CHAPTER XXXIII.

In his heart he had thought, from the first moment he saw Diana, that she was the most beautiful and spirited girl he had ever met; but she had hated him with such hauteur, grandeur as he was considered, that he had hardly dared to approach her. He had been struck some time before by the fair glittering beauty of Evadne, and he had had serious thoughts of toposing to her; but Evadne was as stinging in his eyes when compared with the stately, graceful heiress, who had all the dignity of a queen with the sweetness of a child. Evadne had hated him; Diana Cameron had always avoided him. He preferred Diana a thousand times, but she seldom, if ever, deigned to look at him. This morning, however, her manner seemed changed; there was a slight gracefulness in her words and actions such as he had never been favored with before from the imperious beauty. Was it possible that she was beginning to predate him? he wondered.

Diana, with her thirst for vengeance still raging in her breast, was watching him intently, and asking herself whether she could marry him; she saw the flame of vanity in the light of his eyes; she saw the hard cruel lines round the mouth; she saw the weakness of the whole face. There was no power, no intellect; all the attributes that belonged to her ideal were wanting in Lord Clanronald. Then she remembered what Lady Cameron had said—that the dearest wish of her heart was that Evadne should marry this man; she remembered also the scornful laughter in which her ladyship had indulged when she had spoken of her as "Lady Scardale;" and filled with these memories, Diana was prepared to make any sacrifice in order to inflict pain and humiliation upon her foes.

He had rather an imbecile laugh, this young lord, and his powers of conversation were extremely limited; consequently his commonplace compliments and effusive flattery soon became monotonous. Diana had hitherto always experienced a feeling of contempt for him when he laughed; but to-day his laughter did not irritate her. "Could she marry this man?" she asked herself; and the answer came. "Yes." From that moment Diana's destiny was sealed.

When she awoke from the reverie into which she had fallen, she found that Lord Clanronald was talking of his home at Ronald's Court, and she was compelled, for appearance sake, to listen and to speak. But all the time she was watching him closely and keenly. He talked of no one but himself, and no other subject seemed to interest him. He declared that finer trees grew round Ronald's Court than in any other part of England, and that there were finer fish in the stream that ran through his estate than could be found in any other.

Why Corns Hurt

Note this diagram picture of a corn. Note its conical shape. The cause of the corn is pressure. And pressure makes it hurt. The point of the corn is pushed into the nerves. Applying a Blue-jay plaster instantly removes the pressure. Note the felt ring (A) in the picture below. The ring gives barefoot comfort in the tightest shoe.

But this is temporary. One should not continue a ring. The corn should be quickly ended.

The bit of B&B wax in the center of the ring does that (marked B in illustration below). In two days, usually, the whole corn disappears. It stops the pain, dries out the corn. And it wraps the corn so the action is maintained.

Then the action of the B&B wax is centered on the corn. Held there by the rubber coated adhesive tape (C) which wraps comfortably around the toe. Healthy skin is not affected.

These are the reasons why millions of people have adopted the Blue-jay method. Keeping a corn is folly in this easy way can end them. Treating them in other ways is unreasonable.

For your own sake, convince yourself by applying Blue-jay to one corn.

After a time Diana rose and left him; but the look she gave him was full of encouragement. It was half shy, half coquetish. Lord Clanronald was dazed by it.

"She does like me, I declare, after all!" he exclaimed with intense satisfaction. "I shall say farewell to Miss Evadne, and propose to Diana Cameron."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Diana was seated, book in hand, in the recess of the library window. She wanted to avoid every one, to be alone and think over what she contemplated. She had not been there long before her step-mother entered.

"Diana," said Lady Cameron, in her haughtiest manner, "I wish to speak to you. I wish to ask what you meant by your conduct of last evening?"

"I am not accountable to you for my conduct, Lady Cameron," Diana answered, proudly.

"I consider that you are," rejoined her step-mother. "While I am mistress of this house, I hold myself responsible for the conduct of every person in it."

"You will never be responsible for mine," declared Diana, defiantly. "You may be mistress of the house, but you will never be mistress of me."

"I shall exact from you courtesy to my guests at all times and seasons," said Lady Cameron. "You failed in courtesy last evening. You chose to retire to your room without bidding adieu to the Duke and Duchess. It was ill-mannered in the extreme."

Diana knew in her heart that she should have spoken to her father's guests before they departed; but she also knew that she had been driven almost to madness by those who hated her. And Lady Cameron, looking at the proud, pale face with its expression of defiance, saw that she was gaining no victory.

"I shall not complain to Mr. Cameron," she said; "he would be only too angry if he knew that his daughter had purposely slighted the guests he values most."

This to her—the proud, lovely heiress! She did hard battle with herself, for she knew that, in this instance, she was wrong. She should have spoken a few farewell words to the Duchess. She admitted to herself that her conduct was blameable; but she could not humble herself to confess her error; so she remained silent.

Lady Cameron read the expression of her face correctly.

"I shall say no more on the subject, Diana," she continued; "but I beg you to understand that, in future, I shall exact due courtesy from you to my guests. I make every allowance for your want of good breeding, for your want of courtesy—every allowance, but I cannot tolerate the exhibition of it," and with this parting shot, Lady Cameron quitted the library, leaving Diana speechless with anger.

It was just at that moment, the most unfortunate moment possible, that another person accosted her.

"Diana!"

She looked up quickly and saw the dark, handsome face of her lover.

"Diana!" he repeated, "my patience is exhausted. Do you know how long it is since I have spoken to you, since you have spoken to me, since you have looked at me, since you have given any sign that you had one thought for me? And you know—you know, my darling, all I desire to say."

The face she raised to his had no emotion in it; the lovely eyes were cold, proud, and indifferent.

Sir Leslie came nearer, and sat down in the deep recess by her side; he tried to take the book from her hand, but she held it firmly in her grasp.

"I do not wish to lose my place, Sir Leslie," she said, sharply. "I am interested in this book."

"Diana, my darling, what has come to you since last night? What has come to your eyes? Last night they were like violets in the sunlight; this morning they are stone-cold."

Seeing that he waited for an answer, she answered, carelessly:

"Nothing, Sir Leslie. I was not aware that one's eyes changed in that marvelous manner."

"You're do," he cried—"they are quite changed."

"So in my life," she thought, bitterly; and again angry pride rose like a flaming fire within her.

"Diana," said Sir Leslie, "you were so good to me last evening that I have taken hope. You are no coquette, Diana. I know that you are too sincere, too earnest, to be so kind to me if you did not care for me. I have a mad hope that I may win your love. Listen to me, Diana. You must not Ithaca, N.Y.—"Three years ago I suffered from pains in my right side, so severe that I could not raise my feet from the floor. Pains would shoot down my limbs and through my back, and the doctor said I had an abscess. I was in bed two weeks with an incision on my side and expected any day that I might have to go to a hospital for an operation. A friend came to see me and told me of your wonderful medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it, and after taking six bottles I feel well and strong, do my own work and do dressmaking for others. I cannot speak too highly of your medicine and recommend it to others who suffer with female trouble. Mysteries of the Missing.

EVEN YET "LOST" SOLDIERS ARE SUDDENLY TAKING THEIR FRIENDS BY JOYFUL SURPRISE LONG AFTER ALL HOPE HAS BEEN ABANDONED. THIS ARTICLE SHOWS SOME AMAZING CASES OF "MEN WHO CAME BACK."

Alive or dead? The ever-anxious question is raised again by the discovery in England the other day of a soldier who, two years ago, was reported "missing" and subsequently presumed dead.

Timings of missing soldiers, notwithstanding that the armistice was signed nearly a year ago, are reaching anxious relatives at intervals, often in dramatic circumstances.

Take a hurried scrap from life. Silence—unknown silence—for seventeen months, and then a woman in South London receives a letter from her husband to say that he is a prisoner in Germany. Other letters quickly follow, till at last there comes the joyful news that he is to be exchanged.

But the silence lengthens again. What has happened? Nobody knows. Finally, the wife receives an official communication. The soldier reached Switzerland, and there all trace of him is lost.

But in most cases the veil of mystery remains absolutely unperforated. Nothing whatever has happened to relieve the fearful doubt—alive or dead?

Huns Lack of System.

Beyond question, numbers of poor fellows for whose return relatives are still faintly hoping passed to their rest in such plague spots as Wittenberg, where the Germans, when typhoid broke out among the prisoners, fled, leaving them to their fate.

Here—and similar horrors occurred elsewhere—our men died like flies in autumn, and were buried without any record being kept. For long it was possible for a prisoner to be in Germany for twelve, fifteen, even twenty months, without anybody in this country knowing whether he was alive or dead.

Systems of registration there was none worth speaking about, and to trace a man in some cases would have taxed the ingenuity and resource of a Sherlock Holmes. He might have gone to a camp like Wittenberg, died there, and descended to a nameless grave.

And this callousness, and this lack of system, doubtless account for the inclusion—unofficial, at any rate—of many a name in the long roll of the missing, and for the appalling uncertainty, the dreadful heart-searching in soldiers' homes.

Any Chance Is Seized.

On the other hand, nothing is more certain than that some of the missing are alive and well. In saying this, I do not wish to raise false hopes; but the fact remains that a small proportion of the Lost Legion in every campaign inevitably come back from the dead.

At certain stages of the war, particularly during the retreat in 1914, and again last year, numbers of soldiers lost touch with their regiments, some returning to our lines after a longer or shorter interval and others going to swell the total number of the Lost Legion.

Now, every old soldier knows that men of a certain type, once they are free of our military trammels, will jump at any opportunity that turns up, even if it be to join the enemy temporarily.

