The Sound of Wedding Bells

—OR—

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER IX.

"I'm afraid this will bore you," he says.

She shakes her head with a smile, by glances out of the corner of her eyes at the high dog-cart, and suppresses a sigh.

"Now, Johnson!" he says, impatiently, "give these slugs an appetite for dinner."

The carriage starts; Dulcie looking out, sees the tandem flash by like a streak of lightning, then she leans back and smoothes sigh number two. Of course she does not care to be with Sir Hugh; it is far pleasanter to be with charming Maud and dear Aunt Fernor; but to be perched in that dog-cart, able to breathe, and to see the country stretching out at her feet!

"Better have the window up, Mrs. Fernor," says Maud, with a little shudder, and puts her hand on the strap, but Dulcie glances at the other window, closed as well, draws a long breath, and waxes desperate.

"Oh, don't, please don't!" she exclaims, with something between a sigh and a laugh. "I—don't you think it is awfully warm? It seems to me hot, right down hot!"

"Oh, it is for you to decide," says Maud, a little humbly; "you are sitting with your face to it."

"Well," says Dulcie, "well, say half-way up, then. You like the air, don't you, aunt?"

"Yes, my dear," gasps Mrs. Fernor, gratefully, though she would have died of suffocation rather than have stood out for herself.

The carriage bows along much more swiftly than usual, and they emerge from the park by a pair of huge lodge-gates, into the open road, and by this time, Maud, having recovered slightly, exerts herself feebly to entertain her guests.

"That," she says, "is Vernon Hill, that is the old coach-road; no doubt you remark its excellent condition. That fence divides the Holme estate from Lord Cranfield's, that is Lord Cranfield's place behind the trees, this is the River Hill," and so on; and Mrs. Fernor murmurs, "yes," and "indeed," at the proper periods, while Dulcie stares out of the window, Maud's thin suppressed sing-song voice scarcely breaking her day-dreams. How nice it must be up in that dog-cart, spinning along instead of crawling! If she was only Sir Hugh's sister instead of his guest?

What a stupid thing propriety was! Why couldn't she say right out, "Let those who prefer to asphyxiate themselves in the carriage do so, but for me, the dog-cart." Propriety and the conveniences were simply wearisome and irritating nuisances. "And this," says Maud, still rambling monotonously.

ously on, "is the Abbey."

"Thank Hea—I thank you," says Dulcie, just catching herself in time, "what a delicious old place, and—oh, thanks, thanks," to Sir Hugh, who comes forward and opens the carriage door.

"Are you going to get out?" says Maud.

Dulcie stares.

"Are you not?"

"I didn't know whether it was worth while. Perhaps Mrs. Fernor would like to rest."

As this means that Miss Maud would, Mrs. Fernor of course declares that she would rather not get out, and Dulcie walks off with Sir Hugh.

"Oh, dear," she says, stopping and drawing a long breath, "how beautiful and fresh it is! Have you enjoyed it, Edie?"

"Oh, it has been delightful!" says Edie, but with self-reproach and compunction. "It was an awful shame that you should be shut up there; but never mind, you are to drive back with Hugh, Hugh—says Hugh colors slightly.

"If you are going to quote me, quote me correctly, Miss Falconer," he says. "I remarked that possibly Mrs. Dorrmore would like to change."

"You might have said 'probably,' or 'certainly,'" says Dulcie; "but I can't rob Edie."

"Oh, but you shall!" asserts Edie, clambering down. "But you'll see the ruins first?"

"Behold the ruins!" says Sir Hugh, extending his hand toward the two crumbling walls and a mound of rubbish. "You see there where you stand, unless you would like a microscopic view, all that remains of Holme Abbey. As a ruin it is scarcely equal to the Colosseum, Miss Dorrmore; but though it is a poor thing it is our own, and we are proud of it. If you would like to know its history just mention the word 'Abbe' to my mother, but unless you are mad on archaeology, take my advice and don't mention it."

"I won't," says Dulcie. "I am mac on nothing but a dog-cart and tandem," and she goes up and pats the leader.

"Wash their mouths out, George," says Sir Hugh, and he stands at the leader's head while the man goes and gets a bucket of water from the well hidden among the ruins.

"Now, Edie, run away," he says, "and tell them that Miss Dorrmore will ride home in the cart."

"Oh, but," says Dulcie, faintly, "wouldn't your sister Maud like to go with you?"

"Maud!" and he smiles. "Maud would as soon think of going up in a balloon as trusting her neck in this dog-cart behind these horses."

"Oh, but," says Dulcie, faintly, "wouldn't your sister Maud like to go with you?"

"Maud!" and he smiles. "Maud would as soon think of going up in a balloon as trusting her neck in this dog-cart behind these horses."

"Oh, but," says Dulcie, faintly, "wouldn't your sister Maud like to go with you?"

Oh, How I Itched!

What long nerve-racking days of constant torture—what sleepless nights of terrible agony—itch-itch—CONSTANT ITCH, until it seemed that I must TEAR OFF MY VERY SKIN—then—

INSTANT RELIEF—my skin cooled, soothed and healed!

For instant relief from that Itch, get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema, the wonderful new skin discovery, stopped that awful itch instantly; yes, the very moment D. D. D. touched the burning skin, the torture ceased. A single bottle proves it.

For instant relief from that Itch, get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription today. Sold everywhere. Recommended by T. McMurdo & Co., A. W. Kennedy, M. Comors, Peter O'Mara.

"All right, George, get down and open the gate."

The man gets down and opens the gate—it is wild wood they are entering, with just a smooth, mossy road through the glades—and waits for a moment.

"What are you waiting for?" says Hugh, in his "word of command" manner.

George touches his hat.

"The deer have taken to the park lately, and Bobby don't like 'em much, sir. I thought I'd skeer 'em if I saw 'em."

"Oh, jump up," says Sir Hugh. And he touches Bobby on the ear, as a gentle reminder that there is a lady on board, and that he is expected to display the best of conduct, and he spins on again.

There is silence for some minutes. Dulcie is thinking of nothing; she is supremely, perfectly happy. This is almost as good as Rome, is better than the ball. Ah, if it could be all autumn driving, the six long months at Holme Castle would pass away so quickly!

"Well," says Sir Hugh, suddenly, using his favorite form of interrogation.

She turns her face to him, and its radiant beauty thrills him, and makes his eyes drop and wander to the horses' heads, so that she may not be offended by the admiration that leaps into them.

"Oh, it is simply delightful!" she says. "Is that what you meant?"

"I meant more than that," he says. "I meant you are bored to death, utterly weary and disgusted with Holme 'astle!'" She looks down.

BRITISH EFFICIENCY.

