The Mystery of Rutledge Hall
— ON —
"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER X.

"You will have some tea" she said abruptly, looking up at him with restless shining eyes, in which Stephen could read the agony of fear she strove to conceal, which made his heart ache for her.

"Thank you," he answered, and tried to add a few words; but he could not steady his voice sufficiently, and he took the tea from her in silence.

Her hand was the steeper of the two, then, and she drank some tea eagerly, thirstily, as if her throat were dry and parched; then putting down the cup, she moved over the fire, and said, in the same abrupt manner:

"You must have known I should come home, Stephen. I was anxious to hear all about this terrible business. Did you know of it when you saw me off yesterday morning?"

"I knew this much," he answered, gently, "that Squire Rutledge was dead, that his servants had found him in his library that morning."

"And papa was there?"

"Yes."

"And you let me go!" she said, passionately. "You should have known that I could have borne it better here than there; it is horrible; but—"

"Dr. Arnold wished you to go," Stephen interrupted, gravely. "We hoped to keep it from you for a time."

"How could it be kept from me?" she said bitterly. "All the country knows it now, of course; why should not I?"

Ah, why, Stephen thought sadly, as he stood opposite to her, feeling as if by this thing which Dr. Arnold had asked him to do were beyond his strength. How could he tell her—this woman whom he loved so dearly, for whom he would willingly have laid down his life—that the man she loved was a murderer?

"It is very horrible," Sidney went on trying to speak calmly. "But such things happen at times; and one never knows when— Poor Mrs. Rutledge—it is terrible for her! How does she bear it? Who did it? Is there any suspicion?"

She was talking with feverish eagerness, almost incoherence, and Stephen could see how she was trembling, and knew that it was better she should learn the worst at once. And yet how could he tell her?

"He was quite dead, the papers said," she went on, in the same nervous manner. "Is that so?"

"Yes. He had been dead some hours when Dr. Arnold reached the Hall."

"And—and the papers said that— that Mrs. Rutledge had disappeared. That, of course, is not true; they always put such statements in the papers to excite people's interest. It is not true, of course?"

"It is quite true," Stephen said, gravely; and Sidney, as she stood by the fire, put out her hand suddenly and caught at the mantel-shelf, as if she needed its support.

"Why did she go?" she asked, piteously. "She did— Oh, Stephen, tell me! I can bear anything but this horrible uncertainty. Why do you look at me like that? I am sorry, of course; but I have no special cause for sorrow, have I?"

He caught the little trembling hands in his as she held them out to him, and made her sit down. She was white and trembling, and Stephen knew that what he had to tell her would not be quite unexpected; she was in some measure prepared for it. Still the blow must fall heavily; he could not spare her, much as he longed to do so.

"Sidney, my poor darling, how can I tell you," he said, hoarsely, as she sat looking up at him with haggard, pleading eyes—"how can I tell you? Be brave, dear! There has been a terrible mistake somewhere; but when Frank comes back, all will be cleared up, I am sure."

"When Frank comes back!" she repeated, faintly. "Has Frank gone away also?"

"Yes," he answered, huskily.

"Why did he go?"

"We do not know. Oh, Sidney, can you not understand the horrible suspicion to which his absence just now exposes him?"

She stared at him for a moment with a horrified unseeing gaze; her white lips parted as if about to speak, but no words came.

"He is not here to clear himself," Stephen went on, brokenly; "and people are so apt to be suspicious, you know, dear, without any ground. They think he has run away to escape punishment."

"Ah!"

The word broke from her almost with a groan, the clasp of her fingers over his relaxed suddenly, and she slunk back in her chair, white, drooping, nerveless, but perfectly conscious still, though Stephen, startled by the sudden collapse of the slender figure, thought she was going to faint.

"People say all sorts of things," he went on, hurriedly, "true and untrue, under the influence of the intense excitement caused by such an event; and of course Frank's absence is unfortunate now."

"Yes, I see; they think he has run away," she said, with a strange hollow tone in the low faint voice. "Ah, why did he go now?—for he is innocent."

"He will come back as soon as he hears," Stephen remarked reassuringly.

"Yes, he will come back."

There was a little silence then, Sidney lay back motionless in her chair, the pallor of her face assuming an ashen-gray hue, her hands drooping by her side, her eyes wide open, but dim and miserable. It seemed to Stephen that the distress she felt had taken away all her strength, she looked so lifeless and feeble; and, when she spoke again, her voice was low and faint, like the voice of one enfeebled by a long illness.

"Even if he does not come back," she said, "they will not think him guilty long. Frank was so good and gentle, he would not hurt any one, notwithstanding that when he was angry he said foolish things. Stephen, do you believe him guilty?"

As the great miserable eyes were turned upon his face, Stephen felt the color rise slowly in it. How could he tell her the truth? How could he say that he believed Frank Greville guilty of such a heinous crime? And yet, as he stood there, his heart was full of bitterness and wrath, and he believed in Frank's guilt as firmly as he believed in his own existence.

"You believe him guilty," said Sidney, calmly; "but you are wrong. Even if all the world believed it, I should hold him innocent. He said wild things truly," she went on, slowly rising to her feet, "and—and she had great influence over him; but—he had promised me, and Frank would keep his word."

"She drove him mad!" Stephen declared, bitterly. "She encouraged and fooled him to the top of his bent. He was but a tool in her hands—Heaven forgive her!"

"Heaven forgive her indeed!" Sidney echoed, faintly, raising her hands to her brow for a moment and pushing back her hair from it. "And she is gone too, you say; and people think that—oh, great Heaven, how horrible!—they have gone together."

A wild peal of hysterical laughter broke from her as she uttered the words, laughter which was more terrible to listen to than any passion of tears or sobs could have been, and which made Stephen shudder as he heard it, while the fever and excitement in her eyes now, the burning flush upon her face, were even more alarming than the listless, mournful calmness of the minute before.

"Sidney, Sidney!" he said, tenderly, trying to take the little hands which moved so restlessly in her agitation. "Hush, dear child! Do not give away—it pains me to hear you."

"They think they have gone together," she repeated, "the murderer and the murdered man's wife! Is not that horrible? And they believe that Frank is capable of such villainess—that he killed the squire to get possession of the squire's wife! And again the peal of hysterical horrible laughter echoed through the room, and the little restless, burning fingers strove to disengage themselves from Stephen Daunt's tender, detaining hands.

Even in the suffering of after years Stephen never forgot the keen pain of that hour. If it had been possible for him then, by the sacrifice of his own life, to bring Frank Greville to her side, cleared of the crime imputed to him, he would have made that sacrifice. To see her, his darling, the dearest thing in all the world to him, the prey to such horror was almost more than he could bear, and the anguish on his face was great enough to recall the unhappy girl in some measure to herself.

"Forgive me," she said faintly, "forgive me. I will not distress you again. See—I am calm now! I wonder why you say do not come?"

"He is at the inquest, Sidney."

"There is an inquest, then," she said dreamily, "and the verdict will decide. Stephen, how can we hear? Will you go? You may safely leave me—see how calm I am!"

Calm, poor child, when she was trembling from head to foot in such a way that she could stand only with his support—calm, with those burning eyes and parched, dry lips?

"Dr. Arnold will send immediately," he said, gently. "He promised me, and he never breaks his word, you know; his messenger must soon be here, Sidney."

"Then I will wait. No, I cannot sit down; I must walk," she said, piteously, disengaging herself from his supporting arm. "I am not faint; but it is warm here."

Very Vexing Words

DOUBLE MEANINGS CAUSE MISCHIEF.

Words not infrequently take to themselves a personality and work well or worse according to their interpretation. A recent instance was afforded by the word "withdrawal," used in the negotiations between miners and mine-owners. It was an unfortunate word because it is so ambiguous.

Often a word has an offensive sound and causes trouble. A political leader nearly provoked civil strife by using the word "flap-doodle" in describing the policy of a certain section of his party. He wanted to indicate that there was too much trifling and a lack of the will to fight in a certain section. There was a great stir because the word sounded insulting and few knew its exact meaning.

Afraid to Fight.

The fact is that the word is a relic of the old cock-fighting days. A certain class of fighting cock, when put into the cock-pit, instead of facing its adversary forthwith and getting on with the battle, would strut about with flapping wings, crowing all the while, in the evident hope of frightening the other bird without coming to blows. Such flapping and "cock-a-doodling" was termed "flap-doodle."

The word "protocol" probably did much to bring about the fall of the last Government. Only about one person in a million understood its meaning, and when a word is obscure the meaning imagined is usually a hundred per cent. worse than the dictionary definition.

When the necessity for some form of unemployment insurance became vitally necessary after the war, someone referred to it as a "dole." There are two meanings in the dictionary for this unfortunate word. One is "a share distributed," which was what the thing really was; the other is "something given in charity," which is what the thing is not, or, at least, ought not to be. But the latter meaning has brought the whole thing into a good deal of disrepute and may eventually cause trouble.

