THE new regulations prohibiting the import of sugar into Great Britain will not affect parcels to Canadian soldiers, as a clause provides for the sending of sugar as gifts to Canadian soldiers in the United Kingdom or France by par-cel post, provided the parcel is addressed to the soldier at his regimental address. Sugar in quantities not exceeding one pound in weight will be accepted for a civil or military address. Maple sugar, the Canadian favorite, has been ruled as not falling under the sugar prohibition

THE ENTERTAINMENT provided by Lambtons 149 I.O.D.E. in the Lyceum on Wednesday evening was of an exceedingly interesting and instructive nature and the ladies of the Chapter are to be congratulated on providing such a profitable evening's enjoyment for the large audience present. The chief item on the program was, of course, the 'talk' given by Mr. Peter McArthur. He commenced his address with some humorous remarks and stories, then reminiscences of early days in Western Ontario, and afterwards spoke on war conditions. In a forcible manner he impressed upon his hearers the necessity of conservation and increased production and predicted that starvation conditions for all would be the outcome unless Tecumseh Chapter I. O. D. E.

There were 20 members and two visitors at the March meeting of Tecum-seh Chapter, I.O.D.E., held at the home of Mrs. A. Mitchell on Tuesday. Treas-urer reported that all the money raised during February had been spent in sending parcels overseas and buying yarn. A number of the members of the A.Y.P.A. and also of the Utopia Bible Class have kindly offered to help knit if yarn can be procured. It was decided that during the month of March the members would try to raise money by The entertainment committee hope to put on "Madam Jarley's Wax Works" in April. ### "Trench Foot," New War Disease.

In spite of vaccines and modern hygiene disease still stands close to the enemy in the number of French and British soldiers it destroys. For example, trench warfare has developed a disease of its own, which is called "trench foot," and is a sort of gangrene. It is caused by standing in cold water day after day. A sort of mold enters abrasions in the skin and the foot literally rots away, often rendering an operation neces sary.

The speaker turned away rather un-ceremonlously, while the other shrugged his shoulders delicately and Leila lay upon her poor bed, bruised and bandaged. The next day when Miss Burrell visited her she drew her skirts closely to evade contact with the bare floor. She sniffed the plebian air of the hovel with contempt. "I am glad you was not hurt," spoke Leila. "That was all I thought of, be-cause you are Mr. Warden's true love, What would become of the charity and I would do anything for him; he has done so much for me: Don't tell him," whispered Lella, "but I love him, and that makes me happy all the time. adian women is announced by the Dominion government as a part of the established policy. It was stated that woman suffrage would be an established fact in Canada before another election is held. This statement was interpreted to mean that the measure will be introduced at the next session of parliament, which will probably open within the next few weeks. Labor men in their recent conference with the government urged that further industrial development of women should be accompanied by a political equality. Such a measure will be the longest step yet taken in this country toward extension of the franchise, as it is probable that it will add something like 1,500,000 women yoters to the franchise list.

Men who won't work will possibly not find life so full of roses from now on. Instead of being allowed to hang about the poolrooms and walk the streets regardless of the country's call for workers, they are likely to be proceeded against under the terms and conditions of the criminal code, for it will be an offence to be idle. A recommendation along that line has, at any rate, been made by the inter-provincial conference that met in Ottawa to deal with the farm labor situation. The official report of that conference, which has just me, to love me, you would know how been received at the office of the hungry my heart is! Oh! Her artless innocence appealed to Bliss Warden more strongly than ever. "I am going to call you 'Leila,'" he said, "because I see you are my friend. Leila, will you trust me as a brother in a matter close to your interest, believing that I seek only to save you from trouble?"

She nodded her head, but staring wonderingly at his earnest, friendly face.

"I saw you with a man near here yesterday. Is he a lover?"

She flushed up instantly. The rosebud lips bore a momentary resentful expression. Then she lowered her eyes in confusion.

"He says he wants to be my beau," she fluttered. "And I never had one, like other girls, and—and he says he can get me work in the city so I can have fine dresses and a beautiful room, and he will marry me."

"I am very sorry to make you feel grieved Leila," said Warden, "but this man is a villain. Twice in the city courts he has been sentenced to prison, the last time for bigamy." The girl swayed as if from a stunning shock. She could not doubt the words spoken. She burst into tears with the passionate outbreak.

