Rush to Pekin With No Rest

Order Given to the Forces of the Allies.

A Correspondent's Account of the Recent Fighting-Position of Pekin Legationers Reported as "Desperate"-In Daily Danger of Massacre-Poisoned Flowers Sent to Chinese Minister Yu Keng in Paris.

New York, Aug. 14.-Cabling to the been received at the war department World, Frederick Palmer sends a dispatch dated from the headquarters of yesterday.' the allied troops in the field. Tai Tsung, China, Aug. 8, via Shanghai, Aug. 15, which says: The general advance of the allied troops began this (Wednesday) morning. The order is to rush to Pekin with no rest.

We probably shall arrive at the gates of the Chinese capital in seven days, reaching there next Wednesday.

THE ENEMY IS DEMORALIZED. The Chinese are reported to have retreated straight to Pekin, after having been unexpectedly driven out of Yang Tsun on Monday. Yang Tsun was captured by the Americans under Gen. Chaffee. They led the allies in the forced march from Peitsang and attacked before the natives had recovered from the effects of their signal defeat of the day before.

A BAD BLUNDER. The United States regulars made a dash when they found the enemy and soon were masters of the position. But just there a most distressing thing hapbened. The Americans had done their work so quickly and thoroughly that they were in the Chinese trenches be-FOR SALE OR RENT—COAL AND WOOD Plant. A rare chance. THE PEKIN LEGATIONS. London, Aug. 14, 3:50 a.m.-The British consulate, says the Daily graph's correspondent at Tien Tsin, has received the following message, dated Aug. 6, from Sir Claude Macdonald, British minister in Pekin: "Our situation here is desperate. In ten days our food supply will be at an end. Unless we are relieved a general massacre is probable. The Chinese offer to escort us to Tien Tsin; but remembering Cawnpore, we refuse the offer. There are over two hundred European women and children in this legation.' NEAR PEKIN. The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express, wiring yesterday, says: "The allies at noon yesterday were "Gen. Chaffee's report, which is the within 20 miles of Pekin. only authentic news received here regarding the advance, located the international forces about 40 miles from Pekin on Friday. It seems probable that this Shanghai report is optimistic. It is scarcely likely that the allies could advance 20 miles in as many hours.

THE YANG TSU FIGHT. A Yang Tsu dispatch, dated Aug. 7, giving details regarding the capture of the place, says: "The Russians and French held the left, the British the left center, the Americans the right center and the Japanese the extreme right. The British and Americans advanced at a rapid rate for 5,000 yards under a severe shell and rifle fire. The Russian and the British-American advance became a race for positions, culminating in a brilliant charge. The heaviest loss of the day was sustained by the Americans, the 14th Infantry having nine killed, 62 wounded and several missing. The Bengal lancers unsuccessfully attempted to cut off the Chinese retreat." SENT POISONED FLOWERS TO

CHINESE MINISTER. New York, Aug. 13.-A special cable dispatch from Paris to the Evening Telegram today says:

An artful attempt at poisoning by the use of perfumes, which recalls memories of Lucretia Borgia, is exciting all the gossips of Paris.
Thursday, the Chinese minister, Yu Keng, received a letter. It was signed "Julia Czerwinska," and contained some dried flowers, which the writer asked the minister to accept. The secretary to the legation, Armani di Parma, opened the letter and was immediately overcome deadly odor emanating from the flowers. He fell in a faint. His recovery was accompanied by violent sickness and vomiting. In fact, his condition presented many characteristics of poisoning, and only by prompt treatment was he relieved. Mlle Czerwinska has been arrested. She appears to be mentally deranged. The flowers are being chemically analyzed.

RUSSIAN BRUTALITY. London, Aug. 13.-The Daily Mail's St. Petersburg correspondent declares that the taking of Aguin has sealed the fate of the rising in Northeastern Manchuria. He adds: "No prisoners were taken by the Russians. Wholesale massacre was the order of the day; and, when the battle was over, the Cossacks rode over the field, killing the wounded with the butt-ends of their muskets."

HALF-WAY TO PEKIN. Washington, Aug. 13.—A dispatch has which says: "Arrived at Hos Pi Wu [This place spelled Ho Si Wu on the war department maps, is about half-way between Tien Tsin and Pekin.]

from Gen. Chaffee, dated Aug. 10,

AT HO SI WU ON THURSDAY. Washington, D. C., Aug. 13.-The American commander in China, in a dispatch of just three words, received at the war department late this afternoon, sent a thrill of exultation and expectancy throughout official quarters by announcing his arrival at Ho Si Wu, only 33 miles from Pekin, last Thurs-The last heard from him before this was at Yang Tsun, which had been captured after a hard fight. On Thursday he was eighteen miles beyond Yang Tsun. Lang Fang, the place where the ill-fated Seymour expedition met its fate and turned back, had been left behind. The battle of Yang Tsun was fought on the 6th, and the advance on Ho Si Wu was accomplished on the 9th, a march of eighteen miles in three WITHIN STRIKING DISTANCE. This was four days ago, and at the same rate of progress Chaffee is even now fairly within striking distance of the walls of Pekin. At the rate of progress, six miles a day, made from Yang Tsun to Ho Si Wu, about 24 miles would have been covered in the last four days, and up to today this would leave the international forces nine miles from Pekin. Viewed from any standpint, the advance to Ho Si Wu was of the utmost importance, not only strate-gically, but also in showing that communication was open back to Che Foo, that the expected opposition from Chinese hordes had not been sufficient to prevent the steady forward movement, and in the influence it would exert upon the Chinese government.

