VOL. XLVIII

NEWCASTLE, N. B., WEDNESDAY, JULY 14 1915

NO. 29

THE UNION ADVOCATE WILL GIVE AWAY $700.00 IN FINE PRIZES

The First Prize Will be $400 Lonsdale Piano—Three Other Prizes Aggregating $300 or More in Value Will be Given.

The Contest is Open to Ladies, Married or Single.

Every Lady is Guaranteed a Fair Compensation for Her Efforts.

Seven hundred dollars worth of beautiful, useful and valuable prizes are to be given away absolutely free in the Advocate Voting Campaign which formally begins tomorrow, Thursday, July 15th. Any lady living within the circulation zone of the Advocate, whether a resident of Newcastle or not, is eligible to enter the campaign and share in the distribution of prizes which will be awarded to the winners.

There will be four prizes in all given away, and in addition to the prizes, every contestant is guaranteed at least fair compensation for the time and effort devoted to the work of the campaign.

The first prize in this campaign will be a beautiful $400 Lonsdale upright piano, which is pronounced by music critics to be one of the very finest pianos to be found in the Dominion of Canada. This piano is a "Made in Canada" product, being manufactured by the Lonsdale Piano Co., of Toronto. The instrument is made by expert workmen, and the finest materials procurable are put into its construction. Not one particle of any cheap or shoddy material of any kind is permitted to find its way into a Lonsdale piano, and the manufacturers are, therefore, able to guarantee the piano as absolutely first class in every respect. The tone is perfect, and the piano itself in appearance, as well as in reality, is a genuine work of art. The lady who wins this piano as the first prize in the Advocate Voting Campaign will come into possession of a piano of unquestioned merit and value, and will have every reason to feel proud of her achievement, and reward.

Hardly less desirable, and to some people even more useful than the first prize, will be the second prize, to be awarded in the Advocate campaign. This prize will consist of a beautiful oak cabinet containing one hundred and thirty pieces of the heaviest plated flat silverware, the famous Rogers guaranteed quality, worth one hundred and fifty dollars. This magnificent prize will be fully described next week.

The third prize will be worth one hundred dollars, and the fourth, fifty. Both these prizes will be of the finest, and will be described next week.

All the prizes will be placed on exhibition within a short time, when they can be inspected by contestants, their friends, and the public at large. Every article to be given away in this campaign will be the finest and best that can be obtained in each line, and contestants will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are working for prizes which they will be glad to win. The campaign in which all these prizes are to be given away will last but six weeks, and will close on August 26.

The Advocate Campaign system is very simple. The prizes will be awarded on the basis of votes secured by the ladies taking part in the contest, the lady securing the highest number of votes winning the $400 piano, the lady securing the second highest number of votes winning the second prize and so on. Votes will be credited to contestants for subscriptions secured by them to the Advocate or Every Woman's World, or both. The subscription price of each publication is $1 a year. Subscriptions may be either old, or new, or renewals. The vote values of various subscriptions are given on page 5. The ladies who take part in this contest will not be restricted or hampered in their efforts in any way whatsoever. Any lady will be privileged to secure a subscription from anyone, anywhere, anytime, for any term of years; and anyone who desires, will have the privilege of helping any lady in getting subscriptions. Complimentary votes will also be given contestants, and a ballot good for 100 votes will be published in each issue of the Advocate during the contest, until the last issue immediately preceding the close.

"How can you do it?" some people will probably ask when they hear the Advocate is going to give $700 in prizes. To those who have some idea of modern business methods there will be nothing very mysterious in the Advocate announcement. To those who find any difficulty in accepting the Advocate offer as genuine, it may be as well to explain that the giving away of $700 in prizes is a straight forward, plain, business proposition, involving no more real mystery than the building of a new factory. The Advocate wants to add new subscribers and to collect money due from some of its old subscribers. It is believed that a number of enterprising, energetic, intelligent ladies can accomplish the results desired better than those results could be accomplished by any other means, and estimating the results to be accomplished by the ladies who take part in the contest at a definite figure, a certain sum of money is set aside which it is considered will be a fair compensation for work done, and with this money the prizes are provided. The estimate of the results to be obtained may be correct or it may not. But, with the experience of other newspapers, and a somewhat intimate knowledge of its own field, and of people living in the that field, the Advocate is fairly certain that the estimate cannot be far astray. In any event the prizes will be given away exactly as promised and the only thing about which any contestant need bother herself is getting votes. The great big certainty of the contest is that the ladies who secure the most votes will be the prize winners.

A most important feature of the contest is that every lady who takes part in it will be absolutely sure of some reward, for in addition to the $700 worth of prizes that will be given away the Advocate will pay each and every contestant who fails to win a prize, ten per cent cash commission on all money she collects. No fee nor expenditure of any kind whatsoever is required to enter the contest. All that is necessary is to be nominated and this may be done by anyone, either the prospective contestant or any friend or acquaintance simply writing the contestant's name on the nomination form printed on page 5 of this issue, and sending name to the Campaign Director, Union Advocate, Newcastle, N. B. Receipt books will be furnished free of charge and full information and instructions will be given each lady as to how to go about the work in order to secure the best results.

Orangemen Celebrate at Fredericton

Large Number from North Shore Attend Provol Demstration.

"The Glorious Twelfth," was fittingly observed this year by the Grand Provincial Demonstration at Fredericton. The day was almost perfect for the occasion and some 10,000 excursionists from all parts of the province were present to witness and take part in the street parade which was about a mile and a half long. The North Shore delegation were conveyed to Fredericton by special train which left Loggieville at 6:00 o'clock and arrived in Newcastle about 7 o'clock, with three cars of excursionists. Here they were joined by the Douglstown and Newcastle delegations, numbering about 250, and the Douglstown and Newcastle bands. More passengers were picked up at all stops and when the train pulled into Fredericton about 12:45 there were some 900 excursionists on board. About 3 o'clock the big parade formed up at Old Government House, where the following Northumberland Lodges were marshalled into line by Acting County Director of Ceremonies, Mr. D. C. Smallwood.

Wycliffe Lodge No. 89, Douglstown, H. T. Atkinson, W. M. Douglstown Band.

True Blue Lodge, No. 90, Chatham, John Bell, W. M.

Derry Lodge, No. 143, Loggieville, W. R. Gillis, W. M.

"No Surrender" Lodge, No. 47, Newcastle, Wm. McCullum, W. M. Newcastle Band.

Northumberland Star Lodge, No. 134, Upper Blackville. Northumberland Royal Scarlet Chapter.

The parade then passed through the principal streets of the city and returned to old Government House, where speeches were delivered by Mayor Mitchell, Grand Master W. B. Wallace, St. John, Grand Chaplain Rev. W. McN. Matthews, Bathurst, and Lieut. A. J. Brooks of the 55th Battalion.

Both the bands from the Northumberland received good recognition from the crowds that lined the streets through which the parade passed. The Newcastle band showed up well in their new uniforms, and the music rendered by them and the Douglstown band, was equal to that rendered by any of the other seven bands in the parade. On all sides were expressions of surprise that a town the size of Newcastle should possess such a fine body of musicians. The excursion train left Fredericton about 8:00 o'clock and arrived in Newcastle at three on Tuesday morning.

Newcastle Lady Weds At Jacquet River

Miss Gertrude Clarke, Formerly of Newcastle, Wedded to Mr. N. Ernest MacNair.

The marriage of Miss H. Gertrude, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. A. Clarke, of Jacquet River, late of Newcastle, to Mr. N. Ernest MacNair of Jacquet River, was solemnized in the Bethel Presbyterian Church, River Louison, Tuesday evening last. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. F. L. Jobb, in the presence of a large number of friends. As the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the church, the choir sang "The Voice that breathed o'er Eden." Mrs. Jobb presided at the organ and the bridal chorus from Lohengrin. The church was beautifully decorated by friends of the bride with potted plants, daisies and ferns. The bride was dressed in white figured duchesse satin with corsage of lace and satin. She wore a bridal veil fastened with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. She was attended by her sister, Miss Edith Clark, as maid of honor, and the groom was supported by his brother, Harold MacNair.

