a handsome family Bible, valuable gold

Application was made by the Presbytery of Toronto for leave to take Messrs. Donald Strachan and Donald Macauley, divinity students, on public probationary trials for licence, also the same application from Guelph in behalf of Mr. William McLennan, M. A.; from Perth, in behalf of Mr. S. Mr.merain, B. A.; from Kingston, for Mr. J. Fraser, B. A.; from Kingston, for Mr. J. R. Thompson, M. A. The Synod authorized the publication of a new hymn book for use in the Churches. A discussion followed on the Bursary and Scholarship scheme, which showed the possession by the Synod of unusual debating powers. Specches were made by Profersor Williams, Principals Cook and Snodgrass, Dr. Morris, M. P., Mr. Mullen and other leading members of the Court. To the general public the most interesting event of the day then took place, namely the resolution of the Synod, adopted by acclamation, to send a deputation to the Wesleyan Conference with Christian fraternal greetings. The next meeting of Synod is to be held at Hamilton.

From the Scottish American Journal.

A Montreal despatch states, we fear too truly, that the dissatisfaction caused by certain portions of the recently enacted Militia law has led to the resignation of several officers, and that others will probably take the same step. The despatch dist that the resignations will not be accepted for the present on account of the threatened Fenian raid.

We notice also in Ontario journals a report that in consequence of a gross insult inflicted by Sir G. E. Cartier on Col. Denison, the Toronto troop of cavally, of which Mr. Denison is commander will resign enmasse.

These would not be pleasant incidents at any time. Just now with a self-second content of the Ot awa in the Mt. Holton is been somewhat influenced by what he would like it to be. which Mr. Denison is commander will resign enmasse.

These would not be pleasant incidents at any time. Just now, with an admitted necessity for keeping in an efficient condition the whole available military strength of the Provinces, they are extremely unfortunate. They are, however, significant. They show that the volunteer force, instead of growing stroger, every day grows weaker, and that unless the Government policy on the militia question be changed, the only system of defence that is adapted to the Dominion, or the Continent, will be sacrificed to theories born of old-world despotisms, and a temper to which the canadan youth are not likely to submit.

The administration of the militia department would be bad enough, if left in the hands of officers reared under circumstances which have no parallel on this side of the Atlantic, all of whose habits unfit them for the appreciation of the Canadian spirit. We have hoped that Ajusco with between 7 and 1200 me He claims to have numerous promise talked the matter over and I found the Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Gazette, who had announced McKenzie's intention, had raised the whole nest on tip toe to see whether the valiant Lambtonian would or would not demolish the gallant knight! Then Sir John and Holston are as freely criticised with respect to their ability as parliamentary tacticians as: If their critics had made their course a special study for a Session, and candor compals was to admit their course a special study for a Session, and candor compals was to admit their course a special study for a Session, and candor compals was to admit their course a special study for a Session, and candor compals was to admit their course a special study for a Session, and candor compals was to admit their course a special study for a Session, and candor compals was to admit their course a special study for a Session, and candor compals was manifested in the capital. Mary denies that he betrayed Maximiliar that he betrayed Max special study for a Session, and candor compels me to admit that even among his political friends and admirers the member for Chauteauguay has lost ground. The hopes of the old Clear Grit party centre upon McKenzie as a leader; many of them think well of Blake as a party man, and would be willing to see him second in command.

AN ODD PARALLEL.—The London Times draws a parallel between the Primier and the late King of Abyasina. Each of these potentates had an object not very plain to common apprehension. Each of them possessed a material guarantee, the value of which he somewhat over-appreciated. King Theodore could deal in a few minutes with his British captives as he had dealt with those of other races, and Mr. Disraell had it in his power, as he still has, any day to strangle the entire House of Commons, deprive about a third of the members of their seats, and fine a thousand g timen in penalties probably amounting to their seats, and fine a thousand g timen in penalties probably amounting to their seats, and fine a thousand g timen in penalties probably amounting to their seats, and fine a thousand g timen in penalties probably amounting to their seats, and fine a thousand g timen in penalties probably amounting to their seats, and fine a thousand g timen in penalties probably amounting to their seats, and fine a thousand g timen in penalties probably amounting to the treat might be said laid. The policy of our Premier we will not attempt to conjecture, but it is certainly one that time and events are require to justify. King Theodore has managed to lose everything that he had, or sought, or demanded, or may be supposed to have wished for. It is quite possible that the British Minister will find himself driven into a corner in like fashion, and reduction to the total for having caused death of his horse by hard ridi to acts of desperation attended by no advantage or credit. He may slay his prisoners by a dissolution without gaining to acts of desperation attended by no advantage or credit. He may slay his prisoners by a dissolution without gaining a single political point, or adding a vote to his cause. He may let Parliament run its course under circumstances to deprive him of all claim to its thankfulness. To resign office would be magnanimous. It might even be quoted some day to his advantage. But to be always threatening dissolution without getting anything by it, to dissolve at last without much danger, or spare the House without being thanked for it, would simply be an instance of that indecision which is more fatal to reputations and causes than vigorous impolicy or simple inaction.

