Love in the Abbey

Lady Ethel's Rival

CHAPTER XXXVIII.
 IN THE SHADOW.

"No one!" says Kitty. "He was not hurt—not touched?"

"He was not touched," replies the countess, with quiet emphasis.

Kitty's lips move, but they cannot hear what she breathes; but they think it must be "Thank God!"

"Neither was Sydney Calthrop," resumes the countess, with a hard accent on the name, as if she was not altogether pleased with this particular instance of watchful Providence.

"I am glad of that," says Kitty quietly.

"No, thanks to him, Sydney Calthrop got off scot-free."

"I saw it," breathes Kitty, with a shudder.

"I think he was bruised," said the countess, with a miserable enjoyment; "badly bruised; but he was able to get to London that same day."

Kitty closes her eyes—she cannot nod.

"You'll be glad to hear, my dear," says the countess, "that before he went he made a clean breast of it."

Kitty turns her eyes with feeble eagerness to the speaker's wrinkled face, and keeps them there, intent and expectant.

"It was the least he could do—the most, too, perhaps, in return for his miserable life. He made a clean breast of it, and told—the other—everything."

A questioning expression comes into Kitty's eyes.

"Told him?"

"My dear," says the countess, showing her teeth in the old familiar snarl, "he turned out to be the wolf and snake I warned you against. Trust him to act up to his nature. He did all the mischief—you've to thank him that you're lying here—as you are."

"To thank Mr. Calthrop?" murmurs Kitty.

The countess nods vindictively.

"Yes—it was he who made all the mischief and poisoned the other against you. Oh, Kitty! why didn't you pluck up your spirit—you had plenty of it—and tell Elliot Sterne that that monkey of a Reginald was with you at the theater—why didn't you have it all cleared up, and tell him that there was nothing between you and James Ainsley! My poor child, if I'd been at your elbow, this wouldn't have happened. Elliot Sterne behaved like a jealous idiot—it's his only weak point—but a word would have set it all right! Why didn't you, my poor, proud little Kitty, why didn't you speak it?"

A faint color struggles to the white face.

"When he was on his way to Ethel!" she murmurs. "I couldn't keep him from going there!"

"Ethel!" echoes the countess, with unutterable scorn. "Do you think Elliot Sterne is a fool? He'd as soon marry me!"

Kitty's lips quiver and part, and she sighs—it is not so much a sigh of regret, as of relief and happiness.

"That viper told you that lie, of course! It is all of a patch with the rest; while he was telling you that Elliot Sterne was jilting you for Ethel, he was telling Elliot that you were jilting him for James Ainsley. Heavens, that bull was a fool!"

"No, no," says Kitty faintly; "he has told all—he is sorry, and—and it was all my fault—as much mine as his. But it does not matter now, does it? It does not matter if—he has forgiven me?"

"Forgiven you! My poor, simple child!" echoes the countess. "Do you know that when James Ainsley had found him out—in some outlandish valley in Switzerland—they traveled night and day without stopping, until they reached here? If James had only found him a day—half a day sooner, all would have been right."

Kitty's face is colored like a blush rose.

"James found him," she murmurs; "I see! I see! Dear James, God bless him!"

"God bless him for a true-hearted boy!" responds the countess in the same tone. "He is a noble boy, Kitty, and suffers more than he ought. But the other, Kitty, I think this will be the death of him!"

Kitty looks up wistfully.

"When—I die, do you mean?" she murmurs.

The countess nods.

"If you could see him, Kitty," she says, "you would pity and forgive him."

Kitty closes her eyes for a moment, then opens them with a solemn tenderness.

"May I see him? Will he come?" she asks. "Where is he?"

The countess glances at Mary, who has risen, and is already turned toward the door.

"Not far off, my dear," she says grimly; "I think he sleeps outside the window there."

Mary goes noiselessly out of the room, and Kitty, watching until the door has closed on her, closes her eyes and waits. She has not to wait long—in a few minutes the sound of a man's footsteps, painfully hushed, is heard; the door opens, and Elliot Sterne stands within the room.

Noiselessly the old doctor lays his hand upon the strong man's arm.

"You will not let her agitate herself, my lord?"

Elliot Sterne does not speak, he does not turn his haggard eyes from the bed, but waits until the countess signs to him to approach; then he goes slowly toward the bed, and kneeling beside it, takes the white little hand. The rest move away into the other room, out of sight and hearing. For a moment Kitty does not open her eyes, then she does so slowly, and looks at him. That look—so full of love, of passionate pity, and wistful self-reproach—goes straight to the anguished heart of the strong man like a dagger's thrust.

Neither of them can speak, and for a full minute he holds her hand and looks at her.

Then, with a faint smile and sigh, she laboriously lifts her other hand and puts it in his, and scans his face pityingly.

"How ill you look," she murmurs—"you are as thin as I am, my poor darling! I am glad you have come back—in time."

His face works, and she feels his hand clasp, as if with a sudden pain, on hers.

"Don't look like that," she pleads. "If you knew how happy I am, you wouldn't feel it so. Elliot"—breathing his name with a faint blush—"I am glad you saved him!" A gleam of passionate hate shoots into his bloodshot eyes. "Yes, very glad; it was like you to save him after—after all he had done. It makes me love you more than ever I did, for I do love you—you know that now."

"Oh, my darling," he moans, and droops his head upon the bed.

Painfully she lays her hand upon his head, and twines her fingers in his hair.

"Yes," she murmurs, "I may say that now I am dying—it is worth dying for—I love you!"

His sobs come thick and fast, as if they racked him from head to foot.

"Hush!" she says, "you make me unhappy! Don't do that. If you want to pay me for all that has gone, tell me that you love me. Say it once—I love you!"

She asks more than he can grant for a minute. Till at last he raises his head and says the words hoarsely, brokenly.

Kitty smiles a happy, triumphant smile, then moves her face nearer to his.

"Will you lift me up?" she asks him, with a childlike matter-of-course.

He puts his strong arm round her, and, with a convulsive shiver, lays her head upon his breast. It nestles there quietly for a moment, then she puts up her hand, and softly drawing his head down to hers, kisses him. After a moment, she looks up at him wistfully.

"It is hard that I should die now, isn't it?" she says. "But—you will not go back to Ethel; no, I know that! She could not love you as I do—no one could, I think. Yes, it is hard now. I wanted to die before you came; but now—oh!" clinging to him with a wild cry and a flush of color in her cheeks—"oh, darling, my love, my love; don't let me go from you! Not now—not now! I want to live! tell them all I want to live! I will live! Oh, darling, hold me back—hold me back! I cannot leave you now!"

Frenzied by her appeal, by the look in her wild eyes, by the weak clutch of her hands, Elliot Sterne presses her to his breast and covers her face with kisses; then, glancing around, as if he expected some mortal foe to come and snatch her from him, he cries in an awful voice:

"No, you shall not die! I hold you, my darling! I hold you. You shall live—live—live!"

Then with a great cry he sinks upon the bed, still holding her to him in a grasp of iron.

Pale and terrified, they hurry and press round him, not venturing to go within arm's length, for in his eyes there gleams a threatening madness; but suddenly he shudders and droops over her, then utters a great cry.

In an instant Doctor Greene takes her from his arms and lays her down; then he looks up, for the first time in his long life, with excitement.

"Stand away," he says, waving his hand. "Fetch me the brandy, one of you. Stand back, my lord. There is a change! By God's mercy we may save her yet—if you are calm—calm!"

The Heir of Rosedene

AND
 The Game-Keeper's Hut

CHAPTER I.
 PROVIDENCE AND MAN.

THE great banker, John Weston, sat in the library of his magnificent home in Surrey. He was a very old, but a very brave man, for he sat with a smile on his wrinkled and colorless face, the face from which years of brain strain had driven the color, the face in which the struggles, the trials, of this transient world had carved wrinkles as deeply as if they had been cut with a graver's tool; a smile, notwithstanding that the doctor who had just left him had told him that he had only a few weeks, perhaps days to live.

When one is as old as John Weston death often comes as a relief, a discharge; the sentry is relieved at his post, and stretching weary limbs, goes off to his rest. The soldier, scarred in many a battle, takes his discharge and limps wearily to the repose, which to him is sweeter than the glitter of gold or the rustle of fame's laurels.

