RACING FOR TIE PASS.

RACING FOR TIE PASS.

Kuropatkin and His Army in Flight, With Japs Following:

St. Petersburg, March 9.—The battle of Mukden has resulted in a Russian defeat. Field Marshal Oyama once more has proven himself one of the greatest masters of offensive strategy since Napoleon, while General Kuropatkin is now engaged in endegvoring to defend his title as a master of successful retreats and bring off his army, with its immense train, safely to Tie Pass, where a position long ago was prepared with this contingency in view.

Both Flanks Threatened.

The problem before the Russian Commander-in-Chief is much more dif-

The problem before the Russian Commander-in-Chief is much more difficult than the one he met successfully at Lisoyang, since now he is threatened on both flanks, his left wing being entangled in a mountainous region far from the railroad. Only to the initiated is the news of the reverse positively known at this time. Emperor Nicholas and high military officers of course were informed by General Kuropatkin's telegram of Tuesday, stating tersely that Mukden must be abandoned, and they received details of the beginning of the withdrawal as they appeared in exclused portions of the official despatches given out yesterday.

Began to Run March 6.

From information it is known that Gen. Kuropatkin contemplated retirement before the beginning of the battle, and that he had hoped to accomplish it without a serious combat. The Japanese, however, forced him to accept battle. The double turning movement compelled hom to send the majority part of his reserves to the fighting line and rendered an effective counter stroke out of the question, and the decision to retire was immediately taken on March 6. Withdrawal was actually begun during that night.

The great question now is whether Field Marshal Oyama has entangled the Russians in his strategic net surfaciently to prevent a successful retreat to Tie Pass. Gen. Remenkampt's force to the eastward admittedly is in great danger of being cut off, and considerable force of Japanese appears to be operating on the Russian right well toward Tie Pass.

Japa Utterly Reckless.

If the Japanese succeed in reaching r-in-Chief is much more dif-

ing on the Russian right well toward Tie Pass.

Japs Utterly Reckless.

If the Japanese succeed in reaching the railroad and interrupting traffic, if only for a few hours, it may have the greatest consequences for General Kuropatkin, who is now engaged in a literal race with the Japanese to reach a naturally detensible position forty miles northward. All reports indicate that the Japanese were utterly reckless of sacrifices, making attack after attacks especially on the centre and westward against machine guns and infantry fire, which literally mowed down the advancing columns, making human flesh so cheap that the survivors could bastion themselves behind plies of corpses.

Body of Woman Burned to Death Exhumed For Inquest.

Hesitation in Saying That a Murder Mrs. Adam Lloyd of Moneymore-Husband and Wife Used to Quarrel

Belleville, March 3.—There is every indication that a sensational murder trial will be on in this city in the near future. The story is a peculiar one, showing how long it takes sometimes for crime, if crime it is, to become known to the authorities. On Jan. 30 last a story came to this city to the effect that Mrs. Adam Lloyd, the wife of a farmer living in the little hamlet of Monsymere. Hungerford Township, Hastings County, had been burned to death one merning while her husband, a farmer, was at the barn doing chores.

The story says that he came in and found his wife sitting by the store with her clothes on fire, she being, it was alleged, quite dead when found. The unfortunate woman was buried two days Belleville, March 9.-There is every

LORD STRATHCONA'S PROPHECY

Lord Strathcona has, if anyone, the right to prophecy as to the future of Canada, together with the practical knowledge of what went to build up the Dominion. It is, therefore, of interest to learn from a speech that he recently made at the Liverpool, Eng., Exhibition what his views are. He had just viewed the Canadian exhibits and in the course of a speech referred to them as all being object leasons, which should make us think seriously of the present condition of the Empire, and look forward to its future growth.

In a comparatively short time the Empire must become even greater and grander than ever before. But this could only be done by this coun try working hand in hand with the their common welfare, There were potentialities in this Empire, and resources which would make this Empire even more powerful than at present.

In the great Northwest of Canada, which was the first of the new nations of the Empire, and where 30 years ago not one bushel of wheat was grown for export, and where even Hour and other foods had then to be imported, between one hundred and forty and one hundred and fifty million bushels of wheat and grain were grown last year, and the next fifty years would see an immense growth in the population of Canada, which was now about six million; in fact, he did not think he would be a false prophet were he to say that by the end of the present century there would be a population in the Dominion equal to that of the United Kingdom,

It would, therefore, be seen that it behoved them to consider very earnestly the need for cultivating the closest relations with Canada and the Canadian people. Speaking for Canada, he could say that the people of the Dominion were ready and willing to go hand in hand with the Mother Country in everything that tended to the advantage of the peoples of both countries, and in all that made for the good of the Em-

On the previous day that exhibition had been visited by a gentleman who, all would agree, no matter what were their political opin-ions, was the best friend of the colonies-Mr. Chamberlain-and he could not express too highly the pleasure he felt at the circumstance. Referring to the resources of Canada, he said the Dominion offered a home for everyone willing to work. There were to be found gardens, in which were grown the finest of fruits, as well as farms, which he could say from experience would compete with any thing to be found in the United Kingdom, and for all this a settler had nothing to give.

He did not for a moment suggest that those who were comfortably settled in England should give up all here and go to Canada, but to those who were looking to the future for their advancement and prosperity, and who wished to assure the future of their sons and daughters, he would say, go to Canada. These and ethers who were not doing so well in this country would there find home, not amongst strangers, but amongst friends, amongst those who were English in the best sense of the word, and who would welcome and treat them as part of them-selves. He hoped that all English people would join in the endeavor to make the British Empire-despite the efforts of rival nations - foremost amongst the nations of the i led le la

SHE MADE A CHANGE

A Charleston Mother Did So With Advantage to Herself and Children.

A mother living in Charleston, ADELAIDE THURSTON IN POLLY Mass., the happy possessor of four children, writes: "Every fall and winter I have taid in a stock of cough remedies, croup mixtures and throat medicines for my children, for somehow or other they never seem to be free from colds, coughs or sore throat.

somehow or other they never seem to be free from colds, coughs or sere threat.