"If you know how I long for some one to speak kind to me, to think of to see him again, if he is as you say, but oh! Demust love somebody, some-thing. Oh! why am I not like other girls--so poor, so lonely, so despised !" Warden quieted the distracted spirit with gentle words. Then he went his way to the village. And a year later, as the travel-weary man was longing to turn his face homewards, in perfect handwriting came a second note. "I can read anything now and they say I am the best writer in the school, see-'I love Mr. Warden and always shall.""

His heart warmed at the artless message. His gaze took in with surprise and gladness the new Leila Trask who greeted him at his sister's home.

"Kiss me, too," she told him, as he took his sister in his arms, and Bliss Warden recognized the unsullied love of an unspoiled being, and knew that he had found a treasure he must cherish to the end of life.

In the days of Ralph Waldo Emerson matches were not sold loose in boxes, but were made up in "cards," as they were called, of a dozen or so, connected by a common wooden base, from which they were broken off as necessity required.

Emerson, so the story goes, used to place a fresh card of matches on a table by his bedside every night, together with a candle and some writ-ing materials, in order that he might jot down at once any valuable thought that came into his mind during the night watches.

One night he wakened with a particularly brilliant idea and bethought himself at once of his canny preparations for such emergencies. Reaching out, he grasped his card of matches; broke off the outer one and struck it sharply on the under side of the table. It failed to ignite. Swiftly he struck Extends to the Waistline in Many Street Dresses-Trimness and Simplicity Noticeable.

Loose panels or plaited panels, in varied lengths, predominate in street dresses, and there is a preponderance of the turnover collar extending to the waistline.

The regulation round or square collar also continues to be popular. A new coat-dress shows a standing collar, the dress fastening on the side to the waistline.

Trimness and simplicity are particularly notable in street dresses. Al-though afternoon dresses may be cut on similar lines, there is a decided tendency toward the use of two materials, silk, crepe and satin, crepe and serge, etc., and there is a great amount of drapery and plaits in evidence.

Richness of effect is added to many dresses by the use of a satin body lining under crepe, in contrasting or selfcolor.

CHINA'S TEA INDUSTRY GROWERS ARE TRYING TO RE-

STORE THE EXPORT TRADE. The Popular Beverage, Which Is Now More Used Than Ever, Originally Came Only From the China

Plantations, but India and Ceylon Captured the Business. THE most important article of export from Hankow, and, in fact, one of the most important for all China, is tea. This product, locally called ch'a, was known as early as 400 B. C., but it is reported that it did not come into general use until about 700 A.D. The earliest use of tea was not as a beverage, but as a vegetable dish, and even to-day in Tibet the ordinary every-day meal consists of a doughy mass made of tea, barley meal, butter, and salt. Since the eighth century the demand for tea has become world-wide, and in China, its place of origin, the annual consumption is now estimated to be five pounds per inhabitant.

five pounds per inhabitant. The great tea-growing districts of China are by no means so widespread as is generally supposed. The plant flourishes best between the latitude of 26 and 30 degrees and its quality depends very largely on the altitude at which it is grown. For example, the celebrated black tea from Anhui is produced on the slopes of the Li mountains at an altitude of over Is produced on the slopes of the Li mountains at an altitude of over 3,000 feet, while the famous "Hsien-ya" tea comes from even greater heights in the mountains of Kiang-si, Hu-nan, Hu-peh, Fu-Kient, Kiang-si, An-hui, Che-kiang, Kwang-tung, and Yun-nan are the chief tea-penducing provinces of Ching Huproducing provinces of China, Hu-nan exports the greatest quantity destined for foreign countries, but Anhui's output is considered superior in quality. During the last 25 or 30 years China's export trade in tea has fall-en off to a large extent primarily because of a lack of co-operation among the growers, the employment of an-tiquated methods in the plant's prowhat of late, to disturbed political conditions in the regions where the plant is cultivated. India and Cey-lon during the last sixty years have gradually won much of the trade away from China, until to-day they are supplying the bulk of the world's are supplying the bulk of the works a demand, especially for the coarser and darker-colored teas. This is in spite of the acknowledged fact that Chinese teas are superior to all others in their delicacy of flavor. During the last ten years, however, China has begun to realize the ex-During the last ten years, however, China has begun to realize the ex-treme importance of retaining this trade, and government measures have been adopted in an effort to re-gain its old-time prestige. Tea is usually grown on small farms located on the slopes of hills and never on large plantations. Each family does its own cultivating pick-family does its own cultivating, picking, and drying. When prices are not prohibitive, bean and rapeseed cakes are used as fertilizers. Wood ashes are also used as a fertilizer. As a general thing, these products are applied to the fields in February: and chinery, which not only expresses all the moisture from the leaf, but gives it the proper twist. In China, how-ever, this is done by hand, the pro-duct being placed on wicker or bam-boo trays and rolled backward and forward with the name of the hands forward with the palms of the hands for a period ranging from 30 minutes to an hour. The third, or fermentation, pro-cess determines whether the product is to become black tea or green. At this stage in the preparation of the tea the leaves are placed on some flat surface and covered with a damp cloth.