British Headquarters in France, Sept. 28 (via Reuters' Ottawa Agency)—It has been a notable fact about the two last battles in Flanders that each formed a one-day operation to complete itself. There may have been some mopping up and straightening out to be done on the following day, and always counter attacks to take toll of, but surely the highest possible estimate of efficiency is obtained in that the Saxons surrendered during the day with a freedom which evidenced the frame of mind to which they had been reduced. To less resistance was experienced in the block houses and shell holes than anticipated, owing to the thoroughness of the artillery. Sniping is again becoming more prevalent than in the later stages of trench warfare, owing to the opportunities that the new conditions offer. Several captured pill boxes and rifles mounted on tripods were found, in addition to machine guns. The Australians have met with curious experience on one part of the front where they engaged the Germans actually advancing as they were being marched forward. Our curtain of fire made them fall back upon their own barrage, suffering heavily. The Londoners had to face the heaviest counter attacks. One of the positions they captured was fetaken by the enemy, but our barrages were again magnificent. German retaliation was late and completely ineffective. Further details of the stand of two companies of the Argyll and Sutherland regiments show they were sent forward to fill a gap when the big counter attack of Tuesday was developing. Prisoners taken by the Corps were identified as storm troops and line infantry of four divisions. When the Germans bent our line, the Argylls were left well in the open with German shells bursting round them and our barrage in the rear. The gallant Scots doggedly stuck to the position and could see our front on both sides pushed back by the weight of German numbers. They might have judged it impossible for supports to reach them, although the commander with another company of the battalion was lying close up to the barrage waiting a chance to penetrate it. Another company on their flank helped them out before the brilliant counter attack launched in the afternoon by the Australians got into touch and repaired the break. Although this counter attack was splendidly conducted in comparison with the enormous superiority of the enemy, it did not carry our line quite forward to the former position, with the result that at nightfall the Argylls were still in the open. They might have been withdrawn, but had been held to hold out as long as possible. So when the battle broke loose the next morning and the whole line moved forward, these gallant Scots were in their places. The battalion boasts that notwithstanding German assaults it didn't lose a prisoner. Prisoners from German reserves stated that in response to a call for reinforcements their divisions hurried up. Our airman spotted it, and our artillery plastered the assembling Germans. Our fire also laid an intense barrage in front of them, and in consequence the men demoralized before the advance, were so thinned when they got through that they were unable to get in contact with our troops. The ground was strewn with their corpses. The spirit of our men is amazing, because they know as never before, they can drive out the Huns and that the Huns can't come back.

KEEP MINAR'S LINIMENT IN THE HOUSE.

Everyday Etiquette.

"Would it be proper for me to give an engagement announcement party for a girl friend of mine?" asked Maude.

"It would be quite proper," answered her society friend. "Write simple notes to the girls asking them to spend a certain evening with you. You might serve fruit salad with lettuce sandwiches, saltines, after dinner mints, salted almonds and coffee. You can add ice cream and cake if you wish. At each girl's place have a pink flower and at the place of the prospective bride have a bouquet of white flowers. At each place have two cards tied together with white ribbon, one the card of the bride-to-be and the other that of the groom-to-be. The cards may be heart shaped if you like."

Fashions and Fads.

Very deep cuffs and very high collars of fur are seen on new coats. For afternoon the one-piece dress with matching coat is a great success. India cashmere is still classed as a definite feature among the novelties. Heavy self-color stitching is an excellent ornament for navy tricotine.

Skirts are either wide or narrow, but they are surely a little longer. Blue serge is, as it has been, the most fashionable material for practical dresses.

There is nothing that will lighten a black satin frock more than a bit of stitiching.

Caracul and chestnut colored velvet is a clever combination for an evening wrap.

Canvas for the brim and velvet for the crown; this fashions a hat of the latest fancy.

In Paris the long-waist coats of velvet or brocade reach almost to the front of the skirt.

A smart coat is fastened in front by two large buttons, and a tassel drops from each button.

Venise lace, heavy and fine, has been revived for stole arrangements on afternoon frocks of velvet.

Half a dozen new jersey cloth ideas have been evolved, some even having a lamb's-wool surface.

A favorite style of dress bears a resemblance to a priest's cassock, but is sleeveless and worn over a slip.

BUSY WATERFRONT.—Yesterday was the busiest for some time in the handling of fish at the different mercantile premises along the waterfront.

When the Germans bent our line, the Argylls were left well in the open with German shells bursting round them and our barrage in the rear. The gallant Scots doggedly stuck to the position and could see our front on both sides panned back by the weight of German numbers. They might have judged it impossible for supports to reach them, although the commander with another company of the battalion was lying close up to the barrage waiting a chance to penetrate it. Another company on their flank helped them out before the brilliant counter attack launched in the afternoon by the Australians got into touch and repaired the break. HOLDING AND CONSOLIDATING POSITIONS.
NEW YORK, Sept. 28.
At last accounts Field Marshal Haig was holding and consolidating the salient positions won from the Germans in Wednesday's battle east of Ypres, extension of which would give him the dominating point from which to operate against the Ostend-Lille railroad and also the position flanking on both the southern and southwestern parts of Crown Prince Rupprecht, of Bavaria's line. All commanding positions taken by English, Scotch and Australian regiments in the latest drive, have been firmly held by them, despite numerous furious counter attacks, delivered with huge effectives, in which the Germans suffered terrible losses in men killed or wounded. The British artillery again has assumed proportions of drum fire, which is always an indication that General Haig has in store for the enemy still further relentless attacks against his lines. Crown Prince Frederick William probably imbued with the idea that at some time he will be able to pierce General Petain's front along the southern portion of the battle line, continues here and there to strike violently. His latest attempt has been in the forest of Argonne, where three times he threw his troops against the Frenchmen as in Chemin-Des-Dames and before Verdun, where similar assaults recently have been made, and the effort of the Germans was fruitless and brought to them only additional heavy losses. Comparative quiet prevails on all the other battle fronts, although there have been a resumption by the Russians of their activities in the Caucasus, where at several points the Ottoman forces have been defeated by the Russians.

GERMAN ADMISSION.
BERLIN, Sept. 28.
To-day's statement: Western theatre army of Crown Prince Rupprecht—On the Flanders battlefield artillery fighting increased this afternoon. In the evening drum fire was directed against points east of Ypres. The English advanced there in the form of strong attacks, northeast of Frezenburg and on the road to Menin. Both these attacks were driven back by our fire, but the enemy still occupies some positions on our front. On the east artillery activity was lively also at intervals at several places on the Artois front.

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL.
PETROGRAD, Sept. 28.
The Russians have captured Crenaru, 24 miles west of Mori, in the Caucasus. It is officially announced in Petrograd. The Russian destroyer Ochotnik was sunk by a mine in the Baltic on Wednesday.

THE IRISH SITUATION.
DUBLIN, Sept. 28.
(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—The Sinn Fein party is extending its activities, and forming local clubs everywhere in the country. It still remains, however, rather a pervading sentiment than a definite organization. Some speakers continue to preach revolution by armed forces. Others appear to aim at a programme nearer the practical limits of politics. The Associated Press correspondent talked with some who were very influential in the movement, to whom a free Ireland under the Crown would be a welcome idea, provided it didn't mean subjection to the British Cabinet. This is not so far from the rule Canada enjoys. There is a hopeful feeling, that the Irish Convention may form a workable scheme of self-government. The conviction is growing that if it does produce an acceptable plan, the irconcilables will be left without followers. Meanwhile the military is treating the situation on the assumption that the extremists mean what they say. Drilling is absolutely prohibited. Those engaged in it are court-martialled and sent to jail. Arms are being seized everywhere. The Convention is still busy discussing colonial schemes of home rule, but there doesn't seem to be any prospect of any early decision. Delay is not caused by any friction between the parties. The motto and mind of the conductors is slow but sure. The slowness, indeed, is regarded by wise judges inside and outside the Convention as a rather hopeful sign. Everybody is anxious for a settlement that can be offered the country with a reasonable hope that it will capture all sections and provide a basis of a government for Ireland in which all can cordially join.

