CENSUS ENUMERATORS

George Elliott of Parkhill, census commissioner for West Middlesex, has made appointment of enumerators for the census to be taken commencing June 1st, and had a meeting of about thirty of them in Strathroy on Monday at a three-hour school of instruction. E. T. Huston is enumerator for Glencoe; D. C. McKenzie, Duncan R. McKee, McMaster and John McDonald, for Ekfrid; R. W. McKellar, Harry Harvey and W. Walker, for Mosca; Albert Holman, for Newbury; Alex. McIntyre, for Wardsville. It is requested that everybody be prepared to answer the various questions of the enumerators when they call, as the time allowed for the work will not permit of any delay. It would be well for the head of every household to instruct the members of the family so that in the event of his not being at home when the enumerator calls the information can readily be obtained. The nationality of self and parents is one of the questions which you should be prepared to answer.

YOUNG BANDIT CAUGHT

After living the life of a wild man for two weeks in the woods and subsisting on berries and anything he could find to eat, Orville Shaw, the 16-year-old bandit, for whom continuous search has been kept up by heavily-armed posse, was captured late Saturday afternoon. He was caught one mile west of Bothwell, in the woods, by 16-year-old Orrin Patterson, armed with a revolver. The youth chased his man for four miles and kept him covered until other members of the posse came up. Shaw is wanted for a series of daring robberies in Bothwell. His brother, Claude Shaw, aged 14, was captured a week ago, and is on remand.

Pickles of Vancouver, assembled with their mother, Mrs. H. Hollingshead of Glencoe, and spent a happy day, this being the first occasion in years when so many members of the family were together. A feature of the gathering was that four generations were present. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McLachlan, Glencoe; Mr. and Mrs. R. Hollingshead, Toronto; Mrs. E. R. Scott, Saint Ste. Marie; Mrs. Singleton and daughter, London; and Harry Hollingshead.

WM. ROBINSON FREED

Sentence Suspended on Glencoe Man by Judge Macbeth

A London paper says: William Robinson of Glencoe, who was sent for trial on Tuesday by County Magistrate Chittick on a charge of theft, was allowed to go on suspended sentence yesterday by Judge Talbot Macbeth. The accused pleaded guilty to a charge of theft from the Grand Trunk at Glencoe.

The theft took place somewhere about March 1, and on April 20 Robinson appeared before P. J. Morrison and Allan McPherson, at Glencoe, and was sentenced to three months in jail. When the matter came to the attention of the crown, steps were taken at once for a new trial, as it was claimed the Glencoe court had no jurisdiction.

Judge Macbeth, in passing sentence this morning, expressed the belief that suspended sentence would prove better than a short sentence, and he did not feel like imposing a heavier sentence than the Glencoe court. While the latter magistrates did not possess authority to sentence a man for theft, his honor felt they had shown a desire to serve the ends of justice.

The prisoner, who has already spent a month in jail, was represented by J. C. Elliott.

WARDSVILLE COMES BACK

Wardsville baseball team invaded Newbury on May 18th, and for five innings (the game being called at this stage on account of darkness) pounded the leather-covered sphere to all corners of the lot, and when the smoke cleared away after the onslaught the score stood twelve to one in favor of Wardsville. Newbury used three slab artists in hopes of staying off the heavy barrage hurled at them by the Wardsville team but were unsuccessful. Newbury could have marked all the runs they got on a postage stamp, having scored one in the last innings through the sympathy of the shortstop, who dropped a pop fly.

Croegan, pitching for Wardsville, with Mitchell behind the bat, completely baffled the opposing team, having eleven strikeouts to his credit, allowing only two hits. Norman Brown brought the spectators to their feet when he made a spectacular running catch of a fast drive to left field.

The growing popularity of Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, etc., and RAZ-MAH for Asthma, has placed these remedies among the "best sellers." For sale by H. I. Johnston.

Soils and Crops

Address communications to Agronomist, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto.

Cultivation of Growing Crops.

The cultivation of crops requires reasonable care. There is seldom gain from deep cultivation after the crop has been planted. Such cultivation is necessary in preparing the soil for all hoed crops, but if not done then, later cultivation will not make up for the neglect. Summer cultivation should be shallow: sufficient to destroy weeds and produce a fine surface mulch one to two inches deep.

It may be possible and is then advisable to narrow the cultivator and cultivate deeply the space between the rows not occupied by growing roots. It should be remembered, however, that these roots penetrate the soil towards the centre of the row very rapidly and frequently. It is necessary to determine whether the feeding roots are being disturbed or destroyed by cultivation, as so very often happens. The moist soil below the loose surface soil covering is where soil bacteria are most active, and consequently where the most plant food is being liberated, as a result of which roots will be found in this soil area in greater abundance than anywhere else.

Although there seems to be no good reason for using care in selection of seed, preparation of the soil and fertilizing to grow a good plant—only to destroy the roots as soon as they have grown—yet this is what is very often done. Root pruning has so far never been shown to be desirable and, as the root development is a big factor in crop yields, the better chance they have for development without being disturbed the better use they can make of the plant food the soil contains. The object at this time is to point out the desirability of surface tillage by shallow surface cultivation and warn against deep culture in the area occupied by the growing plant.

Another reason why roots should not be disturbed more than possible is because injured roots may not be able to take up the full moisture required and wilting may result, bringing about premature maturity; particularly is this the case if the weather is hot and accompanied by drying winds.

A depth guide should be used on the cultivator to avoid too deep cultivation and as the plants grow toward the centre between the rows the cultivator should be narrowed. The advent of the horse hoe or hiller has marked the greatest advance in economic potato culture of any implement on the farm. This implement has made it possible to distribute around the potato hill a fine earth mulch sufficient to kill the weeds, if done when the weeds are young, and not in any way disturb the growing roots in the hill. The tooth cultivator should follow the horse hoe, setting it as close as possible, to loosen the hard centre between the rows in order to protect the land from drying out, form a loose soil to quickly absorb rains that may fall and give fine soil for subsequent hilling.