The ushers were Lieut. H. Allison Clarke, brother of the bride, and Alex. Turvey, cousin of the groom. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Many beautiful gifts were received. The River Louison congregation and Jacquet River Sunday School presented the bride with $50 in gold, in appreciation of her services as organist. Mr. and Mrs. MacNair are spending their honeymoon in Nova Scotia. They will live at Jacquet River.

Work on New Hospital Is Progressing Favorably

View of Front Elevation and Description of The Building When Completed

The new Miramichi Hospital, now in course of erection, when completed, will be one of the best equipped institutions of its kind in the Maritime Provinces, according to the details as given below, with accompanying drawing of the front elevation of this modern home for the sick and injured.

A full account of the laying of the corner stone, and the ceremonies in connection therewith, was given in last week's issue of the Advocate. Much has also already been said and written in laudation of the Miramichi citizen whose kindly gift of a large sum of money made possible the building of this magnificent structure and also of the members of the local Board of Trade through whose influence and untiring efforts case, which will be very spacious and with an easy rise. This enclosure will also contain the electric elevator, which will be the most up-to-date and best of its kind. Connections from the rear entrance will be made with this elevator so that patients may be conveyed from the ambulance direct to the elevator. On this floor facing the front of the building to the right will be the main office and board room, while on the left will be the general waiting room and the nurses' parlor. Just across the hall will be the Matron's private room, with bath attached. The corridors will be the full length of the central portion of the building, divided from the wards by brick fire walls with self-closing fire doors, thus making three distinuous preliminary work was brought to a focus and the actual work was begun. But this is not the subject of this article.

With the following particulars and accompanying illustration an idea can be gained of what this hospital will be like when completed. Situated as it is about 275 feet back from the main highway, with just enough incline towards the building to insure splendid drainage, which is a great factor, makes the location an ideal one for an institution of this kind.

The Area and Basement

Nine acres of ground, overlooking the beautiful Miramichi river, comprise the plot. The building has a frontage of 143 feet, with an average width of 40 feet, with full size basement. The height of the basement from the floor to the ceiling is eleven feet one inch. Reinforced concrete forms the foundation walls.

The main partitions of the building will be of brick with gypsum block partitions dividing the different rooms. In this part of the building the main kitchen with pantries and storerooms will be located. These will be connected with a dumb-waiter lift to the diet kitchen above.

The Eastern Half

The nurses' dining room, X-Ray, dark room and also the emergency room will be located in the eastern half of the building. The ceiling of this portion will be built of mill construction, and will form the main floor above. This ceiling and floor will be so constructed as to conform with the requirements of the fire underwriters.

The Western Half

The western half of the basement will contain the boiler and fuel rooms, with laundry and drying room. The ceilings of these rooms will also be of reinforced concrete, thus making them strictly fire-proof.

The Ground Floor

The ground floor will contain two public wards. On the right will be the male medical, and on the left the female medical. These wards will each be 24x28 feet, with 12 foot ceilings, and will contain six beds each. These wards will be second to none in the Dominion of Canada, as extra care and attention is being given to the matter of air space per each bed. With a room 24x28 feet and 12 foot ceiling, the air space per bed in this hospital will be greater than is the case with most other institutions of this kind.

Electric Elevator

On entering from the front entrance one will face the main stair tinect compartments on each floor. In case of fire either one may be entirely closed from the other.

The Second Floor

The second floor will contain two public wards, which will be the exact counterpart of the ones on the ground floor, but which will be used as male and female surgical. The private rooms are also on this floor, seven in number, fitted with private baths and fire places.

Spacious Veranda

All of these rooms, as well as the public wards, will have easy access through the corridors to the large verandas on both floors. These spacious verandas will be two stories in height and will be 16x33 feet. From these large observation points one will be able to get a magnificent view of the beautiful Miramichi river and the surrounding country, besides their being a most desirable place for the convalescent to bask in the sunshine.

The Third Floor

The third floor will be the home of the nurses, and also the operating department. This department will be fitted with all the latest appliances, such as are found in all first class hospitals. It will also be fitted up with sterilizing and anesthetic rooms, etc. The operating room, bath rooms and toilets will be fitted up with petrosilo floors and walls, which is the most refractory and sanitary composition known today.

Electric Call System

The hospital will be lighted by electricity throughout, and will also be fitted up with the very latest electric call system, by which nurses may be summoned day or night with the least exertion or disturbance to the patient.

Steam Heating

The building will be heated by what is known as low pressure steam, having twin boilers of the latest pattern. The plumbing and fixtures throughout will be of the very latest hospital pattern, and the most sanitary that can be procured.

Observatory on Roof

The building will also have an observatory on the roof of the central portion, which will be flat, and will be reached by a stairway leading from the third floor. This will no doubt prove a very attractive feature to visitors from other parts who wish to view the beautiful scenery of the surrounding country.

The building is being built by day labor, thus ensuring the best workmanship, and the committee in

South West Boom Breaks from Freshet

Some Forty Million S. ft. of Logs Have Gone Adrift.

The heavy wind and rain storm of Friday night did considerable damage to roads and bridges throughout the Miramichi district. The freshet caused by the heavy downpour caused the Southwest boom to break, sending adrift about forty million s. ft. of logs. The boom contained about sixty million at first, and from this about twenty-five or thirty million were taken out. The remainder went adrift. The lumbermen immediately held a meeting here Sunday morning and arrangements were made giving James Robinson full charge of looking after the logs. It was also arranged that a scaler be put in each mill, and each man's logs going to another mill would be surveyed and the costs apportioned. Just how many logs have gone adrift unsaved is not known, as the rule of paying ten cents a piece for saved logs is not being followed out in this case.

charge are leaving nothing undone to make this public institution the most up-to-date in the Maritime Provinces.

Mr. J. Leonard Heans, of St. John, N. B., is the architect, who has given much of his time and study to make the building perfect.

To the Superintendent, Mr. John Edgett, the Advocate is indebted for the above particulars.

A Narrow Escape From Electrocution

Chief C. M. Dickson's Narrow Escape From Death by Live Wire

Chief of Fire Department C. M. Dickson had an experience on Monday night which was by no means an enviable one, and through which he came within an ace of crossing the Great Divide, which had not been favored by a kind Providence, would have been an extremely sad affair.

About 7:30 o'clock on that evening, while a thunder and lightning storm was in progress, whether by being struck by lightning or the insulation burning off, the street electric wire in the rear of the Hotel Miramichi set fire to the post and the wire burned in two, the wires falling to the ground.

Chief Dickson received a call from Central that there was a fire in that vicinity, and went over to see to what extent it was before calling out the department. The blaze was only for a few seconds, but seeing the wires on the ground, and knowing they were separated, but not realizing that they were still charged with electricity, he stooped and picked the wire up with his right hand when he was violently thrown to the ground, unable to clear himself of the dangerous position he was in.

He called to those standing by to haul him clear. A helping hand was given him, but the person received such a shock that they abandoned their efforts and an ax was hurriedly brought and the wire on both sides of the prostrate Chief were cut, cutting off the current. He was immediately taken to Dr. McGrath's office, where his burns were dressed, after which he was driven to his home. Chief Dickson is a fortunate man in that he is none the worse for his experience, apart from a burned hand.

Recruiting is reported slow in Nova Scotia, as well as New Brunswick.

Germans in Southwest Africa All Surrender

Outwitted by Gen. Botha The Kaiser's Forces Lay Down Arms

London, July 9.—Under the heading "The end of German Southwest Africa," Reuter's Capetown correspondent cables: "As a result of General Botha's tireless and swift advance and masterly enveloping movement in the face of enormous natural difficulties he completely outgeneraled, outmanoeuvred and outgitted the Germans, and the capture or surrender of the remainder of the enemy in the field is only a matter of short time.

"As a result of the operations, all the British prisoners in the hands of the Germans have been released, 700 prisoners have already been taken, and any attempt at scattered guerrilla warfare has been frustrated." After suppressing the rebellion against British authority in the Union of South Africa, General Botha took command of British operations against German Southwest Africa, and headed an invasion of that territory late in February. His operations were reported to be uniformly successful.

The forces under his command captured "Olymbingue" on May 18, two days later he had occupied the important railway junction of Karibb and other stations after a march of thirty-five miles over a waterless waste during which the troops suffered severely from heat, thirst and hunger.

