Legal Decisions

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or another's or who has his subscription or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay up all arrears, of the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

POETRY.

Thought Odors.

Not what we do, not what we say, speaks for us
To fine souls here, or to the Throne of Light,
The words and acts be fair, gods will absolve us
And men distrust, if our hearts are not right.

Our secret aim, our hidden wish or longing,
Our silent thoughts of men or worlds above—
These are the tell-tale forces that come thronging
To point to us as ones to loathe or love.

Our thoughts are odors, and we cannot seal them,
So close with actions but they will creep out;
And delicately fashioned souls will feel them,
And know them sweet or vile, beyond a doubt.

Good deeds fall dead if selfish causes guide them,
Good words fall flat that but from lips have birth;
And eloquent and noble seems, beside them,
The silence or inaction of true worth.

STORY.

A Lucy Shot.

Some time since, when I was a young fellow of six-and-twenty, I was mate of a West Indian trading regularly to Nevis and St Kitts. She was a bark of 350 tons, and her name was the Robert, and she sailed from Bristol. We were on our homeward passage when the incident I am about to describe took place. I must premise we had four passengers, two gentlemen and two ladies; the latter the wife and daughter of a planter, by name Carmichael. The elder lady was about 45, a handsome, gracious sort of woman, such as a planter's wife ought to be, and such as were not uncommon in the days of which I am writing. The daughter was about two-and-twenty; a beautiful girl, with all the bewitching graces and fascinating charms of a true born creole.

We were twenty-one days out from Charleston, and notwithstanding that our bark was by no means a fast sailer, we had made good progress, and were as near as possible in mid-ocean. It was the end of July, and the weather had been of the most glorious description, and very hot; but, after the sultry heat of the tropics, we did not find it oppressive. For two days we had made little progress. The wind had been light and variable and now it is a dead calm. The ship was motionless as far as progress was concerned; but her head was boxing all around the compass. We had awnings up fore and aft; for, when there was nothing to intercept the burning rays of the July sun, the decks were so hot that the pitch boiled out of the seams.

The dinner was over; the sun was slowly sinking in the west, and we had all come on deck, being anxious to get as much air as we could, for the cabin of a sugar ship is rather stuffy. The deep, placid sea was more peacefully calm than I had ever before seen it. Not a flaw, not a ripple, not an undulation broke the tranquil surface of the glass-like sea. Capt. Sarsfield and the two gentlemen, Mr Chessman and Mr Thompson, were sitting on the taffrail smoking their cigars, and reclining in wicker chairs and fanning themselves. At the young lady's feet lay a large Newfoundland dog belonging to Capt. Sarsfield, blinking in the sunlight which came slanting in under the awnings, and now and again looking up into her face and putting out his tongue, as much as to say: 'It's dreadful hot isn't it?'

No one who has not seen a creole girl reclining at her ease can realize the beautiful picture which Julia Carmichael presented as she sat there languidly fanning herself. Apart from the beauty of her features and the fairness of her skin, her figure was almost faultless in its symmetry, in the curve of its lines, and beautiful in its flexible sinuosity. She had, too, that maturer grace, that untrammelled ease, that refined voluptuousness of attitude and movement which are natural gifts of the creole, and which no art can counterfeit. But the crowning charm of all was her sweet and gentle disposition. Mrs Carmichael was a general favorite, but Julia was queen of the ship. Capt. Sarsfield, the gentlemen and the ship's company generally were her devoted slaves.

She had been sitting in silence gazing out on the calm sea. Suddenly she turned her head and spoke: "Capt. Sarsfield," she said, in a soft musical voice, "I think we are going to have a breeze."

"Certainly! By all means my dear young lady. I see no signs of it at present but if you say there is a breeze coming, there is no one on board this ship would think of contradicting you."

"No; but—Capt. Sarsfield!"

"Not another word, my dear lady, Mr Turnbull, see all clear for a breeze."

"Ay, ay, sir," I answered. Forward there! Run up the foremost staysail! there's a breeze coming."

"Mr Turnbull," remonstrated Julia, "you are too bad! You are worse than the captain. What will the men say?"

