The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▽ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▽ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. ## PREFACE

SOME three years ago I made a suggestion to the Committee of the Society of Authors that it should compile a standard guide for spelling, capitalization, punctuation, the use of italic type, etc., as the best guide known to me—Mr. Horace Hart's “Rules for Compositors and Readers at the University Press, Oxford”—was not altogether in accordance with the practice of many of our best printers, and, being intended for compositors and readers only, was not sufficiently complete for authors.

At the request of the Committee, I sketched the outlines of the work I had suggested, and they were published in “The Author” in 1890. The Committee subsequently decided not to undertake the compilation.

The publication of the sketches had, however, brought me so many letters from authors, printers, and others, as to the value of such a work, that I decided to undertake it myself. After daily labour—so far as health permitted—for two years and a half, the work is finished.

One of the chief inducements which led me to undertake and to continue this work was the encouragement of my late dear friend, Mr. Spencer, who most willingly helped me, though his health lasted.

A sketch of the way in which the work was compiled may be of interest. Every volume in the following list of “Authorities Consulted” was read through, and all suitable words, forms, etc., were copied on to separate slips. These were then arranged alphabetically, duplicates eliminated, and the manuscript copy made. With this my duties as Author ceased, and those of Editor commenced.

PREFACE

for from that time I merely co-ordinated the opinions of others upon my work. The manuscript was first sent to the Oxford printer for revision. When I had settled the resulting queries, the copy was set up, and a first proof pulled and submitted to those three of my kind critical helpers to whose names, in the list which follows this Preface, the figure 1 is appended. On the return of these proofs I co-ordinated the criticisms upon them, and then had fifty proofs struck off, one being sent to each of those whose names are followed by the figure 2. Their queries were adjusted, and then a third proof was pulled, which was again criticized by the twenty-two whose names are followed by the figure 3. From this stage the many remaining revision were undertaken at the Oxford University Press and by myself.

In the selection of words, my object has been to insert only those, spelt in more than one way, which are likely to be met with in general reading: to deal, in fact, with what are briefly called "duplicate spellings." I was compelled to omit many special, unusual, or technical, words and phrases, so that the book might be handy in size, for which reason it is purposely printed on thin paper.

That manuscript additions may be readily made, I have included after each letter one or two blank pages headed "Notes." To facilitate future reference all such additions should have some reference mark—such as, at least, an arrow or caret mark—in the text where they would have been placed had they been printed with the work.

Where a choice has been made between two or more forms of any word, it should not be concluded that I consider the other forms wrong, but merely that the weight of evidence has led me to select the one given. Some critics may say "Then why not retain both forms, as neither is wrong?" The reason is simple, but experience shows me that it needs pointing out. If both forms are retained, half a book that is being composed may be read by a proof-reader who uses one spelling of the word, and then - owing perhaps to illness the second half passes through the hands of a reader who prefers the other spelling of the word. Consequently, when the book is finished, the same word will be spelt in two ways: one way in the first half, the other in the second. Hence the necessity in such a guide as this of giving one form only. Again, it may be thought that in the case of "duplicate spellings" both the word adopted and the word rejected should be spelt in full. I have, however, as a rule given only that part of the word which differs, as I have found that the meaning is more quickly grasped than when the whole word has to be read through.

Many foreign words and phrases are included on account of the frequent mistakes that are made with the accents. The translations given are usually free ones; literal renderings being generally omitted as often obvious, and as less practically useful. In a few cases an endeavour has been made to correct popular misapprehensions: thus "eui bono?" does not, except in modern incorrect usage, mean "What is the good of it?" I have also added the pronunciation of some words which are frequently mispronounced. A cursory glance through the book will reveal other special features on which it is unnecessary to dwell: such as the sizes of type, books, and paper; the explanation of printing terms; punctuation; and the spelling of place-names.

That more than twenty thousand separate entries, containing more than one hundred thousand words, and many of these not easily spelt, should have survived without any error, is more than can be hoped for. Notices of error will be gratefully received if addressed to me, at the office of the publisher, Amen Corner, London, E.C. Should the spelling of any catchword in clarendon type differ from a spelling of it in the text, the former should be considered correct.

