

PROF. DAVIDSON, LATE OF U.N.B., DEAD IN EDINBURGH

Was Well Known in Canada and Elsewhere as an Author and Teacher—A Promising Career Cut Short—Scottish Papers Speak Very Highly of His Work.

Though the death of Dr. John Davidson, for ten years professor of Political Economy and Philosophy at the University of New Brunswick, occurred on the 31st of July in the Scottish hamlet where he has lately made his home, the first announcement which appeared on this side of the ocean was that published last evening.

When Professor Davidson obtained his first leave of absence from the provincial university it was known that his health was not good, but it was hoped that he would be strong again by the time he had completed the travels and researches that he had undertaken in Scotland and the Low Countries.

From time to time word came from Professor Davidson to his numerous friends here, showing that he was only making a strong fight for his life, but that he was engaged as a staff writer on philosophy and economics for the Edinburgh Encyclopaedia, and as a contributor to several publications.

When Dr. Davidson came to this province to take his first and only professorship he was only twenty-three years of age. In the inaugural address, which was his introduction to university life here, he touched on two controversial themes—protection and prohibition.

SIXTY-EIGHT NEW CASES OF FEVER.

Situation Does Not Look So Favorable.

Officials Contend That the Disease is Apparently Less Malignant Than at First.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 10.—The official record of the yellow fever situation up to 6 o'clock tonight is as follows: New cases today, 68; total cases to date, 747.

An exceedingly ugly type of infection was unearthed in St. Charles parish today by Dr. Corbett of the St. Charles hospital service. Two days ago he unearthed six cases of the diamond plantation, and today he found two more cases on that place, and eleven cases on the reserve plantation.

The City Council today authorized Mayor Derrien $50,000 to assist in meeting the present emergency. Ten thousand dollars is to be used in carrying on street cleaning work and $50,000 toward the fund asked by the government.

In order that no unnecessary risks of spreading yellow fever be taken, it was announced today by Surgeon White that the funeral of Archbishop Chappelle, on Saturday at 9 o'clock in the morning, would be private.

Reimbursement For Expenses Incurred in War and Cession of Sakhalin Island Asked For With Many Other Things—Absolutely Unacceptable.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 10.—Reimbursement for the expenses sustained in the prosecution of the war and the cession of the Island of Sakhalin constitute the main features of the peace conditions handed by Baron Komura to M. Witte at the conclusion of the morning session of the plenipotentiaries in the general stores building of the Portsmouth navy yard.

The Japanese plenipotentiaries manifested not the slightest annoyance at the prospect of a few days' delay. They realize how serious the issue is and are perfectly willing to give their Russian colleagues ample time for consideration.

ST. JOHN MAN BROTHER AND SISTER MEET AFTER 63 YEARS

MONCTON, N. B., Aug. 9.—After a lapse of sixty-three years, and after having lost all trace of each other for over half a century, William Starkey, a well known tank builder of Moncton, and Mary Donovan, his sister, met here few days ago.

MISSING WOMAN MAY BE NEW BRUNSWICKER

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 9.—The police have been working on the case of a woman who disappeared from Fairview a few days ago. They have reached the conclusion that it is not an infrequent thing for her to disappear, and without paying her board, and they are anxious to find her.

Story of Struggle Between Charlottetown and Light Co.

It Has Been Going On For Years and Was Temporarily Settled at a Public Meeting Held Last Evening.

(Special Correspondence of the Sun.) CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Aug. 8.—The citizens' meeting held in the Market Hall Tuesday night to consider the agreement made between the City Council and the Charlottetown Light and Power Company, Ltd., marks the close, for the present at least, of a long and more or less bitter quarrel between the people of Charlottetown and the company that controls the lighting of the city. Both citizens and shareholders have grown weary of the constant bickering, and it is not with regret that the opposing factions have agreed to live in peace for a term of years.