The process is sometimes hurried in another way, that being the use of covered wicker baskets, under which a slow fire is built. This treatment, which usually requires from two to six hours (depending on the weather and on the methods used), is termin-ated when the leaf takes on a copper-ish tinge. If green tea is desired the fermentation is either done away with entirely or checked before any change in the color of the leaf oc-curs curs. The most important stage in the preparation of the tea is that of fir-ing, for the flavor of the product is determined in this process. In India and Ceylon the firing of the tea is accomplished by placing it on wire trays, which are then transferred to large desiccators, through which passes a blast of air heated to 210 degrees or 220 degrees. In China the methods employed are very crude. A basket measuring about 30 inches in diameter, three feet high, open at both ends and having a light bamboo bottom placed halfway of the basket is the meat common recepbasket, is the most common recep-tacle used for firing. The tea leaves are placed in the upper half and a charcoal fire is built below. In this manner all remaining mois-ture is driven off, and the desired flavor given to the tea. When an ar-tificially scented product is desired, a variety of jasmine flower is fired with the tea. The same fragrance may the tea. The same fragrance may also be imparted in a lesser degree by sprinkling the tea with the flower after packing, but this method is followed only in the manufacture of inferior teas.

The fifth, and last, process is the sifting and grading of the tea, which is accomplished by means of sieves, each smaller in mesh than the pre-ceding one, a careful grading of the tea taking place after each sifting. China has at last realized the im-portance of at least attempting to regain its position as the chief source of the world's supply of tea, and to this end has established an agricul-tural commission with. the better-ment of the tea trade as its main ob-

The first step in this direction was taken in 1905, when an investigat-ing committee was sent to India and Ceylon in order to study the methods Ceyion in order to study the methods practiced by the tea growers of that region. As a result of this move-ment a school was established at Nanking where the latest methods of tea culture were taught. A station was also established in the famous Keemen district in the province of Anhui where the growing of the tea Anhui, where the growing of the tea plant under scientific methods is now demonstrated to the planters of that region.

Lastly, a 20 per cent, reduction in the export duty on tea was put into effect during 1915. While this step materially aided the growers, the Chinese Government will have to take further action along this same line in order that Chinese tea may meet the competition of Indian leaf. for in India there is no tax on either the production or the exportation of tea. The Chinese grower is under the further burden of having to pay tea. a series of transit taxes known liken, which are levied on the article from the place of production to the place of shipment. These taxes often amount to more than the original export tax.

The first picking of the tea leaves usually occurs in early April, the second in May, and the third and last in Au-gust. The land is then ploughed and harrowed, after which it is al-lowed to remain untouched during the winter months. The tea-picking season extends over a period of about four months. The first crop, which is gathered in April, is always the most valuable. In some sections the leaves are cov-In some sections the leaves are cov-ered with a downy growth, and this output, known as "Pekoe," is con-sidered one of the best grades of Chinese tea. The bushes continue to put forth leaves; but, as a rule, the natives pick too heavily at the be-ginning of the season, and the result is that the second crop is of a far coarser variety and suitable only in supplying the demand for cheap and poor quality teas. There are five distinct processes in the manufacture of tea—withering, rolling, fermenting, firing, and sift-ing. As the name signifies, the withing. As the name signifies, the with-ering process consists in drying the leaf, which is usually accomplished by simply laying the plucked leaves out in the sunshine on straw mats and occasionally turning them so that they dry evenly on all sides. Under this treatment the tea grad-ually darkens in color. When a rich green stage is reached tests are made to see that the drying is not carried green stage is reached tests are made to see that the drying is not carried to a point where the leaves become brittle. The late Sir Mackenzie Bowell loved to tell of his physical encoun-ters with Edward Blake, a political rival, with whom he had a couple of physical differences. On being asked once if he knew Edward Blake, he replied:

