CHAPTER XXXIV.

"Now I see what a vile suspicion, as you truly called it, you consider me capable of entertaining. Your own guest in your own house—a relative and trusted friend of your high-minded, noble-hearted wife! How could you imagine I would believe anything so base?"—and Miss Glover closes her eyes as if almost overcome with emotion. Opening them presently, she says briefly, as if too agitated to pursue the subject further, "I alluded to another husband and wife when I spoke, Lord Pentreath."

"Well, I suppose it is that conceited fool Dallas Glynn and his wife that you mean to allude to," growls his lordship, looking down sullenly. "Not that I can see what affair of yours that is, either, Miss Glover. And mind you, I'll believe no statement—not if it were sworn to—that emanates from Dallas Glynn's infernal vanity!"

"Swear to an emanation of Dallas Glynn's infernal vanity?" Isabelle echoes, with a cold, scornful little laugh. "As if you could suspect me of the folly of swearing to anything but a plain, undeniable, incontrovertible fact!"

"What is it?" Lord Pentreath asks; and for so exemplary a person he uses some rather strong expressions. "I wish you'd say out plainly what you have to say. I hate stabs in the dark!"

"Why will you bring your name into the question, my lord?" Miss Bella asks, with mild reproach. "I repeat I was alluding to a fact when I referred to another person, not a faithful, honorable gentleman like Lord Pentreath, but a faithless, good-for-nothing husband of a trusting, fond young wife."

"Well, what's your fact? I want to know what this fact is that you're making so much of," he demands, with fierce, suppressed irritation, conscious that Isabelle's keen eyes are watching every change in his face.

PUTS HEALTH AND VIM INTO WOMEN

So Says Mrs. MacPherson of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brantford, Ontario.—"I was always tired and the least exertion would put me out for a day or two. I had a pressing pain on the top of my head, pain in the shape of my neck, and when I stooped over I could not get up without help, because of pain in my back. I did not sleep well and was nervous at the least noise. I keep house, but I was such a wreck that I could not sweep the floor nor wash the dishes without lying down afterwards. A friend living near me told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her so I began to take it. With the first bottle I felt brighter and got so I could wash dishes and sweep without having to lie down. Later I became regular again in my monthly terms. I have taken ten bottles all told and am now all better. I can truly say that your wonderful medicine cannot be beaten for putting health and vim into women."—Mrs. James H. MacPherson, 299 Greenway St., Brantford, Ont.

If you are suffering from a sluggish, weak, irregular, backache, or any other form of female weakness write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Oshawa, Ontario, for Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "All-Heart's Remedies to Women."

"A proof and a pledge that what I have just alleged against Joyce Murray is substantially true," she replies, quietly.

"That she is pledged to Dallas Glynn to remain single for him or to wait till his wife dies? Do you expect me to believe such a ridiculous lie as that?" his lordship demands, rudely.

"It is not such a ridiculous lie as it seems," Isabelle rejoins, quite unmoved. "Wives do die sometimes before their husbands, Lord Pentreath. But in the case of a very young wife like Yolande Glynn, it was rather a hopeless prospect. Miss Murray began to think so herself lately—within the last six months—and to see more material advantages than waiting for years or forever for her lover. Indeed, I think she would be very glad to have her pledge back again."

"It's false! It's a tissue of falsehoods from beginning to end!" his lordship cries, savagely.

"Oh, no, it is not!" Isabelle persists, calmly, to the last. "Dallas Glynn himself taunted you with the truth of my assertions in this very room—you may remember? You said then you wanted proof of his words—have you forgotten? And I told you I would get the proof that he had not told you a boastful lie. I tell you now I can, as a fact—a very hard fact. I may say," Miss Glover adds, with a sarcastic quiver of her lip, indulging herself in a private jest.

"Well, what are your proof and your fact, and all the rest of it?" Lord Pentreath asks, in a low, surly tone. "One would think you were unraveling the plot of a melodrama!"

"All in good time," says Isabelle, coolly. "The next time you and I get an opportunity of having a quiet talk, Lord Pentreath, I will tell you all about it. Until then you must take my word for it."

"I will do nothing of the kind!" he declares.

But Isabelle Glover takes no notice of his incivility, and with a slight bow she retires from the room, and leaves his lordship to digest her words at leisure.

By that evening's post she writes to Lady Nora Glynn, and the letter contains a crossed check for twenty-five pounds; and by the same post Miss Glover writes to "John Carter, Esq., Jeweler and Pawnbroker."

"For there's no knowing what chicanery my Lady Nora might attempt to keep possession of money and goods, too," she says, with a malicious smile. "John Carter is an honest man, but I'm afraid Lady Nora—Carter—will never be an honest woman."

Two days later a tiny registered parcel addressed to Mademoiselle Gantier arrives by the afternoon post at Pentreath.

"My little pearl brooch that I left to be repaired in London," she explains to the countess, calmly putting it into her pocket.

But, when mademoiselle opens the tiny parcel in her own room, and locks the little morocco case away in her own cash box, the "little pearl brooch" has become transformed into a string of fine sapphires and diamonds.

The next morning, after she has washed and got the check cashed, Lady Nora Glynn goes out shopping.

"For I had better get everything I can as quickly as possible," she tells herself, prudently. "I can see plainly I can expect nothing from that girl's narrow-minded absurdity."

Yolande's "narrow-minded absurdity" means that, on Lady Nora's informing her that morning of her intended marriage with Mr. Carter, and the consequent pressing necessity for a trousseau, poor Yolande, dismayed at both pieces of news, has not unreasonably asked her where the money is to come from. Her own private resources, of which Lady Nora has always had the lion's share, are nearly exhausted, and she steadfastly refuses to increase the household expenses in the present state of her uncle's affairs. "I must try to do with a hundred pounds," Lady Nora says, with the air of a martyr.

"I cannot possibly spare you more than fifty," Yolande says, flushing, but determined, and writes a check for that amount, and gives it with a kiss. "I would make it five hundred more with far more pleasure if I could, dear," she adds, earnestly.

Lady Nora sulkily takes the fifty and spends it in an hour and runs up a bill for fifty pounds more, and then with a very good appetite goes to luncheon in a fashionable restaurant.

Outside, as she rustles across the sunny pavement in her dainty morning costume of black-and-white silk, her flashing jet and cloudy lace, to step into her carriage, she comes face to face with her son Dallas.

He looks thin and ill and haggard, and Lady Nora recognizes with a shock of dismay that there is even an air of shabbiness about his well-brushed suit. He certainly looks the reverse of happy or prosperous.

"I know he is dreadfully hard up. I am quite certain he is going to ask me for money," she thinks, angrily.

Her presentiments are almost correct. Dallas puts her into the carriage, and then stands with his hand on the door.

"May I drive a little way with you, mother?" he asks coldly, after waiting a moment in vain for an invitation. "There are a few things about which I wish to speak to you."

"Certainly, my dear boy," Lady Nora replies, with a frown.

He does not speak until the carriage is bowling smoothly under the trees by the Serpentine, and then he says, quietly:

"Will you let me have that ring back, mother—that diamond and sapphire one which you asked me for when you lent me twelve pounds last March?"

"I—I can't let you have it now—at once, I mean," Lady Nora stammers, flushing. "It is quite safe, but—I had to raise some money on it myself, Dallas. I wanted it very badly; and you know I have scarcely anything—only what Yolande gives me."

"I am sorry you let it go out of your own keeping," he says, in a hard, cold tone. "I gave it to you because it was the only thing of value in my possession, and you had been for it I had it, and seemed to wish for it as security for the money you lent me. I had no right to trust any one with it when the ring was not mine; but I thought I could trust my mother at least to keep it safely."

"Not yours!" Lady Nora gasps. "Dallas!"

"No, not mine," he answers, curtly and sternly. "It is Joyce Murray's ring, as you know, and she and I exchanged rings one day—a sort of sentimental jest—a piece of absurdity which I have paid dearly enough for! I meant to return it to her as soon as I could repay you the twelve pounds you lent me," he continues, looking straight before him, and speaking in a hard, repressed tone of smothered anger. "I can't do that now, as I am almost penniless. I have been ill, and I am out of a situation, and until my friend Danville comes over from the States I have no prospect of one. But I thought that in any case you would let me have the ring back so that I might return it to the owner. How much did you pledge it for?"

Communist Uprising in Bulgaria Assumes Serious Proportions.

Five Dead in the Gordon Bennett Balloon Race--Heroism of Captain of the Empress of Australia--Earthquake in Persia Causes 123 Deaths--Sale of Liquors Began Yesterday in Manitoba.

