The Great Western Railway and its Branches.

Those who have taken the trouble to wade through the very long report of the half yearly meeting of the stockholders of the Great Western Railway, lately held in London, will have been amused by the sharp and acrimonious discussion which took place between some of the leading shareholders present. This discussion was mainly caused by a Mr. Fildes, who, it seems, was at one time a Director but was turned out of the Directorate at a former meeting, and now sought revenge on his old colleagues at the Board, by calling in question the wisdom of their action in reference to their acceptance of some branches of the main line. The main objection was with regard to the Wellington, Grey and Bruce line, which Mr. Fildes says was imperfect in its construction at the time it was taken off the hands of the contractor, and which on this account will entail a much larger expenditure in keeping it up, and in making repairs. This was frankly admitted by the chairman, but he defended the Directors for their action on the ground that had the different sections of the line not been opened for traffic at the time they were, the bonuses granted by the different municipalities would have been lost, and the road would never have been completed. Besides, the Great Western authorities accepted a certain sum from the contractors, and expended it in completing the work after the trains were running. Another objection urged by Mr. Fildes is, that the bonds of the Wellington, Grey & Bruce line were taken by the Great Western Company at the market price, and not at par value which they have now to pay for them. Such terms would never have been accepted by the W. G. & B. Company, and the result would have been that the whole scheme would have been dropped, and the competing line from Toronto would in such an event have been pushed on to completion. Mr. Fildes also argues that if it takes nearly the 70 per cent. which accrues to the Great Western out of the traffic of the line to pay its working expenses now, it will take considerably more by and by, when the work begins to require renewals. But, as a contemporary says, he forgets that even if a small loss were shown in the working of the line for the 70 per cent., it would still be a profitable arrangement for the Great Western, for out of the increased earnings which it brings to the main line, the G. W. R. Company are gradually acquiring the property. He also forgets that if there be increased expenses there will be increased earnings to meet them. The road is yet but partially opened, and the traffic of that portion is yet but partially developed. There is, indeed, even now a good traffic awaiting every mile of the road, but it is as nothing compared with what it will be within the next few years. To those who understand the whole subject, and who are conversant with the early history of this line, and the difficulties which the Company had to surmount in getting it pushed on and completed, section after section, these objections will appear very frivolous. Every person in this section, and along the whole line of the Wellington Grey and Bruce Railway knows that the Great Western, in acquiring the road, got a splendid bargain. It has already more than paid the Great Western Company. The passenger travel and traffic on it is already immense, and when the line is completed to Southampton it will be still larger. It traverses one of the best and most productive sections of this Province, and in a few years be worth millions of dollars to the Great Western Company. Yet in the face of all this Mr. Fildes gets stockholders representing 40,000 shares to censure the Directors for making the agreement they did with the W. G. & B. Company. We must charitably suppose that personal spite and a desire for revenge was at the bottom of a good deal of this opposition, yet it is hard to understand how men would be so foolish as to condemn a line of policy which will ere long bring thousands of dollars to their pocket, and ultimately give them the proprietorship of one of the best paying lines of railway in Canada.

Editorial Items. The Reform banquet will likely be postponed until the 20th inst., on account of the approaching marriage of a lady belonging to the family of one of the guests par excellence of the evening. Letters have been received from Sir George Carter, The Hon. Baronet was, at the time of writing, still under the care of Dr. Johnson, and was somewhat improved. It is understood that the third Judge for Manitoba will be appointed immediately, and it is supposed he will be selected from the bar of the Province of Quebec. The Local Government has advertised that Oakville harbour will be sold by public auction on the 15th. Mr. George Lowe Reid has resigned his position of Chief Engineer of Great Western Railway, and is about to visit the south of Europe for the benefit of his wife's health. He has been retained as consulting engineer of the Company, and will be succeeded in his late office by Mr. John Kennedy, lately Resident Engineer on the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway. Speaking of the San Juan decision, the New York Herald says there can be little doubt that a solid advantage has been gained by the United States and a possession of great value obtained. Canada, on the other hand, has lost a solid advantage and been deprived of a possession of great value. The country will breathe easier in a few more months when the present incompetent Ottawa Government is numbered with the things of the past. THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT.—The Ontario Gazette contains the new appointments of the members of the Government to the several offices, the same as what we have already given.

THANKSGIVING DAY.—The Lieutenant-Governor, by proclamation, has appointed Thursday, the 14th of November, as a day of general thanksgiving throughout the Province for the late abundant harvest.

Fruit Lessons of the Guelph Exhibition NO. II.