"I rather did. Yes, I suppose I'm the only man ever lived that took Ed-

The farm wagon, which for years was the most useful of all farm equipment, is now being replaced on the best farms by a sturdy, dependable motor truck. The truck will haul any farm product—fruit, grain, vegetables, stock, fertilizer, or wood—around the farm, or to the town or city many miles distant, in half the time, and at a much lower cost.

The Ford One-Ton truck is a rapid, economical and very serviceable means of transport. One of these on your farm will save you weeks of time in a single season and will enable you to pass through a crisis of labor shortage with less difficulty.

The Ford truck is supplied as a chassis only. This permits you to select any of the many body styles especially designed for the Ford truck and already on the market. Thus you can mount the one which suits your individual requirements.

WHAT puzzles many people is, why the WHAT puzzles many people is, why the price of potatoes keeps up. These tubers are known to be the only product for which there is no outside demand. It is also known that last season's crop in Canada was away beyond the country's needs. Why, then, don't they come to a more seasonable price. Surely the "rather-let-them - rot - than - sell - them-chean?" principle does not nervail cheap' principle does not prevail among the farmers. It looks, however, as if a great many will rot on the farmers' hands before next season's crop is ready.

...... the man to whom she had recently be-The Father's Helper

er.

When Dick Stoner, after a stormy and galloping sort of seaside court-ship, had actually heard Madeleine retarn all his vows of devotion he thought his struggles to win her as his wife were practically over. Madeleine was visiting a boarding school chum when the romance occurred, and for that reason, perhaps, Dick had for-gotten that Madeleine probably possessed parents and that those parents might have something to say before permitting their eighteen-year-old beauty to become Mrs. Dick Stoner. But Dick knew that, as parents usually rated sons-in-law-to-be, he was not undesirable. His record at college and in business since then, though not actually brilliant, was clean and progressive, and any father-in-law or mother-in-law-to-be would not have much difficulty in discovering that his share of the Stoner fortune was a large one. So it seemed as if the matter was settled till, after a sudden burst of enthusiasm on the part of Medeleine, as they sauntered in and out around the sand dunes at the seashere, she sud-dently changed her tone and her eyes grew round. "I'd forgotten about father," she said. "He will never let us do anything we want to-we are a great trial to him, you know, and I don't know how in the world I can ever be married if he doesn't consent. I just couldn't elope." Dick didn't like this intrusion of an objecting father-in-law. It was much nicer hearing Madeleine's guideless praise of his own many manly virtues and good features. So he tried to persuade her that the father whom he had never seen was not such a gruff sort after all and that it would be an easy matter to "bring him around." "You haven't any idea how strict he is," Madeleine protested. "He's a professor of psychology and this year he's trying to write his greatest book andand, well, it is very hard to be the father of five daughters and Arthur and Bennet and write a book on psy-chology. It's hard to be the father of five daughters anyhow, he says, espe-cially when they are the kind of daughters that we are." "Why can't he shift responsibilities till the book is done?" suggested Dick. "Couldn't your mother manage to keep you within bounds?"

"Oh. mother's just as busy as she can be mending us and darning us and planning meals and things. She has a 'mother's helper' to help her and still come engaged, except that he was dressed in dark blue serge and her flance had inclined to light tweeds and white fiannels. Besides he spoke in a voice that was subdued and the speech was free from slang-not very much like the explosive discourse of the man to whom she had recently engaged herself. And besides, the man she had known at the seashore had been eager to see her alone and often, whereas the new inmate of her father's home, after having been introduced to her, seemed not to notice her. It was not till the following day that they did chance to come upon each other in the library. "We mustn't try to meet each other on the Q. T. at all," Dick began. "Those brothers of yours are just the sort to find it out, no matter how we try to conceal it. We can stand it this way for a while. Your father has been telling me his troubles this morning. He's especially worried about you-you wretch. He tells me you worry him so he can hardly write, says you ride the wildest horse in the stable, go off in the woods unattended and otherwise render him incapable of the high degree of concentration that he needs to complete his book. He asked me to watch you especially and to suggest a way to tame you. I'd no idea you were such a wild creature-you wonderful, sweetest girlthere, I couldn't help it that timebut I won't steal another till I am no longer playing this role. It would spoil everything if anyone suspected."