And John Weston had received his death sentence with the equanimity of the brave man, and the tired veteran. He had hosts of friends, he would be sorry to leave them, yes; but sorrier still to leave the young girl, the child of a younger and dearly loved brother. The girl—she was little more than a baby—had wound herself round the heart of the great banker, as the delicate ivy winds itself round the rugged oak; and for nine years past, ever since she had been brought to his house one summer's day, to see him, John Weston had ever held her in his mind.

And now he was going to die and leave her. Well, she would not be left friendless. His sister-in-law, the widow of his elder brother, would take loving care of her; and little Edna would not be left in poverty.

As he thought of his vast wealth—how much was it; how long ago was it since he had ceased to count it?—a change came over the old man's face. The smile disappeared, his brows knit together, the eyes, still bright and keen, became cloudy as if something were weighing on his mind, something were rising from the past to disturb him, to remind him that he, who had paid his debts, with this one exception, had left one great claim, one great debt, unpaid.

He rang the bell, and, when the footman came noiselessly, with the air of respect, the bent head and discreet eyes, the master said:

"Send this letter to Mr. Burdon—at once."

The footman said, "Yes, sir," and waited.

Mr. Weston looked up.

"Well?" he asked, sternly.

"The letter, sir," explained the footman.

John Weston started slightly and smiled. Yes; it was as well he was going, going before his mind—the mind that had governed so many men, saved so many fortunes—and wrecked some—began to wane.

He wrote the letter; it was no more than a note:

"Dear Burdon: Please come at once. I mean—at once."

"Yours faithfully,
 "JOHN WESTON."

He sealed the envelope in the good, old-fashioned way, and the footman dispatched a groom with the letter.

In two hours time Richard Burdon, the solid, trustworthy lawyer, was in attendance on his old client and friend.

He found Mr. Weston just sitting down to dinner, and the banker generally, affectionately, waved Mr. Burdon to a chair. They ate of the good things in those times without the fear and trembling which nowadays wait upon our repasts; and the two men enjoyed their turtle soup, filleted sweets, curried chicken, roast beef, colds and cheese; and washed down this substantial fare with hock, sherry, port and a liqueur of rare old.

Such a menu is calculated to make most of the diet faddists of these more scientific times shudder as they read; but it was on such food as this—and plenty of it—that our fathers and forefathers made England what it is; and, pondering over the degeneracies of these later times, one is tempted to fill to one like provender, exclaiming, "What was good enough for them is good enough for us!"

The two men when they had sipped their liqueur or whisky, lit cigars—not cigarettes, be it noted—and then, and not till then, John Weston began to talk on business. "I'm going to die, Dick," he said as quietly, almost as casually, as if he had said, "I am going to get my hair cut."

Burdon started, but he knew his friend too well to utter an exclamation.

"Who says so?" he inquired, with a little grunt of incredulity.

"Old Mossop," replied John Weston, "and he's never wrong. Singular that, for a doctor; for, by gad! they're seldom right. But I've received the information from another and still more reliable source."

He touched his heart and smiled grimly. "I have had my suspicions for some time; that is why I sent for Mossop. And he confirmed them. Pah, my dear Dick, don't look so glum. A man must die some time; one can't expect to go on forever; and for my part—Ah, well, life ceases to be amusing after three-score-and-ten, and one rather longs for a change of scene. Cheer up, man! And fill your glass. Of course, I sent for you about my will, Dick."

Burdon filled his glass and cleared his throat.

Interesting scenes are made partly with cooked oatmeal and seedless raisins, and eaten hot with butter.

Put all white cottons and linsens to soak in cold water before washing day. Such soaking helps to bring out stains.

Gridle cakes and sweet spice cake baked in a sheet and cut in squares are good substitutes for expensive cakes.

FRUITION AT SMYRNA.

ATHENS, Jan. 7.
 According to a report here from Smyrna, the Director of the Austrian Hospital at Smyrna, Asia Minor, after the departure of the Austrian Consul, raised the French flag over the hospital, under the belief that France was the protector of Roman Catholic institutions in the Near East.
 The Italian Consul, it is added, then requested the Turkish Military Authorities to arrest the Director. He is reported to have been arrested and placed aboard an Italian warship.

OFFICIAL OPPOSITION.

LONDON, Jan. 8.
 The English Labor Party has decided to accept the responsible position of official opposition in the House of Commons. This is a landmark in English Parliamentary history. The leader of the opposition will be William Adamson, who worked as a miner for 21 years. John B. Glynne, former Food Controller, is to be Deputy leader. Both of these men are looked upon as moderates.

BULGARIAN BRUTALITY.

LONDON, Jan. 8.
 (Via Reuters Ottawa Agency)—
 Evidence has been received from British officers who have been prisoners of war in Bulgaria, and Reuters Limited, learns of cruel treatment and tortures which they saw the Bulgarians inflict upon Serbian prisoners and interned civilians. The evidence shows that the civilians were held in cages, and were almost barefooted when they arrived in Bulgaria. The interned civilians used to visit the British prisoners camp, to collect collected vegetable peelings to eat.
 Most of the British officers witnessed the brutal flogging of Serbian prisoners. They particularly mentioned the Commandant Ivan Nikolov, who himself ordered the flogging and personally struck prisoners as they lay on the ground. Women were flogged until their backs were lacerated. In several cases the victims died from the treatment they received. The British officers report that they protested, but that the Bulgarians insisted that the victims were subjected to such treatment because they were Serbians. The mortality among the Serbians was so great, that with no buried without coffins, and with no religious services. The treatment spoken of, it is declared, was continued, even after the signing of the Bulgarian armistice.

THE NOBLE ARMY.

LONDON, Jan. 8.
 (Via Reuters Ottawa Agency)—
 Hundreds of names of men and women, on whom the order of the British Empire has been bestowed
 for services rendered in connection with the war, are printed in two pages of the Official Gazette. The activities of the recipients represent the most various forms of war heroism. They include Viscountess Burton, wife of the Governor General of South Africa, who appears in the highest class, that of Dames of the Grand Cross, Knight Commandership
 include Rider Haggard, as member of the Dominions Royal Commission.
 Commanders include Salvationists
 such as Mary Booth, and W. J. Hay, nes, the well known music hall artist.

George Robey is also made a commander.

ANOTHER ANNOUNCEMENT.

LONDON, Jan. 8.
 The Air Ministry announces that the disposal or employment of men from overseas, who have been under-training in aviation is forming the subject of an agreement between the Ministry and the authorities of the Dominions and Colonies concerned.
 Plans will include participation by the Air Ministry, subject to the individual desires of all such persons who are not on the strength of overseas or colonial forces.

MEMORIAL TO FRENCH SEAMEN.

PARIS, Jan. 8.
 In the presence of representatives
 of various maritime associations,
 Premier Buisson, Under Secretary of State for the French Merchant Marine, to-day unveiled at the Merchant Marine Building, a tablet to the memory of the members of the French Merchant Marine who died during the war.

FLOODS IN PARIS.

PARIS, Jan. 8.
 The River Seine is rising steadily, and to-day the level was the highest since the present flood conditions set in. Navigation is at a complete standstill, while all shipments of coal
 over the River route have been stopped. Since January 3rd several vessels loaded with flour were forced to tie up along the river banks, before reaching Paris, causing many bakers
 in the sixth ward to close their shops early this morning, because of a lack of flour. The rain has now ceased and the barometer is raising; the weather is clear, but the river continues to swell. The people line the banks of the river and talk reminiscently of the 1910 flood. The railroad to the Invalides Station is submerged in several places and the Voltaire wharf is under water, as is also the Louvre wharf.

SIMPLE CEREMONIES.

OYSTER BAY, N.Y., Jan. 8.
 Theodore Roosevelt lies at rest beneath a cemetery knoll, near the rambling rural highway, along which he travelled so many times in boy-hood and in manhood, between the Sagamore Hill House, which was his home, and the quiet village of Oyster Bay. Perhaps no other ex-President of the United States has been paid the tribute of so simple a funeral as that which was given Col. Roosevelt in this afternoon, on the shore of Long Island Sound. Military and naval honors were not his in death, only because it had been his wish and that of his family, that the last rites be surrounded only with the simple dignity that might attend the passing of a private citizen. But the nation, and foreign governments, sent representives, as did also the State and the City in which he was born. These noted men sat sorrow-fully in the pews of the little red building, "Christ the Episcopal Church, while brief services of prayer and scripture readings were held without an eulogy in which so much might have been said, without there was no singing or organ playing.

