HELD FOR BRIBERY

Fred Struthers, Clerk in Assistant Gold Commissioner Bell's Office,

HAS HIS PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION

Before Police Magistrate Primrose Today.

DIRECT CHAIN OF EVIDENCE

Was Brought to Light By Prosecution—Struthers Got $75; Brown, $37.50; Sutherland, $22.50.

It was 10:20 o'clock this forenoon when, in Police Magistrate Primrose's court, the case of the Queen vs. Fred Struthers, charged with having accepted a bribe while in the employ of the government, was called.

The readers of the Daily Nugget will remember that on last Thursday, May 10th, appeared a detailed account of the arrest of William S. Brown, Ronald D. Sutherland and Fred W. Struthers, the former charged with bribing a government employe, and the latter with, as above stated, accepting a bribe while in the employ of the government. Previous to his arrest Fred Struthers was employed in the office of Assistant Gold Commissioner Bell, in which employ the recording of bench claims, receiving of affidavits of representation work and issuing renewals of grants were among his clerical duties. The readers of the Nugget will also remember that the case of Struthers, as well as of Brown and Sutherland, was continued until the following day, Friday, and that on Friday the cases were again continued until this morning, Struthers, in the meantime, being admitted on bond in the sum of $11,000, the others passing the interim in jail in default of bond.

When the case against Struthers was called this forenoon the prosecution, including the complainant, Sergeant J. J. Wilson, of the N. W. M. P., and Crown Prosecutor Wade, was ready to proceed with the preliminary hearing, but as Attorney McCaul for the defense was not present, a wait of 20 minutes was taken, at the expiration of which time Attorney McCaul, not having yet arrived, the court stated that he would adjourn the case until 2 p. m., but as the prosecution was anxious to go ahead, another ten minutes recess was taken. In the meantime Struthers had dispatched a messenger for his attorney, who, at the expiration of the second intermission, appeared in court, where a number of extra seats had been provided, all of which were occupied.

Fred Struthers was arraigned and stood up, when the charge was read, the same as previously mentioned in this paper. The first witness for the prosecution was J. J. Thomas, who gave his business as hat of a tailor. Barring the many interruptions and objections interposed by Struthers' counsel, the substance of Thomas' evidence was about as follows:

"Acting on the request of Sergeant Wilson I spoke one day to Sutherland about the matter of renewing grants to claims. In the course of further conversation I informed him I had a friend who desired a claim renewed. Sutherland said he thought he could arrange it for me; later he said he could get the claim renewed for $135. In the meantime I had secured from Robert Brewitt his miner's license and a bill of sale given him for the purchase of a claim on Lovett's claim. These two documents and the $135 I gave to Sutherland; the money was in bills which I had marked; part of the money was my own and a part was given me by Sergeant Wilson. I gave papers and money to Sutherland about 2 o'clock on the afternoon of May 9th; took receipt from Sutherland for $135. (Here the receipt was produced in court and marked "exhibit A.") Sutherland said I could get renewal papers in two hours. After giving papers and money to Sutherland I dropped into Kalenborn's drug store and soon saw Sutherland and Brown passing down street towards the gold commissioner's office; I followed them and about the middle of the next block Sutherland stopped and Brown went on; I followed Brown to the gold commissioner's office, where he tried the side door, but could not get in, then he came round to the front door and went in. Sutherland had told me to come to his office, Orpheum building, at 4 o'clock that evening and the renewal would be there for me; at 3:30 I again met Brown on the street and I went to Sutherland's office and got back the miner's license, bill of sale and the claim renewal for which I had paid $135. (The renewal was introduced in court and marked as an exhibit. It bears the names "James Johnson" and "Simon Thorne" as the two disinterested witnesses who swore to the required representation work having been done.) I know the names of nearly all the men who worked for Brewitt, but never heard of "James Johnson" and "Simon Thorne."

On cross-examination Thomas made no statements not embodied in the above which is not given as his testimony verbatim, but as its substance.

Ronald D. Sutherland was brought into court, put on the stand and sworn. He objected to answering any question which would tend to incriminate himself, but was assured by the court that what he might say now could not be used against him when brought to trial on his own count.

Sutherland's account of his first few meetings with Thomas was the same as previously testified by Thomas. The remainder of Sutherland's testimony was substantially this: "I am a broker and acted in the capacity of bringing the business of Thomas and Brown together. Thomas wanted a claim represented and I knew of Brown who would do it for him. Thomas gave me the miner's license and bill of sale in an envelope; am not sure that I looked at them, but understood what they were; he also gave me $135 to pay for the renewal; I kept $10 for my commission and gave $125 to another party."

