The Love of God.

God's boundless love and ardent sky Above us when we wake or sleep, Above us when we smile or weep, Above us when we live or die.
God's love is like the light of day,
Of her sick child the mother sleeps;
The heavenly Father ever keeps His watch—He slumbers not.
God's love is like the sun,
By beams that suffer in the night, Doubtful—yet waiting till heaven's light shall show how all things work for good.
God's love is like the dew, Suffering to weep from our sin, To bring the heavenly kingdom in,
And fill our lives with joy and light.
God's love is like the wind, Blowing, forgetting, drenching; yet Repeating, going home to us With responsive welcome, say "I have forgiven thee, what wilt thou do?"
When earthly shadows flee away,
For all earth's bright day,
The unfolding of that love to see!

The Playactors.

CHAPTER I.
SABBATH DAY IN THE KIRK OF THE HILL.

It was the preacher's opening prayer. William Greig, elder, was in his place, and there was not a seat vacant in all the silent church. The Old Hundred had gone up with a grand rush, swinging from the hearts of these plain Scottish folk like the tramp of armies. William Greig always thought of his dead wife as he sang it, and of sitting by her side when the white cloths were laid in the Hill Kirk for the earthly communion of the saints.

Then through the hush came the opening sentences of the prayer of invocation. The voice of the Great Preacher, clear, rich, and resonant in oratory, took on a tenderer and more intimate tone in prayer. Through his pathetic fall the vibration as though the minister's heart were singing like an Aeolian harp as the breath of the Spirit of God blew through its strings.

"For the weak and the sinful, O Lord, we pray; for those who often say to themselves, 'I will make a full end, and the evil is not yet'; for lonely men with hidden sins gnawing at their hearts, who are compelled to wear a fair front, we pray. Do Thou have mercy on them."

"And in the corner by the gallery and under the beam, said—
'Father, forgive, for I am a sinful man, O Lord!'
"For the weary and the heavy laden, Lord, we pray; for those who have none on earth to whom to tell their grief. Teach them to know how to tell it to Thyself when the nights are long and the morning watches silent." And William Greig, low to himself, said—
'I am that man!'

"Them that are young, forget not," pleaded the thrilling voice, quivering and throbbing high among the plain beams of the sanctuary, as though it were soaring upward, seeking for One among the stars. "Forget them not even when they have forgotten Thee." May they know that the heart of the Father is willing to receive and to forgive. If we that are fathers upon the earth are so ready to forgive, how much more ready art Thou to pardon and receive!"

Deep within him, even as he prayed, the Great Preacher was crying out, "Oh, my boy Willie, lad of my love and of the dead mother's care, where art thou? May the Lord in His providence send thee home after these many years." This was his unspoken, perpetual prayer.

High in the dusk of the gallery, into which only two skylights looked down, like the high-set peep-holes for the angels to spy out men's hearts as they sit in the narrow pews, a young woman sat, her head bowed on her hand, and the tears dripping steadily through her thin fingers. She wore a plain black dress, and a fair-haired little girl sat beside her.

"Remember, Lord, the prayer continued, pouring from the old high-galleried pulpit, 'all those whom others have forgotten, those who have been wronged and trodden upon, whose burden is grown heavier than they can bear. Be Thou near them, great Bearer of Burdens, Sharer of the Yoke, Thou Strong Son of the Strong Lord.'

The prayer ended in the rising rumbles of the heart-beat of the congregation. The young woman in the gallery stifled her sobs, dried her tears, as she sat up. Then low within herself she said—
'He is not as I thought him to be, I will stay and speak to him at the end. It may be that he will yet forgive me.'

CHAPTER II.
So the Great Preacher finished his sermon in the Kirk of the Hill. Then there was a solemn pause. The collection was now to be taken. Up from their seats arose the elders—grave, grey-headed, responsible men, as it became the children of the Covenant to be even unto the third and fourth generation. The collection was a very solemn thing. It was an act of worship. William Greig lifted his serene, hill-country face, and placed in his own elder's collecting box the flour, which as a 'bien' and comfortable farmer, he could afford. Greg-son Key, the old weaver who had walked to three miles from the Rhoadsford, leaning on the top of his staff, went to his seat. That meant that for one week he must take his porridge three times a day without the dash of small ale which Gregson was used to stodge them down with.

