CLEANLINESS IS HEALTH

By the use of Gillett's Lye, house cleaning is made a pleasure instead of a drudgery. It softens the water and cleans thoroughly whether the dirt is visible or invisible. Destroys all bacteria and infectious germs, removes obstructions from drain pipes, closets, sinks, etc. Refrigerators are made delightfully fresh and clean by using one teaspoonful of Gillett's Lye dissolved in two gallons of water.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Two hours later she was seated in the train following that which had borne Lord Cecil to London, and her telegram lay at the office to be forwarded to Mr. Spenser Churchill at eight the next morning.

Lord Cecil reached his chambers in the grey of the summer morning, looking like a man who had received sentence of death, and yet hoped that by some chance a reprieve might save him.

Not until the train started had he remembered that the steam packet-office would not be open until ten o'clock, and, yielding to the respectful entreaties of his man, who was deeply attached to him, and saw with dismay the change which the last few days had made in him, Lord Cecil threw himself on the bed. But he found it impossible to rest there, and spent the long hours pacing up and down, vainly trying to draw encouragement from a remembrance of Lady Grace's assertion of faith in Doris.

"She believed in her, and she does not know her; how much more should I trust in her, who do know her? And yet this letter!" and he took it out and read it for the hundredth time.

Long before ten he had a bath, drank a cup of coffee to appease his valet, and, dressing himself, went down in a cab to the office of the Australian Steamship Company.

He was there before the office opened, and had to wait for a quarter of an hour. While he was pacing up and down, smoking a cigar, with fierce impatience, a quietly dressed man, in a brown top hat, sauntered up, glanced at him casually, and passed by; then, as if he had remembered something, took out his watch, and returned at a quick pace, so quickly, indeed, that he almost ran against Lord Cecil, and offered profuse apologies.

A few minutes after ten a yawning boy wound up the iron shutters, and Lord Cecil went into the office.

"I want to know—" he commenced; but the boy, struggling with a yawn which threatened to bisect his face, said, languidly:

"Clerks not here yet. Don't know nothing myself."

Lord Cecil enquired when they were there, was told five minutes, ten, perhaps; lit another cigar; was informed by the intelligent lad that he mustn't smoke in the office; flung the cigar away, and strode to the door, nearly knocking over the quiet-looking gentleman in the brown hat, who was looking in at the door enquiringly.

Ten minutes—a quarter of an hour passed, and at last a clerk arrived; and Lord Cecil made for him as if he were going to demand his life.

"Can you tell me whether a lady of the name of Marlowe sailed by the 'Orion' for Melbourne?" he began, with suppressed eagerness.

The clerk eyed him with the charming impassibility and indifference which distinguishes some of his class, and read a letter which lay before him before answering.

"You will find her name in the passenger-list if she did," he said at last. "Then, for Heaven's sake, give me the passenger-list!" said Lord Cecil, with suppressed fury. "I have been waiting—"

He pulled himself up on the verge of an outbreak, and the clerk, with a great deal of dignity, got down a huge ledger and leisurely found the proper page. Then he proceeded to read off the names. There seemed a million of them to poor Cecil, who leaned against the counter, his eyes fixed on the book, his lips tightly compressed.

"Mr. and Mrs. Browne, Mr. and Miss Thompkins, Mr. Garland, Miss Doris Marlowe. Yes, she sailed," said the clerk.

Lord Cecil gripped the counter hard, and stared in a dazed, blind way at the open page.

"Mr. Garland! Miss Doris Marlowe! Great Heaven! then the marquis had spoken the truth, and she had jilted him; had left him for the other man—this actor. In a moment he recalled the young fellow, the handsome Romeo, who played so well to her Juliet. And she had gone with him! She—Doris! Doris, the girl he loved; whose faith and honour and truth—ah, and innocent purity of mind and soul—he would have sworn by.

The clerk stared at his white face and compressed lips curiously. It was not the first time anxious inquiries had been made respecting missing persons at the office, but no one had taken the information given as this handsome young gentleman took it.

He seemed, as the clerk put it afterwards, when recounting the incident to his fellow-clerks, "as if he were struck dumb and deaf and blind."

"You, sir?" he asked. Lord Cecil raised his head and regarded him vacantly.

"Anything else? No," he said, with a grim smile. "That will do, thanks. When will the 'Orion' arrive?" The man referred him to a calendar and told him.

"There or thereabouts," he said. "She's a fine vessel," said poor Cecil, not knowing what he was saying; and, wishing the clerk good-day, he made his way out.

At the door he paused and took off his hat in a confused kind of way, as a man does who has received news which is either too good or too bad to be realised all at once; and as he stood there, he felt a hand upon his shoulder. Looking round, he saw that it was the persistent personage in the brown hat.

"Lord Cecil, Viscount Neville, I believe?" he said, quietly and respectfully enough.

"Yes, I am Lord Neville," said Cecil. "What do you want?" he added, with weary surprise.

The man took a paper from his breast-pocket.

"I'm sorry to trouble you, my lord," he said, "but I'm a sheriff's officer, and I have to arrest you on a debt-warrant."

"Arrest me?" said Lord Cecil, not with the surprise the man doubtless expected. Lord Cecil would not have been surprised that morning if he had been arrested for murder. "I don't understand—"

"If you'll step aside for a moment," said the man, very respectfully, indeed, and apologetically, "I will show you. These are the items," and he took some papers from a greasy pocket-book and read them off.

Lord Cecil recognised them as some old debts, bills and I O U's, which he had almost forgotten.

"Yes, that is right, I expect," he said, gravely, and very wearily. "But I thought," he said, as the idea occurred to him, "that there was no arrest for debt now?"

The man smiled almost pityingly. "Nor is there, my lord; it's called contempt of court now. You have been ordered to pay these sums by the court, and you haven't done it, therefore it's contempt, and they take you on that."

"Ordered to pay them?" said Cecil. "When? I have heard nothing of it."

The man looked incredulous of so much innocence for a moment, but, after a long and steady scrutiny of the pale, grave face, with its frank honest eyes, he looked puzzled.

"Hem! I don't quite see. Ah, yes, I do! These processes have been served on your lawyers, no doubt, my lord. Haven't they let you know?"

"No," said Lord Cecil, quietly. "I have been away in Ireland. I've seen no letters—"

"It's plain enough, my lord," said the officer. "You ought to have had your letters forwarded. The court has been under the impression that you've neglected the order out of sheer contrariness, and so these creditors have got the warrant. Ah, my lord, no end of mischief comes of you swell gentlemen not opening your letters. I'm very sorry, but here's the warrant, and I'm bound to execute it."

Lord Cecil did not by any means fully comprehend the man's meaning even yet.

not one quarter of this in the bank," he said, quietly.

The man looked rather nonplussed. "Well, I don't know what's to be done," he said, looking at the pavement with a frown. "Your lordship has got friends—I'll go anywhere—to your lordship's rooms, while you communicate with them. Of course I must have the money. Duty's duty. As a soldier, your lordship knows that."

Lord Cecil nodded. "Come to my rooms," he said. The man called a cab, and they got into it and were driven to Clarges St.

To attempt to describe the valet's face when he saw the kind of person whom his master had brought back with him would be difficult, and quite impossible to picture it when Lord Cecil requested him to get this person breakfast.

"I will telegraph to my uncle, the masquis of Stoyle, while you are eating it," he said; but the man looked up reproachfully.

"Will you send your man, my lord," he said, significantly, and Lord Cecil started, for he realised that he was a prisoner.

He sent the telegram, requesting the marquis to order his bankers to pay the sum to Lord Cecil's order; then went and stood by the window and looked out on the street; and in a few minutes he had forgotten the presence of the officer and all pertaining to him.

"Mr. Garland—Miss Marlowe," rang through his brain to the exclusion of anything else.

A couple of hours passed, and the return telegram arrived. It was short and emphatic:

"Sorry. Quite impossible. STOYLE." Lord Cecil read it, and, with a grim smile, tossed it across the table to the officer, who was enjoying himself with one of Cecil's choicest cigars and a glass of whiskey-and-water. He looked aghast.

"Good gracious, my lord! What's to be done?"

"I don't know," said Lord Cecil, shrugging his shoulders, very much as the marquis might have done.

"But—look here, my lord, this is getting serious! Isn't there any other friend? Surely your lordship must know ever so many friends as would only too gladly lend you the money? Think, my lord!"

Lord Cecil shook his head. "I am afraid it is of no use thinking," he said; "I cannot pay the money, and—" He leaned against the window and smiled. "But there is no hurry, I suppose? You can finish your drink."

Before the man could reply, a voice floated through the open window. "Lord Cecil!"

He started, and looked out. A handsome cab was pulled up opposite his door, and Lady Grace was leaning out and looking up at him.

"Lady Grace!" he cried, in amazement.

"Yes; it is I," he said. "Will you come down? I want to speak to you. I could not wait."

He made for the door; but the man rose.

"My lord! my lord!" he said, reproachfully.

Lord Cecil turned pale; then he laughed, and going to the window, said, grimly:

"Lady Grace, I cannot come down to you. Please go. I will see you tomorrow."

War Cost Britain Fifty Billion Pounds

Most of Which was Spent for Des- truction--Moroccan Brigands Kill Spanish Soldiers--Airplane Miss- ing.

LLOYD GEORGE'S SPEECH.

LONDON, Aug. 18. Premier Lloyd George when he appeared in the House of Commons today, announced that it was his intention in his address to the House to deal only with Great Britain's war relations and her industrial position, including the coal mining problems. Many members said that they expected the Premier to announce the Government's plans for Ireland, and expressed disappointment that this subject was not discussed by Mr. Lloyd George. Virtual-ly every member of the House of Commons was in his seat when the Speaker took his chair. The lobbies, galleries and the outside courts were crowded when members of the Ministry arrived. The war cost forty billion pounds, Premier Lloyd George declared in his speech in the House on the financial and industrial situation. Most of this sum was spent for destruction. The Premier asserted that the changing from war to peace conditions would take just as long as the change from peace to war. The first outstanding fact of the present situation was the alarming adverse trade balance. The import restric- tions which will terminate September 1st, the Premier continued, had given the British manufacturers an oppor- tunity of making and dealing in goods which otherwise would have been hurried here from foreign countries. The Premier said that before the war im- ports had exceeded exports from the United Kingdom by £150,000,000. Re- cepts from foreign investments at present are down to £10,000,000, while Britain has to pay back an ad- verse trade balance of £800,000,000. Labor conditions in the United King- dom, Mr. Lloyd George added, have improved. Of the 3,600,000 men de- mobilized, only 350,000 have not been absorbed in industries. The national debt, the Premier declared, has grown from £651,000,000 to £7,800,000,000. Pensions cost the Government £100,000,000 yearly. Private expenditure in the aggregate, the Premier said, was more formidable than public ex- penditure. One way of meeting the increase in expenditure was to in- crease production, but the output is less in everything except agriculture. The Premier declares that if the country continues in the way in which it is going, the adverse trade balance would reach £1,000,000,000 compared to £150,000,000 before the war. "We cannot prosper," Mr. Lloyd George said, "we cannot even exist without recovering and maintaining our in- ternational trade. We must bring up the trade balance, adding to our ex- ports and lessening our imports." "The world is suffering from shell shock on a big scale, but all of this will pass away," said Lloyd George. One of the arguments in favor of re- ducing the number of working hours, the Premier said, was that the re- duction in time would not mean a re- duction in output. There has, he said, been a substantial reduction in the hours of labor, and it has been found that the output has been reduced al- most the same mathematical propor- tion. Labor has made tremendous gains during the last two or three years, the Premier added, and these could not be maintained if production did not increase. During the session of the House there was introduced a bill that represented an agreement between employer and employees. The bill calls for a 48-hour week and what are considered living wages.

