WEDNESDAY'S RETURNS. London, July 17.—The latest returns shows the election of 229 Conservatives, 42 Unionists, 62 Liberals, 28 Anti-Parnellites and 6 Parnellites. The total gains thus far are: Conservatives, 40; Unionists, 14, and Liberals, 10, making the net Unionist gain 44 seats. The story of the polls today was much the same as on previous days. The Unionists continue to gain seats, increase their former majority, and where un-able to oust Liberals they materially reduce the latter's figures.

A factor in today's election, however, was the running of an Independent-Labor candidate, who polled 607 votes, most of which were drawn from the Liberals. The same conditions prevailed in Dewsbury, where the Labor candidate polled upwards of 1,000 votes, Nerve materially effecting the year for very materially affecting the vote for the Liberal, who retained his seat, but with a loss of 575 votes. Glasgow has returned five Unionists and two Liberals. When Mr. Gladstone went to the country on home rule the Liberals secured six of the seven seats. Among the more prominent Liberals who failed of election today were Sir Charles Cameron, the champion of Scottish disestablishment, who was defeated in the College division of Glasgow by Sir J. Stirling Maxwell.

The Conservatives hope to have in the next House a majority sufficiently large to render them independent of the Liberal Unionists, and this despite the effusive refrences to a fusion of the parties made before Parliament was dissolved.

TO, of course not; and neither can we tell you the story of our bargains in a two-column advertisement. Those who are truly economical will come, and make discoveries for themselves. We assure you that we are offering unparalleled values. Let the wise read the moral.

Our large stores are overcrowded with surplus stock which must be turned into cash before our fall goods begin to arrive. Do you recognize the fact that we are willing to sacrifice profit to convenience? If you do, you are fairly started on the highway of true economy,

CARPET CLEARING.

HAT is practically the end of the carpet season has been reached, and our shelves show the effects of the biggest season in our history. If you have a room this size to cover, you can get the very best $1 35 five frame Brussels for 750 a yard. No old patterns, but those for which the greatest demand has been

In the course of the debate of the measure Premier Crispi said the bill was important as a declaration of Italy's policy towards the Vatican. The Government, he said, desired neither a concordat nor a combat. They would, however, faithfully observe the law of guarantees to the Pope as the head of a religion that had greater freedom in Italy than it had in France or Austria. Hotel Taxes.-Can a licensed or summer hotel avoid paying taxes on onethird of what the hotel cost because those who run it lose money every year? Ans.-The council could not legally remit any part of the taxes on such ground. The assessment, however, should be fixed not at the cost of the ODGINS HOUSE — BEST $1 DAY house in city, corner King and Talbot streets. Kingsville.-Can H compel the village council to put a water main on his street, which was not shown on the plan when a vote of the electors was taken to have waterworks put in town? Ans.-If he requires to use the water he can compel the corporation to furnish it to him, and to put in a main if necessary for the purpose of doing so. 2. Can H get out of paying his water rate by not being in reach of water mains? Ans.—No; he must pay the general water rates, but he does not pay water rent unless he uses the water. The term water rate is strictly applicable to the rate to pay the debentures for the construction but is commonly used to denote the rent payable by the users of the water, which rent is applicable to the maintenance of the waterworks in the first instance, and the surplus goes to the general funds of the corporation.

FRIGHTENING CHILDREN.

It Is Cruel and Wicked, and Produces

Bad Consequences. (Prof. James Sully, in Popular Science

Monthly.) Happy those little ones who have ever near them loving arms within whose magic circle the oncoming of the cruel fit of terror is instantly checked, giving place to a delicious calm.

How unhappy those children must be who, timid and fearsome by nature, lack this refuge—who are left much alone to wrestle with their horrors as best they may, and are rudely repulsed when they bear their heartquakings to others-I would not venture to say. Still less would I care to suggest what is suffered by those unfortunates who find in those about them not comfort, assurance, support in their fearsome moments, but the worst source of terror. To be brutal to these small, sensitive organisms, to practice on their terrors, to take delight in exciting the wild stare and the wilder shriek of terror, this is perhaps one of the strange things which make one believe in the old dogma that the devil can enter into men and women. For here we seem to have to do with a form of cruelty so exquisite, so contrary to the oldest of instincts, that it is dishonoring to the savage and to the lower animals to attempt to refer it to heredity. To dwell on such things, however, would be to go back to a pessimistic view of childhood. It is undeniable that children are exposed to indescribable nisery when they are delivered into the hands of a consummatery cruel mother or nurse. Yet one may hope that this sort of person is exceptionalsomething of which we can give no account save by saying that now and again in sport nature produces a monster, as if to show what she cou'd do if she did not choose more wisely and benignly to work within the limitations

TO BE LASHED. Windsor, Ont., July 17.—Isaac Elford, postmaster of the Elford office, whose daughter was assaulted by Wm. Rowe, a book agent, who made his headquarters at Elford's home, refuses to let his daughter marry Rowe, as she is only 12 years of age. Judge Horn sentenced the prisoner to imprisonment in Kingston Penitentiatry for four years at hard labor and twelve lashes, to be given with the cat-o'-nine tails, the first administration to be at the end of two years and the rest when broad effect which women have striven so hard to obtain. And after hours of toil with dumb-bells and bicycle and all manner of athletic sports, would any woman wear sleeves that made her look narrow? No, indeed. She puts on those tight sleeves, because Dame Fashion says she must, but she covers them with rows of puffs or ruffles until in size they match those to which she has bidden

The heavy materials must naturally be made into puffs, but in the lighter materials her heart revels. Row after row, and ruffle after ruffle may be piled on, until the very breezes of summer are bewitched and play a game of hide and man who has a right to expect, and seek through them.

The gown in the picture is of straw colored organdy over green satin. The sleeves finish at the elbow with a band of satin. The green yoke is surmounted by a ruche of organdy. The sleeves proper have three ruffles, and an additional two ruffles cross the shoulders and meet in a point at the centre of the bodice. She who would travel comfortably must have a soft cap to wear in the train or on the boat. A judicious expenditure of these shining coins will greatly facilitate progress on a journey.

Prudent persons always make provisions for their meals before they undertake a journey. If dining-room cars are on their trains they rest content with the prospect of well-served dinners. Otherwise they lay in a supply of paraffine paper, Japanese napkins and dainty luncheon morsels such as thin sandwiches and fruit. No person who has once had the experience of pausing "twenty minutes for refreshments," or of testing the toughness of railroad sandwiches ever puts herself for a second time in a position where she has to sustain life on them.

The tourist can make herself disagreeable in several ways. She may insist upon having her ideas about light and air dominate her immediate neighborhood to the discomfort of her companions. She may regard the porter as her personal servant and keep him busy upon her errands. She may tell every one near her what they are going to see and she may act as a sort of preliminary human guide book. In these ways she may command the intense dislike of her fellow-travel-

Belt Buckles.

The belt buckle is here in all its glory. The latest in the way of an inexpensive buckle is of filigree silver set with imitation turquoise. This, fastened to a beit of white silk, is very fetching. Filigree silver is also used with enamelling. One new buckle shows a deep-blue enamel heart framed in filigree silver. The jewelled buckles are works of art. Many of them are studded with gems. One given as an engagement present to a belle showed a natural-appearing wild rose in pink enamel with the curled petals glistening with diamond dew drops. This exquisite flower was fastened to a belt of pale pink silk. Belt buckles of yellow gold twisted into the form of a coiled snake are considered fashionable. The snake's eyes are precious stones.

Soaps for the Face. "There are few soaps that one can risk using on the face, and even soap will not remove grime as well as the least bit of cocoa butter. You should be able to get it at any drug store, but be careful that it is not rancid, and get only a small quantity at a time, as it is best to have it

"If you want to test its cleansing powers, put a little of the cocoa butter on a soft cloth rag after you have washed and dried your face, wipe off your face with this and you will see by the blackened cloth that it does its work more thoroughly than soap and water. It softens the skin and unlike other oils, leaves no traces of greasiness behind it." and porcelain crowning. Dr. ZIEGLER, 192 1-2 Dundas street.

