Legal Decisions.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or another's or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. A person orders his paper discontinued he must pay up all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them unattended at prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

A BARK, LYING AT THE MOUTH OF OUR HARBOUR.

Far out there where the blue waves gather And softly foam as they wash near side, Along a Norwegian bark is lying In all her beauty, and all her pride.
No sound, save the lap of the restless waters,
No voice, save the winds at night; While the stars gaze down from the heavens above,
Grow pale at this sorrowful sight.

Patient she lyeth, no hand can move her,
A hopeless wreck on that hidden shoal, She, that had leaped o'er the gleaming waters
Like a thing of life, in the ocean's roll.
Wait on, poor ship, for a wild storm gathers,
And phantom forms grow out of the rain, Comes a shriek from the wind like the voice of some angel, In angry dispute with the shoal, for your pain.

A stillness, and then, with gathering ferocity,
The wind sweeps down, while the waves reply.
They toss you high in this mad commotion, You're freed from the shoal, but only to die.

The storm subsides and the waters sink downward, The boats leave the shore when they find you free;
They fasten you safe with their ropes and their shackles,
And slowly they'll rip you from weather to lee.

Interesting Story.

NATHALIE.

The sultry August day was drawing to a close; going out in heat and a kind of oppressive stillness that foretold a storm. So thought Postmaster Harris in his unpretending little office—post-office and family grocery combined—as he stood behind the counter looking over, one by one, the pack of letters he held in his hand.

"No letters for any of your folks, Miss Bruner," he said, turning a bright, smiling face toward the young lady who stood in the broad light of the open door. A young and graceful woman of two-and-twenty, who wore a plain summer muslin. She had a low, clear voice, and a face that was hardly pretty and yet not plain—only tired looking, like the face of one who had battled with Fate and been worsted in the fight. This was Nathalie Bruner.

"No letters for you," repeated the postmaster. "Here are some newspapers, though, and a book of some kind for your brother," he slowly added, regarding the various addresses through spectacles: "Mr Leroy D. Bruner!" and then passing them across the counter to her with heavy, deliberate movements. He was never in a hurry, this steady-going old man, never seemed to get excited or to lose his temper. "Get theirs or to lose his up your way, I suppose, Miss Nathalie!"

"Quite well, thank you," she answered, gathering up her parcels to go. "One thing more, Mr Harris—a paper of soda, please."

It was handed down from the shelf in a ponderous manner, as if it had weighed a ton instead of a pound. Mr Harris then came round and followed the young lady to the door.

"We are going to have a rain before long, I think," he remarked. "Not before you get home though, Miss Nathalie."

She made some reply in her low, pleasant voice, and set off homeward along the wide country road. It was getting dusk. Children played about still; children from the farmhouses on either side. Miss Bruner nodded to each group as she passed, but did not pause on her way, for the sun was quite down now and home a mile distant. On, she walked, without thought or fear, her dog beside her.

She was not a heroine, this girl I am telling you about. Not by any means one of those boastfully fearless women who are ready to do and dare all sorts of hazardous things. It was her nature to be strong where many others were weak; and, worse for her, to be weak where many others are strong. Whether this strength had ever been tried, whether this weakness had worked her sorrow, you shall see by-and-by.

A BARK, LYING AT THE MOUTH OF OUR HARBOUR.

There was a faint breath of air now, and she took off her bonnet, letting its coolness touch her face. Such a quiet face it was—the face of a girl in its fairness and rounded outlines, the face of an old woman in its utter weariness —weariness of life. A youthful face from which all youth's brightness and freshness had been struck out.

Something strangely fine and true in the girl's nature she had inherited from her father, along with the deep hazel eyes, and fine reddish-brown hair that belonged to the Bruners. He was of French extraction, as Nathalie's name would show. Mrs Bruner was not. Mrs Bruner had been a Dight—daughter of John Dight the farmer. How ever Louis Leroy Bruner, the poor but proud gentleman, could have married! common, hard, selfish Betsy Dight was a marvel.

She had been very pretty; perhaps the secret lay in that. Her eyes were gray, her hair black; her son, Nath-alie's only brother, had inherited the good looks, and some of her hardness.

