A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

She sprang to the window and swinging the axe to its fullest, dealt the shutter a blow.

Carrie uttered a cry of joy and admiration.

"You've more sense in your little finger than I've got in the whole of my body. Another blow, Maida—take care, you nearly brained me that time! One more! Look, it's giving!"

She sprang at it and the window-shutter yielded so suddenly that she nearly fell out.

Then the two girls stood and gazed at each other as if overwhelmed by this sudden deliverance. This would have made an exquisite picture for a painter of romance; Maida erect as an arrow with the axe still in her hand, her face flushed with the exertion, her eyes a violet black, shining in the fire-light; and Carrie, her hands pressed against her bosom, her lips parted with laboured breath.

"Come!" she cried, when she had recovered from the spell. "Come at once, Maida! My horse is outside. Robert left that; I heard it neigh"—she had not heard David Jones's horse answer—"we can ride in turns. You shall ride first. Stop! Let me think! We will take some food with us; we may want it; and the revolver. We may meet him."

They put some biscuits in their pockets, looked round the hut with a shudder, then went through the window.

They closed it as well as they could and then went, hand in hand, through the darkness. They found Carrie's horse, but Maida insisted upon Carrie's mounting first.

"You've been riding a long while and are tired; while I have been resting," she said.

"A pretty kind of rest!" retorted Carrie. "But there's no time to argue."

She mounted and rode on, Maida resting her arm on the saddle. They had not gone more than half a mile when they heard a horse neigh, and smitten with terror, they pulled up; but while they were hesitating, the mare took matters into her own hand and galloped forward to join its fellow.

"It's a horse—without a rider!" exclaimed Maida in a whisper. "It is tethered. Carrie, is it he?"

Carrie held her revolver in her hand ready for use, and both girls remained still, scarcely breathing in their intense anxiety and suspense.

"There is no one here," whispered Carrie, doubtfully; then, her tone changed to one of quick decision, she said, hurriedly, "Maida, here's our chance. Here's a horse for me." "It's a man's saddle," whispered Maida.

Carrie bit her lip, then she laughed shortly.

"We musn't look the saddle of a gift-horse in the mouth," she whispered. "I must be a man for once. It's dark—no one can see."

She tucked up her short habit-skirt round her waist and mounted the other horse.

"Now, quick!" she cried; "if he is alone he cannot catch us now that we have got his horse. Maida, it is Providence!"

"They pushed on through the darkness, now and again holding their breath and listening for a pursuer; but no sound of one reached them. With occasional rests they went on until the dawn broke; then they pulled up and looked round them. Not until that moment, so great had been their fear of pursuit, had they given a thought to their destination.

"Where are we going?" said Carrie. "Is this the way to Milda Wolda?" Maida's face flushed and she set her teeth.

"Not to Milda Wolda, we cannot go there, Carrie," she said; "we cannot cross his threshold again."

"Where then?" asked Carrie. "Anywhere but there," replied Maida in a low voice but firmly. "We cannot seek shelter at Milda Wolda, Carrie. It is impossible."

Carrie nodded, and she stretched out her hand and touched Maida.

"Of course, dearest," she said. "You must never see him again. We will ride on until we come to some station. Have you any money with you?"

"Yes," said Maida, unexpectedly; "by the merest chance I put my purse in my pocket; all the money we have is in it."

"That's all right," said Carrie, cheerfully; "luck again, Maida! It is to be hoped that we shall come to some place soon, for this horse of mine is tired; he must have been riding a longer distance than from Milda Wolda. And it isn't Robert's horse; it isn't one of the Milda Wolda horses. Whose can it be? Anyway, it's mine for the present: I wonder what they give you for horse-stealing in this country."

The horse was so weary that soon they had to stop and rest. They dismounted beside a stream, and ate some of their biscuits and got a draught of water, and about noon they mounted and rode on again through a country strange to them. Presently they saw a tramp coming in their direction. Carrie slipped from the saddle and stood in front of it to conceal it as much as possible. The man came up and stared at them, and stared still more when Maida asked him what road he had come.

"The Melbourne road, miss," he said. "Have you lost your way?"

"Not now, thank you," said Carrie. "We are all right now."

He tramped on, and she waited until he was out of sight before she mounted again.

"The Melbourne road," said Maida, thoughtfully; then she flashed round upon Carrie with a little cry.

"Carrie! we'll go to Melbourne; it's on the road to England; we'll go back; yes, we'll go back!"

Now, David Jones had ridden on until he had come within sight of the thin streaks of light that came through the chinks of the rough logs of the hut. Then he pulled up and considered for a moment. He knew that, however quietly he rode, however was there would hear the sound of his horse's feet, and he wanted to approach that hut in scout fashion, and to see and hear what was going on without being seen or heard; so he tethered the horse and went cautiously on foot towards the hut. As he did so, he heard a curious sound like the crashing of an axe on wood; this made him quicken his pace to something like a run; but a few minutes afterwards his progress was arrested by another sound, that of a horse going in the direction from the hut; and he stopped in doubt, undecided whether to go on to the hut or to follow the direction the unseen horse had taken; but the first sound he had heard—the sound of an axe—decided him. There was something going on there, and it would be well for him to take a hand in it.