Not Understood.

The present Earl of Oxford, in a speech in the House of Commons at the beginning of the war, created a class of non-combatants whom he called conscientious objectors. His intention was fair and just, but the phrase became an epithet of the greatest opprobrium, which included real and mock objectors in the same category, and caused much commotion.

Even such words as "Socialist," "Communist," and more especially "Bolshevik"—a word utterly strange and barbaric in its sound—loom up like bugbears to millions who have only the faintest idea of their real meanings. Similarly, the old word Fenian, followed later by Sinn Fein, came to stand for everything that was dreadful and revolutionary. Today anyone who is even suspected of being "Bolsky" is in danger of being mobbed as a dangerous person, however mild his real opinions and conduct may be.

Terms of Contempt.

On the other hand, a lightly-used word may prove a great inspiration. The word "contemptible," applied by the ex-Kaiser to our Expeditionary Force in the early months of the war, probably did as much as anything to cause the men to "stick it."

Similarly, many words used as terms of contempt and reproach have since become titles of honour. Both the Methodists and the Quakers were so called in contempt, as indeed were the Puritans and the Roundheads. It must not be forgotten either that the word "Christian" was a term of contempt, first used in Antioch by the enemies of the new religion.

UNDERSTANDING.

Some have to ask you if it hurts, and hurt you more by questioning. Some seem to wonder why you grieve, and there's no comfort they can bring. But some there are who see your tears and move, with gentle voice and hand To guide you safely through the dark, the pain of it they understand.

They never question if it hurts, the sting and shock of it they know, They seem like travellers who have been across the way where you must go; There is a strength that you can trust, an understanding deep and true, For in your darkest hour of need they know exactly what to do.

Those who have suffered take with them a sense of pain unto the end. They need not question if it hurts or ask "how shall we play the friend?" Knowing the need of spirits bruised and having braved such anguish through They come into your troubled life and hold the torch of faith for you.

IS "THE SILENT ACCUSER" NOW AT THE NICKEL THEATRE.

Thrills, sustained excitement, love interest, natural comedy and unusual human appeal mark "The Silent Accuser," the Metro-Goldwyn picture at the Nickel Theatre.

"The Silent Accuser" is a melodramatic novelty and also serves to introduce a new star to the screen. The newcomer is Peter the Great, an unusually intelligent police dog. If there is such a thing as personality in a dog, Peter the Great has it.

Peter the Great plays the title role of the story which was written by Jack Boyle and adapted to the screen by Frank O'Connor and Mr. Franklin, who have crammed their yarn with fast action.

In handling the story of how a dog, through his almost human instinct and with the aid of the heroine, brings justice on the real murderer when the hero is falsely accused of the crime, the director has introduced a situation that has never been used before.

"The Silent Accuser" is one of those rare pictures which has equal gripping power on grown-ups and children. Cameraman Charles Dreyer is responsible for the splendid photography. Cedric Gibbins designed the sets and Sophie Wachner created the costumes. Lloyd Nosler was film editor.

GEORGEOUS DISPLAY OF SCENERY AND COSTUMES.

Don't Forget 'Judgment of the Storm' Next Week

Big Feature at the Majestic Next Week

'JUDGMENT OF THE STORM' A SUPER SPECIAL.

"Judgment of the Storm," which will be shown at the Majestic Theatre next week, is a photodrama that will hold the interest of the spectator from the first title to the end.

To begin with the picture is excellently cast. All the players are real artists and well-known in all parts of the country. Lloyd Hughes is an ideal selection for the role of John Trevor and gives a fine portrayal of a strong character.

Lucille Rickson, sweet and winsome, plays her role in a delightfully unaffected manner. George Hackathorn gives his usual brilliant performance.

Myrtle Stedman, Philo McCullough, Claire McDowell and Bruce Gordon contribute effective roles.

There are a number of big scenes, including the most spectacular snow storm scenes seen on the screen since the filming of "Way Down East."

These snow scenes were actually filmed in the blizzards and snowstorms of the high Sierras.

The theme of the story is that of a man who sentences himself to fill the place of his sweetheart's brother, for whose death his mother is responsible.

This picture is the first Palmer Photoplay Corporation release to be distributed by the Film Booking Offices.

Mrs. Ethel Styles Middleton, a Pittsburgh housewife, wrote the story while the direction was in the capable hands of Del Andrews, responsible for "The Hottentot" and other big successes.

A fall frock of kasha is attractively painted in tones of sepia and gray.

Two Plays Next Week

The W. S. Harkins Players give "The Acquittal" its closing performance to-night and at the matinee to-morrow and to-morrow night. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will be presented the most talked of comedy of the century, "So This Is London," and the remainder of the week "Wild Oats Lane."

"So This Is London" is full of laughs. Two irreconcilable families, one American and the other English, are brought together by the younger generation with greater success than the Capulets and Montagues of Shakespeare's time. One of the most amusing incidents in the comedy, in fact one of the funniest things ever seen in a play, is borrowed from the movies, when in the first act a scene is staged representing the idea of the American of the English family, describing the Americans from his point of view.

"Wild Oats Lane" is one of the best laugh getters and is sure to please Anglo-American lovers and dissenters alike. "Wild Oats Lane" is a pronounced hit in New York. It is founded on Gerald Chapman's Red Brook story, "The Gambling Chaplain," which is familiar to many readers of fiction. The action has to do with New York's underworld, and Father Joe's association with the characters of the section makes a thrilling play. It is equally as strong in the sentiment as "The Confession" or "The Rosary," Father Joe being a most lovable character.

Seats now on sale at F. V. Chesman's, Water Street.

'Honor Among Men'

A STORY OF ROMANCE AND INTRIGUE AT THE MAJESTIC TO-DAY.

At the Majestic to-day, the Richard Harding Davis story "Honor Among Men" is the feature.

Prince Kalony, while attempting to induce the people of Messina to renounce their deposed king, is shot by the police. Patricia, an American heiress touring the world, nurses the prince. The King is not inclined to give up a life of secluded debauchery and he enlists a count's faithful wife and his mistress to betray the prince to the conspirators in office. When the king meets Patricia he forgets his mistress and seeks to wed her although she and the prince are in love. This enrages the discarded countess and she reveals the truth and the king's treachery when Ronald, one of the conspirators comes to inform the king that the republicans have been told the plans of the trick expedition for the return of the monarch. The king is forced to abdicate and the prince sets out with the aid of his American sweetheart to regain the throne for the little crown prince.

A Fox Comedy and News Reel completes a fine bill which will also be shown to-morrow afternoon and night. "Judgment of the Storm" next week.

Wedding Bells

McGUIRE-WHITE.

On Monday, Aug. 3, at St. Peter's R. C. Church, cupid staged a very pretty wedding when Miss Gertrude Emily McGuire, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McGuire, and Mr. Edward Vincent White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward White, of Stoneham, were united in hymeneal bonds.

Miss McGuire was attended by her sister, Miss Ellen, as maid of honor, while the groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Carl J. White. The bride, leaning on the arm of her father, Mr. James McGuire, passed down the aisle and at the altar was met by the groom, Rev. Fr. Silva officiated.

The bride made a charming picture in her wedding gown of white silk crepe de chine with the long bridal veil crowned with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses combined with sweet peas. The maid of honor was attired in pink silk crepe de chine with hat in harmony and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

After the ceremony a delightful reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. This home has been recently purchased by Mr. McGuire who made extensive and artistic alterations, making it now one of the show places of Provincetown.

Among those present to wish the happy wedded pair God speed, were Mr. Harry McGuire, James McGuire, Miss Kathleen McGuire and Mrs. Edward White and three sons.

The bride was a very popular member of the P. H. S. School, but owing to change of residence, completed her course elsewhere. Her classmates missed the smiling face of Gertrude.

The groom is a salesman for Warren Allen Carpet Co., Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward White departed by auto for a wedding tour including Montreal and Quebec. Upon their return they will make their home in Malden, Mass.

Note—The bride is the niece of Mrs. James Maher of this city and a granddaughter of Mr. John B. McGuire, 22 Henry Street.

Plenty of Action in New Valentino Paramount Film

"Monsieur Beaucaire" With Bebe Daniels, Wilson, Kenyon, Lovell Sherman. Coming To Star Movie.

Movie fans who yearn for action in pictures will get plenty of it when "Monsieur Beaucaire," the Sidney Olcott production for Paramount starring Rudolph Valentino, comes to the Star Movie next Monday.