"Say, Miss Carmichael?—that the admiral has given his orders, and we must obey. So ho! Well there with the halyards. Which side will you have the sheet trimmed?"

"You may trim it to starboard, Mr Turnbull, she replied with great gravity.

"Take a pull of the starboard sheet," I called out. Well, there! belay. What next, Miss Julia?"

"Lower one of the quarter boats, and take me for a row. The sea looks very beautiful and I think it would do me good."

I elevated my eyebrows and said: "What about the breeze, Miss Carmichael?"

"Oh, that will not come yet. After tea will be time enough."

I looked this time at the captain who gave a smiling assent, saying: "If Miss Carmichael will permit me, I think I would like a row, too."

"Certainly, Capt. Sarsfield, with much pleasure." Then turning to me she said: "The captain can have the gig, and I will have the quarter boat."

"Lay aft the watch," I called out, and lower the port quarter boat and the gig. And, carpenter, I went on, "let us have the oars up sharp, Miss Carmichael is going to have a row before the breeze comes."

"Ay, ay, sir," responded the carpenter, and he dived down below in search of the oars.

The two boats were lowered and manned. I took charge of one and the captain of the other.

"Come along, Nep," said Julia, when she had taken her seat. The dog, nothing hot, jumped into the boat and took his station on the prow, as though he was looking out for squalls.

"Pshaw!" exclaimed Mr Chessman, as we pushed away from the ship, "how hot it is!"

"Not so hot as it is at St Kitts," replied Mr Chessman.

"What about the sharks?" replied Mr Chessman.

"There are no sharks in these latitudes, are there?"

"Aren't there! I don't know so much about that," said Capt. Sarsfield. "I have seen sharks in ten west, and even in the channel. So it's more than probable that there are some hereabouts."

"What's that they are saying about sharks?" asked Mrs Carmichael.

"The captain is saying that there are plenty of them in these latitudes," I replied.

"How beautiful the old ship looks!" remarked Julia. "I never saw her to such advantage before."

Meanwhile Nep, after circling about between the boats and the ship had apparently had enough of it and was slowly swimming back to the ship. Suddenly there was a commotion on board, and the second mate took up the speaking trumpet and hailed us:

"Boat ahoy!" he cried. "Get the dog on board; there are two sharks coming down on him!"

"Give away, my lad! Scott is right; I can see their fins. Pull, my bonnies, pull!"

"Here, Nep! Nep!" cried Julia, excitedly.

"But Nep did not hear, or else paid no attention, and swam slowly on.

"Poor thing!" cried Mrs Carmichael.

"He is swimming right into the shark's mouth!"

"Nep! Nep! Nep!" shrieked Julia. "Come back, come back!"

The dog evidently heard her, for he turned and began to swim back.

"Pull, my lads, pull for your lives!" I shouted, "for it will be all up with poor Nep." At this moment, the dog, seeing we were rapidly approaching him, relaxed his efforts. "Nep! Nep! here boy, here!" I cried, excitedly, and he again began to swim towards us.

Capt. Sarsfield had also realized the dog's peril, and the two boats were being urged through the water at racing speed. It was a moment of intense excitement. Julia and her mother sat pale and motionless, with their hands clasped.

The dreadful monsters were about a cable's length from the dog, and were rapidly nearing him; but we were somewhat nearer, and as I thought, we were outstripping them.

"Well done, my bonnies! Hurrah! hurrah! we shall beat them yet!" I shouted.

At this moment a puff of smoke burst from the ship's side. There was a report and a splash in the water. The second mate had loaded and fired one of the arzonades, and the ball had struck at least one of the sharks for when the commotion caused by the shot striking the water had subsided they had disappeared and the water was discolored with blood.

"Bravo, Scott!" I cried, "that was a lucky shot; the right thing to do and done at the right time."

The next minute Nep was alongside and was hauled into the boat, and a ringing cheer came from the men on board and was taken up by us in the boats.