When he got near the hut, he fell on his hands and knees and crawled, scout-fashion, up to it, and, looking through one of the chinks of the door, was amazed to find that it was empty. He tried the door cautiously, lest someone should be concealing himself inside, then, finding the door locked, went round to the window. The shattered shutter told its own story; but, still cautious, he held his revolver in his hand, and as he opened the shutter and vaulted into the hut, a moment's examination showed him that no one was there; that someone had been locked up in it and escaped by means of the axe—had escaped, and had not been taken away. This conviction brought him some relief, though it only added to the difficulty of the problem.

He went through the window and ran in the direction of his horse, and was rather disconcerted, though, perhaps, not greatly surprised, to find that it was gone. With a shrug of his shoulders, he turned and walked back in a leisurely fashion to the hut, and, entering, made up the fire and sat down to the remains of the meal which Carrie and Maida had left. When he had finished eating, he lit his pipe and made himself comfortable on the couch.

The person who had locked in the prisoners would presently return. Well, he would find them fawn; but David Jones would be waiting for him.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Robert Broseley was half-mad with impatience and suspense; but he could not return to the hut where he had left the two girls imprisoned until all was quiet at Milda Wolda and nothing further was to be feared from the rangers. He went about the place with black brows, cursing and swearing and drinking deeply.

To Mrs. Broseley he would not vouchsafe any information, any explanation.

"I tell you we are married," he said, impatiently. "We didn't want a fuss, so we got married quietly; what's it matter? I suppose if Maida is satisfied, it's nobody's business. I thought you always wanted me to be married; you were always worrying about it, anyhow."

"Yes, Robert, dear," said Mrs. Broseley, meekly. "But not in this fashion. It's—it's not fitting for a man in your position, to say nothing of Miss Carrington. I can't think how she came to do it, why she didn't confide in me, the who loves her like a mother. It's not like her. And to think of those two girls going to Melbourne alone!"

"They wouldn't have gone alone," retorted Robert, savagely. "If this confounded affair hadn't turned up."

"But why didn't they come back with you?" asked Mrs. Broseley. "That was the natural thing to do. Oh, Robert, think of those two girls makin' that journey alone on horse-back!"

Robert was thinking of those two girls shut up in the hut, and he burst out with an oath.

"They chose to go to Melbourne—I thought it better for them to go. Let me alone. I'll go after them as soon as I can leave you."

"Yes, yes," said Mrs. Broseley, earnestly. "Go now, at once, Robert dear, we shall be quite safe; those villains have gone over the hills; besides, we can keep the Dartford men; and your father will be here to-day or to-morrow, I expect. And give Maida my love and tell her that I will come to Melbourne to her."

"No, no," he said, quickly; "better stop where you are. I'll bring her back here—What was the matter with that man from Dartford—what's his name? Tudor—and why did he get off in that way? He seemed a queer sort of customer; I didn't like the look of him."

"Oh, Robert," said Mrs. Broseley, reproachfully, "and it was so good of him to come over and help and protect us! He had been fightin' for hours, perhaps without food; no wonder he was taken ill. It is strange you didn't like him, for he seemed so kind and nice, and such a perfect gentleman."

FRENCH CAPTURE.

PARIS, Aug. 20. A smashing French victory on the Verdun front is recorded in the official reports issued by the war office to-night. The French have captured the enemy defences on both sides of the Meuse over a front of more than eleven miles, penetrating the German lines at divers points to a depth of a mile and a quarter. More than 4,000 un wounded German prisoners have been taken.

BRITISH ADVANCE LINES.

LONDON, Aug. 20. A German counter attack on the positions captured by the British yesterday morning—southeast of Epehy, was completely repulsed after sharp fighting, according to the official statement issued to-day by the war office. A successful raid was carried out last night south of Lens. On the Ypres battle front, the British lines were advanced slightly southeast of St. Jensonhoek.

BRITISH POSITION IMPROVED.

LONDON, Aug. 20. An official report from British headquarters in France to-night reads: By a successful minor operation early on Sunday morning in the neighborhood of Ypres-Poel-Cappelle Road, our line was advanced to a depth of about five hundred yards on a mile front. All of our objectives, including a series of strongly fortified farms were captured with very slight loss to us. The enemy's losses were considerable. We took prisoners. The German prisoners captured by the Allies during the fighting on Thursday northeast of Ypres are now 2,114, including 55 officers. Strong westerly winds prevailed yesterday, but activity of our airplanes continued. Bombing raids, artillery, photographic work were carried out successfully throughout the day. Three German airplanes were brought down in fighting. Four others were driven down out of control. Eight of ours are missing.

GERMAN ESTABLISHMENTS RAIDED.