In potato culture the point above mentioned indicates the necessity for reasonable distance between the rows in order to grow this crop with the least amount of hand hoeing for, if the rows are narrow, there is not the space from which to draw the soil for hilling purposes and the row cannot be cultivated without doing damage to the feeding roots. There is not space enough for the cultivator to work without doing such damage. Thirty-three inches apart seems to be the distance most suitable. Tests made at Kentville covering a period of five years, including 16 tests, show that rows thirty inches apart yielded an average of 265.6 bushels and those thirty-six inches apart 293.1 bushels.

This Might Help You in Your Painting.

Much of our paint now comes ready-mixed—that is, the pigment is ground in oil and tempered with oil and turpentine and drier. While this paint is supposed to be ready for application, I find that after it has been in stock for some time the heavier ingredients settle to the bottom. A casual stirring is not enough to insure a uniform fluid for application.

The quickest and best method of mixing such paint is to pour off nearly all of the top liquid. Now stir thoroughly, with a medium paddle, the remaining liquid into the heavier pigment, stirring so that the motion is from the bottom of the container. Gradually add small quantities of the liquid poured off, stirring in each addition thoroughly before adding more. The paint will work much better. From time to time the paint should be stirred so that it will not settle again.

For old unpainted wood or for new wood, never apply thick paint. Always use a paint well thinned with raw linseed oil and turpentine in the proportion of about five to one. The wood absorbs much of the oil, and if the paint is thick too much pigment will be left on the surface, leaving a chalky or dry appearance.

For home-mixed paints, pigments ground in oil should be used as far as possible, as they will mix far easier and better than is possible with dry pigments. In mixing such paint, the potatoes being spaced twelve inches apart in the row. The system of cultivation outlined above having been followed.

Care of the Chicks on Range.

The care of the chicks while in the brooder stage is most important, for at that time the largest mortality occurs, yet the subsequent care of the chicks that have lived through the brooder stage has very much to do with the success or failure of the birds later.

Plenty of heat—Do not cut down the heat too soon until the chicks are well feathered, and even after that if the weather is cold and changeable, they will require a certain amount of heat, whether they are raised naturally or artificially.

Naturally raised chicks—The hen will probably leave the chicks to themselves by the time they are feathered, sometimes even before, and it is well to have the chicks housed in a fairly comfortable coop or colony house, so that when the hen leaves them they will be quite comfortable and can get along without her.

Artificially raised chicks—The same care as to heat and comfortable rearing quarters should be given to the chicks that are hatched and reared artificially, and sometimes even more care is necessary. The removal of the heat, when chicks are still cold, often results in the chicks becoming chilled, crowding into a corner and a number of them being smothered. Those that survive are more or less stunted because of the chill.

Give them fresh land—It is never advisable to rear chickens in the same yard or upon the same soil that the old hens have used. Give them new soil that is sweet and free from disease germs. Such a place as a cultivated orchard, potato patch, beet or corn field, or in fact any place where there is a growing crop of such a nature that they cannot destroy it, will be an ideal spot for the chicks.

Plenty of shade—During the warm months shade is very important. This can be provided by the growing crop, orchard, shrubs or even the raising of the house and in some cases, along with this, artificial shade made from boughs or cotton screens is an advantage.

Feeding—The feeding of a flock of chicks during the growing season should not be laborious. Though plenty of feed is required it may be given in such a way that the minimum amount of labor is entailed. For this purpose, hopper feeding is very much to be recommended. A home-made hopper in which mixed grains and mash can be placed and to which the chicks can have access at all times insures plenty of feed for the chicks with very little labor on the part of the attendant. If the chicks are late and it is necessary to hurry them in order to get their growth in plenty of time for the fall, a moist mash fed once a day will help them, and milk along with it at all times is a decided advantage.

In feeding and caring for the growing chicks it should be borne in mind that the chief aim is to have matured pullets so that they will commence to lay before the winter season comes on. The feeder should keep this in mind and feed the birds accordingly. Early chicks may be fed so that they will mature too early for best all-round production, and though this is an exception, still it is well to keep in mind that the pullet that starts laying the latter part of October or the first of November is usually the pullet that gives the best year's production and certainly yields a better revenue than the pullet that does not start laying until after the season of high prices for eggs is over.

start with the pigment, adding the oil slowly as in remaking ready-mixed paints. This method will consume much less time and will give a better paint for the trouble.

White lead ground in oil requires the addition of about seven or eight gallons of linseed oil and one gallon of turpentine for priming coat, while for finishing coats four to five gallons of oil and one quart of turpentine make a satisfactory mix for brush application.

The pigments used in painting are either mineral or metallic. The principal metallic pigments are lead, zinc, and iron compounds. The lead and zinc are used chiefly as the base of white and lighter tinted paints. The iron gives reds and browns. Mineral tints are colored earths mainly, and furnish a large variety of colors and tints.

To Scald Milk.

To prevent milk from sticking to the bottom of the kettle or the pan when you scald it, first boil a little water in the pan for a minute or two and then pour it out just before you put the milk into it.

Public prosperity is like a tree: agriculture is its roots; industry and commerce are its branches and leaves. If the root suffers, the leaves fall, the branches break, and the tree dies.

Raising Rabbits for Food.

For a long time it was difficult to get the market men to handle rabbit meat; and even now many of them decline to do so, thinking perhaps that it would interfere with their regular sales of beef, mutton and pork. Still, in the large cities one finds dealers who advertise for rabbits of all kinds, and who pay a price which compares well with that paid for live poultry.

A surprisingly large number of people have taken up rabbit keeping, and yet the available supply is very small compared with the supply of other meats. There is no kind of meat which can be produced at so low a cost as rabbit meat, especially if one has a vegetable garden and a patch of ground where a little hay can be had.

A hutch made out of a dry-goods box will answer for the rabbit's home, and about the only expense will be the purchase of a little grain, of which oats is the best. Some people raise their rabbits wholly on green food and vegetables, with the addition of hay; but less rapid growth is made, and the flesh is too soft to be of the highest quality. On the other hand, too much grain makes the meat too hard.