'I'm better without it at any rate,' he said. 'Desires for the luxuries of this world, its gauds and vanities, are not becoming' in a Cameronian.
An' after that, when I read in Patrick Walker an' guid John Howie's bulk about the sufferer's o' the distressed 'only true Protestin' Remnant, I'm black shamed that I should think on wantin' sic a thing as sma' yill.'

So Gregson Key gave right villianly his great and vanquished the just of the flesh.
Mary M'Vane, the Whinnylgait carrier, and her sister Jean had had it in their hearts for nearly five years to get new bonnets. But instead they continued to lay by sixpence a week to the support of ordinances, and did not buy the materials of which had been turned regularly twice a year for seventeen years as the proprietor of the equinox. It was Mary who put in the sixpence, and Jean dunched her with her elbow to teach her to rebuke her self satisfaction. Thus Jean and Mary conquered the lust of the eye, and went home talking about the sermon, but in a small corner of their hearts they were also thinking about the doing up of their bonnets, though they would severally rather have died than own to one another. But they both owned it that night to their Maker with much contrition. For it took them all their time to make each other remember that it was by works of righteousness that they could be saved—that is, by sixpences in the plate, nor yet by restraining the van adorning of their persons.
It was, indeed, very likely that the pious thoughts engendered by doing up their bonnets and giving to ordinances might even be recorded against them. So at once they mortified the flesh and the spirit—the flesh by giving up the bonnets which might have bought them new bonnets, and the spirit by blaming themselves for the spiritual pride which they would severally rather have died than own to one another.

The elders taking the collection went slowly and leisurely along the pews, from which all the bunks had been removed. The plain deal boxes, of age-coeval with the building of the kirk, and along the book boards was a gentle, equable noise, as the coppers and silver severally rattled and dripped into them. It was generally the agent, solid members of the Kirk of the Hill who gave the last, while the strangers dabbled somewhat thickly and obviously among the true sheep, dropped in the clattering pennies.

William Kelly, bethared to the Kirk of the Hill, looked earnestly at the collection when it was emptied on to the table of the little vestry.
"I wonder that man over at the Kirk of Keltonhill can keep his folk at home. Their bawbes are like to gie our bunny white collection the black jaundice."
It is to be feared that he was referring to the worshippers from the neighbouring parish church who had been seduced into the Kirk on the Hill by the fame of the Great Preacher.

The Great Preacher came down quietly as the kirk sailed, and received in dignified and tender silence, blessed only by a word or two of sympathy, the softly-spoken congratulations of some who remembered him as a youth, for there were many who stood behind in order to grasp him for a moment by the hand.

The last worshipper had gone out, Stephen Armstrong was in the session-house with his elders as they counted the collection. The Great Preacher stood with his hands behind him, still breathing quickly with the exercise of the sermon, and looking through the doorway over the prospect of snug homestead and cosy town. Half a shire lay beneath the Kirk of the Hill, and heaved itself all the better for the sight of that straight, barn-like roof, cutting clear against the sky.

A young woman in black, holding a little girl by the hand, came up the path to speak with the minister, Gilbert Rutherford withdrew his eyes from the haze of afternoon that lay over the half-dozen parishes of the sea-board, and let them rest on the young woman's face.

But she did not offer to shake his hand. She turned and looked out his hand instinctively towards her.
The daughter of one of his former acquaintances in this place, he thought —a sweet-looking lass, better dressed than common.

"But the young woman looked him very straight in the face, and there was something in her eye which sufficed to hold his soul attentive.
'Can you still do justly and love mercy,' said the young woman in black, or have you preached all your righteousness away?"

It was a strange address. The accent was English of the south, and the words were spoken with an incision and a directness foreign to Galloway.
The Great Preacher was arrested.
He had not been so spoken to since his own father dealt with him after the success of his first day's preaching —when he was, like Mary and Jean over their sixpence, in danger of falling into the sin of spiritual pride.