The road to Windhoek, capital of the German territory was opened by the occupation of Keetmanshop. Windhoek was taken May 18, with out opposition on the part of the German forces. Martial law was proclaimed throughout the conquered territory.

Reports from London recently have stated that the surrender of all the German forces was expected soon. British military experts have contended that General Botha had conducted a masterly campaign. German Southwest Africa is located on the west coast of Africa, extending from the Orange River to the Cune River about 900 miles. It lies between Portuguese West Africa and Cape Colony, extending eastward to the British sphere. The area is 322,450 square miles. The population in 1913 was 14,816 of whom 12,292 were Germans. The military force including police, is given in the last report as 2,992.

London, July 10.—Because of reports that submarines were waiting for her, the White Star liner Adriatic was conveyed by a British destroyer from the moment she entered the war zone off the Irish coast, until she reached Liverpool, it was learned here today. Some of her officers complained that the Admiralty did not give the line advance information that she was to receive an escort. Had this been done, they said, the liner would have carried her full complement of passengers.

Will Release Troops For Service in France

London, July 9.—The surrender of the entire German force in German Southwest Africa, closes one of the most important campaigns of the great war, and releases for service elsewhere the South African contingent.

The campaign against the most important German African colony was considered so vital that all the resources of the South African Union were used in it, but its successful conclusion probably means that, despite the fact that German East Africa remains unconquered, a contingent will be despatched to France, while additional forces will continue the campaign in East Africa. It is believed German Southwest Africa will become a part of the South African Union.

NERVOUS CHILDREN

Hard Study and Too Little Exercise Leads to St. Vitus Dance

There is much criticism of modern educational methods that require too much work of school children, allowing them too little time for play and preventing sufficient out-of-door exercise. When the study of music or any other accomplishment, with the necessary practice is added, the strain is increased. Under these conditions the blood becomes impoverished and fails to nourish the nerves. The child becomes restless, and twitching of the muscles follow. Sometimes the child stumbles in walking and drops what it tries to hold. Pallor, listlessness and irritability are symptoms that early should be met. The demands made upon them, and that St. Vitus dance has fastened its hold upon the child.

In this condition there is no tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which build up the blood, strengthen the nerves and safely help to meet the demands of the growing child. Out-of-door exercise, nourishing food, plenty of sleep with these tonic pills will cure even the most severe cases of St. Vitus dance. We offer the following proof: "Up to the age of ten years," says Mrs. Johnson, of Hemford, N. S., "my son Calvin was as healthy and rugged as any child could be. Then he began to complain that his eyes hurt him, and of pains in the head, and began to fall back in his studies at school. Then I noticed a twitching of the muscles of his face and arms, and later his whole body seemed to be in constant motion. Our family physician was called in and pronounced the trouble a severe attack of St. Vitus dance. He was under the doctor's treatment for some three months but did not seem to improve. We had taken him from school, and were careful that nothing should excite him, but notwithstanding he grew worse, and the next start would bring on attacks of hysteria. This went on for some months until Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were brought to my attention, and we decided to give him this medicine. After using a few boxes there was a noticeable improvement, and by the time he had taken nine or ten boxes he had recovered his former good health. There has been no sign of a return of the trouble, and I can scarcely say how thankful we feel for the complete restoration of our son's health."

Parents who find their growing boys or girls becoming nervous should lose no time in giving them Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You may ward off an attack of St. Vitus dance or if the trouble has reached that stage the Pills will effect a cure. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Joseph W. Hetherington

Washedemoak, N. B., July 5.—The death of Joseph W. Hetherington occurred at his late residence, Washedemoak, Thursday, July 1, in the eighty-second year of his age. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Sarah Small, Highfield, and Mrs. Cornelia Chamberlain, of Colma. He spent his entire life at Washedemoak and took a prominent part in the life of the community. He was an active member of the Baptist church, an aggressive temperance worker and a well recognized influence in the political activities of the county, being a consistent advocate of British imperialism. ## WOMAN SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Female Ills—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Belleville, N. S., Canada.—"I doctored for ten years for female troubles and did not get well. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I write now to tell you that I am cured. You can publish my letter as a testimonial." —Mrs. SUVRINE BARINE, Belleville, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Another Woman Recovers. Auburn, N. Y.—"I suffered from nervousness for ten years, and had such organic pains that sometimes I would lie in bed four days at a time, could not eat or sleep and did not want anyone to talk to me or bother me at all. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did the best they could for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and now I am in good health." —Mrs. WILLIAM H. GILL, No. 15 Pleasant Street, Auburn, New York.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Stomach Troubles Quickly Cured

People go on suffering from little stomach troubles for years, and imagine they have a serious disease. They overeat or over-drink and force on the stomach a lot of extra work, but they never think that the stomach needs extra help to do the extra work. If these people would take Tonaline Tablets regularly they would be a great big help to the stomach in its strain of over-work. No matter what you eat or drink Tonaline tabs sweep your sour stomach and eruct gas belching in five minutes. The heaviness disappears, and the stomach is greatly aided in its work of digestion.

TONOLINE Tablets not only promptly relieves all distress, but if taken regularly will absolutely cure indigestion by building up the flabby, overworked walls of the stomach and make them strong enough to digest the most hearty meal. $1 for a 50 days' treatment. Mailed by American Proprietary Co., Boston, Mass.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girl! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Dandene.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Dandene. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fashish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knovot's Dandene from any drug store and just try it.

Funeral was held Sunday afternoon July 5th, Rev. Calvin Currie was the officiating clergyman. The pall-bearers were W. H. Somerville, N. D. Hetherington, Stephen Starkey, Hartley Connell, Charles Connell, Jr., and W. K. Gourley.

It was feared for a time that his eyesight would be permanently affected, but his progress within the last few weeks has been very pronounced.

A Miramichi correspondent to the Moncton Times writes that a good joke is told on Hon. L. J. Tweedie, who has declared himself a Liberal candidate for the next Dominion election. A week ago, Saturday, a party from Chatham went down river. In Bay du Vin Basin they pulled along side a fishing boat, in which was Ambrose Williston, a well-known and prominent man of that part of the county. After exchanging ordinary friendly salutations, Mr. Tweedie called out to Mr. Williston: "I'm coming out next Dominion election, Ambrose, will you vote for me?" "Sure I will," replied Mr. Williston, "if you come out as a Conservative."

Speaking with appreciation of the receipt of a parcel of "smokes," Irvin Charters, of Sackville, says: "I see by some of the New Brunswick papers a few of our Canadian patriotic citizens object to the sending of tobacco to the boys at the front. Well, I do not one moment wish to criticize these gentlemen; but I do say if some of them, or their sons, had the courage to be where Canada's sons are now fighting in France they would not doubt see that their protest was ridiculous from every point of view. Smoking in itself is not injurious, and why should these men object to one of the very few comforts the men have who are fighting for these very critics? Most people here declare tobacco in trench life a necessity."

28th Field Battery To Valcartier

Major Crocker Given Presentation at Millerton—Rousing Send Off Here

The 28th Field Battery, under Major Randolph Crocker, of Millerton, which has been stationed at Fredericton for the past few months, passed through here about 8.30 Wednesday night on their way to Valcartier where they will complete their training.

A number of the bandsmen and an immense crowd of citizens gathered at the station to give them a rousing send-off. After their arrival the men were formed up two-tier on the road, and it was thought they were to be given a march around town, but it was probably done to give a better chance for relatives to say a last good-bye.

Local boys who passed through with the battery were:

- Samuel Regan Newcastle
Bert Irving "
Perley Johnstone "
Walter Malby "
Jes. McDonald "
Alex. McDonald " Frank Currie "

Wilfrid Comfort remained at Fredericton to look after those on the sick list.

Presentation to Major Crocker On the arrival of the train at Millerton a large crowd of people gathered to give Major Crocker and the local boys a grand send-off, which they did in a hearty good style.

The station was decorated with flags and bunting, and the ladies of Millerton and the Red Cross Society provided lunches for the boys. On behalf of the people of Millerton, Major Crocker was presented with a wrist watch and a set of military brushes. Dr. W. A. Wilson, in a very appropriate speech, made the presentation. He spoke feelingly of the great sacrifice Major Crocker was making, in leaving his family and a good business behind, to answer their call of the Empire. He also spoke of his long connection with the 12th Field Battery, and the interest he took in it after qualifying as Major.