She was a clever, capable woman, and things had prospered with her; but her husband had not lived very long to enjoy them.

Nathalie had been given to wonder jately whether her life would have been a failure if her father had lived.

It is a sad, sad thing when a woman at twenty-two pronounces her life a failure. When the illusions, that make youth sweet have faded away, the pleasant dreams vanished. It comes to us all sooner or later in life, this disenchantment; but to most it comes gradually after years have brought wisdom and the soul has learned to trust in something higher and surer than earth can give. But for her to whom there was as yet no thought of compensation, the coming years stretched out blackly, empty of promise.

The shadow of her coming was on her face now, their chill on her heart.
The solemn quiet that brooded over earth and sky was unheeded. What were set of sun and rise of moon to her—to her in her desolation?

A little way before her a couple of lovers stood talking over the garden fence, the girl coquetish in cherry ribbons and white muslin apron—the young man's head bent down close to the smooth, pink cheek. It was a pretty picture enough, and Miss Bruner glanced at it as she went by with a still, inscrutable look in her eyes.

Was she thinking of a time when she had thus stood with a lover; had thrilled at the sound of a voice, the touch of a caressing hand—when she had believed in a man's truth?

She did not believe in it now. She had come to have small faith in any son of man. And yet how weak a woman are. How weak this woman was, that a trifle like that could shake her so! Her face regained its listless quiet, her eyes their weary outlook, never changing. Never changing until by-and-by a step sounded in the road behind her—a man's firm footfall on the hard beaten path. What was there in that to drive all the faint color from cheek and lip; to make her heart stand still? Looking at her now you would know that the step was one she had listened to for a hundred times, whose faintest echo she knew by heart. But it was six months since she had heard it, and another woman listened for it now.

He had returned, then? He had come back to his home after this long absence! The conviction that it was so flashed over her, and set every pulse in her frame throbbing.

"Miss Bruner! Nathalie!" She turned at that, glancing up at the man beside her. A perfect athlete of a man, with a strong, masterful face, and eyes that kept their owner's secret well.

"You have returned, Mr Vander-ware?"
If he had expected a start or blush he was disappointed. Perhaps he did not care for those things now?—and yet he did all too well. Married though he was, he would have given much to see her face kindle as it used to at his coming. There was no thought of ill in his heart, but he loved her better than he would ever love another. He went to look in her face, some sudden warmth and brightness flashing into his own as he did so making it gentle almost as a woman's. The gentleness was in his voice, too, as he spoke.

"You are not too glad to see me as I am to see you, Nathalie."
"You—family are well, I hope?"
"She was all the answer; and calmly too.
"She would not say, "Your wife."
"Yes, quite well." He held her hand longer than he need have done—friends claim this much, you know—and then released it. "Let me have these parcels," he said, taking them from her quite as a matter of course in the decisive way she used to like so well.

How tender he used to be with her in that past time! Somehow his presence to-night seemed to bring it all back to her—the strong man's protecting love, and all the brightness of these midsummer days a year ago the sweetest of her life, when she expected to be George Vandeware's wife. She might have been; she would have been his wife this night but for her mother's interference. She had been hoping lately to forget him; she had been striving for it. But what made this agitation within her? Had the old spell come upon her once more—the spell of this man's influence? She could not have told; she did not stay to ask herself. She only knew that it was like heaven to be with him again.

And walking by his side along the road that was familiar ground to both their feet, she forgot reality in the bliss his presence brought. She forgot the coldness, the estrangement, the separation and misery of the past year; she forgot his marriage, and seemed like the sweet girl he had known, shy and winning, with wise and witty sayings, and smiles that came and went, making of the pure, delicate face a charming picture.

He stepped at the gate to bid her good-night, not venturing to enter.
Putting down the parcels on the top of the fat post, he took her hands in one of his, and smoothed her hair with the other.

"Good-night, Nathalie."
"Good-night, George." But she ought to have said Mr Vandeware.

He bent down with a quick movement and kissed her—once—twice.
His arms closed about her suddenly, and she felt herself drawn close to his breast. "My little love!"

