THE MODERATION LEAGUE

Rev. Dr. Grant Hands Out Important Warning

An effort being made by the Moderation League, recently organized in Halifax, to have the Temperance Act amended to permit the sale of beer and wine for beverage purposes.

It is well to bear in mind these scientific truths: "Alcohol is a narcotic poison, and whether in beer, wine, or spirits, the poisonous action of alcohol in the human system is the same.

The sale of beer and wine was tried in the United States, before the enactment of prohibition, as a means of promoting temperance, and abundant evidence can be produced to show that the experiment failed.

THE NEW TRADE TREATIES

To the Editor of THE ACADIAN

Dear Sir—At a recent political meeting held in Canning, A. deWitt Foster dealt extensively with a number of things which the Liberal government during the past four years had unsuccessfully endeavored to accomplish.

Permit me to mention some of the things which the government did accomplish during the time they were in power. They brought into effect the home market. Now what do we find when we examine the treaty. We find this: A collection of Canadian articles which are granted importation into Australia at what is considered a low rate of duty by the Australian government.

Editorial

Our pulpits are our work clothes. Each of us live some kind of a sermon every day.

WEBSTER CALLS IT COHESION

WHAT makes a town anyway? Is it the wealth evidenced by the magnificent and palatial homes and splendid store windows? These may attest the stability and thrift of certain people, but they offer no great inducements to commercial and moral progress. Is it the spirit of good order and law observance? That is a factor only. The sleepest old hamlets that dot the map have this spirit in rank abundance. Is it the schools and the churches? May their number ever increase, but they don't make a town—they only culture it. Is it the geographical location, the character of the country surrounding, the shipping facilities, the natural advantages?

None of these are essentials. Well, what is it that makes a town, anyway? Just one thing, the unity of the people, the existence of a common bond which causes business and social enemies to put aside all differences when it comes to boosting the town. There is a word called "cohesion," Webster defines it as: "The act of sticking together; close union." No town ever made real progress in the way to substantial success without the get-together spirit unanimously adopted. It has rejuvenated old hulks of towns that were yawning their way into endless sleep. It has infused new life blood into the heart of commercial life and made thriving cities out of paralytic villages.

Natural advantages account for much and prosperity cannot be built upon shifting sand, but any town with half a chance can be made to grow and expand and thrive when its citizens join with one accord in the boosting program.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

IT IS apparently the voter who renounces his political allegiance who these days wins the plaudits of his fellows. The man who election after election stands by his party and supports it through thick and thin must be content to occupy the humbler walks of life, while the "wobbler" gets his name in print and his picture on the front page of the daily press. Such being the case, is it any wonder there are those who find the temptation to "shift" irresistible. We are not saying that the privilege of changing one's political affiliations is not well within the right of every voter. An honest conviction often leads a man or a woman to revise a view formerly regarded as beyond question. Sometimes it is the voter who leaves his party and at other times it is the party which leaves the voter. In every case where the motive is an honest one it is a purifying process which makes for a better condition both to the individual and to the body politic. What we do take exception to is profuseness of publicity which almost invariably attends a change of heart of this kind. It indicates that the opinion of a man who has changed it is of more moment than that of a man who still retains the courage of his conviction—or a stubborn will that can only see one way. We can better imagine a man who has lost faith in anything which he at one time thought worth while to hesitate in flinching the fact before the public gaze until he, at least, is able to convince himself that his motive is beyond question and his stepping out in order to more fully know the truth.

THE HOME NEWSPAPER

IT HAS been said that no institution not founded on a fundamental human need can live. The reverse of this is also true. This is why the home newspaper, as an institution has survived many things: the onslaughts of individual opposition, the increase of paper and printing costs, the peril of unpaid subscriptions, the uncertainty of advertising patronage, the problems of its own professional competition, and the hazards of its own mistakes. Through all these the home newspaper still lives.

When subjected to the test of whether the home newspaper could be done without, there always follows the inevitable reaction of whether the people of the community would want to do without it. The more than 17,000 daily, weekly, semi-weekly and tri-weekly newspapers in the United States and Canada stand as proof of the important service the newspaper renders in its local field of circulation.

The newspaper is not an invention, nor is it a fad or a fancy. It is a growth—a development made possible by the co-operative and receptive spirit of the people themselves because of the need for the transmission of news and as a circulation medium for advertising the products of the community and of the world. But the home newspaper is even more than this. It is the echo of the community's voice, a spokesman of the community's mind, a reflection of the community's vision, a champion of the community's rights, and a direct avenue for the community's progress.

THE FUEL SUPPLY

WHEN THE commission appointed by the Rhodes government to investigate conditions affecting the coal industry of this province gets down to business it is to be hoped that the case of the consumer may come in for a generous consideration. For the past ten years the problem of providing a sufficient fuel supply has taxed the ingenuity of the thrifty householder. No matter how careful he is in his estimate the appropriation for the winter's supply of coal invariably falls short. When we turn back in memory to the days when Nova Scotia coal could be purchased at three and a half dollars per ton we wonder that we did not become wealthy. Then the cost of mining coal was quoted at ninety cents per ton while now it is said to cost three dollars. To the uninitiated, however even that advance in cost seems scarcely to warrant the price we have to pay today. We have been looking for relief which so far has not put in an appearance. With another cold winter close at hand the prospect afforded by present fuel prices is far from reassuring. Frequent conflicts between the miners and operators apparently always tend to the disadvantage of those upon whom the grim duty of keeping the home fires burning falls. It may be that the commission may be able to provide a way out of the dilemma, and a long suffering and sorely tried public are hoping that this they may be able to do.