orous impolicy or simple inaction.

THE DARK SIDE OF THE DERBY.—Later advices from England sav, regarding the Derby, that the excitement at the close of the race was intense, and very generally gratifying, as Blue Glown had been backed by the public for large sums. Several of the favorites were backed in immense amourts, and many young men and a few old ones also, are ruined by the result. In London, in the evening, it was rumored in the Arlington and Wittes Clust that the Marquis of Hastings had committed suicide, owing to his overwhelming losses, which are said to have reached $1,000 000 in gold. He backed Lady Elizabeth for all he was worth, and it is said that when he saw h's favorite in the rear, with no chance of winning, he tried to blow his bra'ns out, but was seized by some friends and prevented. He lost heavily on last year's Derby 'so.

The American papers are less intendthan they were in 1866. The New York Herald denounces the move-ment as a scheme to sell votes to both political parties. The Chicago Tri-London correspondent of the bune denounces it warmly. Both of these journals patted the scoundrels on the back in 1866. The Buffalo Republican papers are also anti-Fen-ian, and even the Democratic Courier while puffing the Fair systematically, affects believe that it is not intended to carry fire and sword across the border. The Chicago Times (Democratic) says that there will be no raid. If we remember rightly, it made a similar statement in 1866, and its conductors would have no scruple in trying to throw Canadians off their guard. Altogether the Americans are more anti-Fenian than they were two years ago. They feel less bitterness to-wards Canada, and are tired of agita-tion which is calculated to disturb business, and can never have any serious result. The prospect of get ing large sums from them to aid O'Neil's scheme is not a lively one and it would not be wonderful if the project fell through for lack of funds. In any case, however, it is necessary for us to be prepared.

The Chimes of England.

The chimes, the chimes of Motherland,
Of England, green and old,
That out from fane and vivet tower
A thousand years have tolled;
How glorious must their music be
As breaks the hallowed day,
And calleth with a sersph's voice
A nation up to pray.

se chimes, those chimes of Mc on a Christian morn, breaking, as the angels did, ir a Redeemer born; merrily they call afar, cot and baron's hall, holly decked and mistletoe, keep the festival!

chimes of England, how they peal room tower and Gothic pile, were hymn and swelling authem fill the dim cathedral aisle; tere windows bathe the holy light on priestly heads that falls, of stain the florid tracery, and banner-dighted walls!

And then, those Easter bells, in Spring,
Those glorious Easter chimes;
How loyally they hail the round,
Old queen of holy times?
From hill to hill, like sentinel,

love ye, chimes of Motherland,
With all this soul of mine,
and bless the Lord that I am sprung
Of good old English line!
und, like a son, I sing the lay
That England's glory tells;
For she is lovely to the Lord,
For you, ye Christian bells!

And heir of her ancestral fame,
And happy in my birth,
Thee too I love, my forest-land,
The joy of all the earth;
For thine thy mother's voice shall be,
And here—where God is King—
With English chimes, from Christian spires,
The wilderness shall ring.

The Braes of Yarrow

An Historical Tale of the Sixteenth Century.

Hornie, grinning and nodding his big head knowingly, returned to the hall. The pack-man—a middle-aged man, with very bushy beard, whiskers and moustache, a greyish akull-cap, and clothing of common stuff— was seated below the salt busy eating and driking with apparent relish. To him the dwarf—

'Tushielaw, King of the Borders, bids me say ye shall hae a clean bed of reeds for the nicht and a help on your road the morn.'