While oats are the most common grain used, whole corn makes a good ration, and is sometimes boiled. Crushed oats are best for young stock, and can be prepared by means of a simple hand-mill. Hay is a necessity in climates where green food can not be obtained the year round. It is best to keep the hay in a little rack at one end of the hutch so that it will not be wasted, although a little hay is also used oftentimes for bedding. It is easy to make a rack by using a few laths or poultry netting.

Some breeders urge the use of cages, while others say that they should never be given to rabbits. In any case, it must be said that cages should not be allowed to freeze. Moreover, if the hutch is indoors, it is best to avoid cages because their use results in rather unpleasant odors.

Of all the vegetables which the rabbit keeper can grow in his garden,

Building the New Dwelling.

A story is told of a poor woman who suddenly acquired wealth and at once decided to build a new home. Having spent most of her waking hours in the kitchen, she ordered her architect to furnish her a house which had no such room. Later, finding that even people of wealth must have some place to prepare meals, she was forced to build the kitchen on, and connect it to the rest of the mansion by means of a hall.

In inspecting a large per cent. of the houses in Canada, one is forced to believe that at least a little thought was given to sane planning, and the woman in the story gave to her home. Certainly the average home could be improved upon when it comes to convenience of arrangement and ease of doing work. In the old-fashioned houses, especially those built in the days when lumber was cheap, doesn't it seem as if the one idea was to see how many rooms of immense size one could get, without regard to the steps women would have to take in keeping the house up? Don't you all know pantries large enough to be modern kitchens?

In planning your new home, or remodeling your old one, bear in mind the fact that the fewer the steps, the sooner you'll be through work. Get your working area all together in as compact a form as possible.

The model farm home should have living-room, dining-room, office, kitchen, pantry, laundry and wash-room on the first floor, bedrooms, bath and sewing-room on the second, and the bedrooms for help should be separate from those for the family. If you cannot afford a home of this size, however, combine living-room, office and sewing-room in one, but keep the dining-room. Many a woman has sat listlessly through a meal in the kitchen because the sight of the spot where she had prepared the meal robbed her of appetite. Plan your home so as to get out of the kitchen at mealtimes.

And do not, unless you are blessed with help or the children are grown, plan for a sewing-room on the second floor. Have it down where you can step into it while the bread bakes and you'll accomplish twice as much in the way of sewing or mending. In planning your home consider your own family and your own needs, not what the neighbors have, or what some architect tries to tell you want.

A wash-room through which help can come to clean up and prepare for meals before entering the house proper is almost a necessity. Make this large enough to be used for a play room for the children on rainy days. If it has a concrete floor, they can play almost any game without worry as to spilled water or scratched floors.

Floors and woodwork may be either varnished or waxed. Wax is more satisfactory in many ways as it does not show marks quickly, and its beauty grows with its age. It is easily taken care of. Whatever finish is first applied can not be changed satisfactorily, so make up your mind to one or the other. Floors once varnished must always be varnished in future when repainting needs to be done, and floors waxed must always have wax. You can not apply a coat of either finish over the other with satisfactory results.

The trustees of one rural school have solved this problem in a safe and comparatively inexpensive manner by using the rain which falls upon the roof of the schoolhouse. The water from both slopes is carried directly to a large filter, filled with layers of charcoal, sand and small pebbles. From the filter the water makes its way to a underground cistern which is provided with a tight curb. In case the cistern becomes filled, a damper in the pipe above the filter permits the roof water to be discharged through another pipe.

Water from this cistern was used for two days in midsummer by the writer of this article who used the school yard for a temporary camping spot. Though school had not been in session for several weeks, he found the water sweet and palatable. It was quite dark in color but bore no evidence of staleness. Neither sediment nor foreign substances were distinguishable. Moreover, the water was as cold as spring water, and not in the least bit hard.

Linoleum, a preparation of ground cork and linseed oil, was invented in 1860.

There are countless district schools where no provision is made for drinking water, save as it is carried by the children to the schoolhouse from some farm-home. Undoubtedly the cost of drilling a well is responsible in most instances for this condition.

There were many other evidences of her careful study to do her house-keeping as intelligently as possible and to put into practice her knowledge of the laws of sanitation and health. By reading, she keeps herself informed and she says it makes her home-making much more interesting and genuinely successful to be trying to improve it all the time instead of just buying things which other people have.

After all, this matter of comforts, conveniences and home-improvements is the problem of each individual or group most immediately concerned. We cannot say it is the man's job or the woman's. Team work, of course, is ideal and family team work the very highest ideal of all. Community movements are drawing rural homes closer together and the spirit of community advancement runs now, like grass fire, swiftly from point to point.

Things Learned About Spraying.

At one time the writer assisted with experimental work in spraying fruit orchards and worked with men who had made a business of spraying carefully to obtain accurate results. We found that it paid to clean up the spray tank, engine and hose after each application. The nozzles and rods were thoroughly flushed out. Spray chemicals are so strong that many outfits are injured by improper care after use. A good hose will also be reduced in life if it is not cleaned after use.

We found that the nozzles of simple construction were best. They did not clog frequently and the material was easily dislodged if they did clog. We found that the angle nozzles were better than straight nozzles. With the angle nozzle it was possible to change the direction of the spray drop with a slight turn of the wrist. These angle nozzles enabled us to get in under the trees and place the rod high up in the branches where with a slight turn the spray could be sent out in all directions.

The new variable spray rod is a big improvement over the old disc nozzle, as it makes it easy to spray trees of most any size from the ground. The only danger is that one is likely to become careless and use the coarse, strong spray on nearby parts of the tree and thus cause spray injury.

Experiments proved that it was not necessary to saturate trees with the mixture to obtain good results. We did not leave the tree dripping but placed on just enough to cover every bit of bark or foliage with a film of spraying material. This made it necessary to keep the spray rod always on the move. The careless rodman is apt to spray too much on one place and then skip other places. This leaves part of the tree without protection while other sections are drenched. It is good business to keep the rod moving all the time when spraying.