Major Crocker replied, thanking those of his native home for their kind remembrance and thoughtfulness in supplying the soldiers with the lunches, and saying their reception at Millerton would always be remembered by him.

WEDNESDAY JULY 14TH, 1915

WHAT BRITAIN IS DOING

The Chicago Daily News pays a striking tribute to the part that Great Britain is playing in the war, and shows how she is bending her energies to a colossal task.

- 1. Holding the seas for the ships of her Allies as well as for her own. 2. Protecting the coasts of her Allies as well as her own. 3. Struggling in co-operation with the French, to smash the Turks and win the Balkans for the Allied cause.

Why then this campaign of pessimism? Winston Churchill in his speech at Dundee said that "pessimism in the civilian population is akin to cowardice in the army," and his statement was not exaggerated.

KITCHENER'S APPEAL

Above the noise of whatever quarrelling may go on in political life in Britain from time to time, there stands out the solid fact that the nation, to a man, is behind the War Minister Lord Kitchener.

Already Lord Kitchener has won immortal fame by the feat he has performed in raising and organizing armies. History contains no parallel.

The time may not be far distant when Lord Kitchener will go to the front to organize the fighting, as he has organized the training of his new armies.

GENERAL DISSATISFACTION

There is at present a general dissatisfaction among the users of electric lights in town, over the service rendered, and it is felt that some radical change or improvement must be made at the power house if the town wishes to continue in line with other towns of the province for first place recognition.

That the present plant is insufficient and too costly to operate to an advantage, everybody knows, and unless something is done now, the town will find itself up against a proposition that will take many thousands of dollars to solve.

It is true that to install an up-to-date plant will entail a large expenditure, which no doubt the town is not in a position to shoulder at the present time; but what will be the result when this plant has served its extreme usefulness? The town of Newcastle finds itself today in the same position that other towns have been placed in—right up against it, with an old worn-out plant staring it in the face.

The people of England, in common with the rest of the world know that Germany has already reached the height of her military power, while the Allies progress towards that position has been slow, perhaps slower than it ought to have been.

They know that the Dardanelles are being bravely and well defended, and that progress there has been slow. They know that Russia has

AMERICAN SHIP USED AS SHIELD

By German Submarine to Torpedo A Russian Steamer

Liverpool, July 13, 2:10 a. m.—How an American ship is alleged to have been used as a shield by a German submarine for the sinking of another vessel is the story related by members of the crew of the American bark Normandy, which has arrived here from Gulfport, Miss.

The story is that the Normandy was stopped by a German submarine sixty miles southwest of Tuskar Rock, off the southeast coast of Ireland, Friday night. The captain was called aboard the submarine, where his papers were examined and found to show that the ship was chartered by an American firm January 5.

The captain of the bark, it was asserted, was allowed to return to the Normandy, but under the threat that his ship would be destroyed unless he stood by and obeyed orders. These orders, it was stated, were that he was to act as a shield for the submarine, which lay around the side of the bark, hiding itself from an approaching vessel.

This vessel proved to be the Russian steamer Leo. Presently the submarine submerged and proceeded around the bow of the Normandy, so the story went, and ten minutes later the crew of the Normandy saw the Leo blown up.

Twenty-five persons were on board of whom eleven were drowned, including three stewardesses. Those saved included three Americans, Walter Emery, of North Carolina; Harry Clark, of Sierra, and Harry Whitney, of Camden, N. J. All these three men, when interviewed, corroborated the above story. They declared that no opportunity was given those on board for saving life.

The Leo was bound from Philadelphia for Manchester with a general cargo. The captain of the Normandy told the survivors that he would have liked to have signalled their danger to them, but that he dared not do so because his uninsured ship would have been instantly sunk.

The steamer Leo sailed from Philadelphia June 25 for Leth, under command of Captain Jerstrom. She was a vessel of 2,342 tons and belonged in Helsingfors. She was built in 1902.

CRIME IN NEW YORK

It was expected that the execution of the gunmen who killed Rosenthal, and the punishment that was visited on some other apprehended slayers would result in materially reducing the murder record in New York city; but it is now noted that the Director of the Bureau of City Enquiry states that as a result of police failures, scores of murderers are walking the streets unmolested, and murder has become one of the safest crimes to commit. It is a terrible indictment against a city of New York's extensions, and yet the figures given showing that of 173 murders committed in the borough of Manhattan alone during the last year, 75 still remain unsolved, certainly substantiate the charge made.

Readers are reminded that this column is open to questions which should be sent to me in care of the Sporting Editor, and to discussions by the readers on anything connected with hunting or target shooting.—A. P. L.

C. H., Chicago.
1. Is it allowed to hunt small game (rabbits, squirrels, also ducks and water fowl) with a .22 cal. rifle in the State of Illinois?
Ans. I do not know of any law which prohibits the use of a .22 caliber rifle for hunting such game as you mention.
2. Which make auto loading rifle do you prefer, Savage, Winchester or Remington?
Ans. This is a question for you to decide. Ask some of your sportsmen friends.
M. H. B., Wapello, Ia.
Some time ago you recommended the use of nitro solvent oil for a gun that was loaded. Will you please tell me where I can buy such oil and is it made by a special process?
Ans. Any of the regular hardware or sporting goods dealers can supply you with a nitro solvent oil. There are various makes on the market varying from good to bad. Pick one make by a reliable concern. Most of these oils are made by a very complicated "process," the process consisting in pouring all the things which go to make up the oil together and stirring them up.
H. A. C., New Britain, Conn.
1. Which is the most powerful for .22 calibre rifle cartridges, the black powder, the smokeless or the semi-smokeless or Lesmok?
Ans. As now loaded there is no difference in the power.
2. Which of the above is least harmful to the rifle?
Ans. Lesmok or semi-smokeless are the least harmful to the rifle.
3. Is there any law prohibiting the use of a rifle in closed season for frogs or target shooting outside the city or town limits in this State?
Ans. There is no law prohibiting the use of a rifle for target shooting at any time of the year. Killing frogs is hunting and it would be best to have a regular hunting license if you intend to go after them either in or out of season. If you want to get absolutely reliable information on this subject write to Wm. K. Mollan, President State Board of Fisheries and game, Room 64, Capitol, Hartford, Conn. If you will send me his reply and it contains anything out of the ordinary, some of my other readers may be interested in it.
1. My shot gun targets from 279 to 367 using the same 5 trap loads. Average 323 pellets. Do you consider this a good trap gun?
Ans. You have a very close shooting shot gun. You do not give the lead used, and I assume it is 1 1/2 oz. of shot. The variation in the number of pellets between shots is greater with a very close shooting gun, such as you have, than it would be with a more open gun. This cannot be helped, however. I should

CLEVER STRATEGY OF RUSSIAN RETREAT

It is hardly to be supposed that Germany intends to conquer Russia or even a large part thereof. It seems most probable that Germany has hoped to smash the Russian army by a sudden terrific blow with enormous forces. Her aim, probably, is to put the Russian army completely out of the field and then turn to the other allies. On the other hand, the Russian aim, in this long retreat, has been to hold its line in tact and inflict the severest possible loss, keeping just far enough away to avoid dangerous losses and yet not too far to lure the enemy on. If the Russians can compel the loss of one German soldier for every Russian soldier lost, that alone will be an advantage gained. By reports, they seem to have done considerably better. But, the biggest point gained is that of stretching out the lines of the enemy forces and getting them continually farther from their base of supplies. Another great advantage lies in the fact that the Russians will be able to choose their own battle ground from which to launch their return advance against the Germans, just as the allies did before Paris. When they do give battle, it will be with full supplies in every branch, ammunition, rapid fire guns, and heavy reinforcements. The German forces, on the other hand, will be badly weakened by the long advance, far from base, away from reinforcements, and far less well supplied, due to being far from base. We may confidently expect news, very soon, of a reversal of this retreat, with the Russian steam roller crushing back the German forces. The Italian forces continue to make rapid progress and it is evident that neither Austria nor Germany can spare troops from Galicia or the west to defend against Italy. That fact alone, is evidence that Germany is putting forth her utmost energy against Russia in this powerful effort in Galicia. So, when Russia turns on Germany at the end of the retreat, Germany will either have to fall back to an even greater distance than she has come; or else she will have to seriously weaken the forces she has opposed to the allies in the west. In that case of course, there would be a great forward movement on the western front at once. But, it has been the fixed policy of Germany to hold fast to that western front.