MOROCCAN BRIGANDE WAR-LIKE.

PARIS, Aug. 18. Moroccan brigands, under command of their leader Raesul, are reported to have ambushed a Spanish force accompanying a food convoy between the towns of St. Guedia and Egalla, killing twelve soldiers and wounding a number of others, four officers being among the casualties. The column, however, succeeded in escaping. Raesul is said to be organizing a vast en- trenchment camp between Tangiers and Tetouan near Fondock. Natives report that an elaborate system of trenches and blockhouses has been constructed, all the works being modern in character.

ANXIOUS ABOUT AIRPLANE.

PARIS, Aug. 17. Anxiety is felt here over the lack of news of the arrival of the giant air- plane Goliath at Dakar. The airplane was last reported on Saturday morn- ing at 3.10 o'clock passing over Port Mienne, 300 miles from Dakar. At that time the machine had accomplish- ed the worst part of the journey from Magadar to Dakar, having crossed the Sahara.

BRITISH WOOL BOARD CRITICIZ- ED.

MONTREAL, Aug. 18. The Montreal Gazette says the op- erations of the British Wool Board is coming in for some share and strong criticism by importers of woollen textiles in Montreal. Any number of these contend that their feelings of resentment and even wnderment will be reflected by the public in general once the situation is understood, when the continued high prices of articles of woollen clothing are traced to their responsible source. More than that, it is put forward that the established trade almost traditional and long car- ried on between Canada and the Motherland in clothing materials is being dislocated and even jeopardized, that American textile products are re- placing those of a similar character once so cheaply and easily obtained in the Midlands. This is not all in con- nection with clothing. From across the line a new situation has arisen. Even with the protection of the pre- sent Canadian tariff, United States "ready-mades" are competing with domestic suits in the home market, because American markets, under more inflexible or intelligent Govern- ment control than that which is ex- ercised in the British Isles, are able to do business in this country because of and under the high prices prevail- ing here. That once having obtained a foothold a new element of competi- tion, which may become permanent, is introduced quite unnecessarily, it is contended, were those in control of the woollen industry in Great Britain fully alive to the situation. In the last analysis it is maintained that the British Wool Board, a Government in- stitution, is purblind in its manage- ment of the allotments of cloths to Canada, and that with the increasing production of wool in Australia and New Zealand, the chief sources of supply, the present prices savor of "profiteering" in an aggravated form, whether through design and intention or lack of knowledge to the serious hardship which the prevailing high prices impose upon the public of Can- ada.

COMMON SENSE WANTED.

LONDON, Aug. 17. Interviewed before leaving for Can- ada to-day on the Melita, General Sir Richard Turner said he was profound- ly impressed by the extent of the hospitality shown Canadians in Eng- land, and in Liverpool especially. The action of the Lord Mayor of Liverpool would not soon be effaced from the memory of Canadian troops. His speeches have left a lasting effect on their minds. Continuing, he said, the difficulties which occurred were merely such as happen in all armies, and they must not be taken too much notice of. Let every part of the Em- pire try and view them in the proper perspective. They can then be easily adjusted. The common sense of our people is going to level off the hot- heads. The returned soldiers have practically taken a united stand for law and order. I believe the common sense of the English people will enable them to come out on top, despite the present Labor unrest. In Liverpool you seem to be constantly disturbed by industrial troubles. Between Feb. and Aug. 1st we have lost 45 days of shipping possibilities in the repatriation of Canadian soldiers through one strike and another in Liverpool. These are serious matters if likely to con- tinue. But I am hopeful the strong common sense of the British people will be a check upon them. Sir Arthur Harris, director of the British Min- istry of Shipping in Canada, is also a passenger on the Melita.

RELEASED, BUT WARNED.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 17. Solomon P. Almazoff, charged with seditious utterances, was released yesterday by order of the Immigration Board. Magistrate Noble, chairman, warned Almazoff that the decision was not final, and that if his future conduct warranted it, the Crown might make another application for his deportation at another time. Ex- plaining the reason for his decision, the Magistrate said that for the first time in any cases before him arising out of Labor troubles he had met with difficulty in giving a decision. "I feel very strongly that had the matter been left entirely to my colleagues in the ordinary way as a purely immigration matter, the verdict might have been against the accused," he declared.

Beautiful Suzy Depsy Serves Term in Prison

FOR TRADING WITH ENEMY. Whatever may be the change of opinion in other parts of the world towards the Huns, now that the war is officially at an end, the French will undoubtedly continue to hate and dis- trust them for generations to come. As soon as the armistice was signed, some soft-hearted people began to feel that the time had come for less severity. That such is not the view of the majority of the French people was indicated by the recent trial of Suzy Depsy, the beautiful Parisian actress. The charge against Mme. Depsy was that she had been trading with the enemy. The offence was not a very grave one. There was no suggestion that Mme. Suzy Depsy was disloyal to her country or that she would have betrayed any secrets to the Germans that might have aided them in winning the war. It happened that the Germans could supply the actress with an article that she was not able to obtain elsewhere, and she accordingly committed the offence of "trading with the enemy." The popular actresses of Paris are usually the spoiled darlings of the public, and they are a law unto themselves in matters of conduct, but Mme. Suzy Depsy soon discovered that she had overstepped the bounds of popu- lar patience. She had committed a crime which the public of Paris would not tolerate, even though she was a very beautiful woman. She was con- victed and sentenced to serve a term of ten months in prison. Her beauty did save her a little, however. Her husband was implicated in the same offence, and he went to prison for eighteen months besides paying a fine of 2,000 francs. Suzy Depsy is married to Emille Guillier, who is one of the best known of the prize fight promoters of France.

The Big Labrador Project.

AEROPLANE MAKES FLIGHT.

The commercial possibilities of the aeroplane have just been demonstrated in a most striking manner by the expedition of the H. V. Green Co., of New York to Northern Labrador. The company is a body of capitalists who have recently begun to look to the making of profits in the pulp industry. Some months ago, as told by a party who reached town recently, they took over the steamer Granville, which had been engaged on the mail and passenger service between points on the Bay of Fundy. She was a ship of tug type, with accommodation for about 20 passengers and carrying capacity of 1,000 barrels. At Halifax she was quickly converted to meet the ideas of her new owners, and with two aeroplanes and one hydroplane on board as part of her equipment, started for the north. Battle Harbor was reached on July 20th, and as it was intended to survey newly acquired timber properties inland, the work of building an aerodrome at William's Harbor, some 21 miles north of there and behind Fishing Ships' Harbor, was begun. This was abandoned when Mr. Notley, a furrier and salmon fisher came down the coast and stated a much better site was available up the Alexis River. The Granville left Battle Harbor, and proceeding 28 miles up the river reached the new drome, a stretch of sandy soil covered by turf, about a mile long and half a mile wide. The place, which is under water for perhaps half the year, was much exposed to the weather, and the first tents erected on it, though the "pegs" were driven six feet deep, were torn away by heavy winds. Fortunately the flying machines were not damaged, and one was quickly made ready for service. In a few days it flew over some 2,500 square miles of the property allowing photographs to be taken of the same, and did, as calculated by the owners, as much timber cruising as could be accomplished in the ordinary way in 10 years. One of the conditions against the foot traveller in the area is the continual presence of mosquitoes, which were found to be of the largest and most aggressive type and proved most annoying, though the members of the expedition were protected by specially devised helmets. The expedition was under direction of Capt. Daniel Owen, a native of Annapolis, N.S., where he was a lawyer before the war, but went overseas with the Canadians, lost an eye in action and for a time was a prisoner in the hands of the Germans. The party on board the Granville, besides the regular crew, consisted of about twenty and included doctors, dentists, mill-site men, five airplane pilots and wireless men, the expedition having been fitted out regardless of expense and with every provision for success. Most of the party were men who had seen war service. The Granville has now returned to New York and it is the intention of the Greene Co. to erect pulp and sawmills on their far northern property as soon as possible. Paper mills may be considered later, but in this regard the matter of obtaining skilled labor would be a serious problem. While coming south the Granville met at Battle Harbor the Seaman Paper Co. party, who had left cruisers at Hamilton Inlet to examine their properties and also a "picture" man, who proposed going inland to photograph the famous Grand Falls.

An Unpropitious Opening.

The battle of Vimero, fought Aug. 21, 1809, was on no great scale, but it is notable as the first noteworthy victory gained in the Peninsula by Wellington, who until then was known only as an Indian general. Sir Arthur Wellesley, as he then was, did not even hold the chief command of the British Expeditionary Force. Two old generals—Sir Hew Dalrymple and Sir Harry Burrard—ranked him; and by the bungling of the politicians (as often happens) they were sent out one after the other, in such a way that the command changed hands twice in quick succession. Burrard, indeed, had arrived already, when the French general, Junot, suddenly attacked, and he had previously interfered to paralyze a promising advance; but he did not interfere in the actual battle, which was brought about by an unexpected attack on the part of Junot. The ensuing engagement was hotly contested for a time, but ended in the complete repulse of the French with a loss of over 3,000, while the British casualties were but 750 all told. In fact, there is no doubt that if the success had been followed up, Lisbon must have fallen; but Burrard again interposed to check pursuit, and the chance was lost. Then Dalrymple arrived, and, on the French offering to negotiate, he decided to suspend operations. The result was the "Convention of Cin-

A Famous British Admiral.

