The Broken Circle!

CHAPTER LIII.

"There is something strange in Miss Hatton's face to-day," said Leah's maid to her confidante, the housekeeper. "No one seems to notice anything wrong about her; but I am very anxious. She is so thin that I can never make her dresses to fit her now; and she is often so colourless that I have to use poudre de rose to make her presentable—she who had the loveliest bloom in the world."

"I see the change," returned the housekeeper, gloomily. "She thinks too much of other people. There is nothing like taking care of one's self. She has studied everything for Miss Hettie's comfort, but I have never heard her speak of herself."

"I cannot make it out," said the maid. "I am sure she has not been to sleep all night; she has sat up. I saw death in her face when I went into the room."

"I should think there is nothing wrong between her and Sir Basil," remarked the housekeeper.

"No, I am sure there is not," was the reply. "They are to be married when she comes back from France. Still I am unhappy about her; there is something the matter, I am quite sure. One night I had to go to her room, and she was moaning in her sleep like a dying child; and I have never seen such a face as she had when I went into her room this morning."

For the day and the hour were come. Sir Basil was to go with them as far as Dover, and see them safely on board. They were all four to start by the midday train from Arley to London.

Leah had measured her strength that morning, and found it rapidly fading.

"I could not live through two more days of it," she said. "Thank Heaven, it is almost over!"

She was passive, while her maid took all the pains she could to hide the shrinking of the graceful figure, the pallor of the beautiful face. She must keep up appearances while she was in England, among those who knew her; but when she was across the sea, she could give way, she could droop and die as she would—but not here.

She bade farewell to the grand old home where she had been so wretched, but so falsely happy. She stood for some time on the terrace where the passion-flowers grew—the spot where she had seen her lover first, and where her heart had gone out to him. She kissed the bare brown branches. They would live again; they would be covered with green leaves and starry flowers when leaves and flowers should gladden her eyes no more. She kissed the pictured face of Ghone, recalling every word that had been spoken between Sir Basil and herself on that day when they had stood in front of it. It was like parting with a living friend. She stretched out her hands with a great cry when she took her last look round the room where she had spent such happy hours. All earth and air seemed burning fire. Oh for rest, for change, for the coldness even of the grave!

Those who saw Miss Hatton's face when she left Brentwood never forgot it.

It was a strange journey to Dover. Sir Arthur was the only one who talked. Hettie avoided either looking at or speaking to Sir Basil, and Leah could have laughed in bitter amusement at the scene. Sir Arthur spoke of his niece's return, of the marriage, of Glen, of Basil in Parliament, and saw nothing wrong.

They stood together on deck at last, a blue sky above them, the sun shining on the white cliffs of Dover and on the sea, which was almost as smooth as a mirror.

Sir Arthur took Hettie to the other side of the vessel.

"They will have so much to say to each other; lovers always have. We will leave them alone, Hettie."

So they stood side by side, the deathly pallor of Leah's face hidden by her veil. A terrible calm had fallen over her. She loved Sir Basil still with her whole heart; she could have knelt down there, and have covered his hands with burning kisses and burning tears. She held them for a moment in a close grasp, while she looked in his face for the last time. The solemn shadow of eternity lay over her.

He was telling her something about Glen and about Parliament. She did not hear the words. To her the moment was solemn, as though her soul were on her lips, and her eyes were fixed on his with a strained, lingering gaze. How well she had loved him! And he had cared nothing for her; he had preferred some one else.

He was asking her if she was sorry to leave him, and she was unable to answer him. The white lips were quite stiff and cold.

Then there came a shout from the sailors. All was in readiness; those who were for shore must leave. The moments were numbered; her eyes never left him, her hand still held his.

"I must go," he said. "Good-by, Leah."

He bent down and kissed her lips. He started to find them so cold.

"Good-by," he repeated. "A pleasant, prosperous journey, Leah, and a happy return."

"Good-by, Basil; good-by my love," she said; and the next moment she was looking over the waters alone.

The rest of the journey was like a dream to her, and she never awoke from it until she stood in the salon of the villa at Mentone, and saw the duchess regarding her with tearful eyes.

"Great Heaven," she cried, "this is not Leah; this is a shadow! I thought it was Hettie who had been ill!"

"So it was. I have not been ill," said a voice which the duchess hardly recognized as Leah's. "I am well; but my journey has tired me."

CHAPTER I.

The most beautiful thing under Heaven is a young and beautiful woman; the sweetest of music is in woman's gentle tones, the most odorous perfume lives and breaths in her presence.

Among the lovely women of England, Lady Gladys Howard was one of the loveliest, one of the sweetest—a human flower of rare beauty, whose atmosphere was incense, whose laughter was the ripple of a summer stream, whose smile was a gleam from golden, sunlit skies.

"She is the most peerless girl in all England!" her proud father thought, one happy July morning.

The birds were singing in the air and in the trees, the bees were booming among the flowers, the zephyrs whispered that earth was now a reflex of heaven, and my lord of Swinford was conscious of a feeling of sweet content. It was the first that he had known since the loss of his wife, long ago, when Gladys was a little child. She lived again in their beautiful daughter—the same graceful and delicious presence—the same happy, unclouded brow.

Why had he not noticed all this before? He had neglected his child for five years. He had forgotten the living while brooding over the dead, and Gladys had not seen her father for five whole years until yesterday! He had been abroad; no one knew exactly where, and very few cared.

Sometimes Gladys marvelled that the Earl should care so little for his child and his beautiful home, but these perplexities were only transient clouds, chased away by the sunshine that was ever in her heart. She had a sweet and careful protector in Lady Marcia Howard, my lord's maiden sister, and Marcia loved her niece with all the devotion of her soul.

The Earl of Swinford knew this well; his wife and Lady Marcia had been fond friends, and when the countess was dying she had mutely placed Gladys in Marcia's arms. Her lips were motionless, but her eyes were eloquent, and she knew that her babe would never want a friend while Lady Marcia lived.

Lord Howard saw little of his child; he seemed to be oblivious of her existence. She was in good hands, and he became a rover. He was miserable, disappointed. The only woman in the world for him was gone; cut off in the flower of her youth, and his glory in life was dead. They had met in a romantic fashion, and loved as but few ever love. They wedded life had been a summer idyl, broken until they should meet again in the great Beyond!

He forgot his little child and turned his face to the wall. He only remembered the joy that was past, and a touching verse, over which his dead love had wept, when there should have been no shadow upon the beauty of their lives, came back to him, a solemn knell in every line.

One of us, dear—
But one—
Will stand by the other's coffin-bier,
And, look and weep,
While the marble lips strange silence keep—
He had read the verse to her, and she had clung to him in a sudden agony of fear. One of them must go but the end was far away! He laughed away her terrors, but within one week he stood—

"By the other's coffin-bier," and, oh, God of mercies, he knew which one!

Society knew him no more; he became a recluse, a misanthrope! He seemed to forget that he had a child; he only looked forward to meeting his love again! For years he lived almost in solitude, but at last he told himself that he could stand it no longer, that the associations which had been so dear to him had become hateful with bitter memories, and he left England hoping never to return again. He went away secretly, and not a dozen people knew that the Earl of Swinford was gone.

Stop Laxatives

Which Only Aggravate Constipation

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe.

When you are constipated, there is not enough lubricant produced by your system to keep the food waste soft. Doctors prescribe Nujol because its action is so close to this natural lubricant. Try it today.

Drastic Laws in Florida

Through the efforts of Mrs. R. Fleming Bowden, president of the Jacksonville Humane Society, a bill was enacted in Florida, in June, prohibiting the exhibition, for pay, in this state, of any crippled or physically distorted, malformed or disfigured man, woman, or child, and also prohibiting the exhibition, for pay, of any crippled or physically distorted, malformed, or disfigured beast, bird, or animal. Heavy penalties are provided for those convicted of breaking this law.

Fashion Plates

A JAUNTY STYLE FOR THE GROWN-UP GIRL.

3917. Very popular is the blouse dress, and ever varying are its new features. This style will be pretty in pongee with boss embroidery or in serge with figured silk or crepe for trimming. The skirt is mounted on a body lining and the blouse may be made to slip over the head. The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. A 12 year size will require 3 yards of 40 inch material. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 15c. in silver or stamps.

A NEW BLOUSE STYLE

3903. Here is a model that is becoming so stout and slender figures. It has long, pleasing lines, and a pretty collar, that forms revers over the front. Broadened skirt and broad-cloth is here combined. This is a good model for taffeta, and for pongee, faille or Canton crepe. The Pattern is cut in 7 Sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. A 38 inch size requires 3 1/2 yards of 40 inch material. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 15 c. in silver or stamps.

NOTE—Owing to the continual advances in price of raw wools, we are compelled to advance the price of patterns to 15c. each.

Boom or Boomerang?

Apparently fearing lest the moving-picture devotees will rise in protest against those films in which animals are shown in unnatural roles, the producers of such photoplays are artfully attempting to explain that there is no cruelty whatever in the preliminary training of the animal actors; indeed, they would have you think that animals have a predilection for the stage and greatly prefer "life in the movies" to the freedom of their native wilds.

No normally intelligent person should be deceived or hoodwinked by any such insidious propaganda. Of course there will not be a semblance of whiplash, pistol, hot iron, electric shock, or other of the common implements of the trade. That would ruin the business forthwith. The performance looks innocent enough and the turn is soon over. No viable proof of any cruelty! Why be concerned about how the animals are obtained or captured, how they are trained, or how they live afterward?

The following description in the New York Tribune furnishes an illustration of the kindly (?) art of training animals. Can't publicity of this nature be of benefit to the film-producing interests?

"A scene in 'Nomads of the North' shows a puppy and a cub being going down the river and over the falls. It required a half hour each day of nearly two weeks for Mr. Hatford, the producer, to teach the little creatures how to do this particular stunt without drowning themselves, and it was accomplished in the following manner:

"The pup and the cub were lashed together with a yard of thong. They were then placed in a tub half full of water and splashed out into another tub completely filled with water. This was done a half dozen times the first day and was repeated for several days thereafter. When it became apparent that the tiny animals had accustomed themselves to spilling out of one tub of water into another, they were taken to the scene of a real waterfall.

"The first several days they were put through the same work-out, accepting that the animals were placed in the real river slightly above the falls and were caught in the tub which was held a few feet below them when they dropped over the falls. This was accomplished by building a light framework of rafters across the river.