CULTIVATION OF FLAX

"It is only a question of intelligent co-operation between the government, the farmers and flax producers to secure a sufficient quantity of the flax—the raw material of the linen trade—in order to make possible the building up of a large and prosperous flax industry in the Dominion of Canada. It is simply a question of the production of the raw material and the investment of sufficient capital to manufacture the same into fibres, yarns and linens." Thus spoke Mr. Geo. H. Campbell, President of the Canadian Flax Mills, Limited, at a conference recently held of flax dealers, growers and mill-owners at London, Ont. Mr. Campbell enlarged upon the importance of the industry, described the cultivation of flax from its sowing to maturity, and detailed the process of its manufacture into fibre for commercial purposes. An important point that he alluded to was that the climate and soil of Ontario are particularly adapted to flax-growing. A report of the proceedings at the conference is embodied in an eleven-page pamphlet that can be had free by addressing the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and that in addition contains a complete account of a visit to the Demonstration Plant of the Feuillette Retting System at Goderville, France, given in an address by Mr. Albert Durant, Secretary of the French Flax Spinners' Association. Mr. Durant goes minutely into particulars of the system, detailing the machinery required, the cost involved and all the operations necessary until the manufactured product is ready to be placed upon the market. Mr. James G. Crawford, the translator, in a foot note at the end, remarks: "It must be borne in mind that the high price of $29 per ton for the flax represents first-class straw saved in good condition, but the same straw badly saved might not fetch $9 per ton. Land is dearer and taxes higher in France than in Canada, and all these are elements in the cost. On the other hand labour is cheaper." There is but one deduction to be drawn from the pamphlet and that is the increased production of flax in Canada would prove remunerative. It might be added that the prospects are greatly improved by the existing situation in Europe, Northern France and Belgium having hitherto been the almost monopolistic centres of growth and manufacture.

Condition of Crops in New Brunswick

Press Bulletin Issued by the Census Statistical Office

A special press bulletin issued by the Census and Statistics Office gives the following report on the condition of field crops in New Brunswick on July 1, as summarized from telegrams despatched from the Dominion Experimental Farms and Stations and illustration farms in accordance with arrangements made between the Departments of Trade and Commerce and Agriculture:

From Fredericton it is reported that June has been excessively wet throughout central and southern New Brunswick, preventing the planting of crops on damp lands. In northern New Brunswick conditions are nearly normal and crops on well-drained lands are progressing rapidly. The hay crop outlook indicates a yield above average. A report from Hartland states that beneficial rains fell from the 18th to the 30th; the condition of grain crops and grass is light; hooed crops, especially potatoes, are coming along fine. At Anagance heavy rains have fallen all the month; hay is excellent; grain crops are fair; hooed crops have germinated evenly.

Similar reports also come from Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

Rome, July 10—Thousands of tons of metal are being hurled against the Austrian works along the Isonzo, in a determined attempt to wreck the defenses of Gorizia. King Victor Emmanuel, accompanied by his cousin, the Duke D'Aosta, is speeding up and down the Italian front, personally directing the artillery fire and encouraging his troops. Italian aviators are raiding the Austrian front without challenge from the enemy's aviators. Official despatches today reported that the railway station at Nabresina has again been bombed from the air.

FINE PRINTING IS AN ART

Do you know good printing?
Do you like good printing?
Do you know that it always pays to have the BETTER kind?
Perhaps you have been used to the one class of printing and know no other.
If this is so, it is time for you to have a look around and investigate and see what's what.
Do you know you do not have to go any farther away than Newcastle to obtain the BETTER class of printing.

Perhaps you have not given it a thought, but a great deal depends on the stock used in order to get a BETTER job. Investigate this.

Last, but not the least, do you know that The Advocate Job Department turns out only this BETTER class of work. If you will read on a little further, we will tell you how and why.

1st—We cater to that class of people who use only the best stock, and who know what BETTER printing is.

2nd—In order to give these customers the class of work they want, we have to keep in stock only the best grades of material. We do not handle cheap lines.

3rd—In order, again, to be able to turn out that BETTER class of printing, we employ only experienced and competent printers, who keep abreast of the times and watch the styles.

4th—What is as important as the above is equipment. If The Advocate Job Department was not fitted out as it is, with the most modern machinery and the very latest in type faces, it could not handle the fast growing trade, that has developed in the past year, of turning out that BETTER class of printing. Only the best inks are used, because this is necessary when high grade stock is used.

Now, Mr. Business Man, if you will read the above over carefully, see how your supply stands, then get in touch with this office, we feel sure you will become a customer. Give up that old-fashioned notion that first class printing comes only from the large city printing offices. As a matter of fact, the reverse is the case, and prices are invariably lower.

REMEMBER THAT WE DO ALL KINDS OF PRINTING

For commercial use, we have superior grades of Letter, Note and Bill Head, Stock, at prices and quality to suit any business and any purse. Our prices range from $2.50 to $4.00 per thousand for Letter Heads, and from $2.50 to $3.25 per thousand for Envelopes. Our Envelopes are the same material as our papers, and therefore match. We are always pleased to submit samples of stock, and prices, on application.

More Business IS WHAT WE WANT

You want the work—we want to do it for you. We have just the grade of paper you want, so why not let us get together in a co-operative way and make a strong pull for increased business—more business than usual.

"I will not take up your time; I see you are languid this morning. The ball was fatiguing, but it was sweet—inexpressibly sweet to me. You know why, I am sure. You have already guessed what I wish to say to you. I love you, Nina de Vasco. I lay my hand and my heart my life, at your feet!"

Nina was troubled.

"I thank you," she said, tremulously. "Believe me, I am very sorry that I—"

"Stop!" he interrupted, eagerly. "Do not yet answer me finally. I did not expect it. You have not known me long enough. I have offered no credentials. When I return in two months, I will bring them. You shall see that I am not unworthy, by birth or fortune, to claim the hand of the Vasco's daughter. What I ask now is that you will think of me while I am away, and you will give me now a hope that I may win you."

"I shall think of you kindly, Captain Alvera, that I can assure you; but—but I can not—"

"Stay!" he broke in impetuously, his brow darkening. "I know your heart is sore because of a recent disappointment; but if you still love that villain, I can never care for you—only for your money. I can tell you why he—"

"Silence, sir! How dare you!" interrupted Miss de Vasco, pale with indignation. "You have no right to pry into my affairs; you have no right to speak to me of them!"

"I have the right of a man who honestly loves you, and not your fortune. I have also the right of—But let that pass until my return; then you shall know. Miss de Vasco—Nina, you can not mean to leave me without hope! You can not deny that you encouraged me. Last night you permitted me to tell you—"

"Oh!" she interposed, trying to laugh off the embarrassment and regret she felt, "don't hold me to what happened last night, any more than I would hold you—"

"When the viols played their best. Lamps above and laughs below; 'Love me' sounded like a jest. Fit for 'yes' or fit for 'no.'"

You have had many a ball-room flirtation before this, Captain Alvera."

"No, by heaven!" he exclaimed, angrily. "I am not a man for trifling. So you were playing with me last night! But you will do so no more, Nina? You will be in earnest with me?"

"Yes, Captain Alvera. I am sorry there was any jesting last night. Forgive it. I shall answer you with plain truth today. I thank you for the honor you have done me; but I can give you no hope that I will ever love you well enough to accept your hand."

His dark face grew a shade darker.

"Is this final?" he asked.

"It is final. I beg that you will put me out of your mind."

"I will not put you out of my mind, Nina de Vasco, and you will jettison me repaying my love. Let me warn you, my proud signora, it is in my power to injure you terribly; and I belong to a vengeful race."

"You threaten me!" cried Nina, quick with scorn flashing into her face. "I had made the great mistake of supposing that Captain Alvera was a brave man, a man of honor."