It is not to be supposed that Nep understood what all the cheering was about, but he responded to them by standing up on the thwart and barking vociferously. It was quite evident that he had no idea of what a narrow squeak for his life he had had.

All the Year Round.

Number 724.

I don't know their names—I know only that the house stands across the way and that it's number is 724.

The postman, at long intervals, at the front door, and the milkman and the grocer at the alley gate, are the only callers. Its windows are darkened and a shadow seems always resting upon it.

An old man, paralyzed and almost helpless, and his two daughters, dressed always in sombre black, are the only occupants. With feeble, tottering step the old man wanders about the yard in the dusk of summer evenings, and a black-robed figure is always with him. One palsied arm hangs powerless at his side, but with the other he clings to her for support.

The first bloom of youth has faded from the faces of the sisters and across their foreheads wan lines lie deepening under the tracing figure of time.

And so, from day to day. Days that bluish into life in the east, that tarry long at midday heat, and that are folded again in the black shroud of night. Nothing more.

I can see that the step of the old man grows a little more uncertain as the months go by, and that he leans yet heavier upon these frail, patient shoulders, which have so long been burdened. A careworn, anxious look has stolen into the faces of the daughters and a lamp burns behind those close curtains, sometimes far into the night. Ah, me! it is pitiful this sacrifice of youth upon the altar of stern, thankless duty.

They are all in all to one another—these gentle sisters—and life, and serenity glide past them without a murmur to disturb their stilly dream of existence.

But some say, God help them, the palsied hands of the old man will stare forever up to the pitting sky from the green slopes at Riverside, and the mission of love and duty will have been accomplished.

And then?—God knows.

Time has outstripped them; no chance is left of retrieving that which has gone by, and barren and black life lies before them all untried.

And even as I write the strains of an old hymn float with a strange wistfulness across the narrow space of summer dark, and I catch the words:

"Other refuge have I none,
Hangs my helpless soul on thee,
No kith of mine, you think? No not mine; but somebody's. Somebody's—and the burden of the psalmist reurs with its infinite tenderness and love—that the father of the fatherless is God.—Detroit Free Press.

Grand Descriptive Powers.

The Martyrs have stayed at home all summer, and their friends, Theophilus Borer and his wife came over Sunday evening to tell about their delightful summer trip. "Oh, you ought to have been with us. It was grand. Up in the Adirondacks; they were just grand. The grandest mountains. And the sunsets—oh, they were grand. One evening we saw the grandest sunset, oh, it was grand. Just grand. Oh, but the scenery—grand? Perfectly grand! Talk about grandeur; I never saw anything so grand. The grandest mountains—Grand! Grand! One afternoon a storm came up; our windows looked right out on the storm. It was grand. The grandest sight I ever saw. Our windows looked right out on the lake. You never saw anything so grand. And the mountains—ah, they were grand. We'd just sit there and look out; it was grand. You can't realize how grand it was unless you saw it. It was grand. You can't begin to describe it; you can't describe it at all." At this point the dying Martyrs rouse themselves to assert to this proposition with such an expected and emphatic endorsement that the Borer's are encouraged to believe it is an honest cure, and they "describe" it all over again. During the summer and winter—and in the springtime and along through the autumn months there is a great deal written in denunciation of "descriptive writing," but the fact is we don't have enough of it. There isn't one descriptive letter in 300 that describes anything. There isn't one person in a thousand, home returning from mountain and seashore, who can give any better description of what they have seen than your friends the Borer's.

Everything Goes.

Dr Brown-Sequard is confident that his "Elixir of Life" will restore impaired vitality for a period, but he is not prepared to say that it's effects will be permanent. Same old thing exactly. We never knew of a patent medicine in the tonic line yet that was anything else but whiskey with a new alias. The new wrinkle now seems to be injecting it into the arm instead of the neck, but it puts the spring in the old man's heels just the same. Then he appears to have the same old trouble getting over it. "But don't we believe in the Elixir of Life? Don't we? Yes, verily, son; we believe in the hot water cure, in blue glass, in faith cures, in Christian science, potato in your pocket, water cure, mind cure, Swedish movement, "lojuz doctor," bag of camphor and assafetida round your neck, and rabbit's foot, and do you suppose we're going back on Brown-Sequard's Nary; and shaking the Elixir in the creed; everything goes.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

The Influence of Tobacco.