GETTING FAT IN PIVE MINUTES An Amusing Trick Invented by One of the Ravel Pantomimists.

One of the most amusing and astonishing of pantomime tricks ever originated was that of a fat man, says Pearson's Weekly. This was done by the Ravels. One of the actors in the pantomime sits at a table and ravenously eats dish after dish of food that a servant brings to him. Presently the man, who, like most ravenous eaters, was rather thin and scroggy, begins to grow plump. His clothes fit him exactly. His waistcoat steadily swells out under the very eyes of the audience. All the while he is eating like a sausage machine. In a few moments he has grown to be a giant, eight or nine feet tall, and with the proportions of an inflated balloon. The sight always brings forth roars of laughter. It is comparatively easy to produce it after you know how. The food eaten is all "property food," and is made of tissue paper, that the actor chews up into little bits and takes out of his mouth whenever occasion offers. His clothes are all of rubber, and made to fit airtight around the wrists and neck. In sitting down he puts the heel of one boot over a little trap in the stage; an assistant immediately couples a tube running from a pair of bellows to hole in the boot heel; then he blows him up. It must be a rather unpleasant sensation to the actor to feel that he is nothing more than a wind bag, but actors are made to suffer. By the time the suit has grown to its full size the wind supply is cut off and the boot heel plugged up. Then, by an ingeni-ous arrangement of springs under the actor's feet the height is acquired.

Don't you know that Hood's Sarsaparilla will overcome that tired feeling and give you re-newed viger and vitality?

Wyoming Indians on the War Path-Military Help Asked For.

Washington, D. C., July 17.-The Secretary of the Interior today received the following telegram, from Gov. W. A. Richards of Wyoming, dated July 15: "Have just received a telegram dated Marydale, Wyoming, stating that nine Indians were arrested, one killed and others escaped. Many Indians are reported here threatening lives and property. Immediate action on your part is absolutely necessary. (Signed.) Frank H. Rhodes, justice of the peace." Gov. Richards states that he has received other advices, representing the situation as serious. The Indians are Bannocks, from Fort Hall, Idaho, arrested for illegal and wanton killing of game. Gov. Richards asks if the secretary can take immediate action for the protection of the settlers.

Montreal Physicians Beginning Largely to Prescribe a New Remedy. Montreal, July 15.-There is still a good deal of talk here among all classes over the recent dispatches which appeared in so many Canadian papers, relative to the cure of Mr. G. H. Kent, of Ottawa, from Bright's disease. Although the merits of the case have not been openly discussed at any of the meetings of the medical society, there has been a good deal of private conference, and the impression which the report of the recovery has made is evidenced in the fact that a good many physicians have prescribed Dodd's Kidney Pills in their private practice. No higher testimony than this could be given to any remedy, the reluctance of medical men to admit any good in proprietary medicines being well known. KILLED HIS MAN.

A man in Washington who has for years made a practice of gathering personal anecdotes of veterans of the war, both of the Northern and Southern services, once asked a friend, who fought all through the war, if he had ever killed a man that he positively knew of. "Yes," said he, remorsefully, "one." At Bull Run I ran at the first fire. A rebel chased me ten miles, and was then so exhausted that he dropped dead.

The horses became frightened about two miles from the town and the occupants were thrown out of the vehicle. MURDERS FOR INSURANCE.

The discovery of the bodies of the Pietzel children in the cellar of a Toronto cottage unfolds a tale as pitiful as it is shocking. There have been many startling murders for insurance recently, but the crime unearthed in Toronto has no paratiel for its heartlessness and diabolical ingenuity. The murderer, H. H. Holmes, conspired with one F. B. Pietzel, of Galloway, Ill., to defraud the Philadelphia Mutual Insurance Company of $10,000. Pietzel's life was insured for that amount, and it was arranged that he should disappear and that a corpse, to be obtained from a New York doctor, should be identified as that of Pietzel by the latter's wife, who was privy to the scheme. The insurance money would revert to the scoundrels, Pietzel and Holmes. In September, 1894, Pietzel was actually found dead in a house at Philadelphia, having been burned beyond recognition during the night. Mrs. Pietzel and her children swore that the body was that of Pietzel, though ignorant of the awful truth, and believing that the husband and father was in hiding and would reappear at a safe time and place. There is now no doubt that he was murdered by Holmes. The latter took charge of the three elder Pietzel children-Alice, aged 13; Nellie, aged 11; and Howard, aged 9-on the pretense of conveying them to their father. The mother promised to follow quietly, in order to avoid suspicion. She was assured by Holmes that she should meet her huspand in Toronto. Holmes, knowing that the non-appearance of his victim would arouse Mrs. Pietzel's suspicions, conceived the appalling idea of murdering the mother and children to hide the crime. The boy was undoubtedly killed in Detroit, though the remains have not yet been found, and on Oct. 26 the other innocents had their graves dug by the fiend in the Toronto cellar. The mother, in the fond expectation of meeting her husband and children, had meanwhile arrived in that city. Heart sick from hope deferred, she left Toronto for her home in Burlington, Vt., whither she was secretly followed by Holmes. When Mrs. Pfetzel's home was searched a can of dynamite was found under the stairway. It is believed that Holmes placed it there with the intention of destroying Mrs. Pietzel. But the avenger was already on his heels. A companion in crime named Hedgespath, a train robber, had assisted in the insurance fraud, though unaware of the murder. Having failed to secure a share of the plunder Hedgespath confessed the plot to the police. Detective Geyer followed Holmes, and after placing him behind the bars instituted his search for the Pietzel children, which has ended in a success so sad. Mrs. Pietzel is under arrest for her share in the fraud, but she has been terribly punished. The light has been turned on Holmes' dark past and revealed other deeds which may bring him to the scaffold before Canadian justice can reach him. Murders for insurance have become alarmingly numerous, but their very frequency will result in the exercise of such caution by insurance companies and such activity by the law that the ### crime will be speedily stamped out. CHINESE AS IMPORTS.

The Act of the Canadian Parliament which put Chinese in the list of dutiable imports went into operation on 20th August, 1885, as to arrivals by vessels from ports in North America, and on 1st January, 1886, as to arrivals by vessels from ports elsewhere. Almost immediately after the act went into force the administration of it was assigned to the Department of Customs, and in March, 1893, it was transferred to the Department of Trade and Commerce. The last report of Minteter Ives shows that in the nine years 1886-94 the total number of Celestials entered at Canadian ports was 12,457. of whom 12,193 paid duty. The total amount of collections was $624,678, upon which there was refunded $4,450, and the total cost of collection was $19 .-279 31. The net revenue from the source sum there was paid to the Provinces $150,175, or about one-fourth of the net Tevenue, as their share of the capitation tax. In the nine years covered by these statistics 6,764 Chinese took out certificates of leave, or registered for leave, and we are told that a very lerge number have left the country without registering and without any intention to return. SOME INTERESTING FIGURES. Whatever other business may be languishing in Canada, the manufacturers of proof spirits and of tobacco would appear to be flourishing. At any rate the official statistics of Trade and Commerce indicate an almost steady growth. The following table shows the amount of revenue accrued during the five years 1890-94, under the excise duties:

Spirits. Tobacco. 1890 ..... $4,620,393 $2,499,832 1891 ..... 3,546,942 1892 .... 3,876,677 3.056.170 1893 .... 4,142,057 3,138,396 1894 ..... 4,133,638

Totals ..... ..$20,319,707 $14,386,056 The pinch of the hard times seems to have told a little upon the consumers of spirits for two or three years, or perhaps it is that the progress of the temperance sentiment in the country has had its effect. But the men who pay the tobacco taxes are either growing more numerous very rapidly, or they are consuming the weed in considerably larger quantities. The baleful cigarette, in spite of the operation of Sir Oliver's Act in Ontario, is having a big run, the number entered for consumption having risen from 28,990,440 in 1890 to 36,066,600 in 1891, to 40,147,200 in 1892, to 42,870,100 in 1893, to 55,143,500 in 1894—an increase of nearly 100 per cent in four years.