On August 19, 1711, Admiral Edward Boscawen was born, third son of Hugh Boscawen, created first Viscount of Falmouth, whose descendant is now the sixth of that title, and on Friday and Saturday, August 17 and 18, 1859, this child of that first peer defeated the French in Lagos Bay, off the south-western extremity of Portugal, and his son succeeded as the third Viscount. Boscawen entered the Royal Navy in 1736. In 1739 he helped in South America to capture Porto Bello from the Spaniards, and in 1741 in bombarding the French at Carthagena, at the south-east corner of Spain. In 1747 he was wounded in the British defeat of the French off Cape Finisterre, at the north-west corner of Spain. That year he was appointed commander-in-chief on land and sea in the East Indies, but in 1748 he failed to take from the Dutch Pondicherry, in south-east India. From 1751 he was Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty, was made a Privy Councillor, was commander of the North American coast, also in the English Channel off Brest on the north coast of France and in the Bay of Biscay. While commanding the Mediterranean Fleet he defeated the French in Lagos Bay, whose Admiral, De la Clde, lost both his legs and died next day. Of the French ships, the "Centaur" was wrecked after three hours fighting, and its captain and half its crew killed; the "Temeiraire," and "Modeste" were taken and the "Redoubtable" and "Ocean" were run ashore and burned, the scattered remnants being driven into Cadiz. For such eminent services Boscawen was appointed General of Marines, with £3,000 a year, but died on January 10, 1761, at Hatchland Park, in Surrey, a residence which, in the words of his epitaph, "he had just finished at the expense of the enemies of his country."

Mrs. Chas. Peden Gains 27 Pounds in Few Weeks.

Was Twice Examined and Each Time Told An Operation Was Only Hope.

"I have just finished my third bottle of Tanlac and have gained twenty-seven pounds," was the remarkable statement made by Mrs. Charles Peden, residing at 559 Main street, Huntsville, Ala. Mrs. Peden is one of the best known and highest respected women of that thriving little city, where she has made her home for a number of years. "When I commenced taking the medicine," she continued, "I only weighed ninety-eight (98) pounds, now I weigh 125 pounds, and never felt better in my life. For years I have suffered with a bad form of stomach trouble, constipation and the pains took the form of torments. I was twice examined and each time I was told that I had appendicitis and that an operation would be my only hope. I had fallen so low that I only weighed ninety-eight pounds and was so weak I could hardly get around."

Asquith Asked Peace in 1917?

Berlin, August 18.—H. H. Asquith, the British Premier, launched a peace fever in August, 1917, according to a letter written by Frau Frieda Perlen, President of the Stuttgart branch of the International Women's League for Peace and Freedom, to the Freiheit. She quotes a letter she received at that time from Jonkheer J. O. Jong Van Beek Endonk, Secretary of the Dutch Anti-military League, in which he informed her that Mr. Asquith had asked him to put the direct question to the German Chancellor, saying that a "good answer would be of tremendous importance." The letter to Frau Perlen said it was thought that Mr. Asquith was ready for an understanding if the Reichstag should demonstrate it ruled the situation and really possessed power in Germany. This point, it was said, would be carried if the majority of the Reichstag should succeed in bringing out an unequivocal statement regarding Belgium. The letter begged her to do her utmost to induce the Reichstag to issue such a statement. Van Beek said that the declaration of Dr. George Michaelis, then German Imperial Chancellor, relative to safeguarding boundaries had, as he conceived it, created an unfavorable impression abroad and declared that he wanted established whether the Reichstag would not make clear the German stand regarding Belgium. Frau Perlen states that she took the letter to members of the Reichstag, who promised to present the matter before committees, but she adds: "The leading men of the Reichstag parties were so weak against the government of a military dictatorship, they were guilty of a collapse."

"I had no appetite at all scarcely, and what little I did eat would cause me to form in my stomach, which gave me palpitation of the heart, sick headaches and a dizzy feeling about the head. When these spells came on me I would get awfully nervous, I would rest and sleep but little, and I had fallen off until I was almost 'skin and bone' and my strength and energy were slowly leaving me. I had a dread of the future and could see nothing but the operating table and knife. I had a perfect horror of an operation, but had made up my mind that it was either life or death, and prepared to submit to it. I had made all preparations for the operation and called in my sister to tell her good-bye, as I did not know whether I would live to see her again or not. My sister begged and pleaded with me not to allow them to cut on me, and told me to wait and try a good tonic for a while. The next day as I returned from the consultation, I thought of what she said, and as I had heard so much about Tanlac, I decided to try it as a last resort and stopped at Gilbert's Drug Store and got a bottle. Of course I had lost heart and had no faith in the medicine, but to please my sister I made up my mind to take it, and, oh, what a happy day that was for me!"

"I never returned for the operation, but just kept taking the Tanlac. Right from the start I began to feel better. The medicine seemed to take hold right at once. It had a soothing effect and in a few days the sharp pains at all. I was so happy over the wonderful improvement in my condition that I sent for my neighbors to tell them how much better I felt. I sent and got another bottle of Tanlac, and have just finished taking my third bottle and feel like I have been made all over again into a new woman."

"As I said before, I now weigh 125 pounds and my improvement has been so rapid that none of my clothes are big enough for me. I will have to make them all over again. I now have a ravenous appetite and my husband says I am simply eating him out of house and home. I have my appetite gone back to my coffee, which I was told not to touch. Those terrible pains in my back and head have all disappeared, and I sleep like a child. I am no longer nervous and when I get up in the mornings I feel refreshed, cheerful and bright. I am now able to attend to my household duties and I feel as if I had started life all over again. My husband is highly delighted and my recovery is the talk of the neighborhood. I do nothing but rejoice all day long over the recovery of my health and praise Tanlac to everybody. "I feel so grateful for my escape from the operating table and the knife, that you may publish what I have said; you may, if you wish, tell other women suffering as I was, so come and see me, and I will be glad to tell them all about my case. Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative."

Some of Those Trite Phrases.

(From the Toronto Star.) A headline in the press having referred to John Burroughs as "eighty-two years young," New York Life says that every writer must call somebody eighty years young at least once. "It was," says Life, "a fine thing to say the first time, good the next ten times, fair the first few hundred times, but it begins to get a little stale." Other trite phrases which should be dropped are "acid test," "psychological moment," and "common or garden." It is interesting to note that in Toronto the city editors seem to have put a ban on the word "collage," which a year ago was scattered over every page. No doubt the word will find a permanent place in language because it so well expresses so much, but it was being overused to such an extent that sensitive persons began to resent the sight and sound of it. After a well earned rest it will probably re-appear and take its place modestly among the serviceable words and phrases which this great war, like lesser ones preceding it, have added to the always growing English language.

The Tube to France.

Plans for a tunnel under the English Channel, discussed so frequently during the last sixty-odd years, are now, says Popular Mechanics, on the verge of materialization. It is announced that England and France are in perfect accord on the subject, and that war experiences have robbed its opponents of most of their contentions. From an engineering standpoint no serious difficulty is anticipated; through the impervious gray chalk underlying the channel bottom electric drills will doubtless find easy and rapid progress. The plan calls for two 20-foot tubes, side by side, connected at short intervals by cross openings. A drainage tunnel underneath disposes of sewage water. At the centre of its length the tunnel dips to its lowest grade for one mile, constituting a water lock which could be flooded from the shore in case of military necessity. The total length from near Dover to a point between Calais and Boulogne will be thirty miles, of which 22 will be 35 to 175 feet below sea bottom. The channel's greatest depth is 180 feet. Estimates allow five years for completion, at a cost of $100,000,000. Electric trains will make the passage in 40 to 45 minutes, giving England direct access by rail to all parts of Europe.

Oporto Stocks.

The following message was received yesterday by the Marine Department from Oporto: "Large codfish 94 to 100 shillings per qtl, small 92 to 94. Old stock is now all cleared off and there is no demand whatever. Prices are very irregular and it is very difficult to quote."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE FUN OF BEING DECENT.

"After all," said a little friend of mine to me the other evening, "there's an awful lot of fun in being decent when you don't want to."

She had been forced by the exigencies of circumstance to spend a day for which she had planned something much nearer to her heart's desire, with an aunt whose personality always sets her on edge. In the past when this has happened, she has been inclined to take it out on the mother who is the link that binds her to this unwelcome aunt and, as far as is possible, on the aunt herself.

But this time, for some reason, she made up her mind that as long as the thing had to be done she would be just as decent as she knew how all day. And the result was the above remark, accompanied by a happy little sigh (sighs aren't always unhappy, by any means.)

Or Substitute "Satisfaction" For "Fun"

Now perhaps the word "fun" in that statement might not strike you as exactly suitable, but substitute "satisfaction" for it and see if you don't find it pretty good philosophy.

I think it's as true of character-building as it is of saving money, that once you get started doing it, there is a solid satisfaction in each step you make. And not only along the line of being decent to people you don't want to be decent to, but along every line.

You Feel A solid Sense of Satisfaction When—

When you lay aside the trashy book for the helpful article; when you get up at the proper time in the morning instead of dawdling away a half hour and having to chase it all day; when you control an impulse towards a devastating burst of temper; when you keep yourself from the temptation to pass on some tidbit of unkind gossip; when you

DAY AND NIGHT.

Our days are full of care and dread, of toll that never ceases; we trudge along with weary tread to gather up the pieces; the same old tasks we've done for years, the struggle and endeavor; the same old doubts, the same old fears, the same old grind forever. But there is night that brings us sleep, when we are worn and aching, the solace for the eyes that weep, the balm for spirits breaking. Through restful hours, upon the hay, we dream of youth and laughter, forgetting every bygone day, and days that follow perhaps on astral plumes, and gaze down from a yellow star upon this world's dominions. And this is all that keeps us sane, the sleep that night is bringing, for days, are full of stress and pain, of being stung and stinging. Our days are full of played out dreams, of empty words and phrases, of ruined plans and broken schemes, and hopes deferred like blazes. But night comes dripping from the sky, from heaven's spangled rafter; here is the hay—here let me lie, and dream of love and laughter.

Government Advertising

The announcement that another Dominion government loan will shortly be placed on the market, serves as a reminder of how much of the success of former loans was due to proper methods of publicity. The hundreds of millions raised in Canada during the past few years would not have been forthcoming except for the liberal and skillful use made of the advertising columns of the daily press.

Once upon a time, and not so very long ago at that, the advertising given to newspapers by our federal administration was really hardly more than a sort of subvention in return for party support. It was given out with the idea of helping the newspaper and, to a greater or less extent, its purpose was achieved.

This has been changed. The government has managed to grasp the thoroughly business proposition that the proper object of advertising is to help the advertiser. This principle was applied in connection with the loan campaigns, the advertising being placed with regard only to the value

The Economic Situation.

It is a pity that we are unable to obtain here the full report of the British Prime Minister's important speech yesterday in the House of Commons; but even the very brief cabled summary contains some striking sentences, backed up by striking figures. Most of the forty billion pounds which the war cost the country was spent, he says, on destruction. Longer and more learned statements could not put the case better. The war was waste, sheer waste—waste of material, waste of labour, waste of precious human lives. Yet the world which committed the waste is continuing to commit it, except that the present unnecessary prodigal extravagance evident everywhere is far more reprehensible and less excusable. There is only one thing, broadly speaking, which from an economic point of view has offset the loss caused by this waste, and that is the greatly increased power of production called into existence by the demands of war, which again has its set-off in the depleted ranks of the workers and the hopeless disorganization of industry. We say "has offset," and speak of the "power" of production merely, because with the advent of peace both terms have steadily lost their application. The world is able to work, but for the present at least is not willing. But it is both willing and able to spend, and it is spending with a will.