Ho Si Wu is a place of considerable size, and the largest town between Tien Tsin and Ching Chia Wan. The latter place and Tung Chow are the two cities of considerable size in the line of advance after leaving Ho Si Wu.

REPLY TO CHINA'S OVERTURES. The reply of the United States government to China's overtures of peace was made public early in the day, showing the firm and final position that had been taken. Exchanges be-tween the various powers have been going on constantly, and the officials have the satisfaction of knowing that of the same date, says: the position of the United States nas the approval and support of all the great power's.

The British Government, according a Shanghai correspondent of the Times, has offered to lend £75,000, at 4½ per cent, to the viceroy of Wu Chang, province of Hu Pe, on the Yang Tse Kiang, for the payment of provincial troops. The opinion is expressed in Japanese circles that Russia's occupation of New Chwang justifies the dispatch of British troops to Shanghai. It is believed that other powers will be driven to take similar measures in other parts of China. The drain of China and South Africa upon England's stores is so great that every private firm has been enlisted to help the government's effort to restore the reserve, which is much below par.

All the great ammunition firms are working night and day in their efforts to meet the Government's wishes. LORD ROBERTS.

London, Aug. 14.-People are now beginning to talk seriously about the return of Lord Roberts to England. It is thought that before autumn closes, unless unforeseen circumstances occur, he will be back with a large number of the troops now engaged in South Africa. The general talk is how the nation will show its appreciation of the veteran commander-in-chief. Already a movement is on foot to present him with a sword of honor and something more from the citizens of London. But there will be no end of swords of hon-or when the officers who have distinguished themselves most come back to England. From private letters which have been received from officers at the front, it is generally expected among those who ought to know best that the return of troops will not be delayed much longer. Many of these officers, in writing, are instructing their friends to stop the supplies of small luxuries, . which is an obvious sign that they consider the stores they have to be sufficient for their needs as long as they

A letter was received at the militia department from Lieut.-Col. Otter. It dealt with the week ending July 6. The strength of the regiment at that time was 433. The colonel, referring to complaints in parliament about his not reporting more frequently as to the sick and wounded, says that he had done his best in this matter, while at the same time endeavoring not to give any unnecessary alarm to friends and relations. He says he took the trouble to write Clarke Wallace about his son.

SCORES BURDETT-COUTTS.

Quebec, Aug. 13 .- Surgeon Lieut .- Col. G. Sterling Ryerson, Canadian and British Red Cross commissioner in South Africa, arrived in Quebec unexpectedly last night by the steamship Corinthian, from Liverpool. He said the work of the different branches of the society in South Africa did a great deal of good. He said to a reporter:
"Mr. Burdett-Coutts was with me at the Bloemfontein hospital, and during the whole time he made no complaint whatever. He knew that if he had made such a complaint I had unlimited resources at my command, and could have easily remedied any deficiencies, had they existed. He seemed perfectly satisfied with the arrangements made, and he reserved his charges until he was 7,000 or 8,000 miles away from the officials who could be injured by his utterly unwarranted statements. Of course, one cannot ex-pect a war hospital to be on the same cooting as a peace hospital. Under the circumstances and the difficulties of transportation, the care given the wounded and sick was admirable. No one was neglected, and I heard no complaints whatever. While in London I appeared before the commission of inquiry, presided over by Sir Richard Romar, and gave my evidence in the case. When I arrived on the field of Paardeberg there were hundreds of houses and mules-lying dead, the Boer leager was being looted by Kaffirs, and in the field hospital there were 250 wounded Boers, besides the British wounded, who were also very numerous. I immediately began making arrangements for transporting the wounded to Kimberley, where they could be properly cared for, but I was hampered in my work by the fact that few mules were available. Ordinarily the ambulance wagons were drawn by mules, but these animals had been used for transport purposes, and all that was for transport purposes, and all that was left for us were ox wagons. The heat was frightful, and that journey took two days; hence it was not surprising that on the road many of the poor fellows who had been hit died of their wounds. It was unfortunate that we could not provide better accommodation, but it was an impossibility." Surgeon Ryerson, in his capacity as Canadian Red Cross commissioner, was intimately connected with the officers in command, and especially after his appointment as British commissioner at Lord Roberts' heaquar-ters. He suffered from a slight attack of veldt fever while in Kimberley, but he soon recovered, and now is in the

TRADE IN CANADA

Compares Well With the Movement in Former Years.

Bradstreet's Trade Review: Trade at Montreal the past week has been quiet, but compares well with movement in former years at this season, which is never an active one. It is reported that they are shipping goods freely from Dawson, and as there are no United States officers on the boundary they do not have to pay duty. Owingsville, Ky., Aug. 14. — After coming to blows with Levi Goodpastor over a discussion of a fight he had had a month ago with another man, Edgar Connor shot and killed Goodpastor. OF HORRORS Related by One Who Has Been Traveling in India.

New York, Aug. 14.—That famine still stalks abroad in India, despite the falling of rain, is vouched for by all travelers returning from the stricken land. Help is still needed, and immediate help at that. The principal agency for the receiving and distributing of money for the sufferers, the Christian Herald, is in receipt of some $3,000 a day, and is forwarding the cash as fast as it is received. Much more money is needed to save the breadless ones from death and to take care of the half million helpless orphans left by parents who have already perished.