A remarkable case in point happened during the Afghan War. After the inevitable disaster with which we open our minor campaigns, a certain man was missing, and, as he was last seen in a place of great danger, was presumed dead.

As a fact, however, he lived for years after his disappearance. He fell into the hands of the enemy, who conveyed him to Kabul. There he was elevated to the position of chief gunsmith in the Ameer's arsenal—a position he held for a long period. In the end he was found dead in his own private apartments, having been strangled by a native who was jealous on account of his skill and power.

After Majuba, again, a number of the "presumed dead" cut a dash in various parts of South Africa. One man, having conceived a bitter hatred of his company officer, slipped away during the confusion, and long subsequently was met in Johannesburg by some of his old comrades, whom he greeted without the least embarrassment. And in that city there was also a "missing" soldier who actually fought on the side of the Boers in the Jameson Raid.

A strange sequel to this act of treason was that afterwards, on hearing that his wife had been married again, he returned to England with the avowed intention of "making things hot for her." He would have carried out that intention, too, had not somebody warned him to keep quiet, or there would be disclosures, one of which would be that his real wife was living when he went through the ceremony of marriage with the woman whom he wished to injure.

In the Foreign Legion.

Events in South Africa, indeed, led to many double lives. Perhaps the most astonishing instance was that of a man who was missing after Paardeburg, and for whom inquiries were made for years by newspaper advertisements, notices in messes, etc.

An Englishman—himself a very "hard case"—who was serving in the French Foreign Legion in Algeria, one day recognized in a comrade who had come over in a new draft the long-sought mystery man of Paardeburg.

Both fell on the Western Front in the early part of 1916, the "missing" soldier carrying his secret with him to the grave, for no questions are asked in the famous Legion.

Every old soldier knows, further, that some of the men who accidentally become separated from the forces with which they are acting are afraid to return when they have the opportunity. Fearful that they may be under suspicion, and fully aware that in any case they will be called upon to give an account of themselves, they will not "face the music," and so choose to become deserters.

Back to the Line.

In one instance a man was concealed for a time by French peasants, and subsequently made his way to a certain part, whence he was smuggled back into England. The day after he landed he re-enlisted, and no less than six months from the date of his desertion he was in the fighting-line again. Yet he has long since been presumed dead, and to this day his relatives do not know that he is alive.

There is a further point. How many are the cases in which men have been seen—often in our own lines—by their comrades long after they were reported missing. They number hundreds, if not thousands. And, as a natural result, the belief is entertained in homes all over the country that men officially dead will surely reappear sooner or later, and not as men who have disgraced themselves and their relatives, but as victims of some combination of circumstances such as no sensational novelist ever imagined.

Beware of False Reports

Voters are cautioned not to listen to the bombastic false reports that the Squires heeled and the Squires organs are trying to spread from hour to hour and from day to day. It is only an organized plan of deceit and bluff and all for the purpose of endeavoring to divert St. John's and nearby districts from their determined purpose to roll up big majorities for the Liberal Progressives. Disregard then all that campaign lies, bluff, bluster, and baseless promises of victory, for reliable information shows a vastly different outlook. Squires is going to be snowed under in St. John's West, and he knows it; and his candidates and Coaker's will be trimmed in every district in the country.

General Jan Smuts.

WAS HIS POSSIBLE SUCCESSOR TO LATE PREMIER BOTHA.

It was always understood that General Jan Christian Smuts would succeed the late General Botha as Premier of South Africa. These two are the only big South Africans we know anything much about. Great fighters, splendid losers and ultimate winners, both of them. Some say Smuts is a bigger man than Botha was, but it is probable that those who think so are the intellectuals. Botha, with his more full-blooded and rugged personality, was better understood by the people as a whole. But Smuts is more or less cosmopolitan and he became a very great figure in England during the war.

Indeed, it was Smuts' voice that was first heard in South Africa after war had been declared. Gen. Beyers, commander-in-chief of the defence forces of South Africa, had resigned rather than take the offensive against the Germans, and the letter in which Smuts accepted his resignation will be remembered as long as there is a history of South Africa to be remembered. He lashed the traitor with words of scorn, and remarked that if Beyers had been in Germany he would have been shot for his action.

Gen. Botha must be given the heartiest praise by every loyal British subject for his handling of the situation that followed the revolt of De Wet and Maritz, but it is doubtful if he could so successfully have met the crisis had he not had as his chief adviser and backer Gen. Smuts. It is true that he was responsible for the deportation of the labor leaders from South Africa, and thus incurred the enmity of the union men, but his firm handling of a difficult problem was generally approved by the British.

Some one had remarked that if Smuts never did anything else than conquer the disadvantages of having such a name he would be marked as a man of unusual achievement. This has been the least of his triumphs. The son of a typical Boer farmer who could do little more than read or write, young Smuts at school early distinguished himself. He became a fine classical scholar and eventually won a scholarship that was to take him to England.

Unfortunately, the bank which was administering this trust failed, but Cecil Rhodes stepped in, and sent Smuts to Cambridge. Here he won a gold medal and headed the list of both parts of the Law Tripos in 1894. On his return to South Africa he became associated with Rhodes, who intended to place him in Parliament. Then came the Jameson Raid, and the friendship between the two men was broken. Smuts becoming one of the most resourceful and determined of the great Empire builder's opponents.

In 1897 he was made state attorney to Kruger. It is said that he did his best to persuade Kruger to grant reforms, but, though Cecil Rhodes appreciated his unusual gifts, he considered him a mere youth, which indeed he was, and declined to take his advice upon the questions that were rapidly bringing the Transvaal and the British Empire to a state of war. When war broke out, Smuts took the field as a volunteer, but soon showed that he was as able a soldier as he was a lawyer, was advanced to the rank of general and when the war over he was first in command in Cape Colony. Smuts, like Botha, determined to make the best of the new conditions in South Africa and became a loyal British subject. Beyers, De Wet and others took the new oath but the difference between them was that Smuts meant to keep the pledge that he accepted, while the other seized the first opportunity to prove that they had the common German idea about a "scrap of paper."

In 1907 Smuts was chosen to go to England to present the famous Cullinan diamond to King Edward, and upon that occasion he was given a very warm reception. The new Premier of South Africa is now 48.

Gen. Smuts since the close of the war has made some exceptionally interesting pronouncements on Imperial and international affairs. "Not only the liberated territories of our allies, not only our small neutral neighbors, but the enemy countries themselves, require our helping hand," he declared in an interview in London. "Let us extend it in all generosity and magnanimity. The idea of organizing food supplies for those lands will help to purify an atmosphere cursed with war, hate and untruth. It would all have been so much easier if Germany had fought a clean fight and not stained her hands with such crimes, but even so we must be influenced by the larger considerations."

"We must feel that in the call to common humanity there are other purposes besides the prevention of war, for which a League of Nations is a sheer, practical necessity. One of the first steps must be to create an organization against hunger and ration all the countries where disaster threatens. The existing inter-allied machinery, which is the nucleus of a League of Nations, probably will undertake this task."

St. John's Man Couldn't Raise Hand to Head

George Koolery's Only Regret Now is That He Didn't Know of Tanlac Years Ago.

Statement after statement is now being made about Tanlac, the medicine that is accomplishing such remarkable results in St. John's and vicinity.

One of the latest to testify to the powers of the medicine is George Koolery of 84 McParlane Street. Mr. Koolery has been a sailor all his life, has sailed around the world more than once, and states that he has visited every port on the globe. Mr. Koolery has made St. John's his home for nearly thirty-five years and for the past three or four years has been employed as sailing vessel rigger by Harry Winsor.

"I have had to quit several good jobs during the past fifteen years," said Mr. Koolery while discussing his case at Connors' drug store, recently, "on account of stomach trouble and rheumatism, but this Tanlac has put me in shape to where there's no sort of hard work I couldn't do. "Nearly all my life I have been bothered with indigestion and sour stomach. I finally got so just the sight of food would sicken me and I have gone for days at a time without eating anything. There was a heavy feeling in the pit of my stomach like my food had lodged there in a lump and I constantly had a bursting headache. I would have dizzy spells when I could hardly stand up, and one time I got so dizzy that I fell from the mast where I was fixing the rigging. And talking about rheumatism; why, I had it in my shoulders and arms so bad at times that I couldn't raise either hand to my head."

"I tried every kind of liniment for the rheumatism and all sorts of medicines for my stomach, but nothing ever helped me a particle. In fact, I kept getting worse until a neighbor, living across the street from me, advised me to get Tanlac. Well, I will always feel grateful to that good lady for telling me about this medicine for it has really and truly made me feel like a new man. I can eat just anything I want, have no more trouble with my stomach, and the rheumatism is gone and I have for good, but I am going to keep on taking Tanlac for a while yet to make sure. My only regret is that I did not have Tanlac long ago for it would have saved me a world of suffering and lots of money, which I have paid out for other medicines. Just give me Tanlac and you may have all the other medicines."

The stomach regulates the condition of the blood and is the fountain head of health or disease as the case may be. Tanlac is intended primarily for the regulation of the stomach and the correction of catarrhal inflammation, but it is so uncommon for persons who have used it to find that it has relieved them, not only of indigestion, but also of rheumatism, kidney complaints and many other ailments not generally recognized as having their origin in stomachic trouble.

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative. adv.

Miss Furlong's Work Appreciated.