"The important part of this training was to ascertain both animals to hold their breaths in their plunge below the surface. When Mr. Hatford had satisfied himself that both puppy and cub had learned to do this, the distance of the drop over the falls was gradually increased until after a week or ten days the animals were making the entire descent into the seething rapids of the river and emerging from the foaming torrent without the slightest fright or ill effect."—From Our Dumb Animals.

Economy Courts Abolished.

LONG TRAINS AGAIN FASHIONABLE.

LONDON, (Associated Press)—Economy is no longer to be the keynote of court functions at Buckingham Palace. No more "economy courts," as they were called, are to be held. These were established by their majesties after the war to set fashionable society a much needed example in curbing extravagance. The seal of royal approval has now again been bestowed on court trains. Indeed no women can be presented at Court who does not wear them. Of course as a man, the Lord Chamberlain cannot presume to be an expert on fashionable feminine dress, but it is one of his many official duties to lay down the rules and regulations to which women must conform at the most exacted of court functions. That is one of the things for which he is paid $18,000 a year. He has to be a peer besides, to qualify for the exalted office, which is accounted among the political plums that the Prime Minister has to give away. The present Lord Chamberlain is in the top class of the peerage. He is the Duke of Athol.

Blessed by Court Dressmakers.

By restoring the court train he has earned the blessings of the fashionable dressmakers. But they would have lengthened their blessings if he had lengthened the trains. Before the war three yards was their regulation length, while Queen Victoria didn't consider four yards too long. By the new regulations they need not only two yards in length and should not extend more than 12 inches from the head of the wearer when standing. To walk backwards before royalty in a train three yards long without getting tangled up in it, imposes a severe tax on the agility and skill of not a few socially ambitious women. Queen Mary is a very kind woman, and she would naturally wish to spare her sex making exhibitions of themselves. Hence she was in favor of the shorter length for trains.

Keep the Gold Out!

Gold and draft come in around your windows and doors, not through them. Install Ceco Metal Weatherstrips and actually save one-third of your fuel costs. At the present price of coal this means a substantial saving in dollars and cents.

Ceco Metal Weatherstrips are the most simple, most practical weatherstrips on the market. No weather conditions affect them; self-adjusting with the shrinking or expanding of the ash. They keep out dust, dirt, soot and draft, deaden outside noises, stop any rattle, and last as long as the window or door.

It's Flavor that Makes the Meal!

And the sauces that the Libby chefs have adapted for you give flavor to the simplest dishes.

It may be eggs, or macaroni, or a cheap cut of meat—an unusual and delicious sauce will make it something you eat with delight and remember with pleasure—because of its flavor.

LIBBY'S CATCHUP and CHILI SAUCE are made from red, ripe tomatoes, grown in the fertile soil of Kent County, Ontario, picked when they are mellowed by the sunshine of long summer days, then rushed to the nearby Libby kitchen.

Here in sunny rooms the tomatoes are cooked with fragrant spices, onions, sugar and the best vinegar—cooked for hours until all the flavors are blended through and through.

Now the sauce is ready to give an appetizing relish to your steaks and chops, or a new piquancy to the meat gravy you serve with your roasts.

Your grocer has, or can get you, Libby's Catchup or Chili Sauce. Use it with your cold meat teas and note how quickly the second helping is necessary.

The delightful flavor of Libby's Beans is due largely to the wonderful Sauce prepared by the skilled chefs. Have you tried them?

Ammunition Runner Captured by Warship.

How Pettigoe Was Taken--Conciliation Board Makes Finding--New French Treaty Hostile to Britain.

LONDON, June 5. (Special Telegrams)--The Conciliation Board has today announced its findings in the case of the ammunition runner, James Pettigoe, who was captured by a British warship in the Atlantic Ocean. The board has found that Pettigoe was acting as an agent for the French Government, and that he was carrying a large quantity of ammunition in barrels which were being transported to the coast of Ireland. The board has recommended that Pettigoe should be treated as a prisoner of war, and that his case should be referred to the War Office for consideration.

The board's findings are based on evidence which was presented to it by the British Government. This evidence included a letter which was written by Pettigoe to a French official, and in which he admitted that he was carrying ammunition for the French. The board also heard evidence from a British sailor who had captured Pettigoe, and from a French official who had been in contact with Pettigoe.

The board's findings are significant because they show that the French Government is still active in the Atlantic Ocean, and that it is using the coast of Ireland as a base for its operations. This is a serious threat to British security, and it is clear that the British Government will have to take steps to deal with this threat.

Immense Crowds Witness World's Greatest Drama.

LONDON, June 5. (Special Telegrams)--The world's greatest drama, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," has been witnessed by an immense crowd of spectators in the city of London. The drama, which is a play by the late John Galsworthy, tells the story of a man who is driven to drink by the loss of his job and his home. The play has been running for several weeks, and it has attracted a large and loyal following of spectators.

The drama is a masterpiece of modern drama, and it has been praised by critics and audiences alike. It is a story that is both moving and powerful, and it is a story that has resonated with people all over the world. The fact that it has attracted such a large crowd of spectators in London is a testament to its power and its appeal.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

WHAT HE SEES IN HER.

Whatever does Mr. Grey see in Mrs. Green? People are always saying that in one form or other. (Usually, by the way it is the women who cannot see what he sees in her, and the men who cannot see why she wants to waste her time on him. Make what you can of that, Watson.)

They are saying it in our town at present of two people, who seem to take great pleasure in each other's company. The Mr. Grey of this case is an artist of some note. He is widely read and widely travelled and he has a brilliant mind. The Miss Green is a Mrs. Green, a woman not in his class socially or intellectually. She is a pleasant enough person, but especially good looking, amiable, ignorant, healthy, good natured and commonplace.

Talk by the Hour. Now Mr. Grey will sit and talk by the hour with Mrs. Green whenever he gets a chance. He does not appear to be in love with her. No one seems to think that except the few gossips who are always looking for excitement. He just likes to sit and talk with her. And we have not been able to see how she, with her amiable feather bed of a mind, can possibly make an interesting companion for a man of Mr. Grey's brilliance. I put that, you observe, in the past. For I feel that I have solved the riddle. I was at a gathering last night where Mrs. Green was among the guests. Mr. Grey was absent but she was sitting in the corner, with another man and he was talking to her. His voice would run on for some time and then would come her

Needle Hidden in Holy City.

FOUND BEHIND PORTRAIT OF SIR HERBERT SAMUEL.

LONDON (Associated Press)—To find a needle in a haystack is popularly supposed to be a feat so difficult that the odds against its successful accomplishment would be something like a million to one. Yet a feat that to the ordinary man would appear, if anything, still more difficult, has recently been accomplished in Jerusalem, according to newspapers published there. It was nothing less than the finding of a needle hidden in Jerusalem, and with no clue to its whereabouts of which the five senses could take cognizance, except that it was hidden "somewhere" in the city. This was done by Dr. Hanussen, who claims to be possessed of something more than the usual five senses and to be endowed with a mysterious "psychic" faculty by means of which he can read thoughts and find out things that cannot be discovered by means of mere sight or hearing. The finding of the needle was accepted as the proof of his claims and he was awarded £100. He found the needle within 25 minutes, excluding the time taken to reach the place of concealment.

Regatta Meeting; Crews Getting Ready.

The Regatta Committee held their annual meeting on Friday night next. Preliminary arrangements will then be made in connection with our "Derby." It is expected that the Regatta will take place on August 2nd. Great interest has already been evidenced, and applications for boats for practice and for the actual races, have been made. The Avalon Boat House will be taken over by the C.I.B. Old Comrades this year. Practice boats will be out on the pond next week.

Tragic End of a Chinese Autocrat.

Yuan Shih Kai, then President for life and virtual autocrat of China, attempted in the autumn of 1915 to restore the monarchy, with himself as Emperor. A somewhat farcical national election was held, most of the provinces voting in his favour, with the result that Yuan, who had previously denied any intention to accept the throne, now declared that he had been forced to submit to the people's will. The Powers urged him strongly not to proceed, but the Coronation of Yuan as Emperor was fixed, and a new Court and new nobility were in course of rapid formation. This development was viewed with special disapproval by Japan, and led to a rebellion. Yuan sought to conciliate his opponents first by postponing the Coronation and then by openly cancelling the whole monarchist scheme. The Republicans, however, were not to be placated. In April 1916 Tuan Chi-lui, a famous general whose authority was recognized by the soldiers of both North and South China, was appointed Premier, and Yuan nominally abandoned his autocratic powers. On the morning of June 5, an extraordinary mandate was issued in Yuan's name, and a few hours after signing it his death was announced. Whether he died of a complaint induced by nervous prostration, as was officially announced, or whether he was aided by accidental causes, was regarded by many as doubtful, though possibly those concerned are aware of the real facts of the case. China is not the only country where political intriguers remove troublesome adventurers.

THE CHEERFUL FRONT.

WALT MATCH

"I'm feeling fine my hearties. I am not out of whack!" I answer thus all parties who ask me how I stack. It may be I've a tumor, a boil that throbs and stings but I would pull a bloomer by speaking of such things. For people hate to listen to stories of disease, to see my teardrops glisten and trickle to my knees. When younger I delighted in telling of my ills, of how my life was blighted by Dr. Highlow's pills. One day the fact came to me that I was much alone; old friends would sadly shoo me behind them with a groan. And when the day's work ended, I sought the Blue Front store, a sort of sigh ascended as gossip left the floor. Alone I walked and wandered, no friend in all the throng, and wearily I pondered, and wondered what was wrong. And then I asked my pastor how I had got in Dutch; he said, "You talk disaster and sickness too blazed much. There's nothing bright or cheering in any spiel you make, the men grow sick of hearing of mumps and stomach ache." And now when people call me, and ask me how I stack, though forty aches assail me, I spring no cheap alack. And no effort I make to shake me as in the long ago, but by the hand they take me, and tell me I'm a jo.

Just Folks

Here are the childhood's fancies. Once, so long ago, you knew "Beenie, meenie, minnie, mo. One, two, three and out you go. Here's the old belief again: "Kill an ant and it will rain."

Yesterday I passed along Where a merry-hearted throng Counted out the same self-wad Of our long forgotten play. And I heard the "meenie-mo" Of our distant long ago.

Wide the eyes that glistened then In a world so wondrous fair. Wise the heads that nodded low At the thing they'd come to know. And I smiled at this refrain: "Kill an ant and it will rain!"

