canadian I cannot follow Mr. Meighen in slandering and hurting my country. I believe Canada is the best country in the world, and I want to help say so.

(b) Canada's Unity.

Canada is a confederation of nine very different provinces. If that confederation is to endure, the needs of all nine provinces must be considered and the goodwill of all nine provinces must be centered in the national leader. Mr. Meighen cannot fill that role. In six of the nine provinces he is without a supporter in parliament. In Quebec, he is so disliked, and his propaganda is so feared, that he dare not enter the province in this campaign. In the maritimes, his only policy of raising the tariff higher touches so little on their real needs that the Halifax Herald, the leading maritime Conservative paper, recently published a list of "Maritime Rights," in which the only mention of tariff was approval of the Prime Minister's plan of a non-political tariff board, while five items on the list dealt with transportation, freight rates and export markets, on which Mr. Meighen has no policy. In Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, Mr. Meighen's policy of raising the tariff higher is so feared that if it were enforced, the secession of the west would become an immediate possibility. As a manufacturer in Ontario, I tell you that even Ontario will not be helped by making the tariff higher, because its chief effect will be to force higher prices on the householder. As a manufacturer and as a Canadian, I do not want a higher tariff. I want the Prime Minister's present plan of moderate protection and attention to Canada's other needs—railways, immigration and foreign trade. Above all, I want to see the unity and goodwill of all nine provinces preserved, and I know that Mr. Meighen is not the man to preserve that national unity which is so essential if we would progress.

2. CIVIC REASONS.

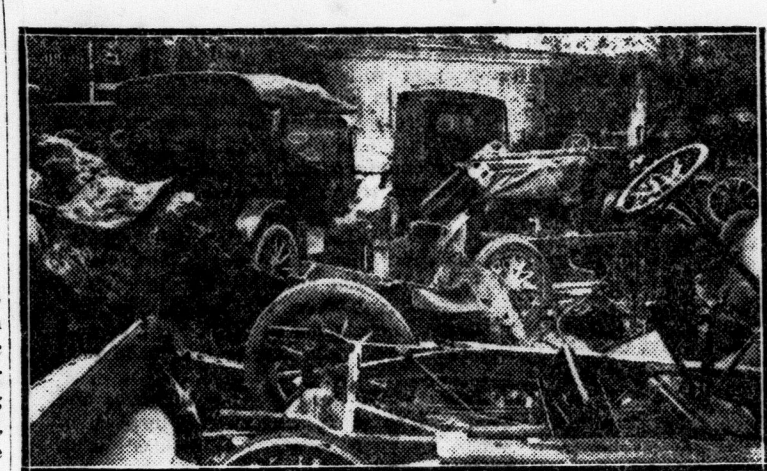

I do not like to see, in other cities smaller than and inferior to London in importance, splendid public buildings, while London, the center of Western Ontario, struggles along with a customs house built in 1867, a postoffice built for a town of twelve thousand, and the business of the city transacted in a postal annex bought in 1913 as a site for proposed federal buildings, about which London's representative has since done nothing. I do not know whether or not it is a mere coincidence that it was a Liberal who got London the Normal school and the armories, and that during the last eighteen years, while London has been represented by a Conservative, the city has received no attention. I do know, however, that it is time London again asserted herself at Ottawa—not with extravagant demands, but with fair claims for action long delayed.

I do not wish for a moment to lose sight of the fact that we must adhere to the strictest measures of economy, but I do believe that the government business could be done better and more economically with up-to-date equipment; and this saving, together with the indirect result of providing further employment, would go a long way towards taking care of the expenditure required. It is, I believe, generally conceded that Mr. Meighen cannot possibly secure a majority in the next parliament. As a Londoner, I believe that London should be represented by a supporter of the government, rather than by a member of the opposition. Because of that, and because of the inaction of the last eighteen years, during which not one claim has been properly advanced for London, I wish to use my six years of training as alderman, controller and mayor to represent London's needs as a member of parliament.

I respectfully request your vote and influence for the definite, and (I believe) constructive reasons which I have outlined.—Yours faithfully, E. S. LITTLE.

Cars Long Dead Awaken To Life of New Usefulness As Trucks and Motor Boats

Even "Black Maria" of Police Fame Undergoes Transmigration
After Being Sent to Motor Cemetery.

There is an automobile burial ground in London.

Cars, like humans, cannot endure, and sooner or later the gleaming machine of a decade or more ago must die, and be taken, spluttering and fussing, from the roads on which it faithfully performed for many years.

But unlike humans the bones of these antiquated machines are not interred. They rotte yet, and will for many years to come, for adjacent to the burial ground there is a dissection field. The cars are torn apart and although losing their identity as whole motors when they become dismantled they play important roles in the rejuvenation of other cars.

On a stretch of Fullerton street property an auto wrecking company literally deals in motor corpses, buying the worn-out and apparently useless auto, which suffer from deep-seated organic trouble of the engine, or the gears, or any vital part. These machines, heaped in a mass of twisted metal, do not represent so much valueless junk. The ugly picture of rusty and misshapen iron and steel to the auto wrecker is one of money; for nowadays, like antique furniture, the older the auto the greater is the value.

Parts Are Reclaimed.

The broken-down machines are purchased for a song. They are taken apart. The tires are sold for second-hand. The gears are taken out, replaced with bearings if found necessary, and sold to motorists desirous of replacing a part. And the older the car the greater the value, because many makes of twelve years ago have now become obsolete, and a car offered to the wreckers with a supply of similar types with rare plus of mechanism.

The bodies of all old automobiles are there. As they lie in discarded positions they present a museum of a history and a remembrance of days gone by. If the past of each car is a story, the wrecker's yard is a museum of useful service, gruesome accidents, and in many cases fires and explosions, could be told.

Many Die Young.

In many cases, of course, younger cars are sold for junk. Those which have been smashed in collisions and those which have been burned, are taken to the wrecking place. Death, a rusted, worn-out or burned exterior, choice pieces of metal can be recovered, and these, when minor faults are rectified, have a durability which is almost everlasting. The engines of some cars will not actually wear out for a generation, the workers on these "useless" autos declare, pointing to one piece of car model, but in apparent good condition. It may be six makes of cars, the parts of half a dozen motors having gone to its various parts. Six wrecked autos are heaped together. The best which each con-

FEW ADDITIONS TO LIST FOR CITY

Only Nine Apply To Have Names Put On—Limit
Expires Soon.

Nine people have applied to the city hall to have their names placed on the new municipal voters' list, seven of them already had Wednesday names on the list. Ordinarily the office of the city clerk is swamped with inquiries. In other years hundreds of applications have been made.

This year, unless unlooked-for events come to pass, there will not be more than 10 changes on the municipal voters' list.

Samuel Baker, city clerk, pointed out today that the proximity of the federal election was probably the cause of much confusion to the residents of the city. They were satisfied once their names were on the federal list and apparently didn't bother to consult the new city lists.

Mr. Baker stresses the fact that once the federal list is used next Thursday it will be entirely obsolete.

And on the same day or any time subsequently changes cannot be made to the new municipal list.

The clerk's office was as peaceful as a cemetery on one or two nights this week when officials remained after hours to secure applications for revision. The office will be open from 7 to 9 o'clock on Monday and Tuesday evenings of next week.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine ever used.
Family supply easily made.
Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good. Four 2½ ounces of Pinex in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 16 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and laryngeal asthma.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1925.

A New Issue in the Campaign.

The present campaign has developed an issue that has grown out of the speeches by leaders of the political parties. Mr. Meighen began with his tariff argument and to prove his point tried to make it appear that a serious crisis faced Canadian business. To fortify his position it became necessary to picture conditions as bad, on the decline and with no prospect of betterment unless he were returned to office. The prime minister contends that Canada has shown remarkable strength in her recovery from post-war conditions, that trade is greater, a larger volume of business being done, Canadians firms are reaching out for world markets and getting them, and that there is every reason to hope that the improvement we are experiencing is going to continue.

It is these conflicting views that have turned the main issue of the campaign to the question: Are conditions really better? If we make the statement that they are it is only right we should be able to prove it. The proof is forthcoming in the way of opinions of men who are in business themselves. The Advertiser has asked a number of these men in London, St. Thomas, Stratford, Sarnia and other places, and their answer has been that business is much better; some describe it as good; they say money is being spent freely and that people are paying their bills; several tell of 25 per cent. increases over last year and so on.

In London Mr. Watson Young, president of Elliott, Marr & Co., wholesale grocers, says a "marked improvement began in 1923, and since then has steadily increased. People are buying more and asking for better quality. Our collections are good." Mr. W. N. Manning, of the Sherlock-Manning Piano and Organ Co., reports "trade is better. We are receiving good orders from the west. There is a demand now for higher quality pianos. We find our collections very satisfactory." Mr. J. K. McDermid, president of Somerville Paper Boxes, Limited, operating plants in London, Walkerville and Montreal, says: "This year's business will be at least 25 per cent. ahead of last year. I can't understand why any person, even for political reasons, can say there has not been a very substantial improvement." Mr. S. Frank Wood, of the Hobbs Manufacturing Co., reports some parts of their plant working overtime. "Business is good and getting better," was his answer. "This year we will show a 25 per cent. increase over 1924, and the improvement is more marked right now than at any time during the year."

In Sarnia Mr. Peter Paton, president of the McKenzie Milne Co., wholesale and retail hardware dealers, said: "Industrially Sarnia never was in better shape, and there is no unemployment." Mr. W. L. Doherty, president of the Doherty Manufacturing Co., reported: "Our business is moving along nicely, and we expect to be real busy during the ensuing months." Mr. Charles White, secretary-treasurer of the John Goodison Thresher Co., told of business improvement. "Our company is just completing the second best year in its history. The feeling is better than it has been for years." The mayor of Sarnia, Mr. James C. Barr, said: "Conditions in Sarnia are very good, indeed they are excellent." Mr. D. W. Rennie, manager of the King Milling Co., reported: "We have been very busy lately, and we are looking forward to a good year's business." Sarnia's population in 1921 was 14,905; this year it is 16,059.

From St. Thomas there came more affirmative answers. Mr. Charles Montgomery, master mechanic of the Pere Marquette shops, said: "We have been very busy all summer and it looks as though we were going to have pretty heavy business this fall and right through the winter." Mr. David Meadows reported similar conditions at the M. C. R. shops. Mr. W. E. Fry, secretary of the Nursery Shoe Co., said: "Business has been good with us. We are working full time." Mr. James Stewart, manager of St. Thomas Metal Signs Co., stated: "Our business is ahead of last year and future operations promise to be very far indeed." Mr. Neil C. Sinclair, manager of the Empire Flour Mills: "We are very busy with orders sold ahead, and we expect to continue to be busy." Mr. Fred Sutherland, manager of the St. Thomas Paper Box Co.: "We are having the busiest fall we ever had."

In Stratford Mr. Duncan Ferguson, one of the leading merchants, stated: "Today business is good. We are turning over more goods, and there is more activity in trade." Mr. Justin Duggan, of J. A. Duggan, Limited: "We find a steady improvement in the last four years. The future to us is very, very bright." Mr. J. A. Wyatt, assistant manager of the Kroehler Co., said: "At present we are going well with orders now on hand and the outlook promises a continuance of that business." Further evidence of this is in a letter sent to dealers by the Kroehler Co. this week stating "You will be glad to know that we are greatly increasing our production. We received more business in September and October to date than at any period in our history." Mr. A. J. Harris, of the Stratford Manufacturing Co., reported "Business is good and there is a fine outlook."

We believe that to any reasonable mind that is convincing proof of the statement that Canadian business conditions are firm, and it is exactly what Mr. King has been claiming. By the same reasoning it is also proof that Mr. Meighen is wrong in his contention that Canadian trade is on the downgrade. It is a rebuke to his methods of picturing Canada as a nation that is not succeeding.

Mr. King, in his appeal, has shown a far more intimate knowledge of actual conditions in Canada; he is more closely in touch with them, more appreciative of the success they have met. This stamps him as the logical man to again direct the process of recovery which his government has so well inaugurated.

Four Years of Progress.

Conditions are better today than when the King government took office. It is only necessary to look at some of the definite results to establish this fact. They can be set forth as follows:

1. The public debt has been twice reduced. Since Confederation only ten decreases in Canada's debt have been registered, and two of these have been in Mackenzie King's four years in office.
 2. The civil service has been decreased by the cutting off of 4,500 employees, and the cost of government has been reduced by $14 per head of population.
 3. The income tax has been reduced to the man with a family, by raising the exemption for each dependent child from $200 to $500. To a man with a family of four children it means a decrease in taxation of $32 per year.
 4. The National Railways have been consolidated and brought under one management. An operating deficit has been changed to a substantial surplus.
 5. The Canadian dollar, which went as low as 83 cents in 1921, is today at a premium in New York.
 6. An adverse balance of trade has been changed to a favorable trade balance that is today nearing the $300,000,000 mark.
- The King government claims no credit for the better crops which have helped to restore prosperity, but it has contributed to the revival by reducing the tax load on agriculture and industry, by opening up new markets for Canadian products and by giving the country honest, efficient and economical administration.

A Two-Faced Campaign.

The double-dealing that is going on in Quebec under the guise of the Patenaude campaign has hardly a parallel in Canadian politics, unless it be the Conservative-Nationalist alliance of 1911. There is no guesswork about it and here is the proof.

Mr. Patenaude poses as an independent, and in one of his speeches at Maisonneuve said: "Taking into consideration the circumstances and contingencies of politics, I am ready to declare that I believe that in the province of Quebec the people do not want to vote for Mr. King, nor yet for Mr. Meighen. . . . I have nothing to give to Premier King—no more than I have to cede to the imperialistic tendencies of Mr. Meighen. I differ from him on many other points."

Yet on the same page of the Montreal Gazette with this report of Mr. Patenaude's speech appears an advertisement containing Mr. Patenaude's picture and a plea to "Vote for candidates who support Patenaude policies." And this advertisement, like the rest of Mr. Patenaude's literature, is signed by the Central Conservative Committee, the committee of Mr. Meighen's party, and is paid for by them.

And Mr. Meighen is willing to stay out of Quebec and let this miserable sort of duplicity proceed unchecked. And he will be willing to receive with open arms at Ottawa any and all supporters he can gather by this method. It is a glaring two-faced piece of business, stripped of any semblance of honor or decency.

Note and Comment.

A united Canada.
And now Mr. Meighen is going to save Canada by making it a dearer place to live in!

The Simcoe Reformer says Agnes MacPhail is able to speak well and much because her father was an auctioneer.

A local Scotsman drives his car out of the garage every time it rains and gets it washed with soft water free of charge.

Mr. Patenaude says he isn't a Tory, neither is he a Grit. He's simply a palm tree behind which Mr. Meighen's orchestra sits.

Report of a Conservative meeting says enthusiasm reached a peak. The trouble now is to keep them hanging on to the peak until election day.

An Ottawa hockey player has been offered $10,000 to play on a New York team. And if he goes the Ottawa Journal will throw another fit about the young men leaving Canada for the States.

Better Do It Now

By ARK.

When I was sixty-eight years old some friends they gathered at our place, determined that they'd chase the frown that camps too often on my face.

And so they come and brought along some little gifts to mark the day, some things that I could gaze upon when they had quit and went away. One brought a book, and one a plant, another had a bunch of flowers, some books to read, a bit to eat, they spent with me three happy hours.

And when they were present'nt me they made addresses one by one, of what a goodly guy I was and of the things that I had done.

Why one chap said it puzzled him how I kept lookin' fit and fine, he wouldn't think to see me now that I was over forty-nine. Another spoke about the day I'd helped him fix his sulky plow, another told how kind I was to help him cure his brindle cow.

Of course I knew the things they said was said to cheer me on a bit, but I confess in lookin' back their sayin's then made quite a hit.

But still it's best to say such words and even put them on too strong, instead of savin' up your breath for chantin' of a funeral song.

The Once-Over

What a peaceful old world this is. One morning's news budget includes announcements that Greeks and Bulgarians are at war, that there will be a battle in every riding in Canada next Thursday, that France is facing a fight on capital levy, and that civil war proceeds merrily in China.

Pennsylvania crooks will doubtless feel relieved of a great weight now that the state's heaviest policeman has been buried.

The following item from Jersey City appears to conceal more than it reveals: "Ezra Adjini tried to save his friend, who had been driving recklessly with silk stockings, and he was arrested, charged with bribery."

DeWolf Hopper has married again for the sixth time after declaring that he was through with matrimony forever. But getting married had become such a habit that he was unable to break it.

Among things which might have been more tactfully expressed is the announcement on the evening front page of a local daily that a certain north end residence sets a new style in homes and "is a direct contrast to the commonplace type that have been the vogue here for years past."

Speaking of front-page announcements, one of great interest to naturalists concerns the daily flow of bed-bugs from the county jail to the police station and vice-versa. One not versed in natural history wonders why the jail birds do not prey on them.

Mother, do you think there's going to be a storm? Yes, dear, by the look on daddy's face I'm sure there will be. Well, is that why he's putting on the storm windows? Oh, no, he is doing that just because it is a time-honored custom and we don't want the neighbors to think we are queer. Oh, look, mama, how funny daddy looks! He is wearing one of the window frames round his neck.

Hush, child. You shouldn't laugh. You're poor father might have been badly hurt when that ladder broke. People should be ashamed to loan such rickety stepladders to their neighbors. But just like the Joneses. Last summer they kicked because the lawn mower we loaned them was dull, and now they risk your poor father's life by loaning him a stepladder with a loose rung. Come on in, Henry. We'll hire a man to finish the windows.

Pertinent Questions

By Mackellar McArthur

The Farm, Oct. 23.—Let us suppose, since the newspapers are filled with political news, and I am filled with thoughts about carpentering, let us suppose, I repeat, that a prospective member of parliament were standing on a scaffolding, ten feet from the ground, situated on the northwest side of an unfinished driveway, with the scissor-edged west wind raking him fore and aft. And having the gentleman, or, for that matter, all the prospective members, there, if the scaffolding would hold, what would he or they think about it?

Would that idealistic enthusiasm which sustains them through so many speeches and fills the newspaper columns with sentences longer and more redundant than these could keep them from shivering as I did? Could they hit the nail on the head with a palmed hammer and drive the point home through hard beech studding, even as they drive home a spike in their party's platform? These questions may seem irrelevant, but they are really pertinent.

Would Be Good Test.
We should know just how a future M. P. would react to such conditions in order that we might surmise accurately how he would behave when national questions confront him. The little, to me big, problems which have been confronting me this fall night, by a stretch of the imagination, be transcribed to be the national problems which are under discussion in the present campaign.

To The Editor

Calls It "Humbug."

Springford Writer Says Farmers Have No Desire to Pay More for Things They Have to Purchase.

Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir.—It might be of interest to the electors of Ontario and of Canada if they were informed who furnishes the funds to pay for the extensive advertising being conducted through the newspapers by the Conservative committee, 330 Bay street, Toronto. If the lavish supply of the funds for such lavish display advertising are able to do so without danger of bankruptcy, it is pretty good evidence that they are not in need of any government favors such as a high protective tariff is intended to bring to them; and if they cannot afford to pay for such costly advertising they ought not to engage in such reckless extravagance.

Of all the absurd humbugs contrived by political tricksters to hoodwink glib electors, the protective tariff humbug will take first prize. The idea of voting Conservatives for higher tariff and for lower taxation! Inasmuch as higher tariff means higher customs duties, a government tax, how can the idea of lower taxation be harmonized with it? Have Conservative governments ever been known to lower taxation?

To say "Vote for higher tariff and lower taxation" is about as sensible as saying "Vote for higher prices and lower cost of living."

What an absurd political policy so-called high protection is. Why build railways and establish steamship lines to facilitate trade, and then establish high protective tariffs as an artificial barrier to trade?

A country's prosperity depends more on the ability to secure export markets for surplus products than it does on the building up of tariff barriers to keep out imports. A farmer's prosperity depends on the surplus of farm products that he can produce to sell, not on the high prices and excessive taxes he has to pay for what he buys.

The farming industry of Canada being the chief basic industry and the industry which is capable of producing most for export, is not helped the least little bit by protective tariffs. What

When I was shivering on the scaffolding this forenoon, I thought a lot about a certain transportation system. It was only ten feet in length, with ten rungs, and the locomotive power lay in a pair of shivering legs. If I had been left alone it would have been very efficient and have operated to the satisfaction of everyone. But the man on the ground kept shoving boards at the locomotive, and it, I mean I, continued to bend nails in the hard studding.

In regard to this exodus business to neighboring countries, there has been an unprecedented emigration of carpenters from this neighborhood. They were finding work in the next neighborhood. But this morning something happened. They either heard that I was prosperous or that industry was looking up, and five of them came to work.

Weather Is Like the Senate.
As for senate reform, the weather has been decidedly irresponsible for some time. My well-laid plans have been sidetracked exasperatingly. Oh, that I could call a conference and reform it!