"Who did you give the $125 to," said Crown Prosecutor Wade.

"I object," said Attorney McCaul. After considerable squabbling and reading of law, the court settled the controversy by overruling the objection, and the witness proceeded.

"I gave the $125 to Brown, and he said he would have the renewal paper back to my office in an hour or two. I did not give Brown representation paper or the names 'James Johnson' and 'Simon Thorne' as witnesses, nor do I know of such men; in an hour or two Brown came back with the papers, among them the renewal paper; when Brown gave me $12.50, making in all $22.50 that I got out of the $135 as my commission." Sutherland was not subjected to cross-examination.

William S. Brown was next brought over from the jail, put on the stand and sworn. He like Sutherland, objected to answering any questions that might prejudice him at his own trial, but when assured that his evidence in this case could not be used against him, he gave, in substance the following:

"I have lived in Dawson some time; am a mine owner; had some transaction with Sutherland regarding the renewal of a claim for $125. Sutherland gave Hunter's Relief Column Is Advancing to the Rescue.

BUT IS STEADILY OPPOSED.

Roberts Moves Steadily to the Front and the Boers Fall Back, Fighting at Every Step.

London, May 10, via Skagway, May 15.—The interest of the country is now centered in the efforts which are being made to effect the relief of Mafeking. The British public would prefer hearing that the beleaguered garrison has been saved than to learn of great victories being won.

The inhabitants of Mafeking are on the verge of starvation. The natives are no longer given porridge. Everything that can possibly be eaten has been put to use as food and the people are now in the sorest straits.

Much sickness also prevails among the soldiers who are compelled to spend their night in wet, cold trenches.

Boers Harass Flanks.

London, May 8, via Skagway, May 15.—Advices from the front dated on the 6th, 7th and 8th show that Roberts has crossed the Little Vet river and is moving slowly forward. The Boers are falling back steadily, but are continually harassing the flanks of the army rendering its progress necessarily very slow. It is said that only one obstacle now remains to prevent the relief of Mafeking, and that is the distance which still remains to be covered by the relief column. Hunter is pushing in toward the beleaguered town as rapidly as possible, but his advance is being contested by the Boers at every step. Wendburg and Smaldec have been captured.

Roberts Pressing On.

London, May 10, via Skagway, May 15.—Roberts has crossed the Sand river. The Boers occupy a strong position just ahead of him and are continually harassing the advance. It is said the Boers will make a strong stand at Kroonstadt and then will fall back to Heilbron, which is 50 miles to the northeast.

TUESDAY, MAY 15, 1900.

ENOUGH HAS BEEN DONE.

The Yukon council has under consideration an appropriation to swell the fund now being raised to relieve the sufferers from the fire which occurred in Ottawa a short time ago.

We are of the opinion that the public will sustain the council if a negative conclusion is reached, when the matter comes up for final settlement. There is not a man, woman or child in Dawson, who, in some manner or other, has not been afforded an opportunity to contribute toward this fund, and, be it said to the credit of the generous instincts of Dawson's people, they have come forward in a princely manner to the relief of the suffering. Already a sum considerably exceeding $5,000 has been raised in Dawson, and a committee is hard at work on the creeks, and, doubtless, its labors will add materially to the sum named.

But there is, or, at least, we believe there should be, a limit to all things. The people of Dawson have given to the fund liberally and cheerfully, but they have given, we believe, all that the circumstances require. An appropriation from the council means simply that the people, who, as individuals, have given so liberally, will be called upon, in their collective capacity, to make a second contribution. Such action, we consider, would be ill-advised, and contrary to the wishes of a large majority of those who have personally contributed to the fund.

The fact must not be overlooked that the finances of the council at the present time are in a somewhat low condition. An indebtedness, in the shape of a bank overdraft for something like $30,000, is already in existence, and, if we understand the matter aright, any appropriation which the council makes to the Ottawa fund will mean just that much of an addition to the present indebtedness.

While, therefore, we cannot do otherwise than commend the motive which has inspired the consideration of an appropriation by the council, we are, nevertheless, convinced, in view of the circumstances noted above, that the council should not devote the public funds to the purpose named.

A subscription list has been circulated in Dawson and on the creeks, and has been generally subscribed to. The public entertainment on Sunday night was greeted by a crowded house, and a handsome sum realized therefrom. Generous sums have come from other sources, which will largely swell the total. With all this, we are of the opinion that enough has been done. There will be nothing in particular to be gained by giving the impression down at Ottawa that Dawson is exceedingly flush with spare money, when such is not the case.