The next communication Madeleina had from the new employee was written and slipped into her hand as sho passed him one evening on the stairs. It was brief and dictatorial. "In order to accomplish the aim in view you must become even more unruly. Do everything you can except risk your Fake a runaway or two and get lost in the mountains if you can do it safely."

Though Madeleine did not exactly understand Dick's motives in this instruction she followed it to the letter, and even the calm-eyed mother, who took the shocks and anxieties incident upon being the parent of five high-spirited daughters and two sons as serenely as anyone could, became overwrought with worry when, for the second time in a week, Madeleine returned home from a wild ride only after the faithful blue-serged "father's helper" had gone out in search of her. The next day the professor tried in vain to write a chapter of his book, for his publishers were beginning to press him for the complete manu-script. After wasting hours in the bootless effort he called for the young man he had recently employed. "Did you reprove Madeleine severe ly for her escapade yesterday?" he asked. "You know how it tries me to have to attend to that sort of thingstill, unless you are very severe I shall have to take her in hand."

"I reproved her very severely, sir," replied Dick, "but if you will pardon me for saying so, I think reproofs are of little avail." "Something must be done, man," said the professor peevishly. "I can't MEN AND WOMEN TO EARN MORE MONEY what I have just said. I realized as you have just done that what Madeleine really needed was a husband. So you see my little scheme has worked. But Madeleine is a very sweet girl, in spite of her hoyden ways, and I know you will be happy."

Motorcycle Knocks Deer Out.

Edward Moscow of Carmel, N. T., was hurled from his speeding motorcycle in a collision with a large deer in the darkness outside this village. He escaped uninjured, but the deep was knocked out, and it lay stunned on the road for an hour. Moscow believed the rays of his searchlight dazzled the deer, for as it emerged from the brush at the roadside and got in his path, it suddenly turned and charged, head-on, catapulted into the ditch and the motorcycle was wreck-ed. The deer remained motionless. Moscow took his broken motorcycle to a garage, and when he returned for the carcass of the deer, which he supposed was dead, he found it had recovered and fied.

PERSIA'S MATIONAL DRINK.

Sherbet is the Popular Beverage in That Thirsty Country. The great beverage in Persia is sher bet, which is plentifully supplied and of which there are many varieties, from the bowl of water with a squeeze of lemon to the clear, concentrated juice of any sort of fruit to which wa-ter is added to dilute it.

The preparation of sherbet, which is done with the greatest care, is a very important point in so thirsty a country as Persia and one to which much time is devoted. It may be either expressed from the juice of fruit freshly gath-ered or from the preserved extract of pomegranates, cherries or lemons, mixed with sugar and submitted to a certain degree of heat to preserve it for winter consumption.

Another sherbet much drunk is called ruzangebben. It is made from the honey of the tamarisk tree. This honey is not the work of the bee. but the product of a small insect or worm living in vast numbers under the leaves of the shrub. During the months of August and September the insects are collected and the honey is preserved. When used for sherbet it is mixed with vinegar, and, although not so delicious as that made from fruit, it makes an excellent temperance beverage.

Only among the rich and fashionable are glasses used. In all other cases sherbet is served in china bowls and drunk from deep wooden spoons carved in pear wood.

SOLDIERS' UNIFORMS.

They Are Not Khaki, but "Cotton O. D.," or "Wool O. D."

In speaking of the uniforms worn by the soldiers in the regular army and the militia do not speak of them as khaki. It is incorrect, says the Kansas City Star, because the soldiers do not wear khaki, and, besides, the soldiers are not at all partial to the word. The uniforms worn now are describ ed by the war department as "Cotton, O. D." or "Wool O. D." The "O. D." means olive drab and is descriptive of the color of the uniforms. Cotton uniforms are worn in the summer and vool in the winter.

Khaki is a word of East Indian origin, meaning dusty, and comes from the word khak, meaning dusty. It is a clay or dust colored cloth, originally coming from India. It was first worn by the native British troops and later by all British troops serving abroad or on campaign.