Dr. Louis Klopsch, proprietor of the Christian Herald, who recently returned from India, gives a chapter from his experiences there. The last place visit-ed by the doctor before his return home was Baroda, a city of 110,000 inhabitants, and the capital of a native state of that name. Arriving there early in the morning, he visited the palace of the Gaekwar, and admired its magnifi-cent architecture and sumptuous fur-nishings. With his companion he then went to the poorhouse.

"In due time," continued Dr. Klopsch,
"we reached the antithesis of the Gaekwar's palace. I had become accustomed to sights nauseating and re-volting, but the Baroda poorhouse stands out as the most terrible conglomeration of abject misery that ever met my gaze. Almost stifled and stupefied, we wended our way through the dead and the dying, with small-pox, dysentery, fever and cholera to the right and to the left, leaving ter-ror behind us, only to find hor-ror behind us, only to find horror awaiting us.

"At the entrance to the poorhouse stood a woman, blind. Reduced to a living skeleton, the balls of her eyes were actually decaying in the sockets of her ghastly skull, and flies innumerable were acting the part of scaven-gers undisturbed. Her claw-like hands inactively hung down her sides until she heard our footsteps. Then they were raised appealingly in the direction of the sound, while she mumbled almost inaudibly her plaintive petition. I quickly got beyond her reach, and then, as I supposed, unobserved, placed a rupee in her hand. In another instant a dozen other miserable remnants of humanity pressed forward, pleading vociferously for help. Just the attendant appeared and.

"I entered the first of many wards, separated from one another by a bam-boo partition. It was full of patients, suffering from every manner of ailment. Cholera, dysentery and guinea worm predominated. On some cots the unfortunates were doubled up. The temperature was appallingly high. The air was laden with an odor superlatively offensive. The cots were defiled,

'We were anxious to get away, but it occurred to us that thus far no children had been in evidence. So we made inquiry concerning them, and learned that they were kept in what is termed the kitchen.

"In a bamboo inclosure, under the supervision of a fat, turbaned Hindu, sat 300 skeletomized diminutive creatures, mostly naked, all sickly and miserable, and many of them totally blind. Millions of flies gorged themselves on festering sores, and on eyes sealed with nauseating exudations. Never have I seen anything approximating in abject misery and utter destitution this gathering of innocents. Not a cry escaped their lips. With the exception of the blinking of the eyelids there was no indication of life. "The sanitary conveniences and the kitchen were one. We entered and cautiously advanced, step by step, zigzag fashion, in our efforts to escape pollution. The whole concern seemed dazed. We ourselves were dazed. Death seemed to be encircling the Baroda kitchen and all it contained.

"Suddenly there was a stir. men bearing a can of milk appeared in front of the Baroda tent. The children became animated. The Hindu revived. He came over to where we were standing and informed us that milk was to be given to the feebler children. As soon as some of the tin cups were filled the children scrambled for them. There was not enough for more than a fourth of the number, and the more vigorous ones got what there was. The feebler ones went without it.

'We asked the Hindu how many of the little ones died daily. He professed ignorance, but volunteered the information that their bodies were burn-

"We crossed the square that led to the gate. But before we reached it we were surrounded by groups of starving people piteously pleading for a few pice with which to purchase grain. Tears actually trickled down the cheeks of many of the supplicants as they held up to our gaze their emactated, shriveled little ones. "Children prostrated themselves to the ground, chattering in a strange tongue, and with frightful rapidity of utterance the story of their woes. 'Oh, my king,' cried they, 'it will be very well with you if you will help us, for we are very, very hungry.' And, driven to despair at the thought that their appeal perhaps lacked eloquence or earnestness, they slapped their hollow stomachs and persuasively added: 'I'm starving. If you will help me God will give you many children."

"I verily believe that not one of the twelve hundred who were in the Baroda poorhouse that morning ever came out alive. It was a veritable dead house, and those who once en-tered seemed hopelessly doomed."

FORESTS GREAT MONEY MAKERS

Says Gen. Andrews in an Address to the Minnesota Teachers' Summer School-Interesting Facts Regarding the Raising of Trees for Profit.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 13.—General Andrews, in his talk before the teachers' summer school at the State University on Tuesday morning spoke in part as follows:

"Forestry is the science of raising crops of trees for profit, and especially concerns us because the pine-the favorite tree of commerce-has its home in our state. Coniferous forest such as the pine takes from the soil only a twelfth part of the mineral substance required for field crops. It will flourish on soil that is too hilly, too rocky, or too sandy for field culture.