Warm Debate on the Manitoba Matter-Strong Speeches Against the Government's Remedial Order by a Number of Conservative Members-Clarke Wallace Accuses Mr. McCarthy of Always Acting From Mercenary Motives-The Comptroller Repeatedly "Called Down" by the Speaker of the House-Mr. McCarthy's Motion Declared Lost.

(Specially telegraphed by our own Representative.)

Ottawa, July 17.-When the House met today Mr. Foster moved that for the remainder of the session the House should meet at 10:30 a.m., as well as at 3. Mr. Laurier objected, and Mr.

Foster withdrew the motion, On the orders of the day Mr. Casey drew attention to the vacant portfolio of Agriculture, and said that in justice to the farmers it should be filled

Mr. Foster said the department was being administered by a Minister, and the Government should be allowed its

Dr. Landerkin drew attention to a letter he had received from a constituent stating that owing to the drought in the west farmers had to import hay for their stock, and very high prices were charged for freight by the railways, and asked if something could not be done, and cited the case of aid for settlers in the Northwest and other

THE MANITOBA CASE. Mr. Lariviere resumed the debate on the Manitoba school question, and Mr. McCarthy's emendment condemning remedial legislation on the lines of the remedial order. Mr. McNeill (Conservative) read a carefully written statement of his attitude on Mr. McCarthy's amendment. It was drawn, he said, to catch votes and embarrass the Government, and he was not prepared to defeat the Government and bring in men who might force separate schools on Manitoba at once and without delay. If the resolution, instead of being a half-hearted and tricky one, had gone further and condemned any attempt to force separate schools on Manitoba, whether upon the lines of the remedial order or not, he would have supported it. As it was, if he voted for the amendment he ran the risk of getting out of the frying-pan into the fire.

Mr. Mills-When do you expect to get into the fire? Mr. McNeill-I am satisfied it will be a very long time. He proceeded to say that he now regarded Mr. McCarthy as his political enemy, because Mr. had placed a candidate in the field against him. Notwithstanding this he desired to say that Sir Hibbert Tupper's imputation against Mr. McCarthy that he was influenced by the fact that he acted as legal counsel for Manitoba and was disqualified from discussing this matter in the House, was unfounded. Turning to the question at issue, Mr. McNeill expressed himself as desirous of seeing secular teaching interfused with religious instruction, and he believed that the act of 1890 dealt harshly with the minority, but at the same time he would not admit that there should be one rule for Quebec—as in the Jesuits' Estates appeal-and another for Manitoba. Parliament should not be asked to say that the conscientious convictions of the majority should give way to the conscientious convictions of the mincrity. He would be told that the constitution required them to establish separate schools. In reply to this, Mr. McNeill entered into a well-conceived argument to show that the constitution required nothing of the kind. An appeal to Ottawa was conferred on the minority just because the framers of the constitution never intended to declare in the Manitoba Act that separate schools should be guaranteed in perpetuity. The policy of the future was left to the future. Dr. Weldon (Conservative), said 'Hear, hear" to all this, and Mr. Mc-Neill, who was receiving a very attentive hearing on his own side, went on to reiterate Mr. McCarthy's argument that the judicial committee's decision was confined to allowing the right of appeal, and extended no further. It was true that they gave some expression of opinion which their judgment did not call for. "What," exclaimed Mr. McNeill, "are we, the Parliament of Canada, to be bound by the arbiter of four distinguished, very able, very impartial and very ignorant men. Ignorant, I mean, of the condition of this country, and of the circurastances of Manitoba—on a great question, such as this is." Resuming the debate after recess Mr. McNeill said that the question was, after all, reduced to this: "What is best in the interests of the whole?" If Manitoba was approached in a kindly spirit something might be accomplished; but if the Province was at 2 o'clock in the morning.

coerced, no man could tell what would in the morning. coerced, no man could tell what would

CLARKE WALLACE'S VIEWS. Mr. Wallace, the Controller of Cus-toms, followed. He noticed the claim of Mr. Lariviere that nothing save the restoration of the separate schools system would satisfy the minority, and declared that the proposition would not meet with acceptance in this House or in the country. He dwelt on the sparse settlements of Manitoba, and how difficult it would be to maintain two sets of schools. It was no use shutting their eyes to the endless trouble and difficulty which remedial legislation would create in Manitoba. He therefore approved of the policy of the Government to first see if Manitoba would not do something. Adverting to Bishop Gravel's letter, he asked Mr. Laurier to say what he thought of it.
Mr. Laurier replied, "Ask your col-

Mr. Wallace said he agreed with Mr. McNeill's view as to the character of Mr. McCarthy's amendment, but he disagreed with Mr. McNeill as to the high opinion held of Mr. McCarthy. Wallace charged Mr. McCarthy with being actuated during his whole career in Parliament by mercenary considerations, but was called to order. He continued to refer to Mr. McCarthy's connection with the Northern Railway Company, and the St. Catharines Milling Company, but was again called to order, and shifted his ground to Mr. McCarthy's attitude on the separate schools of Ontario, and concludment. Mr. Weldon, the Conservative member for Albert, N. B., held that Parlia-ment was empowered, but not compell-His own view was that the state should concern itself alone with secular schools, throwing the responsibility for teaching religion on the parents, the home and the church. He agreed with Mr. McCarthy that the mere opinion of the judicial committee of the Eng-lish Privy Council had no bearing on this case. Their decision did net bind anybody in a case of this sort, which was a mere reference, and had no force of law, and it was an impertinence for the judges of the Privy Council in England to attempt to dictate a course for the Parliament of Canada to take.

Sir Richard Cartwright-Hear, hear. Mr. Weldon-These judges do not know this country or the history of this country, and it is perfect folly to say that we must be guided by their utterances, when they have not the force of a legal decision. I am an ardent imperialist, but I cannot look with idolatry upon any utterance of the judicial committee as a sacred Brah-min would upon some writings of his books. He held that it was nonsense to put the appellate clause in the Man-itoba Act. It had no meaning. It was a mechanical copy of the B. N. A. Act, where it had some meaning. In the B. N. A. Act it required the Province of Quebec to pass legislation after Confederation, placing the Protestants of Quebec in as good a position in relation to education as the Catholics of Ontario were in. In the Manitoba Act it was nonsense. Mr. Welden dealt at some length with the question, there a treaty with the settlers of Manitoba?" and after examining the internal evidence came to the conclusion that there was no reference to separate schools in the third, and genuine bill of rights upon which the union with Canada took place. In the debate in Parliament on the Manitoba Act in 1870 there was not a single reference to separate schools. It was not an issue, apparently, and the Catholic majority did not care very much to extend protection to the Protestant minority of 1870. The expectation then was that the settlement on the banks of the Red River would always remain Catholic and French. Let them not shelter themselves behind the ramparts of the constitution when there were no ramparts.

Sir Richard Cartwright cried "Hear hear," energetically to this. Dr. Weldon declared that he broke with the Administration because of their declaration of policy last week. (Cheers.)

Mr. Masson rose and began to speak when Mr. Weldon got up, and said that he forgot to say he would vote against Mr. McCarthy's amendment because he was in favor of giving Manitoba an opportunity to settle the question. (Laughter.)

Mr. Masson (Conservative) spoke in avor of separate schools and remedial legislation.