An end must come to it soon, or the gloomy forebodings of more than one economic pessimist will be fulfilled. You cannot eat your cake and have it. Yet the world, particularly that part of it which goes by, or has appropriated, the name of Labour, is not merely eating larger slices of cake, but evincing the greatest disinclination to bake more. The desert traveller can have a perfect orgy, if he wishes, with his last quart of water, but there will be trouble ahead. The spendthrift is a millionaire as long as a dollar remains in his pocket. The conditions prevailing in England, to which the English papers bear abundant witness, are different only in degree from those to be observed in other countries, our own among them. Yet it is most likely that the remedy will only come in the one inevitable way, under the sharp spur of necessity. For nothing is harder than to persuade the average man, by words alone, that he does not stand alone; that even the possession of an ample bank balance is no justification for extravagance; that that extravagance is the one thing that will keep prices up and deplete the bank balance with double rapidity; that the present prosperity may in truth prove the last crumb of cake or the last drop of water, or a radiant bubble that may be pricked at any moment; or that laying down tools will inevitably bring him less in the end, whatever temporary improvement in his fortunes it may extort, than using them and adding to his own prosperity by adding to the world's. "Punch" recently showed a picture of a labourer cudgelling his brains to find a means of going on strike to get his unemployment pay raised. Lloyd George draws the same picture, wanting the humour. Fortunately, the war has proved and brought to a high state of efficiency the capacity of all enlightened nations to work and to save. Until they are in a mood again to do both, peace will eventually compel them as sharply as did war.

No Whole Holiday To-Morrow.

REGATTA WILL BE RUN OFF IN MORNING, HOWEVER.
The statement in this morning's News that to-morrow would be a whole holiday is incorrect. Despite this, however, the Regatta races will be run off in the morning and the Garden Party in the afternoon, as planned. Few, if any, people will be able to witness the races and in all probability many of the rowers will not be able to get down. This is what comes from contrariness and bungling.

Labrador Reports.

The following reports were received from Labrador by the Department of Marine and Fisheries this morning: Macovick—Light, east winds; no ice in sight; and sign of fish. Holton and Smokey—Calm, clear; light open ice distant; good sign of fish. Grady—Calm and cloudy. Domino—Calm; good fishing with hook and line. Venison Island and Battle Harbor—Light, west wind; clear; little fish with hook and line.

Presented to Mt. Cashel.

The arch erected by Sir John C. Crosbie opposite his premises and the General Post Office, in honor of the Prince of Wales during his visit, is now almost entirely taken down. Sir John has presented all the material to the Christian Brothers of Mount Cashel, and Mr. Lester has kindly sent his horse and long cart to convey the material to the grounds of the institution. Several of the Mount Cashel houses and carts are also employed in the work of conveyance.

Father Finn's Garden Party.

Father Finn's Garden Party will take place at Grand Falls on Tuesday next, 26th, and the energetic Committees of the ladies and gentlemen, are putting forth every effort to make the event a success. The funds will be devoted to the erection of the new Church, and arrangements are being made to start operations in the spring. It goes without saying that the numerous friends of Father Finn throughout the island will assist him in his good work.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES GARTRAIN MOVEMENTS.

$100,000 Needed for Church Repairs.

Catholic Citizens Met Last Evening and Contributed $67,000—$33,000 Yet to Go.

The parishioners of the Roman Catholic Cathedral met last evening, when His Grace, Archbishop Roche, made an appeal to the congregation for the sum of one hundred thousand dollars with which to make needful repairs to the Cathedral. A New York firm has agreed to replace the iron roof with one of copper, supplying labor and material, at a cost of $30,000. The upper and lower windows can also be replaced at the same figure; $25,000, it is estimated, will be required to repair the walls, and $15,000 for the steps. His Grace made an appeal for the amount, and before the night was over the sum of $35,000 was promised, which, with the $32,000 previously received, made up $67,000; $33,000 remains to be collected and there is no doubt that it will be forthcoming before the week is over. Last evening's meeting was an enthusiastic one, and there was not the shadow of a doubt that the necessary amount would be subscribed.

To-Morrow's Garden Party.

The Orphanage grounds last evening presented a busy scene, with a large number of men working hard at building stalls and erecting tents. This evening more work will be done and more volunteers are asked for. The football fives have been arranged as follows: 3.45 p.m.—Star vs. C.E.I. 4.30 p.m.—C.C.C. vs. B.I.S. Collegians—Bye. 5 p.m.—Collegians vs. winners of 2. 5.45—Winners of 3 vs. winners of 1. Beautiful gold medals recently received from the Old Country will be presented to the winners.

Nfld. St. Andrew's Society Outing to Bay Bulls, Wednesday, Aug. 20th. Train leaves Railway Station at 2 p.m. sharp.

The Majestic.

Alice Brady, in "The Whirlpool," stars at the Majestic Theatre this evening. Closely resembling Norma Talmadge, she takes her part with excellent results and nobody in the large hall had a word against her. Bella Cavallo is a decoy in a large gambling establishment, where one of the frequenters falls in love with her stealing jewels to give her, he is lenient. Judge suspends sentence. This is later unjustified by the second arrest of the young gambler, who this time has the charge of murder to his name. Bella meets the Judge and worries him. While they are worried she uses her influence to prove the innocence of her former lover. Succeeding in this she eventually settles down to married life while the convicted man is released from prison and begins life anew.

Car Went Through Fence

An automobile had a narrow escape from becoming wrecked at eight o'clock last evening, when, at Pleasantville, it ran through the fence at the side of the road and, smashing it down, tipped perilously into a ditch. Fortunately, however, it did not overturn altogether, and not much damage was done. There were four men in the car at the time, and the driver was trying to turn her to come up the road toward town.

A Sugar Shortage.

A shortage of sugar in the city will likely send the price up very shortly. A supply is expected by a boat due from Montreal about the 25th. The sugar refiners are stated to be overcrowded and the supplies of raw sugar short.

Shipping Notes.

S. S. Sheba has arrived at Clarendville with a cargo of coal to the Reid Newfoundland Company. S. S. Prospero sailed at 3.30 last evening for North Sydney, for bunker coal. The schooner Gordon E. Moulton has entered at Lark Harbor to load codfish from R. Moulton, Limited, for Oporto.

Wedding Bells.

MURPHY—CANTWELL.
A very pretty wedding took place on August 12th at the R. C. Cathedral, when Miss May Murphy and Mr. John Cantwell of Cape Spear were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. Green. The bride looked lovely in a dress of white satin trimmed with Irish lace and pearls, and hat of pink Crepe de Chine. She carried a bouquet of carnations and maidenhair fern. She was attended by Miss Winnie Miller and Miss Lizzie Shelly. The bridegroom was supported by his brother, Mr. West Cantwell. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Hayward Avenue, after which the happy pair motored to Bay Bulls where the honeymoon will be spent. The bride was the recipient of many gifts, among them being several cheques. The groom's present to her was a cheque and a set of white fox furs, and to the bridesmaids gold rings.

Thanks Newfoundland.

The Hon. Secretary of the Silver Thimble Fund, England, has written thanking Newfoundland for the contribution made and shipped by the Digby. Mrs. George Carter collected the thimbles, they amounting to $222. The proceeds of the fund are now being devoted to the Merchant Seaman's Hospital at Greenwich, Eng.

TO-NIGHT'S GAME.
The Cubs have just got to beat the B.I.S. to-night if they hope to be able to clash with the Red Lions for the pennant. On the other hand, the Irishmen never take anything lying down, and with the ideal weather conditions at present existing it is therefore likely that a large gathering of fans will be present at St. George's Field to-night to see them go to it. This will be the last game but one for the season—the other being between the Red Lions and Wanderers on Thursday night. The lineups will likely be:

CUBS:	P.	O'Leary
	C.	O'Reilly
	1b.	French
	2b.	Wallace
	3b.	Delaney
	s.s.	O'Donnell

EXPLAINED AT LAST.
A young lady unversed in the mysteries of baseball was recently presented to one of our local players. "I love the game," she confided to him. "I love especially to watch the man at bat. It is so cute, too, the way he keeps minding the ground gently with the end of the bat. Why does he do that?" "Well, you see, miss," explained the player, "the worms have an annoying habit of coming up to see who's batting, and that naturally puts the batter out a bit; so he just taps them on the head lightly, and down they go again."

CITY TEAM NOT PICKED.
We are asked by the Intertown Baseball Committee to refute the statement in last night's Herald that the "home-team" is picked. The personnel which appeared is therefore incorrect, as several practices will be necessary between the "A" and "B" teams before the selection can be made.

THE INTER-TOWN GAMES.
The Grand Falls' team will arrive here on next Sunday week, and the first game will be played on St. George's Field on Monday afternoon—probably at six o'clock so as to give everyone an opportunity of witnessing it. The second and third games will be played on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon, and on Thursday (Sept. 4th) both teams will embark for Grand Falls where the remaining three games of the series will be played. In case of a tie the seventh and final game will be played there. Great interest is being manifested in the outcome of the inter-town schedule this year, particularly as the "papermen" are invading the home territory in a desperate endeavor to wrench the Reid trophy from the hands of the local boys. They have a very strong aggregation, and our city lads will have to improve considerably in all departments if they hope to retain the championship.

GOOD NEWS.
It is currently reported that the St. Andrew's Athletic Association is going to invade the baseball diamond next season. Come in, boys, the water's fine.

League Football.
The C.E.I. last night defeated the Collegians, in one of the best exhibitions for the season, by 4 goals to 2. The game was better than the score would indicate, being close all through and devoid of rough play, both sides getting in some very good combination work. Winning the toss, the Collegians elected to play down the field, with the wind in their favour, but this advantage was only slight. In the first half the C.E.I. scored twice through Earle; while Mews founds the net for the Collegians. The Collegians, though they showed splendid team work all through, were weak on the goal, and were up against a splendid defence in Thistle and Churchill. Mr. F. Brien was referee.

PRINCE EN ROUTE TO P. E. I.

HALIFAX, Aug. 18. The Prince of Wales sailed at 9.30 to-night for Charlottetown on board the Renown. The destroyers Dragon and Dauntless accompanied the battleship.

BELIEVE WELHELM SAFE.

AMERONGEN, Aug. 16. Although it has been known in Amerongen that former Emperor William, in the hope of settling down to the life of a country gentleman in Holland, had been negotiating for the castle of Doorn, the correspondent to-day was unable to definitely confirm a despatch from Utrecht that the deal had been completed. "Nothing has been settled," was the reply of those close to Herr Hohenzoellern when questioned, but they added that they could not deny the report. Despite official announcements of the intention of the Allies to try the former Emperor, the general belief among the advisers of Herr Hohenzoellern, it is said, is that the Allies will not make a serious attempt to bring him to trial.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE BILL FOR ENGLAND.