SOME REGULATION NEEDED

From time to time the neighborhood receives plasterings of unsightly bills and posters, usually by persons who have not the slightest interest in the welfare or beauty of the community. If bills must be posted there should be regulations providing for their removal by the parties responsible, or in lieu of this a governing license issued by the municipality to any wishing to post bills.

This license would either make the licensee responsible for the removal of all bills or else the municipality could assume that, charging for the labor.

There is a movement on foot which is spreading fast, to prohibit all roadside advertising. Many a beautiful thoroughfare has been marred by unsightly signs at every corner and every nook. In progressive towns billboards are on a commercial basis and their neat appearance is one of the drawing cards of the companies who are engaged in the business. Prevention is better than cure; and the spirit of clean-up day should be maintained 365 days in the year—and this is one of the instances where the prevention is most easily applied.

THE CAUSES OF CRIME

(Rev. J. Phillips Jones, M.A., B.D., Social Service Council of Canada.)
In addition to poverty which was mentioned in a previous article another cause of crime is—Intemperance. If the sale of hard liquor was prevented, the police-courts would lose a great deal of their business. At a recent meeting of police inspectors in New York City, one experienced officer said that "Drink is the greatest single cause of crime." Lord Alverstone, Chief Justice of Great Britain said, "After forty years at the bar, and ten as a judge I have no hesitation in saying that ninety per cent. of the crime in this country is due to indulgence in strong drink."

Addressing the Grand Jury in Winnipeg some time ago the Judge said: "Most of the cases in these assizes are directly or indirectly due to liquor. Especially does this apply to the foreign-speaking population who are industrious and hard-working when sober, but are like wild beasts when under the influence of liquor". Picariello and Mrs. Lasandra paid the extreme penalty for shooting a policeman in Blairmore, Alberta, because he interfered with their bootlegging traffic. And so we could multiply instances of strong drink being one of the great causes of crime.

Another cause of crime is addiction to habit-forming drugs. "The great majority of drug-addicts are of the underworld type." F. W. Cowan of the Opium and Narcotic Drugs Division of the Federal Department of Health says that although the evil is somewhat abating in Canada, one of the great needs is compulsory treatment of drug addicts. In this way alone will the evil be finally eradicated.

Feeble-mindedness is also a great cause of crime. "Half the crime of the world, two-fifths of venereal disease, two-thirds of prostitution are due to neglect of the feeble-minded. Recent psychiatric examination of the inmates of Sing Sing prison shows that two-thirds are mentally defective.

There are five hundred mentally defective children in Alberta. Miss Dauphine, Superintendent of Special Children's Classes in Vancouver, reports that there are over sixteen hundred mentally defective children in British Columbia, and the number is rapidly increasing. This is a problem in every province of the Dominion.

A mental defective is one whose brain development has halted. He has the body of an adult, but the mind of a child. Some are idiotic—mentally these are infants. Others are imbeciles having a mental capacity of from three to six years. The highest grade of feeble-minded are morons. These can be taught expert manual labour under proper direction if it involves no planning or reasoning.

All mentally defective lack control. They naturally drift into immorality and crime. Their immoral tendencies make birth-rate among them very high, and their defect is terribly transmissible.

At least three persons in a thousand are feeble-minded. The uneducated feeble-minded do not work and the rest of us are supporting them. The problem of the feeble-minded must be grappled with in earnest. By colonization, where they will not be able to propagate, we must stop breeding criminals. How many feeble-minded are there now in the provinces of Canada? How many will there be in twenty years?

TO THE BEATEN SOUL

A famous Scottish preacher was fulfilling an engagement recently in New York when this incident occurred. A prominent New York daily was advertising the preacher's sermons, one of which was entitled: "To the Beaten Soul." The minister delivered the sermon, but to his chagrin he felt that he could not finish it the way he had intended. Under a curious constraint he added:

two sentences at the end, feeling as if they were quite unsuitable. The sentences were these: "Remember you can always hold on a little longer. You never know what is waiting for you round the next corner."

A few days later he received a letter from a man who had heard the sermon. The man said that at the time he thought he had finished with life, because he felt that life had finished with him; he had decided to commit suicide. On the morning of his decision, however, he had seen the advertisement of the sermon. To the Beaten Soul, and he made up his mind to hear it. He attended the service but was left cold and untouched until right at the end two sentences seemed to grip him: "Remember you can always hold on a little longer. You never know what is waiting for you round the next corner." Those two sentences saved him. He realized their truth, and "round the next corner" he had discovered a chance to make life worth while after all.

It is such incidents that make us feel the truth of the lines:
There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough hew them though we may.

A PIRATE'S GIFT

In the little graveyard at Henniker, New Hampshire, there is a stone to mark the resting place of Mary, wife of Thomas Wallace, who died in 1814, at the age of ninety-four. There is nothing about the simple monument to cause the stranger to glance at it a second time, and he is sure to pass quickly on unless the old sexton or some kindly native tells him the story of Mary Wallace.