But he recognized the voice of one faithful and reverent, by nature, though the mouth that spoke, being that of a young and not ill favored Englishwoman, was a most unlikely one from which a rebuke to a preacher of the Returned and Covenanted Kirk of Scotland should proceed.
'But,' said Gilbert Rutherford to himself, 'far be it from me to bind the Spirit of the Lord—He spake by the mouth of Balaam's ass, who before now by that of an Englishwoman.'

Virtue Unrewarded.
One morning during the past winter, while it was still dark, Grimps-on crept downstairs and set to work to tear the snow from the front of his residence. He always kept them in for an hour and a half and when he trotted off to business he chuckled at the thought of the pleasant surprise which was awaiting his wife.

When he returned to lunch he expected the subject would be mentioned, and he was not disappointed.
'That man did his work remarkably well,' said his wife, 'there wasn't a bit of snow left when he finished.'
'What man?' gasped Grimps-on.
'That man you engaged to clear away the snow,' was the reply. 'He was just finishing when I came down.
I gave him a quarter. Was that right, dear?'

Grimps-on didn't speak for some minutes, and when he did his wife got up from the table and left him, as he put it to 'have it out with himself.'

Eczema Covered Baby's Face Was spreading over the body but DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT made a complete cure.
"My little girl, three years old, had her face covered with eczema and it was spreading over her body. I tried many different ointments and the doctor would not do her any good. A friend of mine advised me to try Dr.
Chase's Ointment, and she was completely cured by one box. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment enough for the good it has done her."

Ask Her This Question

"Do you know of any woman who ever received any benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

If any woman who is suffering with any ailment peculiar to her sex will ask her neighbors this question, she will be surprised at the result. There is hardly a community in this country where women cannot be found who have been restored to health by this famous old remedy, made exclusively from a simple formula of roots and herbs.

During the past 30 years we have published thousands of letters from these grateful women who have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never in all that time have we published a testimonial without the writer's special permission. Never have we knowingly published a testimonial that was not truthful and genuine. Here is one just received a few days ago. If anyone doubts that this is a true and honest statement of a woman's experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound write and ask her.

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. Letitia Blair, Canifton, Ontario.

Any woman who is sick and suffering is foolish surely not to give such a medicine as this a trial. Why should it not do her as much good as it did Mrs. Blair.

Let Nova Scotia Merchants Be on the Alert.
From Manitoba and Montreal.
In some provinces of the Dominion many are wondering why they cannot get as cheap school books as may be secured in Ontario. Those who have made a study of the matter, however, possess the knowledge why Ontario readers are supplied at such low prices, and no surprise will be expressed when it is realized that the vast amount of advertising the company which publishes the books receives. It simply means that the T. Eaton Co. can afford to print the school books at a figure stated by experts to be less than cost, and charge the loss to the advertising expense account.

And this is money well expended. For every school-book published for use in Ontario public schools bears the imprint of the T. Eaton Co. Not only that, but the publishers have the privilege—and are known to be making use of it—of enclosing advertising matter with enquiries from parties sending for school-books. This has been shown to be a fact in a previous issue of this paper. It simply means that the legislature of Ontario, unconsciously, no doubt, has been the means of placing in the hands of a large mail-order house more power to draw from every district in Ontario the wealth that should be expended among merchants of those districts.

The direct consequence is that the retail merchants in Ontario who handle a considerable portion of school book supplies are taken an unfair advantage of. The contract has the effect of taking the sale of school books out of the hands of the general stores of Ontario, and of bringing almost every home into contact with the mail order house. It affects every class of merchant in the province.

It is interesting to note in this connection that in Manitoba, the Government of that province has recently awarded the contract for a series of readers to a regular publishing firm, not to a mail order house, and not at departmental store prices. No doubt the Government of that province could have secured just as favorable terms as Ontario. Previous to the awarding of the contract, however, the retail merchants held meetings and passed resolutions urging the government of Manitoba not to place the contract with a mail-order house, at the same time pointing out the unfair methods of competition, and the injury to business generally, which would result should Manitoba follow the example of Ontario.