This fall I wade a change in the usual program, I had myself been cured of an obstinate catarrh, from which I had suffered for years, by Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, and as they were pleasant to take I determined to try them with my children. Our family physician told me he knew them to be perfectly safe and nothing better could be used for catarrh, coughs and colds.

So I gave them to the children and have continued to do so ever since, whenever there is the least sign of croup or sore throat and I no longer dread the approach of cold weather as I once did.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets not only sured me of chronic, nassi and throat catarrh, but they have gaved me many an anxious night with my little ones. The children like the taste of them and it is really wonderful how quickly they will break up a croupy cold or an obstinate, deep seated cough."

People who have used sprays inhalers, salves or washes for catarrh and have found how useless they are, will be agreeably surprised at the results following the use of a pleasant, convenient, internal renedy in tablet form. Druggists everywhere admit that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets which sell for 50 cents full sized package, is the safest, most effective and popular of catarrh medicines,

MOVING PICTURES.

The thrilling scenes attendant upon the barning of the New York excursion steamer "The General Slocum," will be reproduced by Mermitt & Pritchard's "Biograph" Moving Pic ture Company, at the Grand to-night They are from actual photographs and are the most notable series of moving pictures to be produced this season. Other views include a realistic representation of "Fighting the Flames," Coney Island's great fire show; "Tracked by Bloodhounds, or a Lynching at Cripple Creek"; "The Pioneers, or the Massacre by the Indians"; "Driven from Home"; bud "The Great Train Robbery." These are but a few of the many to be shown, and in other cities where it has been seen the collection has been seen, the collection has been pronounced the best moving picture show out this season. Beautifully illustrated songs are sung by the noted baritone, Frank Dee, from Keith's circuit. The entertainment provided is a high class one in every respect, and one sure to please all patrons. The admission will be 10, 20 and 30 cents. Ladies free to night when ac-companied with one paid 30 cent tic-ket.

ADELAIDE THURSTON IN "POLLY PRIMROSE."

This is the fourth season that the pretty and popular little actress, Adelaide Thurston, has starred. She comes to the Grand on Monday, Mar. 18th, in her successful production of "Polly Primrose," which proved so pleasing last season. Those who saw this pretty play last year will recall the excellence of Miss Thurston's support and the fidelity of the stage pictures, which are a replica of Southern home life in the early 60's. Absolutely correct are the furniture and bric-a-brac of the period used in "Polly Primrose," even a little old piano of ante-bellum days, which plays a most important part in one of the most intense scenes of the play. What Miss Thurston prizes most of all in her collection of anantique "preps" is a dainty fan, once used by the famous beauty, Dolly Madison. Miss Thurston's supporting company this season is almost identical with that of last,

How They Lived in the Early Days
In Indian Territory.
In early days in Indian Territory the Creeks had a simple but abundant foed always on hand. Among the edibles were sweet potatoes, almost white in flesh, with a brilliant crimson skin.
These were stored in dry sand in little cellars dug under the floor of the kitchen cablus, where they were kept perfectly until the next summer. Yellow yams, weighing often six, eight and ten pounds, were also raised. Corn was yams, weigning often six, eight and can pounds, were also raised. Corn was their standby, and the soil and climate seemed especially favorable to it in all the different varieties they cultivated for their household use. There was the early corn for the roasting ears, the kind that was cooked with the sacred new fire at the annual busk when the first fruits of the year had been offered to the spirits; the soft white flour corn that, beaten in the great wooden mortars, made delicious bread; the hard, flinty corn which, bulled in the mortars, was the basis for sofkey, the great national dish, and, besides, there was rank growing field corn for stock food. Where the cornfields were, pumpkins were also raised, and the late sun mer and autumn found scaffolds near the cabins with poles strung with sec-tions of pumpkins drying in the sunshine Corn was boiled on the cob and plaited in long festoons to dry for win-ter use, and many varieties of beans and field peas were also dried and stored. Wonderful meions were raised in large quantities of such size and quality that they were surpassed by those of no other country.—Kansas City MAX MULLER'S CHANGE.

The Famous Philologist Sorely Reed-ed It When It Came.

When Max Muller, the famous philologist, first arrived in England in 1847, at the invitation of the East India company, he was often obliged to exercise the greatest care in order to eke out his somewhat limited income. Concerning this period of his life an interesting story is told in "The Life and Letters of Muller," edited by his wife.

One day Muller left his spectacles which he had broken, to be mended at a shop in the Strand, and on calling to fetch them he laid down a sovereign to pay for them. The shopman returned him change for half a sovereign and persisted that Muller had only given him 10 shillings. It was in vain to re-monstrate. The man only became abusive to the unmistakable foreigner in a well worn cont, and Muller left the shop, sadly aware that the missing 10 shillings represented several dinners which he must give up.
Some days passed dinnerless when one evening the man rushed out of the shop as Muller was passing with 10 shillings in his hand, which he held out to him. "Oh, sir," he said, "I have watched

Very queer fish are caught in the waters of Puget sound. One kind is called the candlefish. It is dried and packed in boxes like candles. We are told the fishermen use them to light their homes and that at one time all the beats on the sound week them in their homes and that at one time all the boats on the sound used them in-stead of sperm oil lamps. By putting the heads of the fish dewnward in a candlestick and lighting the tail, which, in conjunction with the backbone, acts as a wick, it burns like a candle. They eat this fish, and, when cooking, it is so fat it fries itself.

Several people were standing before it in silent admiration. The painting represented a room, seated in the foreground of which was the figure of a girl in a white gown. Her black hair was parted and arranged in soft, thick relies of both sides of her felt. rolls on both sides of her fair, pale face. In her hand she held two roses, a red rose and a pink one. The trou-bled expression of her face told of per-plexity. A question was to be solved, but the answer could not be found. Betty clasped her hands with delight.

"Oh," she cried, "how perfectly beau-tiful it is! Oh, Jack, isn't she—isn't she just perfect?"

The young man smiled down upon the enthusiastic girl at his side.

"She is beautiful," but not perfect."

Jack Winslow was watching his com-panion's face. Betty laughed.