"There are in scattered localities, and mostly in Northern Minnesota, an aggregate of 3,000,000 acres of such land, which is now useless and yearly growing poorer, and which should be put and kept in forest by the state. The average annual growth of pine on sandy soil in the state forests of Saxony is 223 feet board measure per acre. There are 430,000 acres of such forest, and consequently the annual average growth in the whole forest is 96,000,000 feet, which amount of mature trees could annually be cut and leave the capital unimpaired. The average growth in this country is about the same "The leading principles of forestry ore these: Forest should occupy only non-agricultural land; should be ereated as inviolable capital, and no more harvested in a year than equals the increment the same period; when young should be crowded to promote height growth; the cutting should be done so as to promote natural regeneration by seed from neighboring trees. "Forestry is business, and its aim is to get the best continuous revenue from capital. The pine does its fastest growing the first eighty years of its life. Then, as a rule, it has reached its fiscal age and should be marketed. "Suppose we owned a tract of virgin or natural forest," continued General Andrews, "according to forestry we should at the earliest moment put it in such a condition that it will by its growth be earning good interest on the capital it represents. Probably most of the trees are mature. They have ceased to earn interest, are dead capital, and should be sold and cut as soon reeking with filth, "No attempt was made at treatment. I called for the physician. There mature. If a young growth has not started in the midst of the mature trees or does not start soon after the mature trees are cut, then the ground should be replanted or sown.' General Andrews then spoke of the legal phases of the science: "The national government still holds considerable pine forest in this state, which is rapidly falling into private hands in two ways, both illegitimate. If one can find just where a valuable tract of pine is by his own efforts or by hiring a cruiser to hunt it up for him, he can buy it at $2 50 an acre. It may be worth $25 or $50 an acre. Also, much pine has for many years been, and is still being, acquired by individuals under the homestead law, the settler making oath before getting title that he takes the land for cultivation and not for purposes of speculation. When pine lands are thus ob-

Ch nese in South Clarke Street Use Paper Sheets to Take Place of Joss Sticks.

[Chicago Tribune.]

An evangelist who works in South Clark street received a shock while doing missionary work among the Chinese residents recently. He found that to prevent possible harm the Chinese gods have been taken away from the local temple, and as a result the "joss sticks" which were burnt before them as prayers have had to be abandoned. This has not, however, left the "wily Chinese" without a method of approaching his deity which is equally labor

Visiting one of the basements the missionary found a Chinaman whom he had attempted to convert lying in his bunk. The missionary noticed a pad of paper marked with Chinese characters hanging on the wall. It had not been there on previous occasions, and so he asked the reason for its presence. The Celestial replied that it was a prayer-book, and explained that he tore off a leaf every time he wanted to pray to the joss. The "foreign devil" was shocked and explained the impiety to his listener. The Chinese heard him through and then placidly explained that is was "allee light," the prayers were first-class in every particular, and much better than he could compose himself. Besides the joss could read them. He added that the queer books came direct from Pekin, and that they were orthodox enough, as the Chinese government allowed none other than this particular brand to be issued. The missionary

The Case for China.

Mr. G. B. Smyth, president of the Anglo-Chinese College, Foo Chow, discusses in the August number of the North American Review, "Causes of Anti-Fereign Feeling in China," and while the writer is in full sympathy with civilization and Christianity, he enters into the Chinese side of the case In an impartial manner. "Western infustice towards the East is the cause when we were moved by the purest, making ourselves welcome. Through ignorance, or zeal, or the coincidence of unhappy accidents, our very benevolence has itself been misunderstood, and offensive." According to this authority, "the Boxers" did not at first show any hostility to native Christians, tzation was not in the first instance directed against them.

What, then, changed this society into a bloodthirsty, anti-foreign organization? The reasons he finds in the recent history of Shan Tung, which up to the fall of 1897 had enjoyed an excellent reputation for its treatment of foreigners and native Christians. On Nov. 1 of that year there was a riot, in which two German Catholic missionar-1es were brutally murdered, 'and Germany promptly seized upon the crime as a pretext for what it had long contemplated, the seizure of a portion of territory." I only desire to say, in order to prevent misconception, that that is the last thing I should be prepared to advocate. Therefore, when I expressed the hope that there might be a closer commercial union between ourselves and the colonial empire. I had not in and the colonial empire, I had not in my mind the imposition of duties. I venture to hope that by discussion between ourselves and the representatives of our colonial empire we may conceive a method by which trade between this tween this country and our various colonles can be encouraged without the imposition of a 5 per cent duty. We should discuss these matters between ourselves; but I think I said in the course of my speech that I supported and supported strongly, the fundamental principles of free trade." (Cheers.)

THE RUSSIAN SECRET SERVICE

Some Outcroppings of Its Presence in This Country in Past Years.

New Orleans Times-Democrat. "The Russian secret police have always been popular stock characters in sensational novels," said a man who generally knows what he is talking about, "but, of course, the average reader has his private doubts about such people really existing. That, let me inform you, is where the average reader is mistaken. During the reign pretty quiet in Russia; but before that time, when Nihilism was rampant and refugees were coming here by the shipload, the Imperial Government had a small army of spies all over the world to keep track of the movements selves with the suspects, pretend sympathy with the cause, and post the officials as to any mischief that might be hatching abroad. Plenty of the exciting work has gone on right under our noses in this very city.