The Booth Parkington story has been unchanged except for the insertion of a number of scenes in the opening of the picture in order to build up the French episodes in the story. In the original book there were no French scenes, all the action taking place in England with the incidents in France merely mentioned at different places in the story. While there is plenty of dramatic suspense in the French scenes in the picture there is little actual physical combat, except showing the supper table of King Louis XV. It is here the action takes place that ends up with the Duke de Chartres, played by Valentino, defying the King who has ordered the Duke to marry the Princess Bourbon-Comte. The scenes showing Rudy resisting the efforts of the King's guards to arrest him are as thrilling as any yet put upon the screen.

But it is in the English episode that Valentino has most of his fighting to do. Posing as Beaucaire, a barber, the Duke soon gets into trouble by trying to win Lady Mary away from Lord Winteret. After several unsuccessful attempts to have Beaucaire permanently removed from active competition for Lady Marys hand, Winteret finally hires six swordsmen to do these six men in a classic.

The action in this scene takes place on the terrace of a nobleman's home near Bath. Incidentally, Director Olcott had the biggest set ever built at Paramount's Long Island studio for this scene, the entire floor space on the main stage being taken up by the exterior of the house, gravelled paths, trees, grass and shrubbery.

Rudolph is busily courting Lady Mary, when he is rudely interrupted by the henchmen of Winteret, removing his coat Rudy gets into the fight and succeeds in picking the men off one by one. As he is finishing up the last man, who has stayed out of the fight for a particular purpose, steps into the fray and the tired Beaucaire is being badly beaten, when the fight is stopped by some friends of Beaucaire, who arrive in the nick of time.

Featured in support of Valentino in this picture which, by the way, marks his first screen appearance in two years, are Bebe Daniels, Lois Wilson, Doris Kenyon and Lovell Sherman. Quite a line-up, you'll admit. The supporting cast includes some really big names.

The mode is unwilling to relinquish the printed dress, which will be very popular this winter.

Brave Woman Honoured

BURNING GIRL RESCUED AT GREAT PERSONAL RISK.

For the first time within a period of at least 12 years a woman has been awarded the Edward Medal for saving life at great personal risk. This honour has been conferred by the King on Mrs. Lillian Peyton, who is employed by Messrs. Holdsworth Bros., flock manufacturers, of White Hartroad, Plumstead. While flock was being delivered from a rag grinding machine on June 17 last, the material suddenly burst into flames. The flock was being packed by a girl named Rose Wade, and her clothes caught fire. The flames spread all round the machine, and as Miss Wade turned to run out she stumbled and fell. Mrs. Peyton, who was working on the other side of the machine, rushed to the girl's assistance, and tried to drag her clear. A heavy sack of waste material which was suspended behind the machine, and which had itself caught fire, fell down on the girl, and forced Mrs. Peyton to release her hold. She again however, went to Rose Wade's assistance, and this time was able to drag her out of the flames. All the other women working in the neighbourhood were too horror-stricken to render help, and left the dangerous area as quickly as possible. After Mrs. Peyton had dragged Miss Wade away from the fire, a foreman came up and covered her with sacks, but the girl succumbed to her injuries.

Huge Cost of Subsidies

LESSON FROM BREAD — LOSS TO NATION OF £138,011,678.

The second report of the Royal Commission on Wheat Supplies, issued yesterday, reveals that the Bread Subsidy, which came into operation on September, 17, 1917, and ended on March 31, 1921, cost the nation £138,011,678 6s. 3d.

This amount represents the cost of the subsidy—amounting to £162,500,000, less miscellaneous profits of approximately £24,500,000—arising out of the commission's trading operations.

Purchases made by the Royal Commission on British account solely, and on British account through the Wheat Executive, on which the commission and the French and Italian Governments were represented, totalled £587,000,000. Trading operations were not confined to wheat and flour, but included maize, oats, barley, rye, rice and other cereals.

Purchases Cost £512,670,000. The purchases of cereals made on behalf of the Wheat Executive amounted to £512,670,000, excluding freight and insurance. The Wheat Executive also purchased some 8,000,000 tons of wheat, rice, oats, and other cereals on behalf of neutrals and the smaller Allies.

The report states that the only outstanding accounts included sundry creditors £718,911, and sundry debtors estimated to realise £40,000. The Wheat Executive also purchased some 8,000,000 tons of wheat, rice, oats, and other cereals on behalf of neutrals and the smaller Allies.

The report states that the only outstanding accounts include sundry creditors £718,911, and sundry debtors estimated to realise £40,000. The final estimated cost of the salaries and expenses of the commission and of its landed grain committees since its inception in 1916, including services rendered by other departments, is £1,718,000.

Another View of C. H. E. Syllabus
 The Evening Telegram
 Dear Sir—"Teacher," in your issue of the 11th, wishes to know what I think of the new C. H. E. Syllabus.
 For my part I do not see anything wrong with it, nor can I quite agree with the statement that History, Geography and Mathematics are the most difficult subjects. Geography can be made very interesting.
 (He) further says what is the use of a pass without a diploma? Now that is the good of a diploma without a pass? A scrape pass may give a diploma but it takes solid knowledge to gain distinction and honors.
 My sympathy is certainly with the teachers but am inclined not to fault with the C. H. E. but with the conditions such as 30, 40 or even 50 pupils in sole charge. Schools of 100 pupils, with Primary, Preparatory and sometimes Intermediate classes, all in charge of one solitary teacher!
 It is not to kick against the C. H. E. for incompetently raising the educational standard, but to appear to be fair; because if a candidate for the C. H. E. examination is unable to score 30 or 40% in a subject then he knows very little about that subject.
 Yours in sincerity,
 T. M. SMITH.

THE ROYAL STORES, Limited

Mysterious Case of Bertha Mirazek

Brussels, Belgium, has recently been thrown into much excitement over a strange and mysterious affair, culminating in the arrest, in the sleepy suburb of Forest, of a woman of singular character and antecedents. She was in the habit of describing herself as a pilgrim and apostle of Christ and a performer of miraculous cures. She invariably appeared in the streets dressed as a boy scout, also shod in riding boots and golden spurs. She—or he—was known by her friends as George Maresco, but her real name is Bertha Mirazek and the story of her life, as far as it is known at present, makes strange reading.

Born in Brussels thirty-four years ago of a Czech father and a Belgian mother, she began at an early age to dance in a circus, became a great horsewoman and finally a tamer of tigers. She was further known as a lyrical artist, a painter. In the war she acted as nurse in a Belgian prisoners' hospital under the German military authority, but she apparently succeeded in satisfying the Belgian authorities as to the purity of her intentions, for after the war she became attached to the Belgian military headquarters and was sent to Germany as a secret agent to report on military formations in that country.

While on that mission in Germany she fell ill. And this is where the strangest part of her story begins. She was struck down by beriberi. Doctors declared her case hopeless. For a year she lay in the hospital. Then, being devout, she expressed a desire to try a pilgrimage to Lourdes.

To being too expensive, she chose the next best course, had herself carried on a stretcher to the church in Hal, a small town near Brussels, accompanied by the priest of Forest. In that church, in front of the image of the Holy Virgin, she began to raise heartrending cries, then got up and calmly walked up the steps of the altar. She was completely cured. The miracle was performed.

Her fame spread like wildfire among her friends and neighbors, until the ecclesiastical authorities felt the matter had gone too far, and excommunicated her. Nothing daunted, she proceeded to found a new religion, proclaimed herself the priest and apostle of Christ, set up a church in her own suburban house where she administered service in suitable garb, and promised miraculous cures to the sick in body or soul.

The number of her faithful grew, and included men and women of all churches. To some she exhibited scars on her own body, for others she contented herself with putting on a mantle she pretended to have received from Miss Edith Cavell. Gifts poured in, and the "saint" progressed exceedingly—until the family of one of her faithful, a young woman who it is alleged, had spent a fortune on the apostle, her chapel and her holy works, informed the police.

In Prison Awaiting Trial.

The singular woman is now in prison awaiting trial. Meanwhile people stand amazed before this example of human credulity, and are wondering whether they have to deal with a very remarkable case of insanity, or with a demon though uncommonly clever, adventuress.

The charge on which Bertha Mirazek, alias George Maresco, has been arrested is of having fraudulently extorted sums of money from her victims by means of hypnotic suggestion. She represented herself as having been sent by St. Michael and by Christ with the mission of healing the sick who believed in her, generally by transferring their disease to her own body.

The ascendancy she managed to gain over her alleged victims is amazing. This self-styled apostle of Christ was surrounded by many faithful, mostly women of good family, who worshipped her as their Lord and Master. They swore to having seen with their own eyes astounding miracles and extraordinary cures performed by their "saint."

Her usual method was as follows: A sick person, attracted by her growing reputation, would call on her, asking for help. After being skillfully questioned about his or her family connections and financial circumstances, the patient would be asked to make oaths of faith before the altar of the private chapel, crowded with statues of Joan of Arc, St. Michael, the Virgin Mary and so on, candles, flowers, and a hundred implements of religious ceremonial. The subdued light, the sacerdotal garb and an odor of incense and ether would do the rest to impress the would-be adept.