Mr. Davin agreed in the main with the constitutional argument made by Messrs. McCarthy, McNeill and Weldon. The remedial order went too far. He had it on the very highest authority, almost, that the system in vogue in the Territories would be satisfactory to the minority in Manitoba. As the Government said, they had rea-son to believe that Manitoba herself might act. He thought the Government policy a wise one. When the next session comes it would be time enough to discuss the question. A moderate settlement of this question would, he believed, be satisfactory. The proper place to settle the matter was in Manitoba Mr. Cockburn (Conservative) would be prepared when the time came to express his opinion. A time was fixed when a remedial law may or may not be passed. The Government, if they had no information, except what was before the House, were assuming a grave responsibility. If no peaceful solution was obtained before January, then the Government were pledged to remedial legislation. He hoped this contingency would never arise. If any such law or bill is proposed he would be compelled to withdraw his support from the Government. Any law founded on the remedial law would be worse than useless. Mr. Cockburn referred to the delay until January as a short respite. Mr. Costigan, Minister of Marine, said this was the first time the opportunity had come to test any of the guarantees in the constitution. protested against the idea that this was coercion. He was speaking of a treaty. The minority in Manitoba did not demand the restoration of the de fects of the old system of schools. The principle of separate schools had been adopted by the Manitoba Legislature and it was not suggested that they were forcing a new principle upon them. The Catholics would never take up arms for separate schools, but would appeal to the sense of justice of the majority. If the constitution failed them, so much the worse for the country. The debate was in progress a purely secular system of schools. He did not care what the provisions of the suggested remedial law were-it would be almost impossible to enforce it. He looked forward with anxiety to any attempt to enforce a remedial law on an unwilling province. Parliament was not bound to pass any law. He would vote for the amendment.

Mr. McLean (Conservative), of East York, protested against the Government's doctrine that coercion in mat ters educational was a part of the constitution. He regretted the coercion employed in the remedial order.

Toronto, July 17 .- The London Alerts, to their great surprise, were beaten by the Crescents in a well-played game at Hanlon's Point today. Sheere, the London pitcher, was an easy mark for the home team, who pounded him at will, making the nine runs that they scored off his delivery.

In the sixth Carney was substituted, and he was practically invincible, not a run being tallied while he was in the box. Three home runs were made in succession by the Crescents in the fourth.

The Alerts could not familiarize themselves with Sykes' pitching to any extent, and base hits were few and far between.

In the seventh Ward replaced Sykes, who showed signs of weakening, and the game was over, as the latter, though wild, was an enigma when he did not get them over the plate, striking out four men in the two innings. Both teams fielded well, but the Crescents player the snappier game. Score: ALERTS.

AT BISLEY-CANADIAN SCORES. London, July 17.—The following are the scores of the Canadian riflemen in the Stage The Maple Leaf baseball team, of Organization competition, 500 yards, at the meeting of the National Rifle Association at

Bisley today:
Mitchell 32, Rolston 32, Armstrong 32,
Broadhurst 32, White 34, Hayhurst 34, Anderson 34, Simpson 29, Boville 29, Wynne 29, Spearing 33, Chamberlain 24, Morris 30, Mercer 28, Meadows 28, Tink 25, Bent 31, Bissell 31, Skedden 31, Nutting 26. Nearly all the Canadians has won prizes ranging to $25 for their shooting in the Queen's prize and other competitions.

WONDERFUL SHOOTING. London, July 17 .- In shooting off the ties for the Daily Graphic prize Skedden scored a bull's eye at every shot. Four of the English competitors made the same score, and the final shooting off was postponed until tomorrow. It is the general opinion among experts and others who witnessed the shooting for the prize that the marksmanship was the most wonderful seen in many years. Among the scores made by the Canadian riflemen in the Graphic contest are these: Boville, 34; Mitchell and Meadows, 33; Nutting, Spearing, Morris, Simpson, Bent, 32 each; White, Rolston, Mercer, 31 each; Tink, Wynne, 30 each; Armstrong and Chamberlain, 29 each; Anderson, 28. In the scurry contest, fourth series, Simpson, with a score of 24, won a money prize. For the Marine Challenge Cup, seven shots each at 200 yards. Havhurst scored 31; Simpson, 30; Russell and Tink, HONORS FOR A HAMILTON MAN. Bisley, July 17.-Color-Sergt. Skedden, of the Thirteenth Battalion, Hamilton, today achieved the honor of winning the Daily Graphic cup. Coupled with Skedden in the finals was a Scotchman, who was a magnificent marksman. As the shooting progressed the excitement became intense, and when the last shot was fired that crowned Skedden, he was heartily con-gratulated on all sides, but mostly by his comrades of the Canadian camp. In the final tie Skedden and his opponent each scored three bull's eyes in consecutive order, and with his last shot Skedden again hit the center. His opponent was not so lucky, however, the marker quickly indicating that his shot was an "inner," but very close to the rim of the center disc.

The best scores made by Canadians at the 800 yards range for the St. George's challenge vase, were as follows: Mitchell, Skedden and Boville, 30 each; White and Armstrong, 29 each; Broadhurst, 27. It is likely that nine members of the tam will qualify to shoot at the 800 yards range in the St. George's contest.

Lieut. Boville, of the 43rd Battalion, goes into the second stage of the Queen's prize. The average winnings of the Canadian team up to date are ahead of the corresponding period of last year. In the Martini-Henri scores of the ladies' prize Capt. Russell made a possible 35. BOWLING.

Major Hughes (Conservative) had no objection to the children in the schools being taught French as well as Englis, and Scandinavian and German or Gaelic, but he was opposed to religious instruction in the schools. It was now in his opinion clear that they were not to get down on their knees to half a dozen judges in England. They were to have six months of a breathing spell, and when the bill came up he would certainly join with anybody in showing that they did not believe in coercing Manitoba. He did not believe in putting Mr. McCarthy in power, and, therefore, would vote against the amendment. Mr. Laurier reminded the House that they had heard a great deal of fine spun argument as to the constitution and judgments, but after all his advice of two years ago to ascertain the facts was valuable advice, and the Govern-ment would have done well to have ob-tained an authoritative decision as to the disputed questions which had been asserted and denied in this debate. Then there were questions as to whether certain places could contain separate schools, and there were other considerations. He did not want power on this question. He did not feel called on at this moment to deal with the polcy of the Government. Everybody believed that this question should be and shall be settled by the people of Mani-toba themselves. He hoped so, even if difficulties such as the remedial order had been placed in the way. He hoped at all events never to live to see the day when parties should be divided into Catholic and Protestant, opposed as it was to his idea of building up the Canadian people. He would vote against the amendment. After Col. O'Brien had supported the mendment the motion was put and declared lost.

A division was called for by Mr. Mc-Carthy. It required five members to demand to call in the members. McCarthy stood up and was joined by Mr. O'Brien, but none save these two would join in the demand and the motion was declared lost.

Heaven will be inherited by every man who has heaven in his soul.

THE FORTIETH Annual Communication of the Masonic Grand Lodge.

Election of Officers and Grand Master's Address.

Toronto, July 17 .- At the meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge M. W. Bro. W. R. White, Q.C., of Pembroke, grand master, in his annual address, said: "The year has been marked by no Masonic event of importance. I have not been called on to decide any question of great moment. Our relations with other Grand Lodges have been most cordial, and, within our own jurisdiction, I think I am safe in saying that scarcely a ripple of discord has disturbed that peace and harmony which seems to have become the normal condition of this Grand Lodge, I am pleased to be able to say that the record for this year as set out in the reports of the D. D. G. M.s of the different districts shows an ever increasing interest in the work and a healthy condition generally existing among the private lodges.