I was astonished, and he told me, in much agitation, that the day was the anniversary of the death of his brother and that he had been trying in vain all morning to control himself. The brother was hanged at St. Petersburg for complicity in the assassination of the Czar. Once the ice was broken, the litle man made me to some extent his confidant, and I learned many curious things about the Nihilist refugees. He was the son of a Russian gentleman of wealth, but, like most children of the upper classes, had been taught a trade. Consequently he had watchmaking to fall back on when he was forced to fly with many other revolutionists, after the Czar was "However, to get back to the Secret

One day a new exile turned up in the person of a young man who claimed to have been run out of Moscow as a suspect. He was not a member of the order, but he professed warm sympathy for it and was gradually accepted as a comrade by the others. I used to hear a great deal about him from the little watchmaker, who was naturally generous and un-suspicious and had been impressed by months. Then one night, my friend still living in New Orleans."

the Nihilist came to me in great excitement and told me the new recruit was a Russian spy. I couldn't believe it; it sounded too melodramatic; but he showed me a letter that was convincing. It came from a reliable correspondent in Germany, inclosed the fellow's photograph and gave his complete record. He was a secret agent of some note. Luckily he hadn't been taken into full confidence, so he had learned nothing worth telling, and, while the others were debating what to do with him he suddenly took the alarm and decamped between suns. Had he remained, he would undoubtedly have met with an accident, and I suppose I would have been an accessory before the fact. That was one case that came under my personal observation. On another occasion a Russian spy came here to locate a couple of the present Czar things have been of Nihilists who had been journalists in St. Petersburg. He found one of them working in a shoe shop, disclosed his identity frankly and told refugee to be perfectly tranquil. and told the said he was sending in fake reports to the government simply to of exiled revolutionary leaders. The proposition was politely declined. I saw the fellow's papers and credentials myself; they were undoubtedly genu-

It had a most dramatic denouement. A man who had betrayed several of his comrades in Russia came to this country for safety, and, if I remember rightly, first settled in Mobile. was known to the brotherhood, which simply ignored him, and, as a matter of fact, he was in no danger whatever, but the villain was tormented by the fear of retribution and the idea finally developed into an absolute mania. He left Mobile and went from one place to another, occasionally appealing to for protection and finally the police landed at Galveston. I heard of the through the newspapers and case asked my friend confidentially whether the man was really apt to be molested. 'Not in the least,' he replied, 'we ean't afford to get into trouble over him, and, besides, we feel safe in leaving him to his conscience. As events proved they were quiet right. The badgered, phantom-haunted wretch crept into the corner of a vacant lot and shot himself through the heart. So you see there is a good deal of unsuspected drama and tragedy beneath the prosaic surface of everyday life, and if we knew only a fraction of what is going on all around us I dare say we would lose our taste for the theater and the novel. I speak somewhat freely of these experiences because my little friend the watchmaker has been dead these half a dozen years, poor fellow, his zeal and enthusiasm. Local Market.

London, Tuesday, Aug. 14.

No unusual features ruffied the lethargic repose on the market square this morning. It was sparsely covered with rigs, each one containing its quota of offerings to satisfy the requirement of the city. It is seldom that Tuesday is anything but a day for vegetables and other small stuff, and today the market was in no way other than commonplace. Supplies in all lines were abundant for the immediate demand, which was very slow, and quotations were not the price of butter.

THE PRISONER

Evidence of Dr. Williams, Who Assisted at the Post-Mortem.

States That Apoplexy Might Have Caused Joseph Sifton to Fall.

Belleves Injuries Received Would Be More Naturally From a Fall Thin a Blow.

No Indication of a Blow From a Metal Instrument.

Some Important Evidence Brought Out During Mr. Hellmuth's Cross Examination.

The Sifton preliminary examination reopened at 10:30 this morning, with a large crowd of spectators in atten-

Dr. Williams testified that in comhe had performed the post-mortem examination upon the body of Joseph Sifton on July 25. All the injuries were it. Another near the median line was faultless holding down of first base for about one inch in length. Under the the Stars. Score larger wound there were fractures of the skull in three directions-one up, one down and one forward. Two smaller fractures extended from one of these, and inside the skull there were two fractures. The wounds found were sufficient in witness' opinion to cause death in the majority of cases. No other cause of death was found, though there might possibly have been other causes of death, but they could not be found owing to decomposition. Back of the ears the scalp was lifted, with gas underneath, but whether due to a blow or natural causes witness could not say. The scalp was lifted for a diameter of 41/2x51/2 inches. The injuries were compatible with either the effect of a blow or a fall. There were at least two impacts, perhaps with the same object, but apparently at two different times or planes. There might have been more, but could not tell, owing to decomposition. To Mr. Hellmuth, witness said that the post-mortem report put in was a joint report of the three doctors, being opinions. The vital organs appeared son made a clean three-bagger, bring-normal, but there might have been diseases present, it being impossible to determine 25 days after death. A fractured skull without complications rarely causes death, and in the majority of cases death does not occur within 24 hours, unless immediately from shock. The brain could not be examined owing to decomposition. There might have been an aneurism in the brain, which would have caused the fall. The actual cause of death could not be determined beyond reasonable doubt. Given a skeleton, with a fractured skull, no physician could give the cause of death or say that death was due to a fractured skull. For purposes of post-mortem, stop the importation of smallpox into Joseph Sifton's corpse was practically Manitoba by Indians, who are fleeing a skeleton, as the organs could not be pronounced upon, owing to decomposition, with the exception of the dura mater. The heart walls were thinner than witness expected. The exact cause of death would have to be left open. Apoplexy might have been the cause of the fall, or the cause of death. The injuries found were more compatible with a fall than with a blow received. There was no indication of any blow from a metal instrument, and the periosteum (or skin of the bone), was not torn or broken. With blows from a metal instrument the periosteum is usually torn. The fracture in the skull was only a minor factor in determining Hellmuth's cross-examination.

the cause of death. This ended Mr. To Mr. McEvoy, witness said that there was no fracture of the neck, and the arms or sides.