LONDON, Aug. 20. German military establishments in Belgium, which have been attacked repeatedly of late by British airplanes were again raided on Saturday night, the Admiralty announces in the following statement: Many tons of bombs were dropped on the nights of August 18th and 19th by naval air service on the following military objectives, St. Pierre Station and sidings at Ghent, Thourout station and dump, and Bruges docks. A raid was also carried out yesterday morning on the Snellegheam airdrome, where a direct hit was made on a large shed. On the return our machines were attacked by hostile aircraft which were beaten off with the aid of a royal flying corps patrol. One enemy machine was shot down out of control; all ours returned safely.

CHINESE IN FIGHTING TRIM.

PEKING, Aug. 20. General Chang Chen Yam, commanding the troops sent to suppress General Chang Hsun's forces in Anwei Province, has telegraphed President Wang Kwochang urging the immediate sending of his force of thirty thousand men to Europe to fight the Germans. The Ministers of the Entente to China have agreed upon a common note sent individually to the Foreign Office congratulating China on its declaration of war. Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, visited Wang Tahsieh, Foreign Minister, and assured him that the declaration of war had strengthened the friendship between Japan and China. China has instituted a cable and mail censorship.

GERMAN PRESS ON PEACE NOTE.

LONDON, Aug. 20. Comment in German newspapers reaching Amsterdam is generally unfavorable to the Pope's peace note, according to despatches received here. The German Catholic papers express the deepest respect for the Pope's initiative, but consider the note disquieting as far as it regards Germany's interests. The Liberal newspapers view the note as an appeal of great hopefulness. The Mergen Post says that it does not see why Germany should reject the appeal adding, that it is well to understand that neither Alsace-Lorraine nor the Trentino are questions that can be submitted to any tribunal, because such questions do not exist. The Tages Zeitung declares that the pope's peace proposals would mean Germany's ruin. The Voessische Zeitung asserts that Germany will rapidly solve the Belgian question in conformity with the wishes of the Pope, but declares that France must also give up all hopes of annexing Alsace-Lorraine, and that peace must bring an equilibrium.

BELGIAN OFFICIAL.

PARIS, Aug. 20. The Belgium official communication as issued through the French war office last night, reads as follows: On the nights of the 17th and 18th our patrols combated advance elements on the left bank of the Yser and Saint Jacques Capelle. Yesterday and today our artillery executed a destructive fire on the enemy's batteries and neutralised several others. The aviation service showed great activity last week, and despite the continual barrage of the enemy operating in dense formations, we executed numerous missions above the enemy lines. On the 16th Sub-Lieut. Thieffry brought down his seventh German machine.

CONFERENCE OF SEAMEN.

LONDON (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency), Aug. 20.—Great interest has been aroused by the proceedings of the International Conference of Seafarers of all grades called to consider the U-boats crises which was resumed yesterday under the presidency of Havelock Wilson. Capt. Moore, representing the captains and officers of the British mercantile marine, read communications from Swedish, Norwegian and French Societies, Captains and Officers expressing general approval of the objects of the conference. The French message was especially cordial and read: "We express adherence to the principle presented by the conference." Capt. Grace of the Imperial Merchant Service Guild voiced sympathy with neutrals who are maintaining their neutrality despite the fact that a brutal and unscrupulous belligerent was founting about the ocean. Germany, he said, had broken every written and unwritten international law. The Germans ought to be debarred from sailing on British ships for ever. Nothing had happened since their previous London conference to justify any departure from the previous decision not to carry peace delegates to Stockholm. We are fighting to break the military power of Germany, said Captain Grace, and until that work is accomplished peace terms will be so many scraps of paper and nothing more. The chairman introduced amidst cheering, George Sleski, seaman, survivor of the Belgian Prince, who told the story of the torpedoing of his ship, and his escape, and was warmly congratulated.

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

The organs were destroyed, as well as several valuable statues. In addition to the damage done by the fire, considerable damage was wrought by water thrown inside the edifice by the firemen.

The steamer arrived recently from Buenos Ayres and had about completed the discharge of a cargo of hides. The British steamship Barren Jeddeburgh, discharging a cargo of sugar and glue, was also badly damaged by the fire.

CANADA'S WHEAT CROP.

TORONTO, Aug. 20. Information wired to Sir John Aird, General Manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, by the Superintendent of the Bank at Winnipeg, says that after three extensive trips through Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, 200,000,000 bushels is the lowest estimate that could be placed on the wheat crop of the Canadian West.

NEW TYPE OF AIRSHIP.

LONDON, Aug. 20. A despatch to the Daily Mail from Verri, Switzerland, says that the barns of the Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen are being used for building a new type of airship from which much is expected. THE KAISER'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 20. At the conclusion of his visit to the German high seas fleet at Wilhelmshaven, Emperor Wilhelm issued the following to the fleet: "After having recently received the announcement that a renewal of the heavy attack of the enemy in an attempt to break up our sea front in Flanders had been successfully repulsed, I have to-day by a visit to my fleet and island fortress, Heligoland, been enabled to convince myself of the strength and security of this front, too. I express my warm appreciation of all the high sea forces, on the water, under the water and in the air and to the fortress of Heligoland for their untiring self-sacrificing and successful labor by means of which they have kept firmly in view and attained this aim. May the fleet remain conscious that the confidence of myself and the fatherland, reposes firmly on it." The Emperor distributed a number of iron crosses. His visit is reported to have been caused by the threat of strikes at the Wilhelmshaven arsenal.