Yesterday afternoon a very pleasing event took place, when Miss Magie Furlong was waited upon at her residence, "Caribon Hill," Waterford Bridge Road, by some twenty of the ladies who had been associated with her in her work and presented with a handsome Waltham wrist watch, an autograph album and beautifully inscribed address. It is safe to say that no lady in Newfoundland played a more prominent part in patriotic work during the years of the great struggle than Miss Furlong, and this appreciation on the part of those connected with her in her labors is perhaps the best testimony to her worth and must prove a source of deep gratification. Miss Furlong, besides being Secretary of the Daughters of Empire for the last 8 or 10 years, and Convenor of the financial committee of the Children's Welfare Association, has held office in the Ladies' Khaki Guild and the Presentation Convent Association and been prominently identified with various other patriotic and philanthropic organizations. Following the presentation, Miss Furlong entertained her visitors to afternoon tea. The address was as follows:

St. John's, Oct., 1919.
Dear Miss Furlong:—Desirous of showing their appreciation of the active patriotic work you have performed during the memorable years of the Great War, a few of your associates have taken this opportunity of presenting you with this address and a small token of their esteem. The arduous work in which you have been engaged for the good of the Empire and more especially for those near and dear to us, has been one of unselfishness and devotion to the cause, besides being an inspiration to those with whom you have been closely associated, and who have always found you faithful and reliable in every emergency. Now that the need of patriotic work is happily over, your associates feel they cannot let the occasion pass without some slight recognition to you on their part for the invaluable assistance you have given them in their labors. They now ask your acceptance of a small memento of the many gatherings for work in which you took such a keen interest, and with the wrist watch now presented to you they also hand you an album containing the autographs of the twenty friends who have contributed to this presentation. With best wishes and kind regards from YOUR LATE ASSOCIATES.

In this weather so severe for this time of year, colds and coughs are more or less prevalent. You can keep free from colds by the occasional use of Mentholated Bronchial Lozenges, which will keep throat and bronchial tubes clear, and enable you to escape these troubles. Price 20c. a box.
Cream of Lilies, used judiciously, will keep your face and hands right during the cold weather. It is a non-greasy, non-sticky emollient, and its use will not promote the growth of hair. Price 20c. a crock.

Sir M. P. Cashin Vindicated.

AND A FALSEHOOD NAILED ABOUT THAT BACON.
Fishermen:—I am now stating the facts to my fellow fishermen, and salvors. Sir M. P. Cashin agreed with the Captain of the S.S. Euboron to save the cargo, for fifty per cent. of the cargo, and he gave us fishermen his (Cashin's) fifty per cent. as salvors to save the Bacon, which left him, (Cashin) nothing as to the Bacon part of the cargo, and we got our good half I can assure you, and we had plenty of Bacon, thanks to Cashin; but had it been Larder the wrecker from Halifax we would not have done so well. Could he do any better than give us his half, and the other half went to the underwriters. I being a salvor of that Bacon, and a fisherman must give Sir M. P. Cashin, the fisherman premier a square deal, and the false statements in the Squires-Coaker papers, that they are trying to influence the voters. I am for Sir M. P. Cashin, the broadminded, good hearted, love one another, fisherman's premier, and will give him a square deal as a fisherman from here. SQUARER DEAL AND SALVOR. Ferryland, Oct. 28, 1919.

S.S. Diana Reaches Port.

TWO MATES AT WHEEL FOR FIFTY HOURS.
From Capt. A. Burgess, of the s.s. Diana, we glean the following information: We left Occasional Harbor, Labrador, on Monday morning, Oct. 27th. Just after we had left we encountered a terrific gale from the N.E. with some snow, as we came up outside the Funks. On Tuesday night we made Cape Bonavista light and from then on we encountered a gale from the S.E., taking in a big wash. On Wednesday morning the gale chopped to the N.W.; heavy sea came aboard smashing everything including motor boats, mail room, ice houses and ribs. Capt. Burgess spoke in glowing terms of his two mates who stood at the wheel for fifty hours, when the captain asked for volunteers from the fishermen who relieved the mates who were nearly exhausted. On Thursday the Diana made land at Torbay and the captain decided to harbor at St. John's, reaching here yesterday at 1 o'clock. Capt. Burgess speaks in highest terms of all the members of his crew who brought the Diana through one of the severest storms in the history of his experience.

Storm Causes Havoc.

The storm of the last two days has done considerable damage to wharves, stages, and fishing boats. Conception Bay suffered badly. Pouch Cove, Portugal Cove, and Topsail at Holyrood felt the full effects. Details of the losses are not to hand yet. Yesterday the train could not get past Holyrood, the track in that section being torn up by the sea.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHICH IS THE GREATER TIE?

Which does the average woman care the most for—her husband or her children?

Which does the average man care the most for—his wife or his children?

We fell to discussing these fruitless, perhaps perennially interesting subjects in the average man's case.

Ruth Cameron

Was it the Right Thing to Do?

You remember that case. The wife caught her foot in a railroad frog, the husband tried to help her get it out and, finding that he could not, clung to her and died with her. The case was so spectacular that it was reported in newspapers all over the country and the inevitable wave of discussion followed as to whether it was the right thing for him to do considering the fact that they had three children.

It seems to me that, beautiful as his act was, there is no question but that it was a higher duty to stand by the children. Of course, with the engine thundering down upon him he had no time to think things out, and one can have only admiration for his splendid courage, even if one condemns his act as unwise.

When I put forward this point of view someone said, "But why should he abandon his wife for his children?"

Which Should He Have Chosen Then?

I explained that I did not think that question entered into this case, since what he could do for his wife and what he could do for his children were not comparable; he could only give her a few minutes' comfort, and he could be with them presumably for a life time. If the choice had lain between saving his wife and saving his children, that would have been another matter.

"Which do you think he ought to do, then?" someone asked.

And that launched us toward the discussion of which I spoke.

It is my individual opinion that to the majority of mothers their children mean more than their husbands.

hands. They get more happiness and real satisfaction out of them. A love between husband and wife to be deep and enduring must be an amalgam of sex love and deep friendship, and such loves are much rarer than mother love.

The Men Readers Will Have to Tell Us.

But as to whether a wife or his children mean most to a man, that seems to be a matter on which I cannot hazard even a private opinion. I am going to leave it to the fathers themselves. I am sure some of them will be moved to tell us what they think.

IT WAS QUITE EVIDENT.

Mrs. Keene was greeting the eligible bachelor guest effusively, and as she took his hat Miss Keene, in the next room, could be heard executing a song to her own accompaniment. "Ah!" exclaimed the fond mother proudly. "My daughter is breaking into song!"

"You are right, madam," growled the exasperated listener. "You can tell that she's breaking in, for obviously she hasn't been able to find the key!"

SHE SETTLED IT.

"Hallo, Martin!" said Jinks, as they met in the street. "You don't look up to much."

"I have been off colour lately," replied Martin sadly. "Saw the doctor the other day, as the wife was rather worried."

"And what was his verdict?"

"He said I needed a change of air."

"Oh, and what did your missus say?"

"Nothing," Jinks answered frankly. "She only went out and bought a new record for the gramophone."

THE COST.

If the goal is worth possessing it is worth its price in pain. If you have a dream worth holding it's worth struggling to attain. For the joys that last the longest, as the distant bends are turned, are not the easy splendors, but the joys which you have earned.

If you'd reach the mountain's summit you must have the will to climb. If you'd rise to fame and glory you must work and bide your time. For the victory that's sweetest when life's full returns are in, is the one that tried your patience and took all your strength to win.

If you hold a high ambition, you must be prepared to wait; You must trudge the road of courage and must bear the blows of fate; You must face your years of labor and press forward with a smile. For it's how you've fought to gain it, that will make your goal worth while.

MAIDENS FAIR.

In old time books the damsels swooned whenever they had occasion; and when with loving knights they spooned, it was with shy evasion. They were such coy and modest things, as hoar romance discloses, that if you spoke of wedding rings they'd blush to beat the roses. They languished in their virgin bowers, embroidering, crocheting, or spent the long and luscious hours the spinet softly playing. They all were known as "females" then, the maid and wife and widow; and when girls looked on bearded men, it made them pale and giddy. But times have changed; no more we greet the girls of Scott and Cooper; but in the modern tale we meet the woman known as "super." She doesn't care a playunc for dulcimer or needle; you couldn't coax this girl to swoon, no odds how much you wheedle. To her the old time arts seem vain, and old traditions phoney; she goes up in a monoplane, or rides a bucking pony. She's struck out fiction with a rush, and when a yarn is finished, it is the bearded men who blush and hide their heads diminished. I know it's treason, if not rot, but, tired of women "super," I long for blushing belles of Scott, and swooning girls of Cooper.

A Chance Word.

He told her she was looking older, just carelessly, as men will often speak; And, laughing, she dismissed the topic lightly And showed no pique.

That night two weary eyes looked in the mirror— Quite coyly, for it is a woman's way, The face was lined, she thought; the eyes were duller, The hair more grey.

He told her she was looking older; And, though he told her rightly, for my part I wish the thoughtless words had stayed unspoken— They broke her heart. —M. C. E.

NOW OR NEVER!

The Clutching Hand of COAKERISM IS REACHING FOR ST. JOHN'S.

CITIZENS! Protect your Property, your Savings and your Independence.

A VOTE FOR SQUIRES IS A VOTE FOR COAKER!

Liberals of St. John's! Keep Before You the High Ideal of Six Men for the Liberal Progressives by Thump- ing Majorities.

In St. John's East vote the straight ticket for Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox and in St. John's West for Bennett, Mullaly and Martin.