SAYS BULGARIAN INSURRECTION IS SPREADING.
PARIS, Sept. 24. A despatch to the Havas Agency from Sofia says the present insurrection in Bulgaria is spreading and gathering strength. One hundred thousand peasants, the majority well armed and organized, are closing in on Sofia in an attempt to overthrow the Government. The Cabinet sat throughout Saturday night with King Boris as President. Two regular regiments have been sent out to make a stand against the peasants, who are reported to have halted in the face of rifle fire.

ANOTHER REPORT.
LONDON, Sept. 24. A Reuter despatch from Sofia says that aside from the recent communist uprising at Nova Sengora and Tchirpau, in which seventy communists were either killed or wounded, there have been no disturbances in Bulgaria.

FIVE VICTIMS OF AIR RACE.
BRUSSELS, Sept. 24. Five airmen, including two United States Army Lieutenants, lost their lives and another was seriously wounded and five balloons either smashed to the ground or were struck by lightning in the James Gordon Bennett International Balloon Race yesterday, which was started, under the most adverse weather conditions in the history of the event. Two Americans, two Swis and a Spanish balloonist were killed, and a sixth, the partner of the Spanish aeronaut, is in a precarious condition.

U.S. BALLOON DESTROYED.
BRUSSELS, Sept. 24. The United States army balloon S-6, competing in the Gordon Bennett International race, was struck by lightning last evening and Lieut. Olistead and Choptaw, her occupants, were killed.

123 DEAD IN EARTHQUAKE.
TEHERAN, Sept. 24. Several villages in the vicinity of Bujuard are reported to have been destroyed, with casualties as far as is known 123 dead and hundreds injured in the earthquake which shook the region last Thursday, say despatches reaching here. The shocks were continuing.

WHERE THE EARTHQUAKE WAS FELT.
SILMLA, Sept. 24. A severe earthquake was felt in Kerman, Persia, last night. There was considerable damage to buildings but the ruins did not apply to vessels previously constructed and did not technically bar every possible United States entrant as they are fixed at present. They also agreed to meet the American members in Conference this week at Yarmouth, St. John, or any neutral point that could be agreed upon. This offsets the report sent out from Gloucester to-day declaring that the Canadian Committee had refused to agree to a Conference as requested by the American members.

HON. F. OLIVER APPOINTED TO RAILWAY COMMISSION.

"Teacher" Criticises the Exams.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir:--The C.H.E. Examinations--like the Labrador Boundary--appear to be one of our hasty annuals. (They are peculiarly differences of course). It is being emphasized yearly that these examinations are detrimental to efficiency in the outport schools. Primary and Preliminary Examinations are positively a hindrance in many cases, and successful students very often show lack of practical insight and reasoning because of the cramming in vogue. Numbers of people in Newfoundland are tired of C.H.E. Exams, but plead for their retention on the ground that we have nothing else to supply the necessary stimulus to successful work. What's an opinion to hold? What a reflection to cast upon High School teachers. In effect it means that teachers work because they are afraid of "Exam results." Any conscientious teacher--by no means "rare" anywhere to-day, in Newfoundland schools--will demand and get just as good work from pupils, whether they work for examinations or not. Our curriculum to-day is faulty. A teacher, say, with 30 candidates, is often deterred in his work by them, and is forced to spend all his time on the subject--for examinations, while practical and observational subjects are not given the attention they deserve. Personally, I think that if an annual summer school could be assured, and "nature study" included in the subjects selected, much good would result. Possibly, of course, abolition of Primary and Preliminary Examinations would mean decreased attendance and increased irregularity. Be it home in mind that to-day, September, attendance is usually neglected, and hundreds of children--on various pretexts--absent by their parents, waste the golden hours of youth. That some kind of law is necessary to enforce attendance is the experience of most of our teachers. The absence of such a law adds but one more drawback to the outport teachers' difficulty of competing with college results in examination records. Sometime, let us hope, teachers will not be judged so largely by the false standards, so much in evidence to-day.

A CLUE TO BANDITS.
TORONTO, Sept. 24. Nearly twenty thousand dollars of the eighty-four thousand stolen by bandits in a sensational hold-up of bank messengers of the Bank of Nova Scotia and Sterling Bank in Toronto on the morning of July 24 has found its way back to the Bank headquarters. This amount has come in three different lots and was exchanged by bandits for American currency in Chicago and St. Paul, Minn. Detectives of both countries are endeavoring to trace the outlaws by this clue, but with no success.

HIGH PRICES FOR LIQUOR IN MANITOBA.
WINNIPEG, Sept. 24. Hard liquor officially went on sale in Manitoba to-day, through Government Commissions at prices higher than those charged in British Columbia and Quebec. The system by which all purchases are delivered to the address of the permit holder is held responsible for the high prices.

THE INTERNATIONAL SCHR. RACE HALIFAX, Sept. 24.
In replying to-day to the message sent Saturday by the American Race Committee to the Halifax members of the International Schr. Race Committee, the latter pointed out that additions to the rules did not apply to vessels previously constructed and did not technically bar every possible United States entrant as they are fixed at present. They also agreed to meet the American members in Conference this week at Yarmouth, St. John, or any neutral point that could be agreed upon. This offsets the report sent out from Gloucester to-day declaring that the Canadian Committee had refused to agree to a Conference as requested by the American members.

Wasted Eloquence.

"This theory of governing children by appealing to their reason isn't all its made out to be," said a public school teacher recently. "A youngster needs a good spanking once in a while; it cheers up a child as nothing else will. Here is an instance:--
"One of my boys has skipped his classes, deceived his mother, been found out, and caused much unhappiness all round. I took him aside, and we had a heart-to-heart talk. Johnny sat still, looking at me intently, and seeming to be deeply impressed. 'I thought I was making great headway, and that my sermon was penetrating Johnny's brain. I never saw a child who seemed more absorbed,' even fascinated, by my line of argument. But you can never tell. Just as I reached the climax in my appeal to his better self a light of discovery broke over Johnny's face. 'Please teacher,' he said, eagerly, 'is your lower jaw that moves, isn't it?'"

Rev. Fr. Adams Celebrates His Silver Jubilee.

Stephenville Parishioners Honour and Rejoice With Their Devoted Pastor.

Thursday, the 13th inst., was a day rendered memorable in the annals of the parish of Stephenville by the celebration of his pastor, the Rev. Fr. Adams, of the Silver Jubilee of his ordination to the priesthood.

On the previous day, his Lordship Bishop Renouf of St. George's and the priests from the neighbouring parishes who were to be present at the happy event, had arrived at the settlement and at an early hour on Thursday morning the good people of the parish were astir, eager to do honour to the devoted priest who for eighteen years had ministered to them with such zeal and devotion, and the number of communicants of all ages at the early morning Masses, which were celebrated by the visiting priests, were gratifying testimony to the fruits of his labours.

The celebration of a solemn Jubilee Mass by the Jubilarian with Rt. Rev. Bishop Renouf presiding and assisted by Rev. Frs. Brennan of Bonne Bay and Kerwin of Bay of Islands as Deacon and sub-Deacon respectively, with Rev. Father Joy of Port au Port as Master of Ceremonies, opened the celebration. Rev. Fr. Pineault of Lourdes and Rev. Fr. Callan of Wood's Island attended his Lordship at the throne, and Rev. Fr. Nolan of Cape St. George was also present within the Sanctuary.

The preacher was Rev. Fr. Kerwin, who first read the following message from his Holiness the Pope:

"The Holy Father congratulates the Rev. Fr. Adams on attaining the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination, also commends his zeal, courage and self-sacrifice in carrying on God's holy work. He also gives the pontifical blessing to the Rev. Fr. Adams and household."

(Sgd.) CARDINAL GASPARRI. Then taking as his text the words of St. Paul, "You have not chosen me, I have chosen you," preached an eloquent sermon on the sanctity of the priesthood with its duties and responsibilities, and during the discourse paid a well-merited tribute to the Jubilarian of the day, whose twenty-five years' service in this diocese of the Master's vineyard, at first in the parish of Harbour Breton and later in that of Stephenville, had borne fruit an hundredfold.

In the afternoon Father Agamsten, detained at a banquet the Bishop and clergy, visitors and friends. When ample justice had been done to the sumptuous repast provided, the Bishop proposed the health of the Jubilarian, and having paid a well deserved tribute to his work in the diocese, concluded by saying that the people of Stephenville were singularly blessed in having in the person of Father Adams, not only a good and loyal priest, but a genial and warm hearted friend as was evidenced by the progress, material as well as spiritual, that the parish had made during his pastorate.