In July, 1720, an Irishman, James Wilson, and his young wife sailed from Londonderry to join a colony of the same name in New Hampshire, but the vessel was slow, and one day it was overhauled by a pirate ship. Resistance would have been madness, and the pirate crew swarmed over the side, tied up every man they could find, and seized what little of value the ship contained. The captain of the buccannery led the way to the cabin. In a small adjoining stateroom Mrs. Wilson lay in her berth.

"Why are you there?" demanded the captain.
For answer the woman uncovered the face of a tiny babe.
The captain's manner changed. "Is it a boy or a girl?" he asked in a low voice.

"A girl."
"Have you christened her?"
"No."
"Then," said he very gently, "let me name her and I will unbind your men and leave your ship unharmed and unrobbed. It shall be a good name. May I name the girl?"
"Yes."

There were tears in the rough captain's eyes as he took the baby's tiny hand and whispered "Mary" adding some other words, which Mrs. Wilson did not hear. Then he and his men returned to their own ship.

Soon, however, the captain returned alone, bringing a roll of beautiful silk, which he lay on the berth at little Mary's side. "Let her wear this on her wedding day," he said, and was gone before Mrs. Wilson could thank him.

"Ocean Mary," as she was called, was married in 1740 to Thomas Wallace. She wore the pirate's silk at the wedding, as her granddaughter did after her at theirs.

FATAL

Clifford Harrison, the English reader, has his own ideas of the "total depravity of inanimate things". He says it is surely fatal to introduce an effective pause in a recitation, for something is sure to mar it. He adds, plaintively: "If I am reciting in a hall where there is a striking clock, or past which a train runs, with shriek and roar, I know that striking clock or shrieking train will make themselves heard at a moment when it is important for me to have unbroken silence.

I once wrote some verses for recitation into which I was so injudicious to put a sudden exclamation!

"Listen! What is that?"
I might have known what would happen. Clocks chimed, doors slammed, special trains screamed, old gentlemen coughed, some one was convulsed with an irrepressible sneeze, dogs came from distant parts on purpose to bark, candle shades fell off, a waiter dropped a tray and a teacup, a baby cried, and a dead old lady was heard to say to a neighbor:
"Would half a cucumber be of any use to you?"

I learned better wisdom, and cut the passage out.

WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY?

In the home—it is kindness.
In business—it is honesty.
In society—it is courtesy.
In work—it is fairness.
Toward the unfortunate—it is pity.
Toward the weak—it is help.
Toward wickedness—it is resistance.
Toward the strong—it is trust.
Toward the penitent—it is forgiveness.
Toward the fortunate—it is congratulation.
Toward God—it is reverence and love.

CAPT. CHARLES LAWRENCE

Hantsport has once more been called upon to mourn the loss of one of its most highly respected citizens, Capt. Charles Lawrence, who passed away at his home on Thursday. Although an invalid for eighteen years he was always patient, and maintained a most cheerful outlook on life, taking great interest in all that was going on around him, particularly in shipping circles. Capt. Lawrence started following the sea in his early days. Some of the ships he was master of, owned by E. Churchill & Son, were the Swansea, Ontario, Chebucto; others were Rock City, British America, and Lily. It was while master of the latter that he received recognition from the British Government, being presented with a beautiful gold watch for rescuing a shipwrecked crew. On the inside cover of the watch is the following inscription: "Presented by His Majesty's Government to Capt. Charles Lawrence, Master of the brig 'Lily' of Nova Scotia, in testimony of his generous services to the shipwrecked crew of barque 'Virgilia' of South Shields, in February, 1874."

Capt. Lawrence thought nothing of endangering his own life to rescue a man from a watery grave, and is said to have been one of the best navigators that ever sailed a ship. He is survived by his widow, who was formerly Miss Lily Davison, daughter of Mrs. John Davison, Hantsport, and five children—Mildred, Mrs. (Rev.) A. Weir, of Wallace, Cumberland county; Frank, of Grand Mere, Quebec; Joy, Mrs. (Rev.) H. B. Reid, Halifax; Marguerite, at home; and Albert, Montreal.

The funeral services, which were largely attended, took place on Saturday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Z. L. Fash, pastor of the Baptist church, assisted by Dr. Mellick. Court Rand, I. O. F., of which the deceased was a member, attended in a body. The pall bearers, also Foresters, were Messrs. H. Michener, Fred Sweet, Frank Hart and Alec Murray. Interment took place in Riverbank Cemetery. The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful.

FRIDAY NIGHT'S MEETING

The greatest enthusiasm prevailed on Friday evening, when one of the largest and most successful political rallies ever held in the town of Hantsport in the interests of the Liberal-Conservative party took place in the Empire Theatre, which was filled to overflowing, even standing room not being available, both entrances being packed to the doors. Mr. A. E. Blois presided. The speakers for the evening were Dr. Keddy, president of the Conservative Club, and Lawyer Sangster, Windsor, and A. deWitt Foster, the Liberal-Conservative candidate.

