CHAPTER XIII.

All inquiries were made, the police put on the scent, the authorities duly notified, but no trace of Clarence Clifford's whereabouts could be found. The public curiosity, a few days after, was set at rest, but not those of the doctor and the lady who knew of his recovery...

Very wisely remained quiet and bided his time. He called the next morning, had an interview with Sir Ralph in the library, and then sought Lillian in the drawing room.

DUNCAN An Allenbury's Baby Sketch from a Photograph

A Triumph DUNCAN, the winner of the first prize of £100 in a recent baby competition in which there were over 52,000 entries, was reared on the Allenbury's FOODS FOR INFANTS. These are specially manufactured for infant feeding and long experience has proved that they give the best results in all countries and climates.

"Oh, that is Dr. Bromwell," said Mr. Besant, raising his hat in answer to the salutation of the gentleman.

"Dr. Bromwell" she repeated. "Yes," he said, "a clever fellow from abroad; he's been working wonders down here—curing the people right and left. Little Morecroft is quite mad about him—says he's a wonderful man—and that in any difficult case he should ask him to act in conjunction.

Lillian looked dreamily about. This new doctor was beginning to haunt her.

"Dr. Morecroft likes him" she asked. "Oh, yes, thinks no end of him—Hush! here is Miss Lucas," he broke off to exclaim, as that invaluable lady came along the footpath with her silent, stealthy sort of walk.

Lillian smiled at her—one time she would have kissed her hand, but many of the girlish ways had gone now—and then, as if a sudden idea had struck her, she said to Mr. Besant, gravely:

"Will you drive rather slowly toward the bend of the road? I want to look back."

"I'll pull up," he said, "at once." "No, no," she replied, quietly, "that won't do. Drive slowly."

He did as he was bidden and she turned her head and looked back.

Now, if Miss Lucas knew the strange doctor, if it was the same man she had gone from the roastery to meet, she would recognize him by look or gesture.

Lillian was puzzled. The tall figure just glanced at the young governess with casual interest and looked to the road again.

Miss Lucas, for the present, passed him with eyes demurely cast down without the slightest sign of recognition.

The beautiful girl sighed. If this man at her elbow had her confidence, he would have had her confidence, but he got no further.

They reached home, and Lillian sought her father, who was sitting by the fire, his head upon his hand, listening to Dr. Morecroft, who, at Lillian's entrance, broke off in the middle of a sentence and greeted her with marked affection.

"And how do you feel to-day?" he asked, smilingly, feeling for his snuff-box.

"We feel well, I hope," said Lillian, with a smile. "Too well to be physicked, dear doctor."

He nodded, laughed and felt her pulse, laughed again, but rather uneasily.

"So, so! been for a drive with Mr. Besant. Ah, plenty of fresh air, plenty of fresh air; that is the thing. And now I am going, Sir Ralph. Good-by, Miss Lillian. Plenty of fresh air and—ahem!"

And with a fresh pinch of snuff he toddled off, leaving a shadow between Lillian and Sir Ralph, for she had distinctly heard him utter Dr. Bromwell's name as she opened the door.

Mr. Besant stayed to dinner. Mr. Besant came the next morning and accompanied Lillian in her ride. He stayed to dinner again.

He came the next, and the next, and the next, and so kept Lillian in eternal remembrance of her promise toward him, thereby doing the most unwise thing in the list of possibilities. But, although plenty of fresh air had been prescribed and taken, Lillian did not recover the lost roses from her cheeks, the light laugh and the happy twinkle of the eye. She was not ill—oh, no; she laughed at the idea, and Mr. Besant scouted it likewise as uncomplimentary to him. But she was losing flesh and that daily.

Sir Ralph noticed it, everyone noticed it, and at last the good father decided to take some advice which the old doctor had offered.

Thus it came to pass that one day Lillian was summoned to the drawing room and found there waiting for her, with that strange masterful smile and curl of the upper lip, Dr. Bromwell.

A very pleasant man was the doctor—a well-informed, a well-bred and a most charming gentleman. So said Sir Ralph when he had taken his leave and left his host free to criticize.

"One of the old school, my dear Lillian," added the baronet, "of which there are very few members left."

Lillian assented to this high praise, but could not get rid of her strange antipathy.

Neither could she get rid of the doctor.

Mr. Besant, when he came next morning, was full of him and his wonderful cures, and at last it leaked out that Sir Ralph and Dr. Morecroft had enlisted Dr. Bromwell's valuable services for Lillian, and that she must henceforth consider herself as Dr. Bromwell's patient and be obedient to his prescriptions and advice.