Father Adams replied in his usual felicitous manner and expressed his deep gratitude to his Lordship for his great kindness and heartily thanked his brother priests and visitors for coming to rejoice and thank God with him.

Speeches appropriate to the occasion were delivered by Rev. Fr. Pineault, Dr. McDonald, and M. F. Hayes. Among the many objects of interest to attract the attention of the guests was the many articles of silverware displayed in the reception room, donated by the Rev. Jubilarian's friends in Bay of Islands, St. George's, Port au Port and elsewhere.

In the evening after Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, there was a largely attended re-union in the Parish Hall, where a very enjoyable concert and entertainment was given by the young people of Stephenville assisted by a number of talented ladies and gentlemen from Stephenville Crossing.

At its close M. F. Hayes read the following address:

Dear Father, it is no wonder that the people of Stephenville both at home and abroad are proud of their true "Sowarth Aroon." And right here we must raise our hats once again in fond memory and respect to the Rt. Rev. Archbishop McNeil, to whom we owe a deep and everlasting debt of gratitude for his good judgment and keen foresight when he appointed you to this parish.

We can realize in a measure only your devotion and strong allegiance to the sacred pledges you made when taking Holy Orders twenty-five years ago, because we have ample proof of your ideals of what a true disciple should be, fully personified in yourself.

During twenty-five years of assiduous, continuous work in this country, you took only one short holiday to visit your family and those dear to you in Canada, to renew once again the fond memories and scenes of childhood. Even this one slight respite you were prevailed upon to take by our ever-loved late Bishop Power.

Knowing full well, Dear Father, that you have borne bravely the burden of the day and completed the more weighty undertakings you set out to accomplish, and that it is your wish to take a trip abroad and enjoy a little relaxation, your parishioners have collected a little amount to assist you in doing so. Dear Father, we know how little you value the goods of this world for their intrinsic value, your wish to give with a living hand far more than you receive, nevertheless we must request you now to accept this little purse as a very slight token indeed of the regard in which we hold you and as a souvenir of this auspicious occasion in your holy life.

In conclusion, Dear Father, we wish you health, strength and happiness in the years to come and pray that Almighty God may grant you "Ad multos annos."

Signed on behalf of Stephenville Parish.

A pleasing event in the evening's programme was the presentation to the loved pastor by a little lad of about ten years, of a well-filled purse contributed to not alone by his Parishioners, but by friends of other denominations as well, showing the admiration and esteem with which he is regarded by all sections of the people.

In replying to this demonstration of affection and love—love because all the world over Catholics are known to love their priests on account of the sublime office they hold. Father Adams was deeply moved by this expression of loyalty and good will and extended his heartfelt thanks to all who had contributed to the success of the celebration. He had spent a most delightful jubilee day and its memory who received the benefit in full of the first years of your holy ministrations are very dear to you and will be ever green in your memory, and we know only too well that their hearts beat in unison with yours today.

Your numerous friends, especially in your distant loved homeland, are all with us in prayerful spirit in congratulating and felicitating you heartily and sincerely with a strong hope that the omnipotent one may extend your years of blessed usefulness to His Holy Church into the far distant future, and we trust that a large majority of us now present with a happy memory of this occasion, may assemble again for the celebration of your Golden Jubilee.

When we look back over the eighteen years of strenuous work wholly and freely given by you for the spiritual and temporal welfare of this parish and review the enormous cost of time and labour necessary to accomplish so much with so little means at your disposal, we ask ourselves can it be possible that all this is applicable to one man?

When we compare our Church properties of eighteen years ago with the noble pile of buildings and magnificent church grounds of to-day—when we contemplate and view with pardonable pride and admiration the graceful outlines of our stately church its interior impressive rich furnishings and adornments, with the humble, small and wholly inadequate equipment necessary to Divine Services when you arrived in our midst. When we see the new globe-house, just completed, replace the old one, our fine spacious hall and classrooms where once stood the only little schoolhouse in the settlement with its lone teacher, whereas to-day we boast of four school and five teachers, showing the deep interest you always manifested towards the improvement and education of our children. When we see the many acres of well-kept and artistically laid out church grounds unsurpassed for picturesque location and natural beauty in this or in any other country, which your trained eye and mind took full advantage of in your building plans.

Knowing well that this whole transformation is due to you solely, to your indomitable courage and optimism regarding our future, but above all zeal in your holy calling, not one cent of debt encumbers any of our church properties either here or at Stephenville Crossing.

Bearing all the foregoing in mind, Dear Father, it is no wonder that the people of Stephenville both at home and abroad are proud of their true "Sowarth Aroon." And right here we must raise our hats once again in fond memory and respect to the Rt. Rev. Archbishop McNeil, to whom we owe a deep and everlasting debt of gratitude for his good judgment and keen foresight when he appointed you to this parish.

Can You Match it?

Five Million Matches a Day from one Machine is an Output that takes Some Reading.

The consumption of matches in this country is estimated at five per day for every man, woman and child in the country, and really, considering the number of cigarettes that are smoked, I do not think this figure at all exaggerated.

But, consider what it means. It works out at over 200,000,000 matches daily for Great Britain, and nearly 500,000,000 for the United States. No wonder that machines have been invented, each of which turns out matches at the rate of over 10,000 a minute, or 5,280,000 for each eight-hour working day.

This matter of matches has made me give some thought to other little things which loom largely in modern civilized life, yet are taken as a matter of course, as to their gigantic output. Pins and needles, for instance. I have no actual statistics as to the output of pins, but I feel sure that a pin a day a head for the whole population would be a very moderate estimate of our requirements, and, without bothering about exact figures, I suggest that this means fifteen thousand millions of pins as the yearly allowance for this country. I can be a little more definite regarding needles, for a manufacturer of these articles has stated that the daily consumption of needles for the whole world is 3,000,000. Since the manufacture of a single needle from indicate that there is no surplus of Anthracite Coal in the U.S. The shortage caused by the strike of Anthracite Miners last year has not been made up, and American hard coal will, in all probability, be hard to get and high priced. Coke is an excellent substitute for hard coal, and we have on hand a stock of same that will soon be disposed of, because a shortage of hard coal invariably creates an increased demand for our product.

We advise our customers to book their requirements as soon as possible.

Forty-Four Years in the Service of the Public—The Evening Telegram.

THE EVENING TELEGRAM, LIMITED, PROPRIETORS. All communications should be addressed to The Evening Telegram, Ltd., and not to individuals.

St. John's, Newfoundland, Tuesday, September 25, 1923.

The "Advocate" Indulges in a Flood of Inveective.

The intention of the Advocate to pose as the solitary champion of the fishermen is too obvious to deceive anyone. Undoubtedly already a copy of yesterday's issue has been sent to every individual who is still labouring under the deception constantly preached by the Advocate that every man's hand is against him, with the exception of that of our contemporary. This attitude has been voiced so loudly and so continuously that the fishermen, at first impressed, are now wearied by it, and would welcome by way of a change a concrete illustration of the champion's oft-repeated assurances that he would destroy all their enemies, remove all their difficulties, and lead them into the land of promise.

If our contemporary were fair in comment, honest in criticism, and less inclined to fall back upon the childish practice of "calling names," we should have no objection to an occasional bout, but it recognizes no rules, makes use of any weapon, and does not even draw the line at poisonous gas. Penetrate its defence, and it adopts the attitude of a persecuted martyr.

Recently we were informed that we were the paid puppets of the merchants. Yesterday we were dubbed hypocrites, cowards and what not; we were "pleading the merchants' case," and were "stopping at half measures"; we were told to "cut out camouflage and to stop licking the hand which held the knife that stabbed a sincere and genuine attempt," etc., etc. We are truly sorry for our contemporary. Such an expression as "cutting out the camouflage" is not exactly lucid, nor is it quite clear what is meant by "licking the hands that held the knife that stabbed an attempt." Is it a quotation from "the House that Jack Built," or is it that the metaphors became mixed in a fit of childish temper?

In order that our contemporary should no longer lie under any misapprehension, it may be as well to make our position clear. We are not controlled in our opinions by any person or corporation. Can our contemporary make a similar frank statement? Our comments are our own, prompted by no outside influence, and expressed without prejudice against any faction. Can our contemporary say likewise? Our criticisms have been candid, and they have been uttered without malice. If they have been lacking in the high flown phrases so often found in the Advocate, it is because we preferred fact to verbosity, and because our vocabulary in certain directions is extremely limited.