An appropriation from the council, in addition to what the people have given, would be contrary to good judgment, and in direct variance with the public desires.

A LESSON IN ECONOMICS.

Gov. Pingree, of Michigan, has convened a second special session of the legislature for the purpose of carrying out his project for taxing the railways to a greater extent than the existing laws allow. The position of these natural monopolies is such as to make them exempt from the natural principles of economics that operate in competitive industries. If the railways are too heavily taxing the people, there are two methods of redress to reduce their charges, or to take the excessive imposts from them by Gov. Pingree's expedient of a tax. If the railway is restricted only by the endurance of the traffic, a tax would be of doubtful efficacy. A large public revenue taken from the railways would relieve many industries of a part of their taxation. This would increase their rate-paying power, and thus give the railways a chance to recoup themselves. The average taxpayer would pay less taxes and higher freight rates. If rates are restricted by law, but allowed to remain high enough to afford a margin for special taxation, the railway is made a part of the machinery of taxation. The passengers and shippers are made to pay special taxation as well as pay for the service rendered by the railway company. The most certain method is to reduce the rates charged by the companies. —Toronto Globe.

It was a noticeable fact at the benefit entertainment on Sunday night that a number of ladies in the audience removed their hats, much to the satisfaction of those who happened to be sitting behind them. This commendable practice obtains now in nearly all first-class theater houses on the outside, and in many cities is made compulsory by ordinance. The Nugget congratulates the ladies who displayed such consideration on Sunday night, and hopes to see the custom come into general practice upon such occasions.

Appearances rather tend to indicate that the much-heralded exodus from Dawson to Nome will be confined largely to small boats. A number have gone already, and every day sees a few more drop out of sight around the bend at Moosehide. We incline to the opinion that the excited imaginations which have conjured up visions of continuous processions of steamboats, bearing thousands of people away from Dawson, will be doomed to disappointment.

Gerhart Hauptmann.

Gerhart Hauptmann, the German dramatist, has just experienced a combination of good and bad fortune that is likely to deepen his pessimism. His latest play, "The Sunken Bell," has been awarded the Schiller prize at Berlin, the great literary distinction bestowed every three years upon the author of the best drama produced in that period. Unfortunately for the dramatist, Emperor William has refused to sanction the award, and the prize is expected to go to some less gifted author who has put more patriotism and less art into his work. Three years ago the emperor also withheld his sanction from the verdict of the jurors and gave the Schiller prize to a mediocre poet, who had won the royal favor by dramatizing Prussian and Hohenzollern history.

Whether the emperor's judgment will be regarded as better than that of the jurors is likely to depend upon one's taste for Hauptmann's style of drama. "The Sunken Bell" is an excellent piece of symbolism, with much genuine poetry in its lines, but at once mystical and pessimistic. Heinrich, the bell-maker, casts a bell which he considers so perfect that it is worthy to stand upon the highest mountain top. When he attempts to take it thither the wood sprites throw it down, and it nearly crushes him, as it rolls down the mountain side into a lake and disappears forever.

The rest of Heinrich's life is spent in the vain attempt to cast a still more perfect bell, and he breaks with the creeds, theories and superstitions of society to pursue his ideal. He ignores love and all the ties of human nature. His life is a protest against the conventions of the church and the home. Yet in breaking with these he misses the good of life as well as the bad, and finally ends his quest for the ideal in suicide.

As many meanings may be put upon the play as there are persons to interpret it, but its mysticism and essential gloominess are no more to be denied than its literary and dramatic merit. As a drama its sequence of action is almost perfect. Hauptmann's skill and artistic power are beyond question. He is the most famous German dramatist of the day. His experience is being denied the high honor of the Schiller prize after seeing it so nearly within his grasp is not likely to make him any less pessimistic. Heinrich's lost bell, sunk in the dark mountain lake, becomes symbolic in a new sense for the dramatist.

On the Turf.

Polo ponies are being used extensively for park and ring riding in Philadelphia.

Eureka, 2:15 1/4, by Ira, is in Tom Keating's California stable and said to be a crackerjack.

Edna Simmons, 2:12 1/4, who has been off the turf for a couple of years, is again in training.

California claims to have more mile tracks in proportion to its population than any other state in the Union.

Long-Dang, the Chinaman that drove T. W. Roberts to a record of 2:24 1/4, has gone back to his washboard at St. Louis.