Oh, thought I, 'tis very strange Childhood's fancies never change. That is what we used to say In our golden yesterday: "Beenie, meenie, minnie mo. One, two, three and out you go."

Long forgotten, still it lives. Toy to little hearts it gives. And unto the end of time Little lips will sing this rhyme. Age will hear its babes explain: "Kill an ant and it will rain!"

Needless books, and printed sheets For the song that childhood loves. Curly heads and laughing eyes In such love love are always. This belief will long remain: "Kill an ant and it will rain!"

HOUSEWIVES HOLD CONGRESS.

League of Swedish Housewives, the Danish Housewives' Association, the Norwegian Home Welfare Association and the Marita Union of Finland, has just adjourned in Stockholm after a successful session where most of the modern problems of the modern housewife were deliberated and discussed at length. There were no theoretic or revolutionary measures on the agenda, only practical problems such as face any housewife any day of the week.

THE SCIENCE OF COOKING.

The congress just closed adopted resolutions to arrange for a vacation course of instruction in domestic science and other matters affecting the home at the Aas Agricultural School in Norway, where students will receive instruction in various household duties under capable instructors and will witness demonstrations of the latest methods of running a modern home. Mrs. Agnes Ingelman, President of the National League of Swedish Housewives, said in an address to the delegates that women nowadays have to keep in touch with politics, public administration and legislation affecting the home. They must get together, she said, and work for the safeguarding of the home, as for instance in its building and fitting up, in arranging home exhibitions and stimulating public instruction in domestic science and in establishing employment bureaus, libraries and day nurseries.

Experience Teaches.

A woman heard that her two sons were in the habit of sitting at women's knees and quite unknown to each other, of taking one of the maids out for a lark.

Fearing to bring down on their heads the wrath of their father by making a bother about it, she asked them if it were true, but could get no satisfactory answer to her inquiry. It occurred to her that by a little strategy she might get the truth from the girl, so she said, in a jocular manner: "Now, Mary, I want you to answer me candidly. Which of my two sons do you like going out with best—George or Joseph?"

"Well, madam," replied the girl, reassured by her mistress's manner, "if ye mean ken, o' the two I like George best, but for a rare downright guid agree, gie me the maister!"

Which Is It To Be?

The 12th day of June is but six short days away, and so far as can be learned there has not been any railroad policy formulated. According to rumor, yesterday, to-day's session of the House is likely to be a short one, and another adjournment, it is said, will be taken, in order that the Government may gain further time in their waiting for expert legal opinion from outside the colony. Just what that will suggest no one—not even those high up in the councils of the Executive—can tell. Why such was deemed to be expedient, no person can say. The members of the legal profession in St. John's—some of them at least—know just as much about railway contracts and conditions, agreements and disagreements, as any barrister outside the colony, and there is no reason why a submitted opinion of theirs should not have as much force and effect as any from beyond the seas. Clearly there can be but one of two courses for the Government to pursue, Settlement or Litigation. The latter may be more expensive than the former. In any case the adjustment of the railway difficulty is going to cost the Colony a pretty penny. But that a clearing up has to come: is imperative and instant, no person will deny. The time is passing swiftly and to all appearances the Government is just as far away from a settlement as in the beginning when the question of selling out was mooted. There must be, there has to be some kind of arrangement. The trade of the country cannot be kept in slings by an obviously incapable administration, and the quicker the Government reaches a decision, the better for all concerned. Political dawdling is disadvantageous now as ever. Big issues require attention and the Prime Minister should no longer temporise but should unhesitatingly announce his policy. Newfoundland cannot afford to be tied up to a fetich any longer. The letter which we publish in another column to-day treats the situation in a dignified and acceptable manner. The arguments put forward by the writer have sound common sense behind them, and while all may not agree with the sentiments so expressed, it must be frankly admitted that there is a deal of kernel in the nut. The country has passed the line when a policy of delay could be of service. The fishing season has arrived and every effort should be devoted to so increasing this year's output, that the harvest will be a valuable one. A deadlock between railway company and government will not enhance prospects for the future. But no matter what happens transportation and traffic must be maintained between the capital and external trade centres. If the Gordian knot that binds the country to the railway proves impossible of untying, cut it, and let the country have whatever benefit might ensue from this solution of the difficulty.

He Shall Not Pass This Way Again.

(Public Opinion.)
Since last publication of this pamphlet there has passed into his eternal rest a veteran journalist in the person of William J. Herder, founder and proprietor of The Evening Telegram, a newspaper whose proud boast is that it has been forty-three years in the public service.
Almost half a century ago, and before many of us in the business of today were born, Mr. Herder conceived the idea that he could serve his country by issuing a paper whose appeals would be ever on behalf of his native land, and how well founded his faith in himself and Newfoundland has been and how bravely upheld through every vicissitude of fortune the splendid institution he has built up must attest.

The Evening Telegram has become a household necessity in this country, and surely no greater proof than this as to its value and influence were wanted.
We, who have benefited so much by the labor and genius of this man, can only, now that he is gone to his reward, has sought that "bourne whence no traveller returns," express our appreciation, and wish him that eternity of happiness which is the reward of a life well spent.

To the sorrowing family I beg to extend my heartfelt sympathy. I am sure it must be a great consolation to them to know that in life the devoted husband and fond parent was a noble exemplar of domestic and civic virtue, a gentleman and a "sport" respected by all, and in death universally respected. Requiescat in Pace.

A Big Surprise.

There is a big surprise in store for all who attend Madame Sherry. It is something no one will expect; it will be "put across" by someone you would not expect; and it will be a pleasant surprise. No matter how much you guess you are hardly likely to divine just what is going to happen. The best way will be to attend and see for yourself.

Fighting the Flames.

FOREST FIRE NEARLY OUT.

The forest fire which broke out yesterday in the neighbourhood of Bishop's Falls is rapidly burning itself out. A report to this effect was received by the Reid Nfld. Co. this morning. Employees of the railway and the A. N. D. Co., with men from Botwood, are fighting the flames. The fire assumed threatening proportions last night and when the wind changed, fears were entertained for the safety of Bishop's Falls, but no damage to property, however, has been done by the fire.

Tonight the last performance of "The Magic Melody" will take place. This is the final opportunity of seeing this masterpiece. Be sure you attend.

Rotary Luncheon.

ADDRESS ON EXCHANGE.
Exchange formed the subject of an interesting address by Mr. E. B. McInerney of the Royal Bank of Canada at the Rotary Club luncheon in the Green Lantern to-day. The address dealt lucidly with the various aspects of a subject which few can grasp who have not had financial training. Rotarian S. Milley was the Chairman to-day, and the guests were the male members of the Manhattan Musical Comedy Company.

"Pawnee" to be Renamed.

NEWFOUNDLAND LADY WILL BE SPONSOR.

Yesterday the American yacht Pawnee underwent boiler inspection. It is the intention of the owners, Messrs. Reed and Burton, to rechristen the vessel by the name of Ruby S. Burton, after the daughter of Mr. Reed's associate, who is a son-in-law of Mr. Mark Pike, Sub-Collector of Customs at Port aux Basques.

The Pawnee was built at Boston in 1904 for G. Drexel, and later sold to the U. S. Navy, being used during the war as a submarine chaser. The emplacements for the guns are still visible. The yacht was later sold to Mr. Fred R. Reed, who has an associate Mr. C. S. Burton. What the intentions of the owners of the yacht are has not been made known, but she is still flying the American flag.

Magisterial Enquiry.

Yesterday an enquiry into the death of Joseph Farrel of Fogo was begun in the Magistrate's Court before Mr. Justice McCarthy. Higgins K.C. appeared on behalf of the family of the deceased whilst the Crown was represented by Superintendent O'Neil. It will be remembered that Farrel was drowned on Jan. 8th last, from the schooner "Cedric", the day after the vessel left port. It was stated at the time that Farrel went on the ice to capture a seal and was not afterwards seen nor was the body recovered. The only witness so far examined has been the mate of the schooner.

Convict Escapes.

YOUNG CRIMINAL CLIMBS PRISON WALLS WITH HELP OF ROPE—IS STILL AT LARGE.

For the first time in ten years, a convict has succeeded in escaping from the Penitentiary. The man's name is Kitchener Edwards and he is a native of Change Islands, N.D.B. At the time of his escape he had served one month of a sentence of twelve months for larceny. He is still at large but has been located and his capture is expected this afternoon.

MADE A ROPE.

Edwards escaped at 5:40 yesterday afternoon with the help of a rope which he had made from twines used in the manufacture of brooms while he was working in that department. At the hour he escaped it is customary to bring one squad of convicts in for supper and those who have just had the meal, come out. While this change was being made, Edwards slipped away. Finding an iron bar, he attached this to one end of the rope he had made and threw the weight with rope attached over the high wall which surrounds the prison yard. The weight of this was sufficient to support him as he climbed the wall. He dropped to the ground on the other side and made off along the bank of the lake, crossing the road leading out to Logy Bay.

THE SEARCH.

The escape was discovered when the roll call was taken at 6 o'clock. The alarm was given, and soon warden, mounted police and constables in plain clothes, were scouring the neighborhood looking for the escaped prisoner. All last night and this morning the search was continued. Residents of the Logy Bay Road reported to the searchers that they had seen the man. Late this morning, news was received that he had been located near the Golf Links. The police have formed a cordon around this district and will probably capture their man early this afternoon.

THE FUGITIVE.

To escape capture, Edwards would have to break into a house and obtain both clothes and food. From reports received, however, he is likely to adopt this course only as a last extremity as he appeared to be a quiet fellow. Having got so far, however, if he escapes capture to-day he might attempt to obtain food, if not clothing, from some house after night fall. He has had nothing to eat since dinner hour yesterday, although it is possible he had saved portions of his meals of the few days previous to his escape. The official police description is: Age, 23; complexion, dark; build, slight; height, 5 ft. 10 inches.

THE LAST ESCAPE.

The last attempt to escape from the Penitentiary was made ten years ago. Two men got clear on this occasion and made off in the same direction that Edwards has taken. One was recaptured the same day, but the other got away scot free. Previous to that time the only escape had been the famous one effected by Brady who remained at large for several days. Brady was famed in wretched poetry in the local press, and even a sketch was written about his adventures.

VARIOUS PROPERTIES BEING EXPLOITED.