MANY KILLED IN COLLAPSE OF DEPARTMENT STORE. Albany, N. Y., Shocked at Results of Terrible Accident in That City—Men, Women and Children Meet Death.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 8.—The middle section of the big department store of the John G. Myers Company, on North Pearl street, collapsed today, carrying down with it over one hundred persons. Caught in a mass of brick, plaster and wooden beams, between 20 and 30 men, women and children met death in a multitude of horrible forms. Twelve hours' frantic work on the part of an army of rescuers disintegrated fifty people, six of them dead and many of the rest badly injured.

Doctor Brigham Says MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the disease known as leucorrhoea is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and restorer of health ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

DRIFTING AND SUNDAY FISHING.

Since the discovery of the salmon pools at Hart's Island there has been a great deal of talk and complaint from the local anglers about the process of "drifting" for salmon which is carried on by the country fishermen. The fishermen claim that this process is illegal, as of course it is. It also spoils their sport in the day time if all the fish are scooped out at night.

ANARCHISTS PUZZLE BOSTON POLICE.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—Hundreds of anarchists are flocking to Boston, and the north end is fairly alive with "reds." What their mission is the police and law-abiding Italians are unable to fathom. Stringent orders have been issued from police headquarters to arrest any anarchist found circulating the law-defying circular which is afloat in Boston.

The Wings of the Morning

By LOUIS TRACY

He snatched a rifle and lay down on the ledge, already gratefully warm. There was a good deal of sustenance about going on. Jenks took the role of the chief's voice giving instructions to those who had come from Saungger's cave and were now standing on the beach near the quarry. "I wonder if you are hungry," he thought. "If so, I will interfere with the commissariat." Iris peeped forth at him. "Mr. Jenks!"

The sailor's rifle vents off with an unexpected bang.

"How is it?" she asked, "that we feel the heat so much today? I had hardly noticed it before." "For two good reasons—forced idleness and radiation from this confounded rock. Moreover, this is the hottest day we have experienced on the island. There is not a breath of air, and the hot weather has just commenced."

AS A CONVALESCENT FOOD. Mr. Wymen N. Thomas, Omaha, Admiration Co., Ont., writes: "My wife had a congestion of the lungs along with other troubles, and became very weak and ran down. By the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food she was made as strong as well as ever."

The sign inspired Jenks with fresh hope. Like a lightning flash came the reflection that if he could keep the rifle away from the wily and cunning sampan men hastening to their assistance, perhaps conveying the bulk of their stores, they would soon tire of making their thrust on the few pitiful plants growing on the north shore.

"Come quickly!" he shouted, adjusting the back sight of a rifle. "Lie down and aim at the front of that boat, a little short if anything. It doesn't matter if the bullets strike the sea first."

He placed the weapon in readiness for her and commenced operations himself before Iris could reach his side. Soon both rifles were picking twenty shots a minute at the sampan. The result of their long range practice was not long in doubt. The Dyaks danced from seat to seat in a state of wild excitement. One man was hurled overboard. Then the craft lurched seaward in the strong current, and Jenks held Iris in his arms.

"That is a very beautiful sight, Mr. Jenks," she murmured. "You wish to humbug me?" he grumbled. "If you will take the first half I will take the second."

Angry holding forth a rifle, the sailor shouted: "Till Taung S'Al that I will slay him and all his men tomorrow's sun rises! He knows something of my power, but not all. Tonight at the twelfth hour you will find a rope hanging from the rock. There is a vessel of water. Fall not in this. I will not forget your services. I am Anstruther Sahib of the Belgaum regiment."

"She was on the verge of tears. The strain had become too great for her. After indulging in a wild dream of freedom, to be told that they must again endure the irksome confinement of the active suffering, the slow horrors of a siege that rocky prison, almost distracted her."

Jenks was very stern and curt in his reply. "We must make the best of a bad business," he said. "If we are in a tight place the Dyaks are not much better off, and eighteen of their number are dead or wounded. You forget, too, that Providence has sent us a most useful ally in the Mohammedan. When all is said and done, things might be far worse than they are."

Once already that day she had expressed this thought in other words. Was some shadowy design flitting through her brain? Suppose they were faced with the alternatives of dying from want or yielding to the Dyaks. There was another way out? Jenks shivered, though the rock was glowing hot. He must divert her mind from this dreadful brooding.