A. B. Spreckels is driving Dione, 2:09 1/4, on the road in San Francisco, and so far nothing has been able to head her.

The total number of horses sold at the Union stockyards, Chicago, in 1899 was an even 100,000; total valuation, $11,250,000.

The New England trotter Baker, 2:17 1/4, suspected of being a ringer and raced last year without a pedigree, is now stated to be by Electryon, 2:24 1/4, son of Electioneer.

The 3-year-old colt Yellow Tail, carrying 110 pounds, defeated Advance Guard and F. W. Brode in a special race at Oakland, Cal., recently. The mile route was reeled off in 1:39 1/4.

Piatus, 2:09 1/4, is at the Louisville track and in grand shape. The quarter crack which retired him last summer has entirely disappeared, and unless all signs fail he will be a great horse this year.

W. J. Spier, the eastern turfman who formerly owned Major Domb and other fair thoroughbreds, has leased "Lucky Baldwin's" stable of horses and will race the same at Chicago during the coming summer.

The Dum Dum Bullet.

A writer describing the famous dum dum bullet has the following to say upon its alleged inhumanity:

"Our primary requirement in a bullet is that it shall have sufficient stopping power, whether used against man or beast. The enemy, whether civilized or savage, must be stopped in his charge; more than this is not required, but less will not suffice. There must be no question of our right to efficient armament, and this should never be forgotten by our representative at any meeting where modifications of bullets or other parts of our arms may be proposed. It happens that with the development of the rifle, in order to secure efficiency at long range, the velocity of the bullet has become so great that very severe wounds at short range will sometimes be inflicted; nor is it possible to avoid this. All that need be said is that expert testimony from observation in the field tends to prove that the wounds from the dum dum or the newest patterns of our rifle bullet are, in anything, less severe than those from the Martini-Henry, and very much less severe than those from the Snider."

SHE WAS FOND OF CANDY

And Was Not Particular as to the Brand.

But What She Finally Encountered Gave Her Digestive Organs Needed Rest.

"What is the matter?" asked the blue-eyed girl. "You look nervous, and you haven't noticed that there is a darn on the elbow of my left sleeve, though I came in quite ten minutes ago, and"

"I am—er—a little nervous, dear," sighed the girl with the curling lashes—"not cross, you know, but"

"Of course not. Only fathers and husbands are cross. We are naturally so much more amiable that"

"We are merely nervous? I know it. Isn't it nice of us too? I—I went to see Phyllis this morning."

"You were wise to go to see her in the morning if you really wanted to talk to her. Ralph looks in on his way to business in the morning, drops in again at lunch time, calls to take her for a walk after office hours and spends the evening with her. That is all, I believe, except that he usually calls her up once or twice a day by telephone and sends her a box of bonbons or a bunch of roses."

"M-hm! Just like a man; he gives her no time to rest, ruins her digestion with candy and then expects her to be amiable."

"You can't expect a man to be really logical, dear. Lucky for Phyllis, too. A logical person would have noticed that her hair is six shades too light to really belong to her complexion. What did she have to tell you about him today?"

"I—I really don't know, dear. I had some awfully interesting samples, and I really didn't listen. I am not selfish, like Phyllis, but I had rather think about my own affairs than talk about those of other people. While I was there Ralph called her up over the telephone. That horrid little brother of hers came in to tell her."

"Yes, I notice that he is always ready to carry messages now that she has candy to distribute. But Effie was there, too, wasn't she? I met her on the way."

"She was. I waited a long time for Phyllis, and what do you think she had done? She had gone down to ask Ralph's sister if he was quite well, because she was sure that she had heard him cough over the telephone, and she knew if he died of consumption she would die too."

"Oh, my goodness, gracious me! And she forgot!"

"All about me, dear. I waited, however, because I didn't want to go home. Mamma was all ready to take me to see Aunt Alice, and I—I don't like to hear Aunt Alice talk about birthdays and what I did when I was 16."

"So you waited to comfort Phyllis. I see."

"I waited a long time," sighed the girl with the curling lashes. "As I sat there my eyes fell on a box of candy still in its wrappings. I—er—am rather fond of candy, so I"

"Helped yourself. Of course you did. Phyllis wouldn't care. She has so much now that she keeps boxes unopened for days in her room."

"No, I didn't help myself. By and by Effie came in. She was talking about Edmund. She seems to fancy that he is dreadfully in love with me. I can't imagine how she ever got the idea."

"Nor I dear, unless you accidentally gave it to her yourself. What did she say?"