Boy Breaks Leg.

While returning from the fishing ground last evening a boy named Willis had his leg broken by coming in contact with the shaft of his motor boat. He was taken to his home in Lime Street where the broken bone was set by Drs. Cowperthwaite and Roberts. A number of accidents of a similar nature have occurred during the past year.

American Boys.

To Help Our Wounded and Sick Heroes.

The boys of the American collier now in port are very anxious to do "their little bit" for the Nfd. Hospital funds, and the means devised to play a baseball game to-morrow morning at St. George's Field. The game will commence sharp at 10 o'clock, and in view of the worthiness of the object no apology is needed for charging 10 cents admission. The entire proceeds will be devoted towards augmenting the funds of the Old Boys' cricket match to be played in the afternoon in aid of the Jensen Camp and Waterford Hall hospital. This is the first opportunity local fandom will have of seeing regular big league baseball. A representative nine from this ship won the championship of the North Atlantic fleet in 1916, and most of their old players are with them. Baseball is part of the regularly prescribed drill in the American Navy as the exercise keeps the "boys in blue" in top notch form as no other can. Mary Roberts Rhinacourt, the famous writer, has this to say in a recent issue of the "Saturday Evening Post":—"The average age, officers and men, that went around the world, was twenty-two. And to-day we know the psychology of play and its value. More than once, when I went to France, I carried a football right up to the lines to be used behind the trenches. So the blue-jacket goes at specified times to his ballgrounds and plays EXCELLENT baseball. The Navy has always encouraged baseball, and from battleships to submarines, each ship's crew has at least one team. Very good ball it is that they play, I am told. I have seen them playing; but I am, at the national game, rather like the old lady who considered the pitcher poor because he did not give the batter a chance to hit the ball." The visitors had a tryout yesterday, and the Deck Force beat the Engineers by 3 to 1. It was thought that they would prove too strong for a local team, so the League therefore considered it better that they should give an exhibition to show how fast class baseball is produced. Of course the regular coaches are going to be on the lines, so that fans if they are attentive will have some new stuff to throw at the umps and players in our local games. Lieut Downing will be in charge of the party. The lineups will be:

Everyday Etiquette.

"When my girl chum brought her mother over to meet me for the first time, should I have risen?" asked Edith. "A hostess should always rise when introduced to a man or woman. It is not necessary for a lady to rise to greet a man when she is introduced in your own home; it is a mark of hospitality and breeding to greet your guests with a welcome handshake and a cordial remark," replied her oldest sister.

MOCK HOUSE AND MOCK COUNCIL PASS PROFITS TAX BILL AND PARLIAMENT BILL.

FOUR DUMMIES APPOINTED TO COUNCIL TO ENSURE ITS EXECUTION.

The Business Profits Tax Bill passed both branches of the Legislature yesterday afternoon in the absence of every member who opposed the measure in the Upper House at the last session and in the presence of the four new members of that Chamber who were sworn in at Government House yesterday, namely—Hons. Tasker Cook, Frank McNamara, Samuel Bell and Alex. Mews. The Parliament Act Bill was also "motored" through both Houses, without any opposition whatever.

In the Lower House the Profits Tax Bill went into Committee.

Hon. Mr. Chitt gave the Bill his hearty support because he believed it was a fair and equitable one and expressed his regret over the fact that the two branches of the Legislature were at variance over such an important matter. He was willing to admit that the measure was not as comprehensive as it might be, as it might have gone further and taken in the incomes of professional men, not excepting even the lawyers. But in view of all the surrounding circumstances, such as our financial obligations in connection with the war, united effort was badly needed. He said that although certain newspapers had made uncomplimentary comments respecting the members of the National Government, no better means for providing for a similar amount of income had been suggested by those opposed to the measure.

Hon. Mr. Hickma was the next speaker. He congratulated the Government on bringing in such an excellent Bill and for having such regard for the business community in not taxing the huge profits made since the war commenced. He was glad to be called upon to contribute to such a tax. He said those who objected to the Bill in the Legislative Council had exhibited chicanery and that if the same brand of patriotism prevailed in the British Isles to-day the German flag would be flying over this House to-day.

Hon. Mr. Bennett in favouring the measure said that the action of the Lower House would go down in history for upholding the liberties and rights of the people. He was prepared to defend the Bill even if it was discriminatory. He said the merchants were quibbling because they were called upon to pay some of the fabulous profits they were making and who had not, since the outbreak of the war, been asked to subscribe a dollar to feed the orphans, wives and dependents of those who had laid down their lives. He thought the merchants had good reason to congratulate themselves on being taxed so leniently. He eulogized the National Government, which, he said, had been brought together for the sake of the country and added that such an act of patriotism was an example for the Upper House, for the whole country and for the British Empire.