As for the fourth problem, I had almost forgotten it, the tariff. I am sure I could find a similarity for it in something on the farm, but it is high time that a carpenter-farmer was asleep. Anyway, by studying our own problems and looking after our own particular little bit of Canada in a national light, we might learn somewhat of national importance.

farmers want is reasonable transportation rates to get their products to the world's markets. As the farmers prosper and secure payments for their produce, they and their families in turn buy from the merchants and manufacturers and pay for what they purchase, thereby sharing their prosperity with the merchants and manufacturers, and home industries flourish on a sound basis. It will be silly and stupid for any farmer to vote for the absurd humbug policy of a high protective tariff, and for increased taxation and higher cost of living. W. M. E. East Ender Is Going to Vote for King Candidate—Glad Mr. Dennis and Mr. White Are So Busy.

Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir.—I was much interested in looking over The Advertiser to see the pictures of the extensions being built at Mr. Frank White's plant in London. I attended his meeting in the Opera House, and wasn't sure after listening to Mr. White whether he was going to tear down the whole works, or go ahead.

Since seeing the pictures, I am pretty certain he intends to go ahead. Any reasonable man knows that people don't go putting hundreds of thousands of dollars into such substantial buildings unless they see a pretty good chance to make something out of it.

Things certainly can't be as bad as Mr. White and Mr. Meighen are trying to make them out to be. I think Mr. White would stand a far better chance today were he to come out frankly and say that business conditions are better, and that proof of it is in the great extension he is putting up on his own plant.

It does strike me as funny that Mr. Dennis, head of the Conservatives, should have to quit because he was expanding his business, and Mr. White is building a big new plant at the time when the Conservatives are telling us conditions are so bad they could hardly be worse.

This election, I'm voting for Sid Little, the candidate for King, the man who has helped make Mr. Dennis so prosperous he had to quit politics, and Mr. White's plant so busy it has had to enlarge.

The Train and Bullet.

Londoner says the man on the front would get hit if the bullet could go that far.

Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir.—I was interested in the letter from the Sanatorium about the speed of a bullet fired at 100 miles an hour on a train going at an equal speed.

This is an old problem that crops up now and then, though there is little or no difficulty in the question. Most of these so-called "posers" are thought to be such because some vital factor is overlooked. The muzzle velocity of the bullet is put ridiculously low in order to make it equal to that of the train, namely, 100 miles an hour.

In the case in hand, the factor overlooked is that the bullet in the gun before it is fired evidently has the speed of the train, 100 miles per hour. When the gun is discharged the bullet has an initial muzzle velocity of 200 miles per hour, according to the conditions of the problem. Of course, then, the man on the front of the train would be hit by a projectile or bullet having sufficient velocity to reach half a mile or more. I think this is also the gist of The Advertiser's answer. At the supposed muzzle velocity, the bullet would probably carry 45 to 50 yards.

Unwarranted Publicity.

Christian Science Writer Claims Despatch Was an Injustice to Memory of Honored Dead.

Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir.—Your issue of Sept. 19 contained a despatch from Colorado Springs credited unfortunately to the Canadian Press, in which the acrimonious opinion of a comparatively remote clergyman was given unduly wide publicity. The clergyman's criticism extended from Will Hayes, Douglas Fairbanks, and Charlie Chaplin, Mr. Voiseard, and ministerial associations—other than his own—William Jennings Bryan and Mary Baker Eddy.

The memory of Mr. Bryan is being honored at the present time by his fellow citizens, in the form of a political creed in financing a national memorial to him in Washington. Mary Baker Eddy is recognized by independent appraisers as one of the world's great religious leaders, and is revered and loved by reputable citizens in communities in all civilized countries, owing to the beneficent results of her religious, spiritual, discovery of Christian Science.

The Canadian Press is usually careful and capable, and it can be only assumed that such a despatch, giving the best news service to intelligent Canadian citizens was possibly unnoted by its efficient management.

SANDERSON PRICKS ELECTION BUBBLE

Conservative Report About St. Marys Plant Is Proven False.

Special to The Advertiser.
St. Marys, Oct. 23.—Hitting back in a straightforward manner against the statements made by the Conservative forces in this riding during the present campaign, F. G. Sanderson, Liberal candidate in South Perth, tonight addressed a huge meeting in the Lyric Theatre here to the accompaniment of hearty and enthusiastic applause.

Referring particularly to the statement made by Mayor C. E. Richardson at the Conservative meeting here on Wednesday, the effect of an industry in St. Marys would close down and move to the States if the King government is returned to power, Mr. Sanderson gave an interesting and enlightening explanation.

Not being able to find out himself the concern referred to, he stated he had questioned the mayor as to the cause of the concern, and he immediately went to the plant and investigated the conditions. Being informed by the manager that business was not good, a condition that was blamed on the tariff, he found out the rate of duty at present applying on the two articles manufactured by the concern, namely, curtain-rods and porch-shades, which he found to be 30 per cent on the former and 35 per cent on the latter, plus 5 per cent sales tax when imported from the United States. But, going further into the facts of the case, Mr. Sanderson elicited the information that insufficient capital was being carried on, and that certain men in the town had promised the necessary financial aid, but not until after the election is over.

The explanation strongly reacted against the Conservative candidate, and was met by applause from those present.

Mr. Sanderson strongly impressed his first St. Marys audience, and his address showed a thorough knowledge of the questions of the day. Speaking on senate reform, he said: "I would not reform the senate, I would abolish it, lock, stock and barrel, as a useless and extravagant expenditure."

Explaining his stand on the question of transportation, he was opposed, he stated, to the amalgamation of the C. P. R. and C. N. R., while his views on the tariff, as a manufacturer himself, were received as sound and practicable.

Speaking of it as it affects local industries, he stated that with only one or two exceptions, the heads of the manufacturing concerns in St. Marys were supporting him in the campaign, evidence of the fact that it is not hurting St. Marys concerns. His own views were that the tariff should be kept out of politics and administered by a tariff board, as chairman of the meeting, and other speakers were the Hon. C. S. Hyman of London and N. Jeffrey, K.C., of Guelph. Both delivered splendid addresses. So great was the crowd that an overflow meeting had to be held in the town hall, addressed by the same speakers.

EXQUISITE GOWNS AT FASHION SHOW

English and French Models Displayed—Dainty Lingerie Also Featured.

Exquisite gowns, graceful and becoming in every line, were to be seen yesterday afternoon on the fifth floor of Smallman and Ingram's in connection with the Gossard Corset model show. While Mrs. Gibson, an expert corsetiere, talked on corsets and displayed them on living models, the lovely French and English gowns were also modeled.

The first was a dinner gown, English imported, fashioned of gold metallic lace over cinnamon georgette, and made with a straight front line and the black flange. In contrast to this gown was shown one of cyclone georgette, French imported, fashioned with a tight bodice and ruffled skirt and beaded in silver. With it was worn a gorgeous fuchsia shade satin wrap with rolled collar.

An English Gown of white georgette, created with a circular skirt, daintily beaded, and the tight bodice was embroidered with rosebuds of pink. The neckline and the bodice were beaded with gold and blue and was fashioned with a straight front line.

A remarkable stunning gown was of black georgette, made with straight lines at the front and weighted with beads, while an effective back drape added a graceful line to the rear view. Another gown was of a dance frock of orchid georgette, fashioned with a yoke of gold lace and tiny gold lace godets in the skirt.

Modernistic Pattern. The final gown was a lovely thing created of blonde satin over which a modernistic pattern ran riot. Chiffon in a cocoa shade formed the inside sleeves and draperies.

Some very lovely pieces of lingerie were also shown. Several smartly fashioned sets of pajamas were shown, while the Teddy outfit in silk and dainty nighties of georgette and silk certainly appealed to my lady's sense of loveliness.

PEOPLE TO HAVE NO FURTHER SAY

Ferguson Will Not Again Trust To Plebiscite When Desiring O. T. A. Change.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Oct. 23.—Premier Ferguson, addressing the hotelmen's association of Ontario this afternoon on the government's policy in regard to 4-4 per cent beer, said:

"Whatever the future of this province may be so far as regards the policy that many of you think creditable to the government, I never yet have endeavored to escape my duties as a public man, and I do not propose to do it now, and when we make up our minds to state clearly to the people the reason for my judgment, and I will stand by my judgment whether you like it or not."

"If it is thought that any improvement can be made it will be decided by the government's judgment, and if the public are not satisfied there is always a way open for them to select a new government. I never yet have endeavored to escape my duties as a public man, and I do not propose to do it now, and when we make up our minds to state clearly to the people the reason for my judgment, and I will stand by my judgment whether you like it or not."

LONDON COUPLE ARE FIFTY YEARS MARRIED

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Menell Honored by Family and Immediate Relatives.

An interesting event took place this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Menell, 53 Emory street, when they celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Owing to Mr. Menell's delicate condition only the family and immediate relatives sat down to a delicious dinner.

The family, who were all home, included: Mrs. Roy Crozier and Will of Toronto; Mrs. N. Miles of Detroit; Charles of London, and Mrs. Alex. Jackson of Lambeth. Mr. Menell has one surviving sister, Mrs. John Beggs of Wilton Grove, who will with her husband, shortly, be celebrating their sixtieth anniversary of their marriage.

WEDDINGS

SESSIONS-TAYLOR.

The King street United church was the scene of a quiet wedding recently, when Miss Ivy Madeline Taylor became the bride of Mr. George Henry Sessions, son of Dr. B. Macintosh, officiated. The bride was attended by Miss Thelma Calahoon, and Mr. Harry Potter was the best man.

The bride was smartly attired in a gown of navy pin stripe, with becoming hat, and carried an arm bouquet of roses and carnations. The ceremony was a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Sessions left on a trip to Detroit and other western points.

MELLON-SUMMERS.

West Lorne, Oct. 23.—A quiet autumn wedding was solemnized at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, West Lorne, on Oct. 21, at 5 o'clock in the morning, when Miss Blanche G. Summers of Rodney became the bride of Mr. Thomas C. Mellon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mellon, also of Rodney. The charming young bride, entering the church, was accompanied by Miss Laura O'Malley, who made a winsome bridesmaid. The nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Finn, pastor of the church.

During the offertory Ava Maria was sung by Mr. Richard Dewson in a splendid voice, while Miss L. Martin, who was suitably decorated for the occasion, presented a most striking appearance.

The wedding was a charming affair of navy georgette and cut velvet in cranberry shade, with hat to match, and carried a handsome leather-bound prayer book. The bride's gifts were: To the bride's attendant, a ring; to the organist, a bay pin and to Mr. Dewson, the best man, a gold Eveready pen.

Immediately after the impressive ceremony, the young couple were tendered many hearty congratulations. Leaving the church the guests of the bride couple, which included only the immediate relatives, the altar boys and attendants proceeded to the Lorne caterer, where a dainty wedding breakfast had been prepared. The wedding cake centered the table, which was most fittingly decorated for the event.

During the wedding breakfast Mr. Leo Martini, acting as toastmaster, called upon Mr. Richard Dewson to propose the toast to the bride couple, to which the groom responded. Mr. and Mrs. Mellon left later amid showers of confetti for their new home on Windsor avenue, London, Ontario.

The young couple were the recipients of many useful gifts, including cut glass, silverware and some liberal checks.

TALK NOT ALWAYS LEGISLATIVE AID

So Declared Raymond Speaking of Donald Sutherland in South Oxford.

Special to The Advertiser. Tillsonburg, Ont., Oct. 23.—One of the finest rural meetings so far held during the campaign in South Oxford in the interests of the Liberal candidate, J. W. Innes, was held this evening in the community hall at Tillsonburg, with a splendid attendance, and a very attentive hearing.

M. L. Haley occupied the chair. Colin Hawkins, of Brownsville, and a former Progressive, was the first speaker, and gave a very able address on the return to prosperity, and declared that Donald Sutherland was one of the 35 Conservatives who voted for the high tariff, and decided the statements of the Tory candidate that Mr. King has lost in all trade agreements ever made by Canada.

Although Mr. Innes personally by Mr. Hawkins on a public platform at Mount Elgin a few nights ago, Mr. Sutherland denied that he ever made the statement that he was a Conservative, etc., still newspaper accounts of Mr. Sutherland's meetings carried such sentences; also back in 1917, when Mr. Sutherland stated that he believed it was German gold that had sent the big farmer delegation to Ottawa in that year. These statements the farmers could not swallow, let alone support Mr. Sutherland.

Innes is Applauded. The candidate, Mr. Innes, received a huge ovation on rising to speak, and his popularity as a candidate was clearly demonstrated. He dwelt with the petty issues being raised in South Oxford by the Conservative orators, who were continually harping on county assessment and oleomargarine instead of the issues of the day. Concluding his address, the candidate stated that: "If I cannot do as much in four years as Donald Sutherland has done in the past 20 years, I'll never ask you for another vote as long as I live."

The speaker of the evening, W. G. Raymond of Brantford, was highly acclaimed. Mr. Raymond said that from the high way in which Mr. Innes was spoken of in his community, he believed he was certain of election in South Oxford. It was not necessary to be a glutton of tongue to be a good representative in the house of parliament, and some men who talked for hours at the expense of the country were regarded as a nuisance at Ottawa.

He had nothing personally to say about Donald Sutherland, but had to differ with him on his political policy, and as he supports Mr. Meighen, he must be a Meighenite rather than a Conservative.

He warned his audience that the protection cry was a lame, old election motto of the Meighenites, which they did not believe in themselves, and it was only a snare, humbug, and delusion, proved conclusively, because Mr. Meighen never raised the tariff a cent when in power.

Mr. Meighen did not preach high protection down in the maritime provinces, yet in the east he would build the Canadian tariff wall brick by brick with the American. He cited the prosperity in the shoe factories of Quebec and Ontario, and referred to the fact that shoes and cement, along with several other articles, were shipped into the United States duty free.

He cited the war scandal on drugs and luxury houses, and the scandalous war-time election act which was supported by Mr. Sutherland. A few nights ago, Dr. Munton, at a meeting in Brantford, referred to the great hurricane that would sweep King out of power, but the only sign of any such storm came only from Donald Sutherland, the windiest man in the house.

He referred to the disgraceful pact between the war and the Quebec Nationalists. He predicted that the next Thursday night there would be 134 Liberals, 72 Conservatives, and 39 Progressives elected as the next parliament. Splendid addresses were given by Reeve Palmer, of North Norwich, and Dr. Rogers, of Ingersoll.

"Have You Tested My Blood, Doctor?"

"YES, I have." "And what is the result?" "Not very satisfactory." "What seems to be the trouble?" "Well, your blood is thin. It is lacking in what we call the red corpuscles. It does not contain enough of the nutritive qualities to properly supply nourishment to the nervous system." "But I am not nervous." "No, you are not, in one sense. Your hands do not tremble. You are not easily startled or excited. But nevertheless your nerves are not in good condition. There is not enough nervous energy in your system to work the machinery of the body."

"Perhaps you never thought of the vital organs of your body as requiring any motive power—any propelling energy—but they do, and this force comes through the nervous system."

"Because you are not conscious of every heart beat and of every breath you breathe is no indication that this action is not the result of nervous energy."

"You really have two brains—one with which you think and act voluntarily, another one which, without any conscious effort on your part, controls the action of the various organs and members of the body. It is the failure of this sympathetic nervous system, as it is called, which most frequently causes trouble. "Because nervous energy is lacking there is weak functioning of the vital organs. The digestive fluid does not flow properly in the stomach, and you have nervous indigestion—the action of the liver and bowels is slow and weak, and you suffer from constipation. And so it may be with other organs. While they are not really diseased, their action is weak for lack of nervous energy. What you need is a good restorative."

"What do you think of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?"

"There's nothing better. You know we doctors prefer to prescribe our own favorite treatments, but I have seen such splendid results from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food by my patients that I no longer hesitate to recommend it."

The active and concentrated ingredients of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are approved by the best medical authorities as a means of building up the exhausted nervous system. He declared that advertisements appearing in the press over the signature of Gibbons Advertising Agency were being put out by many facturers, and he stated that he was not in a position to secure similar space and make reply to the letters.

Stirrett, the candidate, was given a most rousing reception. He delivered a stirring address, and was loudly cheered.

"The Liberal party is made up of strong, virile and vigorous members, firm believers in low tariff measures as the only possible method of assistance to the basic industries of this country," he declared. "Mr. Meighen and his party are unit to govern the destinies of this country. The

WILL MR. WHITE VOTE FOR MR. LITTLE TO GET FRIENDLY MARKET OUT WEST AND NON-POLITICAL TARIFF BOARD?

It Would Be Mr. White's Best Course—If London Rolling Mills Need Higher Protection, a Non-Political Board Should Examine the Facts and Decide How Much—Mr. Meighen's Plan Would Cost Mr. White $30,000 a Year.

MR. WHITE NEEDS THE GOODWILL OF WESTERN CANADA

Mr. Frank White, the Conservative candidate in London, is annoyed by The Advertiser's publication of two photographs showing the new building he is adding to his plant at the London Rolling Mills. In the local Conservative paper Mr. White has replied that "The Advertiser tries to misrepresent to the public the situation in regard to my business. The Advertiser tells the public that my business is prosperous."

If Mr. White says that his business is bad he should be believed; it is his business and he must know about it. The Advertiser has never said that Mr. White's business is prosperous. It has merely reported the erection of a large, new building at the Rolling Mills. On the strength of Mr. White's statement The Advertiser is quite ready to tell its readers that things at the Rolling Mills are bad and that Mr. White's business faces grave difficulties.

This New Building Affair.

This new building affair, however, is a different matter. Mr. White has stated in the local Conservative paper that "the building is about one-third the size referred to by The Advertiser," the inference being that The Advertiser has been guilty of inaccuracy in its news reports. This is a matter which a newspaper can scarcely ignore if it values a reputation for fairness, and Mr. White will probably agree that it seems proper to review both sides of the case.

Early in June, The Advertiser learned that a large building extension was to be made at the London Rolling Mills. It reported this information on the front page of the evening edition of June 3 and on June 4 published an editorial congratulating Mr. White in all sincerity on the progress of his establishment.

Mr. White's Letter Published.

On June 5 Mr. White addressed to The Advertiser a letter, stating that "We have not made any announcement as to extension of plant, and have no intention of making one." This letter, over one column in length, explained that Mr. White's business was in difficulties, and that "if we do make any changes it will probably be in the direction of more efficient handling of materials and possibly in processes of manufacture." The letter was published in full on the front page on the same day that it was received.

The Advertiser did not again refer to Mr. White's new building until Mr. White himself, in his speech at the Grand opening house last Tuesday night, introduced the subject. He voluntarily explained that the new building at his plant is not an extension of present lines, but a departure into new lines made necessary by business difficulties, and he stated that he had merely bought a second-hand plant in Toronto, or as the Conservative paper reported him, "a small building and machinery," which were being moved from Toronto.

Example of Business Depression.

Mr. White offered this explanation, which The Advertiser published in full, as proof of his business depression on which he is making his appeal as a candidate. The Advertiser, which takes the view that Canada's business is doing well, thereupon inquired into the circumstances as it would inquire into any similar case. Two days after Mr. White's speech The Advertiser published two photographs showing building operations at the Rolling Mills. The Advertiser said nothing about Mr. White's prosperity. This is what it said: "Big new building progress at the Rolling Mills. The plant above are two views of a large extension which is being built at the London Rolling Mills. The top view, taken some weeks ago, shows the existing plant and foundation piers for the new building, which, as the arrows show, is to be 120 feet wide and some 200 feet long. It will be one of the biggest new manufacturing buildings west of Toronto. The lower picture, taken this week, shows the steel superstructure being erected at one end of the building, and gives some idea of its proportions."

Mr. White Makes Statement.

Mr. White immediately stated in the local Conservative paper that The Advertiser "tries to misrepresent to the public the situation in regard to my business," and that "the building is but one-third the size referred to by the local papers." The Advertiser had reported the new building to be "120 feet wide and some 200 feet long." Following Mr. White's statement, a representative of The Advertiser went to the Rolling Mills to confirm or correct the reported figures. The Advertiser representative found 35 workmen engaged in operations on the new building site at 4:30 Friday afternoon. Two huge hoisting cranes were there, and the girders within range of inspection all appeared to be new.

Actual measurement of the framework already erected, by means of a measuring tape, showed the width of the new building to be 110 feet. Measurement of the length of the new building, as indicated by its foundation piers, showed it to be slightly over 200 feet long. Workmen engaged in the operations stated to The Advertiser reporter that the new plant will be "about 200 feet in length."

MR. FRANK WHITE, whose business problem at the London Rolling Mills represents the sort of case which will best be handled by the non-political tariff board which Premier King intends to appoint.

Facts Are as Stated Before.

The facts regarding the new building at the Rolling Mills are as they were stated in The Advertiser with the publication of the photographs. From those facts The Advertiser does not offer any inference regarding the prosperity of Mr. White's business. From the figures and statements which Mr. White has given, The Advertiser would say that his business is bad and that The Advertiser is sorry that it is so. The Advertiser is always sorry when a Canadian concern is in trouble; it is sorer when a London concern has difficulty; and it is sorriest of all when there is depression in the business of a man who likes Mr. White.

Assume Mills Need Tariff.

Let us put the building affair to one side. Let us believe that the London Rolling Mills are facing serious difficulties. Let us further accept Mr. White's statement that inadequate tariff protection is the cause, as The Advertiser is quite ready to believe it might be. But let us stop there in agreeing with Mr. White. If inadequate tariff protection is the cause of a depression at the Rolling Mills which cannot be overcome by greater efficiency in operation, the sound and proper course would be to present the facts of the case to a non-political tariff board for investigation. It would be the duty of this board to study the facts, and it would be their duty, if the facts warranted it, to increase protection to a point where the industry could extend high profits at the expense of the consumer, or indulge in careless and wasteful methods of production.