It was later adopted by the United States government for both field and colonial service because of its serviceable qualities and because it was supposed to make it harder for the enemy to detect soldiers. The color of the uniforms was supposed to merge into the color of the ground.

Khaki is lighter in color than olive drab, and the khaki oth is said to be superior to the cotton miforms now being worn in the army

The Church of Gold.

There is no structure just like St. Mark's, in Venice, in the world. Its bulb shaped domes and minaret-like nind the visito ent. It seems more like a Mohammedan than a Christian temple. In the facade are scores of variously colored marble columns, each one a monolite and all possessing an eventful history. Some are from Ephesus, others from Smyrna, others from Constantinople and more than one even from Jerusalem. St. Mark's is the treasure house of Venice, a place of pride as well as prayer. The work of beautifying this old church was carried on for five centuries, and each generation tried to outdo all that had preceded it. The walls and roof are so profusely covered with mosaics and precious marbles that it is easy to undestand why St. Mark's has been called the "Church of Gold." Galilei and the Swinging Lamp. The boy Galilei, sitting with hundreds of others in the Cathedral of Pisa on a Sunday morning, saw an attendant draw aside the heavy hanging, lamp to light it and then let it swing. Many other eyes saw the same thing, but there was only that pair in Galilei's head which really observed what happened. He alone noticed that as the swings of the huge lamp became sonal's er and smaller they always took the same time. He proved it by counting them with his pulse. He had made a great discovery, out or which grew the pendulum clock and the sociarsto mers urement of time.

And poor old father said he was going to try to get a 'father's helper'-to make his task of being our father easy, just as mother does with her 'mother's helper.' So far he hasn't found anyone that wants the jeb."

"What would this 'father's helper' have to do?" asked Dick, rather amazed at the turn of Madeleine's conversation.

"Oh, I suppose he would have to help Bennet with his Greek and spank Arthur, and he'd have to come to meals and see that we were all there and maybe say grace, and sometimes just happen in the drawing room when Minerva's suitors were there. Minerva's the stunner, you know, and she has just oodles of suiters, and mether says that father sught to appear once in a while just to show that there is someone keeping track of how often they come. But father can't stand that sort of thing. And I suppose the 'facome. ther's helper' would have to scold me sometimes because I am so reckless when I ride-mother keeps at father to scold me for it, but he hates to; and he would have to scold the servants when mother couldn't manage them, and sometimes, if one of us girls didn't have an escort to a dance, I suppose the 'father's helper' would have to go with us. Father ought to, mether says, but he hates to."

"My Greek is a little rusty," an-nounced Dick, when Madeleine had finished her monologue, "but I think I'll take that position. You say your fahasn't found anyone for it. All ther right, I'll make tracks for your place tomorrow and by the time you have come home I'll be installed and perhaps one of the first things I can do will be to show father that it is to his interest to let his daughter Madeleine become Mrs. Dick Stoner."

When Madeleine reached home at the end of that week she found the young man whom her father had recently employed to be identical with let her go on this way wearing out my nerves. Can you think of any possible remedy-some way of calming the wild creature down a little? Mind you, I am very fond of Madeleine-very fond of her-but I can't let her go en in this way."

"I anticipated such a question," said Dick solemnly. "For that reason I studied the girl's nature. Again, par-don my frankness. I think that, young as Madeleine is, she would overcome her rather hoydenish ways if you permitted her to-to become engaged -possibly to contemplate a rather early marriage."

The professor studied the carpet for several minutes, then without looking at Dick, he said: "Yes, that might be just the thing. But Madeleine is not like Minerva. Minerva has some dozen of suitors-they quite drive me distracted. But Madeleine, poor child, no such charms and fascination as Minerva. Frankly, I do not think there is anyone who wants to marry her, and I am quite sure that she cares for no one."

It was here that Dick hesitated. He had not planned just what to say when he had led the professor up to this point, so he, too, studied the carpet for a full minute and then looked at the professor with embarrassment that he could not conceal.

"But if there were someone who did care for her devotedly and fer whom she cared in return-would you consent then?"

The professor was too much of a psychologist not to guess that the young man was speaking of himself. though perhaps in his present mood he could not conceive how a seemingly sane young man would choose to as sume the task of being Madeleine's husband.