The Bill was then reported, received its Third reading and was sent to the Upper House.

The Bill, known as "The Parliament Act," making provision with respect to the powers of the Legislative Council in relation to those of the House of Assembly was read a second time on motion of the Prime Minister, who said that this Bill was rendered necessary by the recent action of the Legislative Council and its object was to put into cold type what the powers should be. He did not wish to have it implied that there was any doubt as to these powers, but that it appeared as if some thought there was. He had already gone on record in condemnation of the action of the Legislative Council and if he did not use words strong enough on that occasion he asked to be considered as if he had and to suggest that stronger words be substituted for those that he used. He said that any attempt to strengthen the arguments put forward in favour of the Bill would be like gliding refined gold. He then said that he and his colleagues had been subjected to contumely by parties outside who were not in favor of the Bill—and pointed out that no man who ever served the people faithfully in this Colony was friendly with the classes. He showed that the substance of the Bill was that never again will the Upper House be allowed to look at much less throw out a Money Bill.

Hon. Minister of Justice spoke briefly on the constitutionality of the Bill which went through its final stage and was sent to the Council.

The Upper House sat at 5.30 p.m. and took up the two Bills. The members present were, including the new Councillors, Hons. McGrath, Skelton, Squires, Harvey, Bladford, Gibbs, Power, Ellis, Cook, Bell, McNamara and Mews. Those who voted down the Bill at the last session were absent, namely: Hons. Bowring, Goodridge, Harvey, Winter, Knowling, Ryan (2), Milley and Anderson.

Hon. Mr. Squires moved the second reading of the Bill with Hon. Dr. Skelton in the chair.

Hons. McNamara and Mews spoke in favour of the Bill, the former saying amongst other things that it was no more class legislation than the Daylight Bill was and the latter gentleman that it came to the House with a clear conscience.

The Bill then went through all stages, as did also the Parliament Act Bill.

The Colonial Secretary and President tendered a hearty welcome to the new Councillors, after which both branches of the Legislature adjourned to be prorogued by His Excellency the Governor at four o'clock this afternoon.

The postponed patriotic cricket game in aid of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Convalescent Home will take place at St. George's Field to-morrow afternoon and will be the main attraction for the day. His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson will likely be present and should the weather permit to his part we have no doubt that the old-time cricketers will be welcomed by a full arena.  - J. S. Keating. C. Ellis
 - E. Taylor. C. Berrigan

 - Rev. E. C. Clench. N. Vincombe
- Mr. John Donnelly, of bowling fame, will umpire the game.

New Skin Remedy.

Since the old-fashioned theory of curing eczema through the blood has been given up by scientists, many different salves have been tried for skin diseases. But it has been found that these salves only clog the pores and cannot penetrate to the inner skin below the epidermis where the eczema germs are lodged.

This—the quality of penetrating—partially explains the tremendous success of the wonderful new liquid eczema remedy, the D. D. D. Prescription.

D. D. D. is now recognized as the only absolutely reliable eczema remedy, for it penetrates the pores, washes away the disease germs and leaves the skin as clear and healthy as that of a child.

This scientific antiseptic wash has been found to be specially effective in all forms of Eczema, Bad Leg, Ulcers, Pimples, Ringworm, Sores and Rash, Salt Rheum and all other skin diseases. One bottle will prove it to you.

Don't delay; get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Sold Everywhere. Recommended by T. McMurdo & Co., A. W. Kennedy, M. Connors, Peter O'Mara.

Says Scotia Worth $300. Big Assets.

An exhaustive comparative review of the position of Nova Scotia Steel and Coal is being given circulation in the West. It is the production of George Walker of the Dukelow and Walker Co., and is copyrighted by them.

Much attention is given to the ore and its holdings of Scotia, and they are compared with other well known companies such as U. S. Steel, Pennsylvania Steel, Republic Iron and Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Woodward Cl., Sloss-Sheffield and Dominion Steel. Comparisons are also made of the relative financial positions (some of these companies, including his review Mr. Walker states that the study he has made convinces him that Scotia common is worth least $300 per share and entitled to that price at the moment. He concludes that the company's growth has reached a stage from which its growth and development are sure to be verified. The immense reserves offers a good investment and likely to appreciate greatly in price. An interest comparison of the iron ore tonnage owned by different companies made. Scotia caps them all with tonnage of 2,000,000,000 on which there is a present annual draft of 600,000 tons and the duration of this supply is placed at 3,300 years. Dominion Steel is credited with 600,000,000 tons in present supply, and the deposit duration is reckoned at 452 years. The largest largest ore holdings are those of U. S. Steel and Pennsylvania Steel, respectively placed at 2,200,000,000 and 600,000,000 tons. The former has two deposits to draw on, but said is the exhaustion going on they will only last 43 and 55 years respectively. Bethlehem in Cuba has enough to last it 783 years.