Vision and Revelation.

Suddenly Bertha Mirazek would fall in a cataleptic fit, to the utter dismay of the unfortunate patient who had come to be cured. That presently the apostle would come to, and, having revived the cases of her nurses, for she had a nurse, who had blind faith in her always ready at hand, would declare, illuminated with joy and happiness, she had had "a vision" and related "a revelation." The revelation naturally concerned the treatment which the patient would have to follow.

On other occasions the apostle would assemble her patients, and, having exercised upon them her hypnotic powers, would fall into ecstasy and France, from which she would emerge with her hands and chest inflamed. This was her proof of the translation of the diseases of her patients.

Girl Visitors in Holy Places HELD AS HAREM SLAVES.

Seizure and enslavement of young girl visitors to the Mohammedan holy places of the Arabian peninsula has become so flagrantly practised that the League of Nations has investigated and plans to abolish the evil.

Lord Cecil of Chelwood, recently introduced before the sixth commission of the League Assembly a project looking toward an international protocol for the suppression of all forms of slavery. The commission has decided to summon to Geneva President Gohl, of the League's Slavery Advisory Commission, whose report following a twelve months' investigation of slavery throughout the world is to be the subject of discussion during the present session of the Assembly.

The seizure of girls in Arabia is principally to supply the harems of wealthy Moslems. It is one of the gravest matters before the Assembly. The area of the Arabian peninsula is the world's greatest slave market today, and therefore the scene of some of the most evil abuses of human beings. There are two general classes of human merchandise in the peninsula.

1. Negro slaves from Africa, who either are captured in slave raids or bought in the open slave market and smuggled across the Red Sea to be sold to wealthy Moslems as laborers.

2. Girls who come into Arabia in legitimate capacities and who are seized and sold into harems.

From the Moslems' standpoint there is nothing particularly reprehensible in so replenishing the harem as the Koran recognizes slavery as a proper institution. According to the League's reports these young girls come almost exclusively from the Eastern Mohammedan countries. They arrive in Hedjaz or other surrounding states either as independent pilgrims, as pilgrims accompanying their parents or as servants accompanying their masters.

In addition it is asserted that there is also a large number smuggled to be sold later into harem slavery. This aspect of the slavery question in the Arabian peninsula will be taken up by the League not only from the standpoint of human slavery but also from the standpoint of the white slavery traffic.

Information has been submitted to the League showing that even in many cases where girls and young women have visited the holy places of the Arabian peninsula bearing papers showing that they were free born, they have been seized, these papers destroyed, and the victims sold into slavery for life.

As preventive measures the League probably will ask that restrictive measures be taken to prevent girls and women from taking part in these pilgrimages, either as independent pilgrims or as servants, in every case all such possible victims going into the Hedjaz or other Arabian peninsula states be equipped with passports and certificates of freedom and that they be registered at the port of embarkation so that if they fail to return they can be traced.

Owing to the fact that when many slaves there are freed through the intervention of their Consuls or home Governments, they refuse to take advantage of it, unless they are repatriated. The League's Advisory Commission has recommended the creation of some Red Sea port of clearing house for slaves where they can all be sent while steps are being taken for their repatriation.

The report states that the League's Commission has not been able to ascertain definitely whether the present Government at Mecca or the provisional one at Jeddah have abolished the custom of receiving dues on all slaves sold or not, but that in any event negroes from Africa are still imported and sold there.

The commission recommends as one step towards breaking up the traffic across the Red Sea, the formal declaration that the transportation of slaves by sea constitutes an act of piracy so that all boats engaged in the trade can either be captured or sunk.

The League's Advisory Slavery Commission has also recommended the creation for the Arabian peninsula of a slavery information bureau where all information regarding slave cases can be centralized as a basis of an active campaign toward wiping out the scourge there.

When U.S. States Repudiate Debt

In view of the fact that the United States has been so keen to obtain payment of war debts from the alien nations it is but natural perhaps that several influential American newspapers have been calling attention to the fact that in the past numerous States of the American Union repudiated their debts, and in consequence, many British citizens who invested millions of their money in these bonds have never, either as regards principal or interest, been paid.

The point against Uncle Sam on this matter is that the Federal Government is so amended (the eleventh amendment) that it was made impossible to institute any court action against these States that had repudiated the debt.

The matter is one involving a great many millions of dollars, and back over many years. So that if a simple interest was added to the principal sum which has been repudiated the amount resulting would be as large as the debt owing to the United States by the Belgians, at which the latter has now obligated itself to pay.

The first instance of repudiation was that of Mississippi back in the year 1842, when that State failed to make provision for the payment of five million dollars in bonds issued to raise the capital of the State Bank of Mississippi. Florida, on becoming a State in 1845, repudiated an indebtedness of $3,900,000, excusing itself on the grounds that the issue of bonds by the territory was illegal. In 1860 Florida, then a State it will be repudiated an issue of $4,000,000. State bonds issued in exchange for railroad securities. About the same period Michigan and Louisiana repudiated a portion of their State debt.

After the Civil War there was a perfect orgy of repudiation by the Southern States. For instance, in South Carolina the Legislature of 1868 authorized a bond issue of $25,000,000. Repudiation began in 1870 and within years later through divers reasons, deals, backed by the Legislature of that State, this debt was scaled down to about half of the original sum.

Georgia and Arkansas amended their state constitutions in the seventies and eighties, skinning their bondholders. In the case of the latter the tune of more than $12,000,000. Other States, finding repudiation an easy way of liquidating obligations, included Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, and Alabama.

The spirit of the defaulter in this matter may be gauged by the fact that a proposal to levy a tax to pay off the State debt of Mississippi was submitted to a poll of the people and defeated by an overwhelming majority. As most of it was owing to "foreigners" why should they worry?

Under the circumstances enumerated above it is not surprising that a great many United States citizens should be a little ashamed of a government which on the one hand insists that all money owing it by war-stricken countries be paid, while on the other no action is taken to make good the other side of the States' own Commonwealth, particularly in view of the fact that such repudiation was aided and abetted by a Constitutional amendment—Saturday Night.

PICK THE RIPPER IN THE CITY.

Montreal has a "Jack the Ripper." It is a case of 20, 13 and 15 years old, and a man who came behind and drove the point of a pen-knife into their backs and made his mark.

BLAME PARENTS FOR CHILDREN'S FAILURES.

A few days ago 150 juvenile delinquents, who were on probation during the holidays, had to report at the Juvenile Court. Out of the 150, one hundred and forty-nine were boys, which left only one of the "gentler sex." Certainly, the holiday season is a great source of danger and temptation to hundreds of boys, especially where poor home training reigns supreme.

sixty-five. British Columbia, Manitoba and Saskatchewan will divide on a fifty-fifty basis, while the Maritime Provinces will be overwhelmingly Conservative. Hence they see a glorious victory in the air. The fight is being waged vigorously by both sides, and Premier King will not go to defeat without having used all the powers of his oratory to try and convince the electors that his Government had a good policy and did the best they could for the betterment of the Dominion.

THE MONEY SPENT ON THE NEW CITY HALL.

Disbursements for the new city hall have been given out showing in detail the expenditures that have been made to date from the $1,500,000 which the city was empowered by the Province to borrow for rebuilding after fire on March 3, 1925. To date there has been actually used $1,429,490 and the difference between the estimates which amount to $1,766,375 and the amount the city was entitled to borrow has been made up from the annual budget receipts.

The expenditure has been voted and made up as follows: Credits of $131,000 voted by council at different dates between Sept. 30, 1922 and April 23, 1925, of which amount $126,201 has actually been spent in this way: plans, day labor, etc., $119,549; workmen's insurance, $2,412; inspection, $539; heating and ventilation, plans, $1,700; architects' fees, $2,000.

Contracts awarded and the sums expended are: Dominion Bridge for steel superstructure, $149,450, voted, $144,135 spent; A. and D. Bolles, stone walls, $183,200 appropriated, $172,995 used; concrete floors, J. A. Durocher, $230,600 voted, $219,225 expended; Jas. Ballaghyne, plumbing and heating, $80,787, appropriated and $76,605 spent; Quindan Robertson and Janin for completion of interior of building, including twenty-five or more sub-contracts, $902,100 appropriated, expended to date, $683,316; Framercian Industrial Development Corporation, electrical fixtures, $15,000; Wallace Sandstone Quarries, for marble counters in long room, $13,000 voted, $12,987 spent; Castle and Sons, for furnishing and fitting council chamber, $16,900; G. H. Randall, $6,374 for wooden counters; Robert Mitchell Company, $14,200 for tellers' cages.