With regard to any principles stated in these pages, I may say that there has been almost invariably a considerable majority in favour of those selected. One of the most disputed points has been whether there should be an e, or not, before the -ment, in such words as abridgment, judgment, lodgment, and so forth. My reason for deciding to omit this e is that it is unnecessary for the purposes of pronunciation, and is not needful, as some assert, to give the g its sound of j, for this comes from the preceding d. It may be of interest here to point out that in the writings of Locke, Addison, Milton, Pope, Sir Leslie Stephen, and one may almost say all the standard writers, the e is omitted.

Another disputed point, and one on which feelings were very strongly expressed, was whether such abbreviations of the names of counties as Herts and Salop, etc., should, or should not, be followed by the full stop. I had to decide in accordance with the majority and say, Use no point, although I myself have always used and prefer it.

Professor Skeat has very kindly sent me an interesting note which may be appropriately inserted here: "But is 'connection' right? It is connexion in French, and in the 'Oxford English Dictionary,' and connexio in Latin. It depends on the two following rules of Latin orthography: (1) If the Latin root ends with a single consonant, as c or g, then the derived noun has ct. Example, fac- : faction, affection, defection, etc. (2) But if the root ends in a double consonant, as ct, then the derived noun has x. Example, nect- : connexion; flect- : flexion, flexus. Noun fluct-us, from flu- (with -ct added)—fluxion. But -flig- : affliction, as in (1)."

It has been a great advantage to have had the proofs read by natives of other countries than

PREFACE

England, for they have not only checked the words in their own language, but have also shown where, while the meaning was clear to an Englishman, it was not necessarily so to a foreigner.

The question as to the use of capital or small initial letters for many words was a constant source of trouble during the preparation of the book, for no English authority—not even the “Oxford English Dictionary”—seems specially to have dealt with this point. All the large American dictionaries, and one which will soon be published, deal adequately with this matter; but, unfortunately, American custom in this respect differs considerably from English. As I am referring to dictionaries, it may not be out of place to mention a curiosity of copyright law. I have only been able to make the use I have made of the “Oxford English Dictionary” by entering into an agreement, having several conditions, with the Delegates of the University Press, and by payment of a more or less nominal fee; and this although my work has been for the benefit rather of literary workers than of myself. In an American work exactly the same use of the Oxford dictionary has been made without any agreement or payment.

Many criticisms may be passed on the different treatment of nearly allied words in the following pages: why one should be hyphenated and the other not; or why one should be in italic type and the other in roman. May I, however, point out that the present is not an attempt to rationalize the English language, but merely an endeavour to represent the language as it is now used by the people most capable of writing it?

Taking next the vexed question of the use of italic type, the longer I have been engaged upon this book the more I have felt that italic could be abolished, without leading to error, except for the purpose of emphasis, and for distinguishing such

English and foreign words as are spelt alike but have different meanings, as the English pension, an allowance, and the French pension, a boarding-house. It is quite open to question whether any foreign words or phrases, except these homonyms, are understood or grasped in any way more quickly when they are printed in italic than when they appear in the usual roman type. Does it matter to anyone, so far as regards mere apprehension, whether, for example, “au revoir” or “savant” is printed in italic or roman? The omission of italic type from the books and newspapers set up by the linotype machine (which usually has no italic fount) shows that the benefit of italic is largely imaginary. Its use has been retained in the following pages as, in the “attempt to codify the best typographical practices of the present day”, it seemed needful to do so, although it may not be really necessary.

A few observations are called for with reference to the general adoption throughout the book of the suffix -ize in place of -ise; though the latter is much used. The main reason is, that -ize is the form adopted by the Editors of the “Oxford English Dictionary”—the best authority in England upon such a matter. The admirable letter which Mr. Spencer wrote to me about this question will interest many, and its introduction here needs no apology:—

“Dear Collins,—By all means stand up for the Rules [of Mr. Hart] in respect of the use of z in place of s wherever the sound dictates it. You may, if you like, quote me as saying that our language is irrationally unphonetic still, and this is done wherever s is used in place of z in such words as ‘authorize’ and ‘apologize.’ To spell these as though they were pronounced ‘authorice’ and ‘apologice’ when we have actually the letter which conveys the right sound is simply a retrograde movement; and the Clarendon Press ‘Rules’ are to be approved for adhering to the z, and should indeed extend its use. I always make my own printer substitute the z for the s wherever it is possible. Truly yours, Herbert Spencer."