The opening address was given by Dr. Keddy, who spoke on some of the great issues of the day, viz., "The Confederation Compact," "Trans-Continental Railways," etc. Lawyer Sangster spoke very eloquently on "Conditions as They Exist," and "The Tariff" Both Dr. Keddy and Mr. Sangster paid a great tribute to Mr. Foster, stating that from personal investigation by Sir Charles Davison, of Ottawa, and others in authority, that Mr. Foster had been exonerated from anything to his discredit, and solicited whole hearted support for him on the 29th of October. Upon the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Foster on the platform, the vast audience broke forth into tumultuous applause and cheers, which continued as little Miss Frances Kennedy, the winsome daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kennedy, of Hantsport, presented Mrs. Foster with a magnificent basket of American beauty roses, as a marked tribute of esteem from the members of the constituency. Mr. Foster expressed his gratitude for Mrs. Foster and himself. He also expressed keen appreciation for the beautiful stage decorations, which were of a national design, carried out in the emblems of our country, consisting of maple leaves in their beautiful autumnal colourings, with the Canadian ensign very much in evidence.

Mr. Foster, who is a very eloquent speaker, spoke on a number of questions most vital to those living in the Maritime Provinces, viz., "Maritime Rights," "Our Natural Resources," "Home and Foreign Markets," "Economy of Government," "Extension of I. C. R. Division to Montreal," "The Tariff," "Protection for our Industries," and "A More Prosperous Canada." The meeting closed with "God Save the King," and three rousing cheers for "Foster."

"FIRE PREVENTION"

Essay by Miss Elsie Churchill, Grade IX

Canada is a great country loved by its people. It has assets that tend to make it a leading nation, and if her forest fires were prevented it would be much wealthier.

In the year, 1923, seven millions of dollars were lost by fire. If this huge amount had not been wasted, for wasted it was, think of the industries that could have been started.

Not only in the year 1923, but every year millions of dollars have been lost through fires. I have neglected to mention the worst loss, and that is the loss of human lives. In time the money losses can be replaced, but the lives can never be replaced. Canada has a greater number of fires according to her population than any other country in the world. Do we educated people want to be below the standard of other countries, and some of them heathen countries? We certainly do not and we will not be. At last Canadians have awakened and great steps are being taken to prevent fires by the government, and individuals. A proclamation has been issued by His Majesty King George V. and His Excellency Lord Byng, to this effect:

"Private dwellings and public buildings be inspected and cleaned of rubbish; All hotels, theatres, asylums and institutional buildings hold fire drills; and special Fire Prevention lessons be given in schools; Boy Scout leaders be requested to hold meetings and be ready to co-operate with local fire departments. These are a few facts found out by the Government by careful research work: 80% of all fires in Canada are due to carelessness; 350 people annually lose their lives by fire; fire losses for 1925 is $5.00 per capita for man, woman and child. Citizens of Canada, Stop this waste! Help preserve the forests and make a bigger, richer Canada, one that will be worthy of its King and Motherland.

He was rushing through the station when a pretty woman stopped him. "Would you please help the Working Girls' Home?" "Certainly, but I haven't much time. Where are they?"—More Pep.

"Fred is doing a staggering business these days." "Yes, what's his line?" "Bootlegging."

PASSING OF AGED LADY RESIDENT

The funeral of Mrs. Stephen MacIntosh, whose death occurred on Monday was held from her late home on Wednesday afternoon. There was a very large attendance, largely of residents of Lower Horton, where Mr. and Mrs. MacIntosh long made their home and have always been held in high esteem. The service was conducted by Rev. A. C. Borden, D.D., and the address, which was a most practical and fitting one, was delivered by Mr. John R. Stewart, a former neighbor. Favorite hymns were sung. The interment was in the old Presbyterian Cemetery at Grand Pre. Mrs. MacIntosh, who before her marriage was a Miss Kelley, was 91 years of age. She had been confined to her bed for weeks and for some time her death had been daily expected. The bereaved husband and sorrowing family, who have been called upon to part with one so dearly loved, have the sympathy of many friends.

DEATH OF AN OLD RESIDENT

Last Tuesday morning there passed away at his residence after a short illness, Andrew Horne, of Lower Wolfville. Mr. Horne had been in failing health for some time, but until the last two or three weeks had been able to attend to his duties as sexton of St. John's church, which position he had faithfully filled with one short interval for nearly forty years. He had served under four rectors of Horton, Rev. J. O. Ruggles, Rev. Canon Brock, Rev. Canon Hind, and Rev. R. I. Dixon, the present rector. He was greatly esteemed by the congregation, and will be sorely missed for many a day. He leaves two surviving children, Samuel, who is employed as a tailor in this town, and Anne, the wife of William Thomas, of Boston, who was visiting her father at the time of his death. Mr. Horne was a native of Halifax county and was about seventy-six years of age. The funeral will be held this afternoon.

ECHOES FROM THE FRAY

of "Reductions in prices" to take effect April 11th, 1924. He quotes from a price list that was not in effect so far as the McCormick-Doering and the International Companies are concerned during the season of 1924 after April 11th of that year. Either Mr. Foster knows the difference and is wilfully trying to mislead, or else he does not know what he is talking about. Further reductions were made in the 1925 list of prices which were made effective from December 1st, 1924. Why did Mr. Foster not quote from this later list if he wanted to be honest in the matter, and not take a list that was made up and published before the tariff reductions were made, and which had been specially reduced after the tariff was lowered. All the figures he quoted were there before the tariff was lowered.