"She seemed to fancy that the candy was mine, dear. I believe that she—er—thought that Edmund had sent it to me."

"H-m! She doesn't know him very well, does she?"

"I'm sure I don't know. I hated her to think that I was stingy about it, so"

"You opened it, of course. I only hope that there was some left for Phyllis when she came in."

"There was not. I—I said I'd share my candy with her. I wish now I hadn't."

"Why? Did Phyllis come and catch?"

"No. It was worse than that. When I opened the box, there was no candy in it—only a horrid mouse. The little brother had eaten the candy and put the mouse in for a joke!"

"Oh, my goodness, gracious, you're poor!"

"That was not all. Edmund happened to be passing the house, and my screams brought him in to see if any one was murdered. And, if you will believe it, that mean Effie told him the whole thing!"—Philadelphia North American.

Eight Will Withdraw.

When the order came for Major Hemming's command, the Yukon Field Force, to return to the outside, the order also came that all the members who so desired could receive honorable discharges here and remain or go elsewhere at their pleasure. Two or three days were given, the boys in which to make up their minds as to whether to go out or remain, with the result that eight decided to receive their discharge and remain in Dawson. Of the eight are two who made many friends here with lodge men and society people; they are Hospital Sergeant A. McIntosh and Drill Sergeant Frank Ernest Davis.

None of the commissioned officers took the opportunity for severing their connection with the army, and the hope that there is yet a chance of seeing service in South Africa kept a large number of non-commissioned officers and privates from embracing the opportunity for returning to civilian life.

It will probably be three or four weeks yet before Major Hemming will be able to move his command. The recall of the soldiers will probably do away with the necessity of the creation of additional police quarters as was contemplated. Both the soldiers and police have been cramped for space, but the withdrawal of the former will leave ample quarters for the latter.

GRAND FORKS ITEMS.

The water in Eldorado and Bonanza was higher Sunday and yesterday than ever known before and has done considerable damage to sluice boxes, dams, and dumps. The feeling early in the season that water would be scarce has not been verified, as evidenced by the volumes dashing down the gulches and creeks. Were it not for the foot bridges and sluice boxes all Nome and Koyukuk stampedees from this locality going in small boats, could load their outfit and sail from the Forks direct for all down river points.

James Brown has sold his bench claim on Adams Hill to William Northrop of Magnet Gulch, the consideration being $30,000. Brown, in company with Peter H. Hartle, who owns an adjoining bench of equal value were the first persons to put a pick in what is now the richest hill on all Bonanza; this was on April 14th, 1898. They were shortly after joined by O. E. Millett who staked a hillside claim a little farther up, and on the point of the hill. Millett also commenced work, and the diggings being more shallow there than where Brown & Hartle were working, he first struck pay and recorded discovery claim. This started a wild stampede on April 19th, and the whole hill was staked once over, and in many cases two and three times. Brown & Hartle then attempted to record, but found the machinery of the gold commissioner's office working so slowly that they began to have doubts whether they would ever enjoy the fruits of their labor this side of Jordan. The crowds of applicants kept increasing in numbers, and each evening at closing hours the room would remain filled with people, most of whom had been standing in line all day, and who were then turned out to fight their way back the following day. This called forth a most vociferous protest, and finally the commissioner decided that each man in the office at closing hours should be given a ticket with a number on, giving him right of way the day following. Hartle finally got to record, but so many days had elapsed before he had succeeded in doing so that when he did get an audience with the bench clerk, his whiskers had grown so luxuriantly that he had to be identified before he was allowed to record. White Brown had all these experiences, and the ground he had staked at the time was free and open to exploration and entry as was Bonanza creek when George Carnack first went up the valley, yet he was confronted with an adverse claimant, a man named Williams, and forced to defend his title at a trial in the gold commissioner's office. This he did and came out victorious, being awarded a grant to the ground which he has since developed and demonstrated to be a valuable property. He was joined last year by his wife and daughter, Mrs. Remillet, and with his family reside in a neat log cottage on the claim. Brown is happy, though he has earned the laurels he has won.

THE HIGH WATER CONTINUES

To Work Damage on Eldorado and Bonanza Creeks.

Many Dumps Dwindling Away—Others Are Protected By Heavy Stone Walls.

From foot passengers who arrived from the Forks last night it is learned that both Eldorado and Bonanza creeks are still very high and that much damage is being done to dumps and other property on both. On Bonanza many dumps have been built up directly in the old creek bed with the result that the water has cut new channels around them and, in most places, a short turn has been found in the waterway immediately above the dump with the result that the unusually high and swift water now comes with such force as to run directly against the dump, undermining and carrying it away.