Nova Scotia is the next province to be considered. An effort is being made to secure cheap school books for that province, in view of the low prices in Ontario, and unless the retail merchants there begin early to point out to the Government the undesirable consequences of giving such a contract to a mail-order house, they will be up against the same difficulty as is now experienced by Ontario merchants.

Marvellous Healing Powers.
The most severe test to which a healing ointment is ever put is the cure of eczema, so successful has Dr. Chase's Ointment proven in the cure of this terrible skin disease that many people refer to its effects as magical and marvellous. After the first few applications it positively stops the dreadful itching and then gradually and naturally heals the skin.

The Local Elections.

Writs have been issued for the by-elections in the counties of Hants, Cumberland, Lunenburg and Victoria—Nomination Day, Nov. 17th, Polling, Nov. 24th.

A. K. McLean, M. P. for Lunenburg county, on Thursday became a member of the Murray Government, and was sworn in Attorney General. In that county the Conservatives have chosen Allan R. Morash, Mayor of Lunenburg, and J. Willis Margeson, to enter the field at the general election, and it is expected that the latter will be the candidate in opposition to the Attorney General.

In Cumberland the Liberals have chosen as their candidate, to run for the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. W. T. Pipes, J. H. Livingston, ex-Warden of the county. The opposition candidate, A. F. Landry, is the nominee of the Independent party of workmen.

In Hants county the Conservatives have chosen Albert Parsons, of Walton, as their candidate and the Liberals have selected W. M. Christie, of Windsor, to contest the county in their interests.

Agricultural Societies.

The following matters have been submitted for consideration at the annual meetings of agricultural societies, which are now being held:

1. Have you, as an Agricultural Society, come nearer reaching an agreement as to the one breed, or, at the most, two breeds, to which you will confine your selection?

2. Many bulls, owned by Agricultural Societies, are kept in too poor condition to give the best results. Many of them do not get enough exercise. If such is the case in your Society, can you do anything to rectify it?

3. If the best results are to be obtained, many Agricultural Societies must secure a better class of bulls. The better the bulls owned by a Society, the better will be the stock which each member of the Society will get, and the larger the returns for the money invested in the Society. It is a paying proposition to buy the best. The services of the undersigned, Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, are available for the Agricultural Societies, and he will be glad, to the best of his ability, to advise and assist in making exchanges and, when possible, to purchase stock for the societies.

4. Are scrub or mongrel bulls much of a menace to the success of your Society? Have you any recommendation to make relative to this evil?

5. As a pointed question, the Department would like to know how many Societies owning, for example, dairy bulls, know anything of the qualities and milk records of the dams, as well as of other animals in the ancestry of these bulls. Other things being equal, a bull from a dam that gives 5000 quarts of medium rich, or 3000 quarts of very rich milk, is worth much more to a community than a bull whose dam gives little more than half that amount. The same importance should be attached to the ancestry of other stock of whatever kind owned by each Society. Have the members of your Society given full consideration to this in selecting their stock?

6. Can you do anything to encourage members of your Society to attend any of the courses at the Agricultural College at Truro? I would particularly call your attention to the next Short Course, to be held from January 4th to 15th, 1910. Nowhere can farmers and their sons get such an opportunity to learn how to select, feed and care for live stock. Moreover, they can study the cultivation of the soil, manures and fertilizers, Horticulture, Dairying, Poultry, Veterinary treatment, and many other practical subjects. No tuition is charged. Board can be obtained at from $3.00 to $4.00 per week, and the Railways all grant a single fare.

The Canadian Magazine for November is very general in its interest. The first article is entitled "The Drama of the Ward," by Augustus Bridle, being a sociological study of the development and revolution that has been taking place in the slum section of Toronto. There are five pen and ink illustrations by T. G. Greene. "Where Nature's Gas is King," by W. Lacey Amy, is a most entertaining account of the growth of Medicine Hat, and the place that natural gas has had in its development. It is splendidly illustrated. Miss Jean Graham contributes a most readable article entitled "In Delt Land," being an appreciation of Mr. E. F. B. Johnston's collection of delaware. The account of the capture and transportation to Canada of the Montana herd of buffaloes is concluded by Norvyn MacTavish. The illustrations for this article are ever better than for the first. Isabel Ecclestone Mackay contributes a fine story, "New Lamps for Old," with illustrations by J. W. Beatty. Other articles "Comedy and Humour in the Bible," by J. D. Logan; "A Literature of Warning," by W. D. McBride, with short stories and poems by Canadian writers.