"Well," replied she, "perhaps you are right after all. Here comes Frank Carlyle." A tall, slender young man walked leisurely up to Miss Betty's side, and, bowing slightly to Jack, he turned to-ward the picture. "Well," remarked he after a moment's silence, "she is in a fix, isn't she? Pink or red; it's down to a choice of a favorite color, it seems to

"Not at all," replied Jack testily "Which does she love best?"
"Well"—Frank elevated his brown

Betty, who had been silently admiring the picture during the conversation, now turned again toward her com-

"She is a girl you know?"

"Yes," replied both of the young men at the same time.

"A girl," continued Betty, "has to wonder sometimes whether she knows her own mind or not. Here are two men. Both are kind and attentive to the girl. Both offer her the best that he has to give. Both pay her the highest compliment that a man can pay to a woman, for each one in turn asks her to be his wife. Here, on the one hand, are riches, a life with every wish granted, a mother and father made granted, a mother and father made comfortable, and a husband who loves you. If she does not love him, she respects and admires him. On the other hand are a life of everlasting economy, a home where there may always be the necessities of life, but very few of the luxuries; a father and wery few of the huxuries; a father and mother who must continue in their same circumstances, a little trip now and then when there chances to be an excursion, and a husband who loves you, who denies himself for you and whom you in your turn love. Which shall it be?"

Without a moment's hesitation both of the young men answered, "The man you love."

Betty was twisting the chain of her satchel around her finger. She laugh-ed and shook her head when she heard

Frank laughed and looked at his watch.

Jack said nothing, but his face was very pale when Betty gave him her hand at the carriage door. Frank tried to coax him to change his mind, but Jack was firm, because Betty did not second the invitation. Just as the carriage door was about to be closed Bet ty leaned out.

"Oh, Mr. Winslow, I have decided to go to the Freeman dance Friday night." Then the carriage rolled away. When they arrived at Betty's home neither Frank Carlyle nor his companion saw the figure standing in the shadow of a tree on the opposite side of the street, and when Frank left Betty at the door and sprang again into his carriage Jack Winslow walked away with a sigh of

Friday night and the Freeman ball-came at last. Betty stood before her mirror looking at her reflection. The white mull gown, a gift from her aunt, who rarely gave her niece anything worth mentioning, was very becoming to the girl. She had arranged her hair after the style of Mr. Elfland's fameus picture, and she smiled as she looked at the change it made in her appear-

"If I weren't quite so pink and round I might look something like her, but she was pale and sad. Somehow I am not sad. I don't know why, but I feel happy, wonderfully happy." Turning away from the mirror, she was just about to wrap herself in her cloak when her sister entered the room, carrying two narrow, white boxes. Bet-ty dropped her cloak, took the boxes and, opening one of them, lifted out a deep, rich red rose, fresh and fragrant, proudly drooping its heavy head and filling the room with its odor. Betty ex-amined the box, but there was no card. Laying the rose upon the table and turning to the other box, she lifted from its depths a long stemmed, half blown pink rose, delicate and yet won-derfully sweet. This rose was also without a card.

"How strange," murmured the girl, "that they should both have had the same idea!" For a moment Betty stood silent. The two roses lay upon the table. Suddenly she heard her mother's voice calling to her that it was time to start. Wrapping her cloak about her, Betty turned and ran lightly down the stairs. A moment later the sound of carriage wheels rumbled along the street.

But the roses? There was only one rose now lying upon the table, only one, but its heavy perfume filled the whole room, and its heart glowed like a great ruby.

EUGENIE'S ESCAPE.

How the Empress Got Out of Franc After Sedan.

As soon as the hot headed citizens of Paris learned in September, 1870, that their emperor, Napoleon III., had sur rendered to the Prussians at Sedar these Parisians rose in a riotous mol and made posthaste for the Tuileries and plunder. The empress had to flee for her life, Assisted by the Austrian and Italian ministers, she made a hurried flight from the palace, but found back again and then out by a secret way into a side street, where they entered a carriage. A street gamin rec ognized the empress here, but the the boy's cry of warning was not

Once the carriage was stopped by mob, but the party alighted and man aged to escape. Finding themselves near the residence of Dr. Evans, the American dentist, they took refuge there, and the doctor took upon himself the responsibility of Empress Eugenie's safety. The empress put on a dress belonging to Mrs. Evans and, with Mme. Breton, her friend, was driven by Dr. Evans to he suburbs Dr. Evans explained that the women were a patient and her attendant whom he was taking to a sanitarium. Two days later the fugitives reached a coast town, whence they escaped to England.

Teeth and Temperament. "I don't suppose many people stop to think that the formation of their teeth said a dentist the other day.

"Did you ever see a person with long, narrow teeth who had not a very nervous, high strung temperament? Did you ever see a person with short, broad teeth who was not somewhat pringmatic and cheerful? A MINISTER TO VANITY.

Men and Women and Their Attitude

It is not always for the mere gratifi-cation of personal vanity that we should attentively study our mirrors. Socrates advised all young people to look often in their looking glass to ascertain if they were good looking; that if they were so they might strive to make their mental attainments corre-spond, and if they were not then they might endeavor by the superior accom-plishments of their minds to make up for their personal shortcomings.

This is excellent advice for vanity possessed moderns, but it is improbable that the high mental attitude of Socrates is appreciated by them. How the elaborate toilet of today could be accomplished without the aid of the mirror it is impossible to imagine. It is popularly supposed that the mirror is the woman's pet possession, but man is by no means averse to contemplatis by no means averse to contemplat-ing his manly charms as reflected there-in. A woman trankly confesses her in-terest in the alluring combination of glass and quicksliver, but the man, while volcing his scorn, proves his su-perior vanity by his concealed and se-cretive study of it. He jeers at his wife's cheval glass. But was anything more entirely provocative of human vanity ever invented than the many sided shaving glass?—London Chroni

RUSES OF BANKERS.

Devices Used to Either Gain Time or Inspire Confidence.

Some amusing anecdotes are told of the devices resorted to by bankers to gain time and inspire confidence. On one memorable occasion the excited subscribers, much to their indignation, were only able to enter the bank one by one except at the cost of spoiled coats, as the cute manager had caused the door posts to be freshly painted.