A few owners, fearing the coming of the flood which is now a reality, went to work some time ago and enclosed their dumps with heavy stone walls, using the largest boulders to be found in the creek for the purpose. This precaution is now proving to have been time, labor and money well spent, as the dumps so protected have sustained but little loss by the action of the rushing torrents. Many dumps in the "teens" below on Bonanza are reported to be from one-fourth to one-half gone already, and if the weather should continue for a few days at the temperature attained last Saturday, there will be practically nothing left to show for the hard winter's work of many men and the expenditure of many thousands of dollars.

It is said the greater part of the water flowing on lower Bonanza at the present time comes from Eldorado, there having, it is said, been more snow on the hills from which the gullies are tributary to that creek than in any other portion of the district.

From the Forks this way, so far as can be seen from the trail, there are but two or three small streams emptying any very great amount of water into Bonanza; and it is also said that upper Bonanza is not being troubled with a surplus of water.

For quite a period during the latter part of March and in April it was feared that water for sluicing would not be any too plentiful, but few, if any, claim owners ever dreamed of having their flumes and sluice boxes, to say nothing of their dumps, being carried away by high water. And even yet, the fact that so much water is now running away may cause a scarcity later on in the season.

"That's nothing. Here's $2 for you."

"Thankee, sub—thankee! En don't you holder 'bout dem screech owls. Dey ain't got no mo' sense in dey head dan what I is."—Atlanta Constitution.

Cautious Man.

"Are you married?" he asked of the man who sat next to him on the suburban train.

"What's that to you?" was the ungracious reply.

"Oh, no offense meant, no offense at all. I'm a bachelor myself, but I've just been visiting a married sister, and I feel the need of expressing my views on children to some one. If you're married, though, possibly it wouldn't be wise."—Chicago Post.

THOMAS DANIELS DEPARTS

At an Early Hour This Morning For Cape Nome.

Spent the Night in Gambling and Drinking at Golden's Exchange—Leaves His Wife.

Thomas Marion Daniels, who is well known as the resident agent of the Flyer Line, departed from Dawson at 7 o'clock this morning. He embarked at the Aurora dock in a small rowboat and drifted down the river with the current. He was not supplied with any provisions and no one accompanied him on his journey towards the international boundary. Despondency is the cause of Mr. Daniels' sudden departure from the city. He spent last night in gambling and drinking at Golden's Exchange, and this morning he realized that he had squandered the savings of the past two years. He was ashamed to face his wife and friends; and, without notifying anyone, he quietly left the town. The supposition is advanced that he will purchase supplies at Fortymile, and then proceed to Nome.

Mrs. Daniels learned of her husband's departure about 10 o'clock this morning. She immediately engaged John Mooney, an employee at the Aurora, to follow Mr. Daniels for the purpose of inducing him to return home. Up to the present time no word has been received from either Mooney or Daniels. The wife is intensely grieved over the unusual conduct of her husband; she does not believe that he intends to desert her.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniels came to Dawson in the summer of 1898. During the past winter, he was appointed agent of the Flyer Line, which company navigates the upper Yukon with the steamboats Eldorado and B-manza King. Mr. Daniels had made extensive preparations for the approaching season; and quite recently he expressed himself, as anticipating a profitable business.

Territorial Court.

The trial of the case of Rogers vs. Reed was resumed before Justice Dugas this morning. The action is for the recovery of about $1000, which the plaintiff alleges to be due as freight charges for the transportation of goods from Honeycomb wood camp to Dawson on the steamboat Sybil. The suit will occupy the attention of the court for the remainder of today.

Patrick J. Sheehan, who was to have been sentenced this morning for the crime of obtaining money by false pretenses, was released from custody upon the recommendation of a physician, who certified that imprisonment would probably result fatally to the prisoner. The convicted man is in very poor health; his sentence has been suspended for two months, and he has been granted his freedom on his own recognizance.

An Excellent Entertainment.

Just now the Orpheum is experiencing no competition in the theatrical business. As a consequence, the managers of this popular resort have engaged the best talent in the city, and the amusement, which is now afforded to the public equals anything of the kind ever given in Dawson.