THE GERMAN CHANCELLOR TALKS.
AMSTERDAM, Sept. 28.
Dr. Michaelis, the German Chancellor, in a speech to the main committee of the Reichstag said, the Pope's peace proposals were inspired by moral seriousness and the pure justice of neutrality, which things were lacking in the reply by Wilson to the Pope, justifying Germany's refusal to state her war aims. He said such action would only have a confusing effect and would injure German interests. American military exertions were availed by Germany with confidence. He strongly attacked President Wilson's reply which only bound the German people more firmly. He dwelt on the satisfactory state of relations with neutrals which were not disturbed by the exertions unprecedented of a hostile press. He deeply deplored the sufferings caused the neutrals by enemy economic war and was always prepared to assume a share of provisioning neutrals. The economic and financial difficulties of France were fast increasing. They were still more keenly felt in Italy. In England there was also exercising a certain inexorable effect. A deceptive hope that dissensions exist amongst us causes the leading British statesmen to continue to adhere to their war aims.

SINN FEINERS CAUSE TROUBLE.
CORK, Ireland, Sept. 28.
A police sergeant was shot in the thigh at midnight last night while he was preparing a squad at the court house to charge a crowd which had been making an attack with stones. He had given the order to fix bayonets when five shots were fired and the sergeant dropped seriously wounded. The shooting was the culmination of night disorders fomented by Sinn Feiners, small groups of whom paraded whistling Sinn Fein anthems and cheering Sinn Fein Thomas Ash who died. Jail windows were smashed and five youths received scalp wounds from police batons. The convention of delegates had left the city before the demonstration occurred.

Perfection Tire & Rubber Co.
bases its prospective success upon these facts:—
1. It owns the exclusive right to build asbestos-fabric tires, instead of the usual cotton-fabric ones. ASBESTOS is a mineral and COTTON is a vegetable, and YOU know which will prove to be the better Tire.
2. All Tire companies are over-sold, hence there is lots of room for another tire company that didn't even own an exclusive feature.
3. The automobile and tire age is only in its infancy.
4. Many more by-products can be created by the use of Asbestos than other tire concerns now manufacture.
5. Unlike previous tire companies, it begins business with ample capital, modern machinery, spacious factories and an established market.
There are many more reasons why. Let us tell YOU about them.

SATURDAY, Sept. 29th, 1917.

An Unmixed Boon.

To-morrow will close the great experiment. Clocks will be put back an hour and the day will be a long one, though with many the wisdom of laziness will postpone the ceremony to Monday morning, that an hour more ahead may be enjoyed. The innovation has after all run a very quiet and unobtrusive course, the best proof, after the preliminary objections that were raised, of its success and acceptability. Had the change possessed any of the inconveniences and hardships foretold by its extreme opponents, we should certainly have heard more about them. We can remember reading only one expostulatory letter in the press since the actual adoption of daylight saving and that was promptly and effectively answered; in conversation we have heard no objections whatever. In fact a cynic would find in it a fine theme to descant upon human nature and progress. Two years ago the few advocates of the scheme were inconspicuously dubbed cranks; the title is now universally conferred upon its opponents. There is nothing like actual practice to convince the majority of men of what is perfectly clear in theory.

Those who have been affected at all by the daylight saving have almost without exception benefited greatly from it. One has to search industriously to find instances where it has been even inconvenient. The News cites the case of the milk vendors, but it is a very trifling one. It is also directly offset by the gain to farmers and fishermen in being able to come to town and transact business a clear hour earlier than formerly. The children may find it hard "to go to bed by day," but that is among the least of childhood's troubles. And anyway they are in the same case in August. 'Anderson time,' as in July under the old time, so that it is not so great an infliction. As for the outports, the truth probably is that they have not been moved one way or the other from the even tenor of their way. It is the best compliment to pay them. The sun is their clock, by which they rise industriously and work throughout the summer day, caring little what hands on a dial tell them. The whole scheme is simply a step back to nature, and nature, as usual, is grateful and gives her rewards. There should be no doubt what the Legislature will do in the matter. There would be too loud a protest from the thousands who have tasted the good and pleasure of the extra sunlight to permit a return to the old way, a literal turning back of the hands of the clock.

Do You Weigh the Cake of Soap You Buy?

The increase in the cost of nearly everything that is used in the manufacture of soap makes it impossible to give the same size, same weight and same quality as heretofore, without increasing the price.

Some soap manufacturers have cut down the size and reduced the quality.

KIRKMAN'S BORAX SOAP is the same to-day as it has been for over a quarter of a century—no change in the weight, in the size or in the quality.

When buying laundry soap, be sure you get—Full weight, full size and full quality.

"QUALITY TALKS!"

Salesmanship unaided may make some first sales, but even at its best it cannot build a repeat business, unless supported by Quality Goods. INFERIOR PRODUCTS SOON REVEAL THEIR REAL CHARACTER, and weaken the courage so essential to success in selling on a permanent basis. Skill and enthusiasm of the highest order are no match for such a handicap.

BUT QUALITY PRODUCTS STRENGTHEN COURAGE

in selling and make it increasingly easy and cumulative. Their purchase can be urged with easy assurance, since the buyer is certain to gain from their presence in his store.

Bear Brand Rubber Shoes

Whether it be for your customers or yourselves furnish an inspiration for salesmanship that is invincible and bring about permanent and satisfactory results for you both, because you can be sure that they have no superior, that delight will always follow their sale, and that no worries need attend your efforts for repeat business.

We have imported this year SPECIAL HIGH HEEL RUBBER SHOES for WOMEN, either in storm or Croquet.

NEED OF GREAT SHIP BUILDING EFFORTS.

NEW YORK, To-day. The British Controller of Shipping announces that the losses of British ships since last February have approximately equalled the total losses in the war before that period, and that it is reasonable to expect the enemy will destroy with U boats 200 vessels in excess of the tonnage that can be built by the spring. There is urgent need for us to undertake merchant ship building on a broad scale, as otherwise it will be impossible to send a substantial force of soldiers to France in the spring without affecting the tonnage required for food for France, Italy and Great Britain. Before the war all the shipping in the world was only worth the same capital as two big English railway companies. It would be the most incongruous thing in the history of warfare if the war, in which such immensely greater strength had been exerted in other directions, should have the issue decided by failure to solve the problem of building six millions of tons of shipping a year in a country with such vast resources as the United States. What is the present situation regarding U Boat losses? It is clear that the sub. war will fall in its main intention: it will not starve Britain and it will not interfere with an adequate supply of munitions, but the British shipping strength is still being constantly reduced and we have not yet reached the point where building equals the losses. Under the circumstances Britain's position as supplier of the Allies' needs is handicapped, but the main importance is what it means toward the efforts of the United States in the war, and unless the situation is faced the great military effort of the United States will be crippled from the start.