Another bank prevented a crisis in its affairs by exhibiting in the windows large tubs apparently brimful of sovereigns. These tubs, however, were simply upside down and a small quantity of gold only piled up on their botoms.

But the most ingenious dodge of all was successfully carried out in Buenos Ayres. There was a run on a large bank, and for several days subscriber besieged the premises, withdrawing money and placing it in another bank on the opposite side of the road. It happened, however, that these two institutions had a private understanding, and as fast as the "safe" bank receiv ed the deposits they were returned to the "unsafe" one by an underground passage, with the result that every one marveled at its continued ability to neet its demands.-London News

A CAMEL'S STOMACH.

In Four Compartments It Carries

The stomach of a camel is divided into no less than four compartments and the walls of one of these are lined with large cells, every one of which can be opened and closed at will by means of powerful muscles. Now, when a camel drinks it drinks very great deal. Indeed it goes drinking on for such a very long time that really you would think that it never meant to leave off. But the fact is that it is not only satisfying its thirst, but is filling up its cistern as well. One after another the cells in its stomach are filled with water, and as soon as each is quite full it is tightly closed. Then when the animal be-comes thirsty a few hours later all that it has to do is to open one of the cells and allow the water to flow out. Next day it opens one or two more cells, and so it goes, on day after day until the whole supply is exhausted. In this curious way a camel can live five or even six days without drinking at all and so is able to travel quite easily through the desert, where the wells are often hundreds of miles apart. Oath That Binds the Burmese. Perjury having been rife in Rangun courts because no form of oath existed which the Burman considered bind ing, the government prescribed a formula which is a queer admixture of Buddhism, Brahminism and Shamanism. Here are phrases from it, picked at random: "If an untruth passes my lips, may all the gnats that live in lakes, ponds and brooks and the gnats of the five great rivers of India destroy me. May curdled blood pass my lips rather than a lie, and may I die vomiting blood, my body bent in two."

A Canstie Retort.

Prince Herbert Bismarck had the reputation of having a decidedly brusque manner in society. Once at a royal reception he bumped roughly against an Italian prelate, who looked at him indignantly. "You evidently don't know who I am," said the German prince haughtly. "I am Herbert Bismarck."

"Oh," answered the prelate, "if that doesn't amount to an apology it is certainly a perfect explanation!" RAMES.

To Make Her Turn.

Mrs. Fondmar—Doctor, my daughter sits and gazes into that mirror for hours at a time. I can't get her to take exercise. Dr. Bruff—Well, I prescribe another mirror at the other end of the room.

It may interest women to know that the first jewelry store was started in the city of Changon about 3,000 years ago. The Celestial millionaires of that period knew nothing of the fascination of diamonds, because diamonds were not in vogue at that B. C. period.

Pearls and jade and coral and other uppolished mineral substances had to content them, and as if to make good the glitter of rivieres and tlaras the princesses of Changon employed arti-sans to fashion them the most wonderful gold and silver ornaments, which in themselves were far more costly than diamonds.

Books and Their Making. "At present the American people are divided into two classes," said the head of a well known publishing house in New York, "those who forget to read and those who read to forget. A book was formerly a thing put aside to be read, but now it is a thing read to pe put aside. I am not sure which the better both for us bookmakers and the public, but it is certainly a fact that bookmaking is now a manufac-ture, while it used to be a science."

THE SPY SYSTEM.

It Is the Very Soul of the Govern-

Russia is pre-eminently the land of spies. In Moscow in the streets agents of the police are stationed every 500 yards. In addition secret agents watch the houses day and night, one being allotted to every four houses, and in every house is another spy—the porter. Go where you will, you are never out of the watchful eye of the police. You brush against spies in your hotel, as in the theaters; in a restaurant, as in the drawing room of a friend. It is ridiculously easy to recognize those you meet in the fashionable resorts. They have evidently been instructed to disguise themselves as gentlemen, and for one of them the livery of a gentleman is a frock coat, a silk hat and always, by rain or sunlight, an umbrella. The famous third police! A stranger might fancy that in an open cab, talking French or English to his friend, he would at least be safe from surveil-lance. But his friend will touch him significantly and speak of the weather. The fat cabby on the box, somnolent with white hair and good paternal eyes, may be a spy more skilled in the languages than the traveling stranger, and if the cabman has been found loitering near the great clubs, the ho-tels or the embassies the chances are strong that he is. A subtler police than that of the third section—the akrana, which has its ramifications in every capital in Europe and America—com pletes this great system of espionage Its mesh is over every man in Russia.

THE MAKING OF PENCILS.

re Raw Material Comes From and w it is Manufactured Into Article of Commerce.

Article of Commerce.

Lead pencils are not made of lead. The first pencils were lead and had a right to the name. A stick of lead was originally used for making marks upon paper and wood. The name has been retained, though to-day all the pencils are filled with graphite or plumbago. This mineral is rather scarce, for it is found in but few places—Cumberland, Raigland, along the Laurentian ranges in the Province of Quebec, and at Ticonderoga, Vermont.

Nowadays the mineral is taken from the mines in the lump and carried to the reducing mill, where it is pulverized in stamp mills under water. This dust is collected, packed in barrels and sent to the factories, where thousands of pencils are made every day. This pulverized graphite is so fine that it is really dust, dingry in color and smooth and oily to the touch. It is divided into tarious grades of fineness by floating it on water from one tank to another. The coarse dust sinks to the bottom of the first tank, the next finer to the bottom of the second tank, and so on down the line, the finest powder for the finest pencils settling in the last tank.

Different grades of pencils from very soft to extra hard are obtained by mixing the graphite with German pipe clay, which is floated in a series of tanks in the same way. The finest clay is mixed with the finest graphite, being ground together with stones, and the hardness of the pencils is secured by increasing the proportion of clay in the mixture, After the graphite and clay are mixed together with stones, and the hardness of the pencils is secured by increasing the proportion of clay in the mixture, After the graphite and clay are mixed together with stones, and the hardness of the pencils is secured by increasing the proportion of clay in the mixture, after the graphite and clay are mixed together the mixture is put in canvas hags and the water is squeezed out by means of an hydraulic press, leaving a mass the consistency of putty. during the Thirty Tears war, but until quite recently the method was used on a very small scale.