To this letter may be appropriately added a quotation from Professor Skeat—"The suffix -ize is both Greek and phonetic, and much to be preferred if we are to have uniformity. The suffix -ise is French."

The general rule for the division of words—"Never separate a group of letters representing a single sound; and so divide a word that each part retains its present sound"—is the result of a large correspondence on this one point alone. Contrary to what might be supposed, the greater the knowledge of etymology possessed by the writer, the more he would seem to favour this division by sound. As this matter has at first to be dealt with by the compositor alone—for the author cannot tell when writing the copy what word will need division—it is singularly fortunate that so easy a rule, requiring no etymological knowledge, can be framed. The case for the phonetic division of words has been so ably put by Professor Skeat that it is here added:—"The rule for the division of words is not 'the rule of the root' by any means, but the rule of the sound or pronunciation. It is much best to ignore the root and go by the sound. Thus it is usual to make such divisions as are seen in impu-dence, solilo-quize, peru-sal, counte-nance, plea-sure, princi-pal; in perfect contempt of the root-forms, which are respectively pud-, loqu-, us-, ten-, plac-, cap-. We simply regard the utterance, writing pe-ruse at one moment and pe-ru-sal at another. Nothing is gained by pretending to keep the root intact, when the spoken utterance does nothing of the kind."

Just a few words on the preparation of manuscript for printing. A very distinguished etymologist concludes a long letter to me with a paragraph which he has allowed me to quote; it is as follows:—

"There is one rule to be observed, which you do not notice, though it is of supreme importance : and that is, that the author shall present his copy in such a state as to be easily legible. There is a tradition among some authors that a crabbed writing is given to a clever compositor, and therefore one ought to write badly. The gross selfishness of this is simply shameful, and deserves entire reprobation. A man who is a gentleman will make his copy legible for the express purpose of enabling the compositor to earn more wages (and to save his eyesight). On this account I have carefully cultivated a rather coarse kind of writing, which I use especially for press-copy. It may not look æsthetic, but I defy anyone to misread it. Of course, in letters one is not quite so careful : but here also it is highly desirable." Even for his own sake an author should write legibly, for bad copy invariably results in increased cost and in delay, besides greatly multiplying the chances of error.

A great deal of delay, trouble, and expense, to all concerned in the making of a book, may be saved if the author will have his manuscript revised by the proof-reader before it is given to the compositors to be set up in type. This plan is not of course customary, but I know of at least one firm of printers who, having given this plan a trial, found the result so successful, that now every manuscript sent to them is revised by their proof-readers before it is composed.

I cannot close without referring to the voluntary assistance which has been given me during the compilation of this book. I am really at a loss to describe my sense of indebtedness to those collaborators whose names appear on subsequent pages as having helped me, and especially to those who read my first, second, and third proofs. Whatever merits this book may eventually be found to possess, I can truthfully say that they are mostly due to the help I have received from others. This help I here most gratefully acknowledge.

PREFACE

My thanks are also due to the Master Printers' and Allied Trades' Association of London, the Edinburgh Master Printers' Association, the Belfast Printing Trades Employers' Association, and the Executive Committee of the London Association of Correctors of the Press, for allowing me to print upon the title page their "approval" of this work.

The Committee of the Society of Authors, "while fully appreciating the merits of Mr. Collins's work, and the disinterestedness of his labours in producing it, decided that a departure from the practice of declining to give the imprimatur of the Society to works issued by its members was likely to lead to difficulties in the future, and was therefore inexpedient."

While probably no one will agree with everything contained in this book, I hope it may be found that the number of marginal notes needed to bring it into accordance with the views of those who use it, will be as few as could be expected considering the difficulty of the subject-matter, and the fact ... it is, I believe, the first time it has been thoroughly and systematically investigated in any country.