"I would recommend that a child be turned loose among materials and companions that will furnish wholesome stimulus for him under wise guidance. For the child of two years of age is already a social being, and it is for the parent and teacher to give him means to express himself."
"Guidance must be such as to control indirectly," Miss Salisbury advised. "Avoid 'don't' for a child. Give him constructive things to do instead of negative propositions. This is the only way to get hold of a child before his habits are established."
The foundation of a club for boys in a section of the city where juvenile delinquency is prevalent, with a view to furthering the work among underprivileged boys, was mooted at the weekly luncheon of the Lions Club at the Mount Royal Hotel by E. O. McDowell, president of the Big Brothers' Association here. In presenting the report of the Ways and Means Committee Mr. McDowell urged that the Lions give the project their consideration to make for prompt action. The report was adopted and the matter will be discussed later.

Mr. McDowell pointed out that while Montreal has such a club originally, it has expanded, he said, into a wider field, and there was now need in Montreal of a club devoted entirely to the welfare of the boy, providing him with suitable headquarters for physical work. All that was required was the renting of a building in a proper location, and the engagement of a director. More definite plans would be offered later. Each member of the club would have to give service and co-operation that the club might achieve success.

ling tragedies had its denouement in the Recorder's Court recently when a young girl who gave her name as Blanche Dube entered the dock and was charged with being found in a disorderly house.

A VETERAN NEWFOUNDLANDER VISITS THE CITY.

A veteran Newfoundlander in the person of Mr. John H. Wadden of the west end of St. John's was a guest of his daughter, Miss Agnes Wadden for two weeks. Though our friend has reached his 80th year he looks hale and hearty and is a magnificent type of the "old stock," that were a credit to dear old Terra, and by their sterling qualities of hand and heart won honor and respect. Your correspondent had the pleasure of meeting this true, loyal and veteran gentleman, and in company with his brother, Mr. Nicholas C. Wadden, who has been residing in Montreal for some years, and at present at a place near the city called Strathmore, we witnessed a cricket match at the McGill Campus in which the Toronto team went to defeat at the hands of McGill by 115 to 138 for 5 wickets. Mr. J. H. Wadden was of the opinion that the good old Shamrock team in its hey-day of glory could trim even the strong McGill team. During his stay in Montreal, the visitor enjoyed every moment, and was visited and entertained by many friends, including Mr. James J. Ellis, another veteran of Point St. Charles, who left Newfoundland nearly 60 years ago; Very Rev. Dean O'Rourke, Mr. J. Ryan, Mrs. and Miss Andrews, formerly of Petty Harbour; Mrs. Coleman, Miss Rose Shallow, Mrs. Doyle, Miss Harrington, Mr. James Coady. Lady Roddick presented him with a photo of the late Dr. Thomas Roddick and the McGill Memorial gates, together with a book of

"She is only sixteen."
"Then how did this come about?" he was asked.
"She was taken to a disorderly house three or four days ago," he replied. "I will do anything for her."
"Did she give her right name?"
"No," replied the father as he told the name that the girl had tried to shield when she was arrested.
"The case is postponed," said Recorder Semple.

The father turned to leave the witness box and confronted his daughter standing before him in the dock. For a moment they hesitated. Then half a smile and half a look of agony passed over the girl's face. She made one movement forward toward her father and then halted. Her head sunk forward on her chest and she turned away and walked out of the dock.

THE DRUNKEN MOTORIST A MEN-ACE.

The drunken motorist appears from time to time in the streets here. The Kansas City Star says: The drunken motorist on the street is in the position of a man who recklessly flourishes a deadly weapon in a crowded room. Such a motorist is a potential killer. His personal safety is a slight matter; but the menace he imposes on pedestrians and other motorists is genuine. He has no more place in modern traffic than a maniac has with a group of children.

poems written by herself, in which a poem especially appears about Newfoundland. After his sojourn in the Metropolis of Canada, he left for Boston to see not only a few friends, but many. He was charmed and highly delighted with his visit here and carried away with him not only a few souvenirs and gifts, but pleasant reminiscences of his all too short visit. Of him may be well applied the words of the poet:

"Work for the good that is highest, Dream not of greatness afar; That glory is ever the highest, Which shines upon men as they are. Work through the world would defeat you. Heed not its slander and scorn; Not weary till angels shall greet you, With smiles through the gates of the morn."

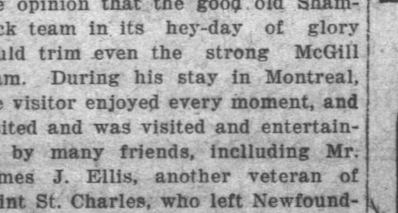

"Be at your best, do your best at home, Though troubles may threaten and sorrows come, Give the best of your daily life To the sweet hours spent in the dear home nest. Make home a haven of peace and rest From the hard world's weary strife."

During the war German aeroplanes tried to drop bombs on her but succeeded only in hitting small craft lying alongside. In the new position her light will still be seen from the South-end Pier extension, but not from the town.

Queer Finds by Souvenir Hunters

The controversy over the horns of Jenner cow, from which he obtained lymph for the first inoculation against small-pox, is typical of many remarkable and amusing mementoes, says an English writer.

The cow already has about six authentic horns, according to various claimants. In the same way, sacred relics of the Cross and various saints can be "authentically" produced in such quantities as to give dozens of the original article.

Recently Napoleon's last shirt, the last glass he drank from, and a piece of his coffin realized considerable prices from eager memento gatherers.

A few months ago, when the Earl of Ashburnham died, it was revealed that a chest in the keeping of the family contained the shirt in which Charles I. was executed.

It was recently recorded that when a party of United States sightseers were being shown over Abbotsford, a former home of Sir Walter Scott, a splinter was kicked up off the floor. The man who was showing the party round threw the splinter aside, but a tourist eagerly picked it up and divided it into portions, to be kept as mementoes.

One can almost understand a rich collector paying $1,750 for an autograph manuscript of Burns' song, "O wad ye wha's in yon town?" but when one reads of $100 being paid for the dog-collar worn by the famous dog Fullerton, which won the Waterloo Cup on four occasions, one begins to wonder where memento hunters will stop.

In fact, some of them do not know where to stop, for a short time ago a fine marble medallion was hacked out of the porch at Sir Francis Bacon's old home in Hertfordshire. Hairs of murderers and assassins are frequently sought by morbid-minded souvenir hunters, and a record, duly authenticated, of the death of Napoleon states that small parts of Napoleon's corpse were taken away during the autopsy.

Robinson Crusoe's gun was sold last year for $1,075—an old flint-lock musket dating back to about 1700.

Not long ago a Frenchman started historic circles by claiming to have bought the skull of Henry IV. But perhaps the most comical case of memento-hunting occurred quite recently. The Mayoress of Grimsby opened a local swimming bath by being the first to plunge in. She wore an attractive silk costume. This apparently proved so delightful that it was stolen soon after, when drying in her garden. The story was made public, and a little while after a man cycled past the Mayoress's house and threw a parcel into the garden. It contained the costume undamaged. Apparently the admirer had repented.

Clerk's Memoirs London Senation

SIR ALMERIC FITZROY SAYS KING FEARED APPOINTMENT OF BRYAN.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—(U.N.)—The memoirs of a clerk are the latest cause of sensation in London. The author, however, is no ordinary clerk. He is Sir Almeric Fitzroy, for 25 years clerk of the Privy Council, a highly confidential job.

Among the matters disclosed in Sir Almeric's memoirs, is that King George was once fearful that President Wilson would appoint the late William Jennings Bryan as United States Ambassador to London in 1912.

"The King was disturbed lest the new President send Mr. Bryan as Ambassador," Sir Almeric declared.

He also tells a story that indicates King George thinks rather ill of one of England's greatest heroes. A member of the Cabinet suggested to the King in 1912 that a new battleship be named Oliver Cromwell, to honor the man who caused Charles I. to lose his head on the block.

The King refused to accept the suggestion.

Sir Almeric recently resigned from his clerkship.

Another revelation in Sir Almeric Fitzroy's "Recollections" is that Lord Morley frankly told Winston Churchill, the present Chancellor of the Exchequer, that from the knowledge he, Lord Morley, had gained of Mr. Churchill on the committee of Imperial Defence the latter was an extravagant and wasteful Minister.

Expert Declares Helium Shortage Caused Disaster

LAKEHURST, N.J., Sept. 5.—Naval officers are mute on the subject of Captain Anton Heinen's charge that an effort to economize in the use of expensive helium gas caused the destruction of the Shenandoah and the death of 14 officers and members of the crew.

Lieut. Commander Pierce, commandant of the naval air station, refused to discuss Heinen's theory or to say who ordered the removal of 8 of the safety valves with which the dirigible was equipped when she was built. So far the only factor in any way confirming the Heinen theory is the report of Col. Charles Hall's description of the wreck. Hall was aboard as an army observer. Among other things, he said:

"When the ship broke in the center by failure to valve the gas its to permit its escape in proportion to wind pressure, the rear section floated slowly to earth."