Do not condemn him utterly. For that one mad passionate moment he forgot that he was a married man, he forgot everything but this pale little girl he held in his arms, and that he loved her. An instant she yielded herself to the close strong clasp—only an instant; then she remembered, and drew herself free. The gate closed suddenly between them; catching up her parcels, she flew away, and he stood alone under the elm-tree. So there was nothing for him but to go on home, taking the memory of that white, startled face with him for company; and the echo of some words faintly spoken, in which he had caught but one—
"My little Nathalie!" he murmured, from the depths of his remorseful heart.
"Oh, what demon of anger and obstinacy possessed me! Curse my own pride and folly! My true little girl —she loves me in spite of all, and my conduct is killing her! It is hard to remember that the two who should have been the most tender with her were the most cruel—her mother and her promised husband!"

And while he toiled on up the hill, beyond which lay his home—the home where his wife awaited him, his wife whom he had married in spite and passion—Nathalie lay upon the ground in the darkest shadows of the garden, her face in the wet grass, her hands locked together as if they would never unclass again.

There were guests in her mother's house. She could hear that. The sound of their voices came through the open windows; cheerful, pleasant voices, with now and again a burst of laughter. Mrs Bruner's was louder than all. She could be so charmingly agreeable when she chose; and she was good looking still with her forty-five years. Her eyes sparkled yet; the hair wore its bright purple blackness. A woman who looked well to the ways of her household, and kept up the observances of religion in her family. A Christian by profession, going morning and night to ask for grace from on high. And yet beneath so much that was good in her heart and in life was an underlying hardness in her nature; harder was it than any substratum of granite. She was born ruler. She had ruled her husband while he lived; she ruled her son and daughter now, if not with a rod of iron, at least with a sway that was well-nigh absolute. The influence acquired over them in childhood, she had maintained with a firm hand ever since. She would like them to be happy, but it must be in her way. She was good in the main. People liked her—most people that is—and Roy and Nathalie loved her.

Nathalie sat there still, unheeding the talk going on within. Their words, grave or gay, had no meaning for her. Only one sentence rang in her ears over and over again: "My little love! my little love!" and the lips George Vandeware had kissed formed just one wild, frantic wish:
"If I could only die to-night!"

Oh! the lonely days and nights, the bitter pain of disappointment, the heart-sickness, the weariness of life.
She had been through it; had been living in nothing else for months.
She had thought the worst was past—that she could never suffer like that again. And now to find that the victory was not won after all—that the battle must be fought over again! No wonder that, knowing her own weakness as she did, she should shrink from the trial.

How the sight of George Vandeware's face to-night brought the old days back—the days when she had first known him. All that this life held for her of joy or brightness lay in that time. What a hero he had seemed to her eyes then, like a knight of old, "brave, and true, and tender." Her mother liked her then; she had been gracious to him, and welcomed him to her home. Perhaps what had attracted Nathalie to him at first was his foreign extraction. Not French, as her father was, however; George Vandeware's parents were Dutch and had settled here. He was of substance too. He was of noble looks; a man of powerful frame and will, thirty years of his life and more were gone.
He asked for Nathalie in marriage, and loved her dearly.

Then came the explosion. Mr Vandeware offended Mrs Bruner, and she forbade him the house. She told him that he only wanted Nathalie's money, and otherwise insulted him.
She was a woman who could sting while she insulted; none better; and he was not one to stand it. Nathalie, always bending to her mother's will, had bent then. George would have married her in defiance, but she bowed to the subjection of her mother.

Her mother! Recalling it now the soul of the girl flamed into revolt.
What right had Mrs Bruner to insult George in that way—before his very face? He was a proud man, well Mrs Bruner knew that, and he never came to her house again. Nathalie saw him some times, but she could not go out purposely to meet him. Though he asked her to again and again, she would not listen to his proposals to set her mother at defiance and marry him.
And at last he got his temper up, and did not ask her any more. And after that she met him walking and riding with Clara Wilson, the loveliest young widow in the county; and people laughed and said her reign was over. She knew her dream was. Her brother Boyal had been away at the time; or perhaps—who knew?—it might have all turned out differently.
Just a week or two—looking back it seemed to Nathalie but a day or two —and then came the news of his marriage to Mrs Wilson, and of their departure after the wedding.