Jenks did not fire at the scurrying gang. He was waiting for one man, Taung S'Al. But that redoubtable person, having probably suggested this dash for liberty, had fully realized the evitable share of attention he would attract during the passage. He therefore discarded his attire and by borrowing odd garments made himself sufficiently like into the remainder of his crew to deceive the sailor until the rush of men was over.

At the conclusion of a not very ludicrous repast Jenks suggested that they should rig up the tarpaulin in such a way as to afford protection from the sun and yet enable him to cast a watchful eye over the valley. Iris helped to raise the great canvas sheet on the supports he had prepared. Once shut off from the devouring rays, the hot breeze then springing into fitful existence cooled their blistered but perspiring skin and made life somewhat tolerable.

As aught compared with the relaxation from the torments previously borne. For a long time—the best part of an hour, perhaps—they remained silent. The sailor was reviewing the pros and cons of their precarious condition. It was, of course, but a matter of supreme importance with the Indian to be faithful to his promise. Here the prospect was decidedly hopeful. The man was an old soldier, and the ex-officer of native cavalry knew how enduring was the attachment of his poor country to home and military service.

She walked along the ledge and timidly bent over him. "Forgive me!" she whispered. "I did forget for the moment not only the goodness of Providence, but also your self-sacrificing devotion. I am only a woman, and I don't want to die, yet I will not live unless you, too, are saved."

He shook restlessly, not aware that the girl's sorrowful glance, luminous with love and pain, was fixed upon him. Summarily dismissing the exact phantoms of the mind, he smiled himself what the Mohammedan exactly meant by warning him against the trees on the right and the "silent deadly" that might come from them. He was about to answer when he saw the rock and investigated the matters in that locality when Iris, who also was busy with her thoughts, restrained him.

"Wait a little while," she said. "None of the Dyaks will venture into the open until night falls. And I have something to say to a quiet solemnity in her voice that Jenks had never heard before. It chilled him. His heart acknowledged a quick sense of evil omen. He raised himself slightly and turned toward her. Her face, beautiful and serene beneath its disguises, wore an expression of settled purpose. The life of him he dared not question her.

"That man, the interpreter," she said, "told you that if I were given up to the chief he and his followers would go for dear life to pick up any money they could find. They are unscrupulous and will do anything for a good thing. Don't you understand what it means to you—and to me? It is a ruse to trap us. They are unscrupulous savages. Once they had you in their power they would laugh at a promise made to you."

That had gone before an idle dream of joy and grief, a wizard's glimpse of mirrored happiness and vague perils? Was Iris, the crystal souled, thrown to him by the storm lashed wave, to be snatched away by some irresistible and malign influence?

In the mere physical effort to assure himself that she was still near to him he gathered her up in his strong hands. Yes, she was there, breathing, wondering, pallid. He folded her closely to his breast and, yielding to the passionate longings of his tired heart, whispered to her: "My darling, do you think I can survive your loss? You are life itself to me. If we have to die, sweet one, let us die together."

"Oh, it is true, quite true," she cried, drawing the lock from her neck. "Don't you recognize your own handwriting, or were you not certain, just then, that you really did love me?" "Dear, dear! How often would she repeat that wondrous phrase. How often they beat over the tiny slips of paper. There it was again, "I love you," twice blazoned in magic symbols. With blushing eagerness she told him how, by mere accident, of course, she caught sight of her own name. It was not very wrong, was it, to pick up any tiny scrap or scraps of others, which could not help seeing and which unfolded their simple tale so truthfully? Wrong! It was so delightfully right that he must kiss her again to emphasize his convictions.

"You must be mad to even dream of such a thing. Don't you understand what it means to you—and to me? It is a ruse to trap us. They are unscrupulous savages. Once they had you in their power they would laugh at a promise made to you."