The packman, with an air of exceeding humility and gratitude, acknowledged the message and proceeded with his super.

When Tushielaw and the friar were left together, the latter carelessly took the word, peering regretfully into his empty flagon the while—

'You have resolved, then, come weal come 'You have resolved, then, come weal come wee, she shall be your wife.' 'I have said it, and set all else aside, there it hat here, —he beat his breast ficroely—"there's that here burning hotly as an armourer's forge that impels me to it, that impels me to it. The Black flend himself and all his imps seem dragging me towards her, and leaving me no choice. 'When shall it be? Tushielaw answered decisively—"To-night. Simon looked up surprised. 'Eh?—that is to say, to-night, perhaps.' You shall see.' The other nodded doubtingly. Tushielaw snatched up the cruize which stood in the niche of the wall, and without speaking again passed through a small side door into an arched, passage at the end of which was the entrance to the prison chamber of Lady Spens.

CHAPTER VI.—THB RIGHT HAND OAUNTLET.

The chamber in which Lady Margaret was confined was perhaps the most confortable one in the tower. It was small and circular in shaper, the walk were hung with rich hangings of various ill-assorted colors. For the bad taske displayed in this, however, the master was scarcely responsible. He had obtained the materials i nthe course of different raids over the borders, when he had neither leisure nor inclination to be nice in his selection. They served all his purpose in giving to the appearance of the chamber a certain degree of confort. The floor was strewn with dried reeds, and a bright fire aided a richly ornamented cruize to light the chamber. A massive bedstead, a table, and chairs formed the principal pieces of furniture. CHAPTER VI .-- THE RIGHT HAND GAUNTLET chamber. A massive bedstead, a table, and chairs formed the principal pieces of furniture.

Some effort had been made to render the chamber fit for the occupation of a lady; and had the heart been well, there was no reason who the present occupant should not have been as happy there as at Halstane, or in the more luxurious chambers of the palace at Edinburgh. But the heart was not well, and oall else was worthless. She was bewildered by her appraise of the fate of here child, annof her stout champion and good friend, Gilbert Eliiott. That they had been taken, too, sho did not doubt, that one or both of them had been slain, she feared. She had been permitted no opportunity to resolve this doubt, for from the moment she had been escorted to this chamber by Tushiclaw, she had been visited only by a young girl who was, or feigned to be, dumb. But even this creature she had only seen thrice, when food was brought to her—food which remained scarcely tasted. Ore-fatigue and lack of food left her very weak, and although she had slept eight or ten hours, hernervous system was strong to that pitch which overfooks the gulf of insanity, and so intensified.

From England, stem was strong to that pitch which over-oks the gulf of insanity, and so intensified system was strong to that pitch which overlooks the gulf of insanity, and so intensified her agony.

Thinking of her child, all conciousness of her own position was lost. She had no sense of peril to herself, her heart was so full of any one precious to her than life. She waited and wearied through the long hours, with heavy beating pulse, for some one to come who would tell her ever so little about her child. Now and again she heard the distant sound of some coarse laughter that made her shudder as with cold. Then she would turn her eyes to the small grated window, and listening to the shrill cries of the wind as it swept round the tower, she thought the elements out there—the sharp wind, the white drift, and the rushing waters—were less fearful than the human beings by whom she waspurrounded.

She almost prayed for the appearance of the man to whom she wowd her great misery.

At last he came. His dark countenance was flushed with drink or passion, and his piercing eyes burned as if with fire, but his bearing was that of a strong man whose whole strength is used to appear cool and respectful.

Lady Spens half rose from her seat as he entered. A repugnance, deeper than she had ever known before, filled her at sight of him. When he approached and set the light he carried upon the table, she sunk back upon her seat.

7: You will pardon the lack of ceremony with which I visit you, madam, he said, his hard woice a little unsteady af first, 'when you know the import of my visit.'

You come to speak to me of my child,' she cried eagerly.

Tushielaw's brows contracted.

You come to speak to me of my cano, so ried eagerly.
Tushielaw's brows contracted.
'Of her partly,' he responded slowly
He did not dare to raise his face to the enquiring eyes of the mother.
'Is she here, is she safe, shall I see her?' she queried breathlessly.
He grasped the wrist of his left hand with his wright, and stood with an air of dogged resolution gazing upon the floor. Guelph, 20th May 1968,