It is quite evident that the cultivation of Peaches has either not received the attention from the Fruit Growers of the Central District that exists in the Niagara District, or there is a difficulty in the climate or soil around Guelph which is not felt between Lake Erie and Ontario. Out of thirty-four (34) prizes given for pears, twenty were awarded to fruit from Niagara, five to samples from Guelph, four to those from West Flamboro', four came from Dundas, and one from Berlin. In the collections of twelve and of six varieties, the first and second prizes were given to fruit from Niagara, and the third to that grown at Guelph. Yet when we go from the collections of varieties and study the prizes given for the best samples of single varieties, we find Guelph taking the second prize in Bartlett Pears, West Flamboro' the first, and Niagara the third; hence we infer that if the Bartlett Pear at Guelph is superior to that from Niagara, there can be nothing in the climate or soil of Guelph which need prevent her people from raising very fine pears. The best Bartlett, White Doyenne, and Year of Winkfield came from West Flamboro', the best Flemish Beauty from Dundas, the best Buene Clairgeau, Duchesse d'Angouleme, Buene Bose, Belle Lucrative, Seckel and Glout Moreau, came from Niagara.

We noticed that the judges threw out a number of plates of pears because the rule requiring them to be correctly named had not been observed, and from this we are led to the conclusion that sufficient attention has not been yet paid to the pear to enable the grower about Guelph to determine the true name of the variety they are growing, and that it is yet too early in the history of pear culture in that region to decide how well the several sorts will flourish here. We look to such men as Elliott in Guelph, Roy at Berlin, and Caldwell at Galt, to grow with care the several varieties of pear in this district and, giving to their countrymen their experience, establish the pear culture of this region upon a sound and satisfactory basis.

When we come to Pines the prestige of the Niagara District is completely broken, and Guelph and vicinity reigns supreme. In the collection of Pines Guelph took the first and second prizes, and Eramosa the third. In Dessert Pines, Guelph carried off all the prizes, and in cooking Pines the first and second prizes were given to samples from Guelph, and the third to fruit from Eramosa.

In GRAPES grown in the open air the prizes were carried off mainly by samples from Hamilton and Toronto. This fact however by no means proves that fine grapes can not be grown in the open air about Guelph, but that less attention has been given to this fruit, for there were some fine grapes shown by Guelph growers. It can hardly be possible that Guelph is less favorably located for grape growing in the open air than Toronto, hence we infer that more attention given to the selection of suitable varieties, and perhaps just a little more attention to the art of growing them, will enable growers at Guelph to show as fine grapes as can be grown about Toronto.

As for PEACHES, no one expects to see very fine samples raised in open air at Guelph, and therefore it is no matter of surprise to find that the samples of this fruit came from the Niagara District.

In looking over the entire collections of fruit presented at this exhibition one feels well satisfied with the fruit productions of our Province, and feels that if we may not do under our own vine and fig-tree, we may very willingly exchange the fig-tree for the more useful Apple, and be content with the goodly land wherein we dwell.

It is the general belief in Washington that in case Grant is re-elected, Secretary Fish will retire from the Cabinet, and take the English mission in case he wishes it. Harlan of the Chronicle, is named as his successor, in which case Grant's foreign policy will be bold and aggressive, as the most effectual means of keeping himself in office for another term. That the San Domingo project will be renewed may be assumed certain, and also that the cautious foreign policy of Secretary Fish will not be pursued. It is also said the annexation of the Rio Grande, has been under discussion at headquarters, and is warmly urged by some of the most influential rings connected with the government.

It is said that the British Parliament will make it its first business on meeting in February to abolish whipping as a punishment for crime.

AMONG our Merchants in Guelph, there are no more perhaps so noted for thorough business enterprise as the celebrated Hardware Merchant, Mr. Geo. Horsman. Every season finds him ready for the particular wants of the time, with the best articles of what ever kind are required, and at the lowest possible prices. Now, at the approach of winter, Coal Oil the clearest, Lamps the finest, Chimneys, Wicks and Burners the best; Coal hard and Coal soft, Fire Grates, Fire Irons, Coal Scuttles, Cinder Sifters, Lanterns, Floor Oil-Cloth, Mats, &c. Tea and Coffee Pots, Cruet Stands, Wringers, Manicures, Scrubbing Brushes, Shoe Brushes, Stove Brushes, Smoothing and Flating Irons, and every Housekeeper's need can be supplied; and every one knows with what confidence they can go or send to Mr. Horsman's, and depend on getting the best goods at the lowest prices. dw

A TERRIBLE INTERVIEW.