RUSSIAN REPORT.

PETROGRAD, To-day. On the Western and Roumanian fronts there were fusillades and reconnoitering. On Monday our reconnoitering parties took Oromaru, 24 miles west of Mori. In the Baltic Sea on Wednesday, off the south part of the island of Oesel, our destroyer Ochotnik was damaged and later sunk from striking an enemy mine laid by submarine. The ship's boat, containing 11 men, including four wounded, were landed in motor boats and ships in search. Other members of the crew and officers refused to leave and sank with the ship. Our airmen dropped bombs on Turkish camps west of Kalkit and on Kemon; explosions were observed at the latter place.

SCHOONER ASHORE.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, To-day. The Associated Press this afternoon carried the following: A British schooner ran ashore on an island off the New England Coast to-day in a strong southerly wind and thick weather. The vessel is lying well out of the water at low tide and it is expected she will be floated later. The crew remained aboard the schooner which is in no immediate danger.

MISPLACED ENTHUSIASM.

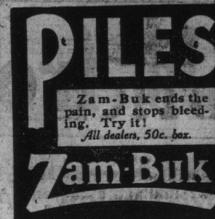

DUBLIN, To-day. The body of Thos. Ashe, a Sinn Fein leader, who died in jail on Wednesday while on a hunger strike, is now in the City Hall where it will lie in state until Sunday. On that day a public funeral and interment at Glasnovia Cemetery will take place. The procession is expected to be the largest since the funeral of Parnell. After Requiem Mass to-day in the Cathedral, attended by an immense congregation, including all the Sinn Fein leaders and a number of priests, as his body was conveyed through the streets to the City Hall, a group of Irish Volunteers, some in uniform, followed the hearse. Large crowds looked on without disturbance.

MUST BE SOMETHING IMPORTANT

LONDON, To-day. Correspondents at British Headquarters in France advise all their English and American newspapers to expect nothing from their respective correspondents to-day. No reason for this is assigned.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, To-day. A statement of the War Office to-night says: There were no further counter attacks to-day. Infantry action on the battle front was confined to patrol encounters between small bodies of troops, which netted more than 100 prisoners. A strong enemy party which attempted to approach our line early to-day east of Polygon Wood was caught by artillery and machine guns and many of the enemy killed and the survivors captured. During the night one of our light machine gun teams surprised a German machine gun detachment and after killing or taking prisoners the greater number of their detachment, captured their machine guns. Our artillery was active in the battle area and groups of hostile infantry were shelled with good effect. On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report.

MICHAELIS TALKS.

AMSTERDAM, To-day. "Any such public statement at the present time could only have a confusing effect and injure German efforts. We should not come a step nearer peace, but it would contribute certainly to a prolongation of the war. I must at present decline to specify our war aims and bind the hands of our negotiators." In conclusion the Chancellor attacked President Wilson's reply to the Pope's note. The President's attempt to sow dissension between the people and the Government of Germany, he said, has no prospects of success. His note has the opposite effect from what he desired and has bound us more firmly together in a stern resolve to oppose resolutely and energetically all foreign interference. In Russia an economic crisis reigns; transport especially is in no wise adequate to the task before it. The German reply to the Pope's note met with the approval of our friends and Allies, while the majority of our enemies have given it an obviously "embarrassed" reception. It is difficult to understand how anyone acquainted with the international situation and international usages ever could believe that we ever would be in such a position as, through a one-sided public statement on the important questions which are indissolubly bound up with the entire complex of questions which must be discussed at peace negotiations, to bind ourselves to a solution to our own prejudice.

RAIDERS FAILED.

LONDON, To-day. An official statement reads: Hostile airplanes, attacked the southeast coast of England this evening. The raiders were reported from various points along the coast of Suffolk, Essex and Kent. The majority of the raiders didn't venture far inland. A few of them headed towards London but didn't reach the city. Bombs were dropped in Suffolk, Essex and Kent, but no report regarding casualties or damage has been received as yet. When the air raid warning was issued in London everybody took to cover in the usual way. They waited two hours without hearing the sounds of defensive guns or bombs of the raiders. It became evident that the German airmen had been headed off from the London area.

The Slacker.

(From the Argonaut.)

She was stout, middle-aged, and weary-looking, and when she entered the crowded Toronto surface car a slender youth sprang from his seat. For a moment she gazed disdainfully at the civilian garb, looked belligerently at the boyish figure—right hand stuck in pocket and left wandering over the embryonic moustache—then in a loud voice she told her sentiments in regard to slackers. She talked long and her sarcasm was sharp and plentiful. Finally, her breath failing, she closed her trade with an emphatic refusal to accept a seat from a slacker. The young man meantime had not changed his attitude—in fact, from his easy posture, hand in pocket, one might have thought he was trying to show insolent disregard of "that" he spoke: "Madam, have you any one fighting over there?" She heatedly replied that she had—brother, two nephews and a brother-in-law. "Do you write to them?" the young man inquired. It was none of his business, she retorted. Then she admitted she did write frequently. "Well, madam, the next time you write, ask them if they can find my hand over there." He drew out a dangling sleeve from the pocket. The hand had been cut off at the wrist.

Nothing Is Quite So Pitiful.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

There is something infinitely pitiful to me about the unfulfilled desires of an old man or woman.

Nothing in the world wrings my heart strings quite so sorely.

A child's unfulfilled desires are touching.

Without wanting to play the fairy godmother and gratify him. Children are so eager. They want things, even unimportant things, so hard.

But the pathos of the disappointed child is nothing to that of the old man or woman who is nearing the journey's end with some unsatisfied longing, which he has carried all the way, still tearing at his heart.

Their Very Resignation The Most Pathetic.

Perhaps that expression is too strong. When one is old one does not want things with the same passion the child feels. One has learned so many bitter lessons in not wanting things too hard. One is less eager because one is so much less hopeful. But that very lack of eagerness, that very hopelessness is what makes the old man or woman's desires the more pitiful. They can't even have hope, that greatest blessing of all, that last good fairy in Pandora's box that made life possible in spite of all the evilaries.

Here's Hoping Someone Will Be Inspired To

What a joy, what a privilege to plant hope anew in one of these worn-out hearts!

One wonders sometimes that the

THE ELECTRIC FAN.

The electric fan is a weak imitation of a lake breeze which is designed to cool the atmosphere in one spot. It is a powerful little object, and when aimed carefully at the bald head of a perspiring globe-trotter in a tourist sleeper can produce a very satisfactory substitute for the Rhode Island influenza. Many a tourist has left home with the valves of his head working in perfect harmony, only to be set upon in his shirt-sleeves by an electric fan which played upon the back of his neck with so much success that his conversation the next morning sounded as if he had swallowed a nutmeg grater.