Mr. Magee began his re-examination by asking if witness could tell Mr.Hellmuth whether or not Sifton's death was due to a stroke of lightning. The postmortem report that the organs were normal meant that they were appar- Receipts of the Trust and Loan Comently normal so far as the doctors could tell at the time of the examination. Mrs. McFarlane, mother of Mary Mc-Farlane, was called to the stand. She had known Joseph Sifton only about two weeks, but had known Gerald longer. On the morning of Joseph Sifton's death witness went to Gerald's house early and had some talk with him about Mary's and Joseph's visit to her on the previous night, and of the intended marriage. Gerald told witness he was going to put up a hayfork track for his father. Witness asked Gerald to Mary and Joseph were married. Gerald (Gerald) would put him so he wouldn't be married that day. Witness told Gerald to "be easy." Gerald then left. To Mr. Meredith, witness said she married daughter on Piccadilly street, report is 96. Witness never told her daughter Mary. Witness was not very clear about the conversation with Gerald, because she was upset and crying about Mary. Witness told Gerald she did not wish Mary to marry Joseph, because she (witness) had heard so much bad about him. Witness thought Mrs. Gerald heard part of the conversation. Witness had not discussed with Mary the provisions of the will. Edgar Morden came to witness' house three days before Gerald's arrest, and read the will to witness and her married daughter, Mrs. Miller. Edgar said he had been sent by some per-son to read the will. This was the first witness had heard of the will. Edgar said he thought Sifton would be ar-rested. On the night of Mary's visit to witness, the night before Joseph Sifton's death, Mary told witness that she thought something was wrong, and Joseph Sifton was the cause of it. Witness tried to persuade. Mary not up the marriage, and witness finally supply of ammunition and are organiz-told Mary to go and be married. Wit-

"Would you mind telling me about it?" he asked, hesitatingly. "Pardon me if I seem inquisitive," he added, flushing, as he saw that his request had embarrassed his companion; really, Mr. Dunbar, I feel a deep interest in you; in fact, any young man who has struggled up through poverty and hardship, and made a position for himself becomes to me an object wor-

Mr. Forest appeared deeply interested in the account, and, when Louis had concluded, asked a number of searching questions regarding the man Murray's claim and proofs. "You do not adopt his name?"

"Well, do not be afraid of me, Mr. Dunbar," said Mr. Ferest, smiling as his companion stopped short.

"I have never confessed as much to any one before," Louis continued, deprecatingly; "but truly, I have never felt the least affection for the manhe has, on the contrary, repelled me, and even before I discovered his illegal and disreputable transactions, I found it difficult to feel any sympathy with him, or bestow upon him the proper regard of a son.'

Mr. Forest made no reply to this, but looked so grave, almost stern, that Louis felt sure he disapproved of the confession he had just made, and regretted he had given utterance to the

was rather startling, but if I am indeed connected in any way with the original, the relationship is doubtless so distant that I could reap no benefit from it," Louis answered indifferent-

"It is singular that this court beauty should have married a Dunbar-that your mother should have borne that name, and that you should resemble the picture so strikingly. If there is not some of the Brienze blood in your

"Yes, it is strange. My mother's name was Annie Dunbar Burgess-so Mr. Murray informed me, and he said nothing to lead me to suppose she was not of American parentage. She may have been remotely connected with the Scotch Dunbars, but I do not believe it would be worth my while to seek to trace back her ancestors."

"Annie Dunbar!" repeated Mr. Forest, in an absent tone. When he asked: "Have you nothing belonging to her by which you could discover how she was related to the Dunbars?"

"I have nothing but her weddingvolume of Tenny son's poems—given her, my father asserted, by her cousin, Alfred Burgess; a little vense on the fly leaf, in his handwriting, is signed 'A.'"

"Do you know the date of your mother's marriage?" Mr. Forest inquired, seeming not to have heard Louis' last Yes; it is engraven upon this ring, which I have worn ever since it would fit my finger," the young man returned, removing the heavy gold band from the little finger of his left hand and passing it to his companion.

He bent low to examine the date engraven upon the inner surface. 'Uncle Albert, are you aware that it is nearly midnight?' Mr. Forest started so violently at the sound of his nephew's voice, that , he dropped the ring he was examining, and it went rolling over the carpet al-most to Margaret Houghton's feet.

Arthur Aspinwall had been chatting with his aunt and cousin on the opposite side of the room, but he had been keenly watching his uncle and Louis, and was anything but pleased with the evidence of good-will and sympathy established between these two, and he resolved to break up their interesting

He had come up behind them silently, just as his uncle bent to examine Louis' ring.

There was a dark look upon his face. and he shot a glance of hate and disdain upon his foe as he spoke to Mr.

"I had no idea that it was so late," he added, recovering his com-"I was so interested in what Mr. Dunbar was telling me, that I did not mind how rapidly the time was passing. Louis lingered only a few moments after their departure, just long enough for a few fond words with his betrothed, then he, too, departed.

As he stepped out upon the street a hand was laid rudely upon his arm. "Louis, I want some money," the authoritative demand by which he was saluted, and his father confronted him with a determined attitude: "I told you I should not give you money," Louis said, in reply, and shak-

During the next few days Mr. Forest eemed troubled and depressed, and was so absent-minded and irritable that Arthur's small stock of patience gave out entirely, and, taking himself off to some fashionable club rooms, he left his uncle to come to himself as best he could.