Secret of Keeping Young

Why is it that some women look older at thirty-five than others do at fifty? Why is it that so many women are always run-down, weak, pale, nervous, irritable and unhappy? Health, vitality and freedom from pain and disease alone can prevent the signs of age from fastening themselves upon women. All over this country women are awakening to the fact that the ills, aches and pains of women may be relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the result is renewed life, energy and the glow of health. In fact, the secret of keeping young is to ward off all internal ailments that cause premature old age, which is easily accomplished by this remarkable root and herb remedy.

The Curse of Obituary Poetry

A correspondent suggests that there should be some means of protecting the distinguished dead from the imbecilities of obituary poet who send their effusions to the daily newspapers. The motive of newspapers in printing them is rather difficult to determine. Are they published to please the family of the deceased, or to gratify the poets themselves, or merely to amuse scooters? As our correspondent points out the poets have an extraordinary way of dragging in "metrical red herrings" into the simplest forms of verse; and the ideas they promulgate with regard to the departed and his reward in the hereafter are sometimes appalling.

For instance, a newspaper of high standing lately printed a poem on the late Col. George Taylor Denison, which after presenting considerable biographical detail wound up as follows:—

Warrior, author, all will mourn him, Magistrate, whom all did love, We know a higher post awaits thee. In the Courts of God above.

The late Col. Denison was a just man, who, for more than forty years rendered sterling service as police magistrate of Toronto, but those who knew him will feel that could he come back from the tomb he would be inclined to send the metrical eulogist down for ten days. The idea of the Almighty as a great Justice of the Peace, summoning Col. Denison to a seat on the bench in the great beyond is about as unique a flight of the imagination as we have encountered even in obituary poetry. Are we, as our correspondent suggests, to assume that Rev. H. F. Lyte's famous hymn should read: "Pleasant are Thy (Police) Courts above."

Motor Matters

Practically all motor vehicles in St. John's are now licensed, and the black and white number plate of 1925 has replaced the red and white of 1924.

Yesterday, however, a motor was seen carrying in front both the black and white and the red and white number plate—why, we cannot say, but out of consideration for the traffic officer's eyesight, and more particularly for the sake of his reputation for sobriety, which might be seriously questioned if he presented such a report at headquarters, we would urge upon the owner the desirability of removing the obsolete number.

It is somewhat of a surprise to learn that Harbour Grace and Grand Falls are somewhat behind time in conforming with the licensing regulations. In the former town, some car owners have registered, but a good many have not. In the latter, we understand, practically no one has yet adopted the black and white design, which, we might remind them, is the vogue in the fashion world of 1925. Get into line, gentlemen of the motor fraternity and number off; the order applies to all without exception.

Several motor car owners in the city have attached the new number plates to their cars anywhere but in a place where they are clearly visible—in other words, without regard to the position specified in the regulations. One driver has a front plate concealed behind a double bumper; another has attached his rear plate to a hinged carrier, and others have them suspended under the body of the car. It is attention to details which count, gentlemen, and which saves trouble in the future, so get it right, now.

One of the busiest traffic centres in the city is at the crossing of Duckworth and Prescott Streets, and at times there is considerable confusion which the presence of an officer on point duty would prevent. We quite realize that the demands on the police force, owing to the increase in the number of vehicles operating in the city, make it difficult if not altogether impossible to organize a complete system of traffic control. The obvious course is for the authorities to augment the force, and in our opinion the time has come when this should be done.

Parliamentarians Coming by Caribou

As it is anticipated that the House of Commons will rise on August 6, the British Parliamentarians who are expected to visit here next month the party will be able to carry out the original intention of coming out by S.S. Caribou, which sails on the 8th or 10th of August.

Further Summonses in Herbert Green Case

It is understood this morning that further summonses have been issued in connection with the Herbert Green case against Capt. Byrne of the four-master Orleans, Supercargo Ryan of the Herbert Green and also against a citizen. Charges have been laid in each instance of a violation of the Customs Act, and the cases will be heard in court to-morrow.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

July 7.—No news all this day, so I to my barber and to have myself trimmed. But, Lord, having little else to do, I did allow him to persuade me to having my hair cut and shampooed also, and to spend the best part of the day in his chair.

anon about and to buy me a new desk for my study, being much in need of one, and do now act on the principle that I am now so much indebted that it will make little difference if I do plunge further, which after all is an easy matter being that we do know my condition and do advance we credit on my name.