And now he had come back again!
And poor Nathalie knew that they both loved each other as passionately as ever, and that their lives had been wrecked. In this hour, lying there in her pain, Nathalie seemed to understand it all more clearly than she had ever done before; she believed now that she need not and ought not to have been sacrificed; that neither God nor duty required it of her.

"How weak I was! how pitifully weak!" she moaned in a sort of contemptuous passion for herself, remembering how all her life long she had yielded her own will to her mother's; and finally this one bright dream of a happy future. All that her woman's heart craved of peace or joy was in that dream—a home of her own, a husband's love, and pleasant dreams beyond it. And now—oh, aching heart! oh, empty hands! oh, young face that must grow old and go down at last into the silence of the grave unblest by children's kisses! Was this your tender mother-love, Mrs Bruner, and your faith, George Vandeware? Then Heaven pity that one who has nothing surer to trust to.

Don't.

Don't snub a boy because he wears shabby clothes. When Edison, the inventor of the telephone, first entered Boston, he wore a pair of yellow linen breeches in the depth of winter.

Don't snub a boy because his home is plain and unpresenting. Abraham Lincoln's early home was a log cabin.

Don't snub a boy because of the ignorance of his parents. Shakespeare, the world's poet, was the son of a man who was unable to write his own name.

Don't snub a boy because he chooses an humble trade. The author of the Pilgrim's Progress was a tinker.

Don't snub a boy because of physical deformity. Milton was blind.

Don't snub a boy because of dullness in his lessons. Hogarth, the celebrated painter and engraver, was a stupid boy at his books.

Don't snub a boy because he stutters. Demosthenes, the greater orator of Greece, overcame a harsh and stammering tongue.

Don't snub anyone. Not alone because some day they may far outstrip you in the race of life, but because it is neither kind, nor right, nor Christian.

Keep on.

In the mountainous part of North Carolina there is a settlement of Scotch Highlanders, who still preserve the language and quaint customs of their forefathers. Dominic S— was a minister in this mountain kirk for many years, and some of his shrewd sayings are still remembered. The old pastor once took a young member of his church to task sharply.

"What ails ye, Donald? A twelmonth ago ye were aye keen wi' the Sunday-school and at the prayer-meeting, an' now ye seldom show yer face at either. Ye have given up family prayer, an' I misdoubt me that ye read but seldom in the Holy Book."

Donald replied, "that his heart was unaccountably cold, that the fire and hope of his early faith had died out."

"Man," said the Dominie, severely, "when I started to Kirputtoch yesterday, I heard the coach before me, and whiles the driver blew his horn, and the sun was shining, it was aye gay and comforting. But in the afternoon, the sun was hid an they was aye born. Did I sit down on the roadside?
No, I kept the road to Kirputtoch, and I walked in it. Y're on the way to a Kirputtoch on which. Walk in it.

VACATION RAMBLINGS.

Concluded. We found the people of Acadia Mines very friendly and sociable, and we make no doubt if we knew them better would prize their acquaintance very highly.

Acadia Mines is quite a desirable place to live. Its situation is both central and pleasant. It possesses all the requisites for building up a most flourishing place.

Among the many institutions of which Acadia Mines may be justly proud, its two brass bands and cricket club take no mean place.

Apple Prospects. From American advices in regard to the fruit prospects, the indications are that the apple crop will be far below the average.

apples will be about 70 per cent. of the usual yield in the six states. It is the bearing year for apples in the New England States.

According to the Cape Sable Advertiser the fisheries on the Shelburn coast is a partial failure.

The Dominion government is buying and slaughtering all the cattle belonging to farmers in the immediate vicinity of the Lewis quarantine.

Despatches to the Washington war department confirm the report of the capture in Arizona of the Apache chief, Geronimo and his band.

AN OBSTRUCTION. The Municipal Council make regulations year after year that cattle shall not run in our highways.