The "smokers sore throat" is more easily induced by the use of cigars than the pipe. When once it is fully established it is quite incurable so long as the cause that excites it is allowed to continue.

The effects of tobacco on the spinal cord of sympathetic ganglia are often pronounced. An injurious influence on the spinal cord and its nerves would be shown in the production of external insensibility, or in disturbed action of the muscles by convulsion or paralysis.

In the blood, the prolonged inhalation of tobacco produces changes very marked in character. The fluid is made thinner than is natural, and in extreme cases, paler. Insensible instances the deficient color of the blood is communicated to the body altogether rendering the extreme surface yellowish, white and pasty.

The nicotine plays a very important part on the motor fibres of the spinal

When You Need

An Alternative Medicine, don't forget that everything depends on the kind of medicine. For over forty years this preparation has had the endorsement of the best physicians and druggists, and has achieved a success unparalleled in the history of proprietary medicines.

For a rash, from which I had suffered some months, my father, an M. D., recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It effected a cure. I am still taking this medicine as I find it to be a most powerful blood-purifier.—J. E. Coker, Denton, Texas.

"C. H. Hill, Druggist, Evansville, Ind., writes: 'I have been selling Ayer's Sarsaparilla for many years. It maintains its popularity, while many other preparations, formerly as well known, have long since disappeared.'"

"I have always recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla as superior to any other preparation for purifying the blood."—G. B. Kay, Kentville, M. D., Pomeroy, W. T.

neves, and probably on the cord itself. It excites through these structures muscular agitation, followed by temporary suspension of action and paralysis. In the manner tobacco smoke has the property of action on the sympathetic system of nerves exciting them to produce muscular spasms followed by delicate powers. It is from this cause that the organs of organic life are so irritable, sluggish and powerless in confirmed smokers.—Dr B. W. Richardson, in St. Louis Magazine.

Undeceiving the Young.

The San Francisco Chronicle tells a pointed story about the danger of undeceiving the extremely young. The gist of it is this: A little boy goes to go to school and his conscientious teacher thought it well to explain to him that Santa Claus was a myth. The little boy was not exactly satisfied and referred the matter to his papa at home. The father was constrained to admit that what the teacher had said about Santa Claus was true. The boy went away sorrowful to bed; but he returned, and as he held on to the door knob and peeped in with his nightgown on he said, "Well, there's a devil, ain't there, papa; you haven't been filling me up with lies, have you?"

The Future of Electricity.

It would be quite impossible to forecast the future, even for a single decade, with reference to the applications of electricity, even though discovery were ended. The mere expansion of industries already in some degree established will give them an importance which we cannot now estimate. But discovery is not ended, and it is more than probable that results will yet be reached which, although they cannot be at variance with the general doctrine of energy as now understood, will to some extent revolutionize our methods, with corresponding advantages.—Prof. C. F. Brackett in Scribner's.

"There is one error in diet," said the doctor. "Is it in the food for a not very long time; it's certain to result in death." "What is that, doctor?" asked the patient anxiously. "Not eating," said the doctor grimly, and shaking the patient's feeble hand feebly he tottered to the door.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., SEP. 20, 1889.

Dry Weather.

The rain of Thursday morning was the first we have had for nearly four weeks, and though not of any great extent was greatly welcomed.

The Value of Irrigation.

The value of irrigation has received an unusual endorsement the past season, and the lesson taught by the experience gained may well be heeded.

The Exhibition.

The time of opening the exhibition is rapidly drawing near, and from present indications we are inclined to predict a successful show.

The Crops.

As the farming season draws to a close and the husbandman gathers in the various crops of hay, grain, fruit and vegetables, the operations of the year prove to be abundantly successful.

Vacation Jottings.

THE LONDONDERRY IRON WORKS—A VISIT AT THE BLAST FURNACE—AN INDUSTRY OF WHICH NOVA SCOTIA SHOULD FEEL PROUD.

