Details of Accounts over the Late Premier's Funeral.

Where the Most of the Money Went in the Halifax Ceremonial

In view of the debate in parliament regarding the expense of the funeral of Sir John Thompson, the following details may be of interest. The expenses of the services at the Roman Catholic Cathedral in Ottawa are not in the accounts so far submitted to parliament. Hon. J. A. Ouimet stated in the House of Commons that the amount of the bills sent to the government in connection with the funeral expenses of Sir John Thompson was $33,779. These were considerably reduced, but in the opinion of Mr. Ouimet would amount to the sum voted by parliament, namely, $25,000. The bills already certified by Mr. Coste, who had charge of the funeral, amount to $25,608, and still none of the bills are included for the church service at the Basilica, in Ottawa, and which Mr. Foster says will amount to between $800 and $900. THE CRISIS IN ENGLAND.

The defeat of the Liberal government power of a Tory administration, attracts | the Lord Provost of Glasgow. the attention of at least the whole English speaking world. Lord Salisbury, who leads the new government, has only general from 1868 to 1871, chief secretary | Surveyor General. for Ireland from 1871 to 1874, secretary of state for India from 1880 to 1882, and again secretary of state for war from 1882 to 1885. The duke was formerly a supporter of Mr. Gladstone but upon the inporter of Mr. Gladstone, but upon the intraduction of the Home Rule question, he abandoned his leader and assumed the position of leader of the Liberal-Unionist party in the house of commons. The Right Honorable A. J. Balfour, the new first lord of the treasury, is a nephew of the Marquis of Salisbury. He was born secretary for Scotland, with a seat in the cabinet from 1886 to 1887. He became chief secretary for Ireland in 1887, and retained that position until 1891, when he became first lord of the treasury and leader of the house of commons, retaining that position until 1892, when the Salisbury government resigned.

The Earl of Cadogan, lord Neutenant of Ireland, was born in 1840. He has been parliamentary under secretary for war, and under secretary of state for the colonies; was lord privy seal from 1886 to 1892 under Lord Salisbury. He joined the

Salisbury cabinet in 1887. The most noticeable feature of the new appointments, says a London correspondent, is the inclusion in the cabinet of two more Liberal-Unionists, namely, Lord Lansdowne and Sir Henry James, making a representation of four for the following of the Duke of Devonshire and Mr. Chamberlain. The names of the cabinet generally are what might have been predicted with one or two exceptions. Lord Lansdowne has never previously held cabinet | ley. rank. In the stress of that awful excitement he took some bonds from the bank in which he was employed. It awful excitement he took some bonds from the bank in which he was employed. It was to help a man who had befriended him; but it was a theft, nevertheless, and when it was discovered he was convicted and sentenced to prison for six years. At the close of his term he took his little daughter, then too young to understand her father's crime, and went to the far west, where, under another name, he began life again, rising finally to be governor of Arizona, a man of wealth and power. Twenty years later, when the hand of his daughter is sought in marriage, he has to tell her suitor the story of his life, a pathetic recital of which the dramatists make the most. It is another strong sermon gainst the danger of the first step in financial looseness, and helps to make "Men and Women" the most effective lesson against speculation ever put upon the stage. "Pardon me one moment," said Sir Geoffry. "Before we talk of remorse and atonement, I should point out to you that I am not the only person to blame in this question. I am hot-tempered, I allow it. Nature and the life I have led settled me for that; but this boy is as hot-tempered as I am, and has an insolent way with him, which is in the highest degree provoking. However, we have talked enough on family affairs for the present. Let us go in and see what Mrs. Pickering has provided for luncheon." The rector knew his friend's peculiarities too well to attempt to renew the conversation at that time, and silently followed him into the house.

Before he went away the rector found an opportunity of telling Mrs. Pickering the subject of the conversation he had had with Sir Geoffry, and spoke earnestly about its unsatisfactory termination. Dr. Drage imagined from Sir Geoffry's tone that he was still highly incensed against his son; but Madge was much more sanguine on being able to bring Gerald back to his proper place in his father's heart. She knew that however the country to the country that she intended to the country that she is the country that she is the country that the coun harsh and curt the general's manner might be to Mr. Drage, or to any other of his friends, she had a molifying power over him, which, duly exercised, never failed to sothe him in his most irrational moments. "That signature must be obtained at any price," repeated Madge. "I don't think it will be obtained. I am sure it will not if I am a match for Philip Vane!"

CHAPTER II.

ALTHOUGH her mind was sufficiently made up as to the course which she would pursue, Madge thought it would be advisable to take counsel with Mr. Drage, and accordingly, early in the morning, she set off for the rectory.

She intended to tell Mr. Drage that Philip Vane was coming to Wheatcroft on a matter of business; but did not think it was necessary to explain what the business was, nor to acquaint the rector with the information which she had gleaned every means in her power, to prevent him having the slightest idea of her connection with Sir Geoffry' establishment. She found the rector taking his morning walk round the garden, with little

When Sir Geoffry pushed his chair back from the table and suggested that they should adjourn to the library, there to discuss the object of their visit, Delabole said:

"If you have no objection, Sir Geoffry, I think that this question will be more likely be brought to a speedy conclusion if it is left to you and me. My friend Mr Vane is invaluable in matters of detail. and when we come to them we can request him to favor us with his presence for the old saying of two being better company than three, holds good in busness as well as in social life, and if you have no objection, I think the basis of any arguments which are to be made between our friend represented by you, and the company represented by me, would better be settled by us alone."

Sir Geoffry bowed stiffly enough."What ever Mr. Delabole thought he should to agree to. From the position which Mr. Delabole held in the city, it was quite evident that in such a talk as they pro posed to have, he, by himself, would be more than a match for an old retired Indian officer."

Delabole smiled at this speech. "There was, he hoped, no question of brains or ingenuity in it. If the stability and excellence of the investment did not by themselves persuade Sir Geoffry to advise his friend to embark in it-and he hoped to embark in it a little himself-no blandward to bring about that end. It was gentleman who is coming down with simply a question of confidence and figures, not compliments and blarney. He would willingly retire with the general into the library, while his good friend Mr. Vane should perhaps stroll about the grounds, taking care to be within call if his valuable services were required."

Rice lives on the St. Mary's side and never reached home, but instead was found in the position mentioned this forenoon. He must have fallen off the approach to the bridge on the Gibson end, a distance of twenty feet or more, upon the logs. Chappell, his companion, says that Rice was not intoxicated when he logs. Rice was not intoxicated when he left him, and that he started to cross the hospital.

INSTANT CROCKERY MENDER

Mends Solid as a Rock.

THIS preparation will mend anything that is broken, and will hold like grim death, and is pronounced by experts to be the greatest article ever invented for the purpose. It will cement Leather, Wood, Crockery, Glassware, Iron, and everything else. Grockery or Glassware mended with it will never break in the same place, but will be found stronger than before. It is of great value for mending Furnitune and cementing tips on Billiard Cues as well as for a thousand other purposes. Anyone can use it. It is in liquid form, and always ready for use, requiring no heating, but sets quickly. Price, 25 cents a bottle. Made by East Manufacturing Co., Buffalo, N. Y. R. CHESTNUT & SONS.

Facts! Facts!

T is false economy to refuse a good article and accept a poor one because of the low price. All goods cost money to produce. The better the good the greater the cost. There are certain prices below which no good, henest materials can be tought. If you pay less, you get loss, no use dodging the fect. We always buy the best and sell the best, we don't believe in sheddy. We have just received one carload of STOVES and we consider them THE BET in the market of their kind, and we invite the public to look them over if they are in want.