QUESTIONS OF IMPORTANCE.

PARIS, Jan. 8.
 The impending informal meeting,
 between the Entente Premiers, and President Wilson, will deal with subjects of fundamental importance. It will be for these officials to arrange the programme, which will govern the President's visit to the Entente, and approval when all the delegates formally gather. The Japanese delegates, already here, have been participating in some discussions, but they have believen the groups. It is assumed that that have been consulted in the preparation of the programme, and that they have outlined the treatment of certain issues in which they are particularly interested. It has been agreed that the first matter to be considered at the meeting of the Premiers
 and the President will be the presentation to be accorded the powers
 seeking participation in the Peace Congress. Then must come the question of a League of Nations, which is regarded as the foundation upon which must be erected the whole structure of a permanent peace treaty, and the adjustment of boundaries to meet conditions after the war. The subject subject to engage attention, as next in importance, is the neutralization of international waterways, having especially in mind the Dardanelles, and perhaps the Scheldt and the Danube Littoral. Probably next among the foremost subjects to receive attention will be "The War of the Seas." It will be significant that this phrase now is being adopted, instead of the older
 "Freedom of the seas." But it is not yet possible to ascertain in what the distinction is to consist.

MORE DELAYS.

PARIS, Jan. 8.
 (By the A.P.)—President Wilson's conferences with the Premiers of Gt.
 Britain, France and Italy, which were to open to-day, have been delayed,
 and will probably not begin before early next week. Mr. Lloyd George is detained in London by work incident
 to the reconstruction of his cabinet.
 Premier Orlando, of Italy, who is due here to-day, will probably return to Rome, where his presence for forty-eight hours is necessary, because of matters under consideration by the Italian Parliament. There will, however, be a meeting to-day at the office of Foreign Affairs, which will be attended by Mr. Wilson, Premier Orlando and Japanese representatives.

HARBOR TRAFFIC TIED UP.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 9.
 With approximately 16,000 men affected, the strike of the Maritime Workers' Amalgamation went into effect here at six this morning. At that hour, ferry boats, steam lighters, tow boats, coal barges, gravel boats and other harbor craft were at a standstill. According to the strike leaders, Union officials announced that all the city's fire and police boats would be tied up by the calling out of their crews. They explained that it would probably be some time before ferry transit was discontinued, owing to the time consumed in reaching all the members with the strike call.
 If it was necessary to win the strike,
 they threatened to call out the longshoremen, numbering 70,000 men.

 whose name is also Johnson, and he called in a police-constable, whose acting officer was sent for, and he Bolshevism.

Bolshevism, a disease or a mania, is the subject which political pathologists will require to diagnose ere long, if indeed the time has not already come for an expert pronouncement. Born in Russia, the home of political as well as other diseases, it has rapidly affected the Western portions of Europe, and has journeyed across the Atlantic Ocean and established itself in certain parts of Canada, according to recent news dispatches from that dominion. And yet it is no more understood, except in name, by any peoples outside of Russia, if indeed the Russians themselves can define it. Those who make up the Bolshevik party, and who are at present in control in Moscow, refuse to permit anything to be sent out of Russia which might throw a little light on the subject, or which on the other hand may have a tendency to create a prejudice, inimical to the theories held by the Bolsheviks themselves. And just as stubborn are the authorities outside of Russian territory, who refuse to pass information, uncensored, which may assist in the spread of the Bolshevik Cult. Therefore the general public, the great mass of newspaper readers, and as a matter of fact the newspapers as well, have only a vague idea of the term Bolshevism, which by them is usually associated with anarchy and disorder. Many prominent journals have endeavored to gather from different sources, material which will enable them to present a correct definition of Bolshevism, but even this has been difficult, and the result, in general, unsatisfactory. So far however as their investigations have gone, the collated information has been proven of value, inasmuch as it has gone some distance toward rolling aside the curtain of mystery which hitherto concealed the chief party or group in the Russian political drama.

In its original sense, Bolshevism means neither more nor less than complete Radicalism in politics, and consequently a Bolshevik is but a political extremist, one looking for the maximum in political reforms, their proposal being to abolish private property and private profits, to seize not only railways, telegraphs and mines, but also the personal property of all the people, this concentration to be made in the name of the State. They propose also to extend Bolshevik rule, all over the world, by suasion at first, but by force if necessary. In other words the particular dogma of militant Bolshevism is that all men should be free and equal, the precise interpretation of this freedom and equality being "that all men should be free to seize the property of their neighbours and equal to the task of doing so."

Bolshevik rule is under the control of Soviets, which are group organizations of city people and peasants represented by workers in factories and stores or neighbourhoods, and everybody who works can belong to a Soviet. The Soviets rule the factories, which in most cases they have commandeered without payment of one cent to the original owners, one working out of the theory of freedom and equality. These Soviets claim to be democratic, but only those who favor the Soviet form of Government are allowed to vote. Those who oppose them have no say. The middle classes (bourgeoisie) have no vote. Employers of labor have no vote, the right of the franchise being for employees only. Equality and freedom again.

Beside the local Soviets, there is the All-Russian Soviet, which is a body of delegates from all the city and provincial organizations, all of which may represent an indefinite number of voters. This All-Russian Soviet succeeded to the regular Government of Russia in November 1917, and meets in Moscow, the ancient capital of that country, because of its central situation, being practically the heart of Russia. It has not been fully determined, whether or not the various Soviets represent the majority of the population, estimates differing greatly in this respect, but one thing is certain that Bolshevism itself is not a majority in the country.

It being merely the majority faction of one party, and in Russia there are at least half a dozen parties, all equally inoculated with their own ideas of freedom and equality. The retention of power by the Bolsheviks is due to terrorism practised by the Soviets, for the party rules with an iron hand over the masses of superstitious peasants and workmen, and does not hesitate to invoke the "red terror" against any who plot to overthrow the Soviet administration, and the Bolsheviks have advanced so far on their careers of violence that many statesmen see no possibility of compromise whatever with them, and it is currently expressed that they must work out their own salvation as they have brought about their own and their country's desolation.

The Evangelists.

A very large audience greeted the Evangelists in Gower St. Church last evening. Mrs. Demarest was as usual delightfully interesting, as well as eloquent and effective. Her address was in the nature of an interpretation of the first twelve verses of the first chapter of St. John's Gospel, which deals in language sublime with the nature, character, person and work of Jesus Christ. She imparted several lessons from the profound teachings of the inspired writer and delivered a masterly discourse, combining high scholarly treatment with pathetic illustration and story. The singing, taken up, when familiar, by the congregation was most hearty and inspiring, and the service as a whole may be regarded as helpful and very impressive.

This afternoon Mrs. Demarest delivered her second address to the ladies, and to-night the usual service will be held, commencing with a song service at 7.45 o'clock. All are cordially invited to join in these services. Announcement was also made of a men's meeting to be held in the College Hall, on Sunday afternoon next at three o'clock, when the subject to be discussed is "Man's Destiny."

The Epidemic.

About ten cases of influenza reported in the city yesterday. The disease is very mild, but even so it is necessary that all precautions should be taken to prevent a recurrence of an epidemic. The Fever Hospital was probably finished this afternoon for the "Flu" sufferers.

New Branch Bank.

The Royal Bank of Canada has opened a branch at Cape Broyle, the increasing business there necessitating such an institution. The Royal Bank now has branches at St. John's (2), at Trinity, Heart's Content, Placentia, Marytown, Rose Blanche and Hr. Breton, making in all nine branches. The Royal Bank of Canada is to be congratulated on its progressiveness and efficiency, and there is no doubt but that the public will respond accordingly.

AND GOVERNMENT POSITIONS.

The following letter has been sent Hon. Sir M. P. Cashin, Acting Prime Minister, by the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association. It is in startling contrast to the studied hypocrisy of the article in last evening's Advocate, and effectually calls the bluff put up by the writer there. The reply of the Acting Prime Minister will be looked for with more than ordinary interest.