"Mr. Stoner, my hand. Forgive me when I tell you that from the time I first saw you I realized that there was something in your nature that would find harmony in Madeleine's. My knowledge of psychology is not all theoretical, you see. And, in spite of

ZOUAVES WILL BE POPULAR

Idea Applied to Both Skirt and Jacket in Collection of Spring Models From Paris.

Possibly the most salient feature of the collection of models for spring brought over to New York from Paris is the prominence of the zouave idea. This does not apply only to the skirt, for the elongated jacket is a feature of the zouave dress, as is also the boundin hipline, and these features are all repeated and played upon in this collection.

While it may not seem that there is anything startlingly new in a dropped waistline, the manner in which the hips are bound, the jacket and the showing of the blouse section under the jacket is distinctive. It produces really another silhouette which, although narrow, is not straight and binds in around the hips.

DAINTY BOUDOIR CAP

Honesty of purpose is indeed rare gem and is admirable so long as exercised in the right direction. We should be honest in all our endeavors if we wish them crowned with success. The most successful business men will tell you of the three I's-Industry, Intelligence, Integrity. Added to this, economy, and one's business career will be a success, not a venture. We are prone to wonder if the very rich that we read about, but very seldom see, have acquired their wealth honestly and honorably. Are they really captains of industry or rogues of society? It is certainly beyond the calibre of most men to accumulate money to the million mark. They who have made this amount of money were gifted with brain power above the average and have used it with a purpose. As a reformer I may not agree with the methods by which they are permitted to accumu late money in this fashion, but if you should place yourself in their position you probably would not have the calibre to fill their shoes. Why then should we lesser mortals complain of the greater? What one man can do another man may not be endowed to do. We are all born equal in a sense to make the best of ourselves, but some are born stronger physically and mentally than others, and with fair sailing, cannot avoid getting rich. How they make their money and spend it is a matter of their own conscience. But that there are many who prosper for a time by dishonest methods we cannot deny, but we know their end is not good. Robert Burns has said that an honest man is the noblest work of God, and if we seek for ideals of perfection in man we must not look to the rich and crafty, who may have developed certain lines of their nature, at the expense of other and more important attributes of their soul, but to the honest men of Robert Burns' idea, who, while passing through this world have not set their hearts upon riches and the vanity of the world, but have stood fearlessly for the best and noblest traits of human character.

Foul Air And Disease

"Free as the air we breathe" is not applicable to foul air. Like most other commodities the later exacts a toll from everyone who uses it. Lowered vitality, with a consequent predisposition to such diseases as colds, pneumonia and tuberculosis is the price that is paid for breathing impure air. Sometimes you see a thing and you call it pretty or beautiful for lack of a word that would express the real exquisiteness and charm of the thing you were describing. This unusual boudoir is just that sort of thing. It has that Dutch effect, new this season, but which has been in vogue on and off for many years. The Venetian lace is held in place with a narrow pique blue ribhon.

Long Capes.

The long capes are shown in plush, in panne velvet and in various furs, and also heavily brocaded satin. Such models invariably have a tendency to the "tube" lines, so smart a season or two back. This line gives even the un-fortunately "heavy set" matron the slimmer appearance so dear to the heart of her, and this is bound to be more popular than is the voluminous folds of a very few capes daringly exhibited.

A novelty for smokers is a small metal matchbox to be clamped on the stem of a pipe.

ter months. This is the outstanding reasons for the marked prevalence of such diseases in Canada, diseases for which fresh air is the potent remedy, says "Conservation," Dominion government publication. Tightly closed rooms, constructed for the sole purpose of retaining heat, soon become filled with poisonous gasses, exhaled by the inmates. The remedy is, of course, better ventilation. It can be only a question of time when our governments insist that scientific ventilating systems be installed in all new buildings. Public health and public opinion will demand it. In older buildings, where the only ventilation is obtained from windows, the air may be "flushed" by opening the windows at intervals for a few moments. This means a loss of some heat, but if the windows are not left open too long, the saving in doctors' bills will more than offset. the extra cost of fuel.

ATTACKED BY ASTHMA. The first fearful sensation is of suffocation, which hour by hour becomes more desperate and hopeless. To such a case the relief afforded by Dr. J. D. Kellog's Asthma Remedy seems nothing less than miracu-lous. Its help is quickly apparent and soon the dreadful attack is mastered. The asthmatic who has found out the dependability of this sterling remedy will never be without it. It is sold everywhere. m