LONDON, Aug. 18. Sir Robert Stephenson Horne, Minister of Labor, announced to-day that the Government hopes at the next session of Parliament, to introduce a bill providing for unemployment insurance on a contributory basis.

AMERICAN PROTESTS TO MEXICO.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. Vigorous representations were made to the Mexican Government to-day by the State Department, concerning the capture and detention of the two American army aviators by bandits, who demand $15,000 ransom.

GERMANY ORGANIZING BIG POLICE FORCE.

COBLENZ, Aug. 17. The military of the German police, allegedly contrary to the terms of the Treaty of Peace, has already been begun, according to information reaching American authorities here. In the city of Sassel the police were recently completely organized on military lines by the Prussian Government, it is said, and are now equipped with steel helmets and rifles and follow the routine of a military company in their barracks. Of the three hundred police in office in Cassel, 100 have been transferred to the new organization, and the remainder have been given places in the civil service. The ultimate size of the new militarized police organizations has not been announced. Those studying the demobilization and re-organization of the German Army say that the significance of the militarizing of the police in Germany is great. American officers have records of an announcement that the Prussian State Government, quite apart from the National Government, was to organize a state police force throughout Prussia, which would be virtually military units in garb with full infantry equipment, but would be under control of the Minister of Interior and used only for the repression of internal disorders. These troops, according to the plan, were to be quite apart and in excess of the army permitted Germany under the terms of the Peace Treaty. A semi official announcement.

ANTICIPATING NAVAL REPORT.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Aug. 18.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The Sunday newspapers are anticipating the nature of Admiral Jellicoe's report on the Australian naval defence. The "Sunday Times" says quite probably it will be found that Admiral Jellicoe has suggested that the difficulties of separate control can be overcome by the interchange of officers. It is believed that Admiral Jellicoe made Trenchant remarks regarding discipline, and in addition uttered a stern warning against all political interference in naval matters. The "Sun" states that it is quite understood that Admiral Jellicoe's proposal is for the creation of a truly Imperial Navy under unified command and that it contains a declaration that greater attention should be given to the acquisition of swift light cruisers for the latest type and the support of naval vessels by air fleets. Admiral Henderson's naval base scheme is recommended to be remodelled. Admiral Jellicoe proposes that rewards for naval services be equal to the opportunities of life on land so that officers and men may be forthcoming. Admiral Jellicoe has sailed for New Zealand.

LONDON, Aug. 18.

French and American consular representatives in Mexico City have protested against the order of the Mexican Government, expelling William Cummings in charge of the archives of the British Legation there, it was intimated in official circles to-day. Latest advices received here are that Mr. Cummings still remains in Mexico.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS RETURNING.

LONDON, Aug. 17. (By A.P.)—The steamer Tunisian sailed for Quebec Thursday, carrying 46 officers, two nurses from London, and 216 men from Buxton with their wives and children. Among the officers is Lieut.-Col. S. S. Anderson, Artillery, Moncton. The Melita has 360 other ranks from Buxton, with their dependents, 310 wives and 155 children.

POINCARÉ VISITS ALSACE-LORRAINE.

PARIS, Aug. 18. President Poincaré left Paris last night for a visit to Alsace-Lorraine. He was accompanied by Madame Poincaré.

DRANK HIMSELF TO DEATH.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Aug. 18. Home made rum is blamed as the cause of the suicide of William Bourgojn, aged 60 years, a resident of Fleming, N.E. According to the report received here, the dead man placed the muzzle of a shotgun over his heart, with the butt resting against the bed, and pulled the trigger with almost immediate results. He had been under the influence of a home made brand of liquor, it is said, and it was while in that condition that he committed this act. Bourgojn was in the habit of going on periodical detaches on the home made liquor, and while in that state lived in a small shack adjoining his house, allowing nobody to see him. He had been on one of these detaches for several days, allowing no one to see him, when he finally committed suicide. Besides his wife he is survived by five children.

MONTREAL APPOINTMENTS.

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 18. Drs. J. E. LaBerge and E. DuBeau, of Montreal, have been appointed members of the Superior Council of Public Health for Quebec Province. Mr. A. Proulx has been appointed King's Printer at Quebec, replacing Mr. E. E. Cinqmare. Mr. G. R. Brunet, of Montreal, has been appointed clerk of the Board of Reconciliation and Arbitration.

THINKS WILL CAUSE WAR.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. It was the unanimous opinion of American experts in far eastern affairs at Versailles that war must result from the Peace Treaty provision giving Japan control in the Chinese Province of Shanghai, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was told to-day by Thomas F. Millard, an American writer who was attached to the Chinese peace delegation.

DEMAND RELEASE OF AMERICAN AVIATORS.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. New Mexico, the United States Embassy at Mexico City was instructed to-day, by the State Department, to immediately call upon the Mexican Government for quick action to effect the release of Lieuts. Paul Davis and Harold Peterson, the American army aviators, who were captured by Mexican bandits near Candelaria, Texas, while patrolling the border and are threatened with death unless $15,000 ransom is paid to-day. The State Department's announcement said: "The instructions pointed out the seriousness with which the United States Government views the situation and called for immediate and adequate action." The American Consul at Juarez also was instructed to take all possible steps with the Mexican authorities there to secure the release and protection of the officers. State Department officials said the ransom demanded would be paid as soon as information could be had as to where and to whom the money was to be delivered. It has not been de-

British Kingship. The one stands to-day higher than ever before in the globe of free peoples. The other lies in the dust. The King and Prince who served are of that pattern of Royalty which alone could commend itself to the independent breed of men who inhabit the broad shores of the commonwealth. They are also indispensable to its continued existence. It is in the character of our Princes that the surest guarantee of that union of hearts, which is in reality decisive of the favor of our corporate existence, is to be found the winning charm of the Young Prince who has proved himself in both steel and in glove. Will in previous experience counts for anything. Within the British commonwealth or among the kin of outsider the Prince's journey is much more than a visit of ceremony. It is an odyssey of hope.

BEER RESTRICTIONS REMOVED.

LONDON, Aug. 18. All restrictions on the output of beer have been removed. The Government announced to-day that the act restricting the output will be repealed at the next session of Parliament. Meanwhile, announcement says its provisions will not be enforced.

H. C. L. HIGHEST SINCE WAR BEGAN.

LONDON, Aug. 18. (Reuter Despatch.)—The official Labor Gazette states that the cost of living in England is now higher than at the tensest period of the war, and unless the forthcoming steps against profiteering are more successful than anticipated, the position is likely to become worse. The Gazette gives the increase at 117 per cent, as compared with 1914, but this represents only necessities, inclusive of many other every day articles, far greater efforts are now being made to stop profiteering in fruit, especially bananas, the shippers of bananas insisting that the retail price must not exceed 2 1/4 pence each.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT OF LLOYD GEORGE.

LONDON, Aug. 18. In a three hours speech in the Commons, in which he dealt with Britain's domestic affairs generally, Lloyd George to-day disclosed three important decisions of the Government. Two of these had been widely discussed and the Government's purpose with regard to them was anxiously awaited. One decision was that the post-war plan of ultra protection under which imports were limited to those granted special licenses by the Board of Trade will be abandoned on September 1, and the putting in effect of a measure to prevent "dumping." The second decision was rejected by a majority. Report of Justice Sankey's Coal Commission, which provided for gradual nationalization of coal mines, and in its stead launching a plan for partial Government control, by which the Government will buy out owners of coal lands.

100 PER CENT. INCREASE.

LONDON, Aug. 18. The Government to-day gave out details of the new offer which Sir Auckland Geddes, Minister of Reconstruction, on Friday promised the Executive Committee of Locomotive engineers and firemen would be communicated to it to-day. The Government's offer amounts to an increase of approximately one hundred per cent. over average pre-war rate of pay for classes concerned, and gives the majority of engine drivers a new standard wage in excess of their present earnings. The offer is at present under consideration by the National Union of Railwaymen.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, July 28th, 1919.

THE RIVER PAGEANT.
There is a good deal of fine writing about the River Thames pageant on August Bank Holiday. I believe that the Office of Works had prepared plans for a river pageant on a large and picturesque scale, in which high barges with rich coloring, designed for the occasion, would have formed part, but the scheme was not sanctioned by the Treasury on account of the expense. The procession that is to take place, however, will have its splendors in the Royal barge and the Admiralty barge and the Lord Mayor's barge, and its deep significance in the pinnaces, minesweepers, lifeboats, and other small naval craft carrying officers and men of nearly all the shipping houses, marine associations, training ships, fishermen's associations, and Sea Scouts. The Royal barge will be rowed by the King's watermen in their rich liveries. Nothing of the kind has been seen on the Thames in our time, but all who collect or study London topographical views know how big a part the river played in London pageant up to the reign of William IV. London knows little about her ships and sailors, and since the so-called Municipal Reform party succeeded in ruining the penny steamers which gave so much pleasure and instruction to the ordinary Londoner it has been less. The procession on Bank Holiday ought to renew London's sense that it exists by the sea.

EMERGENCY DWELLINGS.
The model of an army hut transformed into a Lingerow whose exhibition to the public has been a long promised is now on view on the Horse Guards Parade, St. James's Park. Its exterior remains unchanged. It is just as ugly as a dwelling place can be, and will probably look even uglier when given the setting of an ordinary house. But inside it is extremely comfortable, well lighted, heated, and ventilated. The arrangement of the partitions can, of course, be varied as required, but it would be difficult to improve on this model. The main door, set at the side, opens on to a passage wide enough to serve as a playroom for children. At the end is the largest of the three bedrooms, which measures 15 feet by 10 feet. The two bedrooms open from the corridor, and at the other end is a large living room extending right across the hut and so lighted on both sides. Beyond it are the bathroom and scullery. The furnishing of this model has been done at an approximate cost of $1,625. One admires the result, but feels that it would have been better to show how inexpensively such a hut could be furnished. The average cost of an army hut is $500, the cost of conversion into a bungalow is another $1,500, and the life of a bungalow is from fifteen to twenty years. The use of these huts will serve to tide people over an emergency, but they cannot take the place of the promised model dwellings.

LADIES AND WESTMINSTER.

The Peace celebrations and the holiday in the provinces brought great numbers of visitors to Westminster and the Houses of Parliament, and members were being kept fully employed piloting their constituents round the House and entertaining them on the Terrace or in the dining room. Ladies are, according to a Parliamentary statistician, ten times as numerous as the men, and far more numerous than in previous sessions. Evidently ladies are more keenly interested in Parliament now that they have the vote, and it is curious that, although tea on the Terrace when the weather is genial is to them an agreeable episode of their visit, the debates are the real attraction. The Ladies' Gallery is nearly always crowded, and at the opposite end of the Chamber ladies predominate in the Strangers' Gallery, where they sit for hours, be the speeches dull or sparkling. It would seem from this that the ladies are earnestly seeking political education—preparing doubtless for the time when they will be called to a place "within the bar" of the House.