A letter from Captain Furlong, who is in charge of the Silver Cliff Mine at Argentia, received yesterday, stated that good progress was being made in clearing Camp Adit. Debris for a length of over twenty feet had been removed, and Mr. Furlong is now working on a double shift of men. Work has also been received saying that work on a Galena deposit has been started. This property was worked some years ago, and is now held by a prominent official of the Government. Interest in copper mining has also been aroused and last night a meeting of gentlemen who are promoting a copper property in Placentia Bay was held and it is possible that sufficient local capital to make an initial start will be forthcoming within a few days.

A Highland Custom.

The time-honoured custom of visiting wishing wells in the Highland districts on the first Sunday in May is still observed. On Monday, when the well was cleaned by workmen a sum of 211 7s. was recovered, and was given to local charities.

HIS DIARY.
June 5th.—A fine warm day and I wear my lightest clothes. Little news anywhere save from Ireland, where they all do be killing one another, and it seems there will soon be no man living. My wife did beg of me to-day that I allow her to drive our motor coach, which I will do, but like it not, seeing how it is no task for women. I to the Board of Trade, where I learn how there will be a meeting to-morrow about the letter from the London fish brokers. Comes one to tell me how a prisoner did escape this evening from the Penitentiary, nor is he yet caught. I did take a poker to bed with me, being that the rascal might take it into his head to break into my home.

The Manslaughter Case.

ARGUMENT TO BE HEARD.
The case for the prosecution in connection with the death of the man Brien, who was found dead in a barn at Freshwater some months ago, concluded last week, when the matter was postponed until a day this week. It is likely that the hearing will be resumed on Friday, when Messrs. Barron for the Crown and Halley for the defence will be heard in argument on the legal aspect of the manslaughter charge preferred against Denis Brien, brother of the deceased. At the close of the case for the Crown, Mr. Barron moved that the charge of manslaughter against Mrs. B. Duff, sister of the deceased, be withdrawn, and the Judge acceding to the motion the prisoner was discharged.

Boy Scouts Entertained.
A very enjoyable entertainment was given in the Lecture Room of Governor's Church last night by the Governor's troop of Boy Scouts. Amongst the pleasing items on the programme were two pictures, "A Star News" and "Live Wires." It was hoped to give a Scout film "Be Prepared," which was expected from Headquarters in London. This, however, failed to arrive, and Messrs. O'Neill and O'Leary, proprietors of the Majestic Theatre, courteously supplied the substitutes, which were thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Gordon Darby operated the pictures and Miss Effie Stewart presided at the piano. Musical numbers were given by Mr. H. Glass. During the entertainment several grammophone selections of Scout songs, patrol cries and addresses by Sir Baden Powell were rendered. The boys are looking forward to going into camp the first week in July. If arrangements can be made the Harbor Grace and Gower Street troops may camp together. Possibly the Governor's troop may unite with these.

The entertainment will be repeated this evening with a change of programme. Miss Nellie Mander, Mrs. Charles Garland will sing, and Messrs. Jones and Holmes. The human brothers will entertain with musical selections. Major Cook, who is a member of the Nfld. Scout Council and interested in the Scout movement, has signified his intention of being present this evening and will be greeted by a guard of honour. The proceeds of the entertainments go towards the camp funds of the Scouts. It is hoped that to-night's performance will be greeted by a full house.

Mr. White, who is the son of Dr. White, at one time head of the Bellevue Hospital, New York, received his first engagement as a soloist at an early age, when he sang at the summer festival of the Passion Play, Oberammergau. His first real part as actor was that of the Volunteer Officer in the Fatal Wedding. His voice, excellent appearance, histrionic talent, quickly brought him prominence and he secured considerable engagements with the Opera Company and the New York English Opera Company. Later he appeared as soloist with Pryor's Band during various parts of Florida. He has done considerable concert work here. His last two engagements were with the Globe Theatre Company and John Charles Thomas, the professional pianist, playing in "Princess of the Emerald Isle" for thirteen weeks. He has done some work with the Somerset Rock Company, Boston. Mr. White will be delighted to make your acquaintance at the Casino.

Amongst the pleasing items on the programme were two pictures, "A Star News" and "Live Wires." It was hoped to give a Scout film "Be Prepared," which was expected from Headquarters in London. This, however, failed to arrive, and Messrs. O'Neill and O'Leary, proprietors of the Majestic Theatre, courteously supplied the substitutes, which were thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Gordon Darby operated the pictures and Miss Effie Stewart presided at the piano. Musical numbers were given by Mr. H. Glass. During the entertainment several grammophone selections of Scout songs, patrol cries and addresses by Sir Baden Powell were rendered. The boys are looking forward to going into camp the first week in July. If arrangements can be made the Harbor Grace and Gower Street troops may camp together. Possibly the Governor's troop may unite with these.

Railway Situation Discussed.

SEVERAL SENSIBLE SUGGESTIONS.

Editor-Evening Telegram

Dear Sir—Newfoundland is to-day faced with two problems—a financial problem and a railway problem. That these problems are serious everybody knows in a general sort of way. It is a question whether we realize actually how grave these issues are. Our financial position is one which is common to nearly every country in the world. The war primarily is responsible for an enormous increase in the public debt and increased annual expenditures which can only be reduced in part. The problem of increasing our revenue without unduly increasing the cost of living demands serious consideration of every thoughtful man.

There are only two possible avenues of increasing the revenue. One is to expand the fishing industry and the other is to develop our resources. It does not seem probable that the fishing industry can be expanded to meet the situation. We are to-day having difficulty in meeting foreign competition with our fish, and were the amount of fish caught in Newfoundland to be increased materially, the effect would probably be that the foreign market could not absorb the increase, and that prices would fall to a point that fishing could not be carried on with a profit, and some fishermen would again have to find some other occupation.

Fishing is an old industry and its limitations have been found by the experience of over several hundred years. It is quite obvious then that development of other resources is our only hope. FISHERIES CANNOT STAND STRAIN. The present expenditures of this country can not be borne by the fishermen alone. We must therefore develop our timber and mining resources at the earliest possible moment. The development of these resources demands capital. Capital can only be attracted to Newfoundland if stability of title can be assured and if the government shows a just attitude to intending investors. There is no question Newfoundland has in the Grand Lake region, for instance, large areas of good timber land. It has large water powers which, if developed, would attract to the country, other industries. Its mineral deposits are as yet hardly touched. One of the factors which has a serious bearing on the investment of capital is transportation. If Newfoundland is to develop her natural resources she must do so quickly, and some permanent solution of the railway tangle, which is at present overhanging her, must be found. Politicians and "Students of the Law" have been busy in the press over the railway tangle, but the plain business man is, as yet to be heard from. Questions on points of expediency and opinion on points of law may be important to politicians and lawyers, but they are not nearly so important to the people of Newfoundland as the question of how trade and revenue are to be increased and the present state of depression overcome. Apparently the Government and the Reid Newfoundland Company are at a deadlock. If I correctly read the correspondence tabled in the House, and the Prime Minister's statements there, there are only two alternatives before this country—one is a settlement of all differences by compromise agreement and the other is arbitration or litigation in the Courts.

THE CASE FOR THE COMPANY. The Reid Newfoundland Company's case appears to be broadly as follows: They claim the government has broken faith with them and that they are unable to pay their employees on this account. They state that they have many claims against the government which would amount to ten millions of dollars, and that they have assets, necessary to the transportation business, amounting to six million dollars. They appear to have made a tentative offer of a settlement for a sum between two and three million dollars.

WHERE THE GOVERNMENT STANDS. The Government position appears to be that they deny having broken the contract, and that they have some counter claims, apparently not very serious, but there seems to be a further impression that in some undefined way they can take possession of all the Reid Newfoundland Company's assets, and that the transportation of the country will proceed as smoothly as ever. The consequence of any such action on the part of the Government appears to me so serious that I have talked the matter over at length with a legal friend of mine, and it is quite clear to me that the country as a whole does not understand, and possibly the Government does not understand, the far reaching consequences of fighting this matter to a finish. There are one or two points particularly about these involved contracts which would make any man pause before calling a show down. The first one would be how much of these assets does the Government own and how much does the Company own. It has been suggested in the press that all these assets would be forfeited to the Government. My legal friend advises me, that in his opinion, only such assets as have already been paid for by the Government would belong to them, and that the six million dollars includes no such items. If this is so, and he seems quite clear on the point, the Reid Newfoundland Company would certainly recover large sums of money. Their other claims for ten million dollars, which would be involved in arbitration may well cause us to pause. We will remember the Telegraph Arbitration, and its disastrous results to the Colony. At that time both the Government and the public regarded the telegraphs as a liability rather than an asset, and the idea of the Contractor having a claim for giving them up was scoffed at, yet he was awarded $1,500,000 for his supposed worthless claims, and the same thing may happen again.

SERIOUS RISK BOTH WAYS. The whole series of railway contracts are bristling with doubtful meanings and there is no question that the Colony is taking a serious risk in entering into arbitration proceedings or litigation. The risk may have to be taken, but it is too serious to be assumed lightly or recklessly, it might mean the ruin of the country.

The transportation of this country must be carried on. To be fair to the Reids, they carried on during the period of the war to the point of financial exhaustion. It is the first duty of a Government to be just. Everybody realizes that the present position, which is an unfortunate one for the country, and for the Reid Newfoundland Company, has been brought about solely by the War. Conditions cannot return to their pre-war status, and no amount of talking will bring them there. It appears to me then that a new management must be made for carrying on the railway and unless the trouble with the Reids is adjusted in some way, I do not see how any development of this country can proceed. I was surprised to hear a prominent citizen glibly talking of the Government forcibly taking over and operating the road. Whatever may be said of the railway services given by the Reids, they always had the reputation of treating their employees well, and their employees have been loyal to them. In the management of a large business, like the railway business, there must be co-operation between employees and management. No sane man would start out to run an involved business like the transportation of this Island with a bitter feeling between the employees and the management, and that feeling would be bound to exist if the Government forcibly took over the railway. Those of us who have had business experience, can appreciate what a serious handicap this would be.