He winced, pulling his black mustache fiercely.

"One forgets honor when one loves, and feels that he has been wronged," he said. "Threaten! Nina de Vasco, believe me, you will find to your cost that what I have said is no idle threat. You will find it when I return, two months from now, if you still refuse my hand. I will say no more today; time presses. I leave you with this saying; keep it in mind while I am away: Accept my offer, and I will devote my life to your service; reject it, and I will bring down ruin on your head!"

He was standing in the doorway when he spoke. He raised his hand as if registering an oath. A look of mingled love and malignance glowed in his eyes as they rested on Nina's beautiful, scornful face. Before she could speak he was gone.

ter toward her false lover—to drive him utterly out of her heart.

"Ah, well! this marriage will dig a gulf there will be no passing," she said to herself, as she went slowly back upstairs.

Mrs. Childs, burning with anxious curiosity, came to meet her.

"Well?" she asked.

"Captain Alvera did me the honor of offering me his hand."

"Oh, my dear child, if only you had waited a few hours, you need not have asked a man to marry you."

"Mrs. Childs," returned Nina, sternly, "you surely have not understood me, though I have labored to make plain to you that I do not want a husband in the domestic sense. I do not want either a master or a lover. Alvera would be both. I will not give up my freedom, nor will I ever again open my heart to love. Therefore, I want a legal husband only, and I have secured one. If he does not fail me," she added to herself.

CHAPTER V

"If he does not fail me."

This was the doubt that crept into Nina's mind as the day waned, and the evening—her marriage evening approached. What if he should not come? In that event, what public mortification would be hers!

For she had burned her ships behind her. The fact of her prospective marriage tonight had been announced; it had even been published. She had sent this note to Miss Van Dyke, whose bridesmaid she would be tonight.

"Dear Helen,—I shall have to tell you my secret. I have kept it till the last moment, for a reason I won't stop to give you now; but it may as well be made known now, and you shall be first to hear it. I, too, am to be married tonight. The fortunate—or the unfortunate—man is Mr. Warrington Lee. I have never, I believe, mentioned his name to you. Now say that a woman can't keep a secret! Well, I should like to have my marriage follow yours, at Grace, tonight. The good doctor won't object to tying two knots in succession; and you, my dear Helen, I am sure, be glad to have me follow your example so promptly."

The note was sent at noon, and James soon returned with a gushing reply on scented paper.

"You sly puss!" wrote the fair Helen—"No, indeed; never did you breathe a word to me about your engagement to Mr. Warrington Lee, nor did you ever mention his grand English name in my hearing. I suppose he is English, the second son of some Lord Lee, and you knew him in belle Cuba, and were betrothed to him while you were in short frocks. But how could you treat us like this? Never a hint, and making believe all the while you were engaged to that other! Well, I'll forgive you, since you are well, and married the same hour that I am. It's charming to have our weddings come together; though I know, of course, nobody will look at me; they will have eyes only for bride number two. Your marriage is so romantic, and will make such a sensation, that I couldn't resist sending a notice of the double wedding to Cousin Bert. He's on the 'Evening Age,' you know, and always so delighted to get a society item. So your mouse will be out of the bag this afternoon, and tonight you'll be the 'cynosure of all eyes,' as the stock novelists say. Look your loveliest, cara Thine, Helen."

Nina let the note drop in her lap, and looked down at it in silence for an instant. Then lifting a white face, she said, with a nervous laugh: "So the die is cast; the marriage notice is being published. No going back now. I've burned my ships behind me, Trixy, dear."

"Oh, Nina!" Mrs. Childs' fat hands were clasped in horror, her round face looked pale and scared. "But if that man—Mr. Lee, I mean—shouldn't come?"

"Then I should have the honor of getting into 'Town Talk' once more, as the girl who had been jilted twice," said Miss de Vasco, with a little forced laugh.

The thought of public humiliation was gall to her sensitive nature; but it was not so bitter as the thought that she might fall in her effort to retaliate upon her faithless lover.

"Anything to revenge myself on him; anything to make him believe I never cared for him, that I was deceiving him, instead of his blinding me."

This was the feeling that possessed her, and nerved her to carry out her scheme of a legal marriage with a man she had seen but once.

As the short afternoon drew to a close, Nina's suspense became painful. To add to her trial, Mrs. Childs was as nervous as herself; and having less self-control, she flattered about ceaselessly, breaking the china bric-a-bac, worrying the canary-bird into fits, and upsetting the pot-plants. She kept constantly exclaiming:

"Oh, Nina, how could you do such a terrible thing!"

All the morning she had declared her hope that "that man" would not make his appearance; but after the arrival of Miss Van Dyke's note, she was in terror lest he should fail to come.

"He's pocketed the money you were foolish enough to give him, Nina, and you'll never lay eyes on him again. He's some fellow that knows the police have an eye on him. He might have been hanging around the house, looking for a chance to burgle; or else he's got a wife already, and has a wholesome fear of the law against bigamy."

"Be quiet, for pity's sake, or you will simply craze me, Trixy!" Nina would say, clasping her hands over her throbbing temples.

Six o'clock came, but she had little heart to dress. She was sitting in enforced quiet, pretending to read, when James brought her a box wrapped in paper, which had been sent by a messenger boy. She opened it quickly. An exclamation of surprise fell from her lips. The box was filled with sprays of orange-buds and blossoms, almost as fresh as if just gathered. They lay in a bed of moist gray moss, and on the top was a card with a few words penciled on it:

"I was fortunate enough to find these. Thinking you might like them to take the liberty of sending them to you. Lee."

A quick flush came to her pale cheeks. She buried her face among the fragrant blooms to hide its expression of intense relief. Then she lifted her head and took pity on Mrs. Childs' anxious curiosity.

"Mr. Lee sent them," she said. "Have no more doubt about his coming."

At once she went to her room and began to dress. A little after seven she entered the drawing-room—

"beautiful as the Frost Queen, and as cold," Mrs. Childs declared. The only tender touch was the orange-flowers. She wore them in her hair, and they composed in part the bouquet she carried.

Mrs. Childs, in a rustling brown silk and handsome old lace, beamed upon her with affectionate admiration. All at once her face changed.

"Ah! if it was only a real wedding! If you were to marry a man that loved you, somebody we all knew, even Captain Alvera!" she sighed.

"Nina, my beautiful one, it is such a sacrifice! You are so lovely, and your dress is superb. You are like the lamb of old times, garlanded with flowers, and led to the altar to be sacrificed!"

"But I'm not led. It's I that am leading the lamb to the altar. You must give your pity to the bridegroom," Nina said, with a laugh of self-mockery.

"Pity! He's the luckiest man that ever lived. He has fallen upon a piece of miraculous good fortune."

"I wonder if he thinks so," mused Nina, recalling that the "tramp" had not seemed elated by her proposal—that indeed he had hesitated to accept it. "Perhaps he is making the sacrifice," she thought.

It was nearly half past seven. Miss de Vasco's carriage was at the door. Mrs. Childs, in a terrible state of nervous flutter, had stationed herself at the window, whence she kept a constant lookout on the street, occasionally glancing at the clock, and carrying on a running fire of exclamations.

"Dear me! what makes him so late? Nina, do you feel very sure he will be here? I wonder how he will look? What if his dress is in bad taste? What if he should wear a red tie and cheap white gloves? Oh, my poor child, I am afraid you are going to be put to shame! How can you take things so coolly? You look as if you were merely waiting for your escort to a ball instead of—"

She broke off suddenly. A carriage had stopped before the door. A man alighted from it and paused to say something to the driver. In one lightning glance Mrs. Childs took in the whole figure, nobly proportioned, faultlessly dressed. She looked quickly up at Nina, who had come to the window, and was looking out, hidden by the lace curtain.

"Thank Heaven! he is a gentleman—in looks, at least!" fervently ejaculated Mrs. Childs.

Nina said nothing, but the quick color that overspread her face gave evidence how keen had been her suspense and how welcome was the relief.

"Mr. Lee," announced the puzzled James, who had faintly recognized in the new arrival the tramp of the night before.

"He's a born gentleman. I know it by the way he wears his clothes. He seems a little embarrassed; but how can he help it? Even Nina is agitated with all her nerve."

