> A Dangerous Job. What is the most hazardous job in Canada? A rather interesting ques-tion. Mining has its dangers, railroad accidents are numerous every year, but neither of these occupations are attended with so much peril as lumbering, according to the view of a British Columbia newspaper. The British Columbia man who has done the investigating says that more lum-berjacks are killed every year in his province than men in any of the so-called "extra-hazardous trades." This province than then in the called "extra-hazardous trades." This fact is not generally known because obituaries of these victims appear but seldom in the newspapers. News from the logging camps buried in the bush does not filter out regularly.