St. John's, Nfld., January 7th, 1919. Sir M. P. Cashin, K.C.B.E., Acting Prime Minister. Sir,—We beg to bring before your attention two vacancies that have just occurred in the Civil Service through the deaths of Mr. Eli White-way and Mr. Cantwell.

Both of these positions can be easily filled by disabled men, who are no longer able to take up their former occupations. It need hardly be said that we expect to hear that ex-Sailors or Soldiers have been appointed to these positions as we feel that no right thinking citizens would consider such positions without knowing that the Re-Establishment Committee have first had the offer of refusal.

We might also call your attention to a position of Customs Officer at Stephenville Crossing, that has lately been filled by a man named John Devine who previous to the appointment was earning good wages as a lumber surveyor. At the same time there is a family of Carters living there, who have given three sons for the defence of the Empire, one of whom was killed in action and another badly wounded. The badly wounded man has been home for some time and is quite capable of holding such a position.

We are taking the liberty of forwarding a copy of this letter to the Vocational Training Committee for their guidance, also to the Press for publication.

We have the honor to be, Sir, Your obedient servants, Great War Vet. Assoc. HAROLD MITCHELL, Pres. B. B. HARRIS, Secretary.

Spicy Ripple.

Dear Sir,—In your issue of last evening I note another spicy ripple from Mr. Slattery.—Citizen Secretary-Treasurer City Council. I am now between the devil and the deep sea, I don't know whether I am discussing the question of water and sewerage for the city, with Mr. Slattery, or the Mayor, Acting Mayor or the Council. Perhaps at the meeting this afternoon this question might be settled. My scholastic and pugilistic friend, Mr. Slattery, is too much for me. I also note in his letter, he is brim full of statistics to which he would like to take time by the forelock, and have ready when the Charter—the one and only Charter—that was held over the heads of so many citizens during the late court of imprisonment. Yes, Mr. Slattery, get ready a full and comprehensive detailed statement of how much money has been spent in water and sewerage during the mayoralty of Shea, Ellis, Gibbs, etc., and who owned the land, etc. Should the Charter ever reach the Legislative Council, just as well to have these facts ready. Personally, I don't think Mr. Slattery will require to worry much until after a general election. St. John's East and West should be fully represented in the House of Assembly before we can think of dealing with the Charter in all its magnitude or any part of it just at this point. In looking over this morning's Daily News, I note there is a letter from Councillor Mullaly dealing with the Sudbury controversy.

"Sub rosa—tant mieu." Yours truly, JOHN ANDERSON. Jan. 9, 1919.

Questions For The Advocate.

Editor Evening Telegram. Sir,—Please see the Telegram taking up the cause of the returned soldier. There was a war over in Europe, but there is another war on here, the returned soldier finds, as he has to fight all he gets, and then does not get it. I see the "Advocate" says men don't need to know hunger if they have arms and muskets to work, but it don't say what if they haven't. This applies to the boys of Stephenville Crossing as well as those here. Regarding the job in Stephenville, why did not Mr. Devine do the Customs' work before, that Mr. O'Reilly was doing? Or was Mr. Devine doing any Customs' work before, or was he a tide-waiter? If he was, has he been given a new appointment of Sub-Collector now? The Advocate don't mention what about all the other appointments that the Government is passing up on the boys; can it be they have no use for us now? Yours truly, ONE OF THE BOYS. Jan. 9, 1919.

Canada Claims Right to Place in Conference.

Addressing a meeting of L'Alliance Francaise at Montreal Monday evening, December 2, Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works, made the following statement: "At this the most important conference in the history of the world in which the British Empire is intensely interested, the Empire must be represented, not only by the British Government but by the overseas dominions, and especially by Canada, whose contribution of blood and treasure entitles her to a prominent seat at the peace table. It is not only proper but imperative that Canada be represented to the end by her Prime Minister. He should stay just as long as anything remains to be done."—Canadian Official Record.

The Story of Rubber.

To Europeans rubber had been known as a curiosity for 200 years before any serious scientific interest was taken in it or effort made to utilize it in an industrial way. The French were pioneers in this virgin field. In the first half of the eighteenth century, the French naturalist, La Condamine, discovered the native gum in the Cordilleras of the Andes. The natives called it "caucho". From this came the French word for rubber—caoutchouc, which is practically the universal name for the material outside English speaking countries. French scientists became interested, and soon the study of rubber was also taken up in England and the United States.

Joseph Priestly, the English chemist, discovered that rubber would erase pencil marks, and so came its English name, derived from this property. Many names are interwoven with the growing story of rubber's romance: that of Macintosh, who perfected a method of waterproofing fabric in 1825; Charles Goodyear, Nathaniel Hayward and Thomas Hancock, who were successful in discovering the secret of vulcanizing. The use of rubber tires was first suggested by Hancock in a book published in 1856, but the pneumatic tire was not patented by Dunlop until 1888. So, from these comparatively recent discoveries have multiplied the various uses which rubber has come to fill.

Up to 1873 the world's supply of rubber came from the "Wild." In that year, however, seeds from the native Brazilian trees were successfully planted in experimental gardens at Kew, England. By 1914 plantation rubber had come to take a leading place in the world's output, and in the present year it is estimated that eighty-three per cent. of the entire production will be from such sources. Ceylon, the Federated Malay States, the Dutch East Indies, Borneo and the Pacific Islands are the center of the plantation rubber industry, although there are some plantations engaged in growing the commodity in India.

The word "rubber" has a perfectly definite, technical meaning, although it is frequently used very loosely. Its essential constituent is caoutchouc, a soft, solid, elastic substance, a pure hydro-carbon, existing in liquid globules in the juice of certain trees, shrubs, or vines. The uses of rubber have been vastly increased by the demands of war. Tires for motor trucks, aeroplanes, motorcycles and other vehicles have called for an enormous supply. Rubberised fabric for balloons has become of great importance. Large quantities of rubberized goods are required for all air men.

In order to make life endurable in the trenches, rubber clothing is demanded for the soldiers, including such articles as slickers, ponchos, rubber hip boots and rubber stockings. Because of the nature of the processes involved, rubber garments are essential for some workers in munition factories. Effective gas masks are not possible without rubber, while the requirements for surgical and medical uses have greatly increased. It may be said, in short, that the war has vastly accelerated all peace-time demands for rubber, a fact that has proved a material stimulus to improvement of methods of manufacture as well as quantitative production.

If the price were low enough we should make our desks of rubber, shove our houses with rubber, pave our streets with rubber. As it is, there are a great many new uses for rubber that are possible of realization under the present price level. In the last few years the per capita consumption of rubber in this country has increased amazingly. Every day sees rubber consumed more as a necessity and less as a luxury. When the world once again settles down to the even tenor of its ways there is every reason to expect a steady increase in the use of rubber in Europe and elsewhere commensurate with the increase in the United States. Our manufacturers will find in the prospect incentive to close study and attention.—Statistical Record, N. Y. National Bank of Commerce.

Engineer Electrocutted.

Nov Glasgow, Dec. 31.—A most unfortunate accident occurred at the power house of the Pictou County Electric Co., Ltd., shortly after seven o'clock this morning when Henry McKay, chief engineer, was electrocuted. A year ago a "regulator" was installed at the power house to adjust the voltage. During the night the voltage went down and the matter was reported to the chief engineer by telephone to his home in New Glasgow. Mr. McKay went to the power on the first car this morning and decided to cut out the regulator temporarily as he thought the trouble originated in it. He proceeded to do so, but in order to inconvenience the public as little as possible, undertook to do the work without shutting off the current. In some way he slipped up and he got the full current of 2300 volt. Death was instantaneous.

The deceased had been in charge of the power house for nearly three years, and was regarded as a capable and careful man. Prior to entering the employment of the Pictou Electric Co. he had been employed at marine engineering. He was a native of New Glasgow; he is survived by his wife and three children, two daughters and a son. He was 46 years of age. Mrs. Arnold McNeil is a sister of the deceased.

That Animal, the Body.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Well, I suppose I must take my body out and exercise it," said a friend of mine who is boarding for the winter and hence does not get even the exercise that a housework involves. "It's just like having a horse on my hands to exercise."