Now, by the method invented by the Austrian Joseph Phister in 1901, the wood is colored when fresh. The tree is cut while the sap is in action, and in the coloring process the dye is forced under heavy pressure into the wood and replaces the sap. The manufacturers can color to a length of thirteen feet.

Birch, beech, alder, maple, elm and basswood are the best kinds of wood for the purpose. Oak is not good on account of the tannic acid, and in spruce and pine the color cannot be made uniform.

A New Theory of Sleep.

An interesting and novel theory of sleep has recently been put forward by Dr. Claparede, a French scientist, who holds that sleep is a positive function or an instinct designed to arrest functioning. Dr. Claparede makes the assertion that we sleep not because we are intoxicated or exhausted, but in order to avoid such conditions. Not only are there various kinds and degrees of sleep, but it uoes not slavays follow exhaustion. Furthermore, it is well known that sleep is not propertional to the degree of exhaustion, and it may be either total or partial. In measuring the profoundness of sleep various conditions are encountered which are not susceptible of explantition on the toxic theory, but which agree perfectly with the hypothesis that it is a positive nervous function. The definition of sleep, according to this new theory, is a reaction produced by various excitants and is an inhibition which 'manifests tiself subjectively by a lack of interest in exterior things.

By forming letters into words we are able to embody thought, to render it visible, audible, perpetual and ubiquitous. Embalmed in writing, the intellect may thus enjoy a species of immortality upon earth, and every man may paint an imperishable portrait of his ewn mind immeasurably more instructive and interesting to posterity than those fleeting likenesses of face and form in trusted to canvas or even to bronze and marble. THE LIGHT BRIGADE,

How the Six Hundred Rode Into the Jaws of Death,

Sergeant Macauley, who died on Jan., gave this account of Balaklava: On the morning of Balaklava I was in a tent with eight comrades, and only two of them returned at night. I rode through the charge on the left file but one, the outside man being called Hermoment or two after my right hand man had his head taken clean off by a round shot. His trunk kept upright on the horse for several yards and thea fell over near me. Men and horses now fell over near me. Men and horses now began to fall very fast, and we galloped as hard as ever we could.

We got among the guns at last, and if it was a proud moment for us the feeling was short lived. We fully ex-pected to be supported, but when the smoke cleared we discovered that what we took for British troops were in re-ality Russian cavalry. They came for us in a perfect cloud, and we faced about and rushed right into them. There was an awful clash of swords, and almost before we could realize it we had cut right through them. This opened a passage for the remainder of the brigade and was the only real bit of fighting we had. The other was only

HE CONSULTED BACON.

Why Andrew Jackson Fought His

It was Andrew Jackson's habit to carry in his saddlebags when he at-tended court a copy of "Bacon's Abridgment" and to make frequent appeals to it in his cases. This precious book was always carefully done up in coarse brown paper, and the unwrap-ping of the volume was a very solemn function as performed by Jackson, who was then only twenty-one years old. Colonel Avery during the trial which preceded the duel between himself and Jackson procured a piece of bacon the size of the book, and while Jackson was addressing the court he slipped out the volume from its wrapping and substituted the bit of pork. At length Jackson had occasion to appeal to Lord Bacon. While still talking he raised the bearskin flap of his saddlebags, drew out the brown paper package, carefully untied the string, unfolded the paper with decorous gravity and without looking at what he held in his hand, exclaimed triumphantly, "We will now see what Bacon says! What wonder that the fiery young lawyer blazed with anger, while the courtroom rang with laughter at his expense and that he afterward challenged Colonel Avery.

WATCHMAKING.

There Are Eighty Separate Opera-tions Upon a Balance Wheel.

M. Favre-Peret, who investigated the watchmaking industry in the New Engwatchmaking industry in the New Eng-land states some years ago, stated that the average production of 40,000 work-men in Switzerland was forty watches each per annum, while in America the average was 150 fine watches for each man employed.

By the aid of special machines in these watch factories one man can make 1,300 line screws per day, some of which are so small that more than 100,000 are required to weigh a pound. One of the finest pieces made is a "pallet arbor," or pivotal bolt, which for a small sized watch has a thread of 200 to the inch, weighs 1-130,000 of a nound, undergoes 25 operations and a pound, undergoes 25 operations and costs but 2¼ cents. Measurements are gauged to 1-25,000 of an inch.

The balance wheel, after being machined, weighs only 7 grains and when fitted with 16 gold acrews weighs 7.2 grains. There are 80 separate operations upon a balance wheel, 66 of them being drilling, threading and counter-sinking holes. The drills revolve at a speed of 4,800 turns a minute, and one operator can drill upward of 2,200 holes for the balance wheels per day.—Annals of American Academy.

Paris' Octrio Duty.

The octrio duty, so familiar to all in Paris, is an import precisely similar in principle and practice to the customs duty paid on goods entering a foreign country. You go out of Paris for the day to visita friend who has a charming garden in the suburbs, and he hospitably loads you on your departure with new potatoes, peas and fresh salad. When you reach Paris there is, whether you arrive by rall or road, a functionary who wants to know "what you've got there," and unless it be of a very trifling sort you will have to pay a percentage on its esteemed value,

"I am afraid you are one of those people who look down on toll."
"Not at all," answered the inxurions youth. "My great-great-grandfather worked hard and invested his money, and we are quite pleased with him for doing so."

The Main Point.

The Painter—Yes, sir; I can promise to have your house finished in two weeks. Von Blumer—But that isn't the point. The Painter—Then what is it? Von Blumer—I want to know how long it is going to take you.

A Safficient Guide.

"If a man will learn the Ten Commandments by heart," said Uncle Eben, "he don't need none o' deshere two dollar books about how to live right an' prosper."

SECOND RENAISSANCE.

Another Revival of Art, It is Claim-ed, is Needed. ed, Is Needed.