BATTLESHIPS' PET NAMES.

The home coming of the fleet and the newspaper accounts of it move one to comment on the fact that all the pet names of British battleships are landsmen's inventions and are never used by sailors at all. I have never heard a sailor refer to the "Queen Elizabeth" or allude to the "O. D." if it were not that those initials are universally used in the service for that branch of the Admiralty Staff which is officially styled the Intelligence Division. Even the Grand Fleet was always just the "G. F."

ANCHORING AIRSHIPS.

At Pulham Airship Station the Air Ministry is testing whether airships can safely be moored by the nose to a giant mast from which they swing forward instead of being housed in costly sheds or tied down to the ground at great risk, as the R-34 was in America. These mooring experiments are, I believe, proving satisfactory beyond all expectation. R-34, one of the older rigid airships, has been at the mooring mast for a week, and appears to be perfectly happy. The steadiness with which she has ridden out winds up to 40 miles an hour has impressed everyone immensely. In fact, the higher the wind the steadier she seems to be.

THE "NOT-WHIPPING-CATS" SECT.

A distinguished visitor from Sudan, El Sayed Aly el Marghani, who is now in London, will certainly be much gratified in hearing of the good treatment that the cats enjoy in this country, unlike the disregard in which the cat is held in other European countries. Indeed, one of the features of the Mohammedan sect of the Marghanites—of which Aly el Marghani is now, I believe, the recognized chief—is the respect for the life and welfare of the cat. It was probably a bit of a very old Egyptian tradition that the founder of the sect, Mohamed el Marghani, introduced among his teachings when he crossed the Red Sea from the Hedjaz to the upper Nile valley in the first half of last century in order to preach among the Nubian tribes the teachings of the great Musulman Sheikh, Mohamed el Idrisi. The spirit and the rites of the sect are for the rest purely Mohammedan. The Marghanites believe in the cabalistic sign of their own which has mystic powers, and their chief is dogmatically a saint. The fame of the founder, Mohamed Othman, was mainly spread through the sudden death of a man while he argued against his teachings. Among the orthodox sects of Islam the Marghanites are still one of the most numerous, though they are not so famous as their rivals and enemies the Senoussis, whose origins are the same. They were very powerful sixty or eighty years ago, their rule extending up to and probably over the Darfour. In the Soudanese wars they sided with the British, rousing the anger of the sympathisers of the Mahdi in the Mohammedan world.

LESSONS ON THE THAMES.

The river Thames from Tilbury to the Nore is full of lessons for British politicians—grey lessons with red funnels and the Stars and Stripes at the taffrail. Some come from New York, some from as far as Los Angeles, but they are all Americans—standard ships, American owned, and carrying American goods to England. Slab-sided, deep-laden vessels, with squat derricks in place of masts, they are even more unlovely than the six-masted American schooner which was off Thames Haven one day this week. But they carry a great amount of cargo, they need but small crews, and they have been made by the hundred. There are oil tankers on the river, too, and even an internal combustion merchantman without funnels. One sees huge Dutch barges towering up from the water, which are towed right over from Rotterdam. There is a revolution going on in water transport. New nations, new methods are coming into competition. The old Red Ensign still predominates, but it is challenged.

"TO THE GLORIOUS DEAD."

Suggestions to the Government are coming from every quarter of the House of Commons that the temporary war memorial "to the glorious dead" in Whitehall, which evoked so deep a display of sympathetic feeling from the Allied troops, as well as the populace, at the peace celebration on July 19th, shall be permanently retained. If there be any imagination existing at the Office of Works there should be an affirmative reply. The design of Sir Edward Lutyens, though intended only to serve a temporary purpose, is of such worth and dignity as to deserve permanent preservation, and it should be on the very spot on which the original received the homage of Field-Marshal Haig, Marshal Foch, General Pershing, Admiral Beatty, and all the other Allied commanders at the head of their troops on the historic day. It would lose a deal of its significance if placed elsewhere.

Dark cloth frocks have their edges bound in silk braid.

Profanity in Boys.

Despite all the efforts being put forward for the moral uplifting and education of the youth of the land, it is a regrettable fact that profanity and obscene language have become common among boys. It is not in the least out of the ordinary, where a group of boys of ten to fifteen years is together upon the roads or in any open space, to hear them using oaths that might sicken the tongues of the proverbial fishwife or costermonger, but which are shocking falling from the tongues of children of tender years. Of all stupid and silly vices, profanity is one of the worst and most abominable. A simple statement of fact is much stronger than any statement embellished with cuss words, and no lie is made any the more believable by being framed in profanity. In fact, both truth and falsehood are weakened by swearing and taking the Lord's name in vain. Foul epithets and comparisons are neither manly nor convincing, but are almost invariably disgusting—except to those making use of them. Profanity among men seems to be growing less and less, at least in police places and among those who may lay claim to decency and some education. But the habit seems to have firmly fixed itself upon a great many of the boys, who may imagine it manly to use profanity and smoke cigarettes. Let us give heed to the words of Solomon, and train up the youth in the way they should go so that as they grow older they will not depart from it.—Western Star.

A WONDERFUL AIR FLIGHT.

Many people still think of the aeroplane as being a highly dangerous contrivance, and that if its engine stops, or any other mishap occurs, it must drop like a stone to the earth and smash itself and its pilot to atoms. Both impressions are erroneous. The following test, which has actually been carried out, shows how stable aeroplanes are. A pilot climbed to a sufficient height and then stopped his engine and took his hands off the control, merely keeping his feet on the rudder bar. He steered for an aerodrome twenty miles away, and, except for keeping her straight, he let the aeroplane do what she liked. She travelled the whole miles as steadily as a bicycle coasting down a long, straight, gentle hill.

Great Fight.

HOW WILDE WON—FIERCE EXCHANGES AND FINISH.

By Berkeley.

It took Jimmy Wilde twenty rounds in which to beat "Pal" Moore at Olympia last night, but the Welshman's victory was clean cut in every way.

He was the greater artist at all points of the game, but I think he will be the first to admit that he has never had a harder job. Moore started without confidence and it was not until he had gone half a dozen rounds that he appeared to recognize that he had a chance with the "Little Wonder."

I have never seen a more dramatic or exciting finish to a boxing contest. Wilde, who by an unfortunate accident had his upper lip cut through contact with Moore's head, was almost blinded by his own blood. Moore saw his opportunity and took it. He hammered away at the little fellow for all he was worth, and in the eighteenth and nineteenth rounds it looked as if "the pride of Wales" was at last to meet the fate so long predicted for him. There is no "give" in the constitution of Wilde, however. He fought the last round like a terrier, and when the gong sounded the conclusion of the contest he had Moore in an almost helpless state.

The men were half an hour late in taking the ring, and as a result the contest was not over until nearly midnight. General Pershing and his staff arrived just as Wilde was bowing to the acclamations of the crowd. The little Welshman had a simply great reception. I have never seen him in better condition. He was well muscled all over, and he smiled confidently at all the friends surrounding him. Moore also had an ovation, but he appeared to be somewhat anxious and overawed by his surroundings.

For the first four rounds Moore showed no signs of the form which he displayed later. Wilde pursued him from the sounding of the bell, uppercut him, and jabbed him and hooked him in a way that made the American look almost like a novice.

Wilde had never been seen to better advantage than he was in these opening rounds. His boxing was perfect. He hardly missed a blow, and it was no wonder that his opponent was looking very anxious before the conclusion of the third round.

Moore came up full of fight in the sixth round, and in this bout he had clearly the advantage. He displayed remarkable speed with his left hand, but when he tried to mix it he found himself to be somewhat out of sync in a display of fatigued fireworks with the onlookers cheering for all they were worth.

In the seventh and eighth rounds Wilde boxed more carefully, but he still kept on scoring. His work with the left hand was beautiful, and by this time Moore's smiling face was beginning to wear a rather damaged appearance. In the ninth Wilde very nearly brought Moore down with a right-handed blow on the jaw, but the American took his punishment with great gameness and was fighting back fiercely when the bell went.

Fought Like A Tiger.

It was in the tenth round that Moore was cautioned for using the open glove, and he was admonished several times after that for the same offence. Moore made a point of finishing up each round with an electric burst, and as a consequence the intervals were periods of excitement.

Wilde set about Moore in the fifteenth, but just as everybody was saying that the end was not far off the American retaliated, and fighting like a tiger he had Wilde in rather a dilemma when the interval was called.

The sixteenth round was a "scream" from start to finish. They leapt at one another like fighting-cocks, and never let off until the bell again called them to their corners.

THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all. Your druggist gladly will give you the genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" because genuine Aspirin now is made by Americans and owned by an American Company.

There is not a cent's worth of German interest in Aspirin, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government.

During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. But now you can get genuine Aspirin, plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross"—Aspirin proved safe by millions for Headache, Toothache, Earache, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Colds, Neuritis, and Pain generally.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacid-derivative of Salicylic Acid. The Bayer Co., Sue., U.S.A.

It was just about here that Wilde began to show signs of tiredness. He was apparently much worried by the cut on his lip, which bled profusely, and a good deal of his speed had departed. Moore seeing this, turned on the steam, and in the eighteenth and nineteenth rounds he certainly scored the majority of points.

In the final bout we saw Wilde at his best. Surely there was never such an indomitable spirit in any human body. He was palpably fagged, yet instead of trying to avoid trouble he sallied into Moore with both hands in a way that simply made the roof shake with the shouts of the onlookers. When the timekeeper held up his hand to indicate the finish the yell that went up was simply appalling.

About the verdict there cannot be the slightest possible doubt. Moore was outboxed in at least 14 of the 29 rounds. He is undoubtedly a good man, but he has no pretensions to rank with Jimmy Wilde, who is the boxing wonder of the age.

As he was being rushed along last night Wilde managed to gasp out to me, "I shall never give weight away again."

5 Miles of Waiting Cars.

No fight in recent years has aroused such enormous interest. Soon after five o'clock the crowd began to arrive—the men were not in the ring until 10 o'clock—and when the boxers appeared there were 15,000 spectators. The Prince of Wales and Prince Albert were in the royal box.

Outside the building there were some astounding scenes, the side streets holding five miles of motor-cars and taxicabs.

All Wales Excited.

South Wales sat up late last night to hear the result of the fight, and when the news of Wilde's victory arrived about 11.30 p.m. it was acclaimed with a frenzy of enthusiasm.

The Rhonda Valley waited no less expectantly, and when the news came through by telephone from Cardiff waiting crowds in all the miners towns and villages in the valley raised a great cheer and then went happily to bed.—London Daily Mail, July 18.

Smokers Barred From Shops of Thos. A. Edison.