This Board Is King's Plan.

Such a tariff board is the plan which the Prime Minister has proposed and which he intends to appoint. What Mr. White wishes to do by way of remedy is not sound. He wishes to increase the general tariff. Like Mr. Meighen, he wants to push protection higher and higher—a blanket increase on all industries. It is not a sensible plan. It is, in fact, a dangerous plan, because as Sir Henry Drayton admitted in Western Ontario there are certain industries which already have higher protection than they require, and certain manufacturers who are thus enabled to extort a surplus from the public. Sir Henry proposed government supervision of all manufacturers and their profits.

Mr. White, facing troubles in his business, should be one of the first men to advocate the immediate appointment of the tariff board. It would assist him. It is entirely to assist such cases that the board is proposed.

Meighen Would Add $30,000 a Year.

The Advertiser can see little hope for Mr. White or the Rolling Mills in Hon. Mr. Meighen. If Mr. Meighen is able to carry out his stated intention, the Rolling Mills will be worse off than ever. The cost of production at the Rolling Mills in the one item of soft coal would increase by $30,000 a year. In his speech at Edmonton Mr. Meighen stated that he would put in force a high protective tariff on coal from the United States for the purpose of selling Alberta coal in Ontario. The tariff would be made high enough to block the sale of American coal, so that Alberta coal would have to be bought by the people of Ontario.

Taking Mr. Meighen at his word, London coal dealers estimated the effect on London manufacturers as follows: The present price of high-grade American steam coal in London is $6 per ton. The price of the same variety of Alberta coal is $9 per ton. A tariff that would shut out American importation would be the difference between the two prices, or more. A duty of $3 per ton at least would have to be set, and taking this amount as a moderate tariff necessary to shut out importation, the following conservative estimates of increased expenditures are compiled: In London, where more than 200,000 tons of steam coal are used annually, the increased cost would be $600,000. In the dominion, as a whole, where approximately 12,000,000 tons are imported annually, according to figures for 1922 from the department of customs and excise, the increased cost would be $36,000,000.

Big Firms Hard Hit.

The tariff would cost the McClary Manufacturing company in London, in which concern a minimum amount of 6,000 tons of imported coal is used a year, $18,000. The London Rolling Mills, using about 10,000 tons a year, would pay $30,000 more than at the present time. The McCormick Manufacturing company, using 4,000 tons, would pay an increased sum of $12,000. The Helena Costume company, using 2,000 tons, would pay $6,000, and the two London breweries, using 3,000 tons each, would pay $18,000. The Ontario division of the C. N. R., consuming about 200,000 tons a year, would pay an increased amount of $600,000.

In his speech at the Grand opening house Mr. White mentioned the matter of a coal tariff, and said that "There's something wrong with The Advertiser's mathematics." This was with reference to The Advertiser's statement of coal costing the householder $22.85 a ton. This, of course, is anthracite or hard coal, which at present costs $16.50 a ton, and which would be increased to $22.85, by a prohibitive tariff, according to coal dealers. Soft coal, as stated, would jump to only $9 a ton, but even that increase would cost London manufacturers over $500,000 a year, and Mr. White's plant $30,000 a year. This increase, of course, would raise prices and the consumer would pay for it.

Mr. White's Hope Is King.

The Advertiser does not wish to meddle in Mr. White's affairs. He merely suggests that any business man in Mr. White's position has better chances for relief in Premier King's policy than in Mr. Meighen's. Premier King proposes a non-political and scientific tariff board; Mr. Meighen wishes to make a blind, unreasoning increase. Premier King proposes, where possible, to reduce costs of raw products and implements of production; Mr. Meighen, as the coal illustration shows, would add to the manufacturers' troubles. The Advertiser repeats its regret that Mr. White's business is bad, and hopes that it may soon recover. There is some measure of consolation in the knowledge that Mr. White's business is an outstanding exception to the rule. Business in Canada, particularly in Western Canada, is good. It is better than it has been since 1921; it is getting better every day.

What Manufacturers Say.

The Advertiser recently has interviewed merchants and manufacturers and civic officials in Stratford, St. Marys, St. Thomas, Woodstock, Ingersoll, Sarnia and Chatham. Tariff and election have not been mentioned; neither has there been any idea of selecting supporters of any political party. The Advertiser is glad to say that not one man in the seven cities and towns has declared business to be bad. If all their statements, and there are now several, could be belied down to a single item it would be: "My business is good; it is getting better; it is the best year yet."

The Advertiser has heard of only one unfortunate case apart from Mr. White. This was Mr. D. M. Wright of Eastern Canada, who is reported as stating at a public meeting that his furniture business is the worst in thirty years. Mr. Wright is the Conservative candidate in North Parth.

White Should Vote for Little.

The Advertiser cannot refrain from one bit of advice to Mr. White. His business is bad. He should vote for Mr. E. S. Little on Thursday and strengthen the hand of the Prime Minister in his plan to appoint a tariff board and reduce costs of production. Then Mr. White would have really efficient protection, a friendly market in Western Canada, goodwill in Eastern Canada, unity in all nine provinces, and prosperity at last for the London Rolling Mills.

War and Peace Divided By Pact

Associated Press Despatch. London, Oct. 23.—Austen Chamberlain, the foreign secretary, today told newspapermen that "Locarno will be seen later to be the real dividing point between the years of war and the years of peace." The agreements concluded there, Mr. Chamberlain continued, "do not make war impossible—no human undertaking or human foresight can do that—but they render war indefinitely less probable than it would have been otherwise."

ROBB PLAN GETS 500 FAMILIES

British Family Plan of Settlement Gets High-Class Farmer Immigrants For Canada.

Under the leadership of Hon. J. A. Robb, an agreement was entered into with the imperial government for the placing of three thousand approved British families on Canadian farms.

The imperial government is making advances amounting to an average of $1,500 per family for the purchase of farm stock and equipment, and in many cases advances the money as a loan for transportation expenses. The Canadian government furnishes the farms, which are farms already in possession of the government, and undertakes supervisory assistance for these settlers until they are firmly established on the land.

500 Families a Year.

The arrangement has worked very satisfactorily so far. The department has officials in England who carefully investigate the qualifications of all applicants, and only those who are likely to succeed will be accepted under the scheme. During the first year over 500 families, numbering 2,500 people, have come to Canada. Of this number more than 80 per cent have definitely expressed themselves as satisfied with the arrangement made. They have given evidence that they will become successful and independent owners of their farms in a very few years. A great many have written home advising their friends to take advantage of the British family scheme and it is expected that in the next two years there will be a surplus of applications. This is an advance in colonization methods which is creditable to Mr. Robb, formerly minister in charge of immigration and colonization, who, himself, negotiated the agreement with the imperial authorities.

CANADA'S DOLLAR HAS CLIMBED OUT OF HOLE

Discounted at 20 Per Cent Under Meighen—Now Worth More Than American.

In December, 1921, the month in which the Meighen government formally handed over the reins to the King administration, Canadian money was at a discount of 10 per cent in the New York money market. Heavy borrowing in that market and a large adverse trade balance had resulted in Canadian money being discounted. In December of the previous year, under the same administration, the discount had reached 20 per cent. For the two-year period from December, 1919, to December, 1921, the discount had averaged over 10 per cent.

Immediately on the accession of the King administration the situation began to right itself. With the presentation of the Flanders budget during the session which began in January, 1922, the discount had dropped to less than 2 per cent, and soon after it touched par. There it has remained ever since, save for occasional fluctuations of one or two per cent. In New York today Canadian money is quoted at a premium slightly in excess of one-half of one per cent.

FOR THE UNITY OF ALL CANADA.

On the left is the prime minister of Canada, Right Hon. Mackenzie King, and on the right is Mr. E. S. Little, who represents the premier's policies in London. Mr. King and Mr. Little believe that the greatest need of Canada today is the unity and goodwill of all nine provinces to make a united Canada. To that end they advocate broad and moderate policies, with the tariff problem directed by a non-political business board.

Mr. Meighen's Own Words Show Plan Against C.N.R.; Starve It and "Sell Out"

"Not Amalgamate Unless," Promises Mr. Meighen—Would Stop Thornton's Program "With a Strong Hand"—Patenaude Says "Close It Down or Sell It."

SAFETY OF C. N. R. LIES WITH THE PREMIER

Mr. Meighen is still trying to reassure Ontario about his attitude on the Canadian National Railways. He has a delicate task because he must reassure Ontario without displeasing the private ownership crowd in Montreal who control his policies.

Mr. Meighen's statements of the railway question are definitely alarming to the people of Ontario. His statements show clearly that he has amalgamation with the C. P. R. in his mind as the ultimate plan and drastic interference with Sir Henry Thornton's development of the C. N. R. as an immediate course of action if he had power.

HIS ATTACK ON SIR HENRY THORNTON.

Mr. Meighen showed his latter plan at Wingham five weeks ago. In his speech he attacked Sir Henry Thornton on the grounds of gross extravagance.

Sir Henry has turned Mr. Meighen's C. N. R. operation deficit of $2,000,000 in 1920-21 into an operating revenue of $20,000,000 in 1923 and $17,000,000 in 1924, and his improvements in C. N. R. buildings and equipment have merely been to give the C. N. R. a chance to compete for business with the C. P. R. But Mr. Meighen bitterly attacked Sir Henry and stated that "I will stop these expenditures with a strong hand the first month I am in power."

STARVE IT AND THEN SELL OUT.

Mr. Meighen's plan would be to starve the C. N. R., to suck it dry until it could not compete with the excellent service of the C. P. R. The time would then be ripe to amalgamate C. N. R. with C. P. R. as a great private ownership monopoly. Competition would be killed; public ownership would be abandoned and the financial ring in Montreal would be satisfied. Mr. Meighen's showing of his hand was so disturbing and the alarm so general that he now finds it necessary to try to reassure the people of Ontario in general and the railway employees in particular, to whom public ownership and the C. N. R. are worth defending.

NOT AMALGAMATE "UNLESS"—

Mr. Meighen, therefore, issued a statement in a large campaign advertisement and has been repeating his story at every meeting since. In his statement he says: "I will oppose parliament dealing with the question of amalgamation unless as an issue to be placed before the people." And in his speeches he is saying: "I would not consider my election now as a mandate to amalgamate the railways."

MEIGHEN PLANS AMALGAMATION.

The meaning of these words is very plain. They mean that Mr. Meighen is planning for amalgamation, not at this election, but at a future one. In the meantime, if he can, he will press his plan to starve the C. N. R. in order to further a demand for amalgamation.

If any person fails to see Mr. Meighen's purpose in his own words, he need only hear the message of Mr. Patenaude, the man who has replaced Mr. Meighen as Conservative leader in Quebec. Mr. Patenaude has said: "Can you ever completely separate government railways from politics? How can you do it? If we have no confidence in our plan to separate the board of directors from politics then we must apply the extreme remedy and set rid of it either by closing it down or selling it."

"UNLESS" AND "IF."

Mr. Meighen says "no amalgamation UNLESS—" Mr. Patenaude says "close it down or sell it IF we can't keep politics out," after saying that we can't. Mr. Meighen and Mr. Patenaude are so clearly a menace to the future safety of the Canadian National Railway that they should be prevented from ever getting their hands near it. And London should do its part for the safe-keeping of the people's property. The only safe course for London is to vote for Mr. Little.

PEG O'LONDON GOES A-SHOPPING FOR THE SOCIAL SEASON

Baby Land! What an interesting name! Everyone is talking about it, so I thought I had better investigate and see just what Baby Land was. This is what I found: A place where mothers can buy the most adorable baby clothes you can imagine, soft, cuddly bonnets and jackets, nice warm, woolly undies, just the things baby feels so comfortable in. Mrs. Gray seems to understand baby's need perfectly.

To introduce Baby Land to London the management is holding a beauty contest for children from six months to six years, November 2 to 7 inclusive. The children will be judged by photographs only. Three prominent artists have kindly consented to judge them. All photographs must be accompanied by a Baby Land ticket, which will be given free with all purchases of 50c and up at Baby Land, 419 Richmond street, over Bruce Wallace's drug store.

Are you undecided as to just how to make your Halloween decorations? Drop in and see the assortment in Willow Hall. I am sure your troubles will clear immediately. They have such interesting bridge prizes for both men and women. One thing I thought most attractive was the English leather cigarette cases. In fact there are so many beautiful things it is quite impossible to write about them all.

It's a gorgeous feeling to free oneself from the tyranny of the washwoman. The Parisian Laundry has eight different systems for doing washing. A family service that equals one's fondest dreams of a perfect laundress. There is a system for every family. Everything washed, snowed clean. Tel. 558 for particulars that will serve you best.

I have often wondered if it was really worry which made some people look so careworn. I found out from Mr. Boyd, the foot specialist, the other day that nine times out of ten it was foot ailments which caused that frown.

Now with the social and dancing season at hand, if you have some foot disorder why not call and see Mr. Boyd and let him advise and treat you? You will not realize how much feet, free from pain, will add to your enjoyment. Call and see him at 219 Dundas street or 156 King street.

Along comes jolly old halloween season again, with its frivolous masquerade parties. Why bother making a costume when you can get almost anything you want at Mrs. Dick-nother's, 131 Pipe Line road? I dropped in there the other day to look them over and select one. I found I had a great many to choose from among the terrors, Mexican, Indian, pierrot, Hawaiian, oriental, page and old-fashioned period gowns. You can get hats to go with the gown or white wigs for both ladies and gentlemen, or high silk hats. Many of these costumes are quite new this year.

Distingue! winsome! chic! are the exclamations that are greeting Mrs. Harper's exclusive models from Paris and New York this season. The informal way in which Mrs. Harper conducts her modiste establishment at the corner of Colborne and Dufferin avenue is making many fast friends and dependable customers for her, as she will not permit you to buy a garment which she knows is not becoming. When I dropped in on her the other day and asked, "How is business?" in her very optimistic and cheery way she replied, "Just the very best."

Stationery is such an important item in this list of the necessary. Wendell Holmes have a most novel assortment of White and Wyckoff's Autocrat Linen, in both men's and women's size, gold, silver and decorated edges. The cabinets are so very attractive and useful even when the paper is all gone.

I noticed also how very attractive their display of Halloween decorations and favors were.

Beads and bangles from Czech-Slovakia, fascinating and colorful, will touch up that old gown and make you look real smart. Willow Hall have these, and also some very interesting Old English Jewellery, set with precious stones of garnets, corals and amethysts, and the most interesting silver bracelets carved and very quaint.

Such a teddy suit is predestined to become a triumph and a favorite, whether it be in a bride's trousseau or just belongs to a girl who loves beautiful things. The designer, Miss V. Williams, at 627 Dundas street, has some exquisite garments in her shop, or she will make up your own materials.

I also saw some unusually attractive silk scarves, in fancy silk and silk knit lace.

A very attractive new store has recently been opened by Mr. W. G. Stewart, formerly manager of Hudson's Fashion Shoppe, at the corner of Richmond and King streets, a daylight store where garments may be selected in the light in which they are worn. I am sure Peg and all her readers wish Mr. Stewart all success.

CLEVELAND MOTOR NEW DEALER IN LONDON

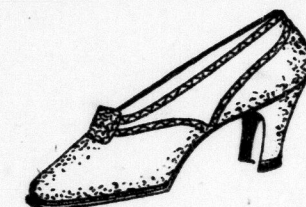

The Cleveland Automobile Company announce J. C. Beemer as the new distributor of Cleveland motors in London.

The company state that, "size for size, price for price, body for body, chassis for chassis, motor for motor, the Cleveland six comes out the winner in any comparison of actual car value."

J. C. Beemer has enjoyed longer automobile service to the public of London than any other dealer, and he is enthusiastic about his new line. He says "the 'one-shot' lubrication system will prove popular." Mr. Beemer invites an inspection of the line at his showrooms, 133 Queen's avenue, west of the postoffice.—Adv.

20 APPEALS CONSIDERED AS REVISION COURT SITS

Some 200 cases were considered yesterday afternoon at a sitting of the court of revision. Most of them were not contested, and revisions were made quickly. The appeals were chiefly for small amounts, one clergyman appealing for a reduction of $100 in his assessment. The request was granted. The court's work for the year is now pretty much completed.

'Simple elegance is the keynote of the new fall fashions in feminine footwear. You find it convincingly revealed in the smart trim, exclusive lines, and the unusual beauty of the gold and silver kid slippers J. P. Cook is showing. Single strap are shown, and they are so comfortable for dancing, no trouble of slipping.

Other lines extremely chic are the black velvet, with puffed silk rosettes and black satin lavender, stitched with rosettes.

And with Christmas just around the corner, I noticed some very pretty house slippers in dainty colors, which would make a most appreciative gift.

So many small boys are being so smartly turned out this fall by the Boys' Shoppe. This interesting new shoppe, recently opened by Messrs. Hurley and Laur, is making a big success, and proving a wonderful help to mothers in choosing suitable clothes for Billy. Jersey pull-overs and sweaters in lovely shades for fall and winter, two-piece pyjama suits for children four to sixteen, and the snugs for the one-to-ten-year-olds. Ties in boy lengths and suitable colors, golf socks and hosiery, best of wool, refers suitable for boys and girls, sailor suits with long trousers, wool turbans tailor-made with ear-flaps for the very cold weather, all-wool pullovers in all the choice colors. I am sure London mothers will appreciate this store and service given them. Just think, Billy has a store all his own to choose his wardrobe from!

Another triumph from Willow Hall are the wonderful silk scarves in Russian design and coloring. One could not begin to describe them. You simply must see them, and I bet all they are not too high in price.

For these cold days baby must be kept warm and comfy. Mr. Ewan's Yarn Shop, at 501½ Richmond street, are showing the cutest little woolly bonnets and jackets, knitted booties and dainty little dresses. You should see their window next week. I know it is going to be an interesting one, and quite worth a visit.

They also have some very interesting luncheon, card table covers, and afternoon tea cloths.

A no more interesting shop for women in London is the Irish Linen Shop, corner Huron and Richmond streets. Mrs. Harvey has just received some Horrocks' Diaphanene Cloth. It would make charming lingerie for Christmas gifts. Luncheon Sets I thought very attractive were white embroidered in colors. Very reasonably priced.

Weekly Farm Notes

Turnips and Fodder Corn 'Are Below Last Year's Totals—Alfalfa Acreage Throughout Ontario Shows Big Increase—Problem of Marketing Arises as Apple Crop Is Highest in Years.

The average yield per acre of potatoes, turnips, fodder corn and sugar beets in Canada this year is below the average for 1915-24, according to an estimate just made public by the dominion bureau of statistics.

With a decreased acreage in potatoes, this means a decided cut in the crop, which is now placed at somewhat over 41,000,000 hundredweight. Last year's crop was over 458,000,000 hundredweight. The Ontario crop is over 5,000,000 hundredweight and the Quebec crop 4,000,000 hundredweight less than last year, while the total for New Brunswick has declined by one-half. The western crop is somewhat better than that of 1924, but the increase does not begin to offset the decreases in the east.

Both turnips and fodder corn, the two late feed crops, are well below last year's totals. More than half of these crops are grown in Ontario. The Ontario turnip crop is about three-quarters that of last year, amounting to nearly 19,000,000 hundredweight. Corn has dropped by almost 450,000 tons to 3,537,000. Quebec also has less corn. In the west, Alberta has doubled last year's crop, but Saskatchewan and Manitoba have reduced their acreage.

An increased acreage of sugar beets in Ontario has offset a slight reduction in yield per acre, and brings the total crop to nearly 350,000 tons. In the Raymond district of Alberta, where a sugar factory has commenced operations, the crop is estimated at 58,000 tons from 6,000 acres.

Fall work has been going forward under difficulties during the past few weeks, especially in Eastern Ontario. There has been much delay from wet weather, and in some sections buckwheat and second crop red clover are still standing in the fields. Upon the other hand some counties of Western Ontario report work well advanced, with more fall plowing than usual completed. Wheat has come up well and made good growth, and pastures have been holding on better than usual. Milk flow is generally good, and there is a strong demand for fresh cows.

ALFALFA ACREAGE CLIMBS.
In the past fifteen years the acreage under alfalfa in Ontario has been multiplied by almost ten. In 1910, the acreage was 45,500. In 1912, it had climbed to 76,000. Then a combination of causes, the most important of which was the failure of the seed and resultant winter killing, caused a decline to 62,000 in 1917. In the following year it rose again to 144,000, and has been climbing ever since. The present acreage is placed at 408,000, and the alfalfa campaign committee expects to see this raised to over the million within the next few years. No definite objective in acres is being set, however. "Our object is to get alfalfa on every suitable farm in Ontario, particularly those interested in stock raising," says J. A. Carroll, a member of the committee. "And if we do that, the acreage will take care of itself."