In order to reform our present stereotyped methods of art we want a second renaissance. For long years we have done nothing but turn out from our colleges young men stuffed with useless scientific inniber, and they very quickly lose it all, and there is nothing to take its place. This is not to be wondered at when throughout Europe there is such a neglect of art in our education. It may be replied to me that the inventions of science compensate for the deficiency, but these inventions are almost exclusively if not quite a mere increase in the power of the bodily senses and faculties—the telegraph in that of the tongue, the telephone in that of the ear, the railway in that of the legs, the photographic science in that of the eye-and these inventions leave in ignorance the more intellectual part of the individual. Your portrait can be taken, your voice boxed up-this is extraordinary—but the soul which commands, the god which is in the head, is forgotten.

And yet the means for altering this state of things is near at hand, is be-neath our eyes. We have still the same nature that inspired those anonymous sculptors to give us the Gothic; we still have a sufficient number of Gothic masterpieces intact-so many epitome of nature, as I have said—to show what can be done by the man who starts with his vision open to her teaching.—Auguste Rodin in North American Review.

The climate of Australia is the chief factor in fashioning Australian polities . If it is advanced it is because the sun there has forced an early de velopment. Girls here reach maturity two or three years earlier than in America, and countries count by generations. Meanwhile perpetual summer and continual sunlight are sapping individual energies. Even the Ameri can who comes here soon finds that sustained hustling is a physical impossibility. Let him spend three or four years in the country, and he will cease to wonder at the laws for an eight hour day and the early closing of shops. The winter is only another summer cooler, it is true, but not cold enough to be invigorating.—Burriss Graham in Booklover's Magazine.

A North Carolina lawyer was trying a case before a jury, being counsel for the prisoner, a man charged with mak-ing "mountain dew," The judge was very hard on him, and the jury brought in a verdict of guilty. The lawyer moved for a new trial. The judge denied the motion and remarked. "The court and the jury think the prisoner a knave and a fool." After a moment's silence the lawyer answered: "The prisoner wishes me to say that he is perfectly satisfied. He has been tried by a court and a jury of his peers."

A Deadly Retort Elizabeth confronted Mary Stuart. "My mind is made up," she remark

"So do you," replied the captive queen as she gazed on the Titian tresses.

Considering bonors were even, the

"Yes," said the conceited bore, "she was quite frigid when I called, but she became more pleasant the longer I stayed."

"I understand," replied Miss Pep prey; "the longer you stayed the near er approached the time of your de-

THAT DISTANT HILL.

Do Not Attempt to Climb It Until You Come to It. Never climb a hill until you get to it, advises a writer in Medical Talk For the Home. We remember as children that in riding through the country we we saw far ahead of us on the road a formidable looking hill. How high and rough and steep its looked, and how we feared it? How hard it would be for the horse to carry us up such a hill? We were sure he would slip and fall and maybe upset the carriage, and so, with the greatest apprehension, we would approach the dreadful bill. But how surprised we were as we came nearer to find the hill receding, growing flatter and really not a hill at all when we reached the point that seemed so high and craggy and dangerous? So it is with many of life's perplexities. How darkly they loom up before us! What a black pall they spread around us? But when we get close up to them they have vanished entirely. We spoil so much of life in fear and foreboding. We let slip the beautiful moments that are ours and spoil them by dreading the moments of the fuure with which we have nothing to do. forgetting its beauty, unmindful of its delight, dreading the hill that never EGGS AS FOOD.

Why They are Valuable as a Diet For the Siek. Eggs without doubt stand next to milk in available food material for the sick, as they are easily digested and absick, as they are easily digested and absorbed if raw or properly prepared. Physiological chemists tell us that 97 per cent of the albumen and 94 per cent of the fat are absorbed into the blood stream. These same chemists tell us that eggs are a complete food for all young mammals, as they contain in correct proportion the tissue building material, in form of albumen (white) and mineral matter, in the form of phosphorus, lime, potassium, iron and sulphur; the heat and energy material in the form of oil (fat) in the yolk, and a large amount of pure water.

Owing to the lack of starch and sugar an egg cannot be called a complete food for the adult; hence bread, rice or some other starchy food must be served with eggs. To render the food complete the sick must be fed as children are—that is, with foods that are easily and quickly digested and absorbed, for the digestive organs are always weak. Eggs therefore are among the most valuable of foods for this purpose,

Jennie was thoroughly incompetent Mrs. Smith discharged her and did her own housework. She first cleaned the kitchen. The cupboard under the sink looked better and smelled sweeter-for a time. But why have a dark cupboard under the sink to invite dirt and dis

How greasy Jennie left the cooking vessels! How disheartening, standing in that dark corner washing them! Possibly a flood of sunlight right there would have shown Jennie the dirt and given her courage to wash it away. Might it not have warmed her heart, too, moving her to handle the china

It may be possible to keep a dark and gloomy kitchen clean and to prepare a wholecome, appetizing meal in such a kitchen, but at what a cost! Is it not safe to say that Jennie will give better service if she have plenty of light in the right places?

I speak advisedly when I say the easier and pleasanter your servant's task the better it will be performed. task the better it will be performed.

If you could but view the situation from the inside, I feel you would agree with me and contrive to have ample light in the kitchen and give some intelligent thought to the placing of windows and artificial lights in this important room.

UNITED STATES EXILES

HOW GAYNOR AND GREENE LIVE IN EXILE IN CANADA

The Quebec correspondent of The New York Herald writes as follows of the famous fugitives from the United States, Messrs. Gaynor and Greene, who live in the Ancient Capital:

In a narrow little street two blocks away from the Chateau Frontenac lives a famous American ealighor whom two great nations have been conducting a legal tug of war for nearly three years—a man whose movements are closely watched by American Secret Service men—and should this man cross the mere ribbon of water that separates him from friends, home and country, the mysterious strangers who always are on his heels would tap him on the shoulder and inform him that he was their prisoner. This man is Codunel John F. Gaynor, of Syracuse, wanted by the United States Covernment for alleged frauds committed while he and Benjamin D. Greene, who is his partner in exile, had charge of contract work in Savannah Harbor. Gaynor is the more picturesque-figure of the two and nearly every Ameri-Gaynor is the more picturesque figure of the two and nearly every American visitor to Quebec inquires for him during a visit here.

"His dog, Derry."