We found that a long line of hose made it easier for the rodman working on the ground. Then he was not covered with spray drop by the man working in the tower. And he was not jerked forward by the moving of the team before completing his work. We found that a tank filler saved time in making up the mixture and that suitable clothes for the work saved time in putting it on the tree. A pair of goggles often proved useful in keeping the spray mixture out of the eyes on windy days. A substantial pair of gamble gloves were needed to keep the hands and wrists dry.

Feed well the old hens that you intend to sell when they are through laying. Watch the market, and sell them just before the market falls. If the market begins to fall, get all the eggs you can from them this summer, but sell them while the price is still good.

THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1921

Preparatory to the taking of the Dominion census, which begins June 1st, the Government is issuing minute instructions to the enumerators who will be entrusted with the work of collecting the mass of statistics in every city, town, village and hamlet of Canada. An enumerator on calling at a house must find out even the kind of house it is, specifying the material of which it is made. He must learn the number of persons in the dwelling, the rooms occupied and if there are any boarders. The sex of the inmates, whether they are married or single, the nationality, the religion, nature of employment, and a host of other information must be given to the man when he calls at the door. The total earning of each person for the year must be given, and in connection with this it is promised that this information will be private and will not be available for the taxation officials. The first federal census of the Dominion of Canada was taken in 1871, and since then an official enumeration has been taken every ten years. The fifth census in 1911 required the services of 264 commissioners and almost 10,000 enumerators. Each enumerator will be paid at the rate of five cents for each name recorded. This is two cents more than in 1911, when the rate of pay was three cents a name. Some are expected to do the work in two weeks, while others will take well on to a month.

Many a man is sad and torn today because he failed to lay up a storage account when the opportunity was in his hands. So many thought the luscious grapes of high prosperity would grow forever, they never dreamed of barren branches soon to come. Cultivating the habit of living within one's means and not going into debt, rather to lay aside a small sum each week out of the income has been the first solid foundation of many a young man's fortune. Save and serve is as good a motto in peace as it was during the war.

The key to all success is work. Work hard work, opens the mines, tills the ground, conducts business. It is work, hard and long work, that makes the artist, the genius, the inventor. Edison, Howe, Morse, Goodyear, Marconi, Padrewski, Kekelik, Scott, Peary, Joliet, Marquette and others, show what work can do. Webster's dictionary is a monument of work. Work is a duty, a blessing, it is happiness, it is life. Work means progress. Strength is shown in overcoming obstacles overcome, the greater and stronger is vitality. Dead fish cannot swim up-stream; they float along with the stream because they are dead. A butterfly is carried on by every gust of wind. Explorers do not look for beaten paths; they make them. Ambition requires no whip, nor a guard nor even a reward. Conscience, duty, God, these give all of us the imperious power that overcomes all difficulties, that knows no fear. Whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books dig ditches or edit a paper, ring an auction bell, or write funny things, you must work. Don't be afraid of killing yourself with work. Work gives an appetite for meals, gives the appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not even know that they are here. So find out what you want to do and do it; take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are the less deviltry you will get into, the sweeter will be your sleep and better satisfied will the world be with you.

A London official states that immigrants who are comparatively recent arrivals in this country are forsaking positions they have been given on the farms to return to the city and aggravate the unemployment situation. It is claimed that many of the new arrivals have lost interest in farming soon after their arrival and they flatly refuse to go out in the country. Farmers in the London district are beginning to waver about accepting inexperienced newcomers, and in their applications state that they will take only experienced men.

TOWN AND VICINITY

The June sessions of the county council will open in London on Monday, June 6th, when the council will hear the report of the county auditor, Joshua Trothen, who died recently at Tyrconnell, was a brother of Mrs.
A. W. McEwan of Glencoe.

Victoria Day was celebrated locally by most people taking a holiday, but they had no place in particular to go, and they went accordingly.

Several light showers of rain early Monday morning and a real good rainfall on Tuesday night has gotten all out-of-doors smiling again.

Proceeds of the Tail's Corners church re-opening exercises totalled $638. Sunday collections being $508 and tea meeting proceeds $130.

There will be eight school fairs in Middlesex county in the fall of which two will be in connection with the annual shows of agricultural societies.

The farm of the late Mrs. Sarah McCallum on the townline, north of Glencoe, was sold by L. L. McTaggart, auctioneer, for the executors on Saturday to Godfrey McMurchy for $7,100.

The Mosa-Ekfrid townline from Stratford to Brooke township has been designated a county provincial highway and will likely be ratified as such at the June sessions of Middlesex county council.

Many farmers' wives are informing their customers that they will not continue to supply them with butter at present prices, preferring to sell their cream, thus saving the labor involved in making butter.

The Amherstburg Echo reports the marriage on Saturday, May 14th, of Marvin Lewis Chisholm of Windsor, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Chisholm of Glencoe, to Miss Ila Gladys Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Hill of Essex.

Postmaster Currie has been granted permission by the post office department to close the Glencoe office every Wednesday afternoon from 12:30 to 6 o'clock during the continuance of the weekly half-holiday. The lobby will remain open and mails will be dispatched as usual.

Three recently elected elders, Thos.
Strachan, George Munroe and R. W.
Osley, were inducted into the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening.
Mr. Strachan was also ordained, as he had not previously served as an elder. Rev. Mr. McKay of Tail's Corners assisted the pastor and addressed the new elders as to their duties.

Charles Tanner, a well-known and esteemed resident of Emiskillen township, died recently in the hospital at Petrolia, in his 58th year.
Among those who attended the funeral were Alfred George, Mr. and Mrs. Charles George and Mr. and Mrs. Albert George and daughter, of Glencoe, and Mr. and Mrs. Will George and family of Newbury.

Although early in the season, the management of the Western Fair are actively preparing for the big exhibition in September. The prize list will soon be ready for distribution.
Six thousand dollars has been added to the list this year. All information regarding the exhibition may be obtained from the secretary, A. M.
Hunt, Dominion Savings Building,
London, Ont.

What is known as the "Armistice Day" bill has passed its final stage in the House of Commons. It provides that in future the date of the conclusion of the war is to be celebrated by having a public holiday.
The holiday will be the Monday in the week in which November 11 (the day on which hostilities terminated) occurs and Thanksgiving Day will be celebrated on the same day.