A social meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. Murray next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, at which the president will read the report of the convention in Sydney. Will all the members kindly take this as a personal invitation to be present.

The Reviewer.

IDEAL SOCIALISM.

We are hearing more than ever of the philosophy of socialism with the development of the elements of the times tending to transform all industrial and political life and action towards a scheme of social salvation and social efficiency. Such at least is the message of the large numbers of people throughout our world, and it would seem necessary and wise for us all to get at its real spirit and get rid of all prejudice.

However conservative may be our views concerning it, or however superficial may be our observations and judgment of it, we may as well face the fact that it is here to stay and be reckoned with. The socialist movement is not some passing surge of an era or effervescent energizing of an under class. Whether it be for good or ill, we are wise indeed if we take it frankly and consider it fully.

Also may we assert as a certainty that the number of its adherents increases daily. In spite of the fact that as a radical program it does not seem to make very much progress, the spirit and purpose characterizing it are more and more dominant. It is not wise or fair to judge socialism in the large by any socialist political party. It probably is no more fully represented in such organizations than is real Christianity, or real religion, represented by any church or sect of the present day. The socialist party is simply one expression of that fundamental spirit which is its inspiration and impulse.

Without confessing oneself to be a radical one may assert that the socialist movement is primarily the attempt of society to reconstruct its material environment and industrial mechanism on lines consistent with its ideals of life and conducive to the development of the best and highest in human nature. However its expressions may differ from its primary purpose, one is wise to consider the whole movement as promising benefit and not inflicting blight upon human society.

It must be confessed by the most conservative person that the industrial system as now existent is not based upon the principles of right and justice. Conditions that permit one man to become rich beyond the dreams of avarice in a day's juggling with stocks and compel another man to face a penniless old age after a half century of unceasing toil are not those which ought to be tolerated by wise citizens. Whatever the cause or the cure of such conditions, we must be unanimous in the opinion that in some way they must be changed and a man given a better chance than now.

Socialism, according to its best advocates, is the assertion of certain fundamental rights and laws whereby to each man in the community is granted not only an opportunity to engage in the labor which is the price of life and luxury, but also to exercise the value to the full product of his labor, which at present is divided among several classes, resulting in the exploitation of the worker.

This then is a proposition whether socialistic or not that must be seriously considered. Socialists may unduly estimate the portion of the labor product rightfully due to labor, they may advocate methods of readjustment which do not commend themselves to us, they may seem to be the advocates of reforms which from our point of view belong to the far future, but in any case, the people of Canada will be wise to study the full claims, consider the principles, and decide on the basis of personal judgment instead of upon personal prejudice.

Nothing is more certain than that

The movement for social adjustment must increase. Conditions in the industrial centers of the world, and even in our own Canadian cities, are such that the man of sane sympathies finds himself in a state of ethical revolt. Whatever we do of ethical reformation, our intention and determination to inaugurate or help along a system more just than the present grossly unjust one, every true man must sympathize with the socialist movement for greater opportunity for the development of human life.

It is the real spirit of the thing that counts. Methods may be changed to suit changing conditions. The desire to establish justice should give to all men a chance to achieve and attain. To create conditions where equality of opportunity will tend to work equality of worth and character, to give every child a chance to be born right, and to face the future with the helpful co-operation of comrades instead of the cursing contact of competitors, this is a purpose and a force which must ultimately command us all, and finally make us citizens of a cooperative commonwealth. Then war will be impossible. Draughts will be of no service, peace and harmony will reign supreme. The grasping merger will be a thing of the past. The multi-millionaire will be as impossible as the penniless old age, the poverty stricken family and the 400 society of our small cities.

Young Life Ended.