Under a plethora of words the main charge appears to be that we have exonerated the merchant and laid the blame on the fisherman for all the injury that has been done to the fishing industry. That is so far removed from the truth as to be a wilful perversion of facts. In so far as the exporters—including the President of the Union—are at fault, we have not hesitated to blame them. In so far as the blame rests with the fishermen, we have not hesitated to express our views. We are sufficiently familiar with the people of Newfoundland to feel certain that they prefer honesty to camouflage, that they will realize that what we have said has been prompted by one motive only, to let them know the truth.

The editorial in the Advocate concludes: "Accusations against the fishermen in the matter are nothing short of hypocrisy and cowardice on the part of merchants and newspapers." This would make an excellent Grand Finale in a political oration and would probably bring down the house at a gathering of fervid devotees, but this is not the time for electioneering catch cries, nor is anyone likely to be misled by such expressions.

The quotations from our editorials which appear below and which the Advocate appears to have overlooked, exonerate us of any charge of hypocrisy, and as for cowardice, we should advise our contemporary to wait awhile, and not to arrive at a hasty conclusion.

On July 16th we said: "We have allowed personal interests in the marketing of fish to interfere with plans, which have been agreed to and which, had they been carried out, would have benefited the exporter as well as the fisherman as a whole. We have continued to send an inferior quality of fish to markets which have long ago discovered that they could obtain elsewhere a superior article at no greater cost. In these respects at least we are to blame for the present condition of our staple industry."

Is there anything in this comment for which we might expect remuneration from the exporter?

Again, on July 21st appeared the following with reference to the marketing of our fish: "It will not be long before exactly the same problem will have to be considered with regard to our harvest—the harvest of the sea. What are we going to do about it? Are we going to do anything, or shall we just trust to luck? We do not lack hard hearted business men who have made the fish business a life study, who know what difficulties it presents, and what precautions must be taken to reduce the uncertainty of the venture to a minimum. Is it not possible for them to sink their differences, to use their combined experiences, and to apply to the marketing of the fish the wealth of knowledge which they possess? With a knowledge of the conditions in the foreign markets, a conservative estimate of the total catch, insistence upon a rigid grading of the fish, and a loyal attempt to co-operate in the marketing, our merchants can do much to make our chief industry, if not as successful as in the past, at least something more than a dismal failure."

Does this indicate—to use the Advocate's unusual editorial expression—that we were "licking the merchants' hands"? We are unable to find anything but fair comment in our references to the merchant or fisherman in our remarks on Aug. 8th, which read: "There are men in the country who have made a life long study of our staple industry. It is of course impossible to expect all of them to agree on a policy in every particular, but if we could find a leader who, having given careful consideration to the various views held by those engaged in the fish business, merchant as well as fisherman, would introduce legislation enforcing under penalty the regulations which he felt would be the most effective, the energy expended at present in various directions would be directed towards one object, and success would follow."

There was a time when we thought that the President of the Fishermen's Union would achieve for the fishermen some lasting benefit. He had an opportunity such as few have been given, but he was weighed in the balance and was found wanting. Either the fleshpots of Egypt, or the attractions of office and emoluments; or the glitter of titles proved his undoing, or he was not strong enough to carry out the work that he undertook. Whatever may have been the cause, the result is the same, and like many another who has not succeeded in his purpose, he treats with suspicion and hostility all who appear within the range of his vision, and places the blame upon everyone but himself.

The Flour Milling Proposition.

In a recent issue we exposed a scheme to erect flour mills at Port Union at the expense of the country generally. As we stated yesterday, and as the Daily News clearly puts the case this morning, no one can take exception to operations of this kind undertaken as private enterprise, but to expect assistance in the form of subsidies, to filch the money from the public to keep the wheels turning, is altogether a different matter. We do not pay our excessive taxes merely for the sake of providing funds for wild cat schemes.

We are however informed that a company known as the Newfoundland Milling Co., Ltd., has been incorporated to establish such an industry, and that the Executive have been approached in the matter. It is capitalized at $1,000,000. The promoter is Mr. Roland Palmer, who has been engaged in the flour milling for many years. It is purely a private enterprise and the Government has not been asked for any subsidy or any special concessions beyond those invariably given to a new industry. They ask for twenty years exclusive rights in which to erect and operate the mills, and free importation of the raw material, equipment and machinery. This enterprise is said to be connected in no way with the scheme proposed formerly and that it is intended to be conducted as a regular private business. As such the promoters will undoubtedly receive public sympathy in their undertaking, and if it will be the means of providing the country with cheaper flour than we have at present, it will receive every encouragement.

Dear Sir,—I would like to congratulate the management of the Nickel Theatre upon giving its many patrons such a treat as last evening in song and picture, as it is seldom a St. John's audience ever has the opportunity of hearing such artists as Miss Loring and Miss Armstrong. Judging from the many curtain calls which both these artists received last evening it was quite evident that the large audience appreciated the management's choice.

Yesterday, the formal re-opening of the Presbyterian School took place, at which the Rev. Robert J. Power, M.A., President, Mr. Alex. Miss Hughes after a sad bereavement, and Miss Dushar, after a trip to Scotland, were each given a hearty welcome back. The Principal also had a few words to say, and urged the necessity of starting right down to work straight away, and of making the best use of the two winter terms, for getting in the hardest part of the work for the Examination next year. It is imperative that parents and guardians who have not yet sent their children back should do so at once. There are a few vacancies for this term, and the Principal will be glad to interview any parents between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m.

EVERY MOTOR CAR SHOULD CARRY A TIN.

Every owner of a car has had the annoying experience of a delayed start in cold weather due to his engine being "cold." Gasoline, Kerosene, and similar products become less volatile in cold weather and in consequence it is more difficult to get an explosive mixture into the engine cylinders. When Ethar, which is far more volatile than gasoline, is mixed with the latter in the proper proportions a readily explosive mixture is formed in the cylinder. We have now a supply of this Special Motor Ether and every car should carry a tin. It is put up in a screw cap, leak proof tin, easy to open and close. It keeps the Motor Ether till the last drop is used. Price 80c. and 45c. a tin.

Exporting Pulpwood.

Considerable pilfering in the northern bays of the pulp wood cut on Government account has been going on for some time and recently on complaint of those who had made purchases from the Government a number of arrests were made, convictions and fines followed. The Government having disposed of practically all of last winter cut did not suffer any great loss, the total as far as known being about 70 cords. The export of pulp wood is being rushed now that navigation will shortly be closing and three large steamers are at present in the northern bays loading. To date 16,720 cords of pulp wood cut last winter have been shipped.

Argument Comes to Blows.

PORTUGUESE SAILOR THREATENS THE CAPTAIN OF THE BARQ LUZO.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon a scene was created in the office of the Hon. Tasker Cook, when a Portuguese sailor named Antonio Martine of the barq Luzo, threatened to do bodily harm to the captain of the vessel. It appears that the crew grew impatient over their long stay in the city, and Martine, who was spokesman for the others, went to the office of Hon. Tasker Cook to lodge a complaint against the Master, who, with the cook and mate, were said to be selling part of the vessel's gear. While Martine and others were waiting for the arrival of Hon. Mr. Cook, the Captain came along and a heated argument arose. Martine and the captain soon came to blows, and had it not been for the promptitude of Mr. T. Redmond in the office, who separated them, a disastrous ending would probably have followed. The police were then called to the scene and arrested Martine, and upon being brought to the police station he was formally charged by the Captain with threatening to stab him and using threatening language. Upon being searched at the lock-up no weapon of any description was found on his person. The barq Luzo arrived from the banks about six weeks ago with damages to her rudder and hull. Since then the repairs were effected by a local shipwright, but as payment for the job has been forthcoming. Consequently the vessel is held in port. The men have no money and have grown very impatient over their enforced stay. It is understood the owners in Portugal will settle the claims made in a few days, when the vessel will be allowed to proceed and no more trouble ensue. Martine, who was placed under arrest, came before the Magistrate this morning.

Thomas Meighan Scores in CIVILIAN CLOTHES.

This talented star who made such a big hit in "Manlaughter," scored another success in "Civilian Clothes," at the popular Star last evening; everyone being well pleased with the production, whilst the inimitable Harold Lloyd again created the laughs with the large audience. Mr. Tesori, the man with the soft silvery voice added new laurels to his well established reputation, being obliged at both performances to respond to encores. Everyone is eagerly looking forward to Miss Fawcette the high kicker, who is due here by the Rosalind Thursday next. Miss Fawcette comes to the Star Movie after a careful selection of many applications and when it is mentioned that this lady has been selected by Miss Olivetti, before whom she appeared in private, and in writing to the Management of the Star, Miss Olivetti said in part: "I have selected Miss Fawcette after seeing her perform in private for my consideration, and unhesitatingly say she is a wonderful dancer," then we can see some what mudge for ourselves the class of a dancer this lady is, and no doubt "all hands on deck" will be the slogan for her first appearance.