Farmers of St. John's East and West help to protect the city from the menace of Coakerism and you will thereby protect your own interests. The city is your great market and always gives you good prices and quick sales for your produce. Don't destroy that market then by voting in any of the four Guppyite candidates in St. John's East, or those in St. John's West. A Coaker stranglehold on the city would ruin the factories and other industrial concerns leaving nothing but an impoverished city to accept your produce.

Fishermen of Torbay and other places in St. John's East, unite with the city voters in destroying Coakerism. You know that the city is your best market for your fish, fresh and dried. Then don't help to kill St. John's by voting for any of the political catspaws whom Squires has unloaded on you. Let it be the straight ticket vote for Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox. Fishermen of Petty Hr., St. Phillips and Maddox Cove listen to the warning of the words above and vote only for Bennett, Mullaly and Martin.

Don't forget Mullaly, boys, at the head of the poll let us place him side by side with the leader John R. Bennett and the conquering hero, the popular Jimmy Martin. The popular "Jimmy" Martin, the conquering hero of the West End Grio, has captivated the voters of St. John's West. Now then altogether voters for a monster majority for himself and colleagues, Bennett and Mullaly.

The name of Vinnicombe in St. John's East is a victory name, one that never yet was against the popular side and the genial "Nix" is a worthy representative of the worthy and honored name. Let his majority, voters, roll up into the thousands side by side with his two popular colleagues, Higgins and Fox.

Young men of St. John's East, do as your fathers will do and as your forefathers did, honor the great name of Fox one well remembered in St. John's East. You will have in Cyril Fox a young man whom you will be proud to roll up for him a big majority with Higgins and Vinnicombe.

The ever popular Billy Higgins is still as popular as ever. He is a can't lose candidate sure and arouses the enthusiasm of his numerous array of supporters amongst all classes in St. John's. With two such noble colleagues as Vinnicombe and Fox, the greatest victory of the lot will be won for them in St. John's East.

"Don't forget Mullaly" a good thing cannot be said too often. Roll up the big majority boys for him on the straight ticket vote.

the Brownrig who has the cheek to ask you for your vote.

The thousands of factory and other employes have their all to lose on this election should the Guppyites get control of this city. Vote them down employes and protect your families.

Mobrule is not wanted in St. John's. Law and order must be maintained for the protection of our people, for our homes and our workers and women and children. Vote then for the Liberal Progressive and peace, order and prosperity in St. John's.

Liberals of Hr. Grace, don't forget your noble friend A. W. Piccott. Remember him now and give him a great majority along with his popular colleagues, Parsons and J. Gosse.

Squires of St. John's don't be fooled by the trumped up claims that Squires will win. These shouts are the last gasps of the beaten enemy and a repetition of the same old stuff got of years ago by politicians who were afterwards unmercifully trounced at the polls.

Arthur English will be the champion foot-poller in this election. Coaker put him in the hole sure this time.

Hundreds of dollars are being got from the barrel these days to put out on freak bets for the purpose of fooling the unwary into the belief that

"Syrup of Figs" Child's Laxative

LOOK AT TONGUE! REMOVE POISONS FROM STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS.

Accept "California" Syrup of Figs only—look for the name California on the package, then you are sure your child is having the best and most harmless laxative or physic for the little stomach, liver and bowels. Children love its delicious fruity taste. Full directions for child's dose on each bottle. Give it without fear. Mother! You must say "California."

Squires will win. The barrel man is getting so desperate now that he would almost bet Arthur English would head the poll.

Monday night at 8 p.m. the victory will be won by tremendous majorities for Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox in St. John's East and Bennett, Mullaly and Martin in St. John's West.

Conception Bay Liberals are all in favor of the popular cause. Coakerism has become extinct in that part of the Island and all the enemy will be defeated. Nine men sure for the Liberal Progressives.

A vote for Squires is a vote for Coaker and a vote for Coaker spells the ruin of St. John's.

A vote for a Guppyite independent is one which sets a poor example to the man who has to work for a living.

The young voters are a solid unit for the Liberal Progressives. Well done lads your countrymen are proud of your determination to bury Guppyism out of sight.

Squires struck the wrong place when he pitched his Guppyite tent in St. John's West. Never again will he so insult the intelligent, noble voters of that great district.

Campbell, not spoken of at all; nobody in sight who appears to be willing to vote for him. This is the Guppyite who grates about graters, whilst he himself has been fed on Government pap during the last ten years.

Placenta and St. Mary's sure and certain for Walsh, Sullivan and Sinnott. No Guppyites need there apply.

Burin has gone over the top strongly in favor of Currie and Bartlett. Well done Burin, you have helped to Kill Coakerism and put Squires in the hole.

The Guppyites are planning another united effort as a last shove off before polling day with a view to try and make people believe they are going to win. The town will be raked of all the Guppy touters and heisters so as to show how "strong" they think they are. There are many old-time voters in St. John's, however, who recall the days when similar splurges were made by a party who were cock sure of carrying the city, and blew in money galore on all kinds of fancy bets. True they made a big flare up like Squires, and gathered a goodly force of touters but they were swamped on polling day by the popular vote and never afterwards realized what struck them. So will it be with Squires. The count on Tuesday will show his men at the bottom of the poll notwithstanding all the noise and bluster of his Guppyite followers.

A False Cry.

The shibboleth "reduce taxation" has been one of the cards which the Opposition has so gloatingly laid on the table as a winning trump in this election. In spite of the assured ruin that would follow in the wake of Squires' and Coaker's meddling with the tariff rates, the opposing section of the press has made many attempts to convince the people that immediate reduction of taxation is for their benefit, but fortunately for the country that advice has not been taken by the majority of the people, and the verdict is yet in favor of those who propose to maintain the present rates until the country can afford to reduce them. We have every reason to hope that that will soon be. Newfoundland's claim of $30,000,000 for her expenditure in war efforts, has been sent to the British Government in answer to a request for the same, and assurances are made that payment will be made as quickly as possible. Of this thirty million dollars fifteen has been expended, and the remaining fifteen is proposed to be spent on the pensioning of our returned disabled heroes and in providing for those who were bereft of their sons' support through that love which caused a "man to lay down his life for his friend." This expenditure is proof of the fact that the Cashin Government intends doing its best for the real heroes of our country, and is a reason why the soldiers and sailors are supporting the Government candidates. Squires has said nothing definite about what he intends to do, but has cloaked his purposes by ambiguous phrases and tries to catch the votes by allowing his chief heeled to talk sectarianism, imaginary confederation and less taxation, while he proposes inwardly, to ruin our country's revenue, and thus pave the way for real confederation. Voters, do you doubt this? Then ask Mr. Squires, and your answer received will assure you that you can only give your vote for the Cashin Party, if you wish to retain your independence.

Talking of taxation, as applied to Squires and Coaker we ask the intelligent voters of this country what hope of fulfillment lies in Squires' sayings, when it is known that, should he be elected, Squires proposes to repeal the Income Profits Tax, which in 1918 brought in to the revenue of this country the sum of $1,200,000. Do not believe for a moment that Squires can at one blow reduce taxation by roughly one million dollars, and then still further reduce it and also keep the country from going under. The idea is preposterous. It is made more ridiculous by the assertions of the Squiresite organs that this $1,200,000 means nothing to the merchants who pay it, because the said merchants make that much extra out of the people, i.e., out of you voters. Think not for a moment that this is so. The merchants would not back up Squires if this repeal did not mean something extra in their pockets, and it is up to you voters to see to it that Cashin is put back, who with his supporters, will see that the merchant helps out of his savings to pay more than you out of your meagre wage. In yesterday's Advocate the statement appears that Cashin intends keeping up taxation, and to cut out the profits tax, or words to that effect. It is a deliberate bluff, for the Advocate editor knows that Squires is promising to repeal the Income Profits Tax, and that Cashin has no intention of doing it. If a man makes a deliberate misstatement of one thing can he be believed when he makes other statements? The taxation-ery of Squires and Coaker is a huge catch cry designed to fool the voters. Squires cannot reduce taxation while Coaker spends millions in reckless gambling, without the country going on the rocks, and just as sure as Squires and Coaker get control, this country will go under, unless before twelve months has elapsed there is another general election (as foreshadowed) as a result of a collision between Squires and his loving twin leader Coaker. Are you satisfied with this men of Newfoundland? Are you satisfied to gamble with your country or to allow Squires and Coaker, noted irresponsibles, with notable records, to plunge you into ruin, and under the heels of another country, without your consent? Make your choice to-day, and in making your choice, seriously consider the issue at stake, and vote wisely; turn Squires and his schemers down, and elect the Liberal Progressive candidates, so that your future may be assured.

The Voice Of the People.