The funeral of Thomas Graham, who passed away last Saturday at the early age of nineteen, took place on Monday from the residence of his uncle, Mr. Robert Harvey, of Lower Horton. The services were conducted by Rev. R. P. Dixon, rector of St. John's church, and were attended at the house by the pupils of Acadia Villa School, Hortonville, and many of the neighbors. After a short service at the house the cortege started for the church, where the full services of the Church of England were performed. The members of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's church, of which Mrs. Graham, the mother of the deceased, is a valued member, sent a wreath and attended the church in a body. The choir were also in attendance and rendered several hymns with much feeling. The deceased was a young man of much promise, and had commenced a course of engineering in the Robb Engineering Co., Amherst. His health failing, he had been staying with relatives in Sackville, N. S., and apparently was rapidly recovering, but matters recently took another turn, and he returned to his old home about a fortnight ago, after which he rapidly sunk. Great sympathy is felt for Mrs. Graham by her very numerous friends. Just years ago she lost by a sudden illness her husband, Capt. Joseph Graham, who died in Ireland. Then a few years later her son Harry, a bright, attractive boy and a very general favorite, died from the effects of a fall from an apple tree, and now another crushing blow has fallen upon her. On behalf of ourselves and readers, THE ACADIAN respectfully tenders profound sympathy.

Gladstone's Ghost on the Budget.

London, Oct. 31.—The Chronicle thinks it worth while to give the most prominent place in its issue to-day to a long report of a purported conversation held yesterday with the spirit of William B. Gladstone by William T. Stead, through the medium of the spirit of a dead American newspaper woman, whom Mr. Stead calls Julia. Mr. Gladstone's spirit is represented as having answered numerous questions, saying, among other things, that he agrees with the principles of the Budget Bill, and that he thinks the House of Lords will act most wisely if it rejects it. He advises the Government not to dissolve immediately the House of Lords passes the bill, but to await a more favorable opportunity. The spirit of the former Prime Minister is further made to say that it is distasteful, although not harmful, to him to be thus brought back to the old political arena. He adds—"I desire to detach myself from this set of disturbance, and to go my way in the manner I desire."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The death of Mr. Robert Davison, a highly respected resident of this town, occurred on Wednesday night, after a short illness. He was 77 years of age, and a native of Londonderry. For many years Mr. Davison was connected with the railway postal service, and since his retirement has lived in Wolfville. He was a man of sterling Christian character. His widow, who was a Miss Elderkin, of this place, survives him. The funeral takes place on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

While the service was being held in the Methodist church last Sunday evening, the lobby where overcoats and hats were hung was entered and pockets rifled of their contents. Pastor Prestwood lost a valuable pair of gloves, as did also Rev. Dr. Huestis, and members of the congregation. A number of young men were seen from the parsonage to enter the church during the service, and it is hoped they may receive the punishment they deserve.

The Gadfly.

Could anything be more ridiculous or curious in the political realm than that the Liberal press in Canada, which tolerates it not promotes a high protectionist system for this country, and professes to desire a preference for Canadian products in the British markets, should so industriously cast their influence against the only means by which such a preference for our products in British markets could be secured.

Why should these journals support protection for Canada while opposing the same policy for the mother country, and are they not hypocritical in pretending to be eager for a preference in British markets, while they demand that the mother country shall maintain free trade, and thus make it utterly impossible to establish a preferential relation.

They profess great indignation at any suggestion of Canadian interference in behalf of British fiscal reformers, while day by day they urge British electors to reject arguments of British fiscal reformers. They warn the mother country of the manifold and horrible evils, to say nothing of the corruption, which must result from protection, while they support that very system, even adding to it, in Canada.

These same enlightened and economic writers insist that protection will ruin England, just as in 1878-1879 and 1879, they insisted that protection would ruin Canada. We can see that the things they predicted have not happened, and that the very politicians who stood out against protection even fifteen years ago, now maintain the system which they then condemned, and run their election contests hand-in-hand with what used to be denounced as the 'Red Parlor.'

It would also seem surprising the industry and perseverance with which these highly partisan scribes support the schemes of Lloyd-George for relieving the unemployed and destroying the Lords. They are perfectly satisfied with protection for Canadians as a remedy for unemployment, and the Canadian Senate as a home for political incurables.