A suggestive and rather novel point of view, don't you think? Theoretically, we all know that we owe our bodies a definite amount of exercise every day. Yet how many of us do actually feel the same definite responsibility toward our own bodies that we would toward an animal left in our care.

Just Like Having a Horse To Exercise
Instead of realizing that we have a horse to exercise, as it were, we seem to feel as if we had a machine to use when it suits our pleasure and convenience and to stick in a garage when we don't happen to want to move it about.

Unfortunately bodies are not machines and are animals, and they suffer from this treatment just as a horse would if he were stuck in a stable, fed well three times a day and given no exercise but a few strolls about the stable.

How would you like to take out a horse that had been treated that way for a week or two? You would be afraid to drive him, wouldn't you? You would expect him to be nervous and hard to handle?

Naturally The Body Becomes Hard To Manage.
Why, then, be surprised, when you keep the human animal under similar conditions, that he too becomes nervous and irritable and hard to manage?

The effect of the mental on the physical is a familiar theme. We have all had the power of mind over matter impressed upon us. We should not forget also the influence of matter upon mind.

The body is to a certain extent at the mercy of the mind. It can do what it wishes with it—overfeed it, underfeed it, underexercise it and overexercise it. But in our present state of development, the mind has not learned to exist independently of the body, and therefore, any mistreatment which the mind inflicts upon the body, the body is pretty sure to revenge upon the mind sooner or later.

An unfortunate feature of these revenges is that they are often so slow in coming and represent such long accumulation of mistreatment.

Don't Let This Happen To You; Stop Now While You Can.
I heard the other day of a woman who had been overdoing for years in spite of the warnings of her friends.

The day of reckoning finally came and she has been paying the piper for two years now and is just beginning to get back. "I knew," she said to one of those friends whose warning had not been heeded, "that I was getting tired, but I thought all I had to do was to get rested. I didn't know I had to go through purgatory."

Milady's Boudoir
THE PERFECT ARM.
The arm, to be beautiful, should have round flowing lines with no sharpness at the elbows, and should taper gently to a small wrist. Thin arms are always ugly, and require graceful movements to make one forget their thinness.

While white arms are considered beautiful, dark complexioned arms may be more beautiful if better shaped, form being the chief attraction.

As much study should be given to the posing of the arms as is given to the carriage of the body or the expression of the face. The habit of holding the elbows away from the sides in a sharp angle while walking or standing, is very ungraceful.

Another bad habit, which many of our women have fallen into is that of crossing the arms over the chest when sitting. Just why this posture is assumed it is hard to say, unless it is contracted because the owner, being aware of her awkwardness, tries to disguise this and does not know what else to do with her arms.

At any rate, the habit certainly not only detracts from feminine grace, causes ill shaped and discolored arms, but also is responsible for drooping of the shoulders and hollow chests. There was a time, years ago when such shoulders were admired, but not to-day.

Ideals change with each generation. In this particular one, the women with the strong, athletic shoulders, is considered the ideal type. Are you one of these?

FATHER.
It's over twenty years and more since father went away. And that great spirit that we loved gave up its house of clay.

And some who knew him then perhaps to-day cannot recall the way he looked or spoke or smiled, or was he short or tall; But I, who used to hold his hand and climb upon his knee, Am certain there are times when he comes back to counsel me.

Time was I used to think of him as very far from here, But now I've really come to feel that he's always near. I don't know how to tell it, but when I have sat alone, In some way he has come to me and made his presence known; Not in the old familiar way when he would take my hand, But in a fancy of a thought which I could understand.

When at life's cross roads I have stood and wondered which to take, And good or ill depended on the choice which I should make, It seems to me that father then has come to let me know The way—if he were still on earth—he'd wish his boy to go. Perhaps it's only memory but still I seem to feel That father's presence every day is very close and real.

Things to Remember.

During the war the corporation of Glasgow employed women in its parks, on its tramways, in its electrical departments and its bacteriological laboratory.

The Roll of Honor of British women who have given up their lives for Britain might endure now numbers 650 and the list is by no means complete. This roll regards service and not rank and shows that to England, this "choir invisible" is indeed immortal.

In the Women's War Museum now on exhibition in the Whitechapel Art Gallery, London, there is a stall devoted to the Queen's War Work for Women Fund. Among the many exhibits is a portrait of Queen Mary which is being given to every woman in India who has had a relative killed in the war.

One of the trades calling for the greatest skill is the making of compasses. This work had never been undertaken by women until dilution of labor became necessary. Of the infinite number of delicate parts demanding absolute accuracy, women have succeeded in making all but two or three and even these will shortly be to their credit.

In November, 1914, the Mayor and Council of the City of Lyons worked out a system of re-education for French disabled soldiers and the work was begun the following month at L'ecole Joffre. That work spread even at that early date all over France and has been adopted by England with variations suited to the climate and the nationality of British maimed.

It is the intention of the British Government to make the Imperial War Museum a record as complete as is humanly possible of the way in which England did her part in winning this war. Every British subject should inform himself thoroughly as to what this exhibit includes. Where each works at high pressure to contribute the part expected from him he is not prepared to either know or appreciate what other equally devoted patriots have given as their share towards victory. This exhibit will do much to dispel that lack and create genuine appreciation of the fact that all work was equally valuable.

Mrs. Bursleigh Leach, Chief Controller of Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps (Waac's) began doing "her bit" as one of the first recruits of that splendid mother of patriotic British women's organizations the "Woman's Legion." That was in September, 1915, and from that day Mrs. Leach has never rested. When the armistice was signed Mrs. Leach had under her 40,000 women and girls of whom nearly 7,000 were in France. She was about to ask for 30,000 more. Although one age limit was eighteen years, Mrs. Leach refused to place the other limit saying she had found that some women at sixty were infinitely more useful than others at forty. In spite of her real importance Mrs. Leach is one of the most unassuming women imaginable, therefore delightful. She has none of the pushing, masculine traits of the woman who commands badly. Her smile is ready and her laugh infectious and genial. Knowing Germany thoroughly she prophesied the war long before it came. Her husband is Brigadier-General Leach in command of the famous South Wales Borderers.

DEMPSEY.

Now that the long drawn war is done, and peace abides in camps and courts, we turn a moment from the Hun to think and talk of helpful sports. No armies now distort the maps, at the behest of czar or king, but we'll still have our little scraps, our little triumphs in the ring. While captains whooped and chargers reared, and soldiers fired the deadly gun, a new phenomenon appeared, who packs home bacon by the ton. This Dempsey of heroic name, that by another Jack was worn, has quickly gained a healthy fame, and made a lot of cheeses mourn. Fred Fulton, who was wont to wist that he would wear the champion's crown, ran up against this Dempsey's fist, then on the mourner's bench sat down. One moment he was full of hops, the next in anguish dire he sat and leaned against a sagging rope, and asked the crowd where he was at. Carl Morris cried, "Alas for Fred, that one so beautiful should fall! I'll punch this Dempsey party's head and stop his fooling once for all." But Dempsey smote that mass of beef, and found the vital place he sought, and Carl sat down to nurse his grief, and readjust his dome of thought. I like this man of swats and biffs, this Dempsey, vigorous and strong; he's weeding out the noisy stuffs and showing them they don't belong.

England Ruled by 'Foreigners.'
(From the Literary Digest.)
A correspondent in the London New Witness recently pointed out that "England is suffering from foreign domination." He wrote:—"We are governed by the Welsh, prayed at by the Scots, and prayed upon by the Irish." From a note in The London Evening Standard the genuine native-born Englishman does not seem to have much to say nowadays. It writes:

"The Versailles Conference is considering decisions which may affect the fate of Great Britain for generations."

"A correspondent points out that on this conference our country is represented by:

"One Welshman (Mr. Lloyd George)
One Scottish Canadian (Mr. Bonar Law)
"One Jew (Lord Reading).
"Four Scotsmen (Mr. Balfour, Sir Eric Geddes, Marshal Haig and Admiral Wemyss.)
"One Englishman (Lord Milner)."

"In this note," he asks, "a humiliating position for the country south of the Tweed—the so-called 'pre dominant partner'?" England proper is said to contribute seventy to eighty per cent of the men in the British army, ninety per cent in the British navy, and about ninety per cent of the British war expenditure. Yet she has only one Englishman to make her voice heard at this crisis in her history."