CO-OPERATION. As the Government seems to be faced with the problem of making new arrangements for operating the railway in any case, surely it is better for the country to try and come to some arrangement which will let the new management start with a free hand, clear of any antagonism caused by the attitude of the Reids. The latter have shown that they are prepared to discuss a settlement of all differences, and it seems to me that both for the benefit of future railway operation and in order to leave the way clear for the development of our industries every means of arriving at a reasonable settlement should be exhausted before the country is committed to a fight which may involve its ruin. As I said before, capital can only be attracted here if the intending investor is satisfied that he is going to get a square deal, and a fight between the Colony and the Reids is going to scare off people, who otherwise might be inclined to develop our resources, especially if legislation is necessary to get control of the railway. Any legislation which would have the appearance of attacking private property and private rights would be a death blow to Newfoundland. We must remember that such legislation will not be understood, even if justified, by the outside financial world, and if undertaken by the Government, would be nothing less than a tragedy. I have faith in the resources of this country, faith that when they are developed they will add to the prosperity of the Island, and will enable the necessary taxation to be paid by other industries than the fishing industry. Let us give up whining about the past. Let us settle at once our quarrels, if we can, and let us all unite to promote the welfare of the Island. Those who prefer political and personal feuds, and the shylock attitude are enemies of Newfoundland. Let us forget politics for once and unite for our country, as we did when the Great War broke out. The aftermath of the war is now with us, and the same unity is needed to deal with it.

Yours very truly,

Japan's God of Wealth.

Japan's "Seven Gods of Good Luck" are a clan of deities from which philosophy, religion and superstition have borrowed much of their origin. They comprise, to give them their swept together from many incongruous sources—Japanese, Shintoism, Chinese Taoism, Indian Buddhism and Brahmanism. Orientals all, but cosmopolitan Orientals!

They comprise, to give them their full names, Ebisu, Daikoku, Benten, Faburoponju, Bashamon, Jurijin and Hotel.

A full discussion of their origin and attributes would doubtless reveal how slender a basis the modern popularity of these divinities has been reared on. Their union in one group is the result of nothing more recent than popular ignorance and confusion of ideas. They themselves never chose to be thus united. They reign in an ideal state, for they have no king or even spokesman among them. Collectively they command perennial perpetual and everlasting interest. Individually they celebrate their own festivals and each can boast of an entirely different group in his train of devotees.

On Daikoku's birthday a few of his disciples will worship at his shrine at Asabu and in Osaka. It seems so strange to say "a few," for of all the gods in the cycle of Japanese mythology, in this material age, Daikoku, the god of wealth, should find greatest favor! But perhaps he has not proved himself to be gracious to supplicants! Perhaps efficacious influences have not been felt in result of worship at his shrines—or is it that even he, the god of wealth, has failed to live up to the extravagant standard our present-day civilization has set as a basis to contentment?

God of Frightful Aspect.

Daikoku is a Hindu and a Buddhist. The word "Daikoku" means "great blackness" and when he first came to Japan he was a god of physique and frightful aspect with a face as black as night. Since his naturalization Daikoku has thrown off some of his native characteristics and has adopted a new mode of living, the chief of his models being Okukishinomotoke, a famous god in the mythology of Japan.

In the old records this god was represented carrying a large bag on his shoulders. As there is a similarity between "Okukishinomotoke" and "Daikoku," the Japanese people somehow mixed up the characters and molded them into one perfect deity who combines the good points of both. Makhala (Sanskrit) was the original name by which he was known in India, where he was feared as god of destruction. His migration to Japan has changed his incarnation to that of wealth and plenty.

He stands or sits on three bales of rice, having in one hand the usunouchi or the lucky hammer from which he can produce anything in the world he chooses to, from palace down to gold or silver, man or beast! He carries on his back a bag full of treasures of all sorts. While rats are his earthly messengers and oftentimes he is represented with one on either side of him, waiting to do his bidding.

The God of Trademen.

Daikoku is generally coupled with Ebisu, the god of trademen. Though they are of totally different birth, race, religion, etc., they have been linked together and one seldom sees the one without the other in close propinquity. Although Daikoku is not a god to whose shrine worshippers flock, his popularity is told by the number of metallic images of his divinity which are bought and carried as amulets by people seeking wealth.

"Shall we test this jovial little man's powers? Go to his shrine and beseech him to command a shower of gold, or carry his image in our pocket and see if we find it gold-lined by night?" We are snobs—all of us—of one kind or another. "We don't care for money," say some haughtily, having none, "I don't know how to spend my money," complains a millionaire, it's Daikoku's turn to speak and if he but could he would strip the world of its snobbism and no doubt reveal a race of human beings all alike in their allegiance to him, the god of wealth!

The demands from the country has caused the Government to reduce to some extent the taxes. A few commodities will enter minus the Super and Sales taxes, but what of the Sugar and a host of other necessary articles that must eventually be shaken clear of such heavy duty? Are the "powers that be" considering for the best interests of the people generally? Oh thou Democracy—Twillingare Sun.

Old Dick the Faithful.

ELMER C. GIFFE.

Era Meeker drew a sigh of relief as he looked up from signing his name to the paper. Parson Rumley of Era's church had just brought the paper over to give Era the honor of being first to head the list for the Belgian Relief Fund.

Era was a well-to-do farmer; he was deacon in the church, Justice of Peace, a leader in all of the neighborhood's doings, and known as a square shooter. After his name he had put down the princely sum of one hundred dollars. Parson Rumley had remarked that it was more than they had expected Era to give; Era had replied that he felt it a duty.

After the parson had taken his leave Era settled down in his easy chair for his evening nap. For the first time in years Era could not go to sleep. He was uncomfortable. His mind kept going back to a certain transaction that had taken place that very morning. He—Era Meeker—had not played square. Of course it was nothing but a horse and the one hundred dollars that he had received had not given it to the relief committee? Wouldn't it go to help those poor people over there? But Era could not get Old Dick's accusing eyes out of his mind.

Era put his hand up to his cheek where Old Dick's soft muzzle had been rubbed in welcome as he had led him out of his stall that very morning. The buyer had looked Old Dick over and paid Era one hundred dollars—blood money. No, it cannot be that—a horse is just a horse—anyway Old Dick had outlived his usefulness; it was time he was sold.

Yet that thought did not appease Era's conscience. Old Dick the faithful, and then Era remembered all of those years gone by; how he had homesteaded the old place, saved his money and bought Old Dick, how Dick had packed provisions from the railroad on his back, how they had struggled along, and then he had bought his second horse and with Old Dick's help had broken the first sod. Dick dragged the logs up from the creek to build the cabin and the barn. Dick helped to haul the first load of grain to town, and then, when he bought the new buggy, didn't he drive Old Dick over to see mother? Wasn't Old Dick along the night he proposed to mother and she accepted him?

Horses were put here on earth for man to use (didn't the Bible say so?), but somehow that thought didn't ease Era's mind. And then remember the night of the big storm, when mother was taken sick and the nearest neighbor was twelve miles distant, and you threw a blanket on Old Dick and he carried you safely through one of the worst storms you had ever experienced. The doctor came back with you (just in the nick of time, he said) as he told you that you were the father of twins, a boy and a girl. Didn't you go out to the barn and throw your arms around Old Dick's neck and cry for joy, and didn't Old Dick rub his soft nose on your cheek, trying to make you understand that he did it all for you?

Era got up out of his easy chair. Meeker asked him where he was going. He replied, "Just out to the barn to see if everything is all right for the night." As he opened the barn door, there was Old Dick's empty stall. His collar and harness hung on the peg in their usual place. Then Era Meeker, square shooter, broke down and cried—something he had not done in years. He saw the injustice he had done to the faithful old horse, who had given the best he possessed to his master.

The next day Era went into the city to find Old Dick. He looked in vain. No one had any interest in an old brown horse, but Era was persistent and finally located Old Dick going. He replied, "Just out to the barn to see if everything is all right for the night." As he opened the barn door, there was Old Dick's empty stall. His collar and harness hung on the peg in their usual place. Then Era Meeker, square shooter, broke down and cried—something he had not done in years. He saw the injustice he had done to the faithful old horse, who had given the best he possessed to his master.

The next day Era went into the city to find Old Dick. He looked in vain. No one had any interest in an old brown horse, but Era was persistent and finally located Old Dick in a large city some fifty miles away, hitched to a dilapidated old cart, hauling garbage, straining every muscle in his poor old back to pull the load, under the stinging lash of the whip, but still doing his very best.

Era threw his arms around Old Dick's neck and Dick rubbed his soft nose of Era's cheek. The man asked Era one hundred and fifty dollars for Old Dick. Era paid it without a word. Old Dick meekly followed him home.

When Old Dick was back in his own stall munching his extra feed of oats—Era and mother were watching him enjoy the oats—Era grabbed mother around the waist and began to dance. Mother says: "Era Meeker, if you was a drinking man, I would say you had something to drink in the city." No one knew better than Old Dick why Era was so happy—Our Dumb Animals.

A small girl's frock was of black chambray, bound at neck, sleeves and hem with very gay chints. The bloomers, which showed below dress, were made of the flowered chints. The effect of the outfit was charming.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

COLLINS DEMANDS EXPLANATION.

DUBLIN, June 6. Michael Collins, head of the Provisional Govt., takes a most serious view of the British shelling of Pettigoe, in Free State territory, and has demanded from the British authorities a full inquiry into the circumstances. It had been supposed that the Irish troops at Pettigoe were irregulars, not under control of the Provisional Govt., but an official communication from Beggar's Bush barracks, headquarters of the Irish Republican Army, declares there are no Irish troops in that district except those of the regular British Army. It is denied in the communication that British troops were at any time fired on, and the British Army statement, that in consequence of the shooting of a motor car driver, Pettigoe was shelled, is contradicted. The driver, it is asserted, was not killed until long after the shelling, when there was an interchange of bullets between the British and retreating Irish troops. According to the Beggar's Bush statement, one shell was fired while people were at mass, and eight others, without warning or provocation, immediately afterwards. The British at present occupy the hill and village points for two miles on the Donegal side, and all roads are traversed by British armored cars.

POWERS MUST TAKE ACTION.

ADANA, Cilicia, June 6. Mustafa Kemal Pasha, head of the Turkish Nationalist Government, has given orders for the conscription of all Christians resident in Cilicia, to be formed into labor brigades, and sent to the front line trenches to assist the Turks in their war against the Greeks. It is estimated here that fully eighty per cent. of the Armenians in Cilicia have either been conscripted, deported, killed or died of starvation. A large number of those remaining embraced the Moslem faith to escape persecution.

KASSEL, June 6. Philip Scheidemann, widely known as a German Socialist leader, was assaulted yesterday by a youth, who threw a poisonous liquid in his face. Scheidemann fired two shots at his assailant but neither took effect. Scheidemann was later found unconscious, but his injuries are not serious.

Old News is No News.