Do learn this plight of 2 motor coach collisions, and indeed scarce a night now passes that there is not one or two, and am greatly troubled about the safety of my person when walking.

Much sign of rain all this night and do fear me that we shall have much of it on the holiday.

Capt. and Engineer Under Arrest

Captain Nauflts and Chief Engineer Henry Jonas of S. S. Herbert Green were placed under arrest yesterday evening and charged with resisting the police in the discharge of their duties on the night of July 4th. The arrests were the outcome of the ship sailing with the police constables who were sent on board by the Customs to detain her. The captain and engineer appeared before the Magistrate during the afternoon and were allowed to go on bail until to-morrow. Bail was issued in the sum of $3,000 for each man, their own bonds being taken for $2,000 and two sureties of $1,000 each. Mr. C. J. Fox is Crown Counsel, and Mr. John Fenelon appears for the accused.

Gas Works Clean and Paint Up

One of the first premises to fall in line in connection with the "Clean Up and Paint Up" slogan, as started by the Telegram a few weeks ago, is the Gas Works of the St. John's Gaslight Company, Water Street West. The entire plant has been cleaned both inside and outside by the employees of the company under the supervision of William Shaw, the Manager, and has helped greatly in improving the surroundings in this particular section of the city. The large tanks fronting on Water Street have been scraped, tarred, and painted. This job has been particular attention, and with the necessary improvements and alterations made it is now operating 50 per cent. better than formerly. Much credit for this is due the Manager.

Bear Kills Farmer Entering Its Lair

NORTH BAY, Ont., June 22.—(C.P.)—Eugene Geneaux, an unarmed farmer, was mangled to death when he unwittingly entered the lair of a bear with two cubs in an old house a few miles from here yesterday. Blood splattered walls and the badly mangled body, one hand chewed off, was discovered when a search party started out for Geneaux after he was found missing. Other evidence told the story.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

KELVIN HALL AND OTHER IMPORTANT BUILDINGS DESTROYED IN SERIOUS GLASGOW FIRE.

GLASGOW, July 8. One of the biggest fires in the history of Scotland to-night destroyed Kelvin Hall and the Corporation's Exhibition Building covering several acres, while one of Glasgow's finest Churches, the Kelvin Grove United Free Church was gutted. The church, which is a reproduction in miniature of the famous Rheims Cathedral is a quarter of a mile distant from where the fire broke out and was ignited by sparks. Two huge towers fronting on the street, crashed to the ground and the whole roof caved in. Flames from Kelvin Hall spread to Blantyre Street, the tenants being obliged to flee for safety. At one time six separate fires were blazing. Glasgow's Art Galleries, containing priceless treasures, are located opposite Kelvin Hall, and were saved only by the fact that the wind was blowing in the other direction. So far as is known there were no casualties.

NO MORE PROSECUTIONS IN HOME BANK.

TORONTO, July 8. There will be no more prosecutions in the Criminal Courts against directors of the Defunct Home Bank, nor will the decision of the Ontario Appeal Court in reversing the convictions of the directors by County Judge Coakwell be appealed to a higher court. The conspiracy charges against M. J. Haney, former President, and the directors will be dropped. Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney General, who has been studying the Appeal Court judgment for some days, issued a long statement to-night covering the whole case, in which he stated that all further proceedings would be dropped. The Home Bank case as far as the Criminal Courts are concerned is over.

SEVERE EARTH SHOCK IN JAPAN.

TOKIO, July 8. Dispatches from the town of Nagoya report that a severe earthquake shook the Nagoya district this morning and there were several casualties. A number of tall chimneys collapsed. The quake is described as the most severe shock felt in the region since 1891.

CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTION SOON.

OTTAWA, July 8. Expressing the opinion that a General Election could be held in Canada within the next few months, Sir Henry Drayton, former Minister of Finance, this afternoon urged the Conservatives of Russell County to be prepared and to carefully weight the issues that would be brought before them.

Bear Kills Farmer Entering Its Lair

NORTH BAY, Ont., June 22.—(C.P.)—Eugene Geneaux, an unarmed farmer, was mangled to death when he unwittingly entered the lair of a bear with two cubs in an old house a few miles from here yesterday. Blood splattered walls and the badly mangled body, one hand chewed off, was discovered when a search party started out for Geneaux after he was found missing. Other evidence told the story. Geneaux had gone to the neighborhood of the house to pick rhubarb, and entered the house, laying the rhubarb on the porch. It is conjectured the bear, a female, attacked Geneaux as he neared the cubs, for there is evidence that the bear had been using the old house as a lair and had two cubs with her. Geneaux, 38 years of age, leaves a wife and four small children.