Some time near the beginning of my vacation notes I promised our readers an account of the iron works at Acadia Mines. I hardly feel as though justice can be done them for, but in order to make good my promise, I will attempt it.

Since having taken my trip underground, I can now say that I have been through all the various departments of the iron works located at Londonderry. I have learned much of this great industry and there is much I would yet like to learn.

Through the kindness of Mr T. H. Guest, whom I have before mentioned, I was shown through the blast furnace, rolling mill, machine shop and foundry.

THE BLAST FURNACE. The blast furnace, now in operation, was rebuilt last year on a more modern plan than that of the old one, under the careful supervision of Mr C. P. Perin, the efficient manager of this department.

My visit at the furnace was in the evening. The molten iron as it runs from the furnace is a very pretty sight. It makes the casting shed very hot, at the same time making the building as light as day, the reflection of which can be seen for miles around.

On another occasion when I was at the furnace I went up to the top by means of the elevator. A splendid view is here obtained of the town. Here the ore, which a few days before I saw away down in the bowels of the earth, was being dumped into the furnace with coke and limestone.

Merry Wedding Feils. The marriage of Miss Mary Matthew Elizabeth How, youngest daughter of the late Dr. How, of King's college, to John Donaldson, of Port Williams, was celebrated at Christ church, Windsor, on Thursday morning, Sept. 12th, at nine o'clock.

The Halifax dry dock, has been completed and was formally opened yesterday. The dock, the building of which has been agitated for half a century, is the largest and best in America and probably in the world.

THE HOME OF EVANGELINE—THE SITE OF THE OLD FRENCH CHAPEL AND THE FORGE OF BASIL, THE BLACKSMITH—FRENCH RELICS.

Probably there is no other spot in the Lower Provinces, or even in British North America, that has attained such a world-wide popularity as has Grand Pre. Since the publication of Longfellow's "Evangeline," this locality has been steadily growing in interest and popularity with the travelling public.

REMAINS OF OLD CELLARS and building sites abound. It is in this neighborhood that the largest number of old French apple and willow trees are to be found, and every indication points to this spot as a centre of the French settlement.

WELL WATER.—The common well is the most undesirable source of all. If it is deep enough to strike a living spring of water, and removed from all sources of contamination, it may be unobjectionable, but these conditions are rarely met with in the country, and we may say never in large towns or cities.

AN OLD FRENCH WELL. Which was cleared out only a few years ago. In this well was found a number of iron articles, which have been carefully preserved and are now in the possession of R. R. Duncan, Esq., of Grand Pre. This is the locality where the chapel is supposed to have stood and the old burying ground was near it.

SITE OF AN OLD GRIST MILL. The remains of the old pond, dam and wasteway are plainly to be seen, but the pond is drained, the dam worn down, and the wasteway nearly level with the surrounding ground, yet sufficiently marked as to leave no doubt as to its former use.

FRENCH RACE-COURSE leading from the shore northwardly, originally laid out six rods wide, which is an excess of four rods over any other road on this dike. At what time this dike was first enclosed remains a secret which cannot be divulged.

Press Notices. Miss Peabody is one of the most talented and accomplished readers in Maine, and her readings are always a delight.—London Gazette.

I will sell balance of my Spring Stock at cost for cash down, by the yard or made up. Now is your chance for bargains. This sale to continue only 29 DAYS. No trouble to show goods.

Yours very truly, WALLACE, THE TAILOR. Wolfville, June 2d, 1889.

The apple tree was afterwards known as the grave tree. They were both cut down by James Leard, Esq., the present owner of the land, many years ago, but he is able yet to point out the spot with certainty to those who desire to see it.

THE OLD FORT STOOD near this spot, but where no one can tell. The whole history of the place previous to the occupancy of the English is shrouded in mystery and must of necessity remain so.

WE regret to learn that Dr S. T. Rand, the aged Mic-mac missionary, is seriously ill at his home in Hantsport. We trust he will have the sympathy and assistance of many friends.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., SEP. 20, 1889.