Magistrate's Court.

Three ordinary drunks were discharged. Anthony Martini, a Portuguese sailor from on board the barq. Luzo, was charged with using threatening language towards the captain of the vessel. The accused, who was arrested yesterday under warrant at the instance of the captain, denied all knowledge of threatening his master. A Spaniard of the same crew acted as interpreter. The captain told the court how he had been attacked in Hon. T. Cook's office by the accused. He used abusive language towards him besides attempting to stab him with a knife. He did not wish to press the charge against his assailant, but preferred that the man be placed under lock and key until the vessel was ready to sail. This the court was not satisfied to do unless expenses were paid. An arrangement was then entered into to acquit the prisoner, and should he cause further trouble he will be arrested and sent to jail. A cooper of the higher levels was given in charge by a resident of Pleasant Street for being drunk and using threatening language towards him while on his premises. The accused was bound over to keep the peace in the sum of $50.00.

TO-DAY'S CABLES.

HALIFAX, Sept. 24.—In reply to the message sent Saturday by the American Race Committee to the Halifax members of the International Amateur Race Committee, the latter stated that additions to the rules did not apply to vessels previously constructed and did not technically alter every possible United States contest as they are rigid at present. They also agree to meet the American members in Conference this week at Farnmouth, St. John or any neutral point that could be agreed upon. This affects the report sent out from Gloucester to-day declaring that the Canadian Committee had refused to agree to a Conference as requested by the American members.

LAST NIGHT'S GAME.

The Guards, after a long and bitter fight, administered the quietus to the Redskins last night in the Tia Cup series. The college men were short Eric Chafe, Goldstein, and Ewing, but their places were admirably filled by Horsley, Anderson and Lloyd—a strong side was blowing from the eastward, which the Redskins took every advantage of in the first half. Lloyd's kick cut a hot one into the Red's hands, which they caught on the rebound and scored the one and only goal for them. In this period they were given the opportunity of quite a number of corners which they failed to avail of. In the second period Charlie Quick had great revenge for all the obsequy he had been receiving of late, when after ten minutes of play he broke away to the westward. Inside the penalty area he was pocketed by the Red's defence and laid low. A penalty was claimed, and to this Delahanty agreed. Quick was given the honors, and the result was that he tied the score. This had the result of living to the same greatly, but, with the strong wind in their favor, the Guards had the best of the evening. On a pass from Dick Quick, Macklin broke through the defence, and releasing the spheroid to Charlie resulted in the winning goal for the Guards. Tonight the big game of the second round—Cadets vs. B.S.—will be played. Fans and players will both please note that the game is called for 8 p.m. and not 8.15 as heretofore. The Junior League is the best of the best. On a pass from the batsmen, the batsmen are finished so as to obtain possession of St. George's Field.

Mr. Orr, who is king of the "baseball" world here, is known to the Gotham sports' fraternity. For twenty years, or since the very first was held, John B. Orr has been a regular visitor throughout all world's championship baseball series. Needless to say, because of the prowess of our Giants and Yankees, John B. is becoming a confirmed New Yorker. He is thinking of taking a town house for the winter, and his guests will be the batsmen. Incidentally the party was led by Chas. R. McGrath, Registrar of Shipping.

PAPYRUS BEATEN.

DONCASTER (AP.)—Papyrus, the Derby winner, was beaten by five lengths by Lord Derby's fleet filly Tranquil in the "St. Leger" Stakes here to-day before a crowd of more than 150,000.
Based on this blow to his prestige, Papyrus came away from the race suffering from indigestion about the legs, suffering when he was crowded about a half mile from the start, but neither his reputation nor his flesh is wounded badly enough to prevent him from going to the United States, as scheduled. The final agreement providing for his shipment across the Atlantic was signed this morning by Ben Tish.

THE KING OF THE "SWAT."

CHICAGO—George Horan (Babe) Ruth, of the New York Americans, peasant winners of the American League for 1923, to-day was declared to be the most valuable player to his team and was awarded the American League trophy for the season, having received the highest number of hits, and setting a record that can be tied, but never be beaten.

Ruth was the unanimous choice of the committee appointed to select the American League player who had been of greatest service to his team during the championship season, registering first place on every ballot, one from each of the eight cities in the circuit, for a total of 84 counts.
Eddie Collins, of the Chicago White Sox, stood second to Ruth in this year's contest with 87 points. He was named as the best player on the Chicago team by the eight of the committeemen.

Ruth's name will be inscribed on the 1923 tablet of the $100,000 monument to be erected in East Potomac Park, Washington, and presented to the United States Government by the American League, as a memorial to baseball and a hall of fame for the greatest players.

The award was made by a committee of eight baseball writers.

THE MOVIES TELL THE REAL STORY OF THE FIGHT.

NEW YORK.—The greatest battle in the history of pugilism was retold to-night.
That great first round of the bout at the Polo Grounds recently was shown to newspapermen in slow motion pictures, giving them a chance to observe every detail of the battle, which, in actuality, was so fast and furious that it was impossible to keep track of every move the fighters made.

The picture showed that Jack Dempsey knocked down Lads Ansel Firpo seven times in the first round. Once the Argentine was flat on his back for the count of nine; another time he was knocked to a sitting posture and the other five times he was either on his hands and knees or his hands alone touched the resined canvas.

On these five knockdowns Firpo didn't take a count. It was explained that he couldn't understand English and he was taking so chances on the referee reaching "10" before he was on his feet again.

Dempsey Like Tiger.

Dempsey fought like a tiger in that first round, taking every advantage of his South American opponent. Scarcely had Firpo's hands left the canvas when the champion rushed in and pounded him with those terrific left hooks that crashed again and again against Firpo's skull.
When Firpo was knocked flat on his back he lay Bear a corner. The champion stepped over his prostrate form, waiting. As Firpo started to rise after the sixth knockdown Dempsey circled around him like a great cat, keeping behind his adversary.
As Firpo turned and tried to face Dempsey as he rose, Dempsey still behind, then when he saw Firpo's hands had left the floor he sprang at

PASSIVE RESISTANCE ENDS.
BERLIN, Sept. 25.
Three hundred representative spokesmen from Ruhr and Rhineland discussed passive resistance with Chancellor Stresemann for five hours to-day then unanimously agreed that further opposition to the Franco-Belgian occupation was futile and that passive resistance as such must be abandoned. The conference was attended by representatives of all political bodies, labor organizations, industrialists, civic bodies, and Government and Municipal officials connected with German posts telegraphs and railway administrations in occupied zones. Chancellor Stresemann to-night announced that the Government had decided to abandon passive resistance immediately and unconditionally. The Chancellor announced the Govt. had ordered resumption of activities in all lines at once. The Chancellor urged employers to resume operations at their plants and mines immediately.

GORDON BENNETT BALLOON RACE AN INTERNATIONAL DISASTER.
BRUSSELS, Sept. 25.
The international balloon race for the Gordon Bennett cup developed into an international disaster. Already five men have lost their lives. One other received fatal injuries and no less than six balloons were destroyed or badly damaged. Lieutenants Olmstead and Shoptaw of United States army DG-4 are among those who perished. Some of the contestants have been heard from. They may have escaped the fury of the storm or have met the same fate as the British balloon Margaret, the latest to be reported, which fell into the sea off Denmark. Her crew were saved. The Spanish balloon Peler caught fire from a lightning bolt. Pilot Baros was killed and assistant Gomez Guillaumon badly injured. The Geneva Swiss was struck by lightning near Bruxelles and burned in mid air. Her pilot, Yon Gruninger and Wolfram were killed. The Ville de Bruxelles, Belgian was damaged at the start and withdrew and Saint Louis United States burst before the start.

STRESSEMAN'S PLAN TO CEASE PASSIVE RESISTANCE VIOLENTLY OPPOSED.
LONDON, Sept. 25.
The recoil of the People's Party of which Chancellor Stressemann is the leader against the government's decision to abandon passive resistance has been so violent that several members of the party already have announced their withdrawal from its councils, says a despatch to the Daily Mail from Berlin. The despatch adds that the chancellor will almost certainly resign and it is not believed possible at the moment to find a successor who would be willing to give effect to the government's decision to cease passive resistance.

What I Hear.

(John O' London's Weekly).
Papini, the Italian author of the "Life of Christ," reads and re-reads Dickens's "Pickwick Papers."