Heinen's charges were made at Tom's River, N.J., Friday. "Changes in the Shenandoah were made about six weeks ago," said Heinen, who was a consulting engineer during the construction of the Shenandoah and who subsequently has left the naval service.

"I saw the plans. If it hadn't been for the foolishness in cutting down the safety valves the 14 men all would have been happy with us to-day."

Valve Shortage.

"From what Commander Klein told me, the ship was nearly filled with helium when she left here. As I figure it, at a height of 3,000 feet, which was pressure height, as we call it, the ship would have to valve off gas. In the storm which she struck, she rose too fast for the valves. Every 20 feet above 3,000 feet she should have discharged 1 per cent. or 21,000 cubic feet of helium. The upward movement of the ship causes rapid expansion of the gas cells, and the bags broke the shell of the ship.

"Had the ship been filled with hydrogen, the disaster might not have occurred. The hydrogen would have valved more freely and they wouldn't have been so cautious about saving it because it is not as scarce as helium or as expensive.

"I wouldn't have gone on a trip with the Shenandoah for a million dollars. It was not safe with valve changes.

"Why do you suppose we put 20 valves on the Los Angeles? We did that because we knew that even the 18 originally on the Shenandoah were not enough.

"Now there will be a whitewash board of inquiry and some camouflage to cover up the real story of the cause, which was the foolish action of the crew at the station in changing the valves. Already there has been several attempts to lay the blame on poor dead Lansdowne."

The potential ramifications of Heinen's charge are tremendous. He plainly lays the blame for the accident on an effort to economize, and makes no reservation to the inference that some one ordered economy of an expensive gas at the possible cost of life. The origin of the order which robbed the Shenandoah of eight of her valves is not known, as Commandant Pierce will not discuss it, but under ordinary circumstances, it is understood, such orders would come from the naval designing board and be subject to several examinations and to the approval or disapproval of various officers become effective.

Says Economy Responsible.

It doubtless was not mere coincidence that Heinen selected the particularly eloquent word "saving" and "expensive" with which to describe what was intended to be accomplished by the removal of valves. His inference is that government economy has resulted in a frightful disaster, but such a charge cannot be sustained until a thorough investigation has determined the source of the order and the influence, if any, that caused it to be made.

It is possible that the ten valves with which the Shenandoah last sailed were not among the 18 with which she originally was equipped. In that event it is possible that the size of the valves was increased in order to provide as great a factor of safety as would have been provided by 18 small valves. Pierce would not comment on the size of the valves with which the Shenandoah was equipped when she left for the Middle West.

A naval board of inquiry still to be convened by order of the Secretary of the Navy is to investigate the disaster. It is understood here, The investigation will be more comprehensive than that now under way in Ohio.

THOUSANDS OF INTENDING SUICIDES SAVED.

WONDERFUL ACHIEVEMENT OF SALVATION ARMY.

It was in 1908 that the late General Booth, the founder of the Salvation Army, was impressed by the obvious need of some social organization, entirely distinct from the machinery of the law, to undertake the difficult task of dissuading despondent people from committing suicide. The result was the institution of an anti-suicide bureau, which was opened by Commissioner University. Twelve months later this officer was joined by Brigadier Balnes Chapman, who has remained there until now. "Thousands of people labouring under acute mental distress call at the bureau in the course of a year," explained Brigadier Chapman to a "News of the World" representative the other day. "When we began this new branch of the Army's work we had to face the usual chaff which an innovation of this nature was sure to arouse, but we are not afraid of chaff; we thrive on it. It is my proof of the usefulness of this side of our activities I would point out that during the epidemic of suicide that was so marked during the dark war period of 1916 the Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police sought our co-operation. This was because of the heavy strain which was imposed on the police when they were so short-handed, and to over-worked to be able to spare the necessary men to keep a watchful eye at those places where suicides are most frequent. When I joined the bureau in 1909 the three main causes that seemed to drive people to self-destruction were drink, drugs, and disease. To-day I am inclined to think that drink is less responsible for attempted suicide than formerly, but there are more drug-takers, and the number of neurotic cases is appallingly on the increase. This is obviously due to causes arising from the war, for every social worker realizes that during the last decade not only have the asylums become crowded with certified lunatics, but everywhere in the country one finds scores of people on what is called the "border line," people who retain their liberty but who are liable to commit some rash act on the flimsiest pretext. Cases come before us of people in all walks of life who declare that they are "fed up." In some cases they have deliberately thrown up lucrative employment and then, in the reaction of despair, when they realize what they have done, their thoughts turn to suicide. Sometimes we have been able to make friendly representations on behalf of such people and persuaded their employers to take them back. A case I will remember was that of a ship's doctor who had fallen into bad company on arrival at the London Docks. When he was brought along to us he had not only been Robbed of All His Kit and Money, but he had been seriously assaulted, and appeared to be suffering from delirium tremens. In such ordinary ways we never tackle a mental case, as that is the duty of the Poor Law Authorities, but in this instance it was desirable that we should make an exception, as this was a man with excellent medical qualifications, who was bound to succeed if he would only give up drink and bad company. After he had been in our charge for a few weeks he became quite rational, and as it appeared that his bouts of intemperance were due to his association with seafaring men, we arranged for him to take an assistant's job with a doctor, whose surgery was right away from the sea. That man-to-day is a prosperous practitioner, who, when he first came under our notice, was certainly going to destroy himself. Labourers, mechanics, bank clerks, chemists, officers, lawyers, and even clergy have sought the advice of the Anti-Suicide Bureau. I will remember the case of a clerk who had been living beyond his income, and got into the clutches of no fewer than 18 firms of moneylenders, coming to us with his wife in a state of despair because duns were calling on him at his office. Well, we contrived to see his creditors, and persuaded them not to press him unduly, and by a rearrangement of his expenditure, we were able to get his debts paid in full over a period of time, and he is now holding a responsible and well-paid post in the City. Relatives of would-be suicides frequently give us the first intimation of impending tragedy, and our efforts have often prevented their worst fears being realized. Then we have to exercise tact and common sense in reconciling married couples who are drifting apart, or parents and children who have become estranged. Among those who seek advice from us are those who have committed crimes for which they afterwards felt the greatest remorse. After 16 years' constant work in this department, I find my nerves and general health not quite what they were," added Brigadier Chapman. "I am, therefore, going to another branch of the Army work which is less exciting. Still, I shall always look back on my association with the bureau as

EXCLUSION OF OUR SHIPS FROM CANTON--HONGKONG APPEALS FOR ULTIMATUM.

Intense feeling has been aroused at Hongkong, the headquarters of British trade in the Far East, by the action of the Canton revolutionary Government, in excluding British shipping from the port. A great mass "indignation meeting" passed a resolution urging that a cablegram should be sent to the Prime Minister asking the British Government to dispatch an ultimatum to the Canton authorities demanding that Canton should be restored as an Open Treaty Port for trade between the Chinese and the Foreign Treaty Powers in full accordance with the provisions of the treaties. That all Bolsheviks should be expelled from Canton and Kwantung. That the Whampoa College Cadets, who, it is declared, are "in reality Bolshevik trained troops," should be disbanded, and those who are not Cantonese sent back to their native places. That the boycott of British goods should cease. That anti-British propaganda should cease under the threat of a complete naval blockade by Great Britain of Canton and the neighboring waters, and such other action as His Majesty's Government may consider necessary.

It was also urged that the ultimatum should state that a Chinese Administration must be established at Canton which will observe fully all existing treaties between China and the Foreign Powers. It was the unanimous opinion of the meeting that British intervention is the only effective method of restoring communications and trade between Hongkong, Canton and South China, and preventing the economic destruction of Hongkong and British interests in South China. Meanwhile, as already explained, the British Government is indisposed to resort to drastic measures which might only result in multiplying our difficulties. It is disposed to await the result of the International Conference which will assemble in October, when the many-sided Chinese problem will be discussed. The Peking Government, we understand, is to appoint a special commission for the purpose of revising the treaties with other countries which they consider now out of date. Dr. Wang Chung-hui, the Chinese representative at the Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague, has been asked to act as chairman of this commission.

Muskrat Skins in Great Demand

Montreal, Sept. 9.—The feature of the opening of the Canadian Fur Auction Sales Company, Limited, autumn session here yesterday was the heavy demand for muskrat skins. 215,150 skins being auctioned off. Raccoon were disposed of at $3.50 each and opossum at $1.80 each.

Other sales included: 494 bear, 53 wolverine, 105 tanuki, 3,225 Persians and Shires, 3,995 lamb, 11,435 white cone and 1,000 Chinese civet cat. Dressed and dyed, 180 seal skins sold well.