"This interview need not be prolonged," said his father. "Our views and feelings being diametrically opposed, further conference can only produce stronger hostility. When I find you approving of Lillas giving encouragement to a man of whom you know nothing, and of whom she can know nothing, except that he is a beggar, and in all probability a scoundrel, I find enough to justify me in ordering you from my sight."
"I am not very desirous of remaining in your sight," returned Harry with dignity. "Heaven knows I find too little satisfaction in our relationship to cause me voluntarily to seek your presence. It was a sense of duty alone that brought me here, and having informed you what my firm resolution is, I shall leave the house. Let me, however, remove an erroneous idea under which you labour. George Eglantine is no stranger to me: he is my closest and dearest friend."
"What?" shouted his father, in utter amazement, while Nathan Garrett's interest seemed raised to an intense pitch. "You know him?"
"I know him thoroughly, and have known him long, and can testify that a nobler, a more generous, truehearted, upright man does not breathe. Good and amiable as Lillas is, George Eglantine is worthy of her."
"Ha! I see it all," thundered his father. "He was one of your low associates; his coming hither was a conspiracy of yours—the whole was planned beforehand. A base trap was laid for Lillas, and she has fallen into it. Base traitorous wretch, if you would not have me inflict violence on you, begone."
"There was no plot, no conspiracy," replied Harry. "His engagement as tutor here was altogether independent of me."
"This a lie—a lie!" foamed his father in fury now, ungovernable. "Begone, I say, or—"
Harry, grave and calm, had turned towards the door, when Nathan Garrett hastily stepped forward, and with agitated eagerness exclaimed—
"Who is George Eglantine?"
"What concern is that of yours?" returned Harry, with scornful contempt. "You shall keep your place with me at any rate, whatever my father may allow you to do."
Garrett cast a swift, suggestive look to Stephen, which the latter did not fail to interpret, for he instantly exclaimed—
"I repeat the question—Who is George Eglantine?"
"You, I shall answer, sir. Till a few months ago he deemed he was the brother of the lady who is now my wife; but the same packet which revealed the identity of Kenneth Bruce revealed the fact that George was the child who was saved from the shipwreck of the West Indian vessel when your cousin George Morrar, was lost—Merciful heaven! what is the matter?"
Well might Harry utter the latter ejaculation, for the horror and dismay which suddenly came upon his father's face was terrible to behold. His eyes rolled wildly, glaring as they rolled, and, staggering back, he sank heavily and helplessly into a chair, and lay there, trembling violently, while great bead-drops started on his clammy brow.
Harry, in great alarm, was rushing to his side, when Nathan Garrett pulled him roughly back.
"Don't go near him. It is nothing; only the effect of this meeting. Go, go; he will recover after you are gone."
"Yes, go! go!" yelled his father, frantically waving him back. "I want you! Away! away!"
Garrett forcibly pulled Harry to the door, and the youth was so stricken with wonder at the extraordinary emotion of his father that he mechanically allowed himself to be so thrust out. No sooner had he passed the threshold than the factor closed the door with a violence behind him, and he heard the lock shot rapidly forward on the inside.
In utter bewilderment he crossed the hall, and, the great door being open, he passed out upon the terrace, where he walked slowly to and fro, in fathomless perplexity.
When Nathan Garrett wheeled round after locking the door, Stephen Gibson had risen from his seat, and was gazing at him, the horror in his face in no way abated.
The other was little less agitated, and now that they were alone, took no pains to hide it.
"Garrett, Garrett, what is this?" gasped the horror-stricken Stephen. "Is it—can it be true?"
"Yes," said Garrett; "the mystery is solved now. The strange feeling I had when first I saw him, and again the other night, is explained. It was the resemblance that struck me. Fool that I was not to suspect it; and yet how could I? Who was to dream of this?

"And we—no have—murdered him," said Stephen, with a hoarse hollow groan.

"And had we not more cause than we knew of?" cried Garrett. "Is the deed not of tenfold more benefit than we imagined? Think of the possible danger which his life caused us."

"True, true. We are safer than ever. We have certainly now— But—should discovery be made?"

"Fear it not. There is nothing to connect us with the thing, even should the body be got, which I don't believe is ever will. The only risk of discovery is from yourself. You nearly betrayed us both just now."

"It was the shock, Garrett—the sudden shock. I am calmer now, and shall not be so moved again. Has he gone?"

"He is walking on the terrace," answered the factors who—standing towards the window, and was peeping forth from behind the blind."

"On the terrace? He is not gone then, and he is his friend? Good God, Garrett, when he finds him missing, he will cause search to be made everywhere."