The following is a comparison of the prices on implements effective 1923 immediately before the tariff changes and in 1925 after reductions under the new tariff:

How to Mark Your Ballot on October 29th

1. ARTHUR de WITT FOSTER of the Town of Kentville, Broker X
2. ERNEST W. ROBINSON of the Town of Wolfville, Teacher.

The foregoing specimen form of ballot will show the electors of Hants-Kings how to place their X opposite the name of A. deWitt Foster on October 29th. A vote for Mr. Foster means supporting the policy of Hon. Arthur Meighen which spells Maritime Rights, Prosperity and Industrial Development For All of Canada.

What Does A Good Well Cost?

This question is often asked us. A lot depends on the contractor engaged. We solicit your business on our record in this locality. Write for our proposition before making a decision.

The Trask-Well Co.
BERWICK, N. S.

To the Electors of Hants-Kings

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As I have been chosen as a Liberal candidate in the coming Federal Election, it seems to me advisable that I state my position on the various questions which are before the people.

The Tariff:—The Rt. Hon. Mr. Meighen states that if returned to power he will at once raise the tariff on manufactured goods. I am Opposed to this, as it is Admitted by All that any increase in the tariff will Increase the Cost of Living.

I believe that the burden of taxation should rest as lightly as possible on the Farmer, Lumberman, Miner and Fisherman. They are the real producers of wealth. They furnish not only our food, shelter and clothing, but the raw material of the manufacturers themselves. Nearly all of the inhabitants of Nova Scotia are Farmers, Lumbermen, Miners or Fishermen. To increase the tariff is to increase the cost of all they buy without increasing the price of what they sell.

Railways:—Canada has built or acquired far too many miles of railroad. Both political parties have been responsible. Consolidation and Co-operation, Not Expansion, must be the railway policy of Canada for some time to come.

Railway Rates:—In any revision of railway rates all parts of the Dominion should receive fair and equal treatment. By the Confederation Agreement, and owing to our peculiar geographical position, the Maritime Provinces are Entitled to Special Consideration in any adjustment of railway rates.

All measures looking to an increase in the export and import trade of Canada should be supported. The West Indies Treaty is of especial importance to Nova Scotia. I believe the Great Need of Nova Scotia is Wider Markets.

Economy:—I favor a policy of economy in all Departments of Government. The useless, unnecessary and inefficient should be eliminated.

I voted for the Bill for the abolition of Race-track Gambling, for the Bill for the Prevention of the Sale of Narcotic Drugs, and for the Treaty aimed to assist the United States in enforcing Prohibition. I am in favor of all Law that will bring about Social and Moral betterment.

If elected, I pledge myself to support any legislation, no matter from what source it comes, that is an Honest Attempt to further the Needs of the Maritimes, without injury to the rest of Canada.

Soliciting your support on October 29th, I am,

Yours truly,

Ernest Robinson.

The entrance to Kent avenue from Main street has received some attention from the street authorities during the past week. This street should be graded next year.

The old fire station on Central avenue has recently been undergoing some necessary repairs. A new floor of concrete has replaced the old wooden floor which had succumbed to the ravages of decay.

Senator Williams Roche, of Halifax, prominent business man, died at his home Monday afternoon, after an illness of four weeks, aged 77 years. He had been a member of the Senate for 15 years and was previously a member of the House of Commons. He was engaged in the coal business in Halifax for many years.

Mrs. Thomas Sutherland, of Lower Wolfville, received word yesterday of the death of his home in Berwick of her brother, Mr. Edward Chute, for several years chief fisheries officer for this county. Mr. Chute formerly resided at Harborville, but of late has made his home in Berwick. His health had been in a serious condition for years, and the news of his death was not unexpected.

The Acadia-Dalhousie football game last Saturday was played under most adverse conditions. Rain, which began early in the day, poured incessantly and turned the campus into a veritable slough. The home players put up a good brand of football, but the conditions were all in favor of the heavier visiting team who were able to score two tries, neither of which was converted. In spite of the storm there was a good attendance of spectators and plenty of applause from the fans of the opposing teams.

BARN BURNED

The barn of Mr. Joseph Smith, at White Rock, was completely consumed by fire last Friday evening. A lantern which had been taken to the hay-loft to furnish light for feeding exploded, and the fire made such progress that it was impossible to save the building. Fortunately the cows had not been housed and the other live stock was saved. The barn and its other contents with the silo, all uninsured, were destroyed. This was formerly the Leonard Pick place, and the barn was built by Mr. Pick's father, the late Deacon Pick, and had been kept in good repair. The loss is a serious one.

A GASOLINE TAX PROBABLE

Hon. Percy S. Black, Minister of Highways in Nova Scotia, states that it is his expectation that a gasoline tax would be imposed another year. The users of the roads, including tourists, would then contribute towards the highway service. This tax had been adopted in most of the Provinces and States of the Union. Such a tax would bring a revenue to Nova Scotia of from $150,000 to $200,000, which would enable the Government to readjust the automobile registration tax and supplement the Highways revenue.

A WISE JUSTICE

Justice Harlan P. Stone, of the United States Supreme Court, has no illusions as to the extent of crime in that country. He is not an alarmist, but he has the good sense to know that things are in a rather bad way. So when he frankly told the members of the New Hampshire Bar Association at a meeting the other day that the bar itself had much responsibility for the great increase in lawlessness and deeds of violence he spoke by the book.

The bar has, indeed, much to answer for. Some lawyers will use every effort for the most unutterable and known scoundrels; will fight on technicalities to prevent justice and deserved punishment to men fairly convicted and will do more for their own glorification than for the best interests of society.