Much a-mewment is caused daily by the frantic attempts of the Advocate to try and delude the city people as to the sentiments of the outport voters. The Opposition press, especially the Advocate, insinuate by their writings that the messages appearing in the Government papers are not trustworthy, and are not indicative of the real state of affairs. We wish to state that they are genuine. But can the Advocate say the same of their messages? Come brudder! In fact the Advocate writers take apparent delight in insulting the intelligence of our citizens, the same citizens whom W. F. Coaker dubbed bums and loafers repeatedly in the columns of the Advocate. Just what credence can be given to the messages appearing in the Opposition press, it has been proven that forged signatures have been appended to messages appearing therein, and libels have been taken by reason of the utterly false and lying statements so glaringly made by the Government opponents. Hon. R. A. S. had to go to Port de Grave to try and tow the "David" off the "rocks." Coaker, report says, is so sick with fear that he had to seek refuge in his Port Union bungalow, (where he removed the bandages from his arm) and think out a means of getting even with that "black rascal," and so the list might be extended. The voice of the people though has gradually been swelling more and more into unison, and the dominant words of its music have been "Squires Can't be Trusted." "Coaker is not the man," as Coakerism means retrogression and retardation to our country. The messages appearing in the Government press are as fully representative of the sentiment of the people as those printed by our opponents and are, as we have already said, reliable. The voters will not forget this insult given to them by the confederation press. Neither the Advocate's whine nor the Post and Star's appeals can make the people forget that their intelligence

Beware, beware, 'tis Halloween, This is the night when ghouls are seen; If things like this you see about, They're Squires' candidates, no doubt; Of the turnip head and the rotten stick Beware! beware!! beware!!!

has been slighted as much by insinuation as by the bad breaks of the Post on two previous occasions in this campaign. The intelligence of the city voters of the East End is again flouted when the Advocate tells them that if they vote for four candidates their vote is spoiled. Are the intelligent voters of St. John's east so illiterate that they don't know how to mark their ballots or how to distinguish three X's from four. Surely the Advocate has lost its sense of decency entirely. The East End voters will resent this base insult to their intelligence on Polling Day, and concordant with the outport people the shout will be raised, and Squires and Coaker will shake with fear for CASHIN HAS COME BACK.

A Race For The Top!

Between St. John's East and St. John's West.

The tremendous upheaval of popular sentiment in St. John's West to-day, in favor of Bennett, Mullaly and Martin, has inspired such hopes of a wonderful majority that many enthusiastic supporters declare they are going to work so as to make a race to reach the great top notch vote assured to Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox in St. John's East. These loyal enthusiastic champions of St. John's West recognize that they are under somewhat of a disadvantage in having to fight seven opponents as against only four that the East End candidates have up against them, nevertheless they will attempt the race with all the energy, vim and determination possible. As a big start off they have the thousands of straight ticket enthusiasts, firm, loyal and sincere followers, all bent upon a single purpose to work for and vote and support Bennett, Mullaly and Martin. In addition to this, hundreds of laborers, mechanics and other workers have decided to throw in the weight of their influence on this the popular side; and daily and hourly the ranks are being augmented, so that all hearts are now beating in unison and all hands joined up for a single purpose the election of Bennett, Mullaly and Martin by record majorities. Let it be a race then, free and independent voters of St. John's West, and though Mr. Higgins with his two men are going to reach a tremendously high figure, get after them and catch them. Mr. Higgins, we know, is too

WORKMEN! READ THIS!!

The "Daily Star" and the Workingmen's Party. A Reply to the Dastardly Attack in Yesterday's Issue of That Paper.

Editor Evening Telegram Dear Sir,—Kindly publish the enclosed letter, a copy of one sent the editor of the Daily Star, in answer to his dastardly attack on us in yesterday's issue of his paper. Yours respectfully, WILLIAM LINEGAR, JOHN CADWELL, MICHAEL FOLEY.

workingmen and the workingmen will look after us. And in future kindly refrain from associating our names with the name of Dr. J. S. Tait, the Independent Candidate for St. John's West. We have absolutely no connection with him. If there is anything else you would like to know about the Workingmen's Party we will be glad to give it. In future, however, refrain from slandering the workingmen of St. John's West, for when you slander us you slander them. We are sending copies of this letter to the other papers. Yours respectfully, WILLIAM LINEGAR, JOHN CADWELL, MICHAEL FOLEY. The Workingmen's Candidates. St. John's, Oct. 31, 1919.

Dear Sir,—Seeing that you claim that your newspaper is fair and "liberal," you will not refuse to give this statement of ours equal prominence to the statements concerning the candidates of the Workingmen's Party that appeared in the Daily Star yesterday. The article in question was, in our opinion, the most unjust, unfair, unfounded and entirely base article of the many similar ones that have been published in the Star during this campaign. How you, who edit a paper claiming to be the exponent of a clean public life and of a clean Press, could permit such a despicable cowardly attack on the Workingmen's own representatives to appear in your journal we cannot understand. Are we to infer that the Star's much boasted cleanliness and fair-play was but a myth—a mere figure of speech? Can you not understand that your attack, mean and despicable as it was, is the work of political thugs, cowardly vilifiers and small-minded, small-souled slanderers?

Now Then, St. John's! PUT SQUIRES IN THE HOLE—ALL HANDS TO THE FRONT. Men of St. John's, you will be face to face on Monday with your twin enemies, Squires and Coaker. Be on the alert then so that heeled will not blind you or dazzle you with their misleading cooked up telegrams and reports about how they are going to win all over the country. These are only wily dodges of theirs planned to deceive you as to how things are going with the hope that you will be foolish enough to do as they want you to do, that is vote for the Coaker-Squires candidates. The country at large does not want any change for the opinion of reliable unbiased men who have had telegrams and letters from the most important places is strongly to the effect that Squires cannot win. It is all noise and bluster with him, his campaign has been all gas, like an inflated balloon and has not behind it the solid support of the great body of independent and intelligent voters. It is up to St. John's now to be wide awake to the danger, now to be wide awake to the danger. Let all hands step to the front and set blanket trimmer to whisper false happenings into your ears. Fight the good fight against the evils of Coakerism and put Squires and his confederates well in the hole with all his candidates. Vote the straight ticket only for Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox in St. John's East and for Bennett, Mullaly and Martin in St. John's West.

Now Then, St. John's!

Noble Young Patriots.

OF ST. JOHN'S EAST AND WEST. Your attitude in this campaign is worthy indeed of the parents who reared you and of the land of your birth, for we have witnessed the great approval you have given and the strong support you have rendered towards the triumph of a worthy cause. You have proven yourselves patriotic to the cores of your hearts and history shall record how your city and your country, your homes and your families, needed your protecting influence and support, that you did not fail to do your duty. Do not forget to go, in all your respective booths east and west, to vote for those candidates of the Liberal Progressive Party who are as well known to you. No young man should neglect this important part of the work through any reason whatever for the fulfillment of this means the finishing stroke to all the good work you have been performing right up to the present. Above all now, hold on strongly to the purpose and beware above all, of the false cries and false hopes of victory that your opponents are circulating. Be as firm as a rock, as firm as every other staunch supporter of the cause, and then you will have the pleasure of joining in the great rejoicing on behalf of the popular cause that so many thousands of the noble, manly young voters are supporting all over St. John's.

'Twill Be The Greatest Victory of All.

WELL DONE ST. JOHN'S WEST! What is destined to go down in our political history as the most marvellous achievement of a free and noble people, will be the victory of Bennett, Mullaly and Martin over the Squires-Coaker assaulters, who have been leveling their whole strength against the citadel of St. John's West since the beginning of this campaign. Money has been poured out in all directions by Squires and his heeled with a lavishness unprecedented in order to seduce good men and try to come into their camp, and criss and hulsabooos of all kinds have been raised to swing the sentiment in their favor but it's "all no use." There is no break amongst the people; they stood fast and firm and beyond this Squires "shall not pass." His few hundred will sing small after polling day, when he sees the thousands who have voted for Bennett, Mullaly and Martin crowd around the Returning Officer's room to make the winning ring for those three conquerors heroes. That great victory then will constitute a record unique in the annals of our local history, for it will be the Waterloo of an enemy who manipulated all the strings that his hypocritical ingenuity could devise to tear down the citadel that is guarded by the great big popular Liberal vote in St. John's West. Already we can hear the cheers of the multitude of the men, the women, the boys and the girls responding in the air to their loud, uproarious shouts as they ward for Bennett, Mullaly and Martin.

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE WARRANT FOR THE KAISER.
Downing Street knows nothing of the report that the Allies have taken for the first steps in demanding the Kaiser from Holland. They will ask for his body, but there are still reasons for delaying the demand. One is that the Belgians, backed by the Allies, are now pressing the Dutch for great concessions on the Dutch-Belgian frontier, and that matter had better be out of the road before we table the next demand. A still more important reason is that the Peace Treaty, which contains the international warrant for the Kaiser's trial, has not yet been ratified by all the Allies. We require America's signature on the warrant before we present it in the name of democracy.

HENDON'S NEW GUISE.
Out at Hendon (on the north-west outskirts of London) aviation ground, a new Flying Club has been opened, a place where all the youth and beauty of London are to motor out for golf, country air, jazzing, dancing, "flips," "joy-rides" in the air. It is a development of the American country club idea, and it seems likely to be popular here, since another similar club has been founded away down in Sussex. It is also interesting as an attempt to revive the use of aerodromes for amusement. The old Saturday and Sunday flying displays of the days before the war, are gone for good. You cannot get crowds to assemble to watch aeroplanes now. The other day I saw a Vickers fly over the Clock Tower at Westminster, on a level with the face of Big Ben, and scarcely a soul glanced at it. But pleasure flights are sought as eagerly as ever, and their provision should become a regular industry. The Hendon aerodrome people are enterprising in other ways also. They have turned the aircraft factory over to making furniture, and the furniture at their new club was all made at the flying ground.

UNDERGRADUATES AT THE UNIVERSITIES.
Advance parties of the host of freshmen who are going up to Oxford and Cambridge in the coming term are beginning to dribble into these towns, where almost every other private dwelling seems likely to be a university lodging house. As far as Cambridge is concerned, most of the arrivals whose presence is at present unofficial are married men, these being demobilized officers or students from India and other distant climes. College officers, who have had the time of their lives in preparing for the unexpected rush of aspirants for a University degree, are taking belated holidays from which they will be returning in a few days to be ready to receive the men. The largest entry of freshmen in an October term at Cambridge hitherto has stood at 1,000, but this number will be completely dwarfed by the arrivals expected during the first ten days of next month, which are said to be likely to amount to as many as 3,000, and there is a very substantial waiting list.