A Glencoe audience was never better pleased than that which heard the splendid entertainment in the Methodist church on Thursday evening in an organ recital given by A.
D. Jordan of London, assisted by Mrs. Frederick Schofield, soprano;
Miss Lyla Grant, reader, and Carman Learn, baritone. It was a treat from popular London artists that will long be remembered. The numerous en-cores during the evening spoke more forcibly than anything that could be written. We can only express the hope that Glencoe might be favored with more of this class of entertainment in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Galbraith and family are here from the West and are spending a short time at the home of Mrs. Galbraith's sister, Mrs.
D. A. McColl, Ekfrid. A Limerick, Sask., paper says: "Mr. and Mrs. Ed.
Galbraith and family left last Monday for the east. Mr. Galbraith sold his farm to Chas. Scott and in the future intends to reside near London, Ont. Mr. Galbraith was one of the successful farmers of the vicinity and was always ready to assist in any movement for the betterment of the community, and he and Mrs. Galbraith will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends."

Don H. Love was in Brantford on Tuesday on business in the interests of some side lines he is about to take on in connection with his business here, and while there attended the tenth annual convention of the Horsehoofers and Carriage Workers' Association of Ontario. He says

SUFFERED DAY AND NIGHT

The Tortures of Dyspepsia Relieved By "Fruit-a-lives"

LITTLE BRAS D'OR, C. B.
"I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation for years.
I had pain after eating, belching gas, constant headaches and did not sleep well at night. Finally, a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-lives'. In a week, the Constipation was corrected and soon I was free of pain, headaches and that miserable feeling that accompanies Dyspepsia. I continued to take this splendid fruit medicine and now I am well, strong and vigorous." ROBERT NEWTON.

up the trade and so many older men throwing out shoeing the trade, it is about a thing of the past. It is stated that there are only four apprentices finishing in eleven counties of Western Ontario. Mr. Slack of Ottawa said he did not know of any learning in Eastern Ontario, and the majority now are old men.

Glencoe industries using hydroelectric power were tied up for the greater part of Monday owing to the power going off during a thunder shower about 2:30 o'clock in the morning and remaining off for twelve hours. Many of the women folk had to leave their Monday's washing over until evening or the following day, and there was dissatisfaction all round. The trouble was located on the line between Newbury and Bothwell, and has occurred frequently before this. There must be something radically wrong with a transmission service line that cannot withstand a thunder shower, and we would suggest that the matter be enquired into.

About fifty members of Lorne Lodge, Glencoe, and nearly as many visiting members of the Masonic Order from Rodney, West Lorne, Wards-ville, Napier, Kerwood and elsewhere marched from the lodge room here on Sunday afternoon to attend divine service in St. John's church. T. T.
J. Charlton, L. Th. chaplain of the lodge, discoursed on the subject of "Fellowship" in a manner that was both pleasing and instructive, with special emphasis on the tenets of the Masonic Order. The musical part of the service was splendidly led by the choir of St. John's, which also rendered an appropriate anthem, and Stanley Humphries rendered in excellent voice the solo "The Holy City." The general public was well represented in the congregation.

The Secret of the Old Chateau

By DAVID WHITELAW.

(Copyrighted)

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.
Vivian Renton and Eddie Haverton, modern soldiers of fortune, have been gambling with Hubert Baxenter, a prosperous attorney, in his London apartments. After their departure late at night Renton returns to the house, murders Baxenter and hides the body on the roof. While waiting for night to come again in order to make his escape, he finds in a desk a curious old yellowed document telling of a mysterious chest left in the care of one of Baxenter's ancestors by a French nobleman, the Marquis de Dargigny, of the Chateau Chauville. The chest has been handed down from one generation of Baxenters to another and carefully guarded in the hope that some day its rightful owner will be found. Renton decides to pose as the missing heir and claim the chest. He goes to France to make some useful inquiries about the Dargigny family. The story of the mysterious chest goes back to the troubled days of the French Revolution and the escape of the Marquis and his little granddaughter to England, where the chest and document were given to the Baxenters for safe keeping. Now, more than one hundred years later, Hubert Baxenter's body is found, but the police find no clue. Meanwhile, Renton changes his name to Baptiste Dargigny, and visits Canada; then he presents his fictitious claims to Robert Baxenter, new head of the firm, and receives the treasure chest. Robert calls on Stella Benham whose heart is set on making a great success on the stage.

CHAPTER IX.—(Cont'd.)

Robert took the slim little hands between his own.
"Because, darling, in my business I have seen so many straightened out so many matrimonial creases. The stage plays a part in a lot of marriages nowadays; they begin in show-rooms of rags and end in— No, Stella, a woman should find her applause in the lock of her husband, in the love-light in the eyes of her children; she should have no other life but that— they should be all that matters. What should you care—what do you care— for the strangers who gaze at you and clap their silly hands together—why should you please them?"

Stella Benham rose suddenly. Her head was again turned to the gardens and a flush had come over her white neck, and rebellion clouded the gray eyes.

"Now you're lecturing me, Robert. I won't stand it to-day of all days. I'm going to cry in a minute—and—"

"—I think you're horrid!"

It was all said in a breath, there was a switch of skirts and Robert Baxenter was alone.

He remained where he was, gazing moodily out over the gardens. It was now all but dark, and the last of the tiny revellers were being escorted homeward by their nurses. The block of flats facing him across the trees was a silhouette of purple shadow, in which little squares of soft radiance were twinkling out one by one. How long he sat there he did not know, but he was aroused from his reverie by a taxi drawing up at the door behind him. If any one had seen him, he would have been surprised to find him, in his evening dress, then swung across the road, backed, and with a warning note on the hooter, made off quickly in the direction of London.

Robert turned to find Mrs. Benham standing by his chair.

"What is wrong, Robert, between you and Stella? She has gone off to the theatre alone—and she has been crying—she said you would understand."

"Oh, yes, I think I understand—that is, so far as women were meant to be understood. Good night, Mrs. Benham; I've barely time to dress if I want to see Stella in the glory of her new part. Won't you come, too, for once?"