IF I COULD ONLY BORRY $127.50 SOMERS

The only way to keep cool in August was to sit in the shade and think of the approach of the interest on a promissory note.

Prior to the advent of the electric fan the only way to keep cool during July and August was to sit in the shade and think of the stealthy approach of the interest on a promissory note. People who did not owe the bank anything found it necessary to use the palm-leaf fan, which stirred up quite a breeze so long as the proprietor of the fan was able to swing it without incurring paralysis of the elbow joint. The palm leaf fan also served a noble purpose in other respects, as it enabled many a tired hostess to yawn at full length without being detected. Backward husbands who were dragged to church by a strong-willed wife could sink down behind a palm-leaf fan, apparently engaged in deep meditation, and sleep from the offertory to the benediction unless betrayed by a husky snore.

During the heated term it is a popular custom to take an electric fan to bed and go to sleep under its soothing rays. Inasmuch as most of these fans are attached to a meter which never sleeps, this custom is encouraged by all electric light companies, which argue that it will drive away insomnia and mosquitoes. There is some question which is worse, to be stung by a hunger-maddened mosquito or an electric meter which turns over faster than a fat man rolling down hill. The only cheap and economical way to run an electric fan is to install a water motor in the cellar in the darkness of the night, when the superintendent of the water works is not looking.

Business men keep an electric fan over their desks, so that whenever it revolves on its axis cigar ashes will be sprinkled on their shirt front. This is why so many men return home at night with shirt bosoms looking like a burnt wood plaque.

COLD FEET AND THE REMEDY.

Even in the steam heated city apartments one often gets "cold feet" during the night, which is annoying if not painful and causes one to lose many of the valuable sleeping hours, while shivering and coddling those icy members.

If you have cold feet at night try soaking them in water as hot as you can bear it just before retiring. Jump right into bed so that they will not get chilled and you will find the nerves soothed and the blood pressure in the head relieved.

Some people wear bedsocks to bed, but sometimes these prove irksome and tend to make the feet tender. A better plan for regular use is to slip a woolen shawl or part of an old blanket under the covers where the feet can rest against it without being themselves actually covered.

In aggravated cases of sleeplessness a hot water bottle often gives relief when placed at the feet. Others prefer it across the back at the waist-line. Sometimes a chilly feeling after retiring may be overcome by laying a woolen shawl over the thighs and lower part of the stomach.

I know one woman who rarely needs heavy covers even in the depths of winter by using a shawl in this manner.

Address

Presented to Miss M. J. O'Brien, Teacher, Portugal Cove Road.

A very pleasing event took place at Torbay Road School last evening, when the teacher Miss O'Brien was presented with the following address and purse of gold from her friends and pupils of the Cove Road:—

Dear Miss O'Brien:—It is with the deepest regret that we have learned of your departure from the Cove Road after having spent twenty-six years in our midst; during which time you took a never-fading interest in both ours and our children's welfare, and by your kindness and good example you became endeared to us all.

We deeply realize our loss although fate has decreed that you should be separated from us. We trust that you may be spared many years to labour in your new school even though the separation is a sad one to us.

We know that it is impossible to repay you for your many years of untiring labour, for your kindness and your interest in us; still we ask you to accept this little gift as a token of our sincere affection, and trust that you may still remember your friends and pupils of the Cove Road.

May He who rewards all the faithful reward you, and may you meet with every success which you so well deserve.

Signed on behalf of the people of the Parish,

GERTRUDE A. HALL, Teacher.
Miss O'Brien replied in suitable terms and warmly thanked the people for their good wishes and kind gift, and assured them that although she was separated from them, she would never fail to take a deep interest in their welfare.

WEEK EN

Those of our readers who have gone into the by places of our country have no doubt been struck with the quaint and old fashioned things which they have now and then seen. Some of these old articles are quite interesting when once their history is learned, and many a curious turn in life forged the links which unite them with the present generation.

Such was the writer's experience some ten years ago, when he dropped in at a sea captain's home in a well known port, not far from the city. The object of interest was a book, which to look at was to see its value, and to note its rarity. The book was very large and was leather-bound and strong. Its exact measurements were eighteen inches long and twelve inches deep, and five inches thick. The print was clear and good and the type must have been of the best in use at the time of publication—some three hundred years before.

The family who owned the book were the descendants of the pioneers of the place, who, about two hundred and fifty years before emigrated from the west of England and made their home in Newfoundland. The family was a well-to-do one, and the men brought with them such standard writings as were at that time available—and among the lot was the book in question.

When I first saw the book it was in good sound condition, and was well preserved; but evidently those who of late had it, did not appreciate its value, nor could they have been conscious of its worth. The book was a cyclopaedia and a compendium, which was in itself a library, and was copiously illustrated with plates, diagrams, and engravings, which included the various subjects of Art, Music and Science. Mechanics, botany, navigation, geology, astronomy, and all the rest of it were indexed in a most-detailed and scholarly manner. Such a book could only have been purchased by wealthy people, and only appreciated by well learned people.

I had not looked through the book very long before I detected its rarity, and saw its great value; and closing it I remarked to the good captain what I thought of it, and then he told me a little of its history; and what he said corroborated the opinions which I expressed as to the value and usefulness of the book. He told me that when his forefathers left Devonshire they brought out several books with them, and among the lot were two copies of the volume in question, and that they were taken by the two families, one for each. One volume got lost; but he thought that it was taken back to England again. The volume in question was the only one left of all the books that were brought out. The good captain himself had often consulted the book and had found it very helpful and instructive in his earlier days. He had even built a sloop from its direction, and had made the model and taken off the various dimensions from the lines and diagrams laid down under the heading of "Marine Architecture."

When he finished his discussion about the book and its history, he offered it to me, as a present to take

(I. C. M.)

Those of our readers who have gone into the by places of our country, have no doubt been struck with the quaint and old fashioned things which they have now and then seen. Some of these old articles are quite interesting when once their history is learned, and many a curious turn in life forged the links which unite them with the present generation.

Such was the writer's experience, some ten years ago, when he dropped in at a sea captain's home in a well known port, not far from the city. The subject of interest was a book, which he took at was to see its value, and to note its rarity. The book was very large and was leather-bound and strong. Its exact measurements were eighteen inches long and twelve inches deep, and five inches thick. The print was clear and good and the type must have been of the best in use at the time of publication—some three hundred years before.

The family who owned the book were the descendants of the pioneers of the place, who about two hundred and fifty years before emigrated from the west of England and made their home in Newfoundland. The family was a well-to-do one, and the members had been well educated; and they brought with them such standard writings as were at that time available—and among the lot was the book in question.

When I first saw the book it was in good sound condition, and was well preserved; but evidently those who of late had it, did not appreciate its value, nor could they have been cognizant of its worth. The book was a compendium and a compendium, which was in itself a library, and was copiously illustrated with plates, diagrams, and engravings, which included the various subjects of Art, Music and Science, Mechanics, botany, navigation, geology, astronomy, and all the rest of it were indexed in a most detailed and scholarly manner. Such a book could only have been purchased by wealthy people, and only appreciated by well learned people.