Local and Provincial.

YESTERDAY'S EUROPE.—Dr. T. H. Rand and lady were among the passengers of the Allan steamer Nova Scotia from Halifax on Tuesday. They are to spend a year in Europe.

CABBAGE.—We notice a fine lot of Dartmouth cabbages just in at Bishop's grocery. We tender thanks to Mr. Pater for one of the largest and best we have ever seen.

Go to Payzant's for Dentistry.

PROPERTY SALE.—We understand that Major Casak has sold his fine property in this place to R. M. Rand, Esq., for $5,000. This is one of the finest properties in the county and we congratulate Mr. Rand on securing it.

Try Shredded Codfish, Choice Table Butter, 20 cts.

MAMMOTH TOMATO.—Dr. Chipman of Grand Pre, has laid on our table a mammoth tomato, raised by A. McN. Patterson, Esq., in his garden at Horton Landing, which measures 17 inches in circumference and weighs 1 1/4 lbs.

Pears, Corns, Tomatoes, Blueberries, Clams, Mince Meat, 15 cents. R. PRAT.

GOOD ORCHARD.—One of the best orchards in this vicinity is that of Mr. Albert Mitchell, of Wolfville. Eight years ago it consisted of laurel bogs and swamps; now he has a fine young orchard just coming into bearing, some of the trees capable of producing four barrels of fruit.

Best Lime, $1.50 per Cask. R. PRAT.

BIG APPLE.—A representative of the ACADIAN was shown a Gravenstein apple one day last week which measured 1 1/2 inches around and weighed 19 oz. It was grown in one of the fine orchards on Grand St., and is claimed to be the largest apple of this variety ever grown in the county.

TENDERS.—We would call the attention of our readers to the call for tenders for the excavation and laying pipe for our water supply in another column. Here is a chance for some of our people to get a good job. We understand the commissioners intend to rush the work as far as possible this autumn.

A full line of Brushes of all kinds at WALTER BROWN'S.

OUT OF SEASON.—This has been a curious season. Fruit and vegetables have come down in an unusual size and fruit trees have blossomed late in the summer. The latest curiosity comes in the shape of late strawberries. A correspondent from Acadia Mines writes us that Miss Vera Lawrence, of that place, found a number of wild strawberries one day last week, which were as red and natural as in early summer.

BEST ON EARTH.—The new Wire Clothespin at R. PRAT'S.

KENTVILLE.—Being in Kentville the other day we were courteously shown around by Mr. J. E. Woodworth, editor of the Western Chronicle. We inspected the fine company's rooms and were greatly pleased with what we saw. The company have two nice rooms, well fitted up, and are well equipped with necessary articles to extinguish fires. Their new hose-reel is a beauty. The reading room in the rear is very tastefully fitted up and is a credit to the town. When will Wolfville be equally well supplied?

Front 5 and 10 cent Cigars in town at R. PRAT'S.

TEAMETINGS.—The teameting held by the Division at White Rock Mills on Wednesday last week was a decided success. The day and evening were pleasant and a goodly number attended and spent a pleasant time. The neat sum of $100 was realized after paying expenses. This amount is to be devoted towards finishing the temperance hall at that place. The teameting held at Gaspereau on Wednesday evening was a very successful affair. The attendance was very large and ample tables were provided and liberally patronized. The handsome sum of $217 was taken and the teameting was repeated last evening.

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Paron's Plaster. Price 25 cents. Sold by Geo. V. Rand.

$2.75 DND $2.50.

Men's Waukenphast, $2.75.
Men's Congress, - $2.50.
Men's Balmorals, $2.50.

ARE THE BEST VALUE IN TOWN!

We have never had anything to equal them. Ask to see those lines at

BORDEN'S, - - WOLFVILLE.

We close our store every Thursday evening at 6 o'clock. C. H. B.

Local and Provincial.

COIT SOLD.—Rupert Wickwire has sold his black filly, three-year-old, by Confidential Charley, to D. B. Shaw, Esq., the price paid was $100.