"PrEckel, an iron ore authority of wide repute, is quoted regarding the position of Scotia in this connection. "Considering the small cost of mining and transportation," he writes it is obvious that this ore can be sold in any Atlantic coast market, whether in Europe or America, at a lowest per unit of iron than any known competitive ore."

This authority estimates the present value of Scotia's iron ore hold at $45,803 and its coal holdings $64,241, a total of $73,754,000, not owing for any other assets, or more than three times the present market value of Scotia's capital stock and its.

Character of the mineral assets and manufacturing history of the area reviewed at length and it is said that: "Although the plants of Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Company have been large enough to give it a distinct place in the steel production industry, they still seem extremely small when brought into comparison with the immense reserves of raw material upon which they are drawn. If operated continuously at full capacity it would take these plants 200 years to exhaust the company's deposit of iron ore. Therefore would seem that a plant from 50 to 100 times larger is justified."

Laid to Rest.

Funeral obsequies of the late Bro. Turley took place this forenoon were attended by a multitude of people, an evidence of the unity esteem in which the deceased was held. At 10 a.m. Requiem Mass was celebrated for the repose of his soul. Rev. Mons. McDermott was the officiating priest, assisted by Revs. St. John Dwyer as Deacon and Sub-Deacon respectively. His Grace the Archbishop occupied the Throne and at the of the Mass recited the prayer for the dead, after which the undertones which included prominent people in Church and State was a hundred of school children followed its way to Belvedere Cemetery where the remains of a good and pious man was interred.

Fathers and Children.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

The other day on the trolley, I saw a little group that set my heart strings singing. It was just a father and his two boys but they were evidently going off for some kind of a picnic together and they were having such a happy time. The youngsters were screwing around to look out of the window and laughing and chattering. And it was "Oh father this" and "Oh Father that" and it was very plain that the biggest boy of all wasn't having the least joy of it.

The Gold Mines in His Pockets.

I could just visualize them reaching their destination and seeing father dig his hand into those trouser pockets that seem to youth a gold mine without bottom, and digging out nickels and dimes galore for popcorn and flying horses and chewing gum and Ferris Wheels.

Such a happy day, such a great adventure as they were going to have! And so many fathers there are who seldom if ever go on such adventures. What a lot they do miss!

Mothers and Children Are Nearly Always Close.

The relation of mothers and children is more or less the same in most families (except the wealthier ones) and just naturally has to be pretty close. With fathers and children on the other hand, the relationship varies with temperament of the father and the custom of the family, from a casual speaking acquaintance to a close and tender sympathy. And the latter alas is much the rarer. But when it does exist it is one of the most beautiful relations in life.

The Beautiful Friendship of Father and Son.

I have heard it claimed that the love between father and daughter is the most touching and selfless affection in the world. But I like as much to see a father and a grown son who have passed that almost inevitable period where youth and age stormily clash, and have come into the quiet, happy harbor of deep and enduring friendship.

Such friendships have their beginnings in such childish adventures as I witnessed the other day. Blind indeed is the father who is too busy, too careless or too selfish to cultivate the friendship of his children before a wall of formality and restraint and self-consciousness has grown up between them.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen, — Ever since coming home from the Boer War I have been bothered with running fever sores on my legs. I tried many salves and liniments; also doctored continuously for the blood, but got no permanent relief, till last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT. The effect of which was almost magical. Two bottles completely cured me and I have worked every working day since.

Yours gratefully,
JOHN WALSH.

Fashions and Fads.

The scarcity of materials produces dresses of much refinement. Corduroy skirts are worn by little girls as well as their mothers. A brim of lace and a crown of fur fashions one of Paris' latest hats. A new material for collars and trimmings is called gunpowder cloth. Simplicity is more than ever before the fashionable thing in all dresses.

Late Sub-Lieut. H. Lawrence Crowe's Machine Nose-Dived into the Sea—Chasing Submarine—Funeral Takes Place To-day With Full Military Honors.

The funeral of the late Sub-Lieut. H. Lawrence Crowe, R.N.A.S., will take place this afternoon with full military honors from the residence of his parents, 112 Castle Frank Road, Lieut. Crowe, who was born in Bridgetown, Nova Scotia, was a graduate of St. Andrew's College, and previous to enlisting for active service had completed one year in the School of Practical Science, University of Toronto, and had taken the course in the officers' training corps. Lieut. Crowe then proceeded to Newport News, West Virginia, where he obtained his pilot's certificate in the spring of 1916, and joined the Royal Naval Air Service in England, where he spent ten months, the last three on active service. When his death occurred he was on special patrol duty in search of a submarine that had been seen off the west coast of Devonshire. Something went wrong with the engine, and his machine nose-dived fifteen hundred feet into the sea in about four seconds, disappearing under the surface. Lieut. Crowe's body was taken from Devonport to Plymouth, 90 men from the different ships, the band of H.M.S. Powerful and officers from the different stations marching from Devonport to Plymouth with the remains, which were placed on the train and sent direct to Liverpool, and came by C.P.R. steamer to Montreal. Harry J. Crowe, the late Lieut. Crowe's father, who had gone to England with his son and had spent the greater part of the last ten months with him, was present at the funeral service, and accompanied the remains to Canada. —Toronto World.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA.