Recently a large part of a southern town was burned and from various cities and towns newspaper men hastened to the scene. Only in the unburned office of a local weekly was there peace and contentment.

When the newspaper came out it was eagerly scanned by citizens and visitors, but there was no mention of the fire, the place of honor being given to a story of a fight between two deckhands on a river steamer.

"Look here, Henry," said a subscriber to the editor, "when are you all going to give us something about the fire?"

"Why, William," replied the editor, "I didn't reckon to say anything about it. Every man, woman, and child and dog in this town knows that there was a fire, saw the fire and was at the fire, and I reckon they're plumb tired of it. What I'm printing is news—and news is something nobody knows anything about until he reads the paper and finds out."—Harper's Magazine.

Pearls of Wisdom.

Those who waste time waste life.

Give of your best, and you'll get the best.

Talking comes by nature, silence by wisdom.

The worst flatterer a man can have is himself.

He who swells in prosperity will shrink in adversity.

Promises may get friends, but performance keeps them.

He that persists in going the contrary way must go over it twice.

'Tis strange but true that you must take trouble to avoid trouble.

It's a great thing to have confidence in your own ability, and a greater to have the ability.

Rank Infidelity.

Satan, according to the board of education of Lancaster, O., in 1838, devised the railroad as a means of quickly transporting "frail humanity" to his headquarters. Holding this view, the board refused a group of young men, who wished to discuss the feasibility of the railroad and telegraph, the use of the schoolhouse at that place.

The board's refusal, clipped from an old newspaper, read thus: "You are welcome to the use of the schoolhouse to debate all proper questions in, but such things as railroads and telegraphs are impossibilities and rank infidelity. There is no work of God about them. If God had designed that His intelligent creatures should travel at the frightful speed of 25 miles and hour by steam, he would clearly have foretold it through His holy prophets. It is a device of Satan to lead immortal souls down to hell."

Making Milk Beads.

The Little Miss Muffet who sat on a tuft, ate her curds and whey all by herself. Little Miss Muffet, of 1922, eats her whey, and wears her curds about her neck in the form of long lines of attractively carved beads. At least, if it isn't the curd, it is something very like that, for they are actually making beads out of milk at the Empire Works in Scarborough, Eng. Not only are necklaces, but baggies and brooches made of the residue of milk, after the edible properties have been extracted for a patent food. The substance from which the modern jewelry is made is called "Erimold."

When it comes to the factory it is in long sticks and slabs of various colors. It is cut into desired form, carved and polished by machinery. Many of the modern necklaces, so favoured because of the touch of color that they give a costume, are made of this "Erimold" and are very high in favor. Girls do this work, from the beginning to the very end of the process.

His Personal Rating.

"Do'n' any good?" asked a curious individual on the bridge.

"Any good?" answered the fisherman in the creek below. "Why I caught forty bass out of here yesterday."

"Say, do you know who I am?" asked the man on the bridge.

The fisherman replied that he did not.

"Well, I am the county fish and game warden."

The fisherman after a moment's thought said, "Say, do you know who I am?"

"No," replied the officer.

"I'm the biggest liar in town," said the fisherman.

Dancing Bird Trio.

A species of the "lap-wing" found in Argentina have a dance in which the birds always take part. It is indulged in every day at intervals all the year round. So fond are they that before and during the breeding season, when the birds are distributed in pairs all over the plain, one bird may frequently leave his mate at home and fly away to visit another pair in the neighborhood. These two receive him with manifest pleasure and, running to him, place themselves behind him, where they stand almost with their plumage puffed out. Then with the pair uttering loud, rhythmic drumming notes the leader uttering loud single measured notes they begin a rapid march, stepping in time to the music. When the march is ended the leader usually lifts his wings and holds them erect, still emitting loud notes, and the two birds behind, still standing abreast with slightly opened wings and puffed-out feathers, lower their heads until the tips of their beaks touch the ground and at the same time sink their voices until the drumming sound dies to a whisper. The performance is then over.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Pullman Car Rated High for Safety.

The average person suffers a disabling accident once in seven years. It may be only a smashed thumb or a sprained ankle, but it puts the sufferer temporarily out of business.

It one would avoid disabling accidents, the safest place is indoors, in bed or in the cellar. Next to that, the safest place is a Pullman car on a railroad train. So say the accident insurance companies. A passenger in an ordinary railroad car is much safer than at home, because he is sitting still and few things can happen to him. If he is in a Pullman and there is a collision, other cars may be smashed, but his own vehicle, being of steel and enormously heavy, will likely escape serious injury.

For all that is said about the perils of the sea, you are just about 10 times as safe on a ship as on land. One man in every 2200 is fatally hurt by an accident on land; on the ocean, only one person in 22,000 suffers accidental death.

Radio Will Not Displace Newspaper

Discussing editorially the possibilities of the radio, the Manchester Guardian, in a recent issue, discounts the theory that the discovery of wireless telephony presages the end of the newspaper in the following terse manner:

"Some people may hastily conclude that with the coming of the wireless telephone the end of the newspaper is in sight. A few more years shall roll and news and comment be expounded verbally to the registered reader as he sits in his chair. The picture is more than premature; it is impossible. It may be said of newspapers that they live by the ability of their purchasers to leave some parts of them unread, rather in the same way that manufacturers of mustard thrive by the portions we leave on our plates. Fed readers read a newspaper straight through; they pick and choose their portions. There would be no picking or choosing with a recital from a wireless telephone; if you wanted to get your teeth into the commercial pages there would be nothing for it but to sit through the leaders, or turn off the machine and wait in silent patience. Wireless telephony has many startling possibilities, but a rival to the newspapers is not one of them."

Food and Temper.

Bad temper is largely a matter of bad or insufficient food, so declares the modern physician. Hungry and ill-nourished individuals are always apt to be peevish. There is much sound sense in the maxim "feed the brute," and a well-fed husband is usually easy to live with. But women, in concentrating on feeding the brute, are apt to overlook the necessity of feeding themselves and their nerves and temper suffer in consequence.

A prominent physician has drawn attention to the fact that many women do not eat enough food. In some cases this is due to vanity, in others it is due to lack of means. But there are many women who are ill-nourished because they are ignorant of food values, and their families suffer as a result of this ignorance. Tea and buns play a prominent part in their dietary. Nerves and temper suffer, and they nag all with whom they come in contact. The close relationship between food and nutrition is too often overlooked. The young woman of to-day suffers more from nerves and is not so good-tempered as her mother, according to medical observation, and they attribute this degeneracy to improper feeding. Every girl who is about to marry ought to receive proper instruction in food values. If this were done there would be fewer unhappy marriages, and more good tempered men and women. The amount of money that is wasted on food as a result of ignorance is appalling, and there would be little call for doctors or patent medicines but for such ignorance.

It must be admitted, however, that many women deny themselves food in order that there may be a greater share for others in the house. Especially is this the case at a time like the present, when thousands of households are on half rations. Then again there are husbands who take too much of the family income for personal indulgence, and expect their wives to perform miracles with the remainder. A wife who complained to a London magistrate that she did not receive enough from her husband to keep them both and the baby, received some sound advice. She was told that the baby came first, and then herself, and finally her husband. Instead of being at the head of the food queue he was rightly placed at the tail. This is as it should be, and most men recognise the justice of such an arrangement, though there are others who do not care what happens to the family so long as they are well filled.—Liverpool Weekly Post.

Faithfulness.

The person who is guided by faithfulness has a sense of responsibility for the use of his talents, and acts according to his convictions, never breaking his promise nor neglecting his engagements. The virtue extends to his whole life, taking account of actions private and public, and of things both small and great. Faithfulness has many forms. To sweep gracefully through the circle of charities, leaving no blemish upon any; to perform the duties of home without fault, repressing the fretful words, and being calm in the hot moments of anger; to crush out of ourselves the spirit of haughtiness, deeming life too costly for quarrels and too short for pride; to maintain a chivalrous honour in all business relations; to hold back from the temptations of doubtful or hasty gain; to wear the white flower of a blameless and purified life—these are some of the many phases which appear in the life of everyone who is adorned by this all-pervading virtue.

Another Royal Wedding.

JUGO-SLAVIA AND RUMANIA LINKED BY MARRIAGE.

(The Associated Press.)

Many little romances and royal love affairs which rumor had woven around the eligible young King of Yugoslavia were halted rather abruptly this year by the official announcement that he would wed Princess Marie, second daughter of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie of Rumania. Both King Alexander and Princess Marie have been reported engaged to sons of various royal houses from time to time, but the first intimation that they were interested in each other came less than a year ago. Despite the fact that he was known to be a rather proud, studious young man, the courts of Europe had buzzed with stories linking his name with various favorites of the Parisian night life. There were rumors at Bucharest, where the prince had told everyone of his ambitions. He was anxious to tighten the bonds between Yugoslavia and Rumania in order to insure peace to the Balkans, and he knew his marriage to Marie was the most decisive step he could take in this direction.

A ROYAL DON JUAN.

Yet the royal heads of Europe keep wagging. They knew the ruler of Yugoslavia was only 30, and they knew, too, that he had displayed his fickleness once or twice before. They forgot the devotion he showered upon Thiana, eldest daughter of Czar Nicholas, who was lost to him through the Russian revolution, and remembered only the suddenness with which he seemed to forget her and fall under the charm of Princess Sophie, daughter of Prince Emanuel, Duke of Vendome and Alencon, a member of the Bourbon Orleans family. The Yugoslav Legation in Paris issued a denial of the rumors that he was engaged to Princess Sophie but it failed to still the gossip. Meanwhile the Prince had seen much of Marie while he was convalescing in Paris from an attack of appendicitis. Almost his first act upon leaving the French capital was to visit the Rumanian royal chateau of Sinaia, where he spent the Christmas holidays last year with the Princess. This, and various encouraging statements from the Bucharest court, paved the way for a formal announcement.

THE PRETTIEST PRINCESS IN EUROPE.

The princess in the meantime, had not been neglected by the matchmakers. She was considered the prettiest young girl of royal blood in Europe, which won her the affectionate title of "Mignon" in court circles. Long before she was mentioned in connection with Alexander, she had been reported engaged to the Prince of Wales. She was known to be well liked at Windsor Palace, where she was a constant visitor while attending school in England. When this match failed to develop fast enough for the gossip, they transferred her affections to King Boris of Bulgaria, only to find themselves thwarted by official denials from the royal households of both Rumania and Bulgaria. Her marriage marks the first wedding in Europe since the war in which the bride and groom were both of reigning families. Plans for the wedding have attracted considerable attention to the Rumanian rulers, as well as reviving reports that Queen Marie plans to visit the United States—a trip she has planned several times since the Armistice. In view of the fact that she faces her own coronation ceremony, tentatively set for sometime in the Fall, it is thought likely she may come to the United States after the wedding and postpone the coronation if necessary. She issued a statement recently to the effect that many pressing invitations had been received

Where the Flies Go.