Accused criminals must have counsel, of course, and their lawyers are in duty bound to defend them. But to go further than that and move heaven and earth to prevent just punishment duly declared, is not the act of good citizenship.

The Smoking Flax

By ROBERT STEAD

Author of The Coupuncher, Neighbors, etc.

The fire had died until only a few coals glowed before him; a chill of night air came up from the lake, the stars shone stolidly overhead. The river, swollen with the spring overflows of the prairie sloughs, muttered gurglingly at his feet. Into its black tide he looked as though it could give, perhaps, some answer to the mystery of life.

Then he yawned, tapped the ashes from his pipe, put it away, and went to bed.

CHAPTER THREE

Reed awakened with the sun pouring in upon him. His arm, reaching under the blankets beside him, found the place empty, and he sprang up from his pillow. In the gravel near by he saw Cal bending over a fire.

"Hello, Daddy X!" he cried. "Why didn't you call me? What luck for breakfast?"

"Big doings, Reed; big doings! Come and see." The boy clambered out of the car and ran to the spot where Cal, frying pan in hand, leaned over his little fire. An appetizing odor came up from something grilling on the hot metal.

"Smells scrumptious," Reed approved. "What is it, Daddy X?"

"A secret. Listen. Hold down your heat on the whipper. Wild duck!" "Wild duck? How? But you said we mustn't shoot them; you said it was against the law?"

"The law allows an exception for explorers threatened with starvation. We are explorers, Reed, threatened with starvation—if we don't get something to eat. And on top of that, when this fine drake a-lit on the river just at day-break it was too much for an empty stomach, Reed."

"But I didn't hear you shoot?" "You are a sound sleeper. Conscience sits light on a young stomach, as well as on an empty one. Now, have your dip. It's cold, but safe, if you stay near the shore."

With a sudden contortion of his arms the boy emerged from his nightdress. There was a gleam of sunlight on his little lithe body as he plunged into the stream. He came up spluttering and shaking.

"O-o-w-h!" he shouted. "You said it was cold, and you were right!" The boy was jumping about on the gravel.

"O-o-w-h!—Where's the towel?" "Try a sun rub, Reed. It's better for you, and saves laundry."

The boy raced up and down the bank, rubbing his body with his hands as he went. In a minute or two the morning sun and air had whipped him clean and dry.

After breakfast: "How's Anté this morning? Have you called the 'roll'?" "Antélope, please. No, sir, the roll has not been called."

"Very well. Sergeant, call the roll." "Briak and business-like, Reed plunged into the tool kit for the tire gauge and made a quick examination of the wheels while Cal measured their oil and gasoline resources. Then he presented himself with a salute.

Front left, sixty; rear left, sixty-five; front right, sixty; rear right, fifty." Cal returned the salute. "Fifteen pounds fatigue duty, for rear right."

"Yes, sir!"

More business with the gasoline tank. Then: "Sergeant, our advance is cut off!" "General, how cut off?" "No gasoline!" "Just a drop—perhaps a quart. Sergeant, you are a practical man. We have gasoline enough for five miles, and oil enough for fifteen miles; how far can we go?"

"Twenty miles!" "Good! Let us be off!"

But on the way to the long hill out of the valley Reed slipped from his happy world of make-believe. "What are we going to do for gasoline, Daddy X?" he ventured. "You gave your last money to the man who pulled us out of the mud."

"Yes. We are in a bad way. We have neither money nor gasoline. What do we do when we have neither money nor gasoline?"

"Write a story. Oh, Daddy X, write the story of the oak and the elm!"

But Cal shook his head. The youngster was thinking of the recourse Cal had had to newspapers in the cities they had come through; he was generally able to sell some kind of "story" to buy gasoline and food.

"No newspaper market here," he had to say.

"Isn't there a paper in Plainville?" "A country paper. But country papers don't buy stories, usually. The editor writes his own, or acquires them by means of a long pair of shears and a paste-pot. No, Sergeant, the army must go to work."

"Where? On a farm?" "On a farm. On the first farm we come to. Certainly on a farm within five miles."

"Oh, goodie!" "A tremendous word for a sergeant. I must say," said the general, severely. They were up on the rolling prairie again, bowling through a country tufted with groves of small poplars and willows. Presently a trail led off to the left through a gate in a wire fence and lost itself amidst the poplars. Cal brought his car to a stop.

"Consultation of staff," he announced. "Doubtless that trail leads to a farm-ward. Shall we go in?" "We are out of gasoline?" "Almost." "And food?" "Almost." "And money?" "Quite." "Let us go in." "Very good, Sergeant."

He turned the wheels to the left and the rickety car contorted itself stangely, but successfully down into the ditch and up again. The gate was open and they stumbled along a trail threading its way among the poplars. Suddenly it broadened into an open space and they found themselves in the midst of a village of farm buildings. There was a scurrying of poultry out of their way and much chatter from a flock of geese more than half disposed to hostility. Cal brought his car to an abrupt stop, wedged between an obstreperous steer and the corner of a log building.

Around the corner of the building, from the eastward, came the shadow of a man, grotesque and squat on the hard-packed earth of the barnyard. In immediate pursuit of the shadow came the substance; six feet and sixty years of substance; broad-chested substance under a blue cotton shirt and blue duck overalls held in precarious position by a pair of red leather suspenders with two ruptured eyelets; the whole surmounted by a large, ruddy, and not ill-natured face, fringed about the ears with a pleasant tangle of grey hairs and topped with a submissive lump of straw hat.