I had not looked through the book very long before I detected its rarity, and saw its great value; and closing I remarked to the good captain what I thought of it, and then he told me a little of its history; and what he said corroborated the opinions which I expressed as to the value and usefulness of the book. He told me that when his forefathers left Devonshire they brought out several books with them, and among the lot were two copies of the volume in question, and that they were taken by the two families, one for each. One volume got lost; but he thought that it was taken back to England again. The volume in question was the only one left of all the books that were brought out.

The good captain himself had often consulted the book and had found it very helpful and instructive in his earlier days. He had even built a steeple from its direction, and had made the model and taken off the various dimensions from the lines and diagrams laid down under the heading of "Marine Architecture."

When he finished his discussion about the book and its history, he offered it to me as a present to take with me there and then. I, knowing the great value of the book, and seeing the captain's son looking at me, felt that I could not take it from him; and that to do so would have been an injustice to his household and his family, and especially to his sons. I however, agreed to take the book on loan, and when a convenient chance offered to send for it. The convenient chance was ten years in coming, and so it happened that on the last commercial holiday I dropped along at the harbor, and called on the gallant captain. I found him not in the robust health which for a long time he enjoyed, but he was fairly well, and his sons were with him. The first thing to speak about after the usual greetings, and the necessary war talk, was the book; and I told the friends that if they were still satisfied to lend it to me I would take it there and then in the car. The good captain and his jovial sons were quite pleased to find that I had not forgotten the book, and that I still prized it, and they readily agreed to give it to me.

She Went Days Without Food.

When Hospital Treatment Failed an Operation Was Advised But Cure Effected Without The Use of the Knife.

Glouce Bay, N.S., September 29th.—Here is a case which sorely puzzled the hospital doctors. It was evident that the great suffering from pain under the left shoulder-blade was due to torpidity of the liver, but no medical treatment seemed to do any good. In fact medicines failed, and the doctors said an operation was the only hope. But Mrs. Watkins hesitated before the enormous risk of an operation and decided to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills first.

The result was that she was perfectly cured three years ago, and feels now that she can report the cure as thorough and lasting. This is not an isolated case, but proves that this great medicine cures when ordinary prescriptions fail.

Mrs. Annie Watkins, Glouce Bay, New Harbor, N.S., writes: "I think it is time for me to give my experience with your wonderful Kidney-Liver Pills. For seven months I suffered with what the doctor called indigestion; but whatever it was, I suffered terribly. The pain would start under my left shoulder and pass down my side until it reached the pit of my stomach. It just seemed as if the flesh were being torn from the bone. At times I used to go without food from one morning until the next. I had no energy left for work at all. At last our doctor sent me to the hospital for a month. For four days and nights I never broke my fast except for a drink of water. After four weeks' treatment there I returned home, and was back only four days when the pain came back worse than ever. Then I was told I would have to undergo an operation, but I would not consent to that. At last I read about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and started to take them. At first I did not notice much difference, but still I kept on taking them, and by the time four boxes were used I was perfectly well again. That was in 1914, so you see I can safely say that I was cured. I shall always be grateful to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, as they did more for me than four doctors."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Refuse substitutes, for they only disappoint.

What its end will be I know not, but its proper place should be at the Museum, where its remaining pages would be preserved, and its history recorded. Whether the Museum will ever get it I know not, but in all probability that is where it will finally bring up. The book-lover and the lore-seeker of the future will certainly find it a fund of information that may not be found elsewhere. There is so much superficial reading matter now-a-days and so many short cuts to knowledge that a good deal of the essential principles of education are overlooked and unheeded.

The old, turn and dilapidated volume is a standing proof of the advanced state of mechanical and scientific knowledge of three centuries ago; and it is a reminder that although the common people did not have much education, the great seats of learning were proficent, and that what some of us speak as being new was then old. We have a lot to learn yet, and among the things that we should learn, is the lesson, that we have a lot to unlearn. In our haste to get knowledge we refer to text books and statistics, but we are apt to forget that true knowledge must be sought for at a greater depth; and that if we wish to be worthy the great minds and great masters of the past, we must delve as they did and work upon the basal principle of knowledge and true wisdom. Of such a class is the old book of which I have written; and in all its neglect and obscurity, it is still a memento to the scholarship and profound wisdom of those who compiled it.

Master Coopers Annual meeting.

The 1st annual meeting of the Master Coopers' Association was held last night, a full attendance being present. The various reports for the past year were submitted which showed the Association to be in a healthy condition.

Mr. M. Murphy then took the chair and conducted the election of officers, assisted by Messrs. Cook and Ebsary, which resulted as follows:—President, J. J. McFarlane; Vice-Pres., H. V. Simms; Treas., James Fitzhenry, re-elected; Secretary, Wm. Ebsary, being elected in succession to Secretary Mullaly who resigned that office.

Notes of thanks were passed to the Chairman and assistants for conducting the election and also to the retiring Secretary.

Since the inception of the Association there has been no difficulty in obtaining hire from the mercantile body any reasonable concession or increased price asked for by the Association, and it is hoped that these harmonious relations will continue.

Go into Dry Dock.

The Norwegian steamer, which put in here leaky as a result of striking the "False Keys" near Cape St. Mary's has discharged her cargo at the Furness Withy pier and will go into dry dock for repairs on Monday next. The work of repairs is expected to occupy about ten weeks as the ship is badly damaged near amidships.

Our Volunteers.

Yesterday afternoon the volunteers were engaged at their usual exercises on the Parade Grounds and a squad at practice at the South Side Range.

Church parade will be held to-morrow morning, and we understand that either the C. L. B. or C. C. C. band will accompany the turnout.

Regimental Matters.

Major G. Carly and Surgeon-Major Paterson, who went over with the last draft and returned yesterday, left the soldiers at Barry and the Foresters at Dunkeld, Perthshire. Both officers visited many of our wounded soldiers in hospital. They were all in good spirits and wished to be remembered to the home folks. The most popular officer of the Regiment is Capt. Wes. March, M.C.

Major Paterson brought back the Military Cross and Bar won by Capt. Butler and gave them to the gallant officer's parents.

Major Carly also had a conversation with Brigadier General Cayley, of the 88th Division, of which the Nfld. Regiment comprises a part. Major Carly also visited Lieut. Jack McGrath who was wounded recently with the Dublin Fusiliers. He is improving well.

Will Do His Duty in Future.

A mate, who was arrested for refusing duty on board a foreign going vessel, was given the option yesterday of rejoining his ship or, as an alternative, spending a month in the Penitentiary. The diet at the Lakeside Inn did not appeal to him so he made up his mind to go on board his vessel and show a better example to his seamen in future.

No Report of Missing Man.

The young man Meaney, of Fox Harbor, P.E., who arrived here on Monday last to enter the General Hospital for medical treatment but could not gain admission at the time, and was given shelter on board Patrick Duke's schooner at Job's wharf, has not been heard of since Wednesday. The police have taken the matter up and are making extensive inquiries.