"It is not the warm clothing you feel so much as the want of air," explained the sailor readily. "This tarpaulin has made the place very stuffy, but we must put up with it until sundown. By the way, what is that?" "A light tap on the tarred canvas directly over his head had caught his ear. Iris, glad of the diversion, told him she had heard the noise three or four times, but fancied it was caused by the occasional rustling of the sheet on the uprights."

The belligerents surveyed each other.

At the conclusion of a not very ludicrous repast Jenks suggested that they should rig up the tarpaulin in such a way as to afford protection from the sun and yet enable him to cast a watchful eye over the valley. Iris helped to raise the great canvas sheet on the supports he had prepared. TRAGEDY BACK.

OF A PERSONAL ADVERTISEMENT.

Man Puts Notice in Montreal Paper For His Wife and Then Shoots Himself.

About two o'clock yesterday afternoon a medium sized young man presented the following personal advertisement at the front counter of the Montreal Star business office:

PERSONAL. My wife H. Jack is in General Hospital, shot. See him at once. Melvin Hill.

After paying for it without any show of nervousness, he proceeded to make the words of the advertisement come true.

He is a patient in the hospital now, and he told the police lieutenant that his death was caused by a disappointment in marriage.

That he loves his wife dearly seems to be proven by the fact that before he was admitted to the hospital, he became delirious and in his ravings he constantly called for her.

From what the people in the house tell, Hill and his wife, who is a very pretty woman, lived very happily together apparently up to about a month ago.

Three weeks or so ago he confided to his landlady that his matrimonial troubles were getting so heavy that he was thinking of committing suicide.

ROBERT FULTON ON VISIT TO BOSTON.

Tells How the Paris Crew Used to Win Races.

He and John McKelvey Met and Entertained by a Number of Old St. John Men.

When the St. John boat docked at Commercial wharf yesterday, among the passengers was a broad-shouldered man, about six feet in height, who wore it not for the silver tinge of his hair and beard, would readily pass for 40 years of age.

He was Robert Fulton, stroke oar of the famous Paris crew of St. John, N. B., which was in its day the undisputed champion four-oared crew of the world.

Mr. Fulton was accompanied by John McKelvey, a Canadian customs official on the steamer Calvin Austin, and they were taken in tow by John Gorman of 69 Hanover street, this city, and Richard J. White and John A. White, all old St. John men, Richard White having been a member of the Lynn city government five years.

After looking the city over, the party called at the Globe office, where Mr. Fulton talked roving, becoming especially enthusiastic when the merits of the sliding seat were discussed.

Mr. Fulton, like many veteran rowers of the spruce, believed that the stationary seats were all that could be desired for speed and staying qualities in a crew.

As a basis for his opinion he said the crew gave the movable seat a square test and then abandoned it altogether. He was positive, and events proved it, he said, that the greased patch, which eventually brought about the movable seat, was not productive of additional speed.

He cited the case of the English crews defeated by the St. John men. "The English crew, especially the one in which Renforth rowed, were firm believers in bumping it through," he said, which meant bumping more or less than submerging the forward part of the boat when power was applied and depending on the running between strokes.

"To my mind the trouble with the movable seat lays in the fact that a man cannot get the weight and power on a stroke while in that cramped position, whereas with the legs out and well braced, the weight of the body is more productive of speed."

"It may be that I am wrong, as many of my younger rowing friends like Mr. McKelvey, would have me believe, but I speak from experience."

"We had much to contend with in those days, for we rarely took more than a few days for training, while many of the other crews devoted their whole time to it. When we went to Europe we had two weeks' rowing at South Hampton for the Paris race, which was a long period for us."

"On the other side we were astonished to find the other crews of the fine racing shells, while we rowed in the 'Sheriff Harding,' which weighed over 300 pounds. We rowed in two crews, one to rowed on the gunwale and the other on the other side, and we won both handsly and got the gold medals, something we never more than once."

AMHERST, N. S.

AMHERST, Aug. 11.—Mr. and Mrs. John Hunt of St. John were here for the Rob-Steele wedding this week.

Miss Margaret Purdy, a nurse at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, is now in town for a few months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Purdy, Victoria street.