When he returned, Mr. Forest was gone, and no one was able to tell him whither. He found a note, however, upon his dressing-case saying that he should be away on business for several weeks; that he inclosed a check for two thousand francs, which he hoped would do for incidentals until his return.

Arthur pocketed the generous check and heaved a sigh of relief.

It was becoming irksome to him to play propriety and the dutiful nephew before his uncle, and so he did not feel at all disturbed to be left to his own devices, with plenty of money in his pocket and no one by to criticise his movements or interfere with his pleas-

Nevertheless the young man did not appear to be in a happy frame of mind, for, after a day or two, he, too, became moody and depressed, pale, restless, and nervous; and, instead of being about to enjoy himself as he had at first planned, upon being relieved of the presence of his uncle, he remained shut up in his rooms most of the time for several days.

And Why John Chinaman Wears It.

Originally a Badge of Servitude Imposed Upon Him and Then Foisted on Him as a Religious Observance

Why does the Chinaman wear a queue or pig-tail? Go ask the average Chinaman and he will be unable to tell you. He will make some vague allusion to his religion or say, as does the cornered woman, "because." But there is a definite reason for the custom, as there is for everything else, and this definite reason goes back almost to the beginning of what Elsmere calls "historical evidence."

When man emerged from his primitive state and first realized that the strongest could rule the weakest, temporarily at least, he was exceedingly bothered as to what to do with his hair. As a "primitive" he had paid little attention to it, for it was clothing, orna-ment and protection to him. But now that the skins of animals were his attire and new views of comfort were forcing themselves upon him, his hair was bothersome. The wind tossed in into the bushes, where it caught and held him. In use of his weapons it bothered his eyes. It took up dirt and proved to be a nuisance. Many generations he cogitated over the problem. Bit by bit he discovered that the hides he wore were wearing down the hair on his breasts and legs, and the skin was appearing. By the use of sharpedged stones he was able to remove it from his face. Why not use the stones upon his head? He did so, but with restrictions. The stongest man in the community-he set the fashions-simply cut away the hair from his forehead and made a plait of that which was heavy on top of his head. Thus he removed the nuisance and improved his appearance. He permitted friends and allies to do the same, the weak members of his community, industry were depressed, large numto distinguish them from all the rest, were compelled to shave off all their hair, a sign of their servitude to the strong. Gradually, though, the strong man came of the impression that he needed more head-shaving, not only for convenience sake but for ornamentation. So he shaved and shaved until he reduced the amount of his hair to a tuft in the center of the scalp. His slaves 759. were permitted to shave in the same was twisted into a queue which hung straight down the back to the hips. ranny.

While for 3,700 years China was seething and boiling within herself, there was forming on her northern borders a race of people destined to change the entire course of development of her people. This race came from certain Tungusic tribes whose original home was in Manchuria and Mongolia. They bore the name of Tartars or Manchurians, and as early as 907 had conquered a part of China and made much trouble within the empire. In 1644 they again entered China, and after much bloodshed conquered it. They set Sun Che upon the throne and inaugurated the Manchu or Ta Tsing dynasty, which still prevails in China. They horsemen of great prowess, whereas the native Chinaman was not a horseman. They shaved their heads entirely, or wore tufts quite similar to that displayed by some tribes of North American Indians. They were prodigious fighters, savage lovers, iconoclastic in every respect. When their soldiery were in possession of the empire they collected all the Chinese women needed, placed each in a bag, tied the open end of the bag, and then made their soldiers take a bag and settle down with it. The soldier could not see what was inside. All that he knew was that it was a woman, and that she was to be his future wife, whether she was old or young, pretty or ugly, blind or halt. The Chinaman did not like this. He rebelled, but so far his rebellions have been futile. But what thus in China became part of a law and a religion, strangely enough in England in the eighteenth century was merely a hair-dressing custom, bor-rowed from the French, who in turn copied it from the Chinese. English beaux just wore wigs with queues and later shaved their heads just as did the Chinamen, and wore the pig-tail.

When the Tartars came upon him he wore his hair in quite ornamental fashion. The Tartars put an end to this. They said:

"You are servants of our dynasty. You must not only acknowledge the Manchu, but show outwardly a sign of submission. Shave your head close to the scalp at all spots but the center. There permit it to grow long and twist it into a long coil. When thus you wear your hair you will be known as a faithful subject of the dynasty. Otherwise you are liable to be mistaken for a traitor and tortured."
The Chinaman obeyed, and by 1651 the shaved head and the pig-tail-the sign of Tartar sovereignty—was almost universally adopted. The native priests of China, like all other priests, were anxious to curry favor with the ruling powers. So to make the shaved head and queue still more permanent they began to preach that no Chinaman could enter heaven if he did not have his queue with him when he died. That was the symbol to the gods that he was of the elect. Without it he must dwell forever with the genii of the lower world.

So between priests and Manchu emperors it has come about that the Chinamin and his queue are inseparable. Should the Manchu ever be banished he may cease the queue. Christian Chinaman often does, but it will be ages before the pig-tail will cease to be the token of Chinese bondage to Tartar conquerors and Chinese evidence of certainty of heavenly reward.

A Contrast.