Sir Robert Blair, who has for years been the chief Education Officer of the London County Council, is shortly resigning from a position which he has filled with great distinction. His has been, perhaps, the greatest educational job in the world. He has been responsible for the education of London's legion of children and for the expenditure of vast sums of public money.

It is possible that Sir Robert Blair may be succeeded by Mr. Chater, who is now the chief Education Officer for Lancashire. Mr. Chater, who was a discoverer of Mr. Fisher when he was President of the Board of Education, is a man of remarkable parts. He began his war service as a private and finished as a brigadier-general. He is still under forty.

Miss Mary Johnston has written a new novel dealing with the early settlement of Virginia. The book will shortly appear in America.

Mr. Philip Guedalla is engaged on a new book dealing with the Duke of Wellington.

Mrs. Michael Sadler is a clever artist. She recently designed a very distinctive cover for her husband's novel, "Desolate Splendour." Her latest achievement is an original and beautiful cover design for Miss Storm Jameson's new novel, "The Pitiful Wife."

Mr. Stephen Graham's "Life of Wilfred Ewart" is to be published on December 31st—the anniversary of Ewart's death in Mexico.

Mr. Bohun Lynch, author, cartoonist, and boxer, has written a new novel which is shortly to be published by Messrs. Collins.

Sixty-seven copies of Kipling's books have been sold in Denmark. The "Jungle Book" is the Danes' favorite.

Mark Twain's house at Redding, Connecticut, has been burnt down. Mark Twain spent his last years in this house, and his daughter, Janet, died there. The estate was originally valued at twenty-seven thousand pounds.

Sir Home Gordon, who, among other things, has written a great deal about cricket, has now taken control of the publishing business of Messrs. Williams and Norgeton, in which he has been a partner for fourteen years.

The famous theatrical paper the Era has just been taken over by a company of which Sir Thomas Beecham is the chairman. It was originally started by Mr. Edward Ledger, who made a fortune out of it, and who is, perhaps, best remembered on account of a famous libel action brought against him by Sir W. S. Gilbert. The character of the paper has changed a good deal since Mr. Ledger sold it. It has recently been edited by Mr. H. G. Hibbert, who probably knows more about the theatrical and musical history of the past thirty years than any other London journalist with the exception of Mr. Chance Newton of the Referee.

The American Magazine has awarded first prize for the best list of "Seven Greatest Americans" to the following:—George Washington, Daniel Webster, Abraham Lincoln, Henry Ward Beecher, Robert E. Lee, R. W. Emerson, and Theodore Roosevelt.

THE WRONG TIME TO PLAN.

"I lay awake all night worrying over it and finally decided that the thing for me to do was to write Harry a letter and tell him how I felt about it. All I planned every word of that letter out before I went to sleep and I'm going to write it this morning."

So a friend of mine who is passing through one of the critical periods of matrimony said to me one day, "Poor foolish little woman to make plans at one of the times when she is least capable of making them!"

A Distorted World.

Did you ever look at a landscape through a piece of glass which distorts all values, magnifies some things, reduces others or makes objects appear where there are none and vacant spaces where there are objects. Of course you have. Everyone has. But I don't believe you ever looked through that glass and planned how you would walk in the distorted world it showed you.

Yet isn't that exactly what my friend is planning to do?

Isn't it exactly what all of us do when we try to think things out and make plans at times when our mental vision is distorted?

At times such as she describes when one has been lying awake all night and worrying about things. At times when we are so tired that our vitality is low and our reactions to life are not normal.

At times which comes in the life of every man, and especially of every woman, when physical conditions strongly affect the mental.

And Out the Other Side. We have all passed through such times and out the other side. We have all looked back and wondered how we could feel the way we did, and know that it wasn't the actual facts of existence we were fighting against so much as the ghosts that our abnormal condition conjured up.

And yet it seems very hard for us to learn to recognize the condition while we are in it, and put the credit of our misery where it belongs.

If You Still Have Any. But there is one thing we ought all to be able to do. And that is to promise ourselves never to make any important decision, never to take any vital step, never to try to work out any plan of action when we are in such a condition.

We can no more plan or think or act truly than we could walk truly if we looked at the world through that distorted glass.

Wait until morning when you can get into touch with sanity and the normal world again; wait until you are rested; wait until you are well. Then think your problems out.

If you still have any.

DOWN AND OUT.

WALTER MASON

I often talk with down-and-outers, when I behold them in the glare, and they are always ardent supporters of a party in opposition.

They're not to blame if they are busted and lacking beds and clothes and prunes; in false and fickle friends they trusted, and found themselves betrayed outsons. I'd give ten cents to meet a dead one, who'd say, "My life's a honeysuckle; I'm short of tears, or I would shed one for all my chances looked away. My friends were kind and tried to aid me, I've often had a goodly berth, and my employers often paid me more coin than I was truly worth. I wasn't born to be a winner, and so you see me down and out, and if you'll stake me for a dinner I'll fill my empty works with kraut." I'd think it fine to hand a penny to one who'd thus confess his shame; but woe is me, there isn't any who will admit he is to blame.

"This world is cold and fierce and heartless," the "outers" say, "and so we weep; for we are bodiless, breadless, tartless, and have no hay in which to sleep. Men's hearts are cold as in the granite of which New England hills are made, and so we'll drift around the planet until the sexton plies his spade." Men's hearts are warm and kind and tender, we give, and give, and give some more; tonight I gave a pink suspender to Richard Roe, who sought my door.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. QUEST.

I DID NOT WEEP.

I did not weep to see him dead Because upon his face I saw a smile of glory spread. A touch of Heavenly grace.

And though my form he could not see, I fancied that he knew That I was there, and spoke to me The way he used to do.

I fancied that I heard him say, Who battled long with pain: "A miracle occurred to-day. And I am well again!"

"I did not cough last night, and wake From fever's restless sleep To wait to see the morning break And hear the wagons creep."

"And I am well and I am strong, And glad am I to-day. The burden I have borne so long Has now been put away."

And, standing in that darkened place, The smile of long ago Which God has left upon his face Told me 'twas better so.

Stimulate Your Skin

The skin with its network of tiny pores and glands should never be allowed to become sluggish and inactive. Dirt, cold cream, rouge and powder will clog the pores, enlarge them and produce blackheads and blemishes unless the skin is cleansed thoroughly with soap and water at least once every day.

This simple method of beautifying was Cleopatra's secret. She knew that to have a fresh fine skin thorough cleansing was necessary. She used Palm and Olive oils, the same rare oils which are blended in Palmolive.

If you use a fine mild soap, there is no danger of irritation. Palmolive with its creamy lather, is lotion-like in its action. It freshens, revives and stimulates and leaves the skin delightfully fresh and rosy.

You can buy Palmolive Soap at all first class dealers.

Brilliant Singers Get Tremendous Ovation.

MARION ARMSTRONG AND LOUISE LORING OPEN ENGAGEMENT.

Marion Armstrong, the Scotch-Canadian Soprano and Louise Loring, Mezzo-soprano opened an engagement at the Nickel last night before a tremendous reception. The appearance of Miss Armstrong gave the audience an opportunity of hearing a perfectly beautiful singer. Her voice is a soprano of good quality and wonderful range, with a resonance and warmth, and in its upper register, rare beauty. Judging from the storms of spontaneous applause that burst forth, Miss Armstrong is going to be a magnetic attraction to this popular house of music and pictures.

Miss Louise Loring's voice is of a different type, being purely Mezzo-soprano of wide range and excellent quality and she sang her numbers with marked musical intelligence and sympathetic understanding. Power, dramatic effect and true interpretation of every varying mood in vocal composition make Miss Loring a great soloist that she is. Here is a voice that, like Miss Armstrong's, is a delight to hear. The public can truly be indebted to Mr. Kiely for presenting such a high-class singing attraction, and we hope that their stay will be lengthy.

The picture program was Wesley Barry in his wonderful photoplay, "School Days." To review the film here would occupy considerable space so we advise all who appreciate a real story of real people to be sure and see "School Days."

The Lighter Side.

GOING! GOING!

A worried looking man walked up to the auctioneer and whispered to him.

"I am informed," said the auctioneer to his audience, "that a pocket-book containing $200 in notes, has been missed. Owing to the nature of certain valuable papers it contains, the owner is prepared to give $50 to whoever produces it—and no questions asked."

A minute's silence. Then, from a small table in a corner: "Fifty-one."

A man had sent his friend—the minister of his church—a present of a bottle of whisky.

"Because it rises in der yeast and sets behind der vest," was the answer given by a brilliant young hewrow.