The little lady shook her head.
"My nerves, Robert. Suppose she failed. I really think I would get up and abuse the audience. The time will not pass so quickly here—but it will be more peaceful."

Robert walked part of the way to his room. He felt a little angry with himself at upsetting the girl on the day of her appearance. He hated the stage and all connected with it, but he was so sure that he had hidden his own thoughts—at any rate, until Stella had made her appearance in Ruby Foster's part.

By half-past nine the young solicitor was in a box at the "Odeon," watching rather sadly the person of Stella Benham, who, attired in the picturesque garb of a gypsy girl, was fascinating the impossible hero of the particular musical comedy which was casting the spell of a moment over the metropolis. Robert's hands clenched hard upon the velvet arm of his stall as he watched her.

The scene in the hands of Ruby Foster had seemed to him insane and had never had any meaning, but now that the girl he loved was a principal in it it took on a new significance. It called to mind the evil reputation of the ladies' idol who was now on the stage with Stella, his dissolute associations and habits, and his club-talk of women. It seemed to the man sitting in the box though every word of Ardy Egrave uttered, every gesture was an insult. He felt curiously ill at ease. He sat there among the well-dressed audience. He gazed at the actress, the eager, vacant expressions. How he loathed them all!

A titter went up from the house and the solicitor turned his eyes again to the stage. The hero, with a leer that wrinkled up his full cheeks, had slipped an arm round Stella's waist, and had kissed her—not on the cheek, but full on the lips.

The lips! With a muttered oath Robert rose from his seat and made his way into the foyer of the theatre. He was beset by himself with passion and self-loathing that he should have placed himself in such a degrading position. He took his hat from the cloak-room and walked quickly from the theatre. On through the West End streets with their crowd of pleasure-seekers, through the quiet ways of Mayfair, and so into the park. It was better here, in this oasis of silence.

How he hated the heat and glamor of the mimic world of the theatre, its tinsel and its paint. He wanted to take Stella—Stella—away from it all, away from the cities, to watch together the sun set over the downs, and to walk with her in cool woods at evening.

He felt that he could not return to meet her at the theatre. To-night of all nights he could not stand at the lock shabby stage-door among the loafers who would be there to see her come out. He knew that Mrs. Benham always drove down in the hired brougham to meet her daughter—and Stella would understand his absence.

It was late when Robert reached his rooms. The Baxenter house had been given up, and the new head of the firm found the little bachelor flat in Craven street more to his taste than the gloomy, ghost-ridden house at Regent's Park.

He had taken on his late cousin's man, but he found him now awaiting his return.

Jowett took his master's hat and coat and placed the decanters and siphon ready to hand.

"There's nothing more, Jowett, to-night—what did this come to?" Robert took up, as he spoke, an envelope that had been propped up against the clock on the mantel-piece.

"Half an hour ago, sir; the attendant from the theatre brought it round, sir."

And when the man had retired the solicitor sat open the envelope and read the hastily scrawled note.

"Dear Robert—I saw you this evening—my dear, you have really offended me at last. It was bad enough for me to put up with your absurd prejudice to the stage when we were alone, but your behavior in leaving the theatre during my best scene was too bad. I did not think you would carry your idiocy to the length of a public protest."

"I know that I promised to answer your question this month, but I can't do so now. I want to go on with my art. Perhaps in a year, if you care to wait, I will answer you."

"Come and see me, won't you? I would like to see your serious old face when you read the papers to-morrow—I had three calls and such a lovely bouquet, a great mass of orchids and carnations. Yes, come and see me; but no lectures, please, and not a word of—you know what. I'm going to have a year of freedom. Yours, STELLA BENHAM."

"P.S.—I gave the bouquet to the little man who plays the second fiddle in our orchestra. He is taking it home to his wife—she's been ill for months and has got four little children. He was so pleased with it—but he cried when he thanked me."

Robert's first thought, as he folded the letter carefully and put it away in his bureau, was that a few words with the headstrong girl would put things right, and that his action in leaving the theatre would have had, at least, the effect of bringing matters to a head. On consideration, however, it seemed better that he should take Stella at her word and give her her year of freedom. After all, she was only nineteen, and the solicitor felt certain that twelve months of stage life would be more than sufficient to play his game for him.

Then he knew better the shallow life enacted behind the scenes—the jealousies, the heart-burnings and the continual effort to preserve one's self-esteem. He could not imagine his Stella among it all, seriously; it was well enough to play at being an actress, but now a success of sorts had come to her and would bring in its train all its attendant evils; envy would quickly rob Stella Benham of the friends she had made.

Robert called at Bellingham Mansions the next afternoon at his usual hour and accepted what he mockingly referred to as "the inevitable." Stella had hardly expected, nor had she desired, this unconditional capitulation, and it robbed her position of much of its sweetness. She had chattered gaily as she poured out his tea and had been quite as charming as hitherto; she still addressed him as Bobby, but the question the answer to which Robert had been awaiting was a topic which, whatever was pressing in their minds, was spoken of by neither.

And then for two weeks the young man absented himself. The work at the Strand office was heavy, and Robert was making way through it in anticipation of his annual holiday. A week before Stella's letter he had refused a very tempting invitation of a club acquaintance to join him on his yacht. This he now regretted, and a letter to young Archie Wendover elicited the welcome news that his cabin on the Gazeka was still waiting his occupation. In fact, it was nearly three weeks before he called at the flat to say good-bye, although he had written pretty frequently.

He found Mrs. Benham alone. Stella, she told him, was at rehearsal, she had the name-part in a company that was going on tour immediately—a No. 1 company, oh, yes, she had left the "Odeon." It was really quite unbearable for her after Miss Foster had taken up her part again—of course, it was unfortunate that Mr. Moser was away—the girls were all so jealous that Stella—

The old lady had rambled on, and Robert half turned his back so that she should not see that he was smiling. So, he thought, Stella was learning her lesson well. The girl herself came in as he was leaving. She was hot and tired and a little disagreeable. She had had rather a stormy scene with the stage manager, the elderly, grumpy man who resented "the chief's" introduction of raw talent over the heads of the tried members of his company. It had needed Mr. Haverton's personal intervention to smooth out the ruffles, and, after all, the quarrel was only patched up.