TWO OLD MEN.—Hon. Samuel Chipman, now 99 years of age, was in Kentville yesterday, and called upon his old friend and former colleague in the House of Assembly, Mr. Daniel Moore, 89 years of age, who is seriously ill. The meeting between the two old friends was very affecting. Western Chronicle.

MISSION ROOM, GRAND PRE.—The services next Sunday, Sept. 22d, at the Mission Room will be at eleven a. m. and will be taken by the Rev. J. O. Ruggles, M. A. The services at the Parish church of St. John, Wolfville, on Sunday next, will be at three p. m. and will be taken by the Rector. The appeal of the metropolitan of Canada and the Bishop of Nova Scotia in behalf of King's College will be read in St. John's church.

MORE BIG CUCUMBERS.—Master Manley Bishop has laid on our table the largest cucumber yet received. Its weight being 4 lbs. 13 1/2 oz. Master Emerson Franklin has also handed us a mammoth cucumber which is not far behind; it measures 17 inches in length and weighs 4 lbs. 5 oz. Harry Manning, of Greenwich, sends us a cucumber that measures 14 1/2 inches in length, 13 1/4 inches around and weighs 4 pounds 6 oz.

Rosebud Cornmeal (very choice) $3.10 per bbl., 5 lbs. $15 cash, at PRAT'S.

GOOD BUSINESS.—Calling on Geo. E. Calkin, Kentville, the other day we were surprised to find him carrying such a large and varied stock. If he should patronize the advertising columns of the ACADIAN to bring his business before the public we are sure he would do a much larger business. Mr. Calkin informed us that he was never in so good position to do business and that he was sending goods all over the county. He deals largely in furniture, as well as all kinds of hardware and woodware and says he will not be beaten for quality or price of goods.

Wire Fencing, plain and barbed, and posts at WALTER BROWN'S.

DISTRICT LODGE, I. O. G. T.—The quarterly meeting of King's District Lodge, I. O. G. T., was held in "Harmony" Lodge room at Arlington, on Tuesday 16th inst. The district chief being absent, Bro. Richmond Wood occupied the chair. About twenty-five delegates and visitors were in attendance during the day sixteen members received the district degree. The secretary reported returns from five Lodges with a small increase in membership over last quarter. The reports from representatives of the various Lodges were interesting and showed the Order in the county to be in a progressive state. The latter part of the day was spent in discussing the subject of agency work and the various phases of the temperance movement. By invitation of "Delhaven" Lodge the next quarterly session will be held at Delhaven on the 22nd Tuesday in December.

Johnson's Decorators' Pure White Lead, warranted equal to any lead in the market at WALTER BROWN'S.

THE LATE MRS. WINNIET.—Mrs. Winniet, whose death we chronicled in a late issue, was the daughter of Judge Upham, and was born in St. John, N. B., in May, 1797. After the death of Judge Upham, Mrs. Upham with four daughters and one son, moved to Annapolis, N. S. There Miss Sophia Upham married Alexander Howe Winniet, a barrister. They lived at Annapolis till 1857, when they moved to Ontario. While living here Mr. Winniet died. A few years after his death Mrs. Winniet and her daughter returned to Nova Scotia. In 1877 they went to reside in Kentville, where they remained till January, 1889, when they removed to Wolfville. On Wednesday afternoon, August 28th, 1889, she entered into the rest of Paradise, after being spared to see far more than the usual measure of earthly life. She was an intelligent and warmly attached member of the Church of England. Notwithstanding her advanced age she was in full possession of all her faculties, and in only five days before her death she was able to join with her daughter and others in receiving the Holy Sacrament with that calm yet intense devotion which was a marked feature of her quiet religious life.

The Fresh Young Man.

BY BEN ZEENE.