May this work help to further the more amicable business relations of Authors, Editors, and Typists, Printers, Compositors, and Proof-readers !

F. HOWARD COLLINS.

TORQUAY, March, 1905.

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION

I HAVE made some additions to the following pages, and a few quite minor alterations; but the general principles remain unaltered.

"and" "or" "and" The late Herbert Spencer allowed me to quote from his letter: — “whether to write ‘black, white, and green,’ with the comma

 after white, or to leave out the comma and write ‘black, white and green’
 — I very positively decide in favour of the first.
 To me the comma is of value as marking out the component elements of a thought, and where any set of components of a thought are of equal value,
 they should be punctuated in printing and in speech equally. Evidently therefore in this case, inasmuch as when enumerating
 these colours black, white, and green, the white is just as much to be emphasized as the other two, it needs the pause
 after it just as much as the black does.”

Ae, Oe, Ue, except in some proper names, are now always rendered Ä, Ö, Ü. The ligatures æ, œ, are not generally used. t is now used for th in all but proper names and foreign words, as Tal, not Thal, Rat, not Rath. The plural of many words is formed by changing a, o, u, to ä, ö, ü, as Vater (father), Väter (fathers). Division of words is by sound, but prefixed nouns, prepositions, etc., remain intact, as Erb/recht, hin/aus, ent/erben; also suffixes beginning with a consonant, as -chen, -keit, -lein, -ling, -nis. ALL NOUNS AND WORDS USED AS SUCH HAVE CAPITAL INITIALS. So also the personal pronouns of the second person, Ihnen, Ihr, Sie (to you, your, you), and adjectives from names of places and persons, as Leipziger Me-se, Kantische Philosophie; but adjectives of countries l.c., as russische Sprache, deutsche Industrie. punctuation.

I. The chief difficulty lies in the use of the comma, semicolon, colon, and period. In general they correspond, in the order named, to shorter or longer pauses as heard in correct speech; but no absolute rules can be given.

1. Logic and common sense must be the supreme guides.

2. Punctuate so as to show the meaning best.

3. Omit every point that does not make the meaning clearer.

4. Points are usually omitted in English legal documents and papers.

5. (typ.) Copy to be followed when so ordered.

II. apostrophe (')

1. Is placed to show an omission, as "e'er" for "ever", "it's" for "it is", "tho'" for "though", "49" for "1849." But it is not used when the word contains the first and last letters and its original sound, as "Dr.", "Mr."

2. The plural of single letters and figures is made by adding 's, as "M.P.'s", "R.A.'s", "p's and q's"; (typ.) always set these close up.

3. Is used in Irish names, such as O'Neil, O'Connor.

4. It is not used, in place of the single turned comma, in such Scotch names as M'Gregor, etc. (see also possessive case, quotations).

III. brace, { is used in math., and in tabular work to connect two or more lines; the explanation being central and on the opposite side. The brace should point towards the fewer number of lines, as Biology      { Botany.

                  { Zoology.

IV. brackets, [ ] (typ. crotch, or crotchet), are used to include

1. Comments, corrections, explanations, interpolations, notes, or translations, not in the original, but added by subsequent authors, editors, or others, as "I have heard him [Lord Palmerston] say" (see also XX).

2. They may also contain an omitted word, or the correct spelling of a misspelt word.

PUNCTUATION IV — VII

punctuation (cont.).

3. They are largely used in dictionaries, etc.

4. They should be used with [sic].

5. In sentences where [ ] and ( ) both occur, the main digression usually takes [ ], the subordinate ( ), thus: “[here the author contradicts himself (see page 76)].” Avoid (( )), use [( )].

V. close, heavy, or stiff, punctuation is that characterized especially by the use of many commas: common in the eighteenth century, as:—

“He has also informed me, that those, who were the oldest Benchers when he came to the Temple, told him, the first marriage settlement of considerable length, was the invention of an old Sergeant.” (“Tatler” No. 199, 18 July, 1710.)

VI. colon (:) is used

1. When the preceding part of a sentence is complete in sense and construction, and the following part is some remark naturally arising from it and depending on it in sense, though not in construction, as “Study to acquire the habit of thinking: no habit is more important.” “We are never deceived: we deceive ourselves” (Goethe).