The evening's entertainment commences with the production of a Cuban melo-drama, entitled "The Lost American." The story of the play has been taken from the latest literary success of Mr. Archibald Clavering Gunter; and Messrs. A. B. Clark and Alf Layne have dramatized, most creditably, this romance connected with Cuba's struggle for freedom. The piece abounds in thrilling situations, and the performers take every advantage of their numerous opportunities. The leading roles are ably assumed by George L. Hillyer and Blossom. Lucy Lovell and Dot Pyne portray exceedingly well their respective characters. Sadie Taylor proves to be quite a capable actress; Frank Gardner, in the rendition of his part, evidences ability and conscientious effort. The others who assist in the successful production of the play are Bob Lawrence, Alf Layne, Al Clark, Fred Breen, Sam Jones and Frank Mayes.

The olio is varied and is comprised of nine excellent numbers. Beatrice Lorne sings two classical selections. Miss Garnett appears in a novel turn. Dot Pyne is clever, and she is received with great favor. Bessie Pierce performs a difficult contortion act. Nellie Forsythe renders popular songs. Sadie Taylor, Gussie Lamore and Cecil Marion are as entertaining as usual. Dolan and Breen appear in team work to great advantage.

The performance concludes with the laughable comedy entitled "Casey, the Fiddler." The piece includes a cast of ten characters. Dolan essays the title role, and his ludicrous efforts are supported by capable players.

Last night the attendance was greater than the theater could conveniently accommodate, and the excellence of the entertainment insures large audiences for the balance of the week.

Gold Commissioner's Court.

The trial of the case of D. W. Cullen and H. G. Blackman, plaintiffs, vs. Yukon Corporation, Ltd., defendant, was commenced yesterday before Commissioner Senkler, but the hearing of the controversy has been continued till next Monday. The actions are being heard today.

Ottawa Funds.

The committee having in charge the fund to be raised for the benefit of those left destitute and homeless by the Ottawa fire, held a meeting last evening at McDonald hotel. A report was received from the subscription-committee showing that the following sums have been subscribed in the city to be contributed toward the fund:

Total	$8,567.50

The treasurer of the entertainment committee submitted a report showing the receipts from the entertainment given on Sunday night to have amounted to $1686.15, with several parties who had tickets for sale yet to be heard from. The total receipts from the entertainment will probably amount to $1750, and possibly more. The total expenses amounted to $125.

The committee tenders a vote of thanks to the various artists who contributed their services to make the entertainment a success, as also to the various sub-committees which had the details of the affair in charge. The committee will meet again on Saturday night when reports from the creeks will be in and it is expected that the business of the committee will finally be wound up.

me $125 in bills; he also gave me Brewitt's mining license and bill of sale to his claim. I took the money and papers to the gold commissioner's office; I went alone; 'James Johnson' and 'Simon Thorne' did not go with me; I saw Mr. Struthers at the gold commissioner's office and gave him the license and bill of sale and $75; I gave Struthers no affidavits nor names of witnesses; 'James Johnson' and 'Simon Thorne' were not there; at least I did not see them. Can not say who made out the affidavits; Struthers made out some affidavits; I did not supply him with any names or any other papers; in perhaps half an hour he gave me the renewal and I took it to Sutherland's office; am not sure that the $75 I gave Struthers was of the money given me by Sutherland, as I had other money of my own; I think some of the $75 I gave Struthers was part of the $125 given me by Sutherland; I had some of the money on me when I was arrested."

At this stage of the proceedings the court adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon at which time, there being no other evidence, Fred Struthers was held over to the territorial court, Magistrate Primrose leaving the matter of fixing the amount of bond on which Struthers will be admitted to Judge Dugas, who will probably fix the amount this afternoon, pending the time of which bond being named and prepared, Struthers is confined in the jail. The cases against Brown and Sutherland were continued for one week.

BRIEF MENTION.

John McGreal is visiting the city. George Read is spending a few days in town.

Neal McDonald is making a brief visit to the city.

John Lynch is enjoying a short vacation in Dawson.

George West came to town from the creeks yesterday.

John Nelson is stopping for a few days in town.

Larry Farrell is in town on a few days' vacation.

N. Nair is a recent arrival in town from the creeks.

Robert Crowley is shaking hands with his Dawson acquaintances.

Mrs. R. Sinclair was admitted yesterday to the Good Samaritan hospital.

C. Wegmann, the A. E. Co.'s agent at Grand Forks, is registered at the Regina.

Will Morrison, who has been working on No. 16 Eldorado, came to town this morning.

Sergeant Davis is busily engaged during these days in drilling the privates of the Y. F. F.

The numerous fires on the hillside east of town are occasioned by burning brush, and are not consuming cabins as some people have imagined.