Stella told Bobby all about it as she waited for some fresh tea to be brought in. She had not intended to talk, but there was a friendliness about the square face and gray eyes of Robert Baxenter which, however, was not very sympathetic as he listened to the angry girl's description of the stage manager.

"There are a lot like him," he said. "I shouldn't wonder if the leading lady you have supplanted is a member of his family—his sister, his—"

"Mother, I should say," said the girl as she bit her strong little teeth into a crisp piece of toast.

Robert smiled unperceived.

"Oh, hardly that, Stella—the stage hasn't much use for people who have grown-up sons. It's a short life—some say that it is a merry one."

Stella's eyes flashed defiance.

"So it is, Bobby—a splendid life."

There was a moment's silence; then Robert took up his hat and he'd out his hand to the girl.

"I was just going, Stella; I'm glad you came in. I was going round to the theatre if I hadn't heard the news from your mother that you had left the 'Odeon.'—I'm joining Archie in that trip to the Mediterranean. I don't expect I will be back before the end of September."

"Oh." The tone was non-committal.

"You'll write, Stella, won't you?"

Robert was sorry that what he had said had hurt the girl, but sharp medicine was necessary. "They'll forward on from the office. I'll keep track of you by the Era. He held out his hand. "Good-bye, Stella—and if ever you want—oh, hang it all! I'm your pal, Stella, always your pal."

She jumped up and went to the window as he hurried down the stairs. She felt she would have given her ambition, her life, to feed his lips on hers, to bury her nose in his shoulder and cry—just cry. She watched his broad shoulders as he crossed the garden, and when at last he was out of sight she turned, brushing hastily past her mother, flew to her bedroom.

And Mrs. Benham gathered up her scattered crochet-work and gave a little fluttering sigh, and wondered if she had been like that when she was young.

Apple Pie

There can be no question about it, pie, particularly apple pie, is the great Canadian dessert. Making a pie is a household art in which every Canadian housekeeper wishes to be proficient. Quite naturally so, for any meal is ruined if the last part, the pie, is soggy or tough. In fact, a poor pie is a justification for copious tears in any kitchen, provided determination is accumulated during the weeping to overcome the obstacles the next baking day.

Every woman, regardless of her experience in cooking, can make pies—good pies, the kind for which Canada is famed. There are but a few things to remember. And here they are:

1. Have the ingredients cold. 2. Handle the pastry carefully. 3. Avoid using too much water. 4. Bake in a hot oven.

Nine chances out of ten the pie crust will not be a success unless it is cold when placed in the oven. Cold air has a greater expansion than warm air, and therefore helps to make a flaky crust. It is almost as easy to keep it cool as not. I have a glass jar reserved for pastry mixture the year around in my home. This jar, with the butter and cream, always sits in the coolest place in the household for its home. In the summer this is the refrigerator; in the winter, a shelf on the back porch.

The pastry mixture consists of the flour, salt, and fat blended together ready for the addition of cold water. This water cannot be added any great length of time before the baking, because it invites mold, which ruins the mixture. When a pie is needed, all there is to do is to add the cold water, roll out, fill, and bake. Think what a saving of time and worry in preparing a meal to have the dry ingredients cold and ready for use!

And there's this much about it: If the shortening, flour, and other ingredients are combined and blended immediately before baking, it is extremely difficult to keep them from getting warm, particularly in summer time. Usually, after they have been blended, it is best to set the mixture aside in a cool place for at least two or three hours before adding the water and rolling out the crust. And the water should be as cold as possible.

In combining the ingredients and in rolling out the crust, care is needed to handle the dough lightly. You would not think of taking a bouquet of beautiful, fragile roses or the lovely organdie sash on your summer gown and treating them roughly. Consider the pastry mixture in the same way.

Combine the ingredients deftly, toss the mixture on a floured board, pat lightly with a rolling pin. The newest thing in rolling pins, by the way, are those made of glass in which the centre can be filled with ice to help keep the pastry cold.

In dividing the paste, more is allowed for the upper crust than the lower one. It is rolled about one-quarter inch in thickness, and made a little larger than the pie pan to allow for shrinkage. The upper crust is always perforated to allow the escape of steam. When padding two crusts together, the under one is brushed with cold water, and then the two are pushed together lightly. After the lower crust is in the tin, and before the filling is added, the pie pan containing the crust and the bowl with the paste for the lower one can be set in a cold place for a final chilling if one wishes.

Precautions not to add too much water are necessary. I mention this because many teachers of home economics who show hundreds of girls how to make pies in one year, say the most common mistake made is the addition of too much water to the fat and flour mixture. When this occurs, more flour must be added, and there can be but one result—a tough crust. When one is afraid of making this mistake, water can be added to one-half of the pastry mixture first, and then the rest of the flour and fat combination added until the dough is of the right consistency to roll.

After the pie is filled and the upper crust added, it must be set in a hot oven to bake. The temperature of the oven should be about the same as for layer cakes.

And this brings us to the matter of temperature cooking. I am predicting that our daughters and granddaughters will not think of keeping house a few years hence without an oven thermometer. Experience is a grand old teacher, but her methods are sometimes discouraging.

Believing that some of the readers will be interested in knowing the temperatures for baking pies, I am going to tell you the ones used in my kitchen. For two-crust pies with raw fruit, such as apples, an oven having a temperature of 450 degrees Fahrenheit is correct. The pie should stay in the oven about forty minutes, and I find it more satisfactory to reduce the heat somewhat during the last ten minutes. For pies in which the filling has been cooked previously, the same oven temperature is used, but the pie is taken out in thirty minutes.

Open pies, such as custard and pumpkin, require a temperature of 400 degrees for fifteen minutes, and then the reduction to 325 degrees for thirty minutes. Pastry shells of the lower crust are baked quickly at a high temperature, to do away with shrinkage. About 400 degrees for ten or fifteen minutes is sufficient. These temperatures are for ovens heated with direct heat, such as in kerosene and gas stoves, while with indirect heat, such as in a wood or coal range, the temperatures are from 70 to 85 degrees lower.