Talk about fresh young men! Did you ever know a young man that wasn't fresh? They are all fresh, more or less. Dreadfully fresh sometimes, and sometimes not quite so fresh. But there is always a freshness about them—a freshness that is sometimes refreshing, but rarely ever. Do you know, I have a sort of sympathy for fresh young men. When I look back into the past and think of the time when I was comparatively young myself, I sometimes wonder if I wasn't very likely. So it's not incurable, you see. They'll get over it as they grow older. I'm not so severe on freshness in young men as some people. It is a characteristic of youth. We should remember that we were young once ourselves. Young apples are green and sour, cranberries when young are also green and of a sowerish tinge, and why should not young men be fresh? We should look for it. We should expect nothing else. I'll admit that some young men are considerably fresher than others. There are some young men so fresh that they would freshen a barrel of pickled herring if they looked one full in the face. Aye, they are fresh. They are so fresh in fact that it would take the Dead Sea to salt them down, and then they would languish in freshness. We have met such young men. But they get salted down with the years. I knew such a young man once. And oh! he was fresh. He went to College and he was so fresh that in a short time the professors didn't know enough to teach him anything, and he had to leave. He went into mercantile life, but he knew so much more than the owners of the business and the other employees that they had no further use for him after a little and he was compelled to go out into the cold world and seek employment elsewhere. He is now running a branch office for a telephone company and spends his leisure trading horses. That kind seldom rise higher than a tree agent or an umpire for a baseball team.

But all young men are fresh. Not fresh enough perhaps to render the lives of their fellow mortals a cumbersome load, but fresh. Why, it would be a curious young man that wasn't fresh, more or less. Did you ever stop to think what freshness means? When you read about a young girl being fresh and beautiful, do you think the less of her for knowing the fact? No, I don't know that you do. When, hot and thirsty, you are travelling through a country and are fifty-seven miles from any place except Windsor Junction, and you take a stroll to the further end of the car for a drink of water—certainly—did you ever remember complaining of its being fresh? No; that isn't the kind they carry on that train. And do you ever remember of buying fresh fish, or sirloin steak, or even eggs in a grocery store, and complaining of their freshness in young men? Why, freshness is the glory of young men. It is the glory of any person or any thing. It is health and vigor and activity. It is brightness and strength. It is only when a man loses the freshness and vigor of youth that he prizes it most. No, we should not not speak so slightly of freshness in young men. They will get over it soon enough. In a few years, when they get out into the current of life, when they strike out up the stream, they will need it all. Let them keep it as long as they can.

Read This.

Dr. Geo. A. Pickles, a very eminent doctor of Mahone Bay, N. S., says: "I knew a man on this Bay who has been sick for a long time. All the medicine we tried or could think of did not reach his case. He tried Canadian Bitters and other Patent Medicines, all failed and he was gradually growing worse. At last he tried a bottle of Dr. Norton's Dock Blood Purifier. Imagine my surprise that in less than a week he was much improved in health, and by the time he had finished the second bottle he was a well man. I now have great call at my Drug Store for Dock Blood Purifier which in the case mentioned proved itself far superior to any Bitters or Blood Purifier that I have ever known."

For sale by all Druggists and Dealers.

ALONE AMONG THE SHADOWS.

He alone among the shadows, And I'm sitting for the light...

HIS ONE LOVE.

An Old Man's Unexpected but Happy Disappointment.

An old gentleman, leaning forward with his hands clasped over a gnarled cane...

On the other side of the summer-house, divided from the old man occupied by a rustic partition...

"But your aunt tells me he is the favorite nephew of the great old merchant, Hiram Bates...

"I think Aunt Marcia has been misinformed, that is all."

"Then he is not Hiram Bates' nephew?"

"I never heard him speak of a rich uncle, and I am quite sure he has no hope of inheriting money..."

"Did he never speak to you of his uncle?"

"Never of a rich uncle. He has told me of a lame uncle, his father's brother who has been very kind to him, given him an education and a start in business..."

when the young girl went to the cottage and offered her services as nurse to the doctor...

The season was over, and only those three remained of the summer boarders at the little cottage...

"I shall soon be well again," he said, gratefully.

"Yes," she answered, cheerily, "very soon."

"I shall miss my nurse."

"For the wedding day, perhaps, well, your bridegroom will have to be content with you."

"I have some money lying idle."

"With my love," she said, softly.

"Ah, child," he sighed, "an old man, sick and feeble, my little love."