AND HOW MANY MILES A DAY THEY TRAVEL.

Scientists are still working out the problem of where flies go in the winter—if they go anywhere. A series of experiments, reports "The Journal of Agriculture" have been made with 234,000 specimens of flies. The flies used were marked by putting them into bags containing red chalk or pigments very finely powdered and thus camouflaged they were allowed to escape.

The scientists then baited traps for the flies at measured distances from their place of liberation. They were thus able to find when and where the flies voyaged. They found that many flies migrated considerable distances, the common house fly migrating about six miles in a day. One trap recaptured a pink house fly thirteen miles away from its starting place.

The Bible, which takes its name from Gutenberg, the famous German printer, is in Latin. It consists of 1,242 folio pages of two columns each, with spaces left for illuminated initials. Each column contains 42 lines.

"No Man Liveth to Himself."

Even if you want off in a desert and spend your time in solitude, you could not separate your life from that of the rest of the world. Every life is a thread woven into the great tapestry of existence. You cannot extricate or isolate it. All that you say or do reacts on others. Trivial acts set in motion forces strong and far-reaching. A little neglect on your part may mean disaster to some one else. A little pains and patience may help some life that barely touches yours. Never let yourself fancy that what you are and what you do concerns yourself alone. No one can tell how far his influence reaches. No one knows what good or evil is wrought into the lives of others by the acts he counts trivial. "No man liveth to himself." No bigger truth was ever compressed into five words.

Faithfulness. There is no more noble human trait than that of loyalty. To be loyal is to be true. To be loyal is to be true to a cause or client, a person or a trust far than the person himself. It is the most commonly claimed first place in the list of virtues. To be loyal is to be impersonal, disinterested.

Peerages in Abeyance.

One often sees paragraphs in the newspapers about "peerages in abeyance," but, very few people understand the exact meaning of the term. This is explained in the following interesting manner by A. C. Fas. Davies.

The colloquial use of the word "abeyance" in everyday matters misleads many people who are inclined to use it about any Peerage which is not actually in enjoyment.

There are Peerages by Patent with all sorts of remainders. The usual one nowadays is to the heirs male of the body of the grantee, but of those presently existing the remainder to the Barony of Lucas, the Dukedom of Marlborough (which would take half a crown to rectify), and the Earldom of Cromarty are the most remarkable exceptions.

An ordinary English Peerage by Patent can never fall into abeyance. It may be that it is not used because there is dispute as to the heirship or doubt as to the existence of heirs, as for example, the Barony of Gardner, the Earldom of Milltown, or the Peerage of "Earl Fitz." These titles are now "dormant." They are not in abeyance.

But there is another kind of English Peerage which is a Peerage "in fee." That means it is heritable by female heirs devolving in precisely the same way as freehold land now does in England. These Peerages are usually Baronies "by writ," which means that they were not created by Patent, but exist merely by proof of the issue of a Writ of Summons to Parliament as a Peer and a sitting in Parliament as conformity with the writ. The two together create a heritable Peerage "in fee."

So long as a son succeeds father there is no difficulty about the succession. But there always comes a time when there is no son, but only a daughter. If she is an only daughter, she succeeds to the Peerage and transmits it to her eldest son.

No Seniority Among Daughters.

An only daughter of an elder son is the heir general in preference to her father's younger brother. But when there are two or more daughters and no son at any point in the pedigree, then a curious position arises, because in English law there is no seniority among daughters. They all rank equally as "coparceners" (i.e., having equal rights) to use the old-fashioned legal term.

The right of the eldest born, sometimes called the "droit d'aînesse," is only the shadowy fiction of the supposed right to have first choice after the division into portions of the land and other things partible. But a Peerage is not divisible, and consequently "falls into abeyance" and so remains until one or other of two things happen.

If all the sisters except one die, or if in later generations all the issue of all the sisters except one die out, then the heir of that one sister succeeds of right because he or she can then prove that he or she is "sole heir general" of the person to whom the first writ of summons was issued. But at any time while a Peerage is in abeyance between two or more co-heirs, the Sovereign may "determine the abeyance" in favor of any one of the co-heirs by giving the Peerage to that one.

That right determination is a prerogative of Sovereignty. It produces no injustice or hardship, because if the line of the favored heir dies out the rights of the others have not been affected, while if it be the others who die out first, the right of the fortunate one has simply been accelerated.

In Scottish law there is no coparcenary, so there is never an abeyance of a Scottish Peerage. In Scotland the eldest daughter is the heir falling a son, and, to use the Scottish term, she is the "heir of line."

Negro at Annapolis.

(New York Times.)

The appointment of Emile Treville Colley, a negro student in the College of the City of New York, to be a midshipman at Annapolis, calls up again one of those seemingly insoluble problems of which there is always at least one to answer "present" when poor harassed humanity calls the roll of its troubles. But let no false hopes spring in the minds of your readers that this letter will furnish an answer to the question. Let me confess at once that I am as much, perhaps even more, puzzled by it than the average person. And the cause of my bewilderment is the comparison which I am compelled to make between the handling of the question here and the treatment accorded it in at least one other land.

I spent some weeks in the Spring of 1921 in one of the British Colonies where there are 800,000 colored people and 2,000,000 whites; where there is no defined "colored question," either political or economic; where even the social side of the question is almost non-existent; where there is no governmental discrimination against colored people; where white women are safe to wander abroad where and when they will, and where franchise are unknown. I made my own observations during the time of my sojourn there, and checked them up afterwards by the observations of others and by reference to a published study of the subject made by a cultured Englishman who had been Governor General of the Colony for five years. I refer to the Island of Jamaica in the West Indies.

When I read the interview in a recent issue of the Sunday Times with an unnamed naval officer who predicts absolute ostracism for young Colley and describes the slow torture which was the lot of another colored midshipman at Annapolis in 1873, I recalled with a feeling of pleasurable relief the entire absence of color taboo in Jamaica, at least in the domain of education and all public functions. There are many highly educated and refined colored families there, and the natural and unconscious way in which the two races mingled together in the daily affairs of life was quite amazing to an American.

For example, I attended the yearly good games in Kingston, when the seven advanced schools which the island boasts enjoyed the annual week of sports and games. The competing students were both colored and white, as were the "masters," who moved busily about the athletic field preparing for each event as it came off. Any suggestion of a color line appeared to be absolutely lacking. The audience was composed, I should say, of about half white and half colored, neither race, as far as I could see, having any advantage in manners or dress over the other. While I was in Kingston a friend of mine attended a football game between two teams made up of white British soldiers stationed on the island. The game was umpired by a black man, assisted by three white umpires! My friend was a Canadian and felt less prejudice than most residents of the United States; but he confessed his utter amazement at the fact that not a protest was made, or apparently felt, by anyone regarding the color of the umpire, and his decisions were accepted with the same finality as if he were white.

Remembering these things, and remembering that I myself had not been in Jamaica a week before I almost forgot whether the people I met were black or white, but knew only that they were agreeable or otherwise—I find myself wondering whether the white midshipmen at Annapolis are really of a different breed from the whites of Jamaica (descendants mostly of English and Scotch), or whether the blacks themselves are different, or whether it is just a different way of looking at the question?

I wish that the naval officer who discussed with the Times correspondent the entrance of a colored boy into Annapolis had not treated the feeling of the midshipman against it as if it were a thing inherent to human nature, originated of God and unchangeable. Before my visit to Jamaica I might have believed it, but not now. I have seen what I have seen, and the contrast between that and the picture of one lonely boy, cultured and refined as we are told he is, averted faces of other cultured and refined young companions for a glance of sympathy or a word of comradeship, leaves me bewildered, and wondering, why here and not there?

Several streams of water were quickly put into play and after about twenty minutes the fire was under control. At 2 o'clock this morning the Central and East End Fire Companies were called to the store of Mr. Robert Forbes, Hamilton Avenue, where a blaze was in progress. On arriving at the scene the inside of the store was found to be a mass of flame and it looked as if the whole building would be destroyed. Several streams of water were quickly put into play and after about twenty minutes the fire was under control. How the fire originated is not known, but it is believed to have started amongst some loose paper that was piled in a corner near the office. Mr. Forbes has been selling off for some weeks past as he contemplates going out of business, and there was very little stock in the store.

This Offer means prettier teeth—accept it

This is an offer which millions have accepted. And glistening teeth seen everywhere show the good effects.

Make this free test. Then judge the benefits by what you see and feel.

To fight film

Dental science, after diligent research, has found ways to fight film on teeth. Careful tests have proved them beyond question. Now leading dentists everywhere advise their daily use.

The methods are embodied in a scientific tooth paste—Pepsodent. So all may regularly apply them. Teacupless homes they have brought already a new era in teeth cleaning.

How film ruins

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The ordinary dentifrice does not effectively combat it. So, despite the tooth brush, it has caused tremendous damage.

Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. It forms the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

It breeds millions of germs and they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Pepsodent combats these film-caused troubles as nothing else has done.

Pepsodent also multiplies the salivary flow. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva, to digest starch deposits that cling. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, to neutralize the acids which cause decay.

In these ways it acts as fruit acids do. With every use it multiplies Nature's teeth-protecting forces. Old methods had the opposite effect.

MINARD'S LINIMENT.

"The Line to the North."

RED CROSS TOURIST GUIDE.

"The Line to the North" is the title of a neatly arranged folder just issued by the Red Cross Steamship management in announcing the resumption of a weekly service between this port and the neighboring continent. The folder is well printed and contains many fine views of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia scenes. Prominent on the front page is a view of Signal Hill showing Cabot Tower as it stands on the extreme height, and the "Battery" nestling at the foot. Amongst other cuts are scenes from Middle Cove, Topsail, St. John's Harbor, Chester, N. S., and Northwest Arm, Halifax. The folder is designed to principally illustrate to American tourists the attractions which a twelve days' vacation travelling by the Red Cross boats has to offer. To this end a write-up is given of a trip by either the popular ship Rosalind or the new liner Silvia. Beginning at East River, the different sights are pointed out and elucidated, the passage down the coast, the stop off at Halifax and the 550 mile sea voyage until St. John's is reached, is pictured in a manner bound to attract anyone planning a holiday. The management is to be congratulated on its well-designed tourist guide. That their efforts to encourage holiday traffic from the neighboring continent will meet with the success which their enterprise deserves, is certain, as the natural attractions which we have to offer has only to be made known to ensure a constant stream of visitors during the summer and fall.