2. In introducing an argument, example, narrative, quotation, saying, or speech, as “Exception may fairly be taken to the sentence in which he says: ‘The law ought to forbid it, because it is not permitted by conscience.’”

punctuation (cont.).

3. It is placed after such words as, as follows: for example: namely: [Shakespeare] says: this maxim: these words: thus: to wit: as “On the last morning of his life he wrote these words: ‘I have named none to their disadvantage.’” And also where some of these words are implied but not expressed, as “Three nations adopted this law: England, France, and Germany.” When the word following commences a new paragraph, the colon should be followed by a dash, as “namely:—”

4. After words marking a new stage in an argument, as again: further: to proceed: to resume: to sum up: In these cases the immediately succeeding sentence should begin with a lower-case letter, as “To sum up: if you will conform to these conditions, I will sign the agreement.”

5. On title pages, (A) between the place of publication and the name of the publisher, as “Oxford: At the Clarendon Press”; “Cambridge: At the University Press”; (B) between the principal and the secondary title, as “The Imperial Dictionary of the English Language: a complete encyclopædic lexicon, literary, scientific, and technological.”

VII. comma (,)

1. Separates and defines the adjuncts, clauses, and phrases of a sentence. It is to be used

punctuation (cont.).

only where it unfolds the sense. In case of doubt omit.

2. Insert after each adjective (except the last) preceding and qualifying a substantive, as "he was a cautious, eloquent, intrepid, and wise man."

(See also "and" or ", and," or.)

3. After the complimentary salutation at the beginning of an address, letter, or speech, as My Lord, Dear Sir, Ladies and Gentlemen,

(In German, the note of exclamation (!) is mostly used in these cases.)

4. An expression enclosed between two commas may usually be regarded as parenthetical: there would be no break in the continuity, grammatical connexion, or main sense, if the expression and the two commas were omitted, as "The Government of Britain, called a mixed government and sometimes a limited monarchy, is formed by a combination", etc. (commas equivalent to parentheses). "Its effect is produced, not so much by what it expresses, as by what it suggests" (commas not equivalent).

5. It should precede e.g., i.e., etc., and conclude the following clause, making the whole a parenthesis.

6. It separates each three consecutive figures from the right when five or more, except in math. work, as 10,135,792 (see also lac of rurees).

punctuation (cont.).

7. It should not precede nor follow the dash.

8. It should not be used after the number of a house in a street (as 51 Fleet Street); nor after points following such abbreviations as e.g. (unless the sense requires it).

(See also "and" or ", and.")

VIII. comma (single turned) (‘) is used in the abbreviation of the Scotch "Mac": as in M'Gregor, not the apostrophe (see also quotation marks).

crotchets, see IV.

IX. dash (the em) (—) is used

1. Where the construction of a sentence is changed or suspended, as "Heat expands bodies, cold contracts bodies — these are physical truths." "And all this long story was about — what do you think?"

2. It separates the heading at the commencement of a paragraph, called aside-heading, from the subject-matter following, as "Extent and Boundaries — On the north, Warwickshire."

3. It separates the repetitions and different amplifications of the same statement, as "Cannot you, in England — cannot you, at this time of day — cannot you, a House of Commons, trust to the principle which has raised so mighty a revenue?"

4. Is sometimes used, as a kind of intensified pair of commas or parentheses, before and after a parenthetical clause,

PUNCTUATION IX — XV

punctuation (cont.).

as "The ass of Buridan —held in suspense between the equal attractions of two bundles of hay—is an immortal illustration", etc.

5. Is placed after the period which ends a quotation, and before the name of its author, as "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin."—SHAKESPEARE.

6. In dictionaries, etc., to save space, it may represent the catchword, or some other word.

7. Represents faltering, hesitating speech, and stammering. "Well—I don't know—that is—no, I cannot accept it", "y—es", "n—o."

A series of two or three points is preferred by some for this purpose.

8. It is not to be preceded or followed by a comma.
(See also VI, 3.)

X. dash (the two-em) (—)

1. Is used where a sentence is interrupted, left unfinished, or ends quite unexpectedly, as "We cannot hope to succeed, unless— But we must succeed."