"The ordinary colony of bees needs about fifty pounds of honey or syrup each year to carry it over the winter," says Prof. F. E. Miller of the O. A. C. "Consequently, unless the ten-frame Langstroth hive, with inner cover and bottom board, weighs at least 70 pounds, the colony needs feeding. For this purpose a white sugar syrup, made of any good white granulated sugar, two parts to water one part, is recommended. Feeding is best done in the evening any time after Oct. 15.

ONTARIO LEADS IN APPLES.
According to the most recent report of the dominion bureau of statistics, Ontario will lead all provinces in the production of apples this year. The crop here is estimated at 1,190,880 barrels, while that of Nova Scotia the nearest competitor, is placed at 660,450, and British Columbia at 2,138,000 boxes, or the equivalent of 695,490 barrels. The total commercial crop for Canada will be 103 per cent of 1924. The quality of the fruit is extra good in Ontario and British Columbia, but very poor in Nova Scotia. In fact, the latter province will barely have half a million barrels for export. While many growers in this province are wondering whether it will be possible to dispose of their crop at a profit, officials at Ottawa advise them not to be stampeded, as the crop in England and continental Europe is light and prices should pick up. Furthermore, in United States, a rival of Canada in the export market, the apple crop is only fair.

The extra large apple crop in Ontario this fall has brought the problem of marketing into the front rank. The grower has often been severely criticized by economists for not devoting more thought to the large home markets. It is pointed out that British Columbia sells much fruit in Toronto and Montreal, and even the smaller cities lying in the heart of the apple belt in Ontario and Nova Scotia are not neglected by growers in the Pacific province. Ontario producers are told that they should adopt the box for selling to the domestic consumer, as the barrel is too large for the ordinary consumer to handle, and at best this large package is unattractive, and that in using it the fruit too often becomes bruised. Many growers in Ontario are using the box for packing their choicest varieties, such as McIntosh and Spy, but this fall, but it is claimed that this bushel package is too large for the average apartment dweller. Baskets are not suitable, as dealers may repack these to suit themselves, thus discrediting the man who puts up an honest pack. Some sort of a sealed package is necessary so that this can be graded by the government expert, and the original contents reach the consumer. It has been predicted that fancy apples will soon be packed similar to what is done with individual sealed cartons. This method would be rather expensive, but for high-grade fruit it is apparently the only way in which the interests of both consumer and producer could be safeguarded.

GARDENING HINTS.
Now that frost has set in, the garden, the next job on the calendar is the harvesting of next year's seeds and bulbs. There will be very few of the late sown garden seeds, as the cold weather killed most plants before the seed was mature, but tubers and roots below ground were unharmed. In packing delia tubers, dig very carefully so the none will be damaged. Shake off all loose earth, and leave cluster of tubers in the sun for a few hours to dry. Cut off stalks a few inches from the tubers and place the clusters, stalk ends down, in a loose crate, in a cool cellar. In a few weeks, inspect these. Remove any damaged parts and wrap the clusters in newspaper, packing the same in paper-lined barrel or box. Allow gladiolus bulbs, tops cut off a few inches from bulb, to dry for a few days in a cool, airy cellar. The little bulbets may be saved by storing in sand to prevent drying out. These will increase in size when planted next year, and will flower in a couple of seasons. Canna roots should be dug when frost cuts down the tops and stored in a dry, frost-proof cellar. If the latter is warm, cover with some coarse material or sand to keep from drying out.

DEER HUNTING TIME NOW.
Up in the North Woods the boys are already bringing in their game. In the district north of the main line of the Canadian National Railway between Quebec and Winnipeg, the moose and deer season opened Sept. 15 and will continue until Nov. 15. Throughout this district, which covers millions of acres, big game is always very plentiful, and every hunter who goes north is almost sure of bringing back his full complement.

South of this line to the French and Mattawa rivers the open season for deer and moose is from Oct. 20 to Nov. 30, both dates inclusive, while in the territory yet further south, i.e., south of the French, Pickering and Mattawa rivers, the open season is from Nov. 5 to 20.

The district adjacent to the French, Pickering and Mattawa rivers is easy of access, and is one of the famous and popular hunting grounds of Ontario. Keen, dyed-in-the-wool hunters go up to this country of trail, river and lake every year, and are always successful.

There can be no better vacation than one spent in these northern Ontario woods. Clean your gun, assemble your kit, and get ready for a real he-man holiday. Any Canadian National Railway agent will gladly supply you with full hunting information and particulars of special and regular train service.

Printed leaflet with details of this service and general information of interest to hunters is available on application.—Adv.

SIFTON SUPPORTS KING'S CAMPAIGN

Declares Tariff Cannot Be Lowered—Sees Danger in Raising It.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Newmarket, Oct. 23.—Speaking here tonight in behalf of the candidature of the prime minister, Sir Clifford Sifton said that in regard to the tariff his view was that the present tariff was the result of long and careful consideration by successive ministers and successive commissions of inquiry. Thus the subject had been worked down to such a fine point that there was little room for change.

Can Raise It.
"But anybody can raise the tariff," Sir Clifford asserted. "Meighen has declared that he can and will. If he gets a majority there is nothing to prevent him. Daily papers talk about sixty per cent. Meighen says brick for brick the same as the United States tariff wall. Therefore, if Meighen gets in we can look for an elevation of the tariff of from 20 to 30 per cent. This means an immediate increase in the price of manufactured goods ranging from 25 to 40 per cent."

"Respecting the charge that King has ruined the country by closed factories," said Sir Clifford, "the story of closed factories has been exploded a dozen times. The only important cut in the tariff that King made was on agricultural implements. That industry is more prosperous than it has been for years. The Masseys, father and son, who probably have more money invested in the business than anybody else in the country, are both supporting the government. They say the United States is prosperous and Canada is poverty-stricken. As a matter of fact, there is probably 100 per cent more unemployment and certainly 100 per cent more poverty and distress in proportion to population in the United States than there is in Canada."

Stocks Go Up.
"What is our business position?" a list of ten or fifteen standard industries of Canada shows that their stock has appreciated from 50 to 300 per cent, and the balance of trade is over two hundred and fifty million dollars a year. "If the United States is in our favor, we are putting that two hundred and fifty million dollars a year into our pockets, and the result is that New York bankers are shipping gold to Canada to pay our debts to us. Quebec is growing industrially as never before. The great International Paper Company is practically moving house to Canada. The great Aluminum Company is spending tens of millions of dollars in Quebec. Little villages in the province of Quebec have grown from populations of 1,500 to six or seven thousand, and have become prosperous manufacturing towns. Ontario is not getting enough electric power for their manufacturers. What is the matter with these people? How much do they want?"

C. N. R. in Danger.
"A group of Montreal men are openly determined to wreck the national railways. They make no secret of it. What is their plan? Announcing that Mr. Meighen was unpopular in Quebec, they have brought forward a Mr. Patenaude, and paraded him as the leader of a new party. Financed by the Montreal group with abundant funds, he is expected to get enough members elected in Quebec to make a majority of the House of Commons when joined with Mr. Meighen's following. Mr. Meighen will then be in office only so long as he does what Mr. Patenaude says."

DENIES RETIREMENT.
Canadian Press Despatch.

DR. ROSS IS SURE OF SUCCESS IN EAST MIDDLESEX

Electors Enthusiased Over Liberal Candidate's Clean-Cut Stand On Public Issues.

The following of Dr. C. C. Ross, Liberal candidate in East Middlesex, is growing larger each day, and spells success for the Liberal banner at the polls next Thursday.

Dr. Ross' clear-cut speeches and his sane handling of all questions dealing with the public welfare have made a distinct hit with farmers, citizens and villagers, who up to the present time have known Dr. Ross as a friend and advisor in the home at a time of sickness.

Dr. Ross has never broken his word. His word is as good as his bond, and this fact is known all over East Middlesex. When he promises to visit a home where there is sickness he keeps that promise and gives every patient every attention known to medical science.

Dr. Ross will give that same careful attention to the affairs of East Middlesex and the country as a whole if he is elected to represent East Middlesex in the dominion parliament.

Canada needs men of Dr. Ross' ability in parliament. That is only one of the reasons that East Middlesex will return him as member next Thursday. Vote Ross and you will know the satisfaction of having voted for the best candidate in East Middlesex.—Adv.

Grizzlies and Broncos Go Into Crucial Tilts Today With Determination To Win

Sarnia, With Advantage, Will Face Fighting Clan In Strengthened Locals

Defeat Has Knitted Loose Ends of Grizzlies Into Formidable Team.

DEFECTS REMEDIED

Loss Today Means Oblivion For Hopes of Intermediate Gridiron Victory.

Doug Huestis' Grizzlies face Sarnia today—and extinction if they lose. They are correspondingly determined not to lose, and they believe with an even break today they'll delay the final decision until next Saturday.

Defeat may have knitted the loose ends of the London team into a more formidable machine than if the teams were dividing two wins. Instead of Sarnia having two chalked-up victories and London a defeat, the Grizzlies have a bit the better of the situation. They have a bit the better of the situation. They have a bit the better of the situation.

EXCEPTIONAL RIDING COMFORT

The riding comfort of a motor car is not dependent upon its length, weight or cost, any more than the comfort of a home depends upon its size.

If the seats are deep enough and the proper distance from the floor; if the seat backs are correctly pitched for relaxation; if the upholstery is sufficiently stuffed and there is plenty of leg room; above all, if the springs are rightly designed and of proper length, you will have exceptional riding comfort. Otherwise, you will not.

Dodge Brothers, with characteristic thoroughness, studied and experimented with these details for years. Their findings were ultimately incorporated in the design of Dodge Brothers Motor Car—without question now a vehicle that ranks with the first in this vitally important feature.

Associated Press Despatch.
St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 23.—Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, announced 30,000 persons will be accommodated at Sportsman park here next spring, when improvements now under way will be completed. This is 11,500 more than the present capacity. The park is used by both St. Louis major league teams.

Newsboy Brown event, but he has nothing to say about the La Barba verdict. Frankie tried hard to get a return match with La Barba. Not meeting with success, he took on the Brown bout, hoping to prove that he had taken on the La Barba fight too soon after his arrival on the coast. The setback by Brown hastened his return home.

Copyright, 1925.

In rugby, the horoscope reading of the stars may be favorable but a few breaks, a fumble and an oddly bouncing pigskin can cause a whole eclipse.

Scientists in Sarnia and Guelph are predicting a twin eclipse for London today. Professors Huestis and Pickley, local scientists of note, claim those lads are looking through the wrong end of their telescopes.

It looks as if all Jack Dempsey is going to do is to keep on fighting the income tax and shorter bouts at that.

It isn't so long ago that the Green boys of Sudbury, later Hamilton, were being dissected to see what made them tick and if they'd tick in pro company. Now there are led the first strike of hockey players in history and have the additional nerve to think of holding out. Whatever may have been their capabilities, past or present, they certainly had and have nerve.

With so much stage money being passed out in hockey circles, even hockey players will begin to get upstage.

The rugby season is short and sweet, but usually packs its thrills in just as tight. Today's battles pretty nearly everywhere have a crucial angle. Despite the desperate efforts made in the past week at McGill, there is nothing very crucial likely to happen at Kingston today, but in the Interprovincial interest centers and centers hard on the Tiger-Argo battle. A win for Argos would keep them in the running—brings Hamilton Rowing club and Varsity together and will give the Hamilton Rowers a chance to justify their seeming class at the beginning of the season and edge into the calculations.

Bang up against their own doors, Londoners have two that carry the threat of quick, sudden extinction of the hopes pinned on two teams. Both teams should hurdle the obstacles today, but both will be fighting for another chance, while Sarnia and O. C. are in the enviable position of knowing that they are not in such desperate straits. Sometimes desperate straits are necessary to bring out the best in football teams, and by the same token there is an advantage against an adversary not lashed to the last ounce of determination and strength.

GETTING THEM YOUNG.
Last night's definite formation of a junior city hockey league, besides meeting a very pressing need in preserving continuity of development, should be the answer, if the idea becomes general, in the space of a few years to the problem facing cities with artificial rinks—cities with not enough population to support professional hockey but forced to face the possibility of having a try at it as the one way out of the impasse formed on the one hand by tight-knit amateur regulations and on the other by ever-expanding professional looms.

Senior hockey is in a very unenviable position due to a number of circumstances, some of them of forced and some of natural growths, and it will be until the tourist evil is entirely removed.

There is not a city playing senior hockey in the O. H. A. today but what can develop its own players. It cannot be done in one season, but it can be done in two or three, and the industry, once started, can be maintained.

Hockey history is dotted with the fame of teams which have been welded together off the ponds by coaches who were coaches in all that that term implies and a little more.

Bill Carson May Go To Montreal

Canadian Press Despatch.
Montreal, Oct. 23.—The information handed out here that the reported purchase by St. Patrick's professional hockey club of Gerald Munro of the Montreal team of the National Hockey league has more in it than shows on the face of it. It comes from pretty good authority that "Bill" Carson is the central figure. Carson, formerly star center player, and now with Stratford, as is well known, tied up to St. Patrick's. But Carson, so it is learned does not want to play with the Irish. But he is not opposed to turning pro and join Montreal. If he makes the jump, Without St. Patrick's consent, however, Montreal could not sign Carson. Therefore, in exchange for St. Patrick's passing up their option on Carson, Montreal have turned over Gerald Munro. There may have been some cash involved in the deal also, but it is imagined that the securing of the option on Carson was the main cog that turned the deal.

W. A. Gurney Chosen Head of Junior Hockey League

Player Development Well Under Way With Naming of Leader.

ENTRIES RECEIVED

W. A. Gurney, popular London sportsman and hockey enthusiast, will lead the London Junior Hockey league in its maiden year.

With this selection, and the addition of Bill Marsden to the executive, the new loop is assured of a capable governing body, which means much to its success.

At the meeting at Westervelt's school last night, enthusiasm was in evidence in every discussion. Entries to the league were received and the lists of players for three of the teams approved. The teams submitting their lists of players were Ridout street, St. Mary's Hawks and Orioles are not ready. The last day for the receiving of the lists was set for November 6, when a general meeting will be held to further organize the league and get everything in readiness for the opening night.

From advance notices so far, although it is rather early, all the teams will be strong, and keen competition that will assure the support of the fans is predicted. Several of the members of London's senior team will assist Bill Marsden in the coaching duties. The plan is to have two players assigned to each team to give the players preliminary instructions. Jerry Lowry and D'Arcy Leamy will coach St. Mary's, but the designation of the other instructors has not been named.

The following are the entries which were handed in last night:

Ridout — Burton, Eliatt, William Drake, Percy Mason, W. Ronsick, G. Pierce, J. Manuel, W. Ellis, J. Cooper, R. Sinclair, J. Wade, F. Bennett, H. Pollock, P. Jones, E. Campbell, M. Dale, O. Stewart, R. Norris.

PETROLIA GRIDDERS MEET FIRST DEFEAT

Tumble Before Sarnia Wanderers On Home Plot With 12 to 1 Count.

Special to The Advertiser.
Petrolia, Oct. 23.—Petrolia Independents suffered their first defeat here today when the Sarnia Wanderers took them to task for a 12 to 1 score. The game on the whole was good, barring the fumbles made by both teams.

Petrolia's fumbles proved their undoing. During the first quarter Sarnia scored their first touchdown, which failed to convert. In the third quarter McPhedran scored another five points for the visitors, and two rouges were made by the visitors, while the local scored only one point by kick to the deadline.

McPhedran of Sarnia was by far the best player on the field, while Tanto Campbell and Thompson starred for the local.

TILLSBURG HIGH WINS RIFLE SHOOT

Cadets of Western Ontario Schools Compete in Annual Events.

SARNIA IS SECOND

Tillsburg high school won the honors at the third annual rifle meet for cadets in the schools of Western Ontario, held at the Cove ranges yesterday. Their team aggregate was 420, which is considered a remarkable showing for young cadets. Sarnia, with 410, came second, while Chatham was third with 379.

More than 250 cadets from twenty-five different schools participated. Shooting began at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and was completed last Saturday afternoon. The officers in charge expressed themselves as highly pleased with the fine work done at the meet, and the fine spirit of keen competition which was in evidence.

The third annual rifle meet has been held, and during that time the shooting of the cadets has shown a vast improvement.

Only two teams from public schools were entered from Ailsa Craig and from Boyle Memorial. They were somewhat young, but still made a fine showing in team and individual competition.

Large numbers of citizens attended the shoot. The band of the Royal Canadian Regiment provided music during the afternoon. The presentation of medals and trophies was made by Gen. King, commander of military district, No. 1, and he complimented the cadets on the showing they had made. He defended cadet training as a really valuable aid to the attainment of manhood by Canadian youth.

Col. Gillespie, district cadet officer, was in charge of the range during the afternoon. He was assisted by Adjutant Hodgson, Lieut. A. R. Clarke, Capt. C. W. Wood, Sergeant White, Lieut. A. R. Stanger, and Sergeant Casson.

CONKLE AND JORDAN BACK IN GAME TODAY

Western's Chances of Winning Bettered by Return of Injured Players.

BATTLE EXPECTED

Trained to the highest point and cloaked with a winning spirit, Western Broncos tackle Al Wilson and his O. A. C. gridgers in a battle which may result in purple and white oblivion or another chance to grab off the intercollegiate honors for 1925.

The chances of the Broncos winning today's battle are both fine and slim. The team is ready, and will do its best. Then again hope is added when it was announced last night that Conkle and Jordan, the two crippled members of the squad would be in shape for today's game. Dutch Simpson is a good quarter, but Conkle has the advantage of senior experience and his style of play is superior to that of Simpson.

The time during the process of development of rugby at the university has so much depended upon win or loss that the team is in a state of mind which is not known in general to the fans or experts. The scheduled fixture at O. A. C. last Saturday proved to be one of the worst exhibitions that the local school ever took part in. Western, a well-trained and speedy squad, gained yards only three times during the encounter, showing that in team and individual play the Aggies were superior.

It was a sorry exhibition of the popular pastime. Western's repeated fumbles lost them the game, while the stellar booting of Wilson, together with the stellar work of Pugh, his steady-going mate on the half line, kept the farmers in the lead. The Guelph squad is promised stiffer opposition today.

With a week's rest, Western's crippled players have recuperated, and by their single countenances of their supporters, a glow of satisfaction, and by their single countenances of their supporters, a glow of satisfaction, and by their single countenances of their supporters, a glow of satisfaction.

That from the time the whistle blows in today's game, Guelph will have to fight every inch to stave off defeat. A win for Western means a play-off with Guelph, the winner to meet St. Michael's in the group championship.

In addition, today's game will, it is believed, convince the friends of the school that Coach Pickley's team is capable of winning further. PITTSBURG PROS SIGN U. S. OLYMPIC'S STAR

Herbert Drury Latest Member of Yellow Jackets To Make Jump.

Robbed of Cash

Associated Press Despatch. Pittsburgh, Oct. 23.—Herbert Drury, former member of the United States Olympic hockey team, and last year one of the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets, is the fifth member of the latter organization to join the Pittsburgh professional club, signed with the local pro squad in preference to the New York City organization, handled by Tommy Gorman for Tex Rickard. The metropolitan organization had made an alluring offer to the skating star, but he preferred to remain in Pittsburgh.

The new member of the Pittsburgh professionals boasts of having twice been a member of the Olympic hockey team, playing in Belgium in 1920 and in France in 1924. Against Canada in the Olympic final last year, he was the only member of the United States team to score, the Canadians winning 6 to 1.

For line men, Western has to choose from, Comfort, Calder, Russell, Jordan, Mortin, Turville, Osborn and White, while the quarter back selection will be made from Conkle and Kennedy. Maxwell and Mowrey will figure on the secondary defense, while Savage, Kilmer and Scott will comprise the end positions. It is expected that Dutch Simpson and Captain Fred Warren will be the defending right and left halves and do the greater part of the kicking. Given fair weather, a bumper crowd is assured. The new bus company operating in the city will carry the crowds to the university oval. The game will commence at 2:45, and undoubtedly will produce, should the grounds be in fair condition, the best exhibition of rugby the intercollegiate series has given in many years.

For line men, Western has to choose from, Comfort, Calder, Russell, Jordan, Mortin, Turville, Osborn and White, while the quarter back selection will be made from Conkle and Kennedy. Maxwell and Mowrey will figure on the secondary defense, while Savage, Kilmer and Scott will comprise the end positions. It is expected that Dutch Simpson and Captain Fred Warren will be the defending right and left halves and do the greater part of the kicking. Given fair weather, a bumper crowd is assured. The new bus company operating in the city will carry the crowds to the university oval. The game will commence at 2:45, and undoubtedly will produce, should the grounds be in fair condition, the best exhibition of rugby the intercollegiate series has given in many years.

BANK CASE TO GO TO PRIVY COUNCIL

Individual Shareholders To Give Defence Against Double-Liability Claim.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Oct. 23.—Charles Garrow, K.C., master of the supreme court, has reserved judgment on the liquidators' claim for payment of double liability by the shareholders of the Home Bank, so far as the special defences to the action are concerned, these having been grouped together in one hearing. These special defences included the allegation that the Home Bank was never legally a bank, and that it trafficked in its own shares. The hearing of individual defences to the claim are due to take place now.

JURY UNCERTAIN IN CARR'S DEATH

Circumstances Pointing To Possibility of Murder or Suicide Causes Open Verdict.