Henry Lee was embarrassed. It is not the easiest position in the world to stand before a strange young woman whom you are soon to marry, and know that you and your clothes—both bought with her money—are being anxiously examined and critically weighed in the balance. The consciousness of having sacrificed honorable pride to mastering necessity in the bargain is not calculated to make the position pleasant. A deep flush burned on Henry Lee's thin cheek, and he bowed, without a word, before this white, stately girl who had asked him to marry her. Her own head fluttered like a netted dove under her white bodice, and the faint color fled from her cheeks.

But the embarrassment was short-lived. The strangely bright together pair were controlled by preoccupying motives too strong to allow of their being influenced by shallow feelings. Miss de Vasco, recovering herself, introduced Mrs. Childs, and Henry Lee shook the lady's cordially extended hand. Her quick eye noted the shapely hand and the well-fitting glove, pale gray in color.

"I hope you have not been waiting for me," he said. "I believe I am punctual."

"To the minute," replied Miss de Vasco; and she added, as she took a paper from the table: "Here is the written agreement—the same you heard of and acceded to last night. Will you glance over it and sign it? Mrs. Childs will witness your signature."

He took the sheet of paper from her hand and ran his eye carefully over the page upon which Nina had written the unique marriage contract, which alone was to bind them, the religious ceremony being, in their case, a mere form.

Mrs. Childs watched him closely as he read it. She was vexed in her heart that he did not fling it on the table and declare he would have none of it—that this lovely young woman must be his bride in truth or not at all. He looked so handsome, as he stood under the chandelier reading, with the slight flush spreading over his finely cut, melancholy face, and the girl beside him so soft and sweet in her bride attire, that Mrs. Childs, who had been trained in the old, romantic school, thought, in the depths of her sentimental heart: "They will think better of it; they will heart and hands in the old-fashioned way."

It gave her sensibilities a jar to hear Nina ask, in a cold, matter-of-fact voice:

"Is the agreement written correctly?—I had a legal form—and do the conditions please you on reading them?"

And the young man answered, with as little emotion:

"They suit me perfectly. You made it all clear last night."

Then he drew off his glove and sat down beside the table, calmly dipped the pen in the ink, and wrote his name, Miss de Vasco wrote hers beneath it, with equal deliberation.

The one most fluttered was the little chaparron, whose pretty, cushiony hand trembled so she could scarcely add her name as witness to this agreement, which she inwardly pronounced wicked, though she dared not protest against it, standing in awe as she did of the proud will and strong persistence of her charge.

A duplicate paper was signed in the same way, and then Miss de Vasco took her check-book from a drawer of the escritoire, and tearing out two checks, already signed, handed them to Lee.

"I prefer to give you both at once; they are each for twenty thousand dollars."

He did not take them at once.

"Will it not be better to wait—until—afterward?" he said, hesitatingly.

"No, if you please," she answered with gentle decision, "I wish to have the business over with."

He took the checks, coloring to the temples, and dropping his eyes as he folded the bits of paper that represented so much, and thrust them into an inner pocket of his coat.

He looked up directly with grave earnestness in his eyes.

"Miss de Vasco," he said, "you will let me feel that this money is a loan, which I hope to pay back to you. Otherwise I could not in honor receive it."

She looked him full in the eyes for a little while before answering, gently:

"Think of it as a loan if that will make you feel easier about taking it. To me it seems only pay, and not overgenerous pay, for the hard obligations you have let me put upon you. That is the business view, the true view of the transaction. I wish you to use the money in any way you like. It is only a small part of my fortune. I can well spare it. You will have your allowance besides, as you see in the agreement."

He raised his head quickly as if about to protest, then dropped his eyes again; his compressed lips seemed to say that he was making some earnest promise to himself.

"We must go, shall be late!" exclaimed Mrs. Childs. "Flora, bring your mistress's cloak."

In a few moments they were on their way in the two carriages to the thronged and richly lighted church, where the music of the wedding march had already begun to roll through the many-piped organ.

That hour in the church, it was like a trance to Nina de Vasco. The solemn music, the tall wax lights, the grave, pale face of the minister, his slow, deep voice, her own tones pronouncing after him the vow to love, honor, and obey a man she knew no more about than if he had dropped from the moon.

For the first time, as she knelt there, repeating those vows, the full sense of what she was doing—the fearful import of her act, and its stultifying—seemed to be dashed full into her face.

repenting!" she thought.

But it was too late to withdraw. Already the minister was pronouncing those words that are the clasp of the chain of marriage—"until death do you part!"

Nina was so overcome that she was fain to lean heavily for the first few steps on the arm of her newly won escort. The fierce strain was over; she was coming to herself. Reason was beginning to control blind, impulsive passion. She was beginning to regret her mad marriage. But it was too late.

The drive home together was accomplished almost in silence. Only Mrs. Childs attempted to relieve the oppression of the moral atmosphere by a little playful prattle. The bride answered only by monosyllables, the bridegroom by polite phrases.

At last the house was reached. They all left the carriage and entered the house. The servant who opened the door said to Nina:

"There's a gentleman waiting to see you in the parlor, miss. He's been waiting ever so long."

"A gentleman to see me!"

A quick presentiment came to Nina. She had not dared to look around at the sea of faces that filled the church, fearing to see the one face that was stamped indelibly on her heart.

She had prayed never to look on him again; and yet she moved quickly to the drawing-room, pushed open the door, that was slightly ajar, and stood face to face with Floyd Grafton!

She was too much stunned to move or to utter a word. He came toward her quickly, exclaiming:

"My darling, I've been waiting an hour. I forgot you were Miss Van Dyke's bridesmaid. How beautiful you are! I've just read your letter. Never got it until an hour ago. I've been out of town—summoned to my sick sister. You asked me in your letter to forgive you. Ah, dearest, forgive me! I was the sinner. It was my miserable jealousy. But it's all over. Nina, what is the matter? Why do you look at me so?"

For she stood staring at him, white and still, as if turned to marble. Her eyes held one expression, utter despair.

All at once she dropped on the divan in which her face was buried.

"Oh, God! what have I done?—what have I done?" was the wail that broke from her lips.

CHAPTER VI

As that cry of anguish fell upon the ears of Mrs. Childs and the newly made husband, who stood outside, they instinctively rushed into the room.

Mrs. Childs uttered an exclamation of dismay as she saw the face of the man who was bending over Nina.

"Floyd Grafton! You here? Why have you come now—how that it is too late!"

"Too late!" He raised himself and looked around. "Why too late, Mrs. Childs?" he demanded.

"Because Nina is married. She was married an hour ago."

"Married!" His richly tinted face grew white. "It is false! I will not believe it! Nina"—he bent over her again—"tell me that this is not true! It can't be true!"

She made no answer; not even a sob or a moan escaped her lips. He grasped her shoulder almost roughly. He put back the folds of the veil, that had fallen about her face.

"Tell me that it is not true!" he repeated.

"She does not hear you. She must be unconscious. Let me come to her, Mr. Grafton," urged Mrs. Childs.

She made her way to the lounge, beside which Nina had thrown herself, and bent over the unconscious bride.

She lifted the limp white arm, which had been flung out over the velvet cushions. It was cold as marble.

"Yes, she has fainted. Oh, Floyd, see how death-like she looks!" she went on, trying to lift the white face from its resting-place.

Floyd Grafton did not look at the unconscious face. He laid his hand impatiently on Mrs. Childs' shoulder.

"Who is the man she has married as you say? Who is he?"

His slim, sinewy fingers grasped the chaparron's plump shoulder so hard that she was forced to notice his question, in spite of her concern for Nina.

"He is Mr. Lee," she said, turning her head with a gesture toward the door. "There he is!"

Grafton wheeled around, and found himself face to face with the man who had married his betrothed.

He gazed at the distinguished-looking figure for half a minute in silence. The hot flame of disappointment and jealousy rose that had burned in his breast received a sudden check as he encountered the cool gray eyes of the man he faced.

The look in those eyes was grave even to sternness. A moment before, when Mrs. Childs had called the name "Floyd Grafton," a flash of surprise had come into the face of Henry Lee.