Appreciation of O. E. P.
When will my countrymen have sense,
Why don't they open their eyes,
And see the way they lost their pence
Through "gentlemen" in disguise?
No matter from what land they come,
To see their tricks we yearn;
We can be fooled by any bum,
'Cause we're too green to burn.

We have been fooled for many years
And greater still it grows,
Like children after Teddy Bears
We run to see fake shows.
And list you, sirs, I will go bail,
We have a lot to learn,
There's more sense shown by "Dr. Nall"
'Cause we're too green to burn.

The latest "show" that struck the town
It wasn't no great shakes—
A fortune teller and a clown,
And some old "toothless snakes."
Some "frightened monkeys" O. E. P.
He rightly did discern,
Which he said "suckers" went to see,
'Cause they're too green to burn.

When will my countrymen have sense?
Shall they get it at all,
To know that folks who take their pence
Their only gift is gall.
For many years we have been duped,
And now once more we learn,
That thousands from us have been scooped
'Cause we're too green to burn.

Constitution and Bye-Laws Finalized.
Association to be Registered.

There was another large gathering of members of the Industrial Workers Association last night, when the final amendments to the constitution were passed. The laws under which the Association will in future be governed are different in many ways from the ordinary, including many original and unique suggestions that were culled from among its members, and licked into shape by the executive officers. Particularly out of the ordinary is the concluding section, which definitely states that in the event of the Association disbanding, and providing the monies and property of the Association is sufficient, a sum equal to $50.00 will be divided among the members in good standing and the remainder divided equally among the recognized orphanages in this country. The recall system on a percentage vote of the Association, compelling any officer to seek re-election, was adopted. The constitution was passed amid much applause, every member standing.

The Secretary's report showed that the membership had commenced the last lap for the 1,000 mark and it was the aim and object of the Association to double its membership by the New Year.

It was ordered that the Association be registered.
The eight-hour day came up for discussion and a new light was thrown on the matter. One of the members pointed out that boys and girls between the ages of thirteen and sixteen are forced to work from eight to twelve hours a day at certain business places, a state of affairs that should not be allowed in any civilized community.

The prices of rabbits, potatoes, sugar, bacon and other necessary articles of food were discussed and it was once more pointed out that some of the biggest gratters are not confined to Water Street, as some of our country folks who vend garden produce have a natural hatred in disposing of their goods at anything like reasonable prices.

Mr. Grimes, of the Board of Food Control, being present, stated that the Board would take the matter up when the facts were laid before them, and if any citizen had any complaint to make the Board would be only too pleased to receive it.

Cheaper Food.

London Daily News: Bread is to be cheaper and meat is to be cheaper. The ninepenny loaf will make its appearance universally in little more than a fortnight. The fall in retail meat prices should take effect next week. The principles followed in the cases of these two staple commodities are diametrically opposed. In the case of bread economic laws have been thrown to the winds, and the citizen as a consumer is to get his loaf for 9d at the price of a State subsidy of £40,000,000, which will fall on the citizen as taxpayer. It is a momentous experiment, but it will at any rate mean the spreading of a burden that at present falls with oppressive weight on one class of the community. The only question is how great a reduction is justified, and while the magnitude of the subsidy involved must inevitably arouse misgivings, there are no adequate grounds for challenging the decision taken by Lord Rhondda and the Cabinet after what must be assumed to have been a comprehensive survey of the situation. In the case of meat the Food Controller has been able to proceed on sound economic lines. He has fixed first maximum prices for live meat, then maximum prices for dead meat, then the maximum margin of retailers' profits.

Will the Kaiser Explain?

A NORTH SEA MYSTERY.

(By "Ignotus" in the Daily Mail.)
The secret telegrams exchanged by the Kaiser and the Czar during the North Sea crisis of 1904 clear up several gaps in our knowledge. They do not come as a complete surprise. It was believed at the time that the Kaiser was egging Russia on to war with Great Britain with the object of destroying the friendship between Great Britain and France or of detaching Russia from France. Only a few months before—in April 1904—the terms of the Anglo-French Agreement, which ended the enmity between France and Great Britain, had been published.

The Russian Baltic Fleet, commanded by Admiral Rodjestvenky, sailed from Revel for the Far East in mid-October 1904. According to a Paris newspaper, the Echo de Paris, which was excellently informed, being in close touch with the French staff, before the departure of the fleet warnings were given to the Russian Admiralty that Japanese torpedo craft were in the North Sea. The warnings, stated the Echo de Paris, proceeded from German agents or Russians noted for their sympathy to Germany. Germany not only warned Russia that a Japanese attack would be made in the North Sea, but also beset the Russian Admiralty with "private" and "friendly" communications. The object was to endeavour to bring about an incident in the North Sea embroiling Great Britain and France. . . . The exact spot where the (Japanese) flotilla was operating was pointed out to the infuriated Russians.

French diplomacy was on the alert in its anxiety to avert any collision. But on the night of October 21-22 the Russian Fleet sighted what its officers and men declared were two torpedo-boats and fired on them and on other vessels near them. The net result was that one British trawler was sunk and two British fishermen were killed and six wounded. Subsequent inquiry showed that the sunken trawler was in all probability mistaken for a torpedo-boat, though "two (British) witnesses stated that they imagined they each saw a torpedo-boat."

Was there a torpedo-boat there?

And, if so, was it a German one?

All neutral Governments denied that any vessel of theirs was near the scene of action. That no British or Japanese war vessel was in the North Sea on that night need not be stated. The Russians have long since acquitted us and their present Allies but loyal and honourable enemies in that war, the Japanese, of any such guilt. But after the affair there were mysterious happenings in Germany. Suddenly and without notice the German Navy was mobilised. This was semi-officially stated by the German press in December 1904, and was the subject of comment in The Daily Mail at the time. So secret and apparently causeless a mobilisation led to anxiety in Great Britain, and four British battleships had to be hurried north from the Mediterranean owing to the British Government's ignorance of what Germany really meant.

At the same time from neutral North Sea ports came in statements that one or two destroyers or larger torpedo-boats of unknown nationality had been seen in the North Sea about the time of the incident. Some of the reports roundly averred that these vessels were German. But the German Government officially declared, on November 1, that, "according to telegraphic information from the North Sea naval station, there were no German torpedo-boats in the neighbourhood of the Dogger Bank on the night in question."

At that date, of course, the British nation had no official knowledge that Germany was proposing to Russia, an alliance against Great Britain or that the German Government believed in the principle "Necessity knows no law," which is identical with the doctrine that Germany can commit any sin that suits her. The Kaiser at Kiel on June 28, 1904, had toasted King Edward and the British Navy with eager enthusiasm, and shortly afterwards a German squadron had paid a visit to Plymouth, when its officers made the warmest protestations of friendship.

The mystery of the torpedo-boat remains, though it is now clear Germany alone could have profited by producing the incident, as she alone could have profited by the murder of the Archduke Ferdinand in 1914.

Advice to Teachers.