Oddly enough—though, The Evening Standard omits to mention it—the one Englishman cited, Lord Milner, was actually born in Germany, and his father before him, since his grandfather, a physician, settled there, without losing touch with England or acquiring German citizenship.

All sauces should be stirred continually while on the fire and seasoned carefully.

UNITY AND HARMONY.
LONDON, Jan. 8. Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his report on operations from the 1st of April until the end of hostilities, was made public here last night, as a high tribute to Marshal Foch, commander-in-Chief of the Allied armies. In concluding his report the Field Marshal wrote: "At the moment of the final triumph of the Allied arms, we are assured, and we all others of the Allied and associated armies look back on the years that have passed with satisfaction undimmed by any hint of discord or conflict of interests and ideals. Few alliances of the past can boast of such a record. We can show a purpose more tenaciously and faithfully pursued or so fully and gloriously realized. If the complete unity and harmony of our action is to be ascribed to the justice of our cause, it is due to the absolute loyalty with which that cause has been pursued by all those entrusted with the control of the different armies which fought side by side with us." The report takes up in detail the fighting on various parts of the British front, which the Field Marshal says, was carried on as a part of the grand plan of the campaign laid down by the Allied high command. At the close of the operations, the report declares, in the decisive contests in the period covered by the report the strongest and most vital parts of the enemy's front were attacked, his lateral communications were cut and his best divisions were fought to a standstill. On the different battlefronts the British took 187,000 prisoners, and 2,350 guns, bringing the total number of prisoners captured during the year to over 2,01,000. These results were achieved by fifty-nine fighting British divisions which in the course of the three months' battle engaged and defeated 99 separate German divisions. When the armistice was signed by the enemy his defensive powers had already been definitely destroyed. Continuation of hostilities would have meant only disaster to the German armies and an armed invasion of Germany.

FIGHTING IN BERLIN.
LONDON, Jan. 8. The first encounters between the Berlin Government and the Spartacan forces occurred on Sunday in front of the Kaiserhof hotel when one person was killed and eight others wounded. According to an eyewitness some of the troops turned against the government and others refused to obey the government's orders to recapture the quarters of the Wolf Bureau, the semi-official news agency. On the other hand a marine division is stated to be supporting the government. The Spartacans refused all offers of the government to negotiate and were attacking the foreign office, the Chancellor's palace and others of the ministries on Monday when eighteen persons are reported to have been killed.

CONFLICTING NEWS.
BASLE, Switzerland, Jan. 7. The German semi-official Wolf Bureau which was removed to Frankfurt when its Berlin office was seized by the Spartacans, sent out a message to-day declaring that the Berlin Soldiers' and Workers' Council and the garrison of the city had placed themselves on the side of the government. The Frankfurt, General Anzeiger on the other hand, declares that the Spartacans continued to-day to occupy some of the public buildings. They easily gained control of the railways, the newspaper adds, and the employees ceased to run the trains.

PREPARED FOR ASSAULT.
BERLIN, Jan. 7. At this hour Spartacan forces are being massed at several places where weapons and armored cars have been concentrated. In Wilhelmstrasse the Government forces are waiting an attack. Government troops have been posted on top of the Brandenburg gate and adjoining buildings with machine guns. The troops in the Government buildings have been equipped with flame throwers.

DISCONTENT SPREADS TO NAVY.
LONDON, Jan. 8. Discontent has made its appearance in the grand fleet over the slowness of demobilization, especially among the auxiliary, whose duty it has been to sweep up mines. The crews of many of the auxiliaries were recruited from the fishermen and the men wish to share in the huge profits now being made by the fishermen. They had been offered two pounds extra weekly to continue at work, but are agitating for their discharge. Further demonstrations by the soldiers took place to-day in London and other centres.

BIG STRIKE CALLED.
NEW YORK, Jan. 8. A strike which it is claimed will virtually tie up all traffic in New York Harbor unless the Federal Government manna tugs and ferries with soldiers and sailors was called to-night by the Marine Workers' Affiliation for six o'clock to-morrow morning. To prepare for an emergency police headquarters immediately issued orders to all stations directing that reserves be held in readiness for trouble which it was said might develop. The strike vote was taken after the War Labor Board announced its inability to effect a settlement with the Boat Owners' Association and placed all blame on the shoulders of the employers.

THE BATTLE OF MONCHY.
LONDON, Jan. 8. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Describing the battle of the Scarpe and the retaking of Monchy le Preux last August, Field Marshal Haig's despatch says: "At three o'clock on the morning of August 8, the Canadian Corps, Lieut. General Currie commanding, on the right of General Horne's First Army, attacked the German positions astride the Scarpe River, with the Second and Third Canadian Divisions, commanded by Major Generals Bursill and Lipscomb, and the Fifty-First Division. This attack on about a five and a half mile front, closely supported by the Third Army's left, was completely successful. By noon we had taken Wancourt and Guemappe and had stormed the hill and village of Monchy le Preux. The latter position was of great natural strength and well organized for defence, and commanded observations of much importance."

WILSON WILL SIT AS PREMIER.
PARIS, Jan. 8. The Temps says it is able to state that President Wilson has officially informed Premier Clemenceau that he does not desire to be considered at the Peace Conference as the head of a state, but only as the Prime Minister of his state. The Temps says that the United States constitution makes the President not only the head of the state but the head of government, and that President Wilson will claim only the right to the prerogative of the last named position at the Peace Conference. The newspaper adds that when making known his desire to Premier Clemenceau he also informed the Premier concerning the detailed work of the various American delegates to the Conference would have assigned to them.

ANOTHER CZAR YARN.
LONDON, Jan. 8. According to a story sent by a special correspondent of the Morning Post at Archangel, which it is necessary to treat with reserve, the former Emperor of Russia is still alive. The correspondent telegraphs: "A friend of mine, Prince M., who has just arrived here from Petrograd, informed me that he had a long talk with Grand Duke Cyril on November 18. The Grand Duke told him that he had just received a letter from Grand Duchess Tatiana, daughter of the Emperor, who wrote that the Emperor and her daughter were still alive and that the Emperor had not been shot. The Bolshevik officer who was ordered to carry out the sentence of death told the Emperor that it was a matter of indifference to him who was shot. He had orders to produce a corpse. Bullets in the head of a victim would make identification impossible. Count T., who was present at the conversation, offered to sacrifice himself, saying it was his duty to lay down his life for his Sovereign. The Emperor protested vehemently, but was overruled by Count T., and the officer. The Emperor escaped. But no one knows where he is at present. Dr. Botkin has also written to his sister, to the effect that the greatest crime of the 20th century has miscarried."

ROOSEVELT BURIED.
OYSTER BAY, Jan. 8. The body of Theodore Roosevelt was laid at rest to-day. It was committed to earth at 1.43 p.m. in a family cemetery plot overlooking Long Island Sound.

"PLAYING THE GAME."
WARSAW, Monday, Jan. 6. Ignace Jan. Paderewski, who is in Poland as a representative of American Poles, is expected to return to Warsaw to-day from Cracow, and to take part in the formation of a new ministry, the Socialist government of General Pilsudski having been weakened somewhat as the result of the attempted coup d'etat Sunday by the Conservatives and Liberals. Present plans are for a new ministry in which there will be only three Socialists. The ministry will have a national character with four members from Posen, four from Galicia, and eight from Russian Poland. Reports are that neither the friends of General Pilsudski nor the National Polish Committee in Paris will be permitted to predominate in the Cabinet. In view of the fact that Mr. Paderewski had declared himself to-day to be a friend of the workmen and the peasants, it is declared by his friends that he will be able to consolidate all parties in Poland and secure for the new ministry recognition by the Allies, as well as to present a united front against the Bolsheviks.

WILL HOLD GERMANY RESPONSIBLE.
PARIS, Jan. 8. At the last meeting of the armistice commission Marshal Foch called attention to the actions of the Germans who he said while evacuating Poland and the Baltic provinces left their arms with the Bolsheviks, thus violating the conditions of the armistice. Marshal Foch added that Germany would be held accountable for the damages done by these members of the Bolshevik factions.