WAS FOUND IN RIVER

Special to The Advertiser.
Woodstock, Oct. 23.—Circumstances pointing to possibilities of murder or suicide caused the jury inquiring into the death of Thos. H. Carr of Paris, to bring in an open verdict at Drumbo this afternoon. Carr's body was found in the Nith river two weeks ago. The inquest was adjourned until today to enable Detective-Inspector Stringer, of Toronto, to investigate the case, but his investigations resulted in no discovery of anyone in the vicinity of Richmond having seen the dead man. Medical testimony based on a post-mortem examination was to the effect that the doctors were unable to say whether Carr had died by drowning or not. Evidence of acquaintances of the dead man in Paris tended to show that he had been in a depressed state of mind prior to his disappearance on Sept. 30, but the dead man's brothers firmly denied that the deceased was the type of man who would commit suicide.

The verdict of the jury was worded in part: "That we are unable to positively determine the cause of medical evidence adduced today showed, but fluid was present in the pleural cavities that might or might not have percolated from the lungs. No evidence of poison was found in the stomach which had been sent to Toronto for analysis, and abrasions on the throat were not sufficient to warrant a suspicion of violence."

LONDON MUST FACE THE FACTS

FRANK WHITE

In 1921

Frank White warned that acceptance of the Liberal policy would close factories and send Canadians to the United States. The past four years have demonstrated his grasp of the situation.

In 1925

Frank White again stands four-square for the National Policy, which means adequate protection for London industries, employment for London citizens in London—the only solution of Canada's great problems.

LIBERAL EXPERIMENTS COSTLY

The condition of depression which existed in 1921 was not confined to Canada alone—it was world-wide caused as everyone knows by a surplus of production due to inflation and artificial stimulation of war years. The depression was even more serious in Great Britain, France, the United States and Germany than in Canada, but OTHER COUNTRIES FOUND A REMEDY. WHY NOT CANADA?

THE UNITED STATES, FRANCE AND GERMANY AND SOME EIGHTY OTHER COUNTRIES REALIZED THAT THE ONLY REMEDY LAY IN A HIGHER TARIFF FOR THE PROTECTION OF THEIR HOME MARKETS AND TODAY THEY ARE PROSPERING. THE TRUTH OF THIS IS BROUGHT FORCIBLY HOME TO CANADA IN THE CASE OF THE UNITED STATES, WHOSE PROSPERITY, COMBINED WITH CLOSED FACTORIES IN CANADA, HAS TAKEN THOUSANDS OF THE HIGHEST TYPE OF CANADIAN CITIZENRY ACROSS THE BORDER.

London like all other industrial centers in Canada has suffered. There has been much unemployment here and there is unemployment at the present time. MR. KING HAS DONE SOMETHING. HIS PERSISTENT REFUSAL TO HEED THE TREND OF THE TIMES HAS RESULTED IN DRIVING MORE THAN HALF A MILLION CANADIANS OUT OF THIS COUNTRY—OF COURSE THAT RELIEVES UNEMPLOYMENT HERE, BUT AT WHAT A COST TO THE COUNTRY!

A VOTE FOR FRANK WHITE AND A CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENT IS A VOTE FOR THE INTRODUCTION OF A CANADA FIRST POLICY UNDER WHICH CANADA'S RAW MATERIALS WILL BE MANUFACTURED AT HOME BY CANADIAN WORKMEN—instead of hauling raw material to American mills to be manufactured. FRANK WHITE STANDS FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF OUR RAILWAYS, INDUSTRIES AND A PROSPEROUS CITY WITH 100 PER CENT EMPLOYMENT.

SPINDRIFT

An Adventure of the Great Lakes

By HAROLD TITUS

By the time October waned John Goodheart had settled into a state of numb suffering.

He had spoken rightly when he told Janet Needham that her love, her trust, the necessity of conserving for her the happiness she had foreseen with him had complicated his problem.

Fate would be too cruel to ordain that she should give her heart to a man who, at any hour, might be taken from her by the law, might be taken from his work on the open lake, stripped of his fisherman's clothing, placed in the dark blue of convict garb, and herded with outcasts behind bars!

And yet, as time went on, he began to feel that perhaps that too-cruel fate was to be Janet's lot in life. He knew that her love was no fancy, her fidelity no inconstant thing, and the more he tried the farther he seemed to wander from that which he sought.

Again and again he went over those scenes: his arrival in Marquette harbor on the bridge of the Norseman, his peaceful dreams as he dozed on deck. And then those other things: the sound which had roused him, his race aft, his lurch into the cabin. The gold head of a cane which still seemed, as he relived the episode, to be exploding at his feet; the expression on Thorner's face as he pitched across the table; and then that other, that hazy countenance that half in silhouette, half in shaded light, all indistinct, as an object seen through spindrift. Then the explosion in his brain and blackness.

Again and again he tried to see that face distinctly. He had an eerie feeling that about it was something familiar, and when he remembered what the physician had said at his trial, that identification of that face might bring back those few but immeasurably important happenings which were blotted from his memory, he grew desperate with his helplessness.

A little intangible thing like a lost memory was holding him in this unendurable suspense! A brief chain of memories side-tracked somewhere which could not be shunted out to the main lines of his consciousness! A little, intangible thing like a lost memory was stripping him of his happiness, was dragging Janet Needham into that vortex of suffering with him!

And the annoying detail: He found comfort no longer in the rise and fall of a deck beneath him; he saw no beauty in storms, welcomed no more combat with the lake. He could not even play with Sam Faxson's boys as he used to play with the children. He could not talk with the men who might have been his friends, and for years, it seemed, he had not laughed.

He had not laughed! That hurt terribly. In that other existence he had loved life; he had loved his companions as men can love men. He had been capable of banter, of play, or relaxation, as he had been capable of handling a ship. But now, with a mind that had betrayed him and let life and the opportunities to enjoy life slip through his fingers.

There was no one to talk to. That was a tremendous handicap. He could not go to Janet with his problem because she must never know—until the puzzle was solved. He could not go to Capt. Needham because, despite the old man's kindness, he was human and the trouble into which John had dragged Janet all unwittingly brought a natural measure of resentment to his heart. He could not hunt down his attorney, the physician who had testified for him, any of his old friends or associates, because he was a fugitive from what men believed was justice!

Janet had faithfully heeded his wish. She kept away from him, did not seek him out. But she was waiting, trying to be patient. He knew that from the brief and unavoidable encounters he had with her.

The first came the day after she had found him bound helpless on the beach and her eyes had queried plaintively for word of what had followed. He could not bring himself to deny her that much and said: "Haines. And he'll bother me no more."

They passed on the road with the briefest of greetings, but their eyes said much to each other, the girl's pleading to be allowed to help, the man's denying that firmly.

Once, entering the village store, John met Janet on the threshold. "I'm waiting," she murmured. "I'm waiting and praying and—loving." "Bless you!" he muttered. "And I'm fighting, Janet—fighting!" She started to move away and then turned back.

"John," she asked slowly, "John, can't I help?" "You do," he said, tensely. "You do, by just being!" and he looked into the store fighting off the impulse that was high in him to go with her, to take her in his arms, to tell her the whole sorry story and make her hold him close while he went feverishly over again and again that scene in the cabin of the Norseman. Oh, he was desperate in his loneliness.

Goodheart paid no attention to Val Haines. The man had caused him some trouble, a minor trouble, but when he lifted him from his feet and flung him into the water that September night he had dismissed him from his consideration.

Men understand men. Goodheart was sure of himself the instant he made certain that Haines had nothing but a lie on which to base the animosity which he sought to stir against him among the fishermen. He had nothing to fear except that. And, knowing as much of Val Haines as he did, he was confident that the man had not the strength of heart to further his persecution.

Yes, in so far as he knew, he had nothing to fear from his enemy, but he did not know of that poster which the other now carried in oiled silk over his heart.

Not knowing that, he gave no heed to the change in Haines. He did not observe the different manner about the man when they met, a steady scrutiny, a new assurance, a fearlessness, and a suggestion of waiting for some opportune moment to present itself.

Others saw this and it puzzled them. Haines strutted a bit. He was easier on his men. He was not worried, for the fears that rode with those memories in his heart were stilled. He held John Goodheart in the hollow of his hand and his fingers itched to shut down and strangle hope in the man.

But Haines could afford to wait now. He was playing a bigger game than mere vengeance. He wanted more than to see Carl Garrison, who masqueraded as John Goodheart, back behind bars. He felt that complete triumph, the attaining of both ends, was just beyond, and so he curbed his impatience and waited.

He watched Janet Needham closely but did not go to her house again. The girl recognized him only with curt nods, a fact which would have darkened the heart of most lovers, but he saw her face when she passed Goodheart and he knew human impulses, did Haines!

It was early November, in the closed season, the nets out of the water and the crews busied at shore work until the trout should spawn and the estate again permit their taking. Haines, working about his net house, watched the children come noisily from school, and when the last had had time to leave he quit his work and sauntered up the road toward the building.

Janet, who was busy at her desk and alone in the room, looked up quickly as his rubber boots scuffed the threshold, and a look of displeasure whipped across her face.

"Hello, Janet," he said, easily, and came down the aisle between the desks.

"Good afternoon, Val."

There was a coolness in the tone that should have stopped his advance, that surely would have checked him but for the warmth of that packet over his heart. He came on and, removing his cap, slouched down on the recitation bench before her, crossing his booted knees.

"Nice afternoon," he observed, and looked through the window with a smile quirked at his lips.

"I'm busy," she said. "And besides—"

He shrugged and looked at her with the smile grown to full life. "You don't have to finish it," he interrupted. "I know you don't want to have me here. But I thought I'd drop in anyhow. It's been a long time since we've talked."

"But I haven't time to talk; and if I had I wouldn't want to talk with you."

He adjusted his cap with care over his bent knee and laughed soundlessly, not looking at her.

"Yes, I know that. I've thought, maybe, you might be glad to know that I've changed a little."

"Changed?"

Yes. There was a time when I was so wild about you that I couldn't wait. That time is past. She put down her pencil and her expression became puzzled. "I'm a little wilder than ever now, but I've changed my tactics. It seems the best way."

The girl's mouth shut tightly.

"Val, there's no—"

He held up a hand.

"Wait a minute! Wait a min-ute! There's no use in talking if you don't like to talk to me. I'll say all that's necessary to say. Maybe I can interest you."

That easy assurance touched her curiosity and Janet made no attempt to break in or dismiss him then.

"I know that far pastures always look the greenest. There was a time when you seemed to think quite a lot of me. You've admitted that. Then I sort of—well, maybe I got stale to you. Another man came along, this fellow Goodheart, and though you wouldn't admit it to me, you fell up to your ears in love with him."

"Looks like you've got enough now. I've kept still, but I've listened and I've used my eyes. Things aren't as they were between you two, and that's a lucky thing—for you. You've been pretty well cut up over it. Anybody with half an eye could tell that."

"Well, I'm just here to tell you that you needn't feel so bad. You should be thanking your stars that it didn't go any farther instead of wasting regret on it. You've had your fling. Everybody has to have a fling of one sort or another. Some folks take it out in running wild, others take it out in being careless with their affections."

"I dropped in to say that and to say something else: That I haven't changed, Janet. I'm just as I was. I'm sorry I lost my head that night, but I've made up my mind that you're a girl with good sense and that the best thing to do is to let you get your eyes open yourself. When you do, I'll be waiting. Men like Goodheart come and go; there are others, a few of us, who stay on for good."

The light in his eye touched the girl's curiosity. There was something hard and brutal about it, despite his easy smile; a great deal of a new sort of assurance was in his manner, too, and she felt that he was merely skirting the edge of a matter of profound importance and of which he was very certain. His deliberation plagued her.

"Why I Should Vote Conservative"

CHILD LABOR

is a smear of blood and tears across the face of civilization

Goods made by child labor in foreign countries freely enter the Canadian market under our low tariff policy. We prohibit the products of convict labor—Why not those of child labor too?

Clean, up-standing Canadian workers — heads of families where the children go to school—need decent living wages, and should not be asked to compete with the starvation pay of child labor in foreign countries.

Keep out the products of foreign child labor and foreign sweat-shop labor. Give our adult Canadian workers jobs that will support Canadian standards of living.

"Is that all?" she asked, sharply.

"Yes," he said. "That's all except one thing: I've made some pretty broad hints. Now I'd like to have you check up on me. Have you ever asked this fellow where he came from?"

"That doesn't matter—"

"It's none of your affair."

"Good enough. You haven't."

ward put one hand on the desk, lowering his voice to a whisper.

"Ask him some time. Ask him where he came from. Ask him where he got his name, Goodheart! Ask him those things and think over what he says!"

The insinuation in his manner stung her and she rose to her feet.

"It's no matter where he came from: no matter about his name!"

"Why not?"—very evenly.

Nothing matters except that I—"

She broke short.

"Except that you what?" he taunted.

At her declaration of love for Goodheart. Tell him I told you to

John a dark sweep of rage crossed his face, but he drove that back.

Through her tears Janet saw that he was smiling tauntingly, cruelly.

"Till go," he said, and laughed. "Till go this time without making you call somebody to drive me away. But let me ask you this: D'you think he'd come again if you called him lover where he got the name of to put me out?"

He swaggered up the aisle toward the doorway. In the idle entry he paused and looked back.

"Sometimes the cure hurts, but it's better to be hurt by the cure than by the disease. I want you; I'm waiting for you."

down, cold and frightened.

What did he know of John Goodheart? Certainly he knew something of great importance, else why that unmistakable assurance? And she knew that in John's past was something that clouded his happiness, that restricted his freedom of action.

Was that secret which he would not share with her in Val Haines' possession? She pondered at thought of it.

Have Faith in Canada

Under Mackenzie King Canada has Emerged From the Dark Days of 1921 Into the Light of Prosperity

Face the Facts and Figures Truth is Stronger Than Fiction

LIKE a great ship that carries on bravely through the gale, swept and pounded by mountainous billows and hindered by shrieking winds, Canada has breasted the rough seas of after-War depression and safely weathered the storm.

No one expected there would not be some business failures, some agricultural hardships, some unemployment, some hard times during the depression period.

Undisputed evidence of Canada's inherent strength is that such a young country has done so well, has emerged so triumphantly and in such sound condition.

Canada's Dollar Now At a Premium. Where Was It In 1921?

Proof of Canada's triumph over adverse conditions is shown by the fact that she is able and strong financially and that, in recent months, the Canadian dollar has stood at a premium, compared with the proud American dollar. Here are the figures for the last five years:—

Canadian Money	American Money
1920.....$1.00 equalled only $.79
1921.....1.00 equalled only .89
1922.....1.00 equalled only .98½
1923.....1.00 equalled only .98
1924.....1.00 equalled only .99
1925.....1.00 equalled 1.00

Canadian money has steadily increased in purchasing power, compared to American money, in the last five years and, during the present year, it has stood at par and sometimes even at a slight premium, the Canadian dollar being quoted at a fraction more than the American.

Compare this with the low point in November, 1920, when it took $1.21 to equal the American dollar.

Canada's 1934 [5½%] Bonds Now at $104.00— Where Were They in 1921?

Canada is now receiving greatly improved terms when she enters the money market of the world to float her Loans. Her 5½% Bonds, payable in 1934, were bringing only $90.00 in 1921. These Bonds are eagerly sought now at $104.00.

"In October, 1920, Canada floated a Twenty-Year Loan for $25,000,000.00. The issue sold for $96.20, with interest at 7%.

"In December of the same year, another Loan of a similar amount was floated at $94.05, with interest at 7%.

"In February of last year, Canada floated a Thirty-Year Loan for $50,000,000.00. The issue sold for $97.81, with interest at 5%.

These are the interest charges we are, at present, paying, namely, five per cent. (5%). This is proof that the financial world has regained confidence in the soundness of Canada and in her people, when the five per cent. of to-day is compared with the seven per cent. of five years ago, while the price of our Securities in the world market has gone up. Is this blue ruin?

No Time for Blue Ruin Talk

This is no time for blue ruin talk, for gloomy pessimism, for lack of faith or courage. Canada did not talk that way during the critical days of the War. It is to the everlasting credit of Canadians that they did not lose heart, courage or faith. Canada faced the enemy and the world with confidence.

Should she falter, now that we have a War Debt to carry and somewhat heavier taxes to pay?

Are they harder to meet than were the powerful Central Powers that Canada so heroically helped to defeat?

Every true, red-blooded Canadian knows they are not. He knows that Canada can and will overcome all obstacles in her path and march forward to her glorious destiny.

Keep Up Your Faith Do Not Push Your Country Back

We are now nearly at the end of the financial struggle. Faith and courage won the War. Faith and courage will win through the difficulties that have followed the War and which are now clearing away. Let us be as optimistic as before and take stock of our blessings.

As Honourable Mr. Lapointe remarked, in the House of Commons:—

"Play the game. Do not push your country back. Keep cheerful or, at least, keep still!"

There are many reasons why we should be cheerful.

C.N.R. Operating Surplus of $17,000,000.00

"Take the situation with regard to operating results," said Mr. King. "For the calendar year of 1920, the operating results showed a deficit of $32,000,000.00. The next year, there was a deficit of $11,000,000.00; while, in 1922, the operations showed, for the first time, a surplus of $4,000,000.00. In 1923, the surplus had reached $21,000,000.00, while, in 1924, it was $17,000,000.00. Let us take, now, the total deficits after fixed charges have been paid on the Railways. During the calendar year of 1920, they amounted to $74,000,000.00; in 1921, they amounted to $72,000,000.00 odd. In 1922, the total was $58,000,000.00; in 1923, $52,000,000.00; and, in 1924, it was $54,000,000.00. In other words, these deficits were brought from the seventies down into the fifties."

Expenditure Cut, Public Debt Reduced

Public disbursements have receded by a big drop each year since the Mackenzie King Government took office.

The disbursements for 1925 show a reduction, as compared with 1924, of $19,000,000.00, and recent previous years show a similar progressive decline, the expenditure of 1925, as compared, for example, with 1922, showing a reduction of $112,000,000.00.

Public Expenditure Per Individual Citizen

Total disbursements on a per capita basis show a steady decline, as follows:—

	Per Head
1922.....	$51.85
1923.....	47.86
1924.....	40.16
1925.....	37.53

Canada is spending less and she owes less. She is practising economy, rather than merely preaching it. Where she was spending $4.00, in 1922, she is spending only $3.00 now. That surely is cheerful news. It is convincing proof that Canada is practising economy.

Income Taxes Reduced For Family Men

Another cheerful fact, especially for the married man with children, is the increased exemption in the Income Tax that Canada is now able to allow.

INCOME TAX EXEMPTION PER CHILD

1921.....	$200.00
1925.....	$500.00

This change has given the families of Canada $2,000,000.00 more annually to spend on food, clothing and shelter. The man with $3,500.00 income and the average family of three children, who paid an Income Tax of $36.00 in 1921, is now exempt entirely.

Cost of Living Has Been Brought Down

It was clearly established by the Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, in his Budget Speech, that the cost of living has been reduced by decreased duties on implements of production and the Sales Tax thereon, which have the effect of cheapening materially the cost of production in the basic industries. Changes made in the tariff in the two preceding years on many articles of daily consumption, food, clothing and the like, affected the homes of countless numbers.

Canada now gives a ten per cent. discount upon preference rates, where goods come direct into the country via Canadian points; a two-fold advantage. It reduces the cost of goods and the cost of living and stimulates Canadian shipping, at the same time.

That the cost of living has been materially reduced, in the last few years, is clearly shown by figures from the Canadian Bureau of Statistics:—

	1913—INDEX FIGURE 100	Sept., 1921	Sept., 1924
Foods.....	161.1	140.1	140.1
Fuel and Lighting.....	189.0	175.9	175.9
Rent.....	144.6	146.7	146.7
Total Average.....	159.3	147.2	147.2

A calculation for Clothing places the Index for 1921 at 167 and, for 1924, at 155.

Canadians Are Less Taxed Than Americans

Not the least amazing of Canada's post-War achievements is her marvellous showing in Taxation. The following table was prepared by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and presented to the House of Commons by the Honourable Ernest Lapointe. Total Taxation for all purposes, including Federal, Provincial, Municipal and School, compare as follows:—

United States.....	68.49
United Kingdom.....	99.36
Australia.....	69.22
New Zealand.....	77.12
South Africa.....	75.92

Leading Canadian Stocks Show Canada's Strength

The Stock Market is regarded by business men as a reliable business barometer. When trade prospects are good and underlying financial conditions sound, the market price for leading bank and industrial stocks goes up. Here are the quotations for a number of well-known Canadian companies, showing the price of their stocks in the open market September 15th, 1921, and on the same date, 1925. Can there be any doubt of Canada's progress in the last four years, with figures like these before you?

Canada's Export Trade Growing Faster Than That of United States

Canada's trade is growing. The exports of the United States have increased over what they were in pre-War time by eighty-five per cent. (85%), while Canada's have increased 142 per cent.

Canada's aggregate foreign trade ranks in sixth place among all the commercial countries of the world. With exports of $114.67 per capita and imports of $109.61, her total foreign trade on a per-capita basis stood, in 1924, at $224.28, which, compared with $72.08 for the United States and $194.00 for the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. In volume of exports, Canada stands sixth, as compared to tenth as she stood in 1913, before the War, having increased her exports, in that interval, faster than any other country in the world, except South Africa. Her exports per head of population occupy second place.