GOSSIPY ITEMS

GLEANED FROM VARIOUS SOURCES. A decided improvement in the English cattle market is reported.

The meeting held in the basement of the Lower Horton Methodist church under the auspices of the Ladies' Missionary Society on Friday last was of such a pleasing nature that I felt happy when at the close the chairman requested the fellow who writes for the ACADIAN to step forward.

The ladies of the Lower Horton Presbyterian congregation intend holding a Tea and Fancy Sale in connection with their Sewing Circle early in October.

Grand Pre Items. The ladies of the Lower Horton Presbyterian congregation intend holding a Tea and Fancy Sale in connection with their Sewing Circle early in October.

All young ladies who sing are invited to attend and help. This cantata will be given in Wolfville about the last of October, when a musical treat may be expected. We understand that some of our village boys at her practice last Monday evening and hope these annoyances may cease without further complaint. The Wolfville boys as a rule act as gentlemen, let there be no exception.

Local and Provincial.

QUICK WORK.—A week ago last Tuesday the stmr. Hexavia returned from St. John with her crank broken. In thirty-six hours a new one was put in and the boat was again ready for sea.

The Provoking government are shipping 4,500 copies of the crop report, a copy of which we have received, to the Colonists and Indian Exhibitions. Fifteen hundred copies will also be distributed among the principal agriculturists of the maritime provinces and Upper Canada.

On Monday last two men named Fritz and Ashmore were nearly buried alive by the earth caving in upon them while at work in a sewer at Hantsport. After some difficulty they were dug out. Fritz was not much hurt, but Ashmore has not been able to work since.

HONORS.—The friends of Mr John F. Godfrey will be pleased to learn that he has successfully passed his examination for grade A licence. Mr Godfrey has been teaching in Hantsport for the last few years and his success as a teacher may be judged from the fact that out of four of his pupils who applied this year for licences, three obtained them.

One case St. Croix Gingham, fine quality, at 10c per yard at BURPEE WITTER'S.

NOTICE.—We are requested to announce that a meeting of the Electors of Ward 8 will be held in J. H. Bishop's store, on Saturday evening 19th inst., at 8 o'clock, to select a candidate to represent the Ward in the Municipal Council. All are respectfully invited. Should the weather be very stormy the meeting will take place on Tuesday 21st, at same hour.

Choice Imported and Domestic Cigars at 3, 4, 5, 7, 8 and 10 cents at J. M. SHAW'S. 35

"Died, at California, June 25th, of slow fever, Frank C. Saunders, formerly of Windsor, N. S."

The above notice, which appeared in some of the Halifax papers, seems to be very previous, as we got a letter from this same man, dated 5th inst., and it was a very lively one for a corpse. Frankie's friends will be glad to hear that he is well and doing well.

ORGAN RECITAL.—A goodly number were present at the organ recital, performed in the Baptist church last Wednesday evening under the direction of Prof. Porter. The professor gave a splendid performance on the organ. In the rendering of the vocal music the selections were well chosen and executed in a charming manner by the ladies and gentlemen gave evidence of talent and training.

Ice Cream Soda cool and Refreshing at R. PRAT'S.

Mr Black, junior member of the well-known shipping and hard-ware firm of Pickford & Black, Halifax, has been in Wolfville and vicinity for a few days, partially for health and business combined. Messrs Pickford & Black are agents for the Furness Line of steamers which sail from Halifax direct to London. The facilities for carrying apples by this line are excellent and no doubt our shippers will patronize the line to a very large extent.

Feed Flour $3.75; Family Flour (good to choice) $5.00, $5.25 and $5.50 per barrel, at R. PRAT'S. 4

A new industry for this part of the county has been started at Horton Landing, that of raising hemp. Mr Charles F. Rathbun has erected a commodious hennery on his premises, lately occupied by him as a steam mill and wind power, and intends to go into this business on a large scale. We wish him success in his new venture. There is money in the raising of hemp if the right man takes hold of it—one who has had some previous knowledge of such an undertaking.

BARRELS.—J. D. Martin wishes to inform his patrons that his apple barrels can be obtained in Wolfville, from Edward Paine, who is acting as his agent in this place.