"The best possible evidence of the healthy condition of the order is the number of new lodge rooms I have been called upon to dedicate during the year -all of them comfortable, convenient, and, in some cases, luxurious homes for the craft during labor and refresh-

"While upon this subject it may not be out of place for me to suggest that in most of the cities and large towns in the jurisdiction efforts should be made to acquire property in business localities, and by means of joint stock companies or otherwise, erect suitable buildings. The income that could be derived from the portions of the buildings rented for business purposes ought to, in most cases, in time, pay for the buildings, or, at all events, pay good interest upon the investment.

"On the question of abolishing representatives to other Grand Lodges, while there may be strong arguments in favor of such a course, it must be borne, in mind that they cost us nothing, and may be both useful and ornamental. me in, I will endeavor to commit no At all events, they form a sentimental such mistakes as will send joy into the link in the chain of fraternal courtesies that are constantly being exchanged between our Grand Lodge and other friendly grand bodies. An attempt will be made to settle the much-vexed question of the residence of a candidate; let us hope it will prove suc-

"Representations have been made to office is becoming prevalent in both private lodges and Grand Lodges, and, having been convinced, through developments made in an appeal against the election of an officer in a certain private lodge, that the most open and unblushing canvassing had taken place in that particular instance, I deem it my duty to condemn as strongly as possible any such practice. Friends may speak well of one whose merit and ability entitle him to be promoted to office in either private lodge or Grand Lodge. But the pledging of brethren to vote one way or the other, and all the wiles and dodges so well known to the politician, are utterly foreign to the genius and spirit of Masonry, and should be most emphatically frowned upon and discountenanced by every true Mason. Let us hope, for the credit of the Grand Lodge, as well as private lodges, that this evil does not exist to any alarming extent, and that the representations made to me are either without foundation or somewhat exaggerated. In regard to official visits the grand master says: "A very pleasant feature of some of these gatherings was the presence of large numbers of ladies, especially at Kingston, at the centennial celebration of the Ancient St. John's Lodge; at Landon, at the Masonio conversazione, and at Windsor and Pembroke on the occasion of the dedication of their new halls. An equally noticeable, and, to me, a most gratifying feature, was the almost total absence of wines and other intoxicants at the festive gatherings-strong proof, if it were needed, that the Masons may be safely left to deal with this question without the necessity of any arbitrary legislation by Grand Lodges."

In today's meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge a long discussion took place on a resolution presented by Mr. John Ross Robertson to the effect that:

"Neither is it lawful for any private body to permit any brother or brethren hailing from a foreign jurisdiction to illustrate, practice or admin-ister within the precincts under any circumstances whatsoever other than the authorized work of the Grand Lodge, and that where that work is authorized in the jurisdiction, the same be confined to the meeting-place of lodges having permits."

The motion was defeated. The election of officers will take place

LAURIER'S CREAT SPEECH-He Explains What Is Not Courage.

In the course of his speech in Parliament on the Manitoba school, question,

Mr. Laurier said: Mr. Speaker, two years ago, speaking upon this question when it came before the House for the first time, I stated then that in my estimation there was no doubt whatever as to the power of interference by the Government. I stated then that, reading the history of the constitution, reading the history of clause 93, there could be no doubt whatever in the minds of any disinterested persons that there were powers of interference in the constitution laid down by that section. I stated then that the question which was to be solved was not a question of law but simply a question of facts; facts to be ascertained in order to lay down the law. That was my policy then. I stated it at the time without fear. It was not heeded, it was not accepted, but as it was not heeded-Mr. Foster—Will my honorable friend permit me to interrupt him a moment? Mr. Foster-Will my honorable friend Some honorable members-Order. Mr. Foster-Just for one moment

Did I understand my honorable friend to say that when he made the statement here that it was a question of fact and not of law, that that was his policy on the question?

Mr. Laurier-I stated then that it was my policy on the question. Mr. Foster-It is difficult to see how that is a policy. Mr. Laurier-I stated then that the power of interference existed, I stated that if the grievances laid down by the Catholic minority were true, that the schools were Protestant, there were not heeded, however; I did not expect that from the honorable gentlemen; but as my advice was not heeded. I folded my arms and I waited for the honorable gentlemen to be wiser, and to give us their policy, a thing they have failed to do ever since-(cheers)-and, sir, because they have failed to do it ever sine, and because I would not speak my own policy, having given it once, until they showed a better policy themselves, they have been ever since doing me the honor of insulting me every day in their press as wanting in courage. Well, sir, to be wanting in courage is a grave fault, I admit. But if to make promises and not to implement them is courage, if to make threats and to quail before their consequence is courage, if to be boisterous in language and meek in action is courage, if to pass an order and refuse to execute it is courage, if to act in such a manner as to force your best friends to the conviction that you are deceiving them is courage, there is a class of courageous men on the treasury benches before us, men such as we have not seen for a long time. (Cheers.) Sir, courage is a noble thing in itself, but foresight is not to be despised either. Foresight is not to be despised in such a country as this, with all its conflicting elements. My courage is not of the kind of the courage possessed by the honorable gentlemen opposite, I admit. My courage is not to make hasty promises and then to ignore them. My courage is to speak slowly but, once I have spoken, to stand or fall by my words. Courage is a great thing, no doubt of it. When the 600 men of the Light Brigade charged the Russian guns at Balaclava they gave to the world such an example of courage as the world seldom saw; but a French officer, high in command, Marshal Bousquet, if I remember aright, who happened to be on the battle field. said: "C'est beau, mais ce n'est pas la guerre". It is splendid, but that is not Yes, those 600 men, when they rushed into the furnace of iron and fire, and when they courted death with such sublime indifference, covered the British arms with a halo of fame which shall move the hearts of all men so long as daring, courage and cool bravery continue to be admired by all men. I am not aware that Pridish generalship shone very brightly on that day. Those 600 men, when they rushed into the fight, as they did, for the sake and for the honor of England, will live and live forever, but the name of the commanding general is already lost in oblivion. Sir, I have no doubt whatever it would be an easy thing for me to commit some glorious, some chivalrous blunder, which would earn for me the plaudits and the fame and the praise and the glorification of honorable gentlemen opposite and their press as well. But I tell them I care no more for their praise than I am afraid of their taunts, for so long as I am here occupying a position which the confidence of my friends has placed me in, I will endeavor to commit no hearts of my opponents and dismay into the ranks of my friends. And when the day comes when I shall walk into the battle I hope that I shall perform

God helping me, without any weakness, either. (Cheers.) But I am not in the battle today. No, the battle is there (pointing to the treasury benches).

the raging conflict. Let those honorable gentlemen opposite unite their discordant elements, let them unite their differences into a policy. them bring down that policy, and then, sir, I pledge myself here that if it commends itself to my judgment I will give it all my support.

ACTION NEEDED. I say again what I have said before grounds sufficient for interference. I more than once, that I have no desire said so at the time. My advice was that my party should walk into power over the Manitoba schools question. Let honorable gentlemen opposite settle that question. I will be most happy to give them my support, but the must settle it in some other manner than they have tried heretofore. Something must be done, and done at once, because this policy of delay, this policy of vacillation, is not only paralyzing, but it is fast disintegrating the national life-(cheers)-fast disintegrating the national life, I say, because it is arraying creed against creed and race against race. Something must be done. and done at once. What should be done? I have no hesitation for my part, here speaking my own personal sentiment, to say that I do desire and do wish that the minority in Manitoba may be allowed the privilege of teaching in those schools to their children their duties to God and to man as they understand their duties, as their duties are taught to them by their church. That is my wish. But I do say that if that object is to be restored it is not to be restored by imperious dictation nor by administrative coercion. If that object is to be restored the hand must be firm and the touch must be soft. Hitherto the touch has been rude and the hand been weak Sir, this is my policy. We must build up a nation here. Some honorable gentlemen-Hear, hear.