"Whoa, Eliza!" he exclaimed. "Jump in' jack rabbits, who have we here?" "Two hired men," said Cal. "You weren't expecting us?"

"Not as you'd notice it. Whose hired men?"

"Yours." The farmer removed the twisted accumulation from his head and harrowed his scalp with his thick fingers. "Well, I'll be danged," he confided at last. "I admit bein' in Plainville last night an' havin' a bit more formalin than was good for me, but I don't have no recollection of hirin' a man an' a boy an' a tin Lizzie. What is the deal?"

The farmer's partial confession opened in an unexpected channel for Cal's quick wits. "Forty dollars a month for me during the season," he said; "the boy gets his board and goes to school, and Lizzie makes herself useful about the farm if you furnish the gasoline."

The thick fingers gently continued their harrowing, while a "twinkle of amusement lit up the broad, red face. "Not so bad," he confided. "I was afraid I might have sold you the farm, or got you engaged to Minnie, or traded off the wife's spaniel, or something serious like that. Well, Jackson Stake is a man that stands by his bargain. But one thing," he added, with an apparent twinge of apprehension; "nothin' o' this to the wife. She's a suspicious creature, is the wife. I think she doubts all as well as Plainville last night. Not a word o' it to her. I'll tell her I met you just the now on the road and hired you, an' that's all there's to it. I can use another man, but you'll have to sleep in a granery. As for Lizzie, you can pasture her out. I drive a Dodge."

Cal already knew something of the jealousies peculiar to owners of different makes of cars, and wondered whether the farmer's remark was to be taken as an indication of snobbery or a piece of harmless information. Aloud: "Good. Lead us to the granery, and let us get to work."

"Give 'er the juice," said Jackson Stake, and as Cal drew the car by him the farmer hepped on to the running-board with the agility of a boy of twenty. "To the right, around the pig-pen. Gee! Gee! Don't you know gee from haw? To the right. Look out for the sow! Look out for the hay rack! Look out for the wagon tongue! There, the frame caboose, straight ahead."

Cal steamed straight ahead toward the "caboose," speeding up as he went, and brought the car to a sudden stop a yard from the door. The old man lurched forward with a jerk but did not lose his grip. "Jumpin' jack rabbits! If you're as quick a starter as you are a stopper we'll get along fine. This is it."

They got out and inspected "it." It was a frame building, twelve by fourteen feet; one thickness of drop siding nailed to two-by-four studs; floored with shiplap; roofed with shingles; a door in one end, a window, which could be removed, in the other. A heap of old sacks with a musty smell; a heap of old harness with a leathery smell; an old fanning-mill without any smell. Three sacks of screenings; up-ended and open-mouthed; probably chicken feed. The screenings had been strewed somewhat generously about the floor, and in a corner, where the rain had got in, had taken root and were sending thin,

Fashion Fancies

By Marie Belmont

The frock above was designed especially for wear in one of the new Broadway productions.

The material of the dress is velvet, and the color is the new golden pheasant shade, striped in black. The dress is cut on straight lines, with a scarf collar of the plain black velvet dropping at one side.

Golden pheasant is also lovely in crepe frocks, and a number of them have been designed for early fall wear.

fungus stalks groping up the board wall. The theory that the screenings were chicken feed was suddenly supported by a commotion in the farm-yard. An old rooster, on sentry-go, observing the granary door open, had given the "cook-house call," and the barnyard poultry were sweeping down upon them from every direction like cavalry in a charge, shedding superfluous feathers as they came. They were into the fortress, among everybody's feet, dabbling with terrific velocity, before the garrison had time to drop the portcullis.

"Hist! Hist! Sho!" cried Jackson Stake, making a great swipe with his foot which caught a rooster on the wish-bone and sent him somersaulting under Antélope. "Hungry heathens! Who'd think they were fed an hour ago? Strike me! but I never could see how a four-pound hen could eat a bushel of wheat without wabblin'."

By united efforts they stemmed the charge and cleared the battle ground. "Well, this is it," the farmer repeated, when the door had been closed on the last invader. "You can dump this stuff in the hay shed, an' the wife'll give you a broom an' a mop, if you're fastidious. Got your own blankets?"

Cal nodded.

"Good! Now I'll go up to the house an' sort of break it gently. You know what it is to cook for two more months. Dang it, I don't blame 'er. If there's any doggonder job than a farmer's it's a farmer's wife's. In about ten minutes she'll be prepared for the worst, an' you bump in then to borrow the broom. Mind, now, give me ten minutes!"

And the old farmer was off houseward, pursued by a scouting detachment from the poultry yard.

Cal and Reed exchanged looks which began seriously, and ended simultaneously in an outbreak of laughter. "But he didn't hire us last night, Daddy X," the boy protested, when his sides were settled.