To those students who are going into the teaching profession he offered a little advice, for, he said, the art of teaching was a very difficult art; it was not a trick or a dodge; it was the expression of the whole character and intellect of a human being. To teach well the teacher must be perfectly natural and simple, for children were curiously alive to anything unreal. They must cultivate a high sense of enjoyment, for no one could teach well if they were in low spirits. Enjoyment was not a sin, it was a duty, and one of their duties was to be happy—to be simple and be happy. He warned them not to overwork, and remarked that fresh brain with five facts in it was of more value than a tired brain with ten facts in it, and an ounce of common-sense was better than a pound of inanimate knowledge. He earnestly advised them to keep in good health, for a teacher was no good if run down. It was also very important to cultivate the divine gift of curiosity and to stimulate the exercise of that gift, for the aim and object of all education was to promote curiosity.—The President of the Board of Education.

To-morrow at St. Thomas's Church.

To-morrow at the morning service, the Rev. Henry Gordon, of the Cartwright, Labrador Mission, will be the preacher. St. Thomas's Parish is specially interested in this Mission, since the Women's Home Missionary Society direct particular effort towards its upkeep. Mr. Gordon has been an indefatigable worker, and his presence in the Parish Church is sure to prove of great advantage and profit. The evening sermon will be delivered by the Rector, Rev. Dr. Jones, when he will discuss the needs of the Church in Newfoundland, in view of the approaching election of a Bishop. A cordial invitation is extended, therefore, to Lay Delegates and others interested in the work of the Church throughout the Diocese. The subject of the sermon will be: "Some Things to Remember in Electing Our Bishop."

NOTE OF THANKS.—Geo. Sharpe and family of Heart's Delight, wish to thank His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson, the Colonial Secretary and all others who kindly sent letters of sympathy in the sad bereavement of the death of their son who died as a result of wounds, on August 17th.—adv't.

The Fisherman-Farmer Speaks.

With your kind permission, Mr. Editor, I would like to say a few words in defence of our fisherman-farmers, as they are called, who are unjustly assailed by some individual who thinks he is victimised by paying 80 cts. a brace for rabbits, and 40c. per gallon for blueberries. He even goes so far as to say it is a profiteering business, and that they are amongst the very ones responsible for the high prices prevailing at the present time in St. John's.

Just think of it, fisherman-farmers, as you are called! What a comparison to make, when you are brought against the profiteers of Water St. Think of how many pairs of rabbits you will have to bring to St. John's and sell at 80 cents per pair, to purchase one barrel of flour, and how many days it would take you to secure that many, and then you can see what a profitable business you are engaged in.

If this person whoever it is that thinks the fisherman-farmer's way of living is such a money making business he should tackle the job for a year or two, and then he would send his way back to his office or whatever work he is engaged in, a much sadder but wiser man, and he would find out that sleeping under boughs and travelling for miles through swamps and marshes with boots that would put to shame any shoemaker in the world, is not the profitable business he thought it was.

Why his heart must be smaller than a rabbit's when he strikes at his fellow-man in such a way. Why does he not strike at someone who is worth striking at, but no he has not the courage or the spirit to utter a protest against the high prices of Mr. So-and-So that takes the people's money and sends it out through the Narrows never to be circulated through them again, and tells them when he has made his pile and thinks he has enough to retire on for life, that they are too green to burn. But not so with the fisherman-farmer, when he realizes a few dollars for what he has got for sale, ten chances to one he will leave it with the man who has bought from him. There are some people in St. John's who seem to be very much prejudiced against the country people and seem to think they always pay more than they receive in value from them, and the very same people can be seen at different times of the year paying five times as much for the imported article and for the world they would not kick against. What odds so long as the money was being sent out of the country, and that their own countrymen the fisherman-farmer don't receive it.

It is deplorable to see some of our people with such a disposition as that when as a matter of vital interest to them they should give all the encouragement they are capable of in helping build up our local industries and keeping their money at home.

No person need worry about the fisherman or the farmer of this country getting too rich. Go to the settlements around St. John's and what will you see? You will see children of tender years toiling in the fields or helping their parents about the fish. When, as a matter of fact they should be in school, but the circumstances of their parents prevents them from going.

The fisherman-farmer don't enjoy automobiles. He trudges to the city both poorly fed and poorly clad, and still he will find some one to envy him. Shame on such contemptible creatures, who will say he is amongst the profiteers of this country. Neither the fisherman or farmer of this country ever got fair play. There were always some bloke or jackass to kick them down and keep them there for their own selfish and greedy purposes. I hope to see the day when the fisherman and farmer will have some one to represent them and see that they get fair play what they never got in Newfoundland.

Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor, I remain, yours truly,
KILBRIDE,
Kilbride, Sept. 27, 1917.

25 cents Destroys Your Dandruff and Stops Falling Hair

Save your hair! Make it thick, wavy and beautiful—try this!

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Dandarine to-night—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Dandarine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Fads and Fashions.

A few tailored frocks are made of Scotch plaid cheviot. In general, skirts are narrow and coats only moderately full. Velvet is the most frequently used material for winter millinery. There will be quite as many short fur coats as there will be long. Checked blue gingham and black taffeta is a novel combination. Some bright greens are noted among the new evening colors. A copper colored cassock of serge is worn over a slip of black satin.

HOMESICK.

WALT MASON.

There is no sickness more severe than that a fellow knows when far away from comrades dear, from good old friends and foes. "A man may have the croup or m. m. p. s., the jaundice or the gout, and never know the doleful dumps, if he's a nerry scout. But courage will not brace him up, when, far removed from home, he yearns for book and chair and pup, and for his fine-tooth comb. I used to scrap with David Dose, my neighbour, every day, and thought that I'd enjoy repose when I had gone away. I built me then a little crib, among the mountains here, and took my tucker and my bib, and spent the summer there. And how I longed no person knows, while I lived in that shack, to throw some bricks at Mr. Dose, and see him throw them back. Man longs for old familiar things when he abroad may roam; no new surrounding ever brings the joy he feels at home. Some neighbours envy me my cot beside a snow-capped hill, where there are never flies to swat, and heat waves do no not kill. But when I'm there I huddle up before the glowing fire, and long to see my cog and pup, my book shelves and my pipe.

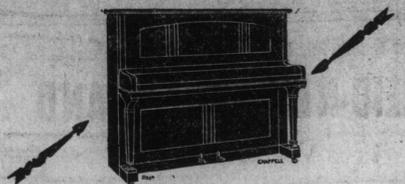

Your Boys and Girls.

The realization of the extraordinary adaptiveness of the very young child should save parents many an anxious day and sleepless night. There is practically nothing easier than to impress upon the child whatever habits of dally and nightly routine one wishes him to acquire. If he be taken in hand early enough. The only requirements are knowledge of what is good for him and then inviolable regularity in everything which concerns him.

Under this training he will become as obstinate in being good as the opposite, so called, indulgent or capricious treatment always makes him in being bad. There is no reason why he should be walked with or held, why he should be taken up when he cries why he should be trotted when he awakes, or why he should have a light at night. Things like these are simply bad habits for which the parents have only themselves to thank. The child adapts himself to his training and it is his treatment that his habits reflect.