The water in the Klondike is rising rapidly. The center pier under the toll bridge has been disarranged, and it is likely to be carried away at any time.

Mrs. Alex Black was brought into town on a stretcher from Last Chance creek this morning. She is now confined in the Good Samaritan hospital.

The Merwin is advertised to sail for Cape Nome on May 23d. Before then, however, she may make a short excursion run to some neighboring point on the river.

The Indians from Moosehide journeyed to Dawson yesterday in their canoes. This event establishes the opening of navigation for the native population of the territory.

The Palace Grand theater was to have been reopened last night under the management of Meadows and O'Brien, but arrangements were not completed, and the initial performance has been postponed.

For the past few evenings, parties of men and women have been enjoying canoe excursions on the river. The pleasure seekers paddle up stream near the shore, and then float down with the swift current.

Sam Bonfield has opened his new place of business on First avenue, and entertained a large clientele last night at his resort. He now occupies the building formerly used for Juneau Joe's restaurant.

Hotel Metropole, Third ave., Dawson. The best and largest in the city. Thirty bedrooms, hot and cold water, baths and toilets on each floor; fitted with electric bells, etc., etc. Under direct management of John Bourke.

Thomas McMullen is not yet recovered from his recent illness. During the day he attends to business at the downtown branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and at night he occupies a private ward in the Good Samaritan hospital.

George Lion says he will have the handsomest front of any building in the town and he has made a wager of three bottles of wine with the builder of the Exchange that such will prove to be a fact. It looks as though he was going to win the wager, as he is spending a great deal of money in ornamenting his structure.

POLICE COURT NEWS.

Police court was a double-header this morning, Superintendent Primrose occupying the regular room, while Capt. Starnes held a session in the orderly room.

Previous to the coming up of the Struthers bribery case more extended mention of which appears elsewhere, Justice Primrose convicted a gambler and fined him $50 and cost, which was paid.

Geo. Durkee vs. L. J. and W. E. Thompson for $40 for labor alleged to have been performed on No. 50 Dominion, was decided in favor of the plaintiff, an order being issued that the money be paid in one week.

In Capt. Starnes' court the cases of Max Cruiger, Peter Kleuschmidt and Lawrence Christ vs. Mr. and Mrs. Go-bracht for $178, $137.50 and $178, respectively for labor performed on the latter's claim, were all dismissed at complainants' costs, it appearing to the court that owing to contracts to wait until the cleanup, the bringing of the suits was premature.

Down River Fleet.

Between 7 and 9 o'clock this morning five small boats containing 20 men pulled out down the Yukon bound for Nome, and others have started later in the day. Among those who left this morning are Oliver Noyes, S. Parladin, Isidore Couture, Russian Jack, a man named Nelson and another named Evans.

It is almost impossible to secure anything like an accurate list, or even the number of those leaving for Nome, as the fact of there being no darkness these nights makes it possible for the travelers to begin their pilgrimage at any hour, and a number of boats have been known to start shortly after midnight.

Awaiting Settlement.

There are a great many men now in Dawson who, after working all winter, have quit their jobs and are in town preparing for the trip down the river; and, incidentally, many of them are awaiting pay for their winter's work. In the majority of cases this pay is expected to be washed out of the dumps, but there are remote cases where the debtor says he will have money from the outside as soon as steamers are able to reach here with the mail. In both cases, however, it is only a matter of waiting with the laborers.

Consignment of Gold Dust.

Sheriff Eibeck, who is the receiver in the case of McKenzie et al. vs. Davidson et al., is the recipient of 411 ounces of gold dust which has been extracted from the property in litigation, namely, the hillside claim, left limit, opposite the lower half of No. 3 Magnet Gulch. The sheriff will continue to receive the product of the mining ground until a final judgment in the action has been rendered.

Gustin Not Yet Coming.

It was reported last night and this morning that the A. E. Co.'s steamer, F. K. Gustin, which wintered a short distance up the river, would arrive in Dawson today; but inquiry at the store of the A. E. Co. contradicted the report, as it was said there that the Gustin is not expected yet for 10 days or two weeks.

They Make Sparks Fly.

Stanley & Mainwright, the blacksmiths, are busy night and day these times. Both men thoroughly understand the business and do the most difficult and exacting work with accuracy. It is said of Jack Stanley that he once bet $500 in Skagway with Soapy Smith that he could make a watch from old hoopiron, using nothing but his hammer, forge and anvil. Soapy withdrew the bet on getting a tip from a friend who knew Stanley in San Diego.