POLES GAIN BENTSCHEEN.
AMSTERDAM, Jan. 8. Polish troops have gained control of most of the town of Bentschen, an important railway junction, according to the General Anzeiger of Frankfurt. The Germans retired to the railroad station where they were bombarded by the Poles, who attempted to capture the station but were repulsed.

GERMANY PAYING UP.
CORLENZ, Jan. 6. Ten million marks arrived here from Berlin to-day by a special train, this sum being the first payment by the German Government of the twenty-five million marks due in January for the expenses of the American army of occupation. The arrival of to-day's shipment makes a total of 64,000,000 marks which have been turned over to the Americans authorities for current expenses of the occupation forces.

PREPARING THE WAY.
PARIS, Jan. 8. Many important questions concerning the arrangements of the programme for the Peace Conference, which have been in progress of solution, probably will soon be adjusted as a result of President Wilson's return to Paris. It is evident from the expressions of officials that the settlement of various matters will progress more rapidly from now on. It is possible that the first meetings between President Wilson and his aides and the Entente Premiers may occur at the end of this week. These conferences will be informal and will be carried forward in a spirit of accommodation, the discussions which have taken place during Mr. Wilson's absence between individuals of the various delegations, and also between various groups. The meetings are expected to develop great importance later, but at present it may be said that results of value have been reached and that the ground has been cleared for the beginning of the actual negotiations.

VOTING DRY.
SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 8. By a vote of thirty to fifteen the Illinois Senate to-night ratified the Federal Prohibition amendment. The house will act on the resolution to-morrow.

BREWERS BUSY.
CHICAGO, Jan. 8. Distillers of the country having determined at a meeting yesterday to make a final supreme effort through the courts to keep the United States from going bone dry next summer, today appointed an executive committee to take charge of the campaign. Whether the programme of the distillers will be broadened to other than court procedure it is said has not yet been determined.

How About Your Pressure?

Experts estimate that 30 per cent more tyres are worn out every year than would be the case if all tyres were kept inflated to the proper pressure. So if you are not sure that your tyres are kept at the right inflation for the load you carry, perhaps you are getting 30 per cent less tyre mileage than you ought to get. There is one way to find out. See the Goodyear Dealer. He will help you determine the exact pressure which you ought to keep in both front and rear tyres for best service. He will show you how the Goodyear engineers have worked out the proper inflation figures for all tyre sizes and all sorts of loads. Then he will give you a copy of Goodyear tables so that you will know how to change your pressure if you change your load. It would be advisable to consult the Goodyear Dealer at once so as to know definitely the proper inflation for your tyres, instead of being obliged to imagine what it should be.

Supreme Court Opened.

Address to Grand Jury by His Lordship the Chief Justice.

The winter term of the Supreme Court opened yesterday, His Lordship the Chief Justice, Sir William Horwood and Justices Johnson and Kent were on the bench. The Grand Jury as follows were in attendance—D. J. Johnstone, foreman; James Pidgeon, John Clouston, John Marshall, Charles W. Udle, Moses Wellman, M. J. Dyer, Sidney Bursell, Charles Johnstone, Michael Codner, Edward Neary, Archibald Wheeler, John Savage, Charles Butt, William Luther, Donald McIntosh, John T. Kelly, William F. Kenny, J. P. Kiely, Harold Rowe.

The cases for consideration were Rex vs. Julian Chaisson for bigamy, Rex vs. William H. Trask for manslaughter; Rex vs. William Snow for manslaughter. When the Grand Jury had assembled His Lordship the Chief Justice addressed them as follows:—
Mr. Foreman and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:
You have been called together today to consider three Bills of indictment. The first bill charges William H. Trask, that on the 23rd day of September, 1918, at St. John's, Newfoundland, he did unlawfully kill Henry Nell. The offence charged here is what is known in law as manslaughter. Manslaughter, as you know, is a homicide clearly distinguishable from murder. It is of the essence of this crime that there is no intention whatever on the part of the person accused to take away life. It is true that there are cases of manslaughter that very nearly approach murder, but then there is another class of manslaughter known in law as involuntary manslaughter, which very nearly approaches accident. It is where a man is doing what is perfectly right and legal, but does it in a negligent way, and the result of his negligence is that the death of another ensues. That is this case, or that may be this case when it is eventually tried by the Jury called upon to consider the guilt or innocence of the accused. You are not called upon to do that. Your position as Grand Jurors is simply to consider whether the charge is or is not unfounded, and if you are convinced that it is not unfounded then it is your duty to pass it on to another Jury for trial. Now, gentlemen, I do not think when you have heard the evidence that you will consider that this charge is frivolous and baseless. The circumstances as they will be related to you by the witnesses are these: On the evening of the 23rd September, just after six o'clock, this motor car in which the accused was, and was driving, came up Water Street and went into Adelaide Street. The witnesses are quite clear that before leaving Water Street and going into Adelaide Street the whistle or horn was sounded. The car proceeded up Adelaide Street on the west side. Now Adelaide Street at that time, as you know, is a much frequented thoroughfare; it is the Junction of the street car system, and besides that, it is one of the main arteries of the city by which persons working on Water Street go to their homes and the witnesses speak as to a number of persons being on this street at that time. There is nothing, of course, unlawful on the part of a motorist going into a street so frequented, but if he goes there the law casts upon him the duty of exercising the greatest care towards pedestrians. What would be a perfectly proper place for a car ordinarily would not be a proper place in circumstances such as I am referring to. Speed is a relative term. Now I wish to caution you, gentlemen, against anything you may have heard or read about the speed here. The newspapers here were, I think, all at one in declaring that this car was going at a very slow rate of speed. I have read the depositions most carefully and I see nothing in them whatever to warrant that statement. You will not misunderstand me, there was no charge made by anybody that the car was going at a furious pace but there is nobody who speaks of it going very slowly except one witness and that was a person in the car, and he says that he "guesses the car may be going about eight miles an hour." One of the other witnesses says that the car was going at a regular pace. Now I don't know that the question of speed determines or will determine the matter. It is one of the elements that will be considered of course as a determining factor, but it is not in itself decisive, because the law requires that a carriage or a car taken in such a place must be under such complete control that it must not run over any pedestrian. That is the only rule of safety. That is the duty which the law requires of all drivers. It is not sufficient for a man to say that my carriage or my car was going slowly but it has to be shown that it was under such complete control that it could be brought up before it ran over any person in front of it; that the driver exercised proper control over the management of the car and was not culpably negligent. It may be that a person indicted may be able to show that there was no culpable neglect on his part, that nothing that he could have done could have avoided the occurrence. But where human life is taken, those who take it are required to make such explanation. Now, gentlemen, as I have said before, it is no part of your duty to enter upon a trial of the case that is before you. You have only to satisfy yourselves that it is not a "frivolous" charge, but that it has that element of seriousness which calls in the public interest for further investigation, an investigation not made in camera, not made in a Grand Jury room, but an investigation made in the eyes of the public where all the evidence is heard and where a Jury, whose duty it is to determine the matter, can decide whether the person accused has any guilt or whether he is entirely innocent. The Crown has no interest in unduly pressing the prosecution. All it asks is that justice be done and no more. It asks that you do anything but perfect justice to a person who in the circumstances may find himself awkwardly placed and then if he answers fully and clearly, explains his conduct he goes out of the investigation with more respect and more honor than he would have done if the charge had never been properly investigated or had been stifled in its early stages. I don't know, gentlemen, that I need further address you on this point. There is, I believe, a plan put in showing the place where the accident occurred. The deceased man, Nell, in company with others, was returning from Water Street. He was going, according to one witness, in a westerly direction crossing the street, and here let me say that the pedestrian has the same right on the street, exactly the same right to the street as any other person who may be there in a carriage or a motor. A pedestrian is not confined to the sidewalk. His rights on the street are exactly equal to those of any citizen in a vehicle. Here is an elderly man returning from his work and going to his tea; perfectly sober, sees the car, looks out for it, tries to get out of its way, moves to the sidewalk that he was going towards, because he was on the western side of the street at the time. He was west of the car line, he was with others. The man next to him got to the sidewalk. He was going to the sidewalk when the car struck him. Then another man on the other side of him moved to the right and so avoided the car, but of course a citizen should not be expected to scramble for his life to avoid a car. It is the duty of anybody coming behind you to look out for you. All that the pedestrian is required to do is to look either side in front, but anybody, even the street car system with its right-of-way has to look out for what is in front of it. The motor owner, the carriage-owner has no right-of-way. In no respect are their rights greater than that of the pedestrian. Nobody has rights to take risks with human