What possible evidence could be more conclusive of Canada's increasing prosperity than is shown by steadily-mounting trade balance of exports, compared to imports.

Balance of Canada's Trade— Exports vs. Imports

March 31st
1921—$ 29,000,000.00 against us, 1922— 6,000,000.00 in our favour,
1923— 142,000,000.00 in our favour,
1924— 165,000,000.00 in our favour,
1925— 284,000,000.00 in our favour.

Equally conclusive and gratifying is the showing of our export trade with the United States, which has steadily grown during the last five years, while the unfavourable balance of our American trade is declining.

Improving Balance of Trade With the United States

The figures below show a steady decrease in the excess of our imports from the United States over our exports to that country:—

1921.....	$313,853,853
1922.....	223,369,553
1923.....	171,909,520
1924.....	170,548,903
1925.....	92,546,085

Canada's Foreign Trade Records Phenomenal Growth

In 1913, Canada's total foreign trade, including imports and exports combined, for the first time in her history, exceeded one billion dollars. In the year ended July last, it was $1,923,000,000.00. For the fiscal year ending 31st March, 1924, her trade with the United States alone amounted to $1,042,000,000.00—more than the total trade of Canada twelve years before.

In ten years from now, it has been estimated that the population of the United States will have grown to such an extent that she will no longer be an exporter of farm products in competition with Canada, but will have to import more from Canada to feed her people.

Canada is a young country, whose broad expanse and vast material resources provide opportunities for millions of more people and billions of capital.

Canada has the best lands in the world for wheat growing and unrivalled opportunities for mixed farming.

Her mineral, timber, water powers, fishing and other resources are of marvellous richness.

Canada is a good country in which to live. Her people are steady, industrious and law-abiding. Good neighbors, good friends and thrifty. Canada's savings per head of population rank among the highest in the world and her wealth is well diffused among her people. Life insurance in Canada, for example, in Canadian companies, has increased from $2,935,000,000.00 in 1921 to $3,764,000,000.00 in 1924 or, by the huge volume of $829,000,000.00 in three years! Canadians, per capita, stand among the very best insured people in the world.

A Country to Be Proud of

A Canadian should be glad to live in Canada, proud that he is a Canadian, proud of his birthright.

He should have faith in Canada and prove his faith by proclaiming the favoured position of Canada, by facing the future with cheerful courage and with the determination to succeed in whatever work in which he is engaged.

There is only one direction in which Canada is destined to go. That is AHEAD. Will you hold her back or help her along?

For Three Quarters of a Century It Has Flourished in Rural Ontario—The Amazing Bar Room Window Display—Home-Cooking Display Guarded By Chicken Wire—Races That Made Duffer's Park Look Sick

By FRANK MANN HARRIS ("Sixbit")

WHEN London holds its big annual show it is satisfied to call it merely "The Western Fair"; and there are even critics snooty enough to object to the word "National," on the ground that it takes in too much territory. Buffalo was content with 1 hemisphere and christened its exhibition "The Pan-American." The Wembley affair struggled along pretty good for a couple of years under the title "The British Empire." But when Birdseye Centre—population 125 last census—throws its annual fall fair, which it has been doing for the past ¾ century, it don't stop at anything so puny as national, imperial or hemispheric boundaries. Not so. Letting go all bolts it proudly rears its banner to the breeze and advertises "The Birdseye Centre WORLD'S Fair."

And if you don't believe me, which I don't blame you much, I got the documents to prove it. Amongst other souvenirs of my visit last week I proudly cherish a nice red "First Prize" card—it had fell off a coopfull of Buff Orpingtons and found its way into my pocket in some mysterious manner—and on that card, in boxcar letters, it stands plain and bold, "World's Fair Birdseye Centre." And if that isn't enough there is on the same card a map of the world, too. So try and laugh that off, genteel—and suspicious—reader.

Right here I ask the referee for a couple minutes time out to explain that this which follows is a strictly veracious narrative. What I attempt, in my feeble way, to describe, I really saw with my own 2 eyes. What Mr. Frise depicts with his agile pencil, he actually witnessed. Everybody knows what writers and artists are morally, so our bare word should ought to be sufficient; but in addition each of us is ready and willing to back each other up in everything we write or draw, which will prove that our teamwork is excellent anyways. The only thing we have changed is the name of the place. We call it "Birdseye Centre" for various good reasons, 1 being that rural folks have long memories, and when we go back to this World's Fair—next year we hope and pray—they might remember what we said about them. Remember—and revenge theirself. The landlady of the "Grand Central," for instance, might cut us off after only our 3rd helping of pie. Which would be a pity.

Intriguing Odor of Fried Potatoes

PASSING rapidly over our morning drive through the autumn sunshine in the artist's palatial car—1 of the earliest and soundest vintage from a well-known maker, by the way—and mentioning only that I envied the journey with so many refinery and elevating anecdotes that my companion was forced to admit he hadn't enjoyed any funeral so much in years, we arrive at the moment when we made our entrance upon the scene of the festa, if you will pardon a dash of Russian. At 1st sight it appeared no different from any of the dozens of cross-road hamlets you pass about every 20 minutes on your road from here to wherever you're going. A tavern; a garage—nee blacksmith shop; a gen. store and postoffice combined; a church; a school; a townhall with de-funct Fritz machine-gun in front. That's all there is; but if you conclude that there isn't any more, Ethel Barrymore, you are making more errors than what old Peck did in the recent World's Series.

With the old "Rolls-Sometimes" safely parked in the stable-yard of "The Grand Central Hotel"

we stood for a moment or 2 on the front stoop of that hostelry. "What do we do 1st," says my accomplice, "take a look around—or eat?" Just then the front door opened and like sweet music on the breeze there floats out the intriguing odor of home-fried potatoes. Properly abashed for his tactless question, the artist hung his head and led the way indoors.

Inside, we turned in the wrong direction and found ourselves in what was once, I suspect, the bar. Only a bar in the bad old days of yore, but now—how much more. More like a drugstore now, if a drugstore is a place where they sell everything in the world except drugs. This bar had a window-display, no less; and I defy the whole of Yippy 2, to show a similar 1. This window display consisted of a bunch of bananas and a new flivver-tire; underneath the bananas were 3 drums lubricating oil, light, medium and heavy. Possibly the place where that humorist got the inspiration to call his column "Banana Oil." Other forms of liquid refreshment on tap in addition to the oil—4.4, pop, and similar palatable, harmless and refreshing beverages the same to you Mister Nickle and many of them. Candy-bars, ice cream cones and chewing gum on sale, too, for roisterers determined on having a real wild party.

Pay-As-You-Enter Eating

PASSING unscathed through all these temptations we came to the door of the dining room, only to find our way barred by a damsel demanding that we kick in with 65c apiece before putting on the feed bag. Pay-as-you-enter eating was sort of new to us and we shrewdly suspected that the charge is 15c more than the regular tax of half-a-buck. But other places besides Birdseye have been known to raise the ante when there is a rush of trade; and if they demand to see our money before turning us loose on the victuals—well, we can do our puny best to make sure they don't make too enormous profits on our custom. And, leave me tell you, we done so. If the management of that tavern showed any great margin of profit on the meal I watched my accomplice consume, then they are marvels of efficiency. As for myself—oh, I managed to peck around a bit. The artist said he was ashamed of me before I was ½ through, and it's no light feat to shame 1 of those birds I hope to inform you.

Anyways, it was the hotel folks' own fault. They had no business taking 2 unsuspecting cafeteria hounds and, without no preliminary warning, setting them down in plain sight of $400.00 worth—city prices—of food, and saying, in effect: "There it is; so go to it and let your conscience, if any, be your guide." Stronger natures than ours, even, would of cracked under the strain. Speaking personal I will say that I haven't saw a similar layout of eatables since the last time I attended a combination chicken-supper-and-tea-meeting back in Wellington County last century. And Mr. Frise observed that all he needed was his sox full of barley-beards and his hair full of chaff to imagine he was setting down to a threshing-dinner on the dear old farm.

Four kinds of cake there was, not counting such trifles as drop-cakes and cookies; five varieties of pickles, that is if you call coleslaw a pickle and not a regrettable error; butter—nice golden-yellow dairy butter—strewn carelessly every 2 feet of the table in ½ pound chunks; meat, potatoes and tea the waitress brought you, but for the rest you just had to reach. Nor did you have to reach far, because your plate was hemmed in by victuals on every side. Our chief regret was that we hadn't known what was coming so that we could of fasted a few days by way of training. Still, we didn't do so terrible bad. A subtle touch we noticed was that the old metal cocktail-shaker had been converted into a celery-container. Talk about beating your swords into plowshares!

The World's Fair was Calling

BUT sooner or later—in this case later—all good things come to an end, even an appetite. Sadly surveying all the good things we were leaving behind, and mourning the fact that we hadn't fetched a sack or something along, we arose from the vestal board, if that word vestal isn't right I hope the proofreader fixes it. We would of admired to stay longer, but into our ears there crept the faint melody of a trombone soloing that swell selection about "the Miseries of Al Trovatore." The World's Fair was calling; and although walking, or any form of physical exercise, right then was a bigger misery than anything Al Trovatore ever suffered, we must be on our way. Our loving employer had sent us to see the fair and duty must be did; besides if we lingered any longer we might be tempted to try just 1 more cut of pie. Which would of been a mistake.

It wasn't far to walk, praise be. Just a block or 2 down the road—that is if there had been any blocks—there was a little ticket-booth. Beside that booth was a gate that looked like the entrance to a farm-lane. You turned through that gate and—well, there you were. Other exhibitions go in for long approaches and gorgeous gateways; but at Birdseye you step right into the middle of the throng.

And when I say "a throng" I mean just plain that. When I tell you that the grounds were crowded I am not indulging in any poetic licentiousness. My worthy colleague estimated the attendance at five thousand; my own guess was something around three; but neither of us is any Einstein when it comes to handling figures over 10 or a dozen, so we may both of been all wet. But there were plenty people anyways. If there was any fall plowing being done that afternoon for 10 miles in any direction, then I am more mistaken than customary.

And such carefree and merry people, too, especially when you consider what a perilous time this is. In spite of posters placarded on every fence in the neighborhood advising the voters to (1) Defeat King and Save the Country or (2) Elect King and Save the Country, those Birdseye Centre merry-makers didn't seem to even realize that the country needed saving. The way they went about their holidaying you would imagine that the country is capable of tottering along another couple of years or 2, no matter who is in the pilot-house in Ottawa. Kings may come and Meighens may go; but when fair-day rolls round Birdseye Centre puts on its best suit and goes out to have a good time. Further and more they have it.

Like a Musical Medley

ANY other Fair I ever been to it would be possible to start at 1 spot and gradually work your way around, visiting each attraction in turn. But not at the World's Fair. Space is at a premium on the grounds and things have to be sort of jumbled up like a musical medley or hash. The hot-dog vendor must wield his fork with discretion or else he is apt to stop a wheel-of-fortune in mid-whirl. If your aim is too high in trying to sock the nigger on the head for cigars, you are apt as not to bean 1 of the brass bandmen and make him blow a rancid note. The prize jar of plum preserves rests on the very edge of the prize water-color painting. And so on. So if these impressions of mine strike you as a bit tangled you will know that it is the fault of crowded exhibits rather than a disorderly mind. At least I hope you will think so.

There were only 2 buildings for exhibits—a smaller devoted to poultry on the hoof, and where we saw geese so big that just 1 would make a Christmas dinner for a whole orphan asylum with enough goose-grease left over to pull 'em through a epidemic of whooping cough. And the main building—the capacity of a fair-size barn—containing everything else you could mention all the way from Art to Vegetables.

What Vegetables they were, too. We saw mangels that looked like 5.9 shells and probably felt to weigh the same after you had been heaving them up onto a wagon for half a day or so. Carrots that only needed to have their small ends shaped a bit to make swell Indian clubs. Potatoes smooth and pretty enough to use for ornaments on the marble-topped table in the front room, and big enough to throw at a hockey referee. Corn cobs of such a size that just to chew your way along 1 once would be a fair chore for the average eater. Crops must of been good out Birdseye way if the samples they sent to the Fair is any evidence.

And then there was Art of all kinds and Fancywork of every description and some you couldn't describe. Being firm believers in the principles of Division of Labor and Every Man to his Own Trade, it was decided that my confrere (read that 1 and weep) should attend to the Art while I examined the Fancywork. 2 minutes later we found ourselves side by side peering through the chicken-wire screen which guarded the display of Home Cooking. Far as we were concerned they didn't need any screen: that Grand Central dinner was still too adjacent for us to take any more than a platonic interest in any cooking. Still and all it was very majestic and soothing to look at, even if it didn't tempt you for the time being. We were much cheered and uplifted to discover that there is still left a place on earth where the housewives haven't forgot the craft of making 2-handed layer-cake. A 2-handed layer cake, I might explain, is 1 that has so many layers that when your hostess presents you off a hunk, you have to use both your hands to lift it.

The Gambling was Terrific

BUT enough of indoor sports and amusements. Outside was where the real doings were. Birdseye Centre folks can, we imagine, feast their eyes on good cooking and good vegetables any day in the week; but it isn't every day they get a chance to toss their hard-earned jack in a joust with Fortune by means of a Wheel of Fortune or Housey-Housey game. The gambling, I regret to report, was terrific. No less than 3 Wheels of Fortune were in full blast; the prizes at all of them blankets worth—so the proprietors said and surely they wouldn't lie—fifteen berries a copy. And to see those Birdseye folks bucking the wheel at a dime per buck was to get a faint idea of what Monte Carlo must be like. If anybody won a blanket they done it while we weren't looking, so I guess the old percentage must of been working against the customers.

And the Housey-Housey games were just as popular. Aluminum cooking utensils were the prizes at these games; at least we thought they were till Mr. F. after squandering no less than 30c cash, which I hope if he tries to ring it in on his expense sheet the auditor nicks him—after spending 30c, I say, managed to get five in a row before anybody else did. Then we discovered that the aluminum was only given when a full game was running, so my friend dragged down only a box of lollipops. Probably it was just as well, at that; because if he had win a double-boiler he would of made me carry it on the ground that he needed his hands for sketching.

But we mustn't let our enthusiasm for the Monte Carlo end of the festival make us overlook its Woodbine aspect. Real horse races, would you believe it, and all for the same price of admission; and not even Thorncliffe or the Woodbine ever showed a sight which captivated my personal fancy more than the Birdseye Centre Judges' Stand—packed to overflowing with the Presiding Judge and as many of his friends as could jimmy their way in and looking like it might fall over on its side any moment. Later we discovered that our fears on these grounds were needless; we went round to the back of the judges' stand and found that its low side had been reinforced and underpinned—with a stick of cordwood.

The races themselves were a joy to all beholders. As is always the case in trotting matches the beagle with the least speed was always the 1 which wore the most toe-weights, ankle-boots and similar doodads. But they raced, nevertheless, 3 at a time and as fast as their old dogs would let them; and on that track it was considerable of a feat to run at all. Not so terrible rough, but more what you would call lumpy; put a ¼-mile track on 1 of the less smooth portions of P. . . . and you would about have a duplicate. When, after a heat, the Judge announced the time as 2.20, I says, "Gee, Jim, I would like to own that 1." "What," he responds, "the horse?" "No," I replies, "the stop-watch." Later on we learned that the 2.20 was for ¾ of a mile, which seemed a lot more reasonable.

The Solemn Milking Contest

IN the infield of the race-track they did the judging of the draft-and-work horses. I know nothing whatever about draft-horses and care less; so all I will say was that there were several of them looked like they could beat some of the noble Thoroughbreds I have wagered on this Autumn.

And in odd corners of the grounds you would come across the cattle section and the swine section and the sheep section, and right in the middle of all these animal sections was the Automobile Show. Nor was the latter playing to empty chairs by any means; a motor car dealer has a lot better chance doing business around Birdseye than what he would have around many a newspaper office, judging from what we saw on the roads and parking-spaces. The old buggy with the horse that could drive itself in the moonlight has, we take it, given way very largely to the gasoline chariot with the driver that can steer 1-handed.

I mustn't forget a word or 2 about the milking contest. Five solemn-faced lads milking away at five solemn-faced cows as if their lives depended on it; foaming pails of milk upon the ground; crowds standing in a circle watching; and judges passing slowly and not unimportantly from contestant to contestant. We watched it for quite a while and probably would of enjoyed it better if we could only have discovered whether the contest was for the Best Milker, Human, or the Best Milker, Bovine. We still don't know; but I've managed to quit worrying by now.

Nor can I pass over the sheep without a paragraph. If there is anything in the animal universe less interesting than a sheep, unless it is a rabbit, I don't know it. But little as I am in love with them I couldn't help being interested in the layout 1 exhibitor had for getting his exhibit to the fair. Owing a big limousine—not a lizzie, but 1 of the kind you hope to own some day when somebody dies and leaves you plenty—owning a big limousine, I say, he had combined business and pleasure and brought his pets by the same means that he brought himself. In the rear seat of the car were no less than 3 full grown sheep; on the running-board at the side was a crate containing a 4th; and in a small trailer hooked on behind were no less than 6 more. "There," I says to my associate, "there is what you might call a Self-Contained and Self-Sustaining Home on Wheels. With those sheep for companions a man might travel for a indefinite period, clothing himself with the wool and knocking off the odd lamb whenever he run short of meat."

"Sure he could," agrees Mr. Frise, "and what's more he could probably grow a little patch of mint on the top of the car and have mint-sau—." But I cut him off short realizing that the strain of so much revelry would lead him to tell on his mind and that pretty soon he would be as bad as his companion. So with many a fond backward glance, especially at some loaded apple-trees that looked ungarded but you can't never be sure, we rolled away from Birdseye Centre promising each other that next year we will, if permitted, go to the World's Fair again; and this time we will bring along our appetites.

The homeward journey was made not that anybody gives a hoot without untoward incident except that about halfway the old boiler developed a flat tire. It was pitch-dark by then; also it was raining steadily; and changing tires under those conditions is not no bed of roses as the poet puts it. In a farmhouse nearby a phonograph was playing; the selection it was grinding out was that classical piece about "The End of a Perfect Day." And—this is on the up-and-up—in spite of flat tire, damp darkness, and wet rain, both Mr. Frise and self felt that the selection was a singularly appropriate 1.

And if there are any higher words of praise than that for the kind of time the Birdseye Centre World's Fair showed us, I would admire to know what they are.

AN ARTFUL MINX

IN Lancashire long courtships are the rule rather than the exception, a custom which gave Mr. Keighley Snowden an opening for one of his best stories.

A couple had been courting for quite a long while. The young man, however, got "no forrader," and the girl began to get impatient. At length, one night, while out for a walk, greatly daring, he made bold to put his arm around her waist.

Finding she showed no displeasure, he ventured to remark after a while:

"Mary, my lass, do you think I'm making progress?"

"Aye, lad, you're holding your own," she replied.—Pearson's Weekly.

SIDELIGHTS ON PEOPLE NOW IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Don't Worry About the Sun—Napoleon
the Inventor of Billiards—
Salaries for Wives

Those of us who have been worried by the fact that the sun is some day due to run out of heat, light and power—and who are not, Arthur J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, belongs distinctly to the latter group. During the coal crisis he was easily the target of the most bitter attacks.

Scientists' predictions that in a few million years or more the great blazing ball in the heavens will be as dark as an Ethiopian in a coal-bin at dusk cause a universal feeling of uneasiness, and were it possible, many would not doubt take out insurance against such a catastrophe.

Mr. Nordmann, however, is very reassuring. He admits to begin with that our sun will no doubt play out after some millions of years have passed, and regretfully decides that there is very little we can do about it. His later revelations indicate that we won't need to evolve any system for lengthening its life.

After wading through a mass of highly involved and thoroughly technical matter, Mr. Nordmann's assertions seem to boil down to the theory that the energy which is constantly radiating in all directions will eventually bring about the rebuilding of another celestial body to replace the one that has worn away, and that, in the matter of suns, the world may pass eternally through the same phases and, like the phoenix, arise again and again from its ashes.

LIKE the crocuses in springtime, the first snowflakes in the fall and new hats at Easter, the question of paying the wives of the country regular salaries bobs into prominence periodically.

This time, the prominent talker who has resurrected it is W. A. Johnson, president of the laundry owners' national association.

Quoth Mr. Johnson: "Weekly payroll of the 22,000,000 wives and home managers would be $330,000,000 at $15 a week each. Wives would be paid $17,000,000,000 a year for their services if they were put on salary."

Setting the weekly stipend at $15, Mr. Johnson offers his total figures as a staggering sum. But, under the present system, the chances are that the sum the wives of the continent collect each week from the husbands whom and whose homes they manage, is easily twice as stupendous.

Now that Mr. Johnson has finished these calculations, he might figure what the gentlemen employed in every branch of every trade, profession and occupation would receive each week, were each man to be paid exactly what he thought himself to be worth.

If you want to present a set of figures that are truly staggering, Mr. Johnson, here's your chance.

OF late Napoleon has been slipping. He does not to-day stand out as heroically and majestically in the average mind as he formerly did. Even among lunatics it is no longer as fashionable to imagine yourself Napoleon as it once was.