"And I didn't say he did, if you noticed," Cal returned. "Just a bit of good luck, and when Fate hands you a bit of good luck, don't question her too closely. Now, let's wrestle this stuff out of here. Let me see—that's the hay shed over there beyond the pig pen." Cal took an observation of the position. It was evident that in the laying out of this ramble of structures on Jackson Stake's homestead no town planner had been employed. Most of the buildings were of logs, and the obvious theory was that the logs were hauled in winter and dumped wherever chance dictated, and in the spring a building was put up wherever the logs happened to lie. One larger building, which might, in a pinch, be called a barn, elbowed off a swarm of lesser brethren crowding in about its feet, much as Jackson Stake warded off the chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, and young pigs which pursued him on his perambulations about the yard. Except for the house, which was of boards and stood a little to one side, the cardinal points of the compass had been blandly disregarded. Everywhere were buildings, prearranged in every direction, in all states of repair and disrepair, with gaping doors yawning in the morning sunshine, housing, no doubt, all sorts of strange quadr-

ped. The place gave promise of enormous interest.

A GIRL BLACKSMITH

Up in St. Paul, Minnesota, a girl eighteen years old, Miss Ela Farnsworth by name, is running an up-to-date blacksmith shop, and doing any and all kinds of work any other blacksmith would do. Since the death of her father, who ran the shop for twenty-five years, Miss Farnsworth has become owner and operator, and employs two men to assist her in doing the work. Ever since a small child, she had been working with her father when not in school, and during these years she not only learned to like the work, but actually mastered the trade. She became an expert in welding and tempering iron, and shoeing horses, in fact, in everything pertaining to blacksmithing. Today she is one of the best blacksmiths in St. Paul, and says she expects to continue her work at the forge as long as business lasts.

PORT WILLIAMS AND VICINITY

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cooke, with two children also Mr. and Mrs. Frame, invited from Gay's River, Halifax county, and were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Murphy.

M. DeLong, student at Acadia University, was the guest over Sunday of his former classmate at Truro, Mr. R. W. O. Chase, at Church Street.

Congratulations to Miss Lucy Cogswell in being one of the prize winners for Historical Essays offered by the Maritime Library Association. These prizes are given as a stimulus to recover and preserve facts and traditions of the early history of various localities. Miss Cogswell's subject was Port Williams, on which she wrote and received a prize offered by Mr. C. A. Campbell at a school exhibition several years ago.

Miss Marion Power, teacher, had as her guest last week her sister, Miss Isobel Power, whose school at Waterville has been closed on account of diphtheria. The sisters spent Sunday with their friend, Mrs. Martin in Wolfville. Miss Isobel Power left on Monday for her home at Stewiacke, to stay till her school can be re-opened.

Miss Stanley Barhouse returned to her home in Belcher Street on Monday, with her young daughter, Shirley Margaret, after four weeks' stay at Wood's Hospital.

Miss Josephine Regen spent a few days last week the guest of Mrs. Howard Burbridge in Canard.

Mrs. Ernest Bishop, Miss Bishop and Mr. Wentzell, all of Annapolis, were week end guests of Mrs. Bishop's mother, Mrs. DeWire, at Mr. Arthur Lockwood's.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Lantz and family, Mr. Kempton Lantz, with son and daughter, with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lantz of Canard, all motored to New Ross on Saturday to meet their newly married sister, Mrs. Frank James (nee Pansy Lantz), from North Conway, N. H.

Miss Queenie Regan, of the J. W. Harvey employ, is spending her vacation with relatives and friends in Annapolis county.

Mrs. Frank Pettit, of New Hampshire, who was the guest last week of her sister, Mrs. A. F. Newcombe, left on Monday for Burlington, to visit her mother, Mrs. Beattie, before leaving for her winter home at North Carolina.

The large apple warehouse of G. A. Chase is now completed and ready for the fall work. It is one of the finest in the valley, built of brick, frost and fire proof.

The regular meeting of the "King's Daughters" S. S. class met on Thursday evening at the home of the president, Mrs. S. L. Gates. Although the evening was very rainy a large number gathered as it was the occasion of Mrs. Margaret Bezzanson's eightieth birthday. All were disappointed to find that on account of ill health Mrs. Bezzanson was not able to be present at her surprise party.

As each member had taken her little gift, they were gathered and with the lovely birthday cake (given by Mrs. Gates) sent the following day to Mrs. Bezzanson. A pleasant evening was spent after the routine business was over and delicious refreshments passed by the hostess.

The program put on by Messrs. Down and Frazer, of the Blind School, Halifax, under the auspices of the Women's Institute last Friday evening, was very enjoyable. The Baptists kindly offered their vestry with the use of their new Sherlock-Manning piano, on which Prof. Frazer proved himself an artist. Prof. Frazer, who has been blind from birth, received his education at Halifax, after wards graduating in music from the New England Conservatory, Boston. In addition to his instrumental selections he sang several of Harry Lauder's songs with splendid effect. He is now organist of St. Andrew's church, New Glasgow. Mr. Down in his address gave a clear and concise report of the wonderful work accomplished by the Blind School, and stressed the need of bringing this more comprehensively before the public, that contributions for its support and increased activities might be given by those who could not but be interested and in sympathy after hearing of its good work.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Murphy had as guests last week Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Roberts, of Kentville.

Mrs. Charles Collins was "at home" to her lady friends on Friday afternoon, with a very successful and enjoyable time was had. There were present a number of ladies from Port Williams and Wolfville and Mrs. Collins proved herself an ideal hostess. Tea was poured by Mrs. Gordon Stairs, of Windsor, and Mrs. Collins was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Dexter Collins, Mrs. Geo. Chase and Mrs. Hockin, of Port Williams, and Mrs. W. A. Reid, of Wolfville.