2. Denotes the omission of a word or part of a word which it is undesirable to print in full, as "he called him a —", "Mr. Niemand said d —".

(See also XII, XV.)

diæresis, see XV, 1.

XI. doubling of points should be avoided :—

1. When an abbreviation precedes a colon; for instance, in the case of viz., i.e., ore.g., omit the colon.

punctuation (cont.).

2. A period may be placed before an apostrophe, as Co.'s (for Company's), not Co's.

XII. en rule (—) is used to specify a period by connecting the two terminal dates, as 1900-3, not 1900-03. [Use as few figures as suffice.] (See also IX, XV.)

XIII. extracts, to be punctuated exactly as in the original (see also quotations).

figures (see VII, 6; XXI, 3, 4).

XIV. foot-notes, references to these to be outside the point and double apostrophes, if any, as "he made a serious error." full stop (see XXI).

XV. hyphen (-)

1. When one syllable of a word ends and the next begins with the same letter, the hyphen should be placed between them to show that they are to be pronounced separately, as co-operate, pre-emi-nent, re-establish, re-echo, shell-less, sword-dance, Tees-side. With two vowels the hyphen is preferable to the diæresis.

2. It joins words and syllables intimately connected and open to misconception without it, as recover (to regain), re-cover (to cover again), recreation and re-creation, remark and re-mark.

3. It is used when a prefix is added to a proper name, as anti-Darwinian, pre-Adamite, Pre-Raphaelite.

4. The use of the hyphen in such phrases as "The man was well known in the City", "He was a well-known man in the City", must be decided by the exact shade of meaning required.

5. Always to be inserted if the word be more easily recognized, or misinterpretation be possible without it, as "a poor-rate collection", "a poor rate-collection", "a pickled herring-merchant", "a pickled-her-ring merchant".

6. Where two or more compound words have a common base, this latter may be represented in all but the last by a hyphen, as "two-, three-, or fourfold".

7. Is used to join words that represent a single idea, as "a never-to-be-forgotten event", "peace-at-any-price principles", "a well-to-do family".

8. Is used to separate an displeasing collocation of consonants, as Ross-shire.

9. (typ.) One should not end last line of page, or last line but one of paragraph, if avoidable. Hyphens should not occur at the ends of three consecutive lines.

(See also compass, division of words, and IX, X, XII)

XVI. italic (typ.), punctuation marks at end of italicized words to be in roman unless evidently belonging to the italics.

XVII. note of admiration, or exclamation (!)

1. Is put after exclamatory words and

punctuation (cont.).

phrases, as "O Jealousy, thou magnifier of all things!" interjections; words or sentences expressing absurdity, command, contempt, strong emotion, enthusiasm, irony, a request, sorrow, surprise, a wish, wonder; and any impressive or striking thought, as "The Angel of Death is abroad in the land: you may almost hear the beating of his wings!"

2. It should be placed at the end of the exclamatory word or phrase, whether this be at the beginning, middle, or end of the sentence, as "O Dido, Dido, most unhappy Dido! Unhappy wife, still more unhappy widow!"

3. It is placed after sentences which, though apparently interrogative in form, are really exclamatory, as "How could he have been so foolish!", "Does Britannia rule the waves?", "Shall we never end this lamentable state of things!"

4. When a sentence contains more than one independent exclamation, it should be placed after each, as "Look, my Lord! it comes! Angels and ministers of grace, defend us!"

5. It is added to the names of plants, shrubs, etc., in botanical works to show that they are known from personal observation.

6. It should follow and not precede quotation marks, when it is not included in the sense of

punctuation (cont.).

the quotation, as—What wretched “copy”!

7. It may be placed after the interjection O, or Oh, but not after the vocative O.

8. In mathematics it is the factorial sign, as  $n!$

9. To indicate greater intensity, sole, and even treble, notes may be used.

10. [!] in brackets, suggests amusement, dissent, surprise, or wonder, at the author's views. It is sometimes used to denote rarity.