Mr and Mrs Reid, of St. John, N. B., have been in Nova Scotia on their golden wedding tour. Last week they spent a day or two at Grand Pre with Mrs. Dunstan. They were married fifty years ago, and have been travelling as much as possible over the route of their wedding journey, and visiting the friends and scenes of their youth. Mrs Reid is a native of this county.

The Celebrated Electric Dyes are the best lasting of all colors. Warranted strictly pure. 10 cents at Druggist and Crocers.

The King's 1st Cornet Band team meeting, which took place at Somerset on Wednesday last week, was a success in every respect. A large crowd were there from all parts of the western portions of this county. The Somerset ladies are to be congratulated in the superb manner in which they conducted the stable part of the programme and their musical brothers for the active part they took to make it such a success. The amount of $115 of thereabouts was realized which will go towards the payment of the band instruments.

NARROW ESCAPE.—A bullet from a gun in the hands of some reckless boys on the railroad wharf, came near inflicting serious injuries on the person of Mr Stephen Eldredge, who was working in J. I. Brown's new blacksmith shop, on Friday afternoon last. The bullet passed within two feet of Mr Eldredge who was working at the bench. He was playing a game of pool at the time and in two seconds more would have been in the direct track of the ball, which passed through the shop. Such culpable carelessness should be put a stop to at once. There has been too much shooting by small boys in this vicinity lately.

Having recently imported a "Perfection Shtar Sharpener," I am prepared to sharpen and put in first-class order shears and scissors of every description. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed. J. M. SHAW, Wolfville. 35

METHOD.—Mr Reubin S. Smith, a native of Yarmouth county, but now of Charleston, Mass., is at present having a well-earned vacation stopping at the residence of his father-in-law, George N. Borden, Avonport. Mr Smith, who is an Evangelist of much promise, occupied the pulpit of the Lower Horton Methodist church last Sunday evening. The congregation was quite a large one. Mr Smith based his discourse on the 15th chapter of Acts, alluding to Paul's character before and after conversion, the change produced by the latter event, the circumstances which occurred during his imprisonment, the conversion of the jailer, his earnest enquiry as to the means of his own salvation etc. Father Rounsefell in the morning preached one of his characteristic sermons at the same church. Rev. David W. Johnson, the pastor, will preach next Sunday morning a sermon to children.

A MOST BRUTAL ATTACK.—On Thursday last week, Mr John W. Roscoe, father of Colin Roscoe Esq, Inspector of schools for this county, was subject to a most brutal assault at the hands of a man named Truman Thorpe who lives, we believe, at East Hall's Harbour. Mr Roscoe, who was out driving with his wife, called on Thorpe, who is married to Mr Roscoe's grand-daughter, on business; and without provocation on the part of Mr Roscoe Thorpe attacked him and brutally beat him about the head, cutting him very severely until he became unconscious. In this condition he carried him to his carriage, put him in and tied him so that he could not fall out, and directed Mrs Roscoe to drive him home, a distance of a mile and a half. Mrs Roscoe, who is quite an old lady, did so, and up till Monday last Mr Roscoe had not recovered consciousness. He was badly injured and as he is comparatively an old man, his recovery, if it ever takes place, will be slow one. We understand that a warrant has been issued for Thorpe's arrest.

Ghosts.
DEAR ACADIAN.—I have occasionally noticed in your columns, remedies for pests that trouble the farmers &c. Cannot you recommend something to the people of Grand Pre, that will keep those dead and gone old Frenchmen quiet? I was always a little timid but my love for Grand Pre made me bold enough to travel there from anywhere till those lively old ghosts appeared; but now I am afraid to go there. Should you decide to render assistance in this matter I would warn you that is of no use to rely on any ordinary drug, as those old fellows are familiar with everything of that kind and would know just what would serve as an antidote. Yours &c, ANNIE. [Petition the Council—they can do anything.—Etd.]

Yarmouth Notes.
Steamers Dominion and Alpha each make weekly trips between here and Boston and each are well patronized in the passenger line. The proprietor, Hon. L. E. Baker, is now on his way to England to purchase a fast commodious steamer for this route to meet the requirements of the travelling public.