C. L. B. Cadets

Lieut. Col. W. F. Rendell, C.B.E., Major Herbert Outerbridge, M.B.E., second in command, Captain L. Stok, Adj., Captains P. B. Rendell, Nathan French, Lieutenants A. B. Perlin, Asst. Adj., W. R. Mott, Quartermaster, Hubert Rendell, Ern Chate and Eric Jerrett with Regt. Sergt. Major E. W. Best, were on duty as well as Brigade Major Williams, on Tuesday night and 113 answered the roll. Some were on leave, including Charles Keats and La-Fosse, who were down to try an ear for the Annual Regatta. Manager Hiscock of the C.L.B. athletes is a busy man getting his oarsmen in shape every evening through the courtesy of the Blue Peter Boat Club.

All ranks were pleased to see former Corporal Alex L. Moore (Sandy) of No. 3 Section A. Co., in the year 1907—visit the headquarters of his old regiment last night. He had a splendid record, winning the Shield as an N.C.O. in charge of his section three times! His discharge papers were signed by Lt.-Col. W. H. Franklin, and Canon Dunfield. Brigade Major Williams showed him around the armoury and the various photographic and other records. Mr. Moore is now the accountant at Millertown in the service of the A.N.D. Co. and has done himself and the C. L. B. credit.

The Brigade paraded on Sunday to the Anglican Cathedral and afterwards to the ceremonies at the Sergeants' Cross and to the National Memorial. Many keen observers noted the weal in the ranks—Pte. Harding—wearing his daddy's three war medals, one of the many daddies that gave their lives for their king and country. The lad was proud of his father's heroic part in the struggle for Empire—but the medals were the outward and visible sign of the sacrifice. Who knows but the unseen spirits of Ours now departed were hovering around during those silent minutes!

We are grateful again to Miss Mary Carter who has contributed her third donation this year for the C.L.B. Sick Fund. Miss Carter has, for many years, been doing her bit for the lads invalided in the Brigade—a most meritorious and appreciated help. Miss Carter, the Brigade thanks you!

The Athletic Association requests "Q" to publicly acknowledge their thanks to Regt. Q. M. Sergt. Shears for his good work in the recent outdoor sports, and also to the kind typist who did considerable work in the clerical line. Thank you both for your help.

The officers held their July Mess meeting Tuesday evening. Captain Stok, Mess President in the Chair, and Lieut. Hubert Rendell, Secretary. The principal business was camp. The Brigade-Major, Captain Harold Hayward, and Lieut. Jerrett, were nominated to act as transport supply officers. They hope to have the assistance of all friends who can loan cars to move the boys in and out to Camp again this year on July 23rd at 9 a.m. The officers will hold their annual Camp dinner July 30th at eight o'clock. Officers may bring a guest each. The Lt.-Colonel, Commanding will offer the entire services of the Brigade to Rev. Arthur Pittman, Rector of Topsail, to assist him and the ladies of Topsail with their annual Garden Party if the same is required as well as the use of the Camp grounds. Captain Harold Hayward, will be Camp Commandant this year, so a rattling good Camp routine and programme of sports will be arranged for as Capt. Hayward has a special reputation for organization, especially with the light and dark blues.

Lieut. Bandmaster Ern Yavasour of the Battalion Band reports all friends rallied around Bannerman Park the last two Monday nights—"Brigade night in the Park." He needs the money for new uniforms. Band Secretary Tommy Pettles is their Publicity Manager, and is boosting the gate receipts in good style. Tommy says to meet them every Monday in the Park.

A letter from Lieut. Hubert Rendell was read on behalf of himself, and Mrs. Rendell at the Mrs. Acknowledging the officers' recent wedding gift with a certificate for saving a woman and her child from drowning in Regent's Canal.

Goff, a quiet and unassuming young man, when asked by the magistrate how many lives he had saved from the canal, replied, "about seven." The magistrate, warmly congratulating him, suggested that that was a record for London; but Goff replied, "Oh, no, sir, a man at the Hampstead Lock named Marklow, now dead, saved one day or a part of a day must pay 20 cents a day as a contribution towards the cost. Capt. Fred W. Burden, P.M.O. will be in charge of the Red Cross department again. He has always succeeded in keeping the boys well at Camp so far, and has proved to be one of the most popular medical officers ever serving the C.L.B. colours. Lads are now entering their names on the notice board for Camp at Topsail. Outpost Companies continuing are asked to notify the Regt. Cor-

Remembrance

(L.C.M.)