It is seldom that the history of a country shows such a marked change as has passed over Canada in the last four years. In 1895 nothing had occurred to relieve the despondency occasioned by the revelations of the cenof 1891. The deficits have given place to surpluses aggregating $14,000,000, and the growth of the public debt, which had been going on with scarcely a break since confederation, has come to an end. Business and industry are flourishing, wages have been increased, factories have been working full and over time, large additions have been made to industrial plants and buildings. The exo dus has been checked, and the settlement of the Northwest has been proceeding at a rate far exceeding that of previous years.

At Ottawa, too, there has been a re-markable change. Unity, strength and determination have taken the place of feebleness and dissension. Some very important new duties have fallen upon the ministry, and some very important enterprises carried to a conclusion. The Intercolonial Railway has been extended to Montreal, and is now a paying instead of a losing concern. The deepening of the canals has been vigorously carried on. The discovery of gold in the Yukon brought into existence a new community, and imposed new and difficult duties upon the ministers, duties which, upon the whole have been well and ably discharged. The war in South Africa created a new and difficult situation, and at the same time gave Canada a new position in

A Serious Case of Dysentery

Where Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry Saved Life

Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Summer Complaint are responsible for more deaths among people of all ages, during the summer months, than any other form of disease. These diseases are so serious that people should not take chances with any cheap substitutes for Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, but should insist on getting the genuine remedy which has cured the very worst cases of Bowel Complaint, without a failure, in the half century of its existence.

This case of Mr. Travics, of Fennels P. O., Ont., is another evidence of the efficacy of this remedy in a bad case of "Bloody Flux."

Mrs. Traviss writes as follows: "My husband had Dysentery so bad that he was passing blood and could get nothing that would stop it. At tast Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry was suggested and he started taking It By the time he had taken a few doses he felt a great deal better and soon was perfectly well. Quartet of Young People in a Datk Mine Eight Hours.

New York, Aug. 14.—Miss Lillian Lawell, of Easton, Pa., and Miss Ma-bel Corier, of Brooklyn, Miss Maud Miller, of New York, and Fred Schurtz, of Newark, New Jersey, recently suffered an uncomfortable experience in an abandoned iron mine, near Lake Hopatcong, New Jersey.

They went to explore an old shaft at Point Comfort. In answer to the apprehensions of a friend, Miss Lawell said: "If we are not back by dinner time you can organize a party and come to our rescue." When the quar-tet had not returned by 9 o'clock a searching party was formed by frightened friends. The searchers entered the gloomy mine well provided with lights and after a time came the three young women and their es-cort. They had lost their way and the oil in the bicycle lamps they carried had become exhausted, leaving them in total darkness. The four had been unprisoned eight hours.

Confession of the Slayer of Messenger Lane.

The Ohio Train Robbery Fully Ex plained-A' Blood-Curdling Story-Money Recovered.

Columbus, Aug. 14.—The confession of R. H. Ferrall, a former employe of the Adams Express Company, who has acknowledged the murder of Express Messenger Lane and the robbery of the safe on the Pennsylvania eastbound train on Friday night, desclosed a premeditated and blood-curdling crime that seemed almost impossible of be-lief. He said that he had become desperate because of his inability to secure employment, and a realization of the fact that he must have money to defray the expenses of his approaching marrage. The robbery had been carefully planned, and it included the murder of Express Messenger Lane. He had no accomplices and no confidants. He knew Lane well. In fact, they were Having provided himself with a sixshooter, 38-calibre, he went to Urbana on Friday morning and waited for the train. When it arrived there Ferrall went at once to the express car and told Lane that he was out of money, and asked permission to ride to Columbus with him. Lane consented, never for a moment suspecting treach-For a short time after the train left Urbana they chatted pleasantly. Lane sat in a chair in the end of the car, with his back slightly turned. When Ferrall had finally nerved himself for the crime he drew his revolver and stepped up behind Lane, unobserved, and fired three shots in rapid succession into the messenger's back. Lane rolled off the chair on to the floor on his face, and Ferrall quickly fired the remaining shots at the prostrate body. Lane was unconscious, but Ferrall, fearing that the wounds already inflicted would not cause death, took Lane's revolver and fired two bullets from it into the body. Ferrall then took the key to the safe from the pocket of the dead messenger, opened the safe and put Lane's revolver inside, where he could reach it easily in case he was detected and needed it to defend himself. After he had taken he placed them in a small satchel and waited until the car arrived at Plain City, when he slipped off the train. It was at Plain City on Saturday night that City Detectives O'Neil and Dundon obtained the clew that led to Ferrall's aprehension. At the hotel they found the revolver Ferrall had secreted, and, after learning of the express package, telephoned to Columbus and had it intercepted. The package was opened and the stolen sacks containing the money orders, checks and other things which Ferrall desired to get rid of were found. Ferrall will be taken to Marysville, Union county, in which his crime was committed, for trial. One thousand dollars of the money has been re-

party from a station fifteen miles southwest of Tien Tsin. After much hardship they reached Tsi Nau, from where they made their way by boat to the coast in a steamer chartered by the United States consul at Che Foo. Mr. Meek said they owed their escape to the United States consul, who chartered a steamer at a cost of 150 gold dollars a day. This steamer made three successful trips for refugees. All the missionaries consider the outlook very gloomy, and are afraid a state of anarchy may exist before long.