Your Boys and Girls.

A child of two or three often be amused for hours by a simple device.

Bend two pieces of thin straw that are about an inch length, so that each forms an inverted V, with sides of equal length. Put them astride a long straw, four five inches apart, and holding end of the straw in each hand, rest "feet" of the short straw on a table or any other flat, smooth surface, with their points towards each other at an angle of 45 degrees.

By slightly moving these straw you can make the two tall pieces move rapidly toward each other. Meeting midway with point touching they will often stand brag together so firmly that you can move the long straw. If instead of dislodge them by a slight jar, you'll pass the other, and each will resume its way unimpeded.

AT A SUMMER REST.

WALT MASON

This is the playground of the land, here I have had my tent; I tourists through every hand, whole-some pleasure bent, by climb the island fish the suns and in the caverns play. I can hear whoops and screams throughout the living. There lives near me a sad-eyed, who views the joyous through, wipes away a bitter tear, and has both loud and long. "Have you no hearts?" the seer exclaims that are they laughing for? Have those fifty men and dames form we'er at war? They balance a mountain's brink, and leer at below; oh, tell me, do they neythink of war and all its woe? Thase the fleeing mountain sheep asgh they had no care; oh, tell me, they never weep for war and despair?" "Oh, graybeard seer," I I reply, "There's always time enough tears, a place for those who we; and I grow sick of grouchy se who always call for brine. Of sand sorrow I grow sick, of smivel of sniff, so pray excuse me if I kibur person down this cliff."

The Gas Rael

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter in hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think cooking with gas is expensive. Whenever a woman be used to gas for cooking, thoughts coal or wood stove fill her withoom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all hot cooking, and so much cleaner that the idea of going back to old style methods is decidedly unant. Yet in winter many housewife think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other of heating the kitchen. THERE ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS BETTER THAN THE OLD. THE GAS STEAM RADIATOR W. Milady's Boudoir

YOUTHFULNESS IN LACE AND FUR

It has been said that a woman can take ten years off her life by wearing her hair loose and fluffy. Fur and lace have the same youthifying effect. Fur trimming around the throat gives it a soft, downy look, especially if one is inclined toward thinness. Lace and boudoir caps are becoming to most faces, which proves that lacy, frilly conceits are beautifying to the feminine face and figure.

Nowadays almost everyone can afford the cheaper variety of fur trimming, and the lacy, frilly things can be made at home without great expense. Don't forget that the soft fluffiness of the hair adds to the charm of the profile. The lustre of the eyes are enhanced a thousandfold by a lustrous frame of wavy hair of lacy vanity.

Fads and Fashions.

New blouses button in the back. Hats have very little trimming. Plaque frocks are trimmed with fur. Leather is very smart on tailored coats. Coat collars are gaining in height. The tailored suit has returned to its own.

Wide belts are not smart at present. The simpler the dress the more youthful. Metal printed velvets are promised for fall. Wool jersey of the latest type has borders.

Very large collars are seen on autumn coats. The straight line continues to be the correct one. Georgette crepe is worn a great deal by young girls. Girdles are made of ribbon less than one inch wide. Longer draperies are now seen on gowns of ceremony. Jersey promises to be even more fashionable in fall.

Dotted voiles are the latest feature among cotton goods. Flowers of woolen embroidery are used on organdy hats. Black satin underskirts keep out from under serge overskirts. Narrow bands of fur will appear on cloth dresses for autumn. Buttons are fashionable, because they are a simple trimming. Children's gingham frocks have white pique collars and cuffs. Serge dresses are being made in tan, gray, burgundy and brown. Ostrich plumeage will be used for the trimming of evening gowns. Waistcoat blouses of white pique are worn with black satin skirts. A stately gown is designed of black velvet, fur and ivory lace.

A Few Points on the Profit Tax.

WILL DISORGANIZE OUTPORT TRADE.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Last evening the curtain rang down upon one of the most dramatic scenes ever witnessed in the Halls of our local Legislature. To the man who has a spark of patriotism in his make up and has followed the careers of our public men for the past generation, it would have appeared better had the Upper House been legislated out of existence altogether. It has certainly now become the "dumping Chamber." One felt like wondering what were the feelings of the four new Councillors who had just taken the oath of office. The Business Profits Tax Bill has now become the law of the land. Whatever extra Revenue will be raised by this method will be paid, while the war lasts, by the merchants. The rich man who is not a merchant escapes scot free. The motor car of the wealthy joy riding lawyer or politician may continue to splash the poor pedestrian citizen with mud, the merchant will have to pay the taxes.