STRENGTH AND PURITY

—the unusual combination that is the basis of Zam-Buk's world-wide reputation.
Strength, which enables Zam-Buk to overcome skin troubles that have defied all other treatments, and Purity to such a degree that Zam-Buk is suitable for even the most delicate skin. Mrs. Fothergill of Bouman River, Man., says: "When only two days old my baby developed a bad heat rash. Knowing the purity of Zam-Buk, we rubbed the child all over with it, and it entirely cured the rash."
The reason for Zam-Buk's unusual strength is because Zam-Buk is all medicine—being composed exclusively of herbal extracts and vegetable oils. The medicinal properties it contains are concentrated, blended and refined to such an extent that they represent the maximum healing, soothing and antiseptic power.
Zam-Buk's purity is due to the fact that it contains absolutely no animal fat. Because of this it cannot become rancid, but retains its strength and purity to the very last. Zam-Buk is kept on the medicine shelf of all discriminating people, because they know there is nothing to equal it for all skin troubles and injuries.

life. While you will be very careful to consider the rights of the accused, you must not disregard the public duty that is cast upon you, and its seriousness in this community need not be commented upon by me. It is too obvious. Well, gentlemen, the plans, I think, will show you that within fifty-five feet from Water Street this occurrence took place. The front wheel of the car went over the body of Nell; the second wheel came on the body and rested there. Then when the man was removed from under the wheel he was taken in by the owner of the car, Mr. Trask, and driven by him to a doctor, and then on to the hospital, but before they reached the hospital he was dead.

I have also to ask you to consider a Bill of indictment which the Crown prefers against William Snow charging him with having, on the tenth day of October, 1918, in St. John's, unlawfully killed John Jeans. Mr. Jeans was a prominent and much respected citizen who was proceeding to his home on that night. James Diamond will be called as a witness on behalf of the prosecution to prove that he was in the car of the accused, sitting in the front seat on the left of the accused who was driving the car, and that as they drove along Gower Street, going east, the car struck Mr. Jeans. The witness deposes that he caught sight of an umbrella before the car struck Jeans. When it struck him he fell, but the witness is unable to say whether the car went over his body. This was near Feaver's Lane. The car stopped at Victoria Street. This witness got out of the car and ran back a little way and then returned to the car, telling the accused, who was also out of the car, that the man was killed. At the same time another witness James Aylward, came forward, and deposed that he had been at 169 Gower Street and his attention had been aroused by a peculiar noise that he heard on the street like the falling of a hood of a carriage or motor car. He looked out the window and saw an umbrella spread out rolling towards the drain. When he went out he discovered the body lying face downwards, head pointing west. The witness, with the assistance of Private Bradbury, whom he called to his aid, moved the body to the sidewalk and had the matter reported to the police. Doctor Ferguson who examined the body found evidence of injuries to the base of the skull, hemorrhage from mouth and ears, and fractured jaw; also bruises over right cheek bone. He was of opinion that death was instantaneous. You need only consider the conduct of the accused in so far as it affects the cause of the death and in each of these cases the question for your consideration is identical, namely, Does the evidence disclose a prima facie case of culpable carelessness on the part of the driver of the motor. The directions I have given you are applicable alike to each case, and I wish to inform you that my learned brothers completely agree with me in all that I have said to you. You will be careful to remember that these cases are not now being tried by you and that all you have to consider is whether the charges are baseless or whether they are such as should be passed on by you for trial to another Jury, whose duty will be to give a verdict, according as they find the accused from the evidence submitted to them to be guilty or innocent. It is not necessary for you to be unanimous in your finding; it is sufficient if twelve of your number concur in a Bill.

The Crown also proposes to lay before you a Bill of indictment charging one Julian Chaisson with the crime of bigamy. Witnesses will be called before you to show that the accused was married on the 12th day of November, 1912, at Cape St. George to one Julia, Young—his wife still lives; and on the 7th of September, 1918, he misrepresented that he was a widower, purported to marry one Marion Kingdon, of Indian Island, by having the Marriage Service again performed by a clergyman. I have to ask you to hear the witnesses the Crown will call in support of these Bills of indictment and to give consideration to the cases in the order in which the Crown Officer may present them.
The Grand Jury then retired and after a brief interval returned to Court with a "true bill" against Chaisson. The prisoner was later arraigned and pleaded guilty. He will come up for sentence at an early date.
The consideration of the Snow and Trask cases occupied the attention of the Grand Jury all the afternoon. At 5.30 a deputation from the Jury came into Court asking for directions. Justice Johnson, in the absence of the Chief Justice furnished the information required, and the Jurymen returned to their room. A few minutes before six the Jury announced to the Court that they had found true bills against Trask and Snow. The date of the trials will be fixed later. In the meantime the accused are admitted to bail.

the cause of many angry scenes between the Kaiser and himself.
Ballin made no distinction. He treated all German Society women more or less traitors. And perhaps he was not far wrong.

About these he would tell her absolutely nothing.
The Countess was a constant visitor to Zepellin's lovely villa on the shores of Lake Constance. She roamed
the placé as will.
Having reliable information that the lady was temporarily financially un-burdened, I communicated with the Government, and, as a result, offered her a huge sum for the information at which I have hinted. The Countess agreed to obtain it, and at her request I subsequently accompanied her to the old Count's famous home.
All I required was access to a certain document from which I wanted to make extracts which would be me about a quarter of an hour. This document was in Zepellin's private safe, and in some mysterious way I managed to obtain it. The Countess could not resist the temptation to tell me the whole story. She reluctantly told me that she had been seduced by the Kaiser's agent, and that she had been the cause of the Kaiser's fall.

League Against England.

The League of Small and Subject Nationalities is at it again. Mr. P. W.
Wilson, New York correspondent of The London Daily News, was invited to address this previously well known organization at a meeting here recently. Neither in his personality nor in his professional connection would he be suspected of imperialistic tendencies; but when he began his address with the remark
"I am an Englishman," he was greeted, he says, with a storm of protest.
Having already heard a plea for lenient treatment of Germany, together with attacks on England by an Indian exile and an Irish Nationalist, having understood that the purpose of the conference was to send a cablegram asking President Wilson to lay the "cases" of Ireland, Egypt and India before the Peace Conference, he ventured to express a hope for cordial relations between the British Commonwealth and the United States.
This suggestion provoked hisses.
A year ago this body issued a call for a convention in which representatives of twenty-five nations were to be included. Along with the then subject nationalities, and others, such as the Scandinavian countries, Holland, and Greece, which were only small, not subject, there were included not only Ireland, Egypt, India, and the Transvaal, but Scotland, a country which is not ordinarily thought of as groaning under any alien yoke. Before that convention opened the representatives of Alsace-Lorraine, the Czechoslovakia, the Jugoslavia, the Arabs, the Armenians,
the Syrian, and the Greeks withdrew from the programme, charging that they had been brought in merely to furnish a pretense of respectability for anti-English propaganda. Of course this was denied, as was the further assertion of these representatives of nations oppressed by an enemy that they had been told to speak softly on German atrocities and tyranny. But when the convention did meet, praise of the British Army

as the liberator of the Arabs and Palestine was heard in silence, while a harangue on English "tyranny" in Scotland was cheered vigorously.
As Mr. P. W. Wilson points out, it is not even a league against the Allies; that would stir up too much opposition. There is much talk of India, Egypt, Ireland; no talk of Algeria, Tunis, Libya, the Philippines,
the Dutch East Indies, or the colonies or dependencies of any other country but England. It is a league against England, and we ought to have learned by this time what interests are served by activities of this sort. That the league has only an incidental interest in the subject peoples themselves may be surmised from the fact that, apparently only representatives of the most anti-British faction in British dependencies were asked to speak; and from the fact that lately the Jews of Palestine and the Arabs of the Hedjaz

have deliberately and voluntarily tried to put themselves under the protection of the British Empire,
which they seem to regard more favorably than does this group of Adulterate elites.—New York Times.