A LIBERAL POLICY. Mr. Laurier—Yes, honorable gentle-men on the other side may laugh. What else can they do? (Cheers.) What matters it to them if the country is raked by the fire of dissension and discord so long as they keep the places they have at the present time. This is my policy: We must carry out the idea of Confederation; we must have a nation here, we must build up a nation; but if this is to be done we must teach every citizen, no matter what his creed or his race may be, in the prosecution of his rights not to exact the last pound of flesh. We must teach every citizen, in the prosecution of his rights, to make some concessions to the feelings, nay, to the prejudices, of his fellow-countrymen, so that they may not find themselves oppressed by the laws of the country. but, on the contrary, that all in the country may have in their hearts a tutions, a pride in our laws. (cers.) Sir, I belong, I am proud to say, to a party which has always been signalized for its broad view of tolerance and justice to minorities. And when the time comes for the Liberal party to deal with this question, I think I can make the pledge for every member of the Liberal party that we will endeavor to solve that problem on lines that will be found fair, equitable and satisfactory to the minority; on those broad lines of equal rights and justice to all which underlie our constitution. (Cheers.)

It is because we are animated with these sentiments and because I arraign the policy of the Government as a policy of uncertainty, with no ring of truth in it, that I beg to move:

MR. LAURIER'S AMENDMENT. "This House regrets the failure of the Government to deal with the Manitoba schools question in a manner demanded by the best interests of the country, and is of opinion that Ministerial declarations in regard to the question are calculated to prome that the practice of canvassing for There is the seat of contest, there is Canadian people.

On 'Change. Special to C. E. Turner, broker, Masonic Temple, from Kennett, Hopkins Company.

Chicago, July 17.—The market was strong at the opening on renewed damage reports from the Northwest. The Market Record is said to make the decline in spring 10 per cent, instead of 5 per cent, as reported yesterday, but the bears have held prices down in spite of very bullish news. A San Francisco message says the California State report, issued today, claims that the crop will be the smallest ever raised in that State. A number of letters from country grain shippers were shown, in which it was stated that they are sending out hundreds of bids every day, and getting in reply only an oc-casional car of wheat. Flour markets report an improving foreign demand for flour. The situation grows stronger daily, and the market will not long yield to bearish raids.

Speaking of the Alert-Crescent game the Globe says: The Alerts are now practically out of the championship race.—If Carney had pitched the whole game for London there would have been a different tale to tell.—With the London Alerts the loss of the game with the Crescents was a case of a "good thing" gone wrong. They came down primed with the idea that they couldn't lose, but they were speedily shown its fallacy.

The Alerts have signed Steve Dunn, M. Wilson and Fred Barron. Barron and Wilson are pitchers. Steve Dunn was secured in view of the talk of Fred Burton going away.

HOLMES' CRIME.

Little Chance of Hs Going to Toronto for Trial.

Philadelphia Authorities Preparing to Try Him for Killing Pietzell, Father of the Mu: dered Girls.

ANOTHER CHARGE AGAINST

HOLMES. Philadelphia, July 17.—This after-noon District Attorney Graham said there was little chance of Holmes being taken to Toronto to be tried for the murder of the Pietzel girls. He has found evidence, he said, which leads to the conclusion that the body found in the Callowhill street house in this Mansell, of Vancouver, B. C. The bride is city, was Pietzel's, and he is now prean estimable young lady and has married a paring to try Holmes here on the

MRS. PIETZEL TALKS. Chicago, Ill., July 18.—Mrs. Pietzel, who left late last night for Toronto to identify the bodies of the two children in aid of the new Anglican Church fund, at which the following Londoners were present St. Vincent street, taked about her past life and her husband's dealings with Holmes just before leaving. Mrs. Piet-Canon Smith, Rev. G. B. Sage Will Thorn, zel is ill, broken in nealth and mind; Prof. Sherwood and Mr. A. E. Welch. A she believes in the hypnotic influence zel is ill, broken in nealth and mind; exerted by Holmes. Her story was straightforwardly told, and it is impossible to believe, after being for any length of time in her company, that she was either a confederate or accomplice of Holmes in the commission of any of his crimes. "Holmes, whom I had never met," said Mrs. Pietzel, "but once before the death of my husband, seemed from the time he asked me for the care of the children until his final arrest to have a peculiar influence over me. I felt controlled by him. He had a sway over me then that I thought natural, since he had been the intimate friend of my husband. Besides,, my husband had repeatedly told me that I could trust him, that he was a good man, and that he would always be true to us. The children idolized him. There was nothing that he could not do with

"Again and again my husband told me how much he thought of Holmes, and how honorable he was, until I came to the same opinion myself, although at first I did not like the man, and told my husband so, and begged him to have nothing to do with him. I saw my husband last on Aug. 24, 1894. He had gone to St. Louis. He was then heavily interested with Hol-mes. Whatever his enterprises were, they did it together, and I was lying sick with my baby. I could not go to they suspected to be was after that that Holmes told me that the body was not that of my husband—that it was a bogus body made up to look like him, and that if I or the children said anything about it the insurance company would get hold of us and we would be punished severely. "I was very sick, and I loved Holmes. He talked kindly, and offered to take Alice, Nellie and Howard from me and educate them. He said that he would put them to school and pay all expenses. The children loved him, and as I was alone in the world and poor, I let him take them and they went away. At this time and all other times Holmes acted like a gentleman to me. "He constantly kept me under the impression though that I and the children were to be mixed up with the bogus body, which he said was found in Philadelphia. He said that Pietzel was still alive, and that I would see him again when this trouble was over. He wished, though, to save us from arrest, and after the three children were gone I moved about the country. I began to worry about the children. I wanted to see them, and wished to know where they were. Holmes al-ways put me off with the story that I must keep quiet until the detectives stopped their work. "When he took me to Detroit, it was he who registered me there as Mrs. Adams. He told me so when he came up to the room where Bessie, my eldest daughter, and I were. I told him that he did wrong to put my name down incorrectly, but he explained that the detectives mst be kept off the track and that I was protecting my husband by this. I finally heard the children were at Toronto, and Bessie and I and the bady went there alone to search.

After reaching the city I went into a department store on Yonge street to get something for the baby. Just after we came out of the store on the other street I met Holmes face to face. He was cool and unconcerned. He said, Why, I was looking for you. Just wait here a minute while I go in the store. I have something in there which I want to get. I will join you in an instant.' Before I could ask him a question he entered the store. I waited there until the baby began to cry, and then I told Bessie to go into the store and look for him. She did so, but could not find him. Then I went in myself, but could not find him, and I never saw him again."

THE GREAT CHAUNCEY. The American Orator in England-Airs His Views.

Southampton, July 18.-Among the rassengers who were landed here at 7 o'clock this morning by the steamship Paris, of the American Line, was Dr. Chauncey M. Depew. He said, in conversation with a representative of the Associated Press: "I have absolutely no plans or engagements here; but I am greatly interested in the British elections. I think that the overwhelming Conservative majority postpones home rule for at least seven years. There also appears to be an energetic revolt of Liberalism and Democracy from Socialistic tendencies to which they were being committed. Our public men of both parties are almost unanimously home rulers, and our people cannot understand the divisions of the Irish party."

Mr. Depew then spoke at length on the revival of prosperity in the United States, and the crop prospects, and said there was no concerted movement to place any unusual amount of American securities on the English market. He also alluded to the great interest taken in yachting by the American people, and said that while they felt a warm feeling for Lora Dunraven as a gallant and chivalric antagonist, of course they expected to keep the Am-

THE MYSTERY SOLVED

Young Allen Miller Turns Up-Cannot Explain His Doings.