Zoology of Sniffing

When the householder suspects an escape of gas, and is not very sure that it may not be the hidden presence of a dead rat that he detects, he "sniffs." In other words, he draws a current of air somewhat forcefully into his nasal chamber so that the sparse gaseous molecules diffused in the air may impinge on the "olfactory patches" on which there lie the nerve-cells that are sensitive to "smells." In dogs and some other animals the process of sniffing is familiar, and it is utilized not only to make sure of the presence or absence of a certain odour, but to determine the location of the odiferous body. By movements of its head, associated with tentative sniffings, the dog can discover the direction taken by the rabbit or by its master. Now this power of sniffing is very old. It may be seen in newts when they are testing a piece of food, such as earthworm, thrown into the aquarium. But here the external medium that is drawn into the nostrils is, of course, water. Even before amphibians, however, the habit of sniffing began, namely, in the mud-fishes or double-breathers (Didpnoi), which are lunged as well as gilled. The origin of "sniffing" has been traced back to the African mud-fish, Protopterus. What bundles of antiquities we are

THE ADVENTURE OF DAWN.

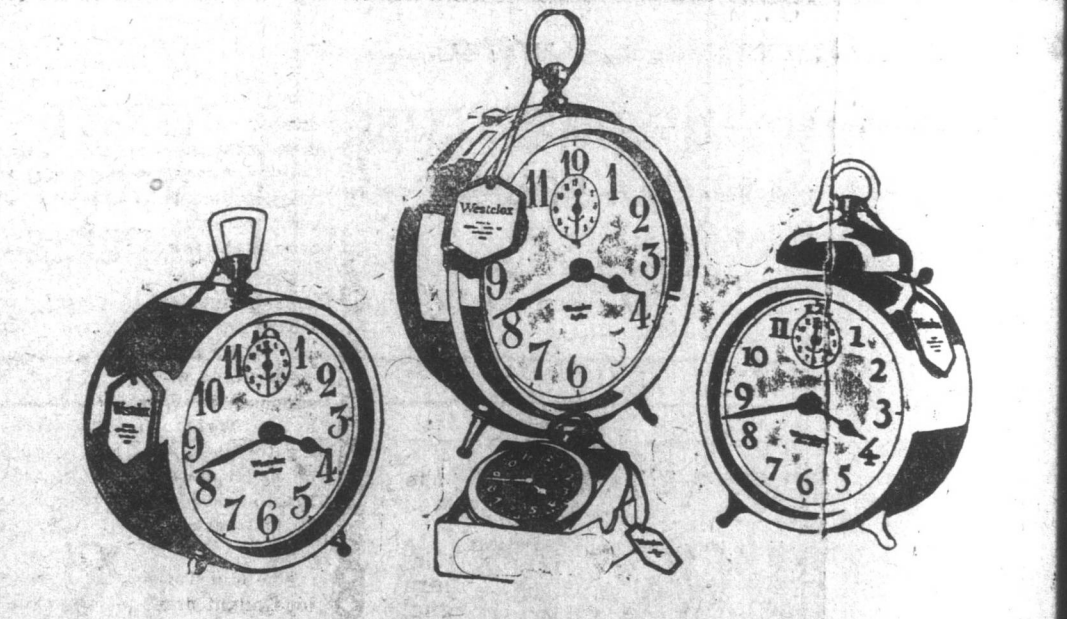

Some friends of mine were going to take a trip which necessitated their arising at the first morning and getting started before dawn. The woman who told me about it told it as an example of the foolish things people will do in the name of pleasure. "They can have it," she said. "I've no use for that sort of thing. It may be a pretty trip but if I've got to drag myself out of bed at that unearthly hour I'd rather not go."

I asked her how long it had been since she had seen the sun rise in summer and she said she could not remember. She seemed decidedly proud of her preference for slumber. What strange things we mortals are proud of!

An Adventure for the Beauty Hungry.
 I know of no more beautiful adventure for the mind and heart, or whatever you choose to call that part of us that feeds on beauty, than to be enchanting of all to me. — by the way you are sure of a memory which will not easily lose.

 Have You Known A Dawri Like This? — My last one was on the ocean, close to the water on the deck of a small boat. First was the moon, the twinkling stars, the pure brightness of lightness of the moon, came a consciousness of the presence of light, then a faint colour of water deepening to a molten blue that made the ocean look like the side of a vast seashell. A breeze, but infinitely stimulating, sprang for a few minutes the moon of the became steadily more vivid, touched the water to an exquisite iridescence like Bohemian glass. Then the faded from the water to the sky (ish blue, and passed into the clouds were touched first with a ender, then faint pink. Finally our couriers announced the imminent arrival of the King of Day. Up to the sea he came. "And straight was path of gold for him. And the world of men for me."
 With the coming of the day passed back into the ordinary but for a little while we had lifted out of it. Unearthly, yes, truly that, this adventure of the dawn.

Liners' Shapes and Speeds

It is not generally realized that an Atlantic liner of 20,000 tons, although perfectly suitable for its own regular voyage, would be unsuitable for trips to Australia or India, unless it travelled by way of the Cape. It is the Suez Canal that makes the difference. The cross-section of a boat using the Suez Canal is roughly U-shaped, whereas an Atlantic liner's section is V-shaped. This difference is necessitated by the limitation which the depth of the Canal imposes on ships using it. The difference in shape makes a difference in speed, for the V-shape is a factor in favour of speed. But even if the liners were of similar build, it is improbable that those sailing to Australia and India could compete in speed over a given mileage with their Atlantic rivals, because the colder water of the Atlantic is a great factor in favour of speed. It makes for better condensation than the warmer temperature of Eastern waters.

Newfoundland Motor Association

"SAFETY FIRST!"

The following By-Laws of the Association are published for the information of motorists generally. Learn them by heart and follow them:

Members of the Association must use the following hand signals:

1. If stopping, slowing down, or turning out of the road, right hand held out horizontally. If the drive is left hand, left hand held out.
2. Any Motorist Member of the Association desiring to overtake or pass a car must blow his horn two blasts, and the driver of the car ahead shall signal that he has heard the horn by answering two blasts. If the car ahead cannot keep ahead of the overtaking car, the driver should allow the overtaking car to pass and the overtaking car must immediately get far enough ahead to prevent the occupant of the car passed from getting the dust.
3. A Member of the Association must help any other Member whose car is on the road and in trouble if requested to do so.
4. Cars meeting must keep as close to the left side of the road as possible and slow down.
5. A signal of three blasts will mean that the person blowing is under the impression that the other party has offended against some rule.
6. The horn must be blown at every blind corner and the car must be under close control. A car is under close control when it can be stopped within 10 feet of sharp curves the horn must be blown.

These By-Laws apply to motor cycles as well as to motor cars.

The Palestinian Puzzle

The Achievements and Aims of the Zionist Movement.

To understand Palestinian politics, we must know something of Zionism, for the Zionist colonizer is responsible for the progress in Palestine today.

In 1895 Dr. Theodor Herzl, a Viennese Jew, founded the Zionist League which received its name from the Hebrew word, on which Jerusalem is built.

The aims of Herzl and his disciples was to establish in Palestine a Jewish State, and found a permanent home for their wandering nation. The League formed branches all over the world, and today they are one of the most powerful organizations of that kind.

During the war Palestine was conquered from the Turks by the British, and the League received the mandate for the Holy Land, on which Jerusalem is built.

In 1917 Lord Balfour, then British Minister of Foreign Affairs, wrote to Lord Rothschild advising him that Great Britain intended to lend support to the foundation of a Jewish State in Palestine.

At the Versailles Conference, President Wilson influenced the signatories to hand over to Great Britain the mandate for Palestine, and Jews all over the world were overjoyed that this great and Eternally country should collaborate with them in the work they set themselves to do.

The next step taken was the appointment of Sir Herbert Samuel as Military Governor at Jerusalem, where he, though a Jew, has for some years administered both firmly and tactfully, amongst a population of which eighty per cent. are Arabs, who for the most part looked with disfavor on the turn of events. Sir Herbert has gone into a well-earned retirement this year, and his place has been taken last month by that famous warrior Lord Plumer, one-time G.C. 2nd Army in France.

Since 1918 a steady flow of emigrants from Central Europe poured into the country. These emigrants, though very poor, were desirable, because they were mainly agricultural workers, and Zionists believe that agricultural pursuits alone can really form a sound base for the young nation; therefore they supported these workers with their funds, which ran low as a natural result.

The steady, thriving colonies of Tel-Aviv, Reshon, Zion, Petahtikvah and many others have proven how sound those Zionist policies were. Funds are constantly being added to by patriotic Jews all over the world; in this work U.S.A. takes a natural first place, but many of these colonies are now almost self-supporting. Unfortunately the actual inhabitants of the country have never really welcomed the colonists.