When a baked shell and a cooked filling are covered with a meringue, the temperature of the oven should be about 300 degrees; it will take about fifteen minutes to brown and cook the meringue.

Now for the recipes which will produce flaky pie crust:

Number one—1½ cups flour, ½ cup shortening, 1½ teaspoons salt, 1 cup water to moisten.

Number two—1½ cups pastry flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup shortening, cold water to moisten, ½ teaspoon baking powder.

In both of these recipes the dry ingredients are mixed, the fat blended in, and the mixture chilled. Then the cold water is added and the crust rolled.

Number three—1½ cups flour, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ cup butter, ¼ cup water, ¼ cup lard.

The dry ingredients are mixed, the lard is worked into them, and then the water is added. This meaty mixture is tossed on a floured board, patted in shape, and then rolled to one-half inch in thickness. Then the butter, which has been washed and chilled, is placed in the centre and the pastry is folded over. This is rolled, the pastry folded over, and rolled again. This process is repeated two times, then the pastry is ready for baking.

What to use in filling the pies depends largely on choice. Apples are always a favorite; the flavor of apple pie should depend on the fruit, not on spices. A pleasing addition to apple pie when it is served warm is a hard sauce made from brown sugar and butter.

Hard sauce—6 tablespoons butter, 1 cup brown sugar, ¼ teaspoon vanilla. Cream the butter until very light, and add the sugar gradually, beating constantly. Then add flavoring. Chopped nuts or shredded coconut may be added if one wishes. Place this on top of warm apple pie just before serving, and let it melt.

Another way to vary the apple pie is to leave off the upper crust; when the apples and lower crust are baked, add chopped marshmallows, and brown lightly in the oven. A baked pastry shell may be filled with cooked and strained apple sauce and topped with whipped cream.

Gelatin pies are also favorites. A thick pastry shell is baked, and when cold, filled with chilled fruit gelatin. This is topped with whipped cream.

Individual pastry shells, made from bits of pastry left from making pie, make welcome desserts. They are placed over inverted muffin tins, pricked several times with a fork, and baked in a hot oven. Then they are filled with combinations of fruit and topped with whipped cream.

Study Canada.
A knowledge of one's country is one of the first essentials of an education, even of those who are unable to proceed to the higher courses. With the amount of literature available on Canada and its natural resources, there is little reason for Canadians not being fully conversant with the many advantages Canada possesses.

A review of current literature on such subjects as the water-powers on our rivers, the protection and development of our forests, and our mineral deposits only whets the appetite for more detailed information. To those desirous of knowing more fully what Canada's heritage really represents, the Commission of Conservation can supply a number of reports on water-powers, on forests and on mines and minerals. These have been produced in a form to give them permanent value, and are generously illustrated.

The school teacher, with limited library and often limited means, will find in the Commission's reports much information that will be of assistance in teaching, apart from providing the opportunity of acquiring knowledge of Canada and her resources at a minimum of expense.

Straws show which way the wind blows in Soviet Russia

In Moscow the Soviet has decreed that 4,000 rubles and the gold franc are equivalent. This means 20,000 rubles to the dollar. It sounds ominous. Last year the Soviet ruble was held at 5,000 and 6,000 as the maximum for the dollar. If the exchange was made by way of Estonian and German marks, it was possible to procure as much as 11,000 marks for a dollar. But the present level is about twice as low as the lowest point the Soviet ruble has touched previously.

It will not do to assume because of the low value of the ruble that Bolshevik rule is about to collapse. But when we remember that the Czar ruble was generally worth more than fifty-one cents, it can be seen how low the world's confidence in Russian credit has fallen. No Government can hope to rear a permanent structure on the foundation of insolvency.

An Interesting Publication.

The University of Toronto has just issued a bulletin which will be of special interest to students in the Collegiate Institutes, High Schools, and Continuation Schools, who are planning their university courses. Prepared by the Faculty of Arts, this booklet opens with a list of the sciences of which men first the objects of the courses in each of the sciences and then examines to what vocations these courses lead, that is, in each case a list is given of positions which a graduate in any course could hope to obtain. This is a very valuable feature. The bulletin should help to solve, for the boy or girl, the problem of vocational guidance; it should also be useful to parents who are called upon to advise their children as to the choice of a career. The Provincial University of Toronto is alive to the necessity not only of providing the student with the means of supplying advice and guidance to parents and children in educational matters. This bulletin is applied, free, on application.

Dr. H. C. Bayne has decided to locate in this his home town. He has secured rooms from W. H. Parnall in the Edwards building where he will have his dental parlors. He went to Toronto Monday to procure fixtures and supplies, which will be all most modern. Dr. Bayne has had good training in dentistry, both in the army overseas and in the college where he passed his exams with high percentages. We have long needed a dentist here and we predict success for him.

Mrs. J. G. Bayne arrived home on Monday after visiting her daughter in Hagersville and friends in Oakville and Brantford.

While taking his family for a car ride Sunday evening Oliver Prangley met with an accident on the Longwoods road. Meeting a car, he drove close to the side of the road, but the earth was loose and the road narrow. He got too close to the protecting fence and it gave way, causing the car to tip, throwing his two daughters, Elsie and Myrtle, down the embankment. Both were shaken up and bruised but no bones were broken. Mrs. Prangley's face was cut by the windshield and she suffered from shock. Mr. Prangley got one hand bruised. One wheel and the fender of the car were broken, besides the windshield.

N. Hendershott, wife and son Murray and Mrs. R. J. Haggett were over the 24th with Windsor friends.

Mrs. Cecil T. Dobbins and children spent a few days at her former home, Atkin, her mother, Mrs. Colbourn, having suffered a stroke of paralysis. Their friends hope for her recovery. C. W. Vanduzer was in Toronto a few days.

Dragged Down by Asthma. The man or woman who is continually subject to asthma is unfitted for his or her life's work.