Wolcott, N. Y., July 18 .- The mysterious disappearance of Allen Miller, the young commercial traveler from Clifton Springs, N. Y., who left home on May 1 on ordinary business, and was not heard from again in over two months, has been cleared up. John Milelr, the drummer's father, who lives at Syracuse, returned from St. Catharines last night, bringing his son with him. Every resource in the way of advertising and personal search had been exhausted, and the missing man's friends had given him up for dead, last Saturday the father received a letter from his son written at St. Catharines, and merely stating that the writer was there convalescent and out of funds and asking that money be sent for his return. Miller's story is singular. He remembers leaving home and also has a hazy recollection of passing through Rochester, but from there on his memory is a blank till a few hours before the letter was written. On May 3 a party of Sons of Veterans found a man lying on the sidewalk on Eagle street, Buffalo, with an ugly wound in the back of his head. He had a badge of their order in is buttonhole, so they cared for him, taking him to a doctor's office. This physician saved Miller's life and ultimately his reason. His skull had to be trephined and when finally in a measure he came to himself a fortnight later his identity was lost. There were no papers on his person, and the valuable baggage he had with him was gone.

She shook her head, laughed, and rose with an arch air.

"It is a secret I have kept even from my husband, but if you must have it you must." And rising on tiptoe with a look of merry defiance at the doctor, she whispered something in the visitor's ear. He listened, stared at her a moment, and broke into a genial laugh. "And so this is your secret," he cried. "Well, I know how to respect the secrets of a lady when such respect does not interfere with my duty."

And with a gallant bow he took his leave, expressing the hope that he had not made his call too lengthy. After he was gone Dr. Cameron turn-

CHAPTER XIV.

"She told you that?" cried Mr. ryce. "And you believed her?

"She spoke the truth" asserted his companion—the gentleman whose name we purposely suppressed in the last "You think so?"

"I do. There was something in her tone, whisper though it was, which brought conviction. I do not question her word in the least." "Well, we will see; I did not hear her, and so may be pardoned for having my doubts. I will talk with you again, The play may not be worth the andle, and it may; a few days more will determine." And Molesworth?"

'Is very well as he is." conversation, fragmentary though it is, will show something of the stand which Mr. Gryce was taking in the matter. He had Molesworth unrest, and yet he was not satisfied. Something-was it instinct or experience-told that this affair possessed complications of no ordinary character, and that to a conscientious man like himself there were doubts to be solved and possibilities to be sounded before he could dare proceed against the doctor as against a presumably guilty

The direction which these doubts took was certainly a startling one. He owed this much to himself, and ques-tioned more than once his own safety in thus connecting, however remotely a woman of Genevieve's character and sition with the tragic death of a poor working girl. But the suspicion once entertained, would not vanish at his bidding; and when he found that the great lady stooped to lie about so small a matter as the person who made her gowns (for he gave no credit to whispered assertion she had made in his superior's ear), he was confident that he was more sane than he had sometimes feared, and that the clew he had stumbled upon was worth following, even if there was as yet but little sign of light chead. He was influenced, perhaps, in these conclusions by certain recollections which now recurred to him. In his interview with Celia previous to the return of Miss Gretorex to her home, there had been much talk, trivial talk he had thought then, about a girl who had brought home her young mistress'

"A proud, disdainful person," this Celia had declared in her broken English, "who thought herself too good to show her face to common people, for none of us ever saw her without a veil, and she never spoke. But we tried to make her when we met her in the hall or on the stairs. She carried a big box, and when I saw it or her I got so angry I could only just keep my tongue quiet and no more. But Miss Gretorex had told me to let her in whenever she came, and not to make trouble with her. So I was afraid to treat her as she deserved. But if I knew then that I was to go without notice after all-And so on till even the patient detective had grown weary over what had appeared to be such a foolish waste of

But with the kindred remembrance of what the woman in Mrs. Olney's boarding house had said about Mildred Farley's frequent comings and goings her great box, he did not consider it so foolish now, and only wished he had probed the subject deeper at the time. It was not so late yet, however, but that proper inquiries into the right places would settle the question as to whether these two girls were the same. He had only to pass a word or two with the complaisant butler at Mr. Gretorex's house to learn enough to have the laugh, to say the least, on his somewhat credulous superior. To Mr. Gretorex's house he therefore went. and to Mr. Gretorex's butler he at once addressed himself. He found this person quite ready to talk in his easy, French way.

"Zat girl? I—none of ze help know somezing 'bout zat giri, only Mees Gretorex always was home when she come A veil on ze face? Oui, so zick you no can see if she was black or white.

But she was ver pretty-look good, 'A Sacre! She walk good—proud like a comtesse. She no look at me. One time Pierre try, I try to speak wiz her. It was no good. If she was much deaf she do just so; for she look not to me, she look not to Pierre."

"You're right, count," laughed a voice over their shoulders, "and one of us ain't a bad looking man, aither." It was Peter, who liked a bit of gossip as well as his neighbor, and who now came forward smiling.
"I feel ze compliment, M. Pierre, and it is ver much good for you to say so," retorted the "Count," with a grandiose "It is ze opinion of ze ladies of The butler then winked slyly at Mr. Gryce, and satisfied that he had effectually discomfited the rootman, proceeded to put questions to the detective as to his reasons for the interest he had shown in this girl, which that functionary had wit and experience enough to successfully parry.

Peter helped him; for Peter was a rival of the butler's in more than one field, and in his good-natured way invariably took part against him in any controversy, and it was from Peter that Mr. Gryce finally got the acknowledgment that this young woman, or lady, as he persisted in calling her, usually wore a long, black ulster and made her appearance in the evening.

Now, this was satisfactory. In the closet of Mildred Farley at Mrs. Olney's house there was a long, black ulster, and she, as we know, was accustomed to take her work home even-

"But she didn't have the alster on the last time she called, on, no," continued Peter. "I don't know what it was made the difference, but she looked foine. O now! well I'm tellin' ye I wouldn't have known her at all, at all, but for her ould brown veil and little hand bag. Them wur the same as before, and so was the air of her. Not a word nor the devil of a look for one of us; but being the night of the wedding she got cut o' me head, for sure I had enough else to moind."

The last admission was a surprise, but Mr. Gryce was accustomed to surprises, so he kept quite still; the more so that he saw the butler was about to speak, and he always preferred to glean his facts through the questions of other people rather than his own.

"Zat girl here on Miss Gretorex's wedding night? I zink you was mistake. Pierre. "Mistaken is it I am! when these two hands let her in meseif at the back door. It wasn't only here she was, but it's helpin' Miss Gretorex to dress she it's helpin' Miss Gretorex to dress she was, and devil a minute she had to spare, aither, being just in the nick of time to be any help at all, at all, to her. I didn't see her leave, though."

Mr. Gryce felt his interest cool. Reason told him how improbable it was that this person, with all her mysteries, could have been the grayway bride of colud have been the runaway bride of Julius Molesworth. Even if this house had not been miles distant form the C- hotel where he himself had seen her at 7 o'clock of that same night, the great improbability of her flying from her own nuptials to assist in this very humble capacity at those of another was too manifest for his consideration even. Yet because habit was strong in him, and habit forbade him to leave a subject till he had exhausted it, he putin a word which he thought must settle the matter. "You are an observing man," he remarked to Peter, "and seem to have noticed this girl closely. Was this bag she carried a small, yellow one?" "It was not, thin," that person emhatically shook his head. "It was small, that it was, but not a mark of yellow about it at all. I see it many's the time. It's "And would you know it if you saw it again?"

"I'll not say that, sur; but I could tell if it wur the same kind of one." Mr. Gryce smiled and produced from his capacious pocket the bag which had been found by him in the doctor's phaeton.

"Was it like this one?" he asked, holding it up between the two men, with the initials towards Peter, and the blank side towards the butler. (To be Continued.)

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE

By Ahoghill L. O. L -Sympathy With Brother Brett

At the regular June meeting of Ahoghill L. O. L., No. 230, the following letter of condolence was ordered to be engrossed and forwarded to Bro. Geo.