It was guest night in the mess, and the colonel, as was his wont, began to tell an exciting story of an encounter with a wounded tigris which sprang at him and bore him to the ground. At the critical moment an orderly entered to report that the colonel was wanted on the telephone.

He was absent for ten minutes, and on his return had forgotten which of his favourite stories he had been telling.

"What happened, colonel?" asked one of the guests. "You were telling us of your dangerous situation."

"Oh, I kissed her," said the colonel, airily. "She simply couldn't resist me, and we dined together that evening. Her husband never knew."

Produce and Provisions.

(Trade Review.)

Codfish.—Codfish is coming into St. John's every other day, but it is a hard question to properly determine market quotations. Fish is purchased on a tatal basis and fair prices are offered, they fluctuate between $5 and $8, and where a cull is called there is always the possibility of an advance. In the estimation of most of the trade, Labrador will not go much higher. Along the coast the highest offer to date is $4 per quintal. A good deal of fish is "slipping" in, as it were, undetected, though there are agents ahead. The prices they offer are pretty nearly what are quoted in St. John's to the average onshore man. A good deal of fish is being shipped from St. John's and other places. The Krton, the Cecil L. Beck, the N.E. Schmidt and a few other exports, round out somewhere in the line of 20,000 qts. The Red Cross liners took their quota also. These exports are via New York and they reach the continent of Europe when quickly transhipped from one carrier to another. The ships leaving this week were the Digby for Halifax, 322 casks, 4,508 qts. for Great Britain and other parts. Rosafid, in round figures, 10,000 qts. These figures only approximate the exports. Gradually, codfish can be quoted today at from $5 to $6 per qt., and not much of it is sought for at these prices.

Cod Liver Oil.—This market is not a very safe one to speak about these days. The possibilities for our oils seem to be good in some instances in others the trend is not promising. We are at the parting of the ways in this commodity and it will be interesting to note the fluctuations of the market as they occur. It is next to impossible to give quotations. During the week the exports were:—By the Digby 32 tons; by the Rosafid 33 tons; and some was shipped, but not very much by other conveyances.

Lobsters.—Like lobsters, this market seems to be "canned." There are no quotations and everything is quiet. But the chances for a revival of the trade seem to be bright. Enquiries are being received and the foreign trade is asking about our goods and are becoming curious about our quotations. With the uneven market we now see before us, we feel that we could not give quotations. One shipment left here this week when 30 cases went to Spain.

Flour.—During the week the market seemed to weaken more or less, and there was a slight decline. This was a noticeable feature all through the week. Prices dropped about 15 cents, but there will likely be a quick recovery when activity is more pronounced than it is at present when trade will look up. The normal supply of flour will arrive during the fall months and will come in gradual shipments to suit the requirements of the trade. The imports during the week were: by the S. S. Yankton, 100 bbls.; S. S. Sylvia 900 bbls.; S. S. Sachem 1,400 bbls.

Pork.—In looking over the market, though there is nothing particular to say, in a sense there are certain grades for which there must be a steady future market. Fat back and ham butt grades that have advanced recently. Normal shipments are coming along, and prices wholesale are: fat back, $25 and so on, spare ribs being now quoted at $22.50.

Beef.—There is more or less of similarity in this, and the position of pork pretty well covers the beef market. Later in the fall the prices will be kept high, but dealers say it will be realized on this article. This week the local market prices are: Bos flank, medium, $25.00; bos packet, $21.50; and thence along from $20.75 to $21.00, 800 barrels of beef and pork arrived here this week.

Sugar.—That sugar will run up most dealers say. It's price has advanced within the last couple of weeks. Sugars raw and refined seem to advance in the scale of ordinary commodities. During the week sugar has advanced in price.

Salmon.—Like lobsters, this market seems to have gone to pieces. It is incredible to believe that we cannot revive this trade. There are many ills affecting this market and we will keep in abeyance what otherwise might have been said. That there is a good market for Newfoundland lobster goes without saying. If we pack them properly they are a top notch article of commerce.

"How will you have your roast beef?" asked the waiter.

"Well done, good and faithful servant," murmured the clerical-looking diner, absent-mindedly.

What Insulin Is.

(By a Physician.)

The discovery of insulin is one of the most sensational advances of modern medicine, and it is hoped with its aid finally to overcome diabetes. In the popular mind there are all sorts of vague ideas as to what diabetes is, and it is common to hear people talk loosely about eating, drinking, or sugar diabetes as if there were several distinct forms.

There are, as a matter of fact, two entirely different diseases which go by the name of diabetes. One of these however, is comparatively harmless, and it is only the dread diabetes mellitus, or sugar diabetes, which has anything to do with excess of sugar in the blood.

Now, sugar is a necessity in every one's blood, as it forms the chief food of our muscles and tissues. When our muscles are active they consume large quantities of sugar, and in order that this important food should always be at hand for their use, stocks of it are stored in the liver and muscles themselves.

As is generally known, our diet consists of proteins, carbohydrates or starches, and fats which are changed by the digestive juices into the body foods. The carbohydrates—sugars, bread, rice, and so on—and some of the proteins are changed in this way into glucose or body sugar. This in turn is stored up in the liver and muscles and is dealt out as required.

It has been found that when the pancreas, or sweetbread—which is a gland lying just below the stomach—is diseased in human beings, the muscles are unable to use the sugar.

The excess of sugar is carried to the kidneys and excreted, and diabetes results.

The Fatal Deep Sleep.

Mild forms can often be controlled by limiting the intake of sugar-forming foods. In serious cases, however, the body not only wastes away but it also tries to make do on other substances, especially fat. This emergency use of fat results in poisonous products which eventually bring on that fatal deep sleep known as diabetic coma.

The pancreas has long been known to produce one of the digestive juices—called the pancreatic juice—which it pours by means of a duct into the digestive canal. For many years it has been suspected that certain parts of it, known as the islets, formed a much more important internal secretion without which we cannot use sugar.

A Secret Process.

Dr. Banting, of Toronto, has recently discovered a method of extracting this mysterious secretion from the pancreas of animals.

The exact method of preparing this extract to which the name insulin has been given is known only to the University of Toronto in Canada and to the Medical Research Committee in England.

Certain manufacturing chemists are allowed to make it after being bound to secrecy.

Its effect on patients suffering from serious diabetes is little short of marvellous, but it must be borne in mind that it only relieves the symptoms and does not cure the disease. It has also to be injected under the skin with special precautions twice a day, and, as far as we know at present, Screen Deaths for M. Costello Excite no Fear.

Matrice Costello has died so many times, in so many ways on the screen that he thought there were no new deaths for him to portray. But Director Allan Dwan prepared another variety of "passing out" for the veteran screen player in his new Paramount production, "The Glimpses of the Moon," which is at the Majestic Theatre to-day, and in which Beha Daniels and Nita Naldi are featured.

His View.

Merry Marjorie Spiers told me an amusing story the other day. It concerned an actress friend of hers who was travelling from Liverpool to London in order to begin a new metropolitan engagement.

Naturally her luggage was somewhat bulky, and the porter to whom she confided it at Lime Street Station was surly, and wouldn't pass so much.

"You can't have luggage like this," he declared, "not unless you was a theatrical."

"Well, I am a theatrical," explained the lady.

"Then why didn't you say so at first?" demanded the porter. "I can't go round asking passengers if they're theatrical. I don't want to insult 'em!"

The Driver Scored.

Superintendent Wensley, the chief detective for London, tells an amusing story concerning a would-be wag who, wanting to show his wit before some lady friends, hailed the driver of a prison van with the ironical query:

"Got any room inside?"

"There's room for one," replied the driver; "we kept it for you."

Not entirely disconcerted, the wag had another shot. "What's the fare?" he asked.

"Bread and water," replied the driver. "Same as you had last time."

Family Records.

To be the mother of twenty-one children is something of which to be proud; yet, at Tonbridge, in Kent, there are two women who can make this boast. One is Mrs. Lucas and the other Mrs. Goldsmith.

The latter has been married twenty-five years and is forty-two years of age. None of her children are twins and twenty of them are still alive. Curiously enough, her husband is one of a family of twenty.

That's Thrift.

Mr. Will Fyfe, the well-known Scottish comedian, tells the story of how two of his fellow-countrymen were discussing on the thriftiness of their respective wives.

"Said one, 'My wife g'es 'e the bawbee a bawbee apiece to gang to bed w'out supper tvery night!'"

Flower Test of Love.

LORE OF THE SCARLET POPPY.

The scarlet poppy is known by various names in the country-side. "Corn-rose" is one of these and "cheese-bowl" another, while here and there the old name of "headache" still prevails, as a reminder no-doubt of the potentialities of the species as a narcotic.