One of the vital questions which occupied the attention of the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations during the past year was that of the growing evil of cigarette smoking among very young boys. Many discussions arose as to how far the habit might prove injurious and as to how to combat the practice. It was agreed that while men who had reached years of discretion could use their own judgment in the matter where they themselves were concerned, that all should combine to influence the boys against using cigarettes.

In this connection it is interesting to discover a book on the subject by Mr. Henry Ford, Detroit, Michigan, whose opinion alone carries weight with it. But the fact that he has made extensive research study of the subject and collected data from scientific sources makes his work even more valuable. The book is entitled "The Case Against the Little White Slaver," and is prefaced with a letter from Thomas A. Edison, accompanied by his photograph. The letter is indicative of the injurious effect of cigarettes and why—that "The injurious agent in cigarettes comes principally from the burning paper wrapper. The substance thereby formed is called 'Acrolein.' It has a violent action on the nerve centres, producing degeneration of the cells of the brain, which is quite rapid among boys. Unlike most narcotics, this degeneration is permanent and uncontrollable. I employ no person who smokes cigarettes.—Yours, Thos. A. Edison."

The whole world is extra proof of the injury caused by the "Little White Slaver," and in compiling it, Mr. Ford has conferred a benefit on humanity.—Vancouver Sun.

Powder Puff Protest in London.

We have been preserved from the menace of air raids on this continent, but we suffer sufficiently from the powder fashion to sympathize with the father who wrote as follows to a London editor:

"Sir—Now that the air raids are over and London is light again at night, is there any need for young women to powder their noses? This was most useful then, just as it was useful to paint the lamp posts white, but as it is no longer necessary, it is now a senseless disfigurement. Do not girls realize that one of their attractions is the fair complexion which youth gives them? Why, then, cover their faces with powder? Oh, my nose would shine in the general excuse. Why should girls' noses shine more now than they did a few years ago? A rub with a dry towel would remove any tendency to shine? It is a sad sight to me to see young girls powdered and old ones painted. Both are much mistaken if they think, as some of them say, that it is so well done as not to be noticeable. It is just a silly and rather revolting fashion, and I wish that sensible women would protest."

Obviously I dare not sign my name. I am your obedient servant, A FATHER.

Korea a Second Belgium.

Alleged Atrocities by Japanese. New York.—That "Korea is another Belgium on the world's hands" is the declaration contained in a report issued by the New Era Movement of the Presbyterian Church in America, which contains a long list of alleged atrocities by the Japanese in Korea.

The report, which is given considerable prominence in the morning's papers, quotes statements by Presbyterian officials to the effect that hundreds of Koreans who professed Christianity were driven into the churches at the point of the bayonet by Japanese gendarmes and fired on through the windows, the churches then being set on fire and many of those inside being burned to death. This is alleged to have occurred at Su-Chone and Tyung-Ju, in the province of Pyeng-An-Oo, and it is alleged by the officials that instances "can be duplicated by scores in other places in Korea."

The report further charges that men were beaten to death and women subjected to nearly every form of shameful treatment, and contains a long detailed account of the torture of a 19-years-old boy, who, it is declared, lay at the point of death in hospital for more than a month before finally being sent to prison. It is explained in the report that the information it contains was conveyed to New York in such a manner as to escape the Japanese censorship.

Old Mines of Western Nfld.

(By E. D. HALBURTON, Port-au-Port, Nfld., in Canadian Mining Journal.)

Newfoundlanders have so often heard Newfoundland spoken of as one of the richest mineral countries in the world, yet undeveloped, that they usually accept the statement as a matter of course; but they are appallingly ignorant, as a whole, of any real knowledge of the mineral possibilities of this island. It is that lack of knowledge which induces our moneyed men to invest rather in the mines of other countries. They welcome the success of any local venture, but they have too little faith in our minerals to back mining enterprises financially and to the want of capital, the undevelopment of the country must be attributed.

In this article I shall deal with mines which have been exploited, rather than worked, on one section of the West Coast alone.

The possibilities of the oil areas on the West Coast have never been really tested. About twenty years ago a company, called "The Western Oil Company," was promoted in New Brunswick to develop these areas and a man named Bell was given a contract to bore, at Shoal Point, in Port au Port Bay, on the north side of the harbor of Picadilly. Oil was struck at eight hundred feet and five or six wells were sunk to that depth, the best of them flowing about four barrels a day. But the strike was not rich enough to save the company which, its capital exhausted, abandoned the project, and the pipes are there today, still filled with the oil which is used by all the fishermen around as lubricating oil for their motor boats.

In 1908 an English company sent an oil-expert to the same place with six Londoners who were supposed to have been accustomed to drilling. These men bored to a depth of 300 feet beside a well of eight hundred feet and of course got no result. The outfit used an old fashioned drill and appliances more antiquated than those used by Bell years before, and the expert is said to have had no control over his helpers who stopped work when they felt so disposed, to drink tea or to go swimming or read the newspapers as fancy willed, and so accomplished little work. This attempt was begun in the winter and many difficulties had to be overcome as a consequence. Instead of bringing their machinery to the spot by boat, as they might have done a little later in the season, they had to come by train to the nearest station eight and twenty miles away, hauling it ten miles across the bay on the ice.

The company in England, considering that the expenses of operations were too great, sent the outfit somewhere else, so they loaded machinery aboard a schooner in Picadilly and the French and English, who were always in dispute on this coast, and the Harveys refused to stop working the mine. A second warship, and a third bringing the Commodore of the French squadron appeared, to no purpose. Not daring to use force the French complained to the English cruiser further down the coast. This cruiser was the only law and order enforcing instrument recognized by the British at that time on the coast, for there were no representatives of the law on land, and English laws applied to the English, and French to the French, so the English cruiser came and put a stop to the mine. The place was deserted and hundreds of tons of ore, the result of three years labor, left to the mercy of wind and tide, which soon scattered it over the bay.

Forty-five years ago, when prospecting up Robinsons River, Harvey found a four foot seam of coal, dipping at an angle of forty-five degrees, and striking diagonally across the river to be lost in the woods on the other side. They paid little attention to it as coal was then of little value. The party camped beside this seam for the night and building a fire, heaped huge piles of coal over it so that it burned all night and kept away the flies which had previously bothered them. Years later when one of the party tried to locate the same spot it could not be found; a landslide had covered over the outcrop. Many coal seams have been relocated in that vicinity during the past few months. Higher up the river the prospecting party referred to, found many huge boulders of hematite, pointing to the existence of a deposit of iron in the neighborhood, but as iron also held little attraction for them they wasted no time looking for it. Coal and iron, the latter containing a trace of titanium, are now known to exist in large quantities on the Eastern side of St. George's Bay, and the whole of Port au Port Peninsula on the opposite side is composed of limestone, all the essentials, including a harbor in the centre, for creating a great industrial community within a radius of twenty miles. At Indian Head, in the bottom of the bay, a deposit of magnetite containing a large percentage of titanium, was discovered a few months ago. Just prior to the outbreak of war, an American lady, calling herself a doctor, became interested in this ore and brought down some men from New York with drilling machinery, ostensibly to learn the size and value of her claim. They did no work, however, and on the outbreak of war the whole outfit vanished and nothing has been heard of them since, the circumstances were so peculiar at the time that the people around universally concluded that she was a spy.

The most interesting mine on the West coast, the scene of many attempts, and as many failures, is the chrome iron mine at Bluff Head, the entrance to Port au Port Bay. About fifty years ago a man named Holden was sent from St. John's to open up this mine in the fall and he had huts, stores, and stables erected and a few miners employed. These few miners were working but a few months when winter and disaster overtook them. The mine was nearly up to the top of the mountain, which formed one side of the gulch terminating at the bottom in Bluff Head Cove. The huts where the men lived, were built on a sort of terrace about half way up this mountain and to get to the mine they had to traverse a path that curved around and upward. The miners were four in number and one morning these men left the huts to shovel a path to the mine. When half way across the snow began to move and unable to save themselves three of them were swept away in a gigantic snow-slide; the fourth happening to be the last man and furthest from the centre of the slide, was carried down the mountain for two or three hundred feet but escaped with his life.

One of the men who was swept away was Holden's brother, and after this accident, the company abandoned the mine. But another company calling themselves the Halifax Chrome Company, took it over. This company under the management of a man named Leewald did a good deal of work; as many as sixty men were employed, a crusher was installed, and thousands of tons of ore mined, crushed, and ready for shipping. But when the company had reached what would have been the red-letter day of its history, it received a big check. A big cargo tramp which came to take away a load, dismayed at the appearance of the coast, refused to anchor there and steamed on into the bay, and smaller craft had to be employed to load her, doubling the expenses. Eventually shipping difficulties caused this company also to give up the idea of working this mine.

The wind sweeps down the mountains and gulches with terrific force, but despite all the disadvantages of locality, possessed by this mine, it is being continually "considered." It must visit some unknown attraction over visiting prospectors. The latest failure was an undertaking of two young Americans, brothers from Oklahoma. They took an option on the mine, and undertook to ship the ore across the straits to Sydney, where they could get seventy dollars a ton for it; all the ore they could have shipped in one season was mined and ready for shipment. They had the chance of a lifetime to make money, but their attempt went the way of the others, although under good management it could hardly have failed.

The country around Bluff Head is rich in many minerals. The Louis Hills and the Blue Hills are rich in asbestos, and gold has also been found there. Lumps of malleable native copper occur in many places.

The Sailors' First Uniform.

Our sailors first wore uniforms in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, when she ordered that naval commanders were to wear scarlet. This order was confirmed by James I. During subsequent reigns, however, it lapsed, and the Navy appear to have worn uniforms according to each commander's fancy.

The introduction of a regular uniform dated from 1748, when the "blue jacket," which has now become a synonym for a sailor, became customary for all the naval forces. Geo. II. is credited with having selected the colour, which was nothing more than the outcome of a passing whim.

It is said that he once met the Duchess of Bedford riding on horseback, and attired in a charming habit of blue faced with white. This so pleased His Majesty that he immediately commanded the adoption of these colours by his Navy. It is not supposed that the order was meant to be an official one, as it was never gazetted. It has, however, remained in force ever since, and it is doubtful whether, for sailors' use, blue serge could be improved upon.

Depth of the Atlantic.

The greatest depth of the Atlantic Ocean is over five miles. Nearly one half the ocean, however, is only from a mile to two miles deep; the rest varies from less than a mile to more than three miles and a half in depth. Out in the middle is the huge mid-Atlantic ridge, running from Iceland far below the equator, and rising in mighty peaks above the water into what we call islands, such as Azores, St. Paul's Rocks, Ascension Island, and others.

Rewards of Pioneers.

Some Get Honours, Columbus Got Chains.

Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown, who were knighted by the King for their wonderful flight over the Atlantic, may count themselves lucky among pioneers in getting their reward so quickly.

Most pioneers, in fact, only get their reward when death has overtaken them, and then more often than not the reward is only the memory of the magnificent feat they accomplished.