All the devices of Lloyd-George as announced in his original or revised budget, will never prevent unemployment or permanently improve conditions in the mother country. Such must end in comparative failure. The 'Lloyd-George budget will not give employment to a single needy worker or provide a home, save in charity. It will not increase the supply of labor or the wages of labor. It will leave England, as now, exposed to the unprotected sweep of foreign competition, and helpless to protect her trade even at home. England can never fight a protectionist world, particularly in these days.

With such countries as the United States and Germany, with vaster home markets, equalling the mother country in industrial efficiency, competition, while practising free-trade, would be a physical impossibility. The attitude of certain Liberal organs towards those seeking for fiscal reform in the mother country, would appear hypocritical and monstrous, if England is to take her place or retain it, she will have to arise from her old Cobden dreams, and not longer cherish those old traditions which made of Cobden and Bright some sort of demigods.

Almost every non-conformist clergyman that comes into Canada from the mother land, brings his politics with him. They have been known to pray before the public for the enactment of the Tariff Reform movement at home, sincere, no doubt, but hide bound Cobden, and anti-English church. This sort of praying has been useful in throwing additional light on the absurd sort of political temperament. Politics becomes a creed with these fanatics, and the higher critics should beware.

Acadia Wins From U. N. B.

The Acadia football team won from the U. N. B. in a good match on Tuesday. The New Brunswick players arrived Monday evening, accompanied by a large party of friends. During the day they visited the institutions and were especially pleased with the Carnegie building. The day was fine and the campus in excellent condition. The attendance was unusually large and the game was played with much excitement.

In the first half there was no score, though the ball was mostly in U. N. B. territory. The second half was more exciting, Acadia scoring 3 to 3. The first try was made by Foster Howe and was converted into a goal by Reade. The second try was made by U. N. B., Kingbourne crossing the line, but the attempt to make it a goal failed. The third try went to Acadia, Kaiser carrying the pigskin across. No goal resulted. This ended the scoring.

Buckley, of Dalhousie, was a satisfactory referee. In the evening the victors were entertained in the college hall by the Acadia Amateur Athletic association.

On Nov. 3rd, Horton Academy played and won their first match game of the season, defeating Second Dalhousie on the Wanderers' grounds, Halifax, by a score of 5 to 3. The latter are considered strong and will have little difficulty in winning the Junior League of Halifax. The Academy is to be congratulated upon winning from such a team.

The game was not as open as could have been desired. The College forwards controlled the ball as a rule and relied more on dribbling than help-work. When their halves did get it they failed to make much headway. The Horton backs put up a strong defense and their tackling was good. Robertson, their new full, never missed his man and putted well.

Dalhousie's only score was a perky drop kick. The Academy scored a try by a run around the end about the middle of the second half. Goes made the try which though difficult was successfully completed by Capt. Evelyn. After this Dalhousie's line was in danger several times and only the lack of combination prevented a larger score. A return match will be played on the Acadia campus at an early date.

Stock Farmer's Lucky Find

The pleasure he now has in looking after his 250 acre farm.

Life has a new pleasure for the writer of this letter and we shall let him explain why in his own words: "I could not do a day's work to save my life before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills," writes Mr. Leonard Miller, Camboro, Haldimand Co., Ont., "but these medicines seemed to exactly suit my case and have done wonders for me. Instead of being in misery from pain and suffering, life is now sweet to me and I appreciate good health as I never did before."

"This means a great pleasure to me, for I have a two hundred and fifty acre farm and a large stock to look after. I recommend these medicines because they have cured me and I know they will cure others."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is remarkable because of its tonic effect, reconstructing and building up the system by making the blood rich and red.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills regulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and ensure healthful digestion. At all dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Broken Promises

"Yes, I would like one of your pictures ever so much. I haven't any of myself at present to exchange, but expect to have some taken soon, and then I'll remember you."

Now be honest. To how many people have you told this old, old story? And how many were some of those promises made?

Count them up carefully, then come in and get enough pictures to "remember" yourself.

After keeping your friends waiting so long, it might be advisable to get something extra good.

We have it.