In ancient days the flower was dedicated to Ceres, goddess of agriculture. It figured conspicuously in certain harvest celebrations, and still has a place in the folklore of some countries.

The Swiss peasant maid, for example, uses the flower as a love token. A petal is placed in the palm of the left hand and struck sharply with the right. If it bursts with a loud snapping sound, the lover in the case is regarded as being worthy of serious consideration as a husband.

Dangy That Mean Affection.

A similar ritual is still practiced in Sussex and other southern countries. Girls there believe that if the poppy petal does not burst with a sharp report the suitor's love is wanting.

The common red poppy was once used very adroitly by the wife of the ill-fated Emperor Maximilian of Mexico. Napoleon III. had objected, thru his Ambassador, to her selection of red as the color of a new Mexican Order, observing that it was already known as the color of the ribbon of the Legion of Honor.

The Empress replied by sending Napoleon a red poppy, with a note that the Order of Nature took precedence of the Order of the Legion of Honor, and any other man-made Order, and that she had chosen her ribbon from the color of the poppy.

New Ambassador's Wit.

The new United States Ambassador in London, Mr. William Collier, has a reputation as a wit.

Once, when addressing a political meeting, he was heckled by a man who persisted in shouting, "My food is taxed, why?" "I had no idea," retorted Mr. Collier, at last, "that there was any tax on thistles."

Of the Salvation Army's Loss in Japan.

From recent advices received by Colonel Thomas Cloud, Territorial Commander for Newfoundland, it is learned that the Salvation Army's loss in Japan both in property and lives are greater than at first believed. The headquarters at Tokio, which was completely demolished was a splendid structure, and cost an immense sum of money. We have been privileged to see a photo of this building as well as several other Army buildings which have been destroyed and which it must have taken years of self-denying labor to acquire. It is feared that the various officers about whose safety there were some doubts, have practically all perished. We quote the following from an appeal made by Commander Eva Booth in the "American War Cry":

"The immeasured and seemingly unparalleled disaster that has befallen Japan by earthquake, tidal wave and fire, presents in itself an appeal that defies expression. These stricken cities, their smoldering ruins with their uncounted dead, present a mute though anguished call for help. But what of the myriad living, homeless, waterless and foodless, bereaved and bewildered as they must be? Such an appallingly stupendous disaster requires a world response, and after the utmost has been done the residue of unrelieved suffering must be enormous. Let us in Newfoundland display our proverbial sympathy and warmheartedness in responding generously to the appeal made on behalf of these stricken people.

For that empty 'tween-meals feeling, try a Banana Royal at the Blue Puttee. This is the dish which Americans refer to as "New England Boiled Dinner." It is both delicious and satisfying. Try it after the show to-night. —sept21,t Tenement Question.

Dear Sir.—I read with keenest interest your editorials on the Tenement Problem of this city and offer you congratulations on the way you handle the subject and wish to convey to you my sincere thanks. The working classes have very few champions in our community, rare indeed are those who busy themselves in our behalf. On my way down one of the streets of New Gower Street to-day, I noticed a range of houses, occupied by eight families, that are in a very deplorable condition, the roofs of which are almost entirely shingleless. What these poor people suffer in wet weather can better be imagined than described. All over the West End such rookeries can be seen, yet no one of influence thinks it worth his while to bother himself about it. At election times we had an odd reference made to it by some politician who is out to catch a vote, but when the poll is declared, silence prevails. Doctors, nurses, and clergymen visit these rookeries but we never see any active interest displayed by them in an earnest effort towards arranging for the bettering of the conditions of housing. Everyone leaves it to someone else to do so and in the end nothing is done. I think the Mayor and Councilors have a duty to perform in this respect. Trusting that we will see this question of housing taken up by some of our leading citizens for the sake of humanity and decency, I am, Sincerely yours, CITIZEN. St. John's, Sept. 24th 1923.

Good Entertainment at the Crescent.

"DOWN IN ORLEANS" A GREAT NOVELTY HIT.

"Down in New Orleans" the big Broadway hit from "Spice" of 1922 was the outstanding item of Pat Harrington's program at the Crescent Theatre last night. The number in snappy and goes with a swing that immediately captivates the listener. The song ends with a party on "La Paloma" accompanied by Jack Cronan at the Bells and Effects. The other songs were "Morning Will Come" and another peppy comic selection which was accorded a good reception. The piano accompaniments were capably handled by Al Pittman. The picture program which consisted of Myrtle Reed's famous story, "The Veiled Woman" adapted from "A Spinner in the Sun" and the Christie comedy "Mile-A-Minute Mary" were particularly interesting. On Friday night this theatre will hold another Amateur Contest which promises to excel last week's. Names of contestants may be left at the Crescent box-office any time during the week.

"Get it at the Barber's."

Every Big Liner Carries its own "Universal Provider" on a Small Scale.

There is one man on all the great liners plying the high seas whose name on shore would suggest the unimportant, but who, at sea, is so far as the passengers are concerned, one of the most indispensable of personalities. He is the ship's barber. It matters little what one requires, for the same answer and advice is given on all hands: "Get it at the barber's shop." This information proves to be sound, for this queer shop, selling everything one is likely to want, or to be induced to purchase on the voyage, is a genuine floating emporium.

If the barber had to rely upon shaving and hair-cutting on the voyage his living would be nearly indeed. But he supplements his income from this source by selling chocolates and other things, and in this way makes a fortune. To tell an amateur traveller, who has lost part of his luggage in the rush to get on board, that he can get a new suit of clothes at the barber's shop, seems to be adding insult to injury, but, nevertheless, it is true. Ladies, too, in a similar plight, take the obliging barber into their confidence, and he manages to supply almost every need.

I know one ship's barber who had a sign outside his tiny shop, "Stop Here For Everything." It was no idle boast. Stowed away in hidden corners he had small boxes of everything one was likely to want. True, he did not have abnormal quantities. He always stocked his shop for one voyage only, basing his supplies upon the number of passengers taking the trip. Ladies and heavy smokers were among his best patrons, and, of course, the children looked upon him as an inexhaustible source of all the different kinds of sweets they could think of. Occasionally, indeed, he might be forced to change the name of a certain sweetmeat to satisfy the kiddies, but that is business.

Deck sports cause a business rush. The barber has laid in a stock of useful prizes to suit all ages. Nothing slips his business eye. The inevitable ship's romance occurs. It gets to his well-earned confidence by one of his lady customers. His sympathetic, but business instinct suggests likely presents. The word goes round, and Mr. Barber clears out his stock of silver nicknacks. Birthdays! People will have some acknowledgment of their natal day, even at sea. The barber's shop can supply gifts for all ages.

Dancing is another source of great profit. The barber's shop can usually produce any "make-up" for the captain. Where he digs his "period" costumes from is always a source of humorous wonderment, but "Queen Anne" and "Walter Raleigh" dance together in mid-ocean by kind permission of the barber. The barber knows when the ship is near port and the journey is coming to an end. Then there is a queue waiting at the shop door in quest of some small souvenir of the voyage. Fresh boxes are brought from dark shelves, and, even when the ship glides alongside the quay, people are still "buying something" for the friends waiting to welcome them.

Men Who Refuse to Rise.

Considering that almost every civilized man is out to "better himself" it is odd to find how many there are who deliberately turn down the chances of a better job than the one they hold. A King's Counsel, for instance, ranks professionally above the mere junior barrister. But many a man prefers to remain a technical "junior" for all his professional life, rather than accept the honour of "silk" when offered him. As a "junior" or, perhaps, many years' standing, he has his connections, and a profitable livelihood brings him. As a "silk," he would possibly lose it all; and he might never make as much as in the Moonbeams That Kill.

By CHRISTOPHER BECK. A farmer one morning found several of his calves dead. Their bodies were much swollen, and he sent for the veterinary surgeon, feeling sure that they must have got hold of something poisonous. The latter, after carefully examining the bodies, gave an explanation simple in its way, yet none the less extremely curious. On the previous night the moon had been very bright. The cows and calves lay down for the night as usual, but deceived by the brilliant moonlight into thinking it was daytime, they got up and had a good feed of dew-soaked grass. Before settling down again the calves sucked their mothers, and the milk on top of a heavy feed of grass caused fermentation, swelling, and eventually death. The moon has much more influence upon the earth than might be supposed. Farmers have long believed that the moon had an effect upon the growth of seeds, and he sent for the veterinary surgeon, feeling sure that they must have got hold of something poisonous. The latter, after carefully examining the bodies, gave an explanation simple in its way, yet none the less extremely curious. On the previous night the moon had been very bright.