M. Bleriot, the first man to fly the Channel, though feted and rewarded with prizes for what was then a wonderful performance, received no honour comparable with the knightings awarded Alcock and Brown. The Wright brothers, who made flying possible, received some gold medals of various societies, but that was all.

The first man to bring down a Zepplin, Lieutenant Warneford, was awarded the V.C., a reward which has been given more than once for pioneers in war. Lieutenant Holbrook got it, for example, for being the first submarine commander to run the risks of the mine-strewn Dardanelles.

Had Captain Scott, who was the first Englishman to reach the South Pole, lived, he would undoubtedly have received a high reward. As it was, his magnificent example of courage was recognised by the King when he made the dead explorer's wife Lady Scott, and awarded her a pension. But Peary, the pioneer discoverer of the North Pole, had to be content with a few gold medals of various societies and the proceeds of lecturing on how he reached the pole.

Perhaps the worst reward ever given to a great pioneer was that given to Columbus after his discovery of America. He was sent to Spain in irons, though when the real importance of his discoveries became known he was restored to his former position as Admiral of the Spanish Fleet.

Are Seagulls Musical?

The question whether seagulls are susceptible to music is suggested by the following incident. When the first hymn was being sung at an open-air intercession service at Bangor, a number of gulls flew in from the sea and hovered over the heads of the congregation. They departed when the hymn was ended, but reappeared during the signing of each successive hymn, including the National Anthem, with which the service was brought to a close.

the utmost value obtained in the Chevrolet Baby-Grand Touring Car with any other car selling many dollars higher than it?

At $2050 this luxurious Touring Car offers value to the Motorist not obtainable from any other source in St. John's.

The Baby-Grand is fully equipped, and upholstered in genuine leather. It is strongly and comfortably sprung. The car is well balanced in weight for the size of the engine, etc. The car weighs about 2500 lbs.

It is unlike many other cars of this size selling in St. John's as regards tire equipment, which supply only 32 x 3 1/2 size. The Baby-Grand Chevrolet is equipped all four wheels with 33 x 4 Goodyear all-weather treads.

Let us demonstrate to you what the Chevrolet Baby-Grand will do. We guarantee it a speedy, vibrationless puller and an exceptionally good hill-climber. For top gear work, we guarantee the car to climb Patrick Street, and we will take you up McBride's Hill, Church Hill and two-thirds up Garrison Hill on Top Gear. What other car at $2050 in St. John's will do this, and do it as comfortably as the Baby-Grand Chevrolet?

What the Kaiser Said.

By J. R. SMALLWOOD, of the Telegram Reporter Staff.

Having landed in Amerongen, Holland, I immediately enquired from a porter at the Railway Station the direction to Amerongen Castle where I was to meet the ex-Kaiser of the German Empire.

The guard at the Castle gate thought I prevented me from entering, but I soon ascertained by showing my letter from William Hohenzollern, inviting me to the Castle whenever I should feel so inclined. The guard became immediately humble, and called another grey-haired soldier from the little sentry-house just inside the gate.

"Conduct the Her to His Imperial Majesty's suite," he said, and the other clerk hitched his heels and saluted stiffly.

"Mr. Hohenzollern," I said, after we had made ourselves known to each other, "I am here principally to obtain your views on certain matters."

"Of course, of course," replied he, "ask anything you like. Anything you want to know ask me and I'll be only too pleased to tell you!"

"Well, in the first place, I'd like to know who started the war. The world says it was you, did you?"

He scratched his head. "As a matter of fact," said he, "I'm not sure on that point. The wisest and I are continually arguing about the matter. She accuses me of starting the war, while I accuse her. The issue comprises our main topic of argument."

"Do you and Mrs. Hohenzollern argue much, then?" was my next question.

"Argue!" he exclaimed, harshly. "Why, that woman doesn't give me a minute's rest! She'll wake me up in the middle of the night and begin an argument right then. It's beginning to get on my nerves now, and something desperate must be done."

"How do you spend your time?" I interrogated.

"Oh, in various ways. Reading, writing and arithmetic take up most of my time. Then I do some sawing."

"What do you read?" I wanted to know, my pencil going like lightning.

"Buffalo Bills, Dick Turpins, Claude Duval, Roaring Robs, Old King Brads and sometimes theological works," was his reply. "However, I don't read much on theology, no more than a book a year."

"You say you write. What do you write about?"

"Mostly detective stories. I have written some fairy tales, too. They are very interesting. Perhaps you would like to read some of them?"

"No, no!" I answered hurriedly. "I haven't read any fairy stories since I went to school and I don't think I would be interested in them now. But, have they been published yet?"

"No," he answered sadly. "Every one that I have submitted has been returned to me." Here he lapsed into a reminiscent mood. "I wish for the days that are gone," he murmured. "Then I would not brook refusal—I would have had him clapped into prison!"

"And is that all you have written?" I asked next, bent on getting all the information I could.

"Well, no. I am now engaged on a long work of about five hundred thousand words, to run into five volumes, when published, entitled, 'An Enquiry into the Rise, Construction and Development of the Modern Flea.' I have consulted some of the most learned books of my library for data on the subject, while I have had a long and varied experience in the flea's work."

"You mentioned something about sawing. What did you mean by that?"

"Sawing wood. I have sawed, to date, exactly ten thousand trees. I have kept a system of books, and know exactly how many junks were made, how many strokes of my arm were required to saw them, the total length, weight and volume of all the trees, and how long it would take to find lost collar-buttons enough to make a pile as high as the grand total length of the thousand trees. Sawing is a very interesting occupation!"

"But, what is your idea of sawing so much wood, when you haven't got to? Personally, I wouldn't saw one junk unless I positively had to."

"Well," he answered, slowly, "there are two reasons. One is because I need exercise, and this is as good an exercise as any. Secondly, I want to live up to the wisdom of the old proverb, 'Say nothing but saw wood.' The real reason, however, is a practical one. Some day, you see, I may need a little change, and a good big pile of sawed wood would not come in at all badly, would it?"

"I agree with you," I said. "And your last explanation leads me to another question. What do you intend

Why the Ghosts in the Tower Are Angry.

The Tower of London, which has housed so many famous prisoners from Lady Jane Grey down to Carl Lody, the spy, it is said, will be the ex-Kaiser's place of detention.

"A meeting of historic ghosts, who have either lived or died in the Tower, was held at midnight last Friday," says the Evening News, "to protest against such a degradation of their historic home!"

"The following resolution was passed:—

"We, the members of the Tower Club, do hear with dismay and pain the rumour that Wilhelm II, the German, may be conducted to this our Tower of London, and protest with all our might that this low, filthy fellow be not so honoured and ourselves so brought to degradation."

"Sir Walter Raleigh was in the chair. The club, one of the most exclusive in the whole world of ghosts, is composed of distinguished personages who have been imprisoned or executed in the Tower."

"They are not by any means all virtuous or narrow-minded characters; yet I have never, in a long experience of their assemblies, seen them so deeply moved by indignation."

Sir Walter Raleigh's Protest.

"Sir Walter was supported by the brothers Edmund and Arthur de la Pole, the two members who have resided in the Tower, in body or as ghosts, since 1552."

"The Duke of Monmouth, Anne Boleyn, Lady Jane Grey, Sir Thomas More, Sir Thomas Overbury, Arthur Earl of Essex, Queen Katherine Howard, and the auburn-haired Guy Fawkes were among those present."

"Sir Walter Raleigh made a speech full of fire and anger."

"He said everyone would remember that the membership list of the club had been virtually closed at the time Sir Walter Raleigh was in the chair. The Committee had been empowered to admit from time to time any further lodgers at the Tower who might seem to be worthy associates."

"It was laid down at the time that ex-Sovereigns in particular should have the right to apply for the honour of membership."

"In the case of the Irish dynamiters, and of the Germans who were recently executed at the Tower, membership was impossible."

"There could be a certain splendour even in arson and assassination—('Hear, hear!')—but these people were merely infamous."

An Incredible Proposal.

"Now came the incredible proposal to allow the dog Wilhelm the Second the dignity, the immortal lustre, of residence in the Tower. (Groans.)"

"He asked the Jacobites, the Tudor captives, the Jesuits, and all others whom he saw around him whether they would receive this foul ruler in their ancient palace? ('No! no!') Even the pen of their friend William Shakespeare might fail to express their horror of such fiendish company."

"He knew, they all knew, that this was the very fate in which the scoundrel would delight. Was it not true that the dog was growing a Vandylke beard so that he might seem the very picture of the great Charles I.?"

"Could they not see the knave posturing in uniform, with one single star on his breast, a playactor's scowl on his brow, passing through Traitor's Gate with his antic strut, wishing all the world to see him a splendid martyr?"

"As they knew, even at an exhibition called a wax-works, the inmates of a dreadful room called the Chamber of Horrors had declined to have Wilhelm II. for companion."

"His manner of punishing the dog would be to bed him in a plain house with the watch to guard him."

"The man knew himself that in the dress of a soldier he was something of a figure, and that in the clothes of the citizen he looked but a clumsy German hairdresser."

At the Old Bailey.

Therefore he would have him appear at Old Bailey in citizen's woollens, so that all the world would see him for the common knave he was, and so deride him. (Loud cheers.)

"Lord Essex, seconding, said that if the fellow came to the Tower he would, were it possible, make bold to kick him out, but in the alternative he and the members would so haunt his bedchamber that the wretch would be crazy with terrors."

"Several other speeches of a violent description were made, and the resolution was passed with acclamation at cock-crow."

"The disgust of the ghost is very real. They are quite fervently excited at the threat, and hope that the public still on earth will support their agitation."

"They feel that it should be received sympathetically by everyone of true British blood and instinct." Public Opinion.

Why Doesn't an Iron Ship Sink?

This is a very natural question for anyone to ask, especially as you know that iron sinks in water. The explanation is, that by making an iron ship in the way we do, we fix it so that it holds a lot of air in between the bottom and sides, making the combination of the two—the iron ship and the air in it—lighter than the water on which it sails. Men thought at one time that a ship would sink if made of iron and, therefore, built all their ships of wood. Finally one inventor made a ship of iron and it was one of the wonders of the world. When we found that iron ships would float if they were built to retain sufficient air to keep them from sinking, we made the hulls of most ships of iron for a time. Now, however, the best ships are made of steel, which is even better.

If you bore a hole in the bottom of a ship, the water will run in if the ship is in the water, and the ship will sink, because the water coming in drives out the air; and when the ship is full of water, the water in it, with the ship itself, are heavier than the water on which it sails, and the ship will go down just like a bar of iron, so far as its sinking qualities are concerned.

Of course an iron ship must be made long enough and broad enough so that when it is completed there will be sufficient air contained within the hull to make the combination lighter than water. Always, therefore, when a ship is to be built, competent engineers must go over the plans of the vessel and calculate the air capacity, so as to make sure she will float.