Consequently friends of the well-known Corsican are doing their level best to boost his reputation in other ways. Paris guides are among the sincere admirers who are laboring in his behalf.

A few days ago, when a tourist was being shown over the late warrior's home in Malmaison, his curiosity was aroused by two white knobs which showed plainly in a painting of the first emperor as decorations on the imperial chair of state.

"Napoleon," said the cicerone with an ultra-ultra display of pomposity, "was not merely a great soldier and a great statesman. He was also a great inventor. Those round white knobs commemorate the fact that Napoleon invented billiards."

It is still too early to register a definite opinion on the matter, but it is certainly possible to give a verdict which is partially in their favor. Colleen Moore has shown that she for one should certainly not be listed as a flapper but as a movie star with a keen eye on her own publicity interests.

CHIROPRACTORS of the dominion and all other countries, principalities and incidental communities are now confronted with the opportunity of a couple of lifetimes.

The celebrated Sphinx of Giza, now believed to be between 5,000 and 6,000 years old, is having trouble with her—or his—back.

As a matter of fact, it's cracking.

Tex Rickard Chooses Youthful Canadian Who Used to Carry His Skates to Bed

Billy Burch Becomes Captain of the New York Hockey Team—A Player Who Determined to Make Himself
Level-Headed—And Did It

TEX RICKARD, as keen a gentleman as ever made sport a business instead of a pastime, has committed himself to the spending of large sums of money to popularize the Canadian game of hockey in the large metropolis of New York.

Mr. Rickard is rarely casual in the matter of spending large lumps of money. When he sends it out, he usually expects it to return again with plenty of interest.

It seems safe to assert, therefore, that Mr. Rickard expects hockey games to be highly popular and quite important affairs.

With this theory in mind, it is interesting to note that this same Mr. Rickard, his agents, legal representatives, servants or scouts have picked a young Canadian, of short professional experience and only 25 years old, to captain the ice heroes who are to dazzle the sophisticates of Gotham and bring them to their feet in cheering multitudes at stated dates this coming winter.

Billy Burch, last year playing with the Hamilton, Ontario, pro. team, is the young gentleman under discussion.

Naturally, he is a good hockey player. He commenced at the mature age of four and has continued, weather permitting, ever since. Had there been any eagle-eyed gentleman, interested in the game on hand, when Mr. Burch commenced his preliminary cantering about slippery surfaces 21 years ago, they might possibly have foreseen what has now taken place—to some extent at least.

For young Mr. Burch—or Billy as he was then called and still is for that matter—was not satisfied with the training hours allotted to him on the backyard rink by his mother. He skated vigorously from the back steps to the back fence and back again and performed various juvenile antics in between but was not content to leave it at that.

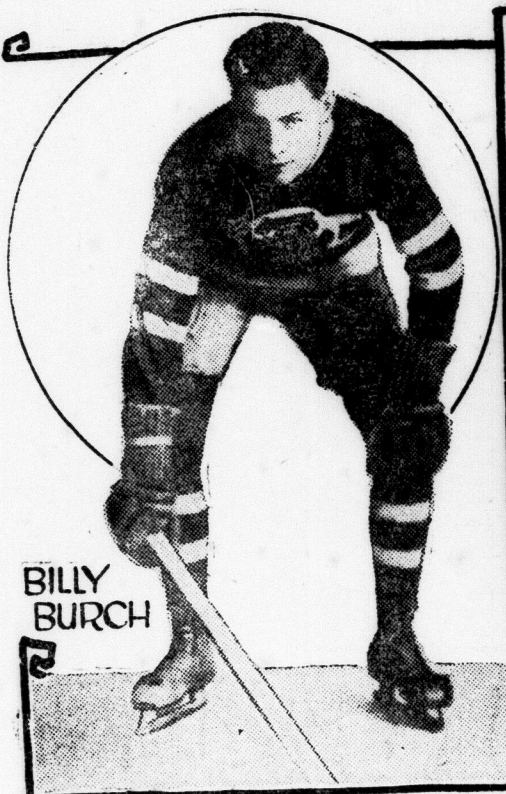

When the time came to go into the house and go to bed, he obeyed without discussion. He only made one qualification. He took the skates with him. He did this so often that taking skates to bed became a sort of tradition. Confronted with this evidence, one would not have needed the abilities of a Lou Marsh to state confidently two decades ago that the boy would probably grow up and be an excellent hockey player.

The more or less technical aspects of the case can be dismissed by simply stating that he has played hockey in Toronto on a host of teams, has been a professional player for two years and last year, as star centre of the league-leading Hamilton club, was awarded, by a jury of ten, the Hart Trophy as the league's most valuable performer.

He Criticised Himself
CONTRASTED with this is the fact that shortly before his entrance into the ranks of the pros, Billy Burch was a hot-headed young player and generally rated as such. His impetuosity led him into numerous mix-ups, many of which resulted in penalties. On many occasions he took short vacations at the urgent request of the officials and sat at the side of the ice for a few minutes.

Then he seems to have realized exactly what he had been doing. Without reading such inspirational volumes as "The Power of Will" or submitting himself to the nearest professor for psycho-analysis, he proceeded to take himself in hand. He criticized his own actions as severely as any dramatic critic with indignation ever penned a poor production.

He got results, one of them being the Hart Trophy and another the reputation he now has as perhaps the cleanest player in Canadian pro. hockey. Last year, Fred Hoey of Boston who is considered the peer of United States experts in hockey matters picked the young Canadian as centre for the all-star team which he trotted out on paper at the conclusion of the season.

The little affair of checking his own hot-headedness labels Billy Burch as a person of considerable intelligence and common-sense and must have been one of the deciding factors in Tex Rickard's choice. For if there is one thing above all others necessary for the captain of a hockey team which is to play on the edge of the bright lights of Broadway, it is a head that is level without being solid.

Billy Burch's stand—as one of the cleanest, most conscientious and hard-working of hockeyists throws an interesting and highly favorable sidelight on the whole question of hockey as a business.

When he finally attained it there was a noticeable change in his opponents' attitude towards him on the ice. Were conditions in professional sport what the wise croakers claim, it would be reasonable to suppose that members of other teams, knowing his decision for coolness

Sir Henry Had Chance To Win On the Horses

Thorndale and Thorndyke Might Have Been Considered Hunches by a Steady Follower

SIR HENRY THORNTON does not believe in hunches. If the president of the Canadian National Railways did believe in hunches he might have enjoyed the pleasure of standing behind the pay wicket in the mutual buildings at least twice on the closing day of a Toronto meet.

Horse lovers and the social four hundred swarmed the members' lawn on get-away day. They also swarmed the bull-ring where sad-eyed gentlemen hand out gaily decorated cardboard slips that represent bets on certain horses. George Beardmore, Master of the fox hounds, himself the owner of a stable of show horses, looked over the program with Sir Henry. They discussed the merits of the horses.

"If I were you Sir Henry, and if I were a betting man, I should take a hunch chance on the entries of Mr. McCreery—Thorndale and Thorndyke."

Sir Henry smiled. He did not bet either Thorndale or Thorndyke. Perhaps he didn't bet any horse but if he did he would have received more than five dollars for every one he bet.

A Man is Only as Old as He Feels But the Women--What About Them?

WHEN is a woman an old woman—or at least when is she not a young woman? This question must be answered by Ontario's only woman police magistrate, who daily, except Wednesday and Sunday, presides over the women's court of Toronto.

Magistrates are almost hourly called upon to make decisions touching practically every subject in the world, but this is the first time on record any judicial authority has been set the task of establishing when a young woman ceases to be a young woman. Is she still young at forty? At fifty? Or has the horizon of modern times extended to such an extent that she is still youthfully looking forward at sixty?

It all happened this way:

Dr. Patterson is interested in morals both personally and professionally. That is one of the reasons why she is a doctor and why she is a police magistrate. She has been on the bench since January, 1922, but for eight years before that the doctor was—and still is—convenor of the standing committee of equal moral standards of the National Council of Women.

Despite the fact that she is one of the busiest women in Ontario the magistrate never misses any meetings.

The president, Mrs. J. Wesley Bundy, is greatly interested in young women, many of whom are members of the sixty affiliated societies connected with her council and regularly attend its meetings. These, however, are frequently in the minority because they find it difficult to attend in the afternoons, many of them being business girls.

What was to be done? Twice Mrs. Bundy suggested the formation of a "Young Women's Local Council of Women of Toronto."

Her suggestion was not heartily received. There was little discussion amongst the members. Instead a rather uneasy shifting in the seats was observed until the matter was conveniently "laid over" and other business taken up. At the last monthly meeting Mrs. Bundy again came forward with her plan for a young women's council—and then the secret came out.

Dr. Patterson rose to her feet. "Madame president, could you tell the members present just who would be eligible for membership in this proposed young women's council, and who would meet with we old ladies to be out alone at night to attend a meeting? Are we to appoint a committee on age, take evidence and affidavits and separate the old from the young?"

There was silence for a long moment. A few laughed. The chairlady sought an inspiration from her audience. There was no inspiration. The chairlady sat down. Dr. Patterson sat down. Nobody spoke. The chairlady said something to the secretary, who was eagerly waiting a chance to write something in her minute book. No one else heard what was said. Then Mrs. Bundy rose to her feet again, and, smiling quite happily, turned to the magistrate: "As one who disposes of many, many problems, doctor, you are appointed a committee of one to decide just when a woman is no longer a young woman. We will await your report with interest."

It is not expected there will be any report. Neither is it expected there will be any separate young women's council. Women have not yet come to the point of voluntarily admitting themselves other than young.

Heirs Were Reunited By Newspaper Story

Article Published Here Draws Together Relatives Long Missing—May Affect Asquith's Title

A STORY published on this page has served to reunite members of a family long separated—and may be the means of bringing about the division of the estate of the Earls of Oxford. This is not the Asquith family, even though he has taken the title of Earl of Oxford and Asquith, as it relates to the Earldom of Oxford, suspended in recent years through lack of a male heir, and to the estate of the Harley and Mortimer families.

The story told of the efforts of a Captain Samuel Lawrence to establish his claim to the title and estates of the Earls of Oxford. It furnished to Charles Brown, gardener, 29 Wade avenue, Brantford, Ontario, a clue to missing members of the family, and led eventually to a uniting of several branches, long lost. It may lead ultimately to other uniting—that of the heirs to the fortune itself.

So far as the present heirs are concerned, the history of the family begins with Hon. Sarah, of the Harley and Mortimer family. She was a twin daughter of the fifth Earl of Oxford. She married Samuel Lawrence, of Titley, Herefordshire, who was overseer of the estates owned by her father. The marriage aroused great enmity in the family of the earl, and finally resulted in a general disruption. The grandfather of the local claimant and his uncle, Richard, eldest son of the Hon. Sarah, met with violent deaths, and when the second son, William, died at Leoninster, his descendants left for Central Argentina. The all trace of them was lost. The third son, Benjamin, died at Deptford, England, in 1913.

Mr. Brown's grandmother was the eldest child of the marriage which had such ill results within the family. She spent a great sum of money trying to locate the children of her brother, William, but without avail.

The newspaper story telling of the efforts of Capt. William Lawrence, of Salmon Arm, B.C., to justify his claim to the Oxford title, led Mr. Brown to look up the family affairs, since he had been told often of the lost family of William in the Argentine. As a result of his researches, he discovered a cousin in Mrs. L. Julien, Macross, near Ericsdale, Manitoba. Her brother, Samuel Lawrence, like herself, had been brought up in the Argentine, but came to Canada. That Samuel was father of Capt. Samuel Lawrence, now claimant to the Oxford title and estates.

The reunited heirs are now awaiting the return of Capt. Samuel Lawrence, at present prospecting in the Dease Lake goldfield discovery in British Columbia. Joint action is then expected to follow.

Hon. H. H. Asquith, the new Earl of Oxford and Asquith, would be none too secure in his possession of the new designation if the claims of Capt. Lawrence and the other heirs of the older, but now suspended, title are upheld. But the Chancery Court and the legal committee of the House of Lords move slowly, and it may be some time before any action is put before them.

Pick Canadian Artist To Honor Famous Poet

Robert Johnston Paints Mural of Walt Whitman for Citizens of Camden, N.J.

YEARS ago citizens of Camden, N.J., were not so proud of their fellow townsman, Walt Whitman, the poet—a good many of them were not, at any rate.

But to-day he has assumed somewhat the position of a patron saint, and casting about for some way to do him honor a group of capitalists erected a magnificent hotel to his memory in his native town. They have combined in expert manner a tribute to a poet and a temple dedicated to the commercial traveler, a feat which would scarcely be possible outside the United States.

In erecting the hostelry, however, those responsible did decide to offer some thoroughly uncommercial token of their esteem. It was to take the form of a painting, and the Philadelphia Art Association was requested to search this continent and discover the artist best fitted to undertake the task.

The Philadelphia esthetes broadcast a request for sketches. The finished canvas was to be a mural, depicting the poet in an allegorical setting. Fifty-two painters from all parts of the United States and Canada contributed their ideas and the Philadelphians examined all carefully.

Then they announced it as their unanimous decision that Robert E. Johnston, an illustrator working in oils, should be entrusted with the work.

Since that date, there have appeared in print a wide variety of biographical sketches, interviews with the artist and summaries of his past achievements. These omitted one fact from their survey of the painter's past. They fail to state that Robert E. Johnston is a Canadian.

His early work was done in Toronto study clubs and art societies. He earned his living by doing commercial art with a number of Canadian concerns, and other artists who knew him and had studied with him considered him a thorough craftsman and a painter who had painstakingly built a solid foundation on which to base his future work.

Some time ago he was asked to leave Canada and go to Chicago. The offer made was better than tempting, and he set out for the city of winds and water. At the border customs officials began asking questions which he, as a good and respectable Canadian, felt were unnecessary.

"I don't want to go to your country anyway," was his comment and only answer as he turned round and caught the next train back to Toronto.

USELESS QUALIFICATION

THE French Foreign Minister, M. Briand, tells an excellent story of how a friend with a vitriolic wit scored over a political opponent.

The opponent was criticizing in the Chamber of Deputies a bill brought in by Briand's friend. "When," he declared, "I first read the text of the ridiculous and impossible measure I thought I was becoming mad."

"Becoming" interjected the wit. "Becoming, indeed! How fond the honorable member is of adding unnecessary words."

Dying Pastor Inspired By Sunset on the Hills

Vicar Wrote Immortal Hymn After Preaching Last Sermon to His Parishioners

A LETTER which recently appeared in the London Times, tucked away amid a mass of correspondence from readers, reveals the inspiration of one of the best-known hymns ever written. The letter came from a grandson of Rev. Henry Francis Lytle, author of "Abide With Me."

Rev. Mr. Lytle was devoting the last years of his life to a colony of humble fishermen on the shores of Torbay. His work was undermining his health, but he refused to cease. Finally he broke down completely. His doctor told him he was dying of consumption and that he must go abroad at once.

As he was walking home after preaching his farewell sermon, the dying pastor prayed for power to bequeath a message to posterity—some message of consolation that would live forever.

It was almost night and, as it happened, one of those evenings when the Torbay sunset was little short of glorious. The sun was sinking in a blaze of color behind the purple hills of Dartmoor, which stood out darkly in the foreground.

The poet-pastor stopped to look at the scene and the dying day reminded him insistently of the coming close of his own life. He returned to his study and there and then wrote the hymn.

VIOLETS ARE FOR LUCK

MR. ALFRED NOYES, the poet, who has just reached the halfway mark between forty and fifty, published his first book of verse when he was just out of his teens. Its appearance made him vow that he would earn a living by writing poetry—an astonishingly bold resolve!

He has one charming superstition, by the way; he likes, when lecturing, to have his wife in the audience, wearing a bunch of violets for luck.

PERIL OF POPULARITY

"POPULARITY has its drawbacks," remarked Mary Pickford recently. "Many a popular actress is a butt for the envious, as was the case with Gladys."

"Gladys was the prettiest girl in the village. She was also modest, generous and lovable. Yet the other village girls shunned her."

"Why is Gladys disliked so?" asked a newcomer to the place of a lady friend.

"Why, haven't you heard?" was the reply. "Gladys got more votes at the bazaar than anyone else, for being the most popular girl in the village."

JUDGED BY COLLAR ADS. HIS FACE ISN'T STRONG

But A. J. Cooke Has Other Assets—A First-Hand Sketch of British Miners' Leader

By MAURICE SPECTOR

THESE are Labor leaders like "Jimmy" Thomas who are popular with the propertied classes and there are those who are not. Arthur J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, belongs distinctly to the latter group. During the coal crisis he was easily the target of the most bitter attacks.

To be secretary of the miners is to occupy a strategic position in the trade union movement for better or for worse. Mining is a key industry. Frank Hodges and Bob Smillie, men who have been leaders of the miners' union in the past, were Socialists, too, and might have seemed fearful "Reds" to the leaders of the American Federation of Labor. But in England they are learning to distinguish shades of Socialism. There is a Socialism which believes in class co-operation. Cook not only believes that there is a class struggle, but holds that it is the motive power of social progress. "Bolshevism," he said to me, "is simply Socialism with its overalls on."

The miners' headquarters are in quiet Russell square, which is part of the middle class Bloomsbury boarding house district known to all tourists who come to London. I was shown up to Cook by his private secretary, Nancy Adams, little Scotch belle, and was introduced to a man who totally belies the appellation of "emperor" which writers have been trying to fix on him. His face is not strong by collar ad. or Dena Gibson standards. He is slight of build, fair haired and shy looking. But as he talks his voice becomes resonant and his features resolute yet mobile.

It was just after the coal settlement, and naturally we got on the subject of the issues involved. He was firmly convinced that the struggle had been postponed only and that a clash next spring was inevitable. Both sides were busy preparing. He laughed as he told me that he had been invited to see the King during the crisis. "I refused to follow in the footsteps of—Mr. Frank Hodges."

We drifted to the subject of his own development. I remarked that there was an impression abroad that his selection to the post he now filled had been something of a fluke. As a matter of fact, he replied, I was chosen from among eight candidates by the biggest vote in the history of the union. I entered the pits when I was fifteen and have been a left winger ever since. The men elected me to the national executive while I was still a collier.

He is proud of his record of militancy. Among not the least of his honors, he counts two terms of imprisonment. "During the war," he said quietly, "I served six months for industrial activities that were declared to be violating D.O.R.A. (Defense of the Realm Act.) The next time I was put in the clink was during the coal struggle that ended up in the "Black Friday" of 1921. I was charged with "incitement to mutiny," or, as I prefer to put it, for pulling out the strike breakers. It is a strange thing that I was the only member of the executive of that time to fall foul of the powers."

His rise has been one of the most meteoric in the history of the British Labor movement. A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners, a leader but not an "emperor."

As a national figure, Cook has emerged only since the period of the Labor government, which was about the time the British trade union movement began to turn to the left. At first the tendency of the mine owners and the press was to belittle his ability both as a leader and negotiator. But after his uncompromising stand last July his opponents had to change their tone towards him.

His success added him no little in winning the more active co-operation of the older men on the miners' executive, which is sometimes called the miners' "house of lords." He frankly told me, however, that his real influence lay not with this executive but with the rank and file. Realizing this, Cook is continually on the go, visiting now this district, now the other, carrying his message to the men personally, and then facing his executive with the force of this support from below.

Generally, Cook speaks very soberly. But he can be trenchant. Somebody phoned in to tell him of the speech Ramsay MacDonald had just made at Dunmow, criticizing the settlement as a victory for bolshevism. Cook's comment on the speech and Mr. MacDonald were salted with (to say the least) fairly racy and scorching epithets. The Welsh are considered emotional. Cook is a Welshman and is certainly capable of strong feeling. He feels the strain of the struggle, but he has held up remarkably well, despite the limelight of publicity he is in, with the temptations to make "breaks" it holds out.

NEW WASHER WRINGS
CLOTHES OUT QUICKLY

Savage Machine, Sold by Pol-

Patent Features.

When the housewife washes with an ordinary washing machine or by hand she must lift each article out of the water and guide it through the wringer by hand. Each piece must be handled several times in washing, rinsing, blueing and wringing. Most of the time her hands are wet—at best it is messy, tiresome work. The is on her feet continually —bending over steaming tubs, "fishing" and lifting the heavy, soaked garments out of deep cylinders or tubs, straining to remove and place parts of the machine necessary in the various operations.
Not so with the wringerless Savage electric washer now sold exclusively in London by J. H. Pollock, 397 Clarence street.
The Savage is revolved in an aluminum perforated container, lifted, turned, and dropped back in the sudsy water more than fifty times a minute, without rubbing or bunching. Within a surprisingly short time everything is washed immaculately. Soaking and boiling are unnecessary.
"If Savage is remarkable in its washing action, you'll find it really wonderful in drying," says Mr. Pollock, "because it dries wringers without wringing, without injury to washing or risk of injury to operator."
"After washing, a simple shift of the perforated container to upright position brings the load above the sealding water—mechanically. Three minutes Savage rinsing is more thorough than fifteen minutes hand rinse—and think of the saving on hands!"