11. It should not be followed by any other point, except quotation marks.

12. In Spanish it is also put (inverted) before an exclamation, as “; Ah, qué desgracia!”

XVIII. note of interrogation (?)

1. Should follow each and every separate question, however short, if a separate answer to each be required, as “What is civilization? Where is it? In what does it consist? By what is it excluded? Where does it commence? Where does it end? By what sign is it known? How is it defined? In short, what does it mean?”

2. If the separate questions need but a single answer, it is placed at the end only.

3. The next word should generally begin with a capital letter.

4. It is not used where no answer is required; when the question is indirect; where the sentence begins with “Query”; or when it is only said that a question was asked, as “The judge then asked the witness if he believed the man to be guilty.”

punctuation (cont.).

5. With quotation marks it must be placed according to the sense, as “He called out ‘Why?’”, “Why did he say ‘I do not know?’”

6. [?] in brackets, added to a quotation by editors expresses doubt or irony.

7. It should not be followed by any other point, except quotation marks.

8. It may be repeated for emphasis, as ??

9. In Spanish it is also put (inverted) before a question, as “; Por qué?”

10. In Greek the semi-colon is put after questions.

XIX. open or easy punctuation, that which avoids all pointing not clearly required by the construction: that now prevailing in the best English usage, as

“On the whole, while Pope's ‘Essay on Criticism’ may be readily allowed to be superior in execution, as it certainly is in compass, to any work of a similar nature in English poetry, it can hardly be said either to redeem the class of didactic poems on aesthetics from the neglect into which they have fallen, or to make us regret that the critical ability of our own day should prefer to follow the path marked out by Dryden when he chose to discourse of poetry in his own vigorous and flexible prose.”

PUNCTUATION XX — XXI

punctuation (cont.).

X X. parentheses, () (typ.), enclose

1. An authority, definition, explanation (as in the drama), reference, or translation.

2. In the report of a speech such interruptions by the audience as applause, exclamations, laughter, remarks, etc.

3. Interpolations and remarks made by the writer of the text himself (see also brackets IV).

4. Reference letters or figures that divide and classify statements or arguments, as (1), (a).

5. In bibliographic references, place of publication and name of publisher.

6. In foot-notes, the authority for a quotation.

7. No stop is needed before or after a mere statement in parentheses which might be omitted without altering the meaning of the sentence.

8. When only part of a sentence is within the parentheses, the point to be outside, as (.); but when the full sentence is parenthetical it should be inside (.).

9. When the matter in parentheses ends with an abbreviation, put a point after the abbreviated word, and also outside the closing parenthesis, as (1331 B.C.).

10. Where [] and () both occur see IV, 5.

XXI. period, full point, or full stop (.) is used

1. At the end of a complete sentence which does not close with a note of exclamation or of interrogation.

2. After abbreviations of English or foreign words or phrases, initials, numbering of paragraphs when not in parentheses, Roman numerals (except when these refer to page numbers, are capitals, or another stop follows), and abbreviated signatures.

3. Between figures of pounds, shillings, and pence, as £11. 12s. 6d.: otherwise errors may arise if close-spaced, as £11 12s. 6d. It would be much better in every way to follow the former Eng. custom and to place the £ after the figures, as they are read, and as they are written in other languages, or with other measurements, as 5 fr. 50 c, 1 ton 2 cwt., 11£ 12s 6d, when no mistakes could arise, and no points would be needed (see also lac).

4. Between figures representing hours and minutes; before the dash in side-headings (see IX, 2); and turned before decimal figures.

5. If meaning equally clear it may be omitted from all half-titles, headlines, running titles, sub-headings, title pages (but see VI, 5).

6. Three periods (not asterisks) separated by em quads (en in narrow measures) are sufficient to mark omissions in all cases. When the preceding sentence has been brought to a close, four should be used; the first to be close up.

(See also abbreviations, quotations.)

PUNCTUATION XXII — PYX

punctuation (cont.).

XXII. semicolon ( ; )

1. Separates those parts of a sentence between which there is a more distinct break than after a comma, but which are too intimately connected to be made separate sentences, as "Divide and command, a wise maxim; unite and guide, a better."—GOETHE (see also VI, 1).