Mrs. Tweedie, widow of the late Rev. James Tweedie, for some years stationed in Cape Breton, is now in town visiting her native place. She is the guest of her niece, Miss Alice Smith, Haylock street.

The Methodist Sunday school, with the teachers and members of the congregation, held their annual picnic in Pugueley's grove on Wednesday afternoon. The day was perfect and the location delightful.

Mr. and Mrs. Middlemas of Berwick are guests of their daughter, Mrs. Clifford L. Martin, Rupert street.

After some weeks' confinement in a severe attack of rheumatism, Mr. C. Temple of the Bank of Montreal left this week for his home in Toronto, where he will be fully restored to health.

The English Moffat of Halifax and brother, Robert B. Moffat of Ottawa, who have been rusticated in Pugueley's grove for the past two weeks, left on Thursday to spend the remainder of their vacation in Cape Breton, sailing on the Bras d'Or lakes.

Miss Clara Tweedie is visiting her friend, Mrs. C. A. Lushy, Victoria street.

Mrs. Hodgson and children of North Bay, Ont., are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Moffat, at their summer cottage, Tidnish.

Robert Chebbuck, who has been spending two weeks' holidays in town with his mother and grandmother, Mrs. Chebbuck, left on Friday on his return to Boston.

her nose, in the water. We never believed in carrying the boat by bumps as the Englishmen did, and if you claim for the sliding seat has made it easy for the novice to scull without settling the bow, then you have made some advancement over the English crew, but not over our style, for we had mastered the problem early in our career.

"There never was a perfect crew, and ours was no exception to the rule, for one of our men was always entering his blade in a manner that made the boat settle on his side, and no matter what we did for him it was the same old story."

"We used to go out when the conditions were right, and before we would take the rudder off and row six miles at racing speed. There was not such thing as throwing the rudder in favor of the oars, for our style, for we were learned to keep a good count, and each man had to hold his end up."

Notwithstanding the fog, which set in about supper time, a large crowd assembled on the grounds. The rectory lawn looked extremely pretty in its decorations of ships' flags and Japanese lanterns.

The flower, candy and fancy tables attracted much attention and patronage. The main feature of the afternoon was a Japanese table, originated and managed by Mrs. Randall of New York, where she and her assistants in Japanese costumes sold cups of tea. The services of the Misses R. McCully were engaged for the music of the afternoon and evening. The proceeds of the party amounted to $236.

ANOTHER SEARCH FOR POLE FAILS.

Members of Fial-Ziegler Expedition Rescued—Ship Crushed in Ice and Most of Her Supplies Lost.

HONNINGSTAAG, Norway, Aug. 10.—The Arctic steamer Torconra which went to the relief of the Fial-Ziegler Polar expedition has rescued Anthony Fial and the others connected with the expedition with the exception of one Norwegian sailor who died from natural causes. The ship America which took out the expedition was crushed in the ice early in the winter of 1904 and lost with a large part of her coal and provisions.

THE TWO GRAND FALLS POWER COMPANIES Will Have to Fight Out Who Owns the Land and Water Rights.

When the Grand Falls Power Company incorporated recently under provincial laws, it was intended to spend that eleven million dollars in development work there is a strong possibility of legal complications arising. The other Grand Falls Power Company, which is incorporated in Ontario, claims the land and Grand Falls, and has no intention of giving them up. This company, of which Sir William Van Horne is the head, has never yet done anything in the way of development.

PHYSICALLY EXHAUSTED.

Lacking in courage—out of joint with everything—scarcely on speaking terms with even fair health. Such low spirits are pitiable. Your brain is fagged, vitality so exhausted, your constitution is well nigh ruined. What you need is Ferrozone, that great vitalizer and nutritive tonic. It's by making fresh red blood, by infusing iron and oxygen into the system that Ferrozone helps; it repairs worn-out organs, insists new life into worn-out organs—makes you feel like new. Ferrozone lifts you from the old and imparts resilience and buoyancy to the dejected. Be manly, be successful, be carefree, take weakness and enter the happy life that comes from using Ferrozone. Fifty cents buys a box in any drug store.