Prisoners Arrive.

WILL SERVE TWELVE MONTHS EACH.

Twelve months each is the time which Moses and Angel Young, two brothers who were convicted before Magistrate McDonnell, of St. George's of a series of larcenies, will have to serve in the Penitentiary. They were brought to town by the express which arrived yesterday. The prisoners were in the custody of Constable Pampsey. Five larcenies were committed by the two Youngs in the course of ten days. The scenes of their depredations were varied and extended from Stephenville Crossing to Port au Port. Moses Young has already served a year for larceny.

Lovers of music will hear some good vocal and instrumental talent at George St. Church on Tuesday, at 8.30 p.m.—jue5,21

No Commerce and No Money.

MOST LONELY ISLAND OF THE SEVEN.

MONTEVIDEO. (Associated Press).—The British island of Tristan da Cunha, in the middle of the South Atlantic, with its 120 odd souls, mostly descendants of Napoleon's St. Helena guards, who hardly hear from civilization more than once in two years, is at last to have a missionary and radio communication. For more than 18 months an English clergyman named Rogers and his wife have been trying to reach the island from Cape Town and finally induced the captain of the Japanese steamship, Tacoma Maru, which left Cape Town on March 26 for the River Plate, to deviate from his regular course and land them at Tristan da Cunha. W. Dennis Myers, a passenger on the Tacoma Maru and a lawyer of Cape Town, who has just arrived here, tells of the vessel's call at the island with Mr. and Mrs. Rogers and thinks the population is truly in need of a missionary.

A HOPELESS TANGLE OF REDS.

"The student of evolution, the psychologist as well as the missionary, would find much to interest him in this curious, forgotten community," says Mr. Myers. "The settlement originated, it is said, when a detachment of soldiers who were guarding Napoleon at St. Helena, to the north, were despatched to Tristan da Cunha to forestall the remote possibility that Napoleon might attempt to escape thither. Two of the soldiers remained and, importing wives from St. Helena, laid the foundation of one of the strangest settlements in the world. From time to time shipwrecked mariners have added to the inhabitants on the island, who have married and intermarried till relationship after a century has become a hopeless tangle. Nearly all the present population were born on the island and have a colored strain in their blood. They speak English with a peculiar drawl, resembling West of England speech. There is one old Italian among them, shipwrecked from a sailing vessel, who appears to have forgotten his own name and in fact his mother tongue.

A DECADENT POPULATION.

"Continued intermarriage has in this generation produced some pitiful children. Some of them are idiots, some lack limbs, some are deaf and dumb. The population does nothing agriculturally except to cultivate potatoes. On this food, together with fish and penguin eggs, they chiefly exist. There are few wild cattle and a few sheep and out of the wool of the latter the women knit rough woollen stockings. That is their only manufacture. They wear old clothes, mostly seamen's, bagged from the ships, usually wandering windjammers, that visit the island at rare intervals. There being no commerce there is no need for money. The islanders' attitude toward visitors is curious. As he stands before one, his head droops, his arms fall listlessly to his side and he answers simply and uninterestedly questions as to his life and mode of existence. He seems to have no other interest than to trade a penguin, an albatross skin or a seal's flapper for an old shirt, a little tobacco, or anything from civilization that would be useful. He articulates slowly and with difficulty as if he had almost forgotten speech. 'I did not see one smile,'

MISSESSIPPIANS HAVE BIG ORDER.

Tristan da Cunha is a mountainous island high rising out of the ocean waves like an inverted piddling bowl, and as we saw it, it was wreathed in swirling mists. The little country is a mere huddle on a green strip of land at the foot of the mountain, having no commerce and no money. These people certainly come from the mountains, but it is doubtful if they worship God. The few plucky missionaries who have called themselves among them, for at least two years, will try to teach them. They bring large quantities of supplies, including comforts and, in radio messages, they hope to reach the island from the outside world.

Tarvia Prevents Dust; Tarvia Preserves Roads.

In the United States and Canada Tarvia is the standard by which all other road binders and preservatives are judged.

"Tarvia is made in three grades.—'Tarvia X' for road construction, 'Tarvia B' for preservation of road surface and 'Tarvia K-P' for repair of road surfaces. Both 'Tarvia B' and 'Tarvia K-P' have been used in St. John's Municipal works for several years.

"Tarvia B" actually enters the road surface, acts as a cement and resists the wear and tear of traffic. By cementing together the dust particles, 'Tarvia B' prevents the formation of dust.

"After the application of 'Tarvia B' to a road surface a thin layer of sand should be applied to take care of the excess liquid and to prevent cracking. This layer of sand will prevent horses from slipping and automobiles from skidding and will prolong the life of the road surface. Broken stone is not as satisfactory or as economical as sand for this purpose.

A road after being treated with 'Tarvia B' does not become muddy in rainy weather; but sheds the water and dries off quickly after the rain, leaving the road in admirable condition while untreated roads are still deep with mud.

"Tarvia B" surfacing should be applied annually but only when roads are in good condition and free from surplus dust. All holes and depressions should be repaired with fine broken stone and 'Tarvia K-P'.

When 'Tarvia B' is applied by mechanical sprinker, care should be taken to have men with brooms and hand sprinklers go over the ground so that excess 'Tarvia B' may be brushed out and not allowed to run waste and so that bare spots be treated and the entire road surface secured.

A loose, "happy-go-lucky" application is sheer waste of time and money, "whatever is worth doing is worth doing well."

"Tarvia B" is admirably adapted to the treatment of sidewalks and walks in parks, hospital grounds and cemeteries. Wooden plank bridges will last longer if treated with 'Tarvia B'. Fence posts, sills and house eaves, will be greatly benefited by treatment with 'Tarvia B'.

Further particulars will be gladly given upon application to COLIN CAMPBELL, LTD. 157, 159, 161, Water Street, St. John's, Nfld.

Teaching Ships to Speak.

It is part of a British warship's duty to teach merchant vessels of her own nationality to "speak" correctly in the many-tongued language of the sea.

She does this by rehearsing them in different methods of intership "talking," much after the fashion in which a teacher of foreign languages gives oral instructions to a pupil.

"I wish to exercise you in signals," says the warship to the mercantile vessel as they meet.

The latter intimates that she is ready, and the lesson begins forthwith.

As to the subject matter of it there is no fixed rule. It may be merely a "hull mechanic exercise," or the phrases repeated may be as seemingly innocuous as the "Have you seen the pen of my aunt" of the French primer.

What a ship talks about during her "school hours" matters little. The essential point is that she should have a sound knowledge of the language she is being coached in and be able to "speak" it fluently and correctly.

Upon her ability to do this important matter may at times depend. During war periods fighting ships look to trading ships for useful information, while trading ships have to "take in" warnings, directions and the like from fighting ships and from shore stations.

In times of peace merchant craft use "signals"—the common tongue of the ocean highways—to call for help when they are in trouble or to tell each other news as they pass.

For their own benefit, therefore, it is necessary that they should be as well up in "signals" as possible, and this explains why the warship takes every opportunity of coaching them in a form of "speech" of which she has an erudite and professional knowledge.

The international code, being a sort of universal language of the sea, is generally used for the lessons. These are of a varied character as ships "speak" to each other in different ways, and wireless has not edged out the older methods of communication.

Long distance apart two big flags and a "drum" beneath them hoisted at the masthead will enable two vessels to indulge in quite a lengthy and vivacious gossip. The "drum" may be a barrel or anything else that is round in shape.

"Flag wagging," semaphoring and operating flash lamps are other systems of visual signalling in which a warship tests the skill of the "pupils" whom she picks up trudging along the sea lanes.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Toy Capital of Europe.

WHERE MODERN IMPROVEMENTS ARE UNKNOWN.

TIRANA, ALBANIA. (Associated Press)—The distinction of being the "toy capital of Europe" so long enjoyed by Cetinje, the old site of the palace and court of King Nicholas, of Montenegro, falls now to Tirana, the capital of Albania, where regents, chiefs, boys, ministers and diplomats are beginning to congregate to set up the governmental magnificence of the new state, the last to be admitted into the League of Nations. Tirana still burns oil for light. She has no communication with the outside world except a wagon-road leading to "her seaport," Durazzo. She boasts a market place and five mosques and has lately adapted an old building into a hotel called "The International Hotel." The government palaces are scattered throughout her winding, narrow streets, which are lined with merchants displaying their wares sitting with crossed legs in the Arab fashion.

In Sofema and Honorable State, the stores and houses, roofed with a red tile, are all of one story. Distinction is given the government buildings adapted to the use of government by the introduction of a few chairs and desks. Each building has no more than six or eight rooms. The ministers enter their offices with great solemnity and ceremony. Orderlies and ushers stand at attention while the heads pass. Inside his office, the minister calls his ushers by an old-fashioned table-bell, well electric bells being wholly unknown in this primitive land. With stern severity, every one addresses the minister as "Your excellency." Diplomats have only a legal residence in Tirana. Minister Ayera, the British plenipotentiary, who has the unique dignity of being it. Italy also maintains a diplomat, the representative of the only country to recognize Albania formally, lives in Durazzo making the trip to Tirana when state functions demand residence in Durazzo.

Long Motor Trips Establish BUICK Serviceability!

Records of Yellowstone Park show that the BUICK has been the most popular car at the Park, more Buick Cars entering each season than any other fine automobile. And that is natural, because Buick performance for twenty years has improved the reliability of Buick mechanism. Have you seen the 1922 Buick Models—either a Six cylinder model or a Four to choose from? Better than ever. "When better automobiles are built, Buick will build them."

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNERS

There is a demand for practically all kinds of houses at reasonable prices. The Home Estate Co., Ltd., charges 2 1/2 per cent. for service in selling houses; that is the only charge; there is no charge if no sale is effected. Thus to sell a house for $1,000.00 through the Company, it costs the owner $25.00, and so in proportion to price realized. The Company makes no charge to purchasers of properties, unless an understanding is openly arrived at between the owner, the purchaser and the Company. We are looking for houses now to offer to those wishing to secure them.