McDermott's answers to the two questions state clearly Gaynor's mode of living, and the fact that Derry, a very intelligent Irish setter, is the Colonel's inseparable companion bears out the statement that the dog is his best friend. To a friend Gaynor said:

"My dog is my best friend. He is a remarkable animal. I am never without his company. He is human. He can scent trouble the moment it thrusts its dark face in my home. Derry knows when a man comes on an errand that is unpleasant. He will have a sad look in his eyes and he will appear downcast and troubled. Everywhere I go Derry is with me—my boon companion."

Extles De Net Speak. Extles Do Not Speak.

Colonel Gaynor lives at No. 21 Mont Carmel street with his wife and mother-in-law. They have two scr-vants. Greene lives with his wife at No. 31 Mont Carmel street, five doors from the Gaynors. The families are not on speaking terms. Gaynor and Greene have been at odds for about two years and they speak only when some matter in reference to their case comes up.

when some matter in reference to their case comes up.

Colonel Gaynor's home is splendidly furnishes. Many of the articles of furniture came from his home in Syracuse. He has all of the comforts of a good home, but most of his time is spent in the cafe of the Chatean Frontenac with a company of convivial friends who always assemble in the lettel evenings and apend their time assisting the "Little American Colonel" in perpetuating some practical loke or Joshing the "town guy." Greene visits the Chateau only a few times a week and then it is to go to the barber shop.

and then it is to go to the barber shop.

Colonel Gaynor furnishes much amusement for the Canadians, for he loves to have fun at the expense of some one else. His overindulgence in practical loking was the cause of the row with Greene.

One afternoon Gaynor was in the cate of the Chateau with friends. During the course of the conversation Greene's name came up for discussion. Gaynor made some uncompassion.

If it is a friend he greets him with a smile and a "How are you?" and Derry wags his tail, but if it is a stranger in the city the Colonel gives him a searching glance and asks a friend in a low tone who the stranger is. Not until he learns his name and his business is the Colonel satisfied.

Greene, too, manifests a deep concern in every stranger who comes to Quebec. He is not as nervous a man as Gaynor, but when he meets a stranger in the city he takes pains to learn who he is.

Referring to the possibility of the exiles being sent back to the United States, one of the firm of lawyers representing Gaynor and Greene, said. "There is not any too friendly feeling existing between this country and America. This was caused by the Alaskan boundary decision. Other matters since then have added to the bitter feeling. We know that England wants to be on very friendly terms with America and will do many things to cement that feeling, even though she has to hit Canada to show America that the two countries should be bound by close ties of friendship. England has given Canada the worst of it two or three times in order to do a favor for America. We know this, and here is where politics may figure in the Gaynor-Greene case.

where politics may figure in the Gaysor-Greene case.

"The two exiles are residents of Canada and have been for nearly three years. The United States Government is pursuing them unrelentingly. Gaynor and Greene are closely watched and will be as long as they are in this country. The Canadian Government refuses to turn over the fugitives to the American Government officers and now counsel for the United States takes the case to the Privy Council of England for the purpose of getting a reversal of judgment of the writ of habeas corpus issued in behalf of the two men.

ment Clesing of Deckyard as Halifax.

Without warning has come the announcement that the Halifax dockyard is to be closed by the British Admiralty, and also without intimation that it will be ever re-opened. Rumor is busy with explanations of this surprising step, and with predictions for the future. It is extremely probable that the present relations between Great Britain and the United States, which render war in that quarter almost intonceivable, have urged Sir John Fisher along the line he has taken.

The place is equipped with up-to-date machine shops. It has extensive warehouses, coal sheds, and magazines, and at its piers the greatest battleships and cruisers can find moorings. The departments which are operated within the dockyard, besides the machine shops, include the boatswain's, whose men see to buoys and moorings in the harbor and at the warrys; the works, with a staff of men dayoting their whole time to the maintenance of the various builds. the maintenance of the various furifications and wharves therein, or the construction of new; the riggers, kept employed at appropriate work, and the stores. There are large corps of clerks and writers in the various offices, some of whom are "on the establishment" and many of whom are not."

Largest Bock as the Continent.

The graving dock is the largest on this continent, being capable of receiving the biggest man-o-war. More than once American ships have been received and overshauled there. It is 585 feet in length, 871 feet wide at the entrance, and there is 30 feet of water in the sills. Some of the property, it is reported, will be secured for the Intercolonial Railway, should the dockyard be formally abandoned, for the road has been seriously hampered for want of space; but though this aspect of the case is the silver lining in the cloud, it is a cloud, indeed, that has settled over the Camadian Gibraltar.

Tomato Growers Co-Operate.

St. Catharines, March 7.—The tomato growers of Niagara District have practically won in their fight for higher prices with the Amalgemated Canners' Company, which owns most of the canning factories in the country. The refusal of Amalgamated to make contracts with the growers at 30 cents a bushel instead of 25 cents, as hitherto, has had the effect of causing many private canning companies to be formed and new canning factories are to be built in all parts of the district this coming season. These factories will pay 30 cents a bushel for tomatoes and will look after the entire output of the peninguia. What does it profit a woman if she gain the whole world of knowledge and lose her own health? Young women students, and school teachers, eager, ambitions, and full of energy, very often neglect their health in, the struggle to gain education. They feat insufficient food, and at irregular hours, they allow irregulantly of the womanly functions to be established, and the result is that they become shronic invalids with all their education practically worthless. There is a plain road back to health for such as these, marked by the feet of thousands. It is the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for diseases of the stomach and digestive and nutritive ergans, and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for diseases of the delicate organs of womanhood. A cure so certainly follows the use of these remedies that out of hundreds of thousands who have tried the freatment, ninety-eight in every hundred have been perfectly and permanently sured. The Government withdrew its advertisements and its printing contracts, but The Times went on its incorruptible way. It made Cabinets and broke them, exposed plots and averted them. At least once, at a cost of £5,000, The Times nipped in the bud an international conspiracy which might have ruines half the banks in Europe, and there are two scholarships in London schools endowed by a thanksgiving fund then raised by The Times. When the railway mania was at its highest. The Times sacrificed a fortune in advertisements by denouncing the spirit of recklessness which was abroad, and neither the penalties of the law, the enmities of statesmen, nor the loss of revenues has availed against the fearless determination of The Times to say the thing it thinks.