SYNDICATED DRAMA.
A popular player recently expressed the conviction that things were all right with the British theatre, which had, indeed, never been more vital. But popular players are rather prone to think in terms of the box office than of art, and so far as the commercial aspect of the theatre is concerned there is doubtless reason for the faith of this confident optimist. Artistically the situation is less encouraging. The theatre is in a state of transition, and we seem to be approaching an era of syndicated drama, whose main spring is frankly and primarily the dividend. A wealthy combine, whether it exploits art or merchandise, is formidable, and it is significant that the repertory movement has almost abandoned its activities, while such agencies as the Stage Society and others which aimed to keep alive the feeble flame of the intellectual drama in London, have apparently given up the struggle. The syndicate is rapidly superseding the actor manager, who so long dominated the theatre, and who, with all his faults, was often artistically inspired. The Lyceum Theatre under Henry Irving, the Haymarket under the Bancrofts, and later His Majesty's Theatre under Sir Herbert Tree, were centres of enterprises not entirely remote from art. With the syndicate it is different; good business rather than high ideals is the compelling motive. A tragedy or a farce, a comedy of manners, a comic opera or a pseudo-comic revue, all are grist to the mill. The average theatrical season nowadays is largely a succession of garish frivolities, gaudy ensembles, spurious romances, "dime" melodramas, treacherous comedies, and insane farces; the things which merely captivate the senses, and are an idle entertainment for idle hours.

GERMAN EMIGRATION.
One of the effects of the war in general, and of the Peace Treaty especially, will be a tremendous emigration movement from Germany. There are not many countries in the world left open to them, and they have therefore to confine themselves to the neutrals and South America. The European neutrals, however, keep frontiers comparatively closed, and, besides, they are all small countries which do not offer much scope to the emigrants. There remains, then, only South America, and in the first place the Argentine. Months ago already the Germans sent out a Commission to study the prospects of immigration in that country. It is unknown what this Commission has reported, but in the meantime the German emigration has begun on a big scale. A Dutch correspondent says that when recently in the tically the same reply. They said that under the present conditions life in Germany was unbearable, and that they preferred to leave their country to try and begin a new existence in foreign lands. They were, all of them, educated people.

WOMEN SMOKERS.
Smart women have smoked in restaurants and in Bond Street teashops ever since the beginning of the war, and earlier. Even in the little demure Soho places, where the suburban family party goes for a 2s. 9d. (66 cents) dinner before the theatre, one sees elderly ladies smoking cigarettes with their sons and daughters. I think it is only lately that women can smoke unremarked in the ordinary lower middle class teashops, those used by City workers and artisans, but twice this week I have noticed it done by dowdy women, who obviously smoked because they liked it. Of course, when I speak of lower middle class teashops, I do not wish to imply that no other classes use them. Round Whitehall or Charing Cross you may eat your poached egg side by side with a bricklayer or a bishop; you may see a Duke's brother or a millionaire Member of Parliament looking the picture of misery as he tries to catch the waitress's attention.

Jocular Jurymen.
The foreman, however, was not satisfied to allow the inquest to finish so tamely. He knew there was something else to be done, so he rose and solemnly told his fellow-jurymen: "I think we ought to move a vote of thanks to the widow!"

THE PANGS OF YOUTH.
Cries of sorrow rent the peaceful air of the suburban street, and the kind old gentleman passed to see if he could administer consolation.

MUCH LESS TROUBLE.
Above her grim, determined face, the lady in the front row of the pit wore a large, well-feathered hat. Muted behind her grew to cries of rage, but she paid no heed.

CASHIN WILL COME BACK.
The last witness had been heard, the foreman considered it his duty to sum up before he announced the verdict. The deceased man, he said, was well known to them all. They regretted that he should have come to such an end, but they all knew he was a congenial imbecile!

Treaty Will Be Signed Armistice Day.

RATIFICATION HOPED FOR NOV. 11
LONDON, Oct. 30 (Reuter Ottawa Agency).—Replying to Lord Robert Cecil in the House of Commons yesterday, Hon. Cecil Harmsworth said it was hoped that the Treaty of Versailles would be ratified on Armistice Day November 11 in which case it would come into force on that date. Under Article 5 of the Treaty, the first meeting of the Council of the League of Nations would be convened by President Wilson. Mr. Harmsworth said he was unable to anticipate President Wilson's decision as to the time and place.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. A compromise scale of 85 cents an hour straight time, and $1.25 an hour overtime was proposed in a telegram

GREENWOOD IS RIGHT.

LONDON, Oct. 30. (Reuter despatch.)—Sir Hamar Greenwood in a speech in London, announced that the Hon. Walter Hume Long, First Lord of the Admiralty had agreed to his suggestion that every British battleship sailing abroad should carry commercial travellers and representatives of British business firms. It only remained for the Lord of the Admiralty to agree to this step.

CANADIAN SUGAR.

OTTAWA, Oct. 30. No more licenses for the export of sugar from Canada are being issued. Contracts which called for shipments of sugar to the United States have been cancelled by the Canadian Trade Commission it was learned to-day. Export of sugar along the border points which has been permitted to some extent in the past, also has been stopped despite the many hundreds of requests for sugar, being received by the Trade Commission. At the office of the Commission it was stated if care is exercised by the consumers there is sufficient sugar in Canada for domestic use, providing there are no strikes or transportation tie-ups. Canada is one of the best situated countries of the world in this respect, it was stated, and in addition to the 1919 requirements being safeguarded. Refiners in Canada have advised the Commission that needs of 1920 now appear well covered in regard to raw material.

G.W.V.A. READY FOR ACTION.

REGINA, SASK., Oct. 30. The Saskatchewan command of the G.W.V.A. sent a message to C. G. McNeill, National Secretary to-day, asking for the calling of emergency convention from all Canada to meet in Ottawa, as quickly as possible to discuss latest developments regarding the re-establishment, and to outline a policy that will be followed by the organization as a result of the unsatisfactory report of the Parliamentary Committee.

SILVER IS HIGH.

LONDON, Oct. 30. (Reuter despatch.)—Owing to persistent demands from China and the shortage of supplies the spot price of silver reached sixty six and one half pence per ounce here yesterday, a new record. As this is above the price at which it pays to melt down silver coins, namely sixty six pence. Much interest is taken in the steps the Government might take to meet the situation.

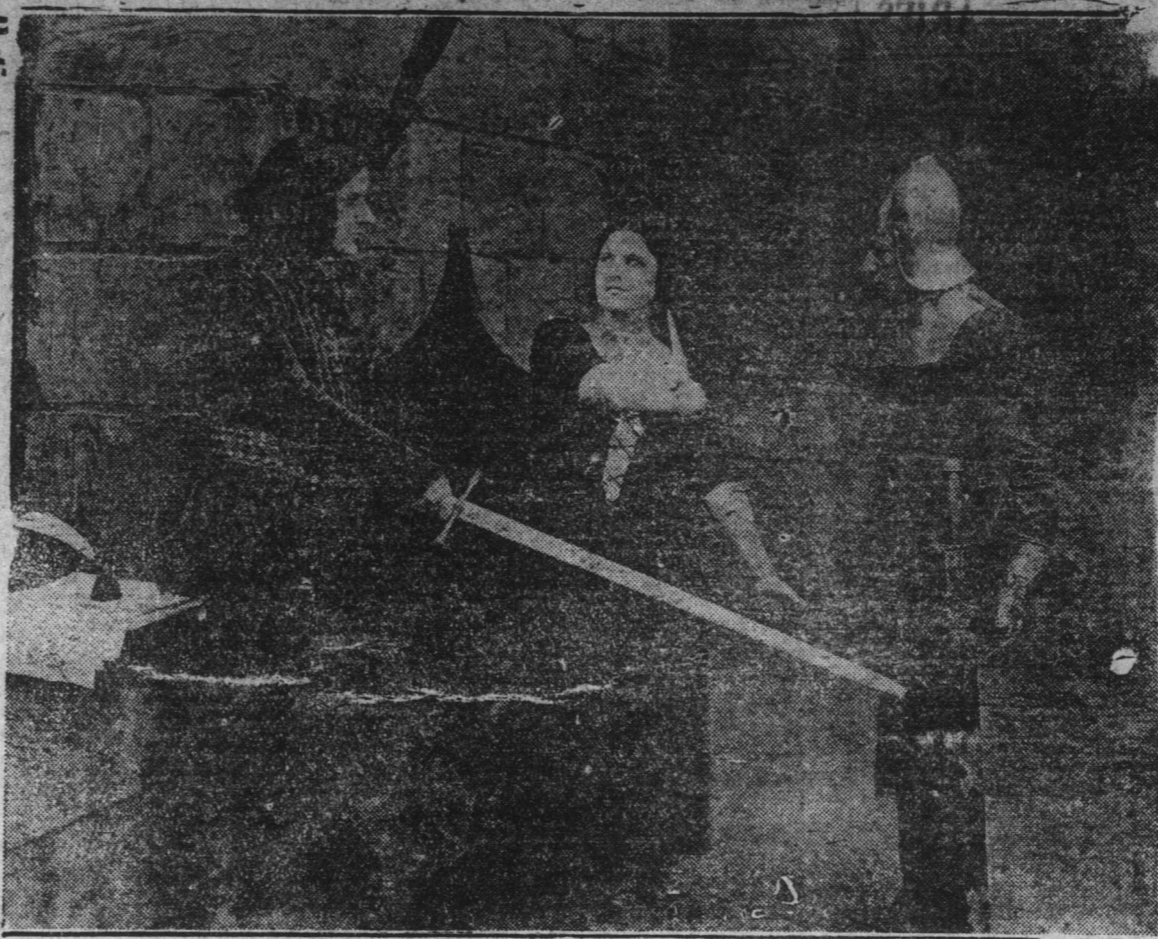

Viscount Grey

LABORED TO PREVENT THE GREAT WAR AND HE JUSTIFIED ENGLAND.