Moved by Bro. S. Clare, and seconded by Bro. J. Walker, that whereas this L. O. L. No. 230 has learned with profound regret of the sad loss sustained by Bro. Geo. Brett, chaplain of our lodge, in the death of his beloved daughters, and whereas we recognize in the affliction of our brother the over-ruling hand of divine Providence, to whose unvarying wisdom all must bow; be it therefore resolved that we the members of Ahoghill L. O. L. No. 230 wish to convey to you the deep and heartfelt sympathy of the brethren in this your trying ordeal of sorrow and sadness. It would be impossible to express to you in words the profound sorrow that brooded over the brethren of this lodge when they learned of the death of your beloved daughters. Although we may but faintly estimate the severity of your loss, we wish to try to convey in some measure to you our tender sympathy in the dark hour of trial. We recognize the fact that when we are called upon to part from those we love tenderly, it is hard to say "Thy will be done," but we feel sure, dear brother, that if you carry your sorrow to him who was the Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief, you will be given strength to say "He that doeth all things well knoweth best." Just now the clouds of sad bereavement may seem very dark, but there is a silver lining to every cloud. We sincerely hope and trust the Almighty will give you strength to bear with resignation the burden of sorrow in which we most deeply sympathize with you. Signed on behalf of the lodge, J. MACDONALD, Worshipful Master; CHAS. N. PERRIN, Recording Secretary; J. WALKER, Treasurer; S. CLARE, Past Master. The following is a reply to the above letter by Bro. Brett at the regular meeting, July 10: "I desire to express to you my heartfelt gratitude and warmest thanks for the beautiful and comforting letter of condolence which you extended so kindly to me in my recent great bereavement. Death has during the short space of two months visited my earthly home twice and snatched from my loving care two of my beloved children, but I thank God that I know they are only transplanted from this world of parting and sorrow to that heavenly home where there is no more parting or sorrow or death, and where Christ himself doth reign. Again thanking you for your much sympathy, believe me to be, yours fraternally, GEORGE BRETT."

Bay City, Mich., July 16 .- An amusing assault and battery case was tried before Police Justice Kelley yesterday afternoon. A. H. The boy claims that Ingraham slapped and kicked him because he made remarks while the defendant was in the act of kissing a woman through a hole in the fence on the defendant's premises, and that he, in company with another boy, watched him talk with the lady about five minutes prior to the kissing episode. Mr. Ingraham claims he was not connected with any kissing affair, and was talking through this hole in the fence to a boy to whom he promised to give some fireworks left from the Fourth. During this conversation the Trombley boy threw stones at him. He took the boy by the arms and gave him a lecture, but resorted to no rough usage. THE CIRCUS IN CANADA.

Attendance at Both Performances

Barnum & Bailey at St. Thomas-Large To Visit London on July 31.

The city of St. Thomas is ahead of London. It had Barnum & Bailey's Circus, and London will not enjoy the exhibition until Weanesday, July 31. The show goes as far as Montreal, and then works back again, leaving via Port Huron. London is the last place in Canada where they exhibit. But fourteen days' performances are given while in Canada, but during that short period the circus covers a large area of country, enabling thousands upon thousands to witness this gorgeous and unapproachable institution. Yesterday the greatest of shows dwelt in the Rail road City, and both citizens and country people attended the two performances in vast numbers. The immense ampitheater, which incloses the three rings presented a vast sea of faces, on which delight was pictured as act after act was produced. It was an occasion to be remembered by both St. Thomas and the circus people, as it was on the same spot where Jumbo was killed. The tents were pitched near the same place. Many performers and those in unarge of different departments who were present then are still with the show. The street parade is the most striking drawing card. It eclipses anything heretofore exhibited in Canada and the spectacular parade removes any doubt from one's mind about the facts of any statements emade previously. It is impossible to describe the magnitude of Barnum & Bayley's circus. No criticism can be made derogatory to any act performed. Every act and display is new. Not an obsolete act is given by a performer. The circus comes to Canada this year bright and new.

Yesterday through the courtesy of Mr. W. J. Rouse, press agent, an "Advertiser" representative was given an opportunity of securing an advance sight of this marvelous exhibition. It is truly a wonderful education. It is grander and larger than ever. It is the most stupendous organization of the kind in the world. It means the moving of a small town every day for an average distance of 50 miles. The system with which every department is man-aged is superb. A detective force of mine men travels continually with the show. Not a professional crook attempts to visit any part of the grounds. The thefts, such as house-breaking and rocket-picking, are generally the work of local thieves. The Ethnological Congress of Nations As the great feature in the menagerie tent. Groups of all Oriental people are distinguished by painted signs. They all perform their many different dances, etc., and make discordant harmony on peculiar instruments.

animals are an interesting sight, es-pecially the gorilla "Johanna," which is an intelligent animal. The dining tent is another example of the size of the circus. Some 600 people have their meals there. It has been tried and found that in 32 minutes everything can be placed in order and a dinner cooked. The tent can be taken down and every vestige made to disappear in eighteen minutes. The citizens of death. Victoria Park fairly swarmed with lovers of good music last night, when the Musical Society Band tendered a complimentary concert to Mr. Richard Crick, a valued member of the organiation, who leaves with his family today for Australia. To make a fitting farewell to Mr. Crick, the band gave the choicest programme of the season. Every selection was a gem in itself, and under the baton of Mr. Fred Evans was rendered with a brilliancy which drew merited applause. Mr. Crick's trombone solo, "The Death of Nelson," was particularly admired for the masterly way in which it was played. The humoresque entitled "The Jolly Coppersmith" introducing the anvil chorus, was an especially pleasing number, and received a perfect ovation. Mr. St. George's cornet polka, "Souvenir de la Suisse," was a brilliant effort, and showed the splendid control the player had of the instrument from the lowest to the highest register. After the concert the memers assembled in their rooms, when Mr. Evans made a brief address on behalf of the band, wishing Mr. Crick all happiness and prosperity in his new home. Mr. C. R. Tuson, the secretary, then presented Mr. Crick with a purse of silver, and after a pleasant social hour had been spent, the even-was closed with singing "He's a Jolly

THE POLICE MAGISTRATE REFEREED

Good Fellow" and "Auld Lang Syne."

Dashing Wheelmen Have a Big Meet in the Police Court-Two Winners and Four Losers. The ridiculous bylaw passed by last year's City Council which regulates the speed of wheelmen in Victoria Park to only five miles an hour caused a gathering of bicycle riders within the police court railing this morning. It was a regular meet, with Police Magistrate Parke as referee. The point at issue between the wheelmen, however, was not one of records-in fact, there was no point of difference between them. It existed between them as a whole, and P. C. Raiph, who was the other day dispatched for duty to the park. In his rounds he came across many wheelmen on the fine gravel paths. Some of them escaped the officer, but eight dropped at the signal left their names and addresses and passed on. The gait of the majority of the men caught was in the candid opinion of the officer from eight to nine miles an hour, while two he considered were pushing ahead at eleven or fourteen mile clips. When the police officer called the names the wheelmen got up in turn and defended themselves. They mostly considered their speed as not exceeding the bylaw, and thought the officer had very poor judgment. The eleven and fourteen-mile men were represented by counsel, and gave evidence which the magistrate (while not doubting the sincerity of P. C. Ralph), considered sufficient to warrant a dismissal. Four riders were fined $1 each and two cases were enlarged. "Dollar fines do not seem to have the desired effect," said P. M. Parke, in a tone which signified that the price of a fast ride in the park may in the future be doubled. The two young men who were dismissed are prominent members of the London Club, which from its inception has discouraged scorching on city streets and in the park. It may in the future endeavor to have the bylaw repealed, as it is almost impossible to balance, a wheel moving at the rate of five miles an hour-an ordinary walk. The wheelmen of the city consider it preposterous. Emily Wickett, a young girl arrested by P. C. Woolway on a charge of vagrancy, was remanded for a week.