"Think of the labor of feeding a wringer, of slowly rinsing by hand, of operating levers and pedals, which the Savage saves you. Think of how Savage drying saves your garments—by not breaking or tearing off buttons, flattening fasteners and hooks, and eyes; saves you ironing, by eliminating all deep wringer-creases, all smashed and matted down nap.
"And on rainy, snowy days you don't have to hang out your washing.
—you can iron right from the Savage.
"The principle of centrifugal drying is not new. It has been used industrially for a century. The Savage is no experiment."

Art Tanner Points Out Time That Can Be Saved
With Wheel.
A good bicycle can be a great help to persons in all walks of life, and with bicycles the best is always the cheapest, according to Arthur Tanner, local dealer for Perfect Bicycles, the wheels that have made a name for themselves in France, Germany and Canada. Mr. Tanner points out that the small extra first cost when spread over the longer life of a Perfect is but a trifle.
"The cost per mile per year is very much less than that of the so-called "cheap" machines. Should the rider wish to sell at any time, a much better price may be had for a Perfect Bicycle, its lasting qualities being so well known.
"Extra years of easy riding make the Perfect Bicycle a real prize. It lasts longer after the ordinary wheel is hard running and shabby. It takes fewer years' work to buy a Perfect Bicycle than ever before. It pays for itself many times over in smooth riding comfort and freedom from repairs.
"The Perfect comes very close indeed to being absolutely perfect in quality, as well as in price. It has for many years proven itself to be perfectly adapted to the severe demands made upon it. Canadian workmen take pride in putting forth their best efforts in the production of a bicycle which is such a striking tribute to their skill. Canadian cyclists take equal pride in owning and riding it."

Children's Feet
Cause of Trouble

Dr. Leroy Hiles Is Expert in Correcting All Pedal Ailments.

Dr. Leroy V. Hiles, foot specialist, 202 Dundas street, submits the following article on the care of children's feet for Advertiser readers:
"Irritable children are not always to blame for their restlessness. In nearly every case this is caused by improperly fitted clothing, and especially by improperly fitted shoes. We often hear about the so-called growing pains of children, but there is really no such pain, these conditions being caused by careless attention, due to improperly fitted clothes.
"Normal children usually begin to reep during the seventh or eighth month. Their sleeping should be encouraged, and by no means should a child be forced to walk by using mechanical appliances. If left alone, the child will begin to walk of its own accord by hanging on to objects which are about the room. Forcing the child to walk too early causes the muscles and bones, which are unfit for this unnatural strain, to give way as a result the child acquires weak feet and bow legs.
"Often parents believe that children are lazy because they desire to be carried. This is not the case. The comment of their walking age, but in the majority of these cases this is an erroneous idea. Such children either have weak feet, which may then when they walk, or are unhealthy. Any normal child would much rather romp and play about than be carried.
"If it is apparent at all that the child's ailments may be caused by foot trouble the only right thing for the parents to do is have his feet examined by a competent chiropodist."

BROOKS BROS. ENJOY
LARGE RETAIL TRADE

The Brooks Bros' coal yard at 228 Adelaide street, is enjoying one of the largest retail coal trades in the city, due to the fact that they always carry a complete stock of all sizes of anthracite coal, as well as soft coal and the best coke in different sizes.
This concern has gained a reputation of having only clean coal for sale. Added to that it has a system of prompt delivery, which has given its old customers real satisfaction, and has drawn a huge amount of new trade.
Although this firm started with a small amount of trade, it has grad-

F. B. Hertel of 155 Central avenue, one of the most widely known furriers in Western Ontario, and who has had more than fifty years' experience in this business in France, Germany and Eng-latest facilities for making fur coats, extensive stocks of Persian lamb, French seal, and several other types of popular skins, as well as large shipment of all the kinds of linings now being used. He is thus in a position to fill orders of all sizes for goods next

In addition to making new coats, etc.,
Mr. Hertel does a great deal of remodel-out that by a small expenditure the owner of a valuable coat may give it a greatly lengthened lease of life by hav-

Best Material,
Motto of Firm
W. T. Pace and Son, Paper-hangers for 35 Years.

"Skillful workmanship and only the best materials" for the last 35 years has been the watchword of the local painting and paperhanging firm of W. T. Pace and Son, 251 Ridout street south. And it is because this concern has consistently lived up to this motto that its success has been so marked.
Fred Pace, the manager, has had many years' experience in this field and because of this can give expert advice on all painting or paperhang-ing problems that confront the homeowner.
Mr. Pace is skilled in his profession. In interior and exterior decorating he has a wealth of knowledge based on actual experience and a keen study of the new things which are decreed by leading decorators.
It makes no difference whether it be oil paper or paint, Mr. Pace is in a position to offer the services of an expert.

One of the big features which Mr.
Pace follows up is doing interior decorating during the summer months.
At this season there is a better opportunity to devote more time and attention to a contract and the customer has a much better range of materials from which to make a choice.

"Many of my patrons are seeing the advantage of having decorating and painting done during July and August while they are on their vacations," said Mr. Pace. "They select the wall paper designs or paint colors and then leave us in charge of the house. When they come back they find everything in proper order.
Furniture and furnishings restored as they were prior to the job being done."
It is a fact that Mr. Pace has won the confidence of his customers. He knows that he has trustworthy and responsible men in his employ and that in taking such a contract no risk is being run whatever, while a customer's home is temporarily in his possession.

PERFECT BICYCLES
GIVE LONG SERVICE

A. T. Tanner Firm Local Agency For Widely Famed Line of Wheels.

Of course you need a bicycle. With it, Art Tanner, one of London's leading bicycle dealers, points out, you can get from place to place quickly, easily and economically.
It is always ready to save you from long, tiresome walks or from crowded, stuffy street cars. The saving in car-fares will soon pay for it. No expensive gasoline or other fuel, and little parking space.
There are, certainly some real advantages, and that they are being appreciated are evidenced in the fact that so far this year Mr. Tanner's sales of Perfect Bicycles have just been double what they were for the same period last year.

With three stores, at 665 Dundas street, 402 Clarence street and 454 Hamilton road, Mr. Tanner is in a position to give the utmost in service. The repair departments are each in themselves efficient, and experts turn out work of the highest order.
In considering the bicycle as a means of transportation, it may be further pointed out that the bicycle will save as much as doctors' bills. The moderate fresh-air exercise is just what is needed to give robust health and keep one fit.
The many miles of good roads now available make cycling pleasant and easy the greater part of the year. Every boy and girl needs a bicycle. It is just the thing for errands and for getting to school. Teachers, as well as pupils, need bicycles. So do workmen, clergymen, collectors and messengers.
Per rush deliveries and for delivery-ing small, light goods, no other system can compete in low cost and high efficiency with a boy on a bicycle. On the farm it is harder than a spare horse.

LOOK TO PRIEST TO SETTLE STRIKE

Rev. John Curran Predicts an Early Settlement of Anthracite Miners' Troubles.

Associated Press Despatch. Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—A statement by the Rev. John J. Curran, rector of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church in Wilkes-Barre, in which he predicted an early settlement of the anthracite mine trouble, brought varied expressions of opinion today from those in close touch with the situation.

Father Curran said he had conferred with John J. Lewis, international president of the mine workers, in Atlantic City last week. He had "unwavering faith and confidence" in him as a "model citizen" and felt that he would "do the right thing by the miners, the operators and the public."

"I feel," added the priest's statement, "that in a comparatively short time we shall hear favorably from him and that the strike will soon come to an amicable and successful end."

Attention was called to the prominence of Father Curran in the settlement of former anthracite disputes and his statement created a ray of hope in some quarters at least for a resumption of negotiations between the operators and the miners looking toward an adjustment of the differences that have kept approximately 158,000 miners idle since Sept. 1.

Leaders of both miners and operators said the situation was unchanged and denied reports that proposals had been made for a settlement of the wage controversy.

PRESENT ABUTMENTS FOR RIDOUT BRIDGE

Big Span-Girders Likely To Be Employed on City Structure.

The proposed bridge for Ridout street will be built upon the present abutments and piers, with 124-foot span girders supporting the deck. These huge girders are now made in Canada and have been used on much work in Toronto. A railway viaduct at the foot of Spadina avenue and other work about the harbor front has been greatly aided by the increased size of the span girder.

W. P. Neill, city engineer, was in Walkerville yesterday looking over work on the bridge company's plans for transportation of the span girder to the greatest impediment to its use, but in the case of the Ridout street bridge, the L. & P. S. R. crossing is scarcely a block away.

WAR MEMORIAL GROUP TAKES UP SITE PROBLEM

Suitable sites for the proposed cenotaph and war memorial were discussed at a meeting of the War Memorial Committee, held last night in the chamber of commerce.

The committee, anxious that the most suitable location for such a monument be selected and are therefore opposed to undue haste in choosing a site. An announcement definitely locating the memorial is expected shortly.

Members of the committee who are dealing with this phase of the question are Mrs. Rose Thomas, Mrs. G. L. McDonald, Col. Lawless, Col. Chesman, Prof. Leonard, Mr. Wood, Col. Leonard, Fire Chief Alden, Chas. Burrell, Mr. Leary and Dr. L. R. Douglass, convenor.

CAPACITY CROWDS ACCLAIM EULER

Special to The Advertiser.
Kitchener, Oct. 23.—The most enthusiastic meeting that has greeted W. D. Euler, Independent Liberal candidate for North Waterloo, in the present federal elections campaign, was held here this evening in the auditorium of the city hall. Long before the time for calling the meeting to order every available seat in the auditorium was filled and standing room at the back of the hall was at a premium. The crowd that sought admission was so great that an overflow meeting had to be arranged at the Kitchener Hotel. It was a tribute to the work of M. Euler in the house of commons for the past eight years, as well as a token of the strength of Mr. Euler's supporters in the city of Kitchener. The meeting was presided over by Ald. Charles Massel, who has been the representative of Labor on the city council of Kitchener for the last six years.
Karl K. Homuth, Labor member in the provincial legislature for South Waterloo, and C. M. Bowman, of the Mutual Life of Canada, preceded Mr. Euler on the platform. Both speakers deplored the policy adopted by Mr. Meighen in the present campaign in connection with his persistent blue-ruin speeches throughout the country. Mr. Homuth declared that the campaign of Mr. Meighen has been a continued slander of the heritage that has been left to optimistic and patriotic Canadians by the pioneers who hewed a vigorous civilization out of the wilderness. Canada generations ago. He declared the leader of the opposition was lacking in the proper spirit of patriotism when he advertised to the world that his country is on the verge of ruin and advertisement which is not verified by existing facts.
There was no doubt of the sentiments of the meeting when W. D. Euler arose to speak. He was given an ovation which indicated the approval of the electorate in his record of eight years in the house of commons. Mr. Euler discussed briefly the issues before the electorate in the present campaign and criticized his Conservative opponent for his repeated avowals of slavish partisan obedience, and following of all and every policy that will be enunciated by Mr. Meighen. Mr. Euler declared the people want a man who will be free to exercise his judgment in the house and not a slavish follower. He was prepared to support the Liberal government in all measures that insured the interests of the dominion and his riding, but he wanted to reserve his judgment when the disgraced leader of the party in matters of national policy, or on measures which would be against the interests of the riding. The meeting was the most successful that has been held during the present campaign.

You Don't Have to Pay a Penalty for Motor Luxury

Acceleration? Speed? Every-one knows the ease of Chrysler's 70 miles plus.

Roadability? Comfort? No car, no matter how many hundred extra pounds it is burdened with in the effort to obtain greater riding ease, equals the new Chrysler Six in these features due to the low center of gravity and the Chrysler type of rear spring mounting.

Freedom from mechanical attention? The Chrysler Six has a world wide reputation for notably uninterrupted service.

All this the new Chrysler Six at the new low prices gives its owners at half the purchase price of cars presumably having comparable quality—yes, and at far, far less than the operating and maintenance cost of the more cumbersome cars.

We are eager to have you prove all the new Chrysler Six does. Then you'll see why no other car, at any price, affords what has come to be trade-marked in the public mind as "Chrysler Six performance."

AMUSEMENTS

MEETINGS

Progressive Appeal to the Voters of

East Middlesex

Having been unanimously chosen as the candidate for the convention held in London on Sept. 26, composed of representative Farmer and Labour men, living in the riding of East Middlesex, I now offer myself for re-election to the next session of Parliament. In doing so, I desire to bring to your attention a few of the things which the Progressive party advocate.

The needs of the labor man and the farmer are so similar and their interests are so inter-linked and interwoven that I have no hesitation in appealing to both classes for their support, and what will work out to be advantageous to those people will surely be in the interest of our Dominion, and therefore will be beneficial to all citizens, whether rich or poor.

I appeal to you for your support. I do so on the following platform:

1. Nationalization of our Banking System.

2. Nationalization of Public Utilities.

3. Cutting the expenditure for the maintenance of an armed force in Canada to the very bone.

4. Abolition of grants towards cadet training.

5. Abolition of Senate.

6. No appeal from the Highest Court of Canada.

7. Reduction of tariff to make it revenue-producing rather than protection.

8. Equalization of freight rates.

9. Labelling of all food products and wearing apparel showing the manufacturer's name and address.

10. Representatives of Agriculture and Labor to be appointed on future Advisory boards and to

Board of Directors of C. N. R.

11. Cancellation of the duties which define the fields of taxation of Federal,

Provincial and Municipal authorities.

12. Selective immigration policy.

These reforms are all of a Progressive nature, and I appeal to you to consider them very carefully and see if to cast your ballot in support of a policy which will be the greatest good to the greatest number.

THE HOUSE THAT IS DIFFERENT.

When we list a house that is different from the cottage or bungalow type so common in London we have no difficulty in selling it. In fact we are often asked if we have certain houses "for sale" because they are different. We have plans for and intend building a number of houses in London next spring, entirely different from anything ever attempted here before. They are also to be CORK INSULATED; a sample of the construction now being exhibited in our office, and you are invited to inspect it at any time. If you intend building for sale, we will be pleased to show you our plans and will help finance your building, which we are able to do through special arrangements made with lumber merchants and loan companies.

Bobbed Hair

How to Keep it Thick Healthy, Vigorous

The constant curling and waving demanded by modern style in hair dress, slowly burn the color, lustre and very life from the hair, leaving it dry, faded, brittle, streaked with gray; then the hair roots shrink and the hair falls out fast.

A 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" will do wonders for any girl's hair. This vitalizing beauty-tonic acts on the hair, like fresh showers of rain and sunshine act on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

Try this for one week! While combing and dressing your hair, moisten your hair with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair—the effect is startling! Your hair immediately takes on new life and that healthy, youthful lustre, becomes incomparably soft, wavy and appears twice as thick and abundant.—Advt.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Wharf and Dredging, Midland, Ont." will be received until 12 o'clock noon, Tuesday, November 10, 1925, for the construction of a wharf, and dredging the approaches thereto, at Midland, Simcoe County, Ont.

Plans and forms of contract can be seen and specification and forms of tender obtained at this Department, at the offices of the District Engineers, Public Buildings, Toronto, Ont., Customs Building, London, Ont., and at the Postoffice, Midland, Ont.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on printed forms supplied by the Department and in accordance with conditions contained therein.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted check on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to 10 per cent of the amount of the tender. Bonds of the Dominion of Canada or bonds of the Canadian National Railway Company will also be accepted as security, or bonds and a check if required to make up an odd amount.

Note—Blue prints can be obtained at this Department by depositing an accepted check for the sum of $25, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, which will be returned if the intending bidder submit a regular bid.

By Order, S. E. O'BRIEN, Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa, Oct. 17, 1925. 021.24.27

Brown and Sloggett

Strong Candidates Whose Success Is Assured

TOM BROWN

GEORGE H. SLOGGETT

North Perth and East Elgin Liberals Have Placed in the Field Two Men Who Are Conducting a Vigorous Campaign—Both Are of Outstanding Ability.

North Perth and East Elgin are ridings of much similarity in the present election. Both have strong Labor elements, but in neither riding is there a Labor candidate, and in both the Liberal candidates are expected to poll the big end of the Labor vote. Perth is one of the few double constituency counties that sent two Liberals to the last parliament. Senator Rankin was the member in the last house for the north riding, and Wm. Forrester, who is not again running, was the member for the south. East Elgin was represented by a Conservative, Hugh C. McKillop. Senator Rankin's successor as the Liberal candidate is Tom Brown, mayor of Stratford, and son of John Brown, who was also mayor of that city and prominent in the politics of Perth. Down in Elgin, St. Thomas, like Stratford, has a large Labor vote of high-class workingmen. There, as in North Perth, the Liberal candidate is a prominent union man in the locomotive men's brotherhood. He has been engaged in railway work all his life. He is making a strong appeal to the country vote as well. Indications are that he will redeem the riding to the Liberals. In any event, the mayors of Stratford and St. Thomas will make a strong showing, Mayor Sloggett having the more difficult task.

Tom Brown, like his namesake in the famous "School days," is an aggressive young chap and popular with every one with whom he comes in contact. He is a native son of the city, and received his early education in its schools. Later he took up the study of law, and is now a practising lawyer making great headway in his profession. True to the family tradition, he has given himself to public service. Clean amateur sport has also received the assistance of his untiring and unselfish energy. He has been connected with hockey, football and basketball teams, and was president of the Ontario Basketball association. He is a popular figure in the country districts as in the city.

Politics in Perth seems to run in families. There are the Monteiths. One of them is always looming up as a Conservative candidate, and one is in the legislature now. The Ballantynes gave their quota to the Liberal cause, and the Hays, from the north end of the riding, have also had two generations of members in legislative bodies.

Mr. Sloggett was born in Devonshire, England, and came to Canada with his parents when two years of age, settling in St. Thomas in 1852. His father was employed by the old Canada Southern Railway. In 1855 the family moved to Niagara Falls, where he was employed by the old Canadian Pacific Railway. In 1858 he moved back to St. Thomas, and has been a continuous resident there since. He was educated at the public schools, and went to work on the Michigan Central Railway at an early age. He became a locomotive engineer in the years 1916, 1917, 1918 and 1919 he was an alderman in the city of St. Thomas. In 1923 he again ran for the council, and was elected. In 1924 he was mayor, and in 1925 was given another term of that high position by acclamation.

He was chairman of several important committees during his term of council. Mr. Sloggett is an active member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and held the post of chief engineer in his local division. He is married, and has three daughters, two of whom are married, and Miss Florence at Alma college.

KITCHENER POPULATION INCREASED 757 IN YEAR

Combined With Waterloo City Now Has Over 32,000 People.

Special to The Advertiser. Kitchener, Oct. 23.—An increase of 757 in the population of Kitchener during the past year was the result of the announcement of the Assessment Commissioner M. Huenegard here today. This brings the total population from 24,805 last year to 25,562 this season, and when combined with Waterloo the twin city has well over 32,000 people.

The assessors knew that there would be a substantial increase, but they hardly expected that it would be so great. Each of the five wards shows an increase, though one just slipped through with three more of a population than last year. On the other hand, another ward shows an increase of 261.

The same management which established the Hudson and Essex cars, now, as for sixteen years, controls and directs the design of its product and policies of the company. The cars themselves are made continuously and consistently improved while this price-reducing process has gone on," said Charles F. Jones, distributor for Hudson and Essex cars. "Constant refinements are made in the general design, so that the present Hudson and Essex cars are the sturdiest, most reliable, most comfortable and generally satisfactory cars Hudson ever built. Owners of the cars built several years ago find this true when they buy the Hudson and Essex cars of today. Quality has gone higher while prices dropped.

In 1925 both Hudson and Essex lines had established new records of popularity before this present price cut became effective. Now, of course, this rate of sales will be at even a faster pace. Hudson and Essex have been brought within the reach of thousands of additional owners.

"We look for the final months of 1925 to be the best part of the year."

MRS. JOHN CAMERON DIES AFTER LENGTHY ILLNESS

Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Mrs. John A. Cameron, eldest daughter of Rt. Hon. W. S. Fielding, former federal minister of finance, died this morning at a local hospital after a lengthy illness. Mrs. Cameron was widely known in the capital. Born in Halifax, she took up residence with her father here in 1896. Mrs. Cameron was twice married, her first husband being K. N. McAfee.

110,000 Policyholders in the Mutual Life of Canada

Safety in Numbers

THE Mutual Life of Canada is a company of approximately 110,000 policyholders bonded together for mutual protection and support in time of trouble. They obtain the insurance practically at cost. Surplus profits over and above provision of necessary reserves are divided among participating policyholders.

Last year, the sum of $2,689,000 was thus distributed to Mutual policyholders as dividends.

Mutual profit-participating policyholders have three options: (1) They may apply their profits to increasing the face value of their policies; (2) They may apply them to reducing premiums; (3) They may take out their profits in cash.

The Mutual Book tells the whole story. Write for it.

"A Room of His Own"

--keeps the boy at home

THE sense of ownership takes a strong hold on a boy in his early "teens." It is the wise father and mother who will provide "a room of his own" for their boy—a "den" where he can entertain his chums, play games or do his studying.

An attic room can be prepared very quickly and at little expense by the use of GYPROC wallboard. GYPROC comes in broad, ceiling-high panels which can be readily cut with a saw to suit the occasion. Although sheets of solid rock, GYPROC is light in weight, easy to handle and can be nailed with ordinary nails as readily as lumber.