"We worked for peace up to the last moment and beyond the last moment. How hard, how persistently, and how earnestly we strove for peace last week the House will see from the papers that are before it. But that is over so far as the peace of Europe is concerned. We are now face to face with a situation and all the consequences which it may yet have to unfold." Thus did Sir Edward Grey, as he then was, draw to a conclusion his great speech in the British House of Commons on that memorable "Bank Holiday Monday" in 1914. It was the last of the famous twelve days which lay between the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia and the onset of the great war. In those times, events followed so thick and fast upon one another that few people realized the significance of the great deeds that were being performed and the stupendous decisions that were being made all around them. It was not, in many cases, until long afterward that there could, in the nature of things, be any just appraisal of the part played by anyone. Telegrams, statements, ultimatums, all of which have since become historic, were matters of almost hourly occurrence, and hardly had they been read before they were swept out of the ambit of public concern by another series more momentous, more utterly catalytic still. Few people had a settled policy in these days. Opportunism, a desperate desire to stem the tide somewhere and in some way, was the order of every hour. There were, however, certain brilliant examples of clear vision and firm steadfast purpose, and of these, the British Foreign Minister was a notable instance. He labored for peace. The peace of Europe, how best to secure it and how best to maintain it, had been the end all and be-

FOREIGN PRESS OPINION

AMERICAN.

"Take a Ride in My Airship."
Pony balloons, dirigibles built for two and capable of making forty miles an hour, are promised by a Western manufacturing concern. This is turning aerial invention into a promising field of development. Chummy roadsters of the air should greatly expedite the popularity of aerial transit.—From the New York World.

Sweeping the World.
The vote in Norway on prohibition was almost two to one in favor of the proposed legislation, which indicates that the dry wave has begun in some parts of Europe.—Calgary Alberta.

Nothing Like Advertising.

Bankers in conference have decided that it is a good thing to advertise in newspapers. Of course, it is. It is always wiser to tell your own story than to entrust the telling of it to another. Banks and railroads have come in for so much abuse and misrepresentation that those who say a good word for them put themselves under suspicion. There is nothing like talking straight and backing up what is said with facts and figures.—From the San Francisco Chronicle.

A New Sport.

A new sport, which one might reasonably expect to become popular, has been discovered on the Hudson River. In order to enjoy it one needs a canoe and, which is more difficult to obtain, a paddle-wheel ferry boat. Then, if one is skilful in guiding the canoe, one may coast on the waves raised by the ferry boat and travel at the same rate of speed without dipping a paddle. The paddle-wheel, it appears, makes a series of waves moving in the same direction, and if the canoe is poised on the down slope of one of these waves it will be kept in motion, steadily coasting the down grade of water and steadily carried forward by the wave motion. During the summer the mysterious behavior of a single canoe following a ferry boat on the Hudson has often surprised and interested the passengers; and there perhaps this new kind of voyaging may stop. But it seems a temptation to other canoeists, wherever they can get opportunity to try it.

Suppression of Speech.

William Ivens, the former Methodist minister who was a leader in the western disturbances of last summer, has been delivering some addresses in Upper Canada in defence of the opinions and actions of his Winnipeg associates. His speeches have been radical but not seditious and, hence, they were within the law. The Montreal Journal of Commerce, having in mind some attempts which have been made in Ontario to prevent Mr. Ivens from holding these meetings, points out that when there is no attempt of the kind "he gets an audience of a couple of hundred or so" and "when somebody undertakes to stop him from speaking he gets a gathering of several thousand." "It is not hard to see," the paper adds, "which method results in less harm." And the case will always be as the Journal of Commerce indicates. It was a wise man who described free speech as a "safety valve." Attempts at the suppression of free speech will always breed sympathy for the man directly affected and win for him a following which he could never otherwise command. With sympathy it will breed also discontent and other evils. There is a better way to deal with those who voice extreme opinions, provided they keep within the law, than to deny them opportunity of speech. That better way is to let them talk as often as they like and as much as they like. People will soon tire of listening to them for, after all, the great majority of people are sensible and quite capable of appreciating how little value is to be attached to the extreme statement.—Sydney Record.

Directions for the Poll

Each elector, on entering the Poll, shall show his name, signature and address.

After doing so he shall receive a Ballot Paper in the above name, and, if required, a Deputy Returning Officer, or a Clerk, one of the Candidates or an agent of theirs, shall, before he receives his ballot paper, take notice of the names of the candidates.

The voter is to vote only on the names of the candidates. After receiving his Ballot Paper he shall go into a private room, and, with the assistance of the Deputy Returning Officer, shall place a cross in the space containing the name of the Candidate or Candidates whom he intends to vote.

The voter will then fold his Ballot Paper, so as to show a portion only, with the initials of the Deputy Returning Officer, and it so folded up to the Deputy Returning Officer and the Deputy Returning Officer shall, without it, ascertain that it is the ballot paper which he furnished to the voter, and then immediately place it in the Ballot Box. The voter shall leave the Polling Station if the voter inadvertently folds his Ballot Paper he may return to the Deputy Returning Officer, who will hand it to him.

If a voter votes for more than one name he is entitled to vote for any one of the names which he can afterwards prove, his vote will be void.

If a voter takes a Ballot Paper out of the Polling Station, or if he puts any other Ballot Paper in the Ballot Box than the paper which he has received from the Deputy Returning Officer, he shall be liable to a fine of Five Hundred Dollars.

Guilty Hands!

GIVING A TRUE AND FASCINATING INSIGHT INTO SCOTLAND YARD METHODS OF TRACKING CRIMINALS BY THE AID OF PHOTOGRAPHY.

Two men stood together in the little room. The place was in darkness, save for the stream of focused light from the powerful lantern one of the men held in his hand, directing on the object the other was bending over and examining with the aid of a large magnifying lens.

It was a piece of grimy, half-consumed tallow candle, which the man looking at it held in a pair of small tressers, as if it were something so priceless that it must not be touched by unhallowed hands. The lens hovered over some dents in the yellow-grey surface, on which the rays of the lantern were focused.

"Printed" on the Candle.

"There is not the slightest doubt about it," he said—"there are three of them."

"Finger-prints?" asked the other, the lantern-holder.

"Yes."

"Clearly defined?"

"They will photograph beautifully." He laid the candle down gently on the table, while the other switched on the electric light, that flooded the room. He was a man of middle height; in dark grey jacket-suit, clean-shaven, with rounded, almost chubby features, and hazel eyes in which perhaps at this time there was a glint of triumph.—Inspector Kane, of Scotland Yard. Those dents in that candle meant another triumph for the famous detective. Already he almost felt himself gripping the wrist of the murderous hand that had left its prints there, and heard the click of the handcuffs on the wrists.

He had found the piece of candle lying beside the body of a man mysteriously murdered—stabbed to death—in a dingy garret in Soho. On the table in the room was an empty candlestick. Having dealt his victim those swift blows, stretching him at his feet, the murderer had snatched at the candle and bent over him to see whether there was still in him any flicker of life. Then he had dropped the candle and crept swiftly, stealthily away.

Overwhelmed by Clues.

Little did he dream that his fingers, fiercely clutching that candle, were printing there evidence that would bring him to the gallows. Would there really be finger-prints upon it? Detective Kane wondered. His surmise that there might be proved correct. The photograph was "beautiful." The murderer was run down and hanged.

Called in to the scene of some sensational, mysterious crime, the first question the detective asks himself is: "Are there any finger-prints of the perpetrator?" To the person inexperienced in the detection of crime, the discovery of finger-prints may seem an easy matter. The old detective knows how extraordinarily difficult it frequently is.

"Every room is full of finger-prints," declared one of our most famous Scotland Yard detectives—"prints of its occupant and of visitors to it. What you want are the finger-prints which some circumstance stamps as being those of the guilty person. These may stare you in the face, as it were; more frequently they are extremely difficult to discover. Sometimes, though you know there must be finger-prints somewhere about, they baffle every effort to discover them."

Scarcely Visible to the Eye.

The murderer and his victim had clearly been drinking together in the case of one mystery Detective Sexton was called upon to solve. Two glasses stood on the table, and Scarcely Visible to the Eye.

The murderer and his victim had clearly been drinking together in the case of one mystery Detective Sexton was called upon to solve. Two glasses stood on the table, and an empty bottle of cheap Beaune wine. The only thing that might be a finger-print was a scarcely-to-be-seen smudge on the black bottle. Submitted to the finger-print photography expert, the smudge quickly resolved itself into an excellent print, good enough to drag the reveler, with murder in his heart, to his doom.

The detective finds what he thinks is a finger-print, but it is the photographic expert who, by his art, makes the ghostly thing plain—a thing to be seen by all men; evidence that will convince a judge and jury, and send the guilty party to a convict prison or the gallows.