Jealous of Motke, and perhaps honestly detesting his flendish conspiracy against a conquered foe rapidly regaining her strength, Prince Bismarck let Blowitz know, and Blowitz, the Paris acho of the Voice of Europe, told it to the world. Those who remember the middle seventies remember yet the effect of the thunderbolt which The Times hurled against Count won Motke.

The Times has missed its chance sometimes. In 1892 its editor received a long letter forecasting the alliance of Russia and France, but, as nobody but the writer seemed to believe it, the editor kept it back—until 1897, when it announced, with the rest of the papers, that the Franco-Russian alliance was an established fact. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Shakespearean commentators have wondered why the poet placed the scenes of "Hamlet" at Elsinore, in the Island of Zecland, whereas the Danish Prince lived and died in Jutiand. But recently the municipal authorities at Elsinore have discovered in their archives that an English companity was acting in their town in 1587 or 1588, and among the names of the actors are several of those who were acting with Shakespeare in London in 1589. Obviously, these actors must have talked about their adventures in Jenmark, and se Shakespeare became well acquainted with Elsinore, and when he wrote "Hamlet" naturally placed the scens in a place which he knew by description rather than in a place of which he knew nothing. Shakespeare's Hamlet, A Princess' Hockey Team.

Once the daughters of the Duch-ass of Connaught were voted intoler-ably slow and shy, says a society writer in The Liverpool Post, but in the cheery atmosphere of Ireland writer in The Liverpool Post, but in the cheery atmosphere of Ireland they have developed, and are new as lively and vivacious as was Princess Charles of Dermark. Indeed, the reyal family are chaffing the two girls on the subject, but it is not easy to get the better of Princess Margaret in a verbal bout. She announces that she is going to collect a brilliant hockey team for next winter, not only from the patrician, but from the skilled point of view.

that The Times is part of British civilization, says a writer in The Daily Mail. For a hundred years it has belonged, with the Established Church and the British Constitution, to the historic greatness of the race.

"You cannot buy The Times," its editor proudly said when a powerful man sought to stlence its thunder, and the words might well be written in letters of gold across the portal of Printing House square.

It has been so from the beginning. The Times was a child of four when its founder, the first John Walter, was put into jail for censuring the buke of York. But they could not imprison The Times, and even while John Walter was in Newgate he was sentenced again for severely criticizing the Prince of Wales and accusing the Duke of Clarence of leaving his ship without leave.

The Government withdrew its advertisements and its printing contracts, but The Times went on its incorruptible way. It made Cabinets and broke them, exposed plots and averted them. At least once, at a cost of £5,000, The Times nipped in the banks in Europe, and there are two scholarships in London schools endowed by a thanksgiving fund then without leave.

Toronto, March 9.—O. A. Howland, K.C., C. M. G., died shortly after 1 o'clock this morning at his residence. 55 Isabella Street. He had been sinking steadily for several days, and only his spiendid physique sustained him through such a lengthened critical period. Mr. Howland was a sufferer from Bright's disease, to which was added an attack of heart trouble.

No funeral arrangements have been made, but it will likely take place to-morrow externoon, and will be of a public or semi-public character.

Skatch of His Career.

S. Howland. There the deceased author and legislator was born on April 18, 1847, having at his death almost completed his 58th year.

Mr. Howland received his primary education at Upper Canada College, afterwards attending the Toronto Model Grammar School, and being graduated from the University of Toronto. He then began the study of law in the office of the late Chief Justice Cameron, and was admitted to practice in 1876, since which time he has resided in Toronto. He was elected Vice-President of the Canadan Bar Association in 1838, and appointed one of Her Majesty's Counsel learned in the law by Sir Charles Tupper in the same year. He later appeared before the Privy Council on numerous occasions, achieving much fame through his connection with the case of Langtry vs. Du Moulin and other important actions.

In Politics.

In 1834 he entered political life, and was returned in the Conservative interest at the general election as member for South Toronto in the Provincial House by a majority of 2,079 over Hon. Charles Moss, now Chief Justice of Ontario. His tuste, however, turned toward literature and scientific investigation, and of late years he devoted himself almost entirely to such work.

In Givic Affairs.

His deep interest in municipal matters led to his selection as president of the International Deep Waterways Association in 1844, to which he was reelected in Cleveland in the following year. In 1896 he was appointed Commissioner for Great Britain and Canada to report on the subject of deep waterways and lake levels. In 1901-2 he was elected Mayor of Toronto, being defeated in 4992 by the present incumbent. During his first term he inaugurated the movement for a union of Canadian municipalities, for the purpose of influencing legislation infringing understand in 1992 hy the present incumbent. During Mr. Howaldn's first term as Myaor, the Duke and Duchess of York made their tour of Canada, and he was honored by being created Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

As a Writer.

His earlier literary efforts were "The Irish Problem" (1887) and "The New Empire" (1891). He also became well known as a contributor to The Week, The Canadian Magazine and The Barrister, and as a reviewer of works on history and travel. In "The New Empire," in 1891, he first advocated an international court for the settlement of all questions that might arise between the people and Governments of the United States and the British Empire, His proposition was adopted as the basis of the treaty agreed upon in 1897 by Lord Sallsbury and President Cleveland. CANADA TAKES DOCKYARDS.

Fits into Scheme for Establishment of Naval Militia.

Ottawa, March 9.—(Globe Special.)—From what can be learned, the Imperial Government is willing that Canada should take over the dockyards at Hallfax as well as the fortifications. The dockyards will be useful in connection with the scheme for the establishment of a naval militia.

At some of the English naval centres, they have what are termed naval barracks. The same thing will be possible in Halifax when the Imperial authorities move out. There is accommodation at Halifax for 200 seamen, or just about the number to be enrolled under Mr. Prefontaine's naval militia bill.

In connection with the change of management of fortifications, it appears that Canada will provide the pay of those imperial troops who have to remain until those trained Canadian soldiers are available to take their places.