The Arabs, who form the greater number, in fact eighty per cent. of the population, claim that the League of Nations and Versailles Treaty nullify concerning the rights of the Jews. The future holds enormous possibilities for Palestine. Coal has been found in the Lebanon Mts., modern irrigation has made possible the cultivation of vast tracts of unarable land, so that all manner of crops may be grown, as well as fruit farming, sheep raising and wine pressing. The energy and resources which has served the Jew so well in other lands will prove again of enormous value, when he has his own land to work for, so that if a peaceful era ensues Palestine is likely to become a power in the New World of to-morrow.

The Post's Point of View

PAY, PAY, PAY.

We are the great milch cow of the modern world. We are not collecting the millions owing to us, but we are paying thirty-three millions a year to America, which will increase to thirty-eight millions in 1933, though this debt was contracted on behalf of France. Mr. Winston Churchill and M. Caillaux have been discussing debts, and an arrangement has been reached which represents a very good bargain for the French and a poor one for us. A month ago it was proposed that France should pay us twenty millions a year, which is merely three per cent. on the millions she owes us. This has now been reduced to a payment of twelve and a half millions for sixty-two years, or not half we are paying America on behalf of France. This means that for another sixty-two years the British taxpayer will have to pay over fourpence in the pound on behalf of the French taxpayer, who refuses to shoulder his liabilities.

Such an arrangement cannot be regarded with any satisfaction, but we do not wonder that M. Caillaux is pleased, for he has fixed up a remarkably good bargain for his country. The poor British taxpayer has other views when he considers his empty pockets, and the million and a half unemployed. Lord Bradbury, who was formerly Great Britain's representative on the Reparations Committee, and who, therefore, speaks with authority as an expert, is alarmed by the proposals, which he regards as being highly inimical to British interests. "When we remember," states Lord Bradbury, "that France has a favourable trade balance, and has actually been paying off her commercial foreign debts during the last five years at the rate of £40,000,000 per annum without any appreciable German receipts, it is clear that her international balance-sheet would be in a much more favourable condition than our own, more particularly if we take into account our £40,000,000 loss of annual foreign income as the result of the sale of American securities during the war." In short we have made a bad bargain, and the British taxpayer will have to pay as usual.

Canadian Canoist Rescued

PICKED UP BY CREW OF ITALIAN TORPEDO BOAT.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—(Canadian Press Cable)—George Smyth, the Toronto canoeist who left Rome on August 19 to paddle in his canoe to Leningrad, and who was reported to have been stranded, along with a companion, Lieut. Brandt, on an island near Cape Corse, island of Corsica, and starving, according to a message in a bottle which was said to have been picked up by an Italian torpedo boat crew, is safe and sound.

The story of the bottle message about Smyth and Brandt was a hoax according to the Rome correspondent of the Morning Post. He says that coastguards who responded to Smyth's supposed S.O.S. message were thanked by the Toronto canoeist for responding to his supposed cry for help but he had suffered no mishap whatever. Smyth told his would be rescuers that he had been the victim of a practical joke.

The story of Smyth's supposed serious plight first appeared in the Paris Journal. The alleged bottle message was said to have been pencilled on paper on September 1.

Smyth is paddling to Leningrad on a westerly of 10,000 lire made with Marquis Guigleim.

Smyth attracted considerable public notice by paddling in his canoe alone down the Atlantic coast from Nova Scotia to New York, crossing the ocean on a steamer, then paddling across the English Channel to France and paddling on to Rome by various waterways. He was given cordial receptions by the people of the countries through which he passed on his unusual trip. He narrowly escaped being drowned in his first attempt to paddle across the English Channel, and was rescued just in the nick of time. Undaunted, he tried the dangerous voyage again and succeeded.

"One more station and we'll be there," cried the Little Rabbit, turning to the Yellow Dog Tramp. But, explained the Yellow Dog Tramp, as good as me, that nice old dog was he trotted down the aisle, followed by the little bunny. "I noticed you did close and the paper, which he had been reading, had fallen to the floor. So the little bunny kept very still and looked out of the window at hollow and hill; at the telegraph poles as they sped swiftly by and the merry old sun way up in the sky. All of a sudden the Black Poodle Dog Porter opened the car door and shouted, "Strawberry Hill!" Up jumped two little robins and, dopped down the aisle in their pretty red vests and brown feather coats. When they were safely landed on the platform the Poodle Dog shouted, "All aboard!" "Ding, dong!" went the engine bell. "Toot, toot!" shrieked the whistle, and away sped the train on the iron track, clackety, clackety, clackety clack!

"The next stop is Turnip City," cried the little rabbit, tickling the Yellow Dog Tramp's silky ear.

"You don't say so," he yawned. "My I had a nice nap. Feel as young as a pup. Nothing like a little snooze to make you nimbler in your shoes," he added, talking in poetry just like Bill Shakespeare. Then stretching his long hind legs, he waited for the Black Poodle Dog to call out the name of the next station. In a minute or three that wonderful dog opened the car door and shouted, "Turnip Town!"

"Some people call it Turnip City," explained the Yellow Dog Tramp, as good as me, that nice old dog was he trotted down the aisle, followed by the little bunny. "I noticed you did close and the paper, which he had been reading, had fallen to the floor. All of a sudden they heard the Circus Elephant's trumpet. A big under his chin. He had forgotten to take it off after lunch. "I imagine. "Hello, hello!" shouted the bunny boy, and the next minute the big Circus Elephant looked out of the doorway. "Bless my big ears and long trunk," he exclaimed. "If it isn't my little comrade," and out he ran to pick up the bunny boy with his big, strong trunk, just the way daddy does at night when you run out to meet him, Little Reader. The Mosquito Pest

ADVANCEMENT OF NEW RESEARCH INSTITUTE.
BEING WATCHED ALL OVER THE WORLD.

Scientists, of whom it can almost be said with truth, that they know more of insects than do the insects themselves, assembled in force at the occasion of the new British Mosquito Institute by Sir Ronald Ross, of London, whose efforts in connection with malaria research are well known. They drew attention to a remarkable piece of work which has been done during the past five years, which has now assumed national importance. Visitors to various sea-resorts have often had cause to complain of gnats or mosquitoes, but it is to Mr. John F. Marshall, a resident of Hayling Island, to deal with the pest. Long and painstaking research on the part of Mr. Marshall revealed that the mosquitoes, rather than those prevalent along the coast—there are 25 distinct species in England alone—bred in stagnant salt water to be found in pools and ditches. Then it was discovered that only the female of the species was dangerous—her husband being an inoffensive old chap who merely desired to be left alone in the stagnant pool or leafy water where she had made his home. The reason the "lady" mosquito needed human blood.

Here she could deposit her eggs. In other words, mere man was in part responsible for the plague of mosquitoes in England may only be a case of annoyance, and only occasionally the cause of death, but in the tropics they carry disease, and these species were watched with interest over the world. Investigation revealed that the best time to deal with mosquitoes was at the larval stage, just before or after the hatching period. They live in water, but come to the surface occasionally. Here it was the time to exterminate them. A thin film of oil was deposited on the surface of the various pools. It was found that the mosquitoes, having the district is free from the pest. A mosquito is a rarity. The work was helped by local school-children, parties of whom, even now, occasionally visit the countryside to see the breeding places. Mr. Marshall discovered that it was all a matter of drainage. If the water in pools and lakes was not allowed to stagnate, the mosquitoes did not breed. The Ministry of Health is watching with great interest the being done in the new research station, and it can be confidently stated that in the course of a few years the mosquito pest, so far as it is concerned, will be a thing of the past.

Empty Death Sentence

REMOVED AND "REPRIEVED" AT SAME TIME.

Revolver To Dying Father. Sentencing to death a man who had his father's revolver, giving the means to end his life of the Chief Justice at Sydney, the same breath, reprieved him.

David Franz Winkler, charged with having murdered his father, Franz Joseph Winkler, at Northville. The two, it seemed, were terms of greatest affection.

Winkler man being confined to his bed with Bright's disease, dropsy, heart disease in an advanced stage. In any event he could not live much longer. According to the widow he was in intense agony and could not be alleviated. In response to a pleading letter, the thought a revolver in Sydney and it loaded in five chambers, to prevent. Then he went into the room, and afterwards heard the shot which ended his sufferings. He was first charged with manslaughter, then with self-murder—and later the serious charge of murder was laid.

The jury not only acquitted Winkler of actual murder, but, in deciding that accused was an accessory before the fact, made the necessary recommendation to mercy. The Foreman respectfully suggested the First Offenders Act should be applied in the case.—The Chief Justice made it clear, in sympathetic terms, that he could not treat a man charged with murder as a first offender, and intimated that only one sentence could be passed. That was the sentence, and though only a technicality, the effect was the same as if the man had been completely acquitted. It had been recommended, with the agreement, would be forwarded to the executive, and would carry the weight.