The detective suspects there are prints on some light-surfaced object—a piece of cloth or enamelware—but even the microscope fails to

"I HAVE PROVED"

Zam-Buk invaluable for eczema, both in the case of my baby and myself," says Mrs. L. Bonis of West Arichat, N.S. She adds: "Baby's skin was badly broken out, but repeated applications of Zam-Buk entirely cured it. "In my own case, I had eczema on my hands, which made it very inconvenient for me to do my housework. Particularly was this so, as it aggravated the trouble so to put my hands in water. By using Zam-Buk, however, I soon got relief, and it was not long before every trace of the trouble had disappeared. I really think no home should be without Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk is equally good for all skin injuries. All dealers 50c. box.

reveal them. The photographic expert fills a flat, broad camel-hair brush with dust of finely-powdered graphite or plumbago, holds it over the surface of the article, and shakes the dust upon it. When it is sufficiently powdered he blows off the dust that does not adhere to the surface with a pair of small bellows, and photographs what remains. That photograph is the photograph of the finger-tips that have touched the surface. In this way, in the case of a sensational crime only a year or two ago, prints were recovered from a white teacup that led to the conviction of a guilty woman.

If the print sought for is suspected to lie hid upon the surface of a dark substance, such as dark oak, the bowl of a black pipe, black leather, or ironwork, he fills the brush with white lead instead of graphite or plumbago.

The fingers of the person employed in ordinary work are, in a state of health, more or less greasy; but the person engaged in committing a crime is apt to perspire more freely. The excitement of the business; the fierce heart-throbs of desire, of terror; the frenzied wish to have done it and found safety—all conduce to render the finger-tips more excellent witnesses against him in the impressions they leave behind.

Chemistry Aids Him.

A piece of ordinary paper that he has held in his hand, and that shows no signs on its surface even when examined by the most powerful microscope, may, under treatments by the expert, bear evidence against him. He treats it with a solution of silver nitrate of about six per cent. strength, and the print of the guilty hand becomes clear to the camera. It was by this means that one of the wickedest criminals—a woman who by means of anonymous letters, sowed broadcast unfounded suspicions respecting innocent persons, and wrecked the happiness of many homes of those she hated—was brought to justice.

What danger could there be of anyone discovering the concocter of the letter, written secretly in a feigned hand and dropped into the pillar letter-box by the veiled figure, gliding life a shadow through the dim-lit suburban streets? She did not reckon with the march of science in the detection of criminals. The nitrate of silver solution showed finger-prints on one of the letters, and the writer's finger-prints—cunningly obtained without her suspecting it—were found to be, on comparing the prints, identical.

All Obstacles Are Surmounted.

Finger-prints on dust are readily photographed if they are on a dark surface. If they are on the dust of a window-pane, the best results are obtained by placing a dark background behind them, and photographing with the light coming obliquely from behind. Innumerable burglars who have entered by windows and skylights have learnt, to their cost, how effective this method of reproducing their finger-prints is.

Finger-prints in blood on a light surface present no difficulties. On a dark surface, such as the finger-prints on the japanned cashbox which brought to doom the Stratton perpetrators of the famous "mask murders," the photograph is made in a dark room, lit from the front with magnesium ribbon or an electric arc, care being taken to screen the direct rays from the camera lens.

So the hand of the criminal himself actually comes to the aid of the powers of justice to drag him to doom.

Blackfriars Bridge Begun.

The first stone of Blackfriars Bridge was laid on October 31, 1760. It was originally called Pitt's Bridge, in honour of William Pitt, the great Earl of Chatham, and if the foundations are ever disturbed, there will be found beneath them a metal tablet on which is inscribed in Latin the following grateful tribute of the citizens to the genius and patriotism of that illustrious statesman: "On the last day of October, in the year 1760, and in the beginning of the most auspicious reign of George III., Sir Thomas Chitty, knight, lord mayor, laid the first stone of this bridge, undertaken by the Common Council of London during the progress of a raging war (''fragante bello'') for the ornament and convenience of the city; Robert Milne being the architect. In order that there might be handed down to posterity a monument of the affection of the City of London for the man who, by the power of his genius, by his high-mindedness and courage (under the divine favour and happy auspices of George II.), restored, increased, and secured the British Empire in Asia, Africa and America, and restored the ancient reputation and power of his country amongst the nations of Europe, the citizens of London have unanimously voted this bridge to be inscribed with the name of William Pitt." A more appropriate or more deserved tribute it would be difficult to point out. The simple tablet lies deep in the bosom of the Thames, and its very existence is perhaps known but to few; and yet, far more honourable than all civic crowns—for more than all the wealth and titles secured to him and to his posterity by his Sovereign and the Legislature—was this affectionate and unbought voluntary testimony, "unanimously voted" by the citizens of London to the man who had restored to them the security of commerce and wealth, and the ancient renown which had rendered the name of Englishman respected over the world.

EASILY SUPPLIED.

As the would-be wit strolled through the town he saw a notice in a shop-window:

"If you don't see what you want in the window, come in and ask for it."

"I don't see what I want in the window," he announced, entering the establishment.

"Well, then, ask for it," said the shopkeeper invitingly.

"I've tried all over the town in vain," said the visitor sadly.

"What is it?" The proprietor was eager on the quest. "I have a better stock than any other shop of this kind in the place."

"Well, it's this way. I've found so many smart men in this town that I am in search of a first-class idiot."

Without hesitating, the shopkeeper turned to his assistant with the order: "James, bring a large sheet of brown paper and make this gentleman up into a nice parcel!"

The Phantom Torpedo Boats.

At the end of October, 1904, the news that a Hull fishing fleet had been fired on in the North Sea by Russian warships, and a trawler sunk with loss of life, roused a storm of indignation in England. As neither explanation nor apology could be obtained from the Russian admiral, Rozhdstvensky, popular fury rose to fever heat. Our Government then adopted stern measures. The Mediterranean, Channel and Home Fleets were ordered to concentrate at Gibraltar, and to clear for action, and the Russian Ambassador in London was informed that the Russian warships—which were steaming across the Bay of Biscay, on their way to Japan—would not be permitted to pass the Rock. The question of peace or war trembled on the balance. But the Russian fleet, obeying peremptory orders from St. Petersburg, turned into Vigo, and a collision was averted. Then the Russian admiral explained that the trawlers which had been sunk, and damaged had not been fired at directly, but the shots had been aimed at some Japanese torpedo boats, the presence of which, in the very midst of the fishing fleet, had been revealed to his searchlights, and the presence of suspicious-looking craft was confirmed by some of the fishermen. When international inquiry was held, and after witness came forward and admitted to having seen the torpedo boat question. One officer went as far as to assert that he saw men on the torpedo boats in Japanese uniforms. A question arises, what became of them? It can only be concluded that they were sunk by the Russian fire, their steel skeletons are rusting some day somewhere at the bottom of the ocean.

IT MIGHT TASTE BETTER.

Mrs. and Miss Subbubs were having a little treat. They'd gone to a cheap little restaurant and were having a "bit o' dinner."

They ate in silence for a time; then Miss Subbubs said:

"Nice bit o' tripe, ain't it, ma?"

"Well, mine's a bit stringy!" complained the older lady.

Miss Subbubs looked and laughed.

"Try it with yer vell off, dearie!" she said.

"THE BARN THAT WANT!"

There had been a storm during the night, and next morning everybody was out to discover what damage had been done.

Two farmers chanced to meet at the boundary fence of the adjoining properties.

"Well," said one of them, "she shook things up out my way, to be sure. By the way, Henry," he added, "did that new barn of yours get damaged?"

"I can't say," replied the second farmer. "I haven't found it yet."

OH, CRUEL FATE!

"Sybil," the youth softly whispered to her, "I am going to tell you something. I do not know just how you will receive it, but hope for the best. For some time it has been in my heart to tell you of it, but I had not the courage. Sybil—"

"Yes, yes, Hubert—go on!" the girl murmured, the third finger of her left hand itching perceptibly.

"It's this. The best bus leaves the end of your road in three minutes, and if I miss it I'll have to walk home."

WORSE THAN HE THOUGHT.

For years and years old Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins had dreamed of spending a holiday in London, and at last the great day was here. They had arrived at King's Cross, and were about to brave the unknown dangers of the metropolis.

"Now, Jane," admonished the old man firmly, "whatever you do, don't get separated from me, and don't try to cross the road alone, and remember that this city is full of people eager to cheat you."

At that moment a kindly constable noticed the old couple standing timidly on the kerb, and, with a smile, took Mrs. Jenkins by the arm and began to lead her across the busy street.

"Dang my buttons!" stormed old Jenkins. "I allus told her as someone would take a fancy to her, but I never thought as anyone would have the impudence to take her away afore my very eyes!"

NOT THE CAT THAT TIME.

It was the same old story. The cat did it!

That is what Jones's landlady said, when stamps were missing from the blotting-pad, when tobacco disappeared from his jar, when the sugar seemed to vanish like the morning dew, and when the tightly-closed tin of biscuits lost half its contents.

Rooms are hard to get, and Jones bore his misfortunes as calmly as possible. But he felt that the limit had been reached and passed when he went up to bed one night and saw a suspicious-looking hump under the blankets.

That cat had gone too far, he decided, as he reached under the dressing-table for a 10-lb. dumb-bell.

With a gleeful smile he brought that heavy iron weight down—crash!—on the hump.

In his bill at the week-end was an extra item:

"One hot-water bottle, 5s." plants and cut flowers, and abuse of each other.

Business was rather slack, and White, whose shop was No. 21, thought to wake things up by offering a packet of seed, "guaranteed to grow" something, with each pot plant he sold.

He was quite pleased with the result, until one morning he saw a new placard, large and bold, outside the shop of Black, his rival at No. 27. This read:
