Buring the Summer Months to Prevent Summer Complaints.

1.—Preserve cleanliness of room, clothes and person of child, and secure fresh air by open windows, resort to parks, ferries, &c.

2.—Use light fiannel covering of chest and bowels at all times, and other clothing to suit the changes of weather.

3.—Infants under one year should, if possible, have a wet nurse. Until six months old they may nurse not oftener than every two or three hours; over six months, five times in twenty-four hours.

4.—If the child do not nurse, it must still take milk, which should be prepared as follows: Boll a teaspoonful of barley (ground in a coffee mill or take prepared barley) with a gill of, water for, fifteen minutes, to which add a little ealt; to this add half the amount of boiled milk and a lump of loaf sugar; give it to the child lukewarm out of a nursing bottle. The bottle and mouthplece should be always kept in water when not in use.

5.—If the child is over six months old, the boiled milk and barley water should be in equal quantities, with sait and loaf-sugar. If the child is over six months old, the boiled milk and barley flour; if very costive, use oatmeal grain, strained before it is mixed with the milk.

6.—If the child is partly nursed, it should be fed sufficiently with food, prepared as above directed, the child being nursed and fed alternately.

7.—Beef tea or beef soup may be added to this food for infants of five months or older; when ten or twelve months of other may suck rare-done beefsteak.

8.—No child under two years of age should be allowed the miscellaneous diet of the table.

9.—On the first appearance of the symptoms of the Summer complaint, (vomiting and purging,) place the child under the care of a physician.

THE GUELPH POLICE COURT. Every inhabitant of Hamilton who ha e welfsre of the city at heart, will thank the Council for the prompt ac last night in the matter of the Guelph and North-western Railway, as elsewhere and North-western Rallway, as elsewhere mentioned. As is well known, it was de-clided some two years ago to offer for sale a certain number of shares of Great Wes, tern Rallway stock, held by the city, amounting to somewhere about one hundred thousand dollars. No sale, however, has yet been effected, and the stock is still in the hands of the London agents. The proposition now made is that this should be exchanged for stock of the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway, which, when done, will at once render certain the building of the first thirteen or fourteen miles, from Guelph to the Grand River-the only section on which the local bonuses fall short of the amount required. Compared with the benefit which the new railway will be to Hamilton, the dividend now received on the Great Western stock is but as a drop in the bucket, even were no dividend ever to be received from the stock which is to be taken in exchange. But happily there is no reason at all for contemplating that contingency, however strong the case would still be in favor of the proposed exchange. The important fact is to be remembered that the Great Western dividends are paid on the large capital cost of $70,000 per mile, whereas the Guelph and North-western will have to pay dividends only on about $10,000 or $11,000 at the outside. For the $5,000 per mile from the municipalities there being a bonus, draws no dividends after wards, the people being content to make it a free gift out and out, at once, for the cluding right of way, rails, and everything but the rolling stock—the latter not having to be provided by the Company, as the Great Western will run th road -within Mr. Reid's estimate of $15,- 500 per mile. As will be seen by the resolution, the by-law is to be submifted to the ratepayers without delay, and will

POETRY.

PARTED. Oh! for a healing balm
To ease the troubled heart,
To make the anxious spirit caln
When loving ones must part.

Oh! for some genial ray
Th' uneasy void to fill;
Some charm to wipe the tears away,
And whisper "Peace, be still."

Oh! for some magic power Our dear ones still to see, When gloaming's gentle, peac From labour sets us free.

Vain wish! alas, how vain!
Oh! why must dear ones part?
Oh! why do memories fond remain
To crush the bleeding heart?

ANOTHER CHANCE.

d on the shores of the swift, blue river, watch the winds and the waves at play; itil as I watch, the waves for ever from my gaze and glide away, not wind, and stand, fair river, leave me never, thou perfect day, "till as I ask, the hours forcer from my life, and glide away.

The waves go by till my eyes are weary,
"They will not tarry nor turn again;
"Life, new life," is their chorus cheery,
"That strange new life in the vast blue by days go by till I stand despairing,
For those were evil, and these are vain;
Yet hope, my heart, for the time is nearing
When I may try my life again.

The Braes of Yarrow Historical Tale of the Sixteenth Century.

'My thoughts are so confused that I can understand nothing of what has happened.— For pity's sake, then, explain to me how am I here—how are you here—what does it

e was some pain in the anxiety he dis.

mean?
There was some pain in the anxiety he dis. played.

'What it all means I know as little as yourself; but something of what has occurred I can relate to you.

Drawing a rough stool to the bedside, Mistress Bouglass—whose quick, lively, but withal gentle manner, was a rare tressure for a sick room—seated herself, as if preparatory to a lengthy goasip. Gibben towe perceived that her dress was arranged as if she had been within doers some time, instead of being habited, as he had expected to see her, in her riding dress, fresh from the journey of this charitable visit. He was the more puxiled in consequeue, and waited eagerly for the explanation.

'Where shall I begin?' she said smiling (still with the unusual shade of melancholy perceptible), I playing with the ends of her suffa. 'With yourself—that will be best; but you must promise—'I will—anything.'

'You are rash to bind yourself. However, I only want you to promise not to become excited.'

'I promise.'

I only want you to promise not to become excited.

'I promise'
'I promise'
'Thank you; and I promise that the instant I observe the slightest indication of forgetfulness my mouth shall close.'
'I will remember.'
'I want repanned, betrayed...'
'She raised her hand warningly, and he checked himself.'
'I know all that,' she proceeded softly...
'You were betrayed, made captive, and cast into a dungeon in the Tower of Tushielaw...
Beneath that dungeon there is a tunnel through which water flows of depth enough to drown any ordusary man. In the floor of the dungeon there is a secret trap, which opens to the touch of a spring, and drops disagreeable people such as yourself into the depths below. out of which they do not ususually rise again.'
'Horrible...who can tell the number of victims that those villains may have destroy-de?'

'On the third night of your imprisonment the spring was either touched by your enemies, or you by, some accident touched it yourself, and fell into the abyss. Happily for you, the water was swollen and the current strong, and you were borne through the tunnel and into the river Ettrick. Out of the tunnel and into the river Ettrick. Out of the tunnel and into the river Ettrick. Out of the tunnel and into the river borne through the tunnel and into the river borne through who carried you to this house, where you have lain since in fever, and with the hand of death so close upon you that none of as dared even to hope that it would be withdrawn.

'You said us—then you have been here some time?'
'Yes, ten days.'

"You said us—then you have been neremome time?"

"Yes, ten days."

"So long!—you have not told me how you came here!

"By accident, as I have said. Her Majesty has taken a whim to hunt in Ettrick, and we moved to Kelso. In following the chase
I became separated from my friends, lost my way, and at length wandered to this house, or hut I should call it. Not knowing its ill repute, I stayed to rest and inquire my way.—
you raved in your fever, and whilst I was in the other room I heard your voice. Upon the assurance of my regard for you, and upon a promise of secrecy, I was permitted to see you, and—and—finally, seeing you were so very ill, a measenger was despatched to Kelso, and I remained here to watch you die, as we thought?

so, and I remains a we thought.

She had faitered very much during the latter portion of the explanation, and it was evident that there was something she desired to conceal.

Good friend, murmured Gilbert gratefully, as he seized her hand and pressed it be-ed to conceal.

'Good friend,' murmured Gilbert gratefully, as he seized her hand and pressed it between his own.

She withdrew her hand gently, and as one might have supposed, even with reluctance, but firmly.

'You talked much when you were unconsious,' ahe said with a steady voice; 'and, now that you have recovered, I shall be able to leave you.'

The blood crimsoned his face as he felt the significance of her first words.

'I spoke of friends, perhaps?' he said with a feeble smile.

'Yes,'' (this unsteadily.]

'I shall pray now for strength to rejoin them. First, I shall pay my respects to Captain Lindsay.

'No, no,' she interrupted hastily, 'you must not show yourself to him or to any one at the Court till you may do so in safety.'

'In safety?—how, what danger have I to fear?'

'Ah, I forgot,' she cried agitatedly, 'you

'In safety? -- how, what unger services?'

'Ah, I forgot,' she cried agitatedly, 'you did not know.'

'Know what?'

'Hush, I can tell you nothing more till you are atronger. To-morrow, perhaps, you will be able to hear everything. Now, be silent.'

He saw that she was resolute, and as she mored softly from the chamber, he closed his eyes as if to sleep.

CHEAP TELEGRAPHING TO EU-ROPE.—The two experiments of roducing the scale of charge for messages transmitted by the Atlantic cable having been successful as a matter of business policy, the managers have determined upon another. The price for transmitting a message of ten words, together with the address, date and signature, has been reduced to fifteen dollars. The new tariff will go into effect on the first day of September, and will render the cable more serviceable to men of business and to the public at large, as well as add to the profits of the company.