Mr Geo. E. C. Burton, clerk of the Exchange Bank, is spending his week at Wolfville, visiting friends who are attending the Ladies' Seminary. He has taken in his bicycle with him, and intends to see some of the beauty of Horton and Cornwallis.

The Salvation Army held their first meeting here on August 20th. The meetings are well attended. The hall can accommodate about six hundred. If they had a larger hall the attendance would be more than doubled. Their meetings are well conducted and scores are being converted.

Melburne J. Sheehan, who has been carrying on a Gent's Clothing business for four years, was arrested last week and taken to Montreal, on a charge of obtaining goods from houses there under false pretenses. He purchased goods there to a large amount on Aug. 3rd, and on 25th made assignment, preferring his father to the amount of eleven thousand dollars.

Rev. Anderson Rogers has decided to remain in Yarmouth N. S., and labor in the Presbyterian church here. His people are much pleased with this decision.

DR. O. W. NORTON'S BURDOCK

BLOOD PURIFIER!

Purely Vegetable!

A Valuable Compound—FOR—RESTORING HEALTH.

Hundreds have been cured by us if for LIVER COMPLAINT, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, SALT RHEUM, CATARRH, RHEUMATISM, IMPURE BLOOD, LOSS OF APPETITE, KIDNEY DISEASE, PILES.

—AND—GENERAL DEBILITY.

READ THE FOLLOWING TESTIMONIALS:
WORTH $500.—Last April I was very low with constipation, piles, liver disease and general debility. Have been sick 2 years. Had to take the strongest medicines to move my bowels; was all the time getting worse. I am now taking the fourth bottle of Dr. Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier and am entirely cured of piles and constipation and my health is recovering fast. I consider these four bottles worth more than $500 to me. So says EDW. HALL, Esq., of Lawrence town, Annapolis County, N. S.

Choice Miscellany.

The Bravest Battle.

The bravest battle that ever was fought...

'Twas fought by the mothers of men...

No marshalling troops, no bivouac song...

A Dead Hope.

The telegram read: "Come quickly; baby is dying..."

He remembers, now, the time when he had tried to comfort a dear friend...

Yes, these little lights had before, warred, flickered and gone out in darkness...

Gazing out into the night, he catches a gleam of light from a farm house...

A mother sits opposite, and her sleeping babe has a strange fascination for him...

He, too, is going home—home, where a wife sits pale with watching...

He hal thought so much of the time when she should be a companion to him...

The train stops at last. Half dazed he leaves it, and gropes his way along the dark streets...

A light burns in his window, and as he pauses at the gate a door softly opens...

She leads him into a dim room where, on a white couch, lie the ashes of a dead hope...

Ah, baby—why couldn't you wait! Very gently she strokes the bowed head...

And here over the dead form, the eyes, blue as the wild violet, remained forever...

Sweet Sixteen.

Be glad that you are a little girl yet. Keep your childhood as long as you can...

You may believe that to be grown up, and to have the pleasures of society, will be better...

In these last school days, with no greater anxiety than your music lessons, and encompassed by the affection of your parents...

Don't rush into matrimony, my dear young ladies. Enjoy your youth while you can...

Don't let your eyes be turned by the glances of some young man to get so far as the proposing point...

Be patient, deliberate and sagacious. There is a world of happiness for you between 16 and 20...

There are crowns for every honorable head that will push through the opposition and conflict to success...

You are wanted from the street corner, from the idler's promenade, from the place where loafers gather...

There are crowns for every honorable head that will push through the opposition and conflict to success...

Thousands of young men are idling away golden opportunities, which if employed would bring success and position to themselves... that you won't have much use for a piano. After you have reached 20 it will be well to consider the matrimonial problem with seriousness...

Perseverance.

Years ago a German boy read of the siege of Troy, and made up his mind to find the ruins of that ancient city...

He persevered, and made up his mind to find the ruins of that ancient city...

Every step of his study and money-making was taken with the aim of fulfilling the idea of his boyhood...

He persevered, and made up his mind to find the ruins of that ancient city...