"Let him. If they find the body at the bottom of the mine, that will be all. It will appear to every one an accident— suspicion cannot possibly fall on us. 'Pon my word, Captain, we are safer now than ever—Ha!"

"What—what is it?" cried Stephen, nervously.

"Yonder is Matthew Greigson coming up the avenue in haste and excitement. He must be coming with the news that the youth is missing—"

"And he will see Harry," exclaimed Stephen.

"He sees him already; he waves to him; your son has gone to meet him."

Stephen Gibson flew to the window, and gazed forth from the other side of the blind, when he too saw Matthew Greigson moving up the avenue at a pace very fast for him, and Harry with questioning strides, was moving towards him. They stood for a minute speaking together. From Harry's manner, the communication he received from Matthew seemed to be of an exciting nature, for he started—seemed to ask rapid questions and receive rapid answers. Then the pair left the avenue, and turning to the right, went across the park together, Stephen and Nathan watching them from the window till a clump of trees hid them from his sight.

Mr Fellows is daily in receipt of letters of enquiry, from various parts, respecting his Syrup of Hypophosphites. One recently received, leads to the belief that the public mistake his meaning in reference to its effect in imparting superior energy to the mind. Where the intellect has been impaired by overwork or by kindred causes, the use of the Syrup, together with proper precaution in the use of food, clothing exercise and rest, will restore full power to the brain and nerves. Superiority in genius consists in great capacity of brain for assimilating material from every quarter, and of developing in proportion, but as by far the greater number are not well endowed by nature, consequently lacking this capacity, it would be quite impossible to find cranium space for material necessary to constitute the brilliant genius. Hence, although the Syrup will assist in restoring the mind which is lost, it cannot change a natural born idiot into an intelligent man.

A gentleman who used to carry on the Sheriff business, wholesale and retail, in Ontonagon County, in an early day, was frequently called upon to quiet tumultuous brawls, which he did by rushing into the crowd and knocking every man engaged in the row as flat as a flounder, and then repeating these memorial words over prostrate bodies: "Say, boys, what's all this fuss about? As Sheriff of Ontonagon County, I command the peace."

POSITIVELY A FACT.
Mustard's Catarrh Specific

Cures Catarrh, Cold in the Head, Neuralgia, Toothache, Nervous and Sick Headache, Weak and Sore Eyes. The Specific is a new remedy, prepared from Medicinal Herbs, Roots, Gums and Flowers. Free from poisonous Drugs, it is harmless, novel, and philosophic in its operation. Try it if you are afflicted with the above diseases. It is also one of the best Cough and Croup Remedies extant.

Mustard's Vegetable Pills should also be used in connection with the Specific for Sick Headache and Catarrh; and those who are afflicted with Rheumatism should try Mustard's King of Oils.

Sold in Guelph by McCullough & Meoyr Drugists. Manufactured at Ingersoll by N. J. Mustard, Proprietor.

THE REASON WHY

Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calcium is called a Chemical Food and Nutritive Tonic, because Phosphorus constitutes more than half the material of the human body, and is absolutely essential to the growth of Bone, Muscle and Nerve, which cannot attain full development without them. They promote a good appetite, perfect digestion, create pure, healthy, vitalizing blood, and supply the waste constantly going on in the system as a result of mental and physical exertion. Being combined with Calcium, the Peruvian Bark, the only specific for Chills and Fever, and that condition of Nervous Prostration and General Debility arising from low vitality and exhaustive diseases, it forms an elegant and agreeable, invigorating Tonic, purely physiological in its action, that may be taken safely under all circumstances, and all diseased conditions of the body, as it builds up the constitution in the same manner as it does in the system.

Sold by all Druggists at 5c.

CAUTION.

The Cornwall Manufacturing Company have pleasure in intimating the complete restoration of their works at Cornwall which are now in full operation, producing large quantities of White and Grey Blankets, and Heavy Medium Class Tweeds. They regret, however, having again to call attention of the public to the continuance of the disreputable practice of importing English Blankets and selling them as Canadian. These Blankets are made largely of Shoddy and Cotton Waste, with a small percentage of pure Wool, and though slightly in appearance, closely imitating the Cornwall Blankets, and ticketed "Canadian Manufacture," have neither warm nor wear, but can be sold at a lower price than the Cornwall Blankets which are made of Pure Wool) can be produced for.

The public are cautioned against this attempted deception, and respectfully informed that the name of the CORNWALL MANUFACTURING COMPANY is printed on the blanket of every Blanket made by them. Cornwall, Sept. 16th 1872 dwzm