It had died out and left the cold, half-conscious expression which rebuked Grafton, when he encountered it in the eyes that so calmly met his own look of resentful passion.

He recovered himself with an effort.

"Lee!" he said, haughtily. "I have never heard Nina speak of knowing any man by that name. Sir, did I understand rightly? Is it true that my affianced wife—Miss de Vasco—has married you?"

"It is quite true that that lady, formerly Miss de Vasco, is my wife," was the cold reply. Then, in a lower tone, touched with scorn: "If you have been disappointed in your marriage expectations, Mr. Grafton, it is perhaps not the first time it has happened."

Grafton flushed, and looked keenly at his rival. Before he could reply, Mrs. Childs sobbed out:

"Oh! one of you ring for her maid and pray, come and life her up and put her on the lounge. She must be brought to."

Grafton turned around, and bent over the stricken girl. He laid his hands around her waist, and was about to raise her in his arms, when Henry Lee strode up to the lounge, pushed him aside as if he had been a child, and lifted his pallid bride in his arms, then gently laid her on the lounge.

As he did this, her lips quivered and half unclosed.

"Floyd!" she uttered.

Henry Lee stepped back, and Grafton, with a half smile of triumph, bent over her. It was his handsome face, pale with concern, that met her eyes when the lids suddenly flashed open.

"Oh, Floyd!—my Floyd!—how glad I am that you have come!" she said, and stretched her arms to him.

All at once she recollected what had happened. Her arms dropped, and in a tone of wild anguish she cried out:

"Oh, Floyd, why did you not come before—one hour before? Now it is too late. Do you know what I have done? Have they told you that—"

"You have made me the most miserable man in the world, Nina!"

"Oh!" The cry was like that of a creature wounded to death. "I have made you miserable—I, who loved you so!"

It was plain to see that the thought of his suffering was more bitter to her than her own anguish. He, meanwhile, had thought of his own unhappiness first.

She added presently in a tone of dreary hopelessness:

"I have wrecked my own life as well!"

"Oh," he said, bitterly, "you have your new husband's love to console you!"

see her alone—one moment," he pleaded, turning not to the husband but the chaparron.

Mrs. Childs shrugged her shoulders. "Nina has a husband," she said.

"It he—"

"Certainly, I will see you alone," interrupted Nina. "Leave us, please," with an imperious motion of her hand toward Mrs. Childs. Henry Lee had already withdrawn from the room, and was standing just outside the door, which Mrs. Childs closed lightly as she quitted the room.

"Oh, my! you are not going to leave the house, Mr. Lee?" she exclaimed, as she saw him take up his hat.

"Yes, I will see Miss de Vasco tomorrow. There is something I must say to her."

"But you must not go away the evening of your marriage. What would be thought of such a thing? Do help me to keep down gossip as much as possible! Mr. Lee, Nina has suffered enough from it already, and now this unfortunate contretemps! Was there ever anything so dreadful? It was bad enough to have her act as rashly as she has done. She was half crazed because of the way he had treated her, as she thought, and the cruel things in that scandalous paper, 'Town Talk.' And now for her to find out that there was no truth in it, and that he was not to blame; though I shall always think he was to blame, but his sweet tongue would make you believe black was white. Well, but you see she is married now, and the world is no wiser to the queer way the marriage came about—and, really, you look to be a gentleman, Mr. Lee, and I am sure you are, and that your credentials, which she wouldn't take time to look at this evening, are all right. And since the thing is done, and can't be undone, I think we should carry it off cleverly, and keep society from doing more than suspecting there is anything unusual in the marriage. So, for Heaven's sake, my dear sir, don't think of saying away from the house the first evening of your marriage, and leaving her, too, in the company of the man she was to have married. What a scandal if it got out! The separate apartments are had enough but James is an old confidential servant. He was brought up in my house, when I had a home, a beautiful one, Mr. Lee, on Madison Square before my dear husband's reverses and his death. He died broken-hearted. He could not bear to see me come down from my high position in society. Yes as I said, James is an old family servant, and he knows how to hold his tongue. No domestic skeleton will ever be unveiled by James. He will attend you. He will show you now to your rooms, and see that your luggage is brought to you. You were saying you wanted to talk the matter over with Nina tomorrow!"

Ex-Alderman Andrew McCabe, while passing the Union Hotel yard entrance on Saturday night, was knocked down by a team coming out of the yard across the sidewalk, inflicting injuries about his head. This is a dark spot and teams coming out of this yard have a right to use a little precaution.

An Average Number

An idea of the increased amount of traffic to and from Newcastle since the Morrissey bridge was built can be gained when it is learned that in one day from five o'clock in the morning until eight that night, one hundred and fifty teams and thirty-five autos crossed this bridge. This is an average number, and exceeds by far any number that ever crossed by the ferry.

Brynton-Eason-Nuptials

WIRELESS BOYS DEFEAT MERCHANTS

The Khaki Boys Let Themselves Loose Winning a 19-6 Game

The Merchants celebrated their first half-holiday on Wednesday afternoon last by going down to defeat at the hands of the soldiers, in a game of base-ball, the score of which when the smoke had cleared away stood 19-6. The game went the nine innings and in spite of the fact that they were reinforced by the pick of the High School team, the Merchants were helpless and could do nothing to check the onslaughts of the khaki boys, who made them look like a bunch of recruits. The score above tells the story of the game.

Jack Arsenau was the box artist for the locals and was hard and often, while Frenette, the Wireless performer, with his team mates playing airtight ball behind him, had his opponents eating out of his hand all thro' the game. The leading feature was a home run by St. Onge in the 6th inning.

The Wireless boys were out to redeem themselves after some recent defeats and they did it in a way which caused the small crowd of spectators to sit up and take notice. A game between the victors and the scrappy High School team should prove of great interest to the fans since out of three games played between these two teams the High School has won two.

The line-up of Wednesday's game was as follows:

Merchants	r. f.	Soldiers
Clay, Morris	1b.	J. Springer
Chas. Sargeant	ss.	T. St Onge
Chas. Morris	c.	J. Hawkes
Bert Coughlan	p.	C. Trevors
Jack Arsenau	3b.	A. Frenette
Roy Majes	1. f.	J. Chambers
Pearl Brown	2b.	F. Galley
C. McLean	c. f.	H. Ring
Wp. Thompson		F. Springer

Cures Reported At Shrine of St. Anne

Large Number of Excursionists and Several Cures Reported

The pilgrimage to St. Anne de Beupre from the Maritime Provinces returned on Friday, and was most successful in every particular. There was not an incident to mar the excursion, and Father H. D. Cormier, Moncton, and Father LeBlanc, Shodiac, who were in charge of the pilgrimage, have nothing but words of praise for the management of the I. C. R. for the way the train arrangements were carried out. There were some 1,100 people, including those from Nova Scotia, on the excursion, and all arrived home safely.

Some three or four cures are reported among the pilgrims and vouched for. One of the cures was a seven-year-old girl who had been blind and who had her full vision restored.

Another case was that of a man walking with crutches for 12 years. He left his crutches at the Shrine. Another case was that of a man dumb from birth. On the way home about Rogersville the man began to speak with the people in the car. He was from Nova Scotia.

Another cure was that of a man who had a serious case of blood-poisoning in his right hand, which was declared to be incurable. After visiting the Shrine, it is stated, the man's hand became normal.

These facts are vouched for by many on the pilgrimage to St. Anne.

Church Parade at Chatham

The annual 12th of July church parade, under the auspices of the Loyal Orange Lodges of Chatham, Newcastle, Loggieville and Douglastown was held in Chatham on Sunday afternoon and was most successful. The lodges formed up at the Elkin Block and marched to St. Andrew's church, where the members of Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association had assembled. The route was via Cunard and Wellington streets, and formation was as follows: Douglastown Band, Orange Members, R. A. Purplem, Primary Officers, Newcastle Band, Scarlet Knights, County Officers, Past County Masters, Royal Black Knights. On arrival at the church the counter-march was led by the Newcastle band. The return route was via Henderson and Water streets, the bands changing positions, and the Douglastown band led the counter-march at the hall. There were about 150 members in attendance. Ernest McEwen was Director of Ceremonies and was assisted by D. C. Smallwood of Newcastle.—Commercial.