"Every person liable to taxation under this Act shall, on or before the first day of February in each year, without any notice or demand, deliver in duplicate to the Minister (of Finance and Customs) a return in form B of the Schedule to this Act or in such other form as the Minister may prescribe covering each accounting period for which he is liable to taxation," etc., etc.

Outport business men who have hitherto thought that they were free and independent, and conducting their business according to their own methods, will now realize that they can no longer do so. Those who have hitherto not been able, through circumstances over which they have no control, to settle up their previous year's business before April will now have to do so in February. For instance an outport business man usually has to visit St. John's in January to make arrangements for salt and supplies the coming season. This trip generally takes from one to three weeks. Then he returns home and takes stock. After stock taking is over he gets his traps, etc., mended for the next summer. Not until this is done does he make up his balance sheet and open his books for the current year. Now all this has got to be altered. The outport merchant will have to take notice and govern himself accordingly.

The city merchant who buys in anywhere from one hundred and fifty to two hundred thousand qtls. of fish in November and December and does not get it all out of the stores until the following June and July will also have to finalize his balance sheet in February.

In reference to the tax, may I ask if the Minister of Finance and Customs will be satisfied with the mere statement which each merchant furnishes, or will he have to send his firm's books to the nearest Custom House for inspection? I ask this for information's sake.

From the remarks made by some of our very wise legislators one would think that the only men doing business in the country are on Water St. and that Water Street alone will have to pay this extra taxation.

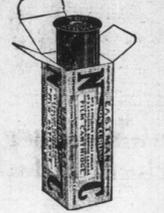

To the man on the street the action of the Government in trying to arouse the fishermen of the country against the merchant is laughable. If it were midwinter when the fishermen had plenty of spare time on their hands it might prove different. It is quite evident that Sir Edward Morris has no intention of appealing again to the electorate of St. John's West but will accept an appointment as Commissioner of Newfoundland in London or South Africa somewhere and Hon. Dr. Lloyd will succeed him as leader of the Government party.

The agitation was got up with the hope that the merchants would oppose the bill and thus give the Coalition Government an opportunity to appeal to the country with the Profits Tax Bill as the issue. The action of the merchants last evening must have been a great disappointment to them. Their action was dignified and gentlemanly and what the country expected of them. Time alone will tell whether they have done the right thing.

In reply to Sir Edward Morris's denial of the statement appearing in my letter of Saturday I can only say that it was taken from the official report of the House of Commons of Canada as published in the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. Thanking you in anticipation, Mr. Editor, for publication.
Yours truly,
PATRIOT.

NEWFOUNDLANDERS AT MONCHIELE-PRUX.

"Though overwhelmed by the tremendous weight and driving power of the enemy's counter movement, the advanced British forces rose to the highest military traditions of their race, and made a series of heroic, and often scattered, stands. The Newfoundland troops, who had proved their desperate valour on the Somme, had pushed to the farthest point of the preliminary advance in a most difficult part of the battle front. They were assailed by two fresh German columns, possessing a great superiority in numbers. Yet only some Newfoundland outposts were cut off. The main body of Newfoundlanders fell back in orderly fashion, keeping off the German masses by means of skillful and dauntless rearguards of machine-gunners and riflemen.

Reaching the trenches beyond the main British positions the enemy was caught by the British guns. In search of cover, he dropped into the advanced position that had been held by the Newfoundlanders. Without waiting for supports, the troops from the great island in the Atlantic surged forward again like men lashed to madness. For thirty minutes there raged, in and around their lost position, such a hand-to-hand fight as had rarely been seen in the whole course of the war. Good judges doubt whether such a fury of slaughter occurred more than once before along the British front. It was believed that not a single German got back to his own lines. In the trenches in which the Newfoundlanders again settled, and over the ground which they had counter-attacked, there were fifteen hundred German corpses, and many others wounded."

GRAND CLASH OF THE BATTLE OF ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

"Then, amid and around the dreadful shell curtains, maintained by the artillery on either side the Scottish, English, Welsh, and Nfld. troops closed upon Ludendorff's main armies. Gavrelle was recovered by bitter fighting by Sir Henry Horne's corps, and then held against incessant assaults by enemy storming troops. Again and again the Germans gathered, in a wood by the Douai Road, only to be more than decimated by the British barrage, and finally dispersed by the machine-guns of the British garrison in Gavrelle. The struggle went on for thirty-six hours. The survivors of each broken German force were sorted out, reduced from battalions to companies, and held in reserve for another attack."

Public Notice!
The attention of the public is called to the seriousness of the COAL situation.
There is at present in St. John's a quantity of coal ready for immediate delivery. Those who are able to stock coal for the coming winter would be well advised to secure same immediately.
Coal which has to be stored for autumn delivery is liable to be much more expensive because of possible shortage of supply, shortage of tonnage and because of an additional charge for cost of storage.
Buy now and you not only save money for yourself, but you help to keep the price of coal from soaring to an excessive figure during the Winter and early Spring when navigation is closed.