If the entire programme of Memorial Day were to be expressed in one word, that word would be "Remembrance." This thought was impressed upon us from first to last, but on Sunday it was that a deeper cord was touched, and that the day awakened memories nearer home. We could not but think of the gallant young officer who last year directed the ceremonies of the day, and who was so instrumental in getting Field Marshal Haig to visit us and unveil the Memorial. How strange that he should have come through all the horrors of the war, and at his own door meet a death of equal suddenness and equal tragedy. Thus we thought upon him as the citizens assembled, and as his soldier comrades marched gallantly by. We could not forget him, because we had learned from his lips of his hair-breadth escape from death when at the front.

With this remembrance of Gerald Whitty we began our tribute to the day, which to all the people of Newfoundland means so much, and which in the years to follow will be held sacred. And what a day it was. How could it be better? It was the Sabbath—the day of all the week the best. The sunshine was as crystal. The waters of the harbour sparkled and reflected the shipping, and added a relief to the assemblage which surrounded the Monument. For the moment it seemed that Newfoundland and her people were at their best—at their truest, and that the heart of the city was touched. Of this there could not be any doubt. Every feature of the pageant—if pageant it may be called—was touching, and one purpose was stamped on every face. The living testimony to their undying love for the boys who fell. It was a Remembrance. A remembrance worthy of all true citizens, and worthy Newfoundland. Worthy the Empire.

The ceremonies presented so many and varied aspects that one cannot in a short article refer to them all. First, there was the military aspect, in which the returned men, for the time being, resumed the role of army discipline. This included the colours, and the music, and the heraldry, and the salute, and especially the sounding of the Last Post, after the two minutes' silence. And what a silence it was, and what a long two minutes the silence seemed.

Then there was the official aspect in which his Excellency the Governor, the Prime Minister, his Honor the Mayor, and the presidents of the various societies attended, and in turn placed at the base of the Monument the choice array of beautiful wreaths. Of the singing the playing of the Dead March in Saul and the rendering of the Hallulah Chorus we need not write, because all present realized the depth of the moment, and officials and people alike, felt the meaning of patriotism and the price of Empire.

But the most touching scene came when the mothers were represented in the person of Mrs. Jackman. It was not Mrs. Jackman that we saw so much as "the mother" and what it represented. The mother at the Monument was only one, but in the person she represented thousands in Newfoundland, and millions throughout the Empire. The sword had pierced her own soul. The wreath which she held was meant as a token of a mother's devotion. Yea! it was meant for more—it was meant as a token of that most sacred of all human passions, a woman's love. That is, it represented the gentle maid as well as the devoted mother, the innocent children as well as their patriotic fathers. Behind the mother at the Monument and within the grasp of her hand and "neath the emotions of her bosom, a world of tragedy lay buried. Many present knew the horror of such tragedy, hence the stream of citizens who bore their wreaths and bouquets and who in turn tenderly placed them on the pedestal of the great monument. Thus the noon hour passed and another link had been forged in the chain of devotion for which the War Memorial stands. For an hour the people indulged but one thought and lived for one purpose. They remembered the years of the terrible war, and for the moment tasted the agonies of their agonies. They had lived it all through, and now they had assembled with the thousands of their fellow citizens, and in one great act they paid their tribute—the tribute of Remembrance.

Wedding Bells

MOLLOY—MURRAY.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Convent Chapel of St. Bride's College, Littledale, on Monday, July 6th, when Miss Alice Murray was united in the Holy Bonds of Matrimony to Mr. John Molloy. The ceremony was performed and Nuptial Mass celebrated by His Grace, Archbishop Roche, assisted by Rev. P. J. Kennedy. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Nellie Murray while Mr. Robert Connolly performed the duties of best man. Miss Murray, who belongs to Argentina, was for some years connected with the teaching staff of St. Bride's College, Littledale, while Mr. Molloy is a well-known and popular citizen of Grand Falls, where he holds a responsible position with the A.N.D. Company. After the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served at the "Balsam", whence the happy couple motored to Donovan's where they will spend a few days before proceeding to Grand Falls, their future home. Their friends wish them very many years of wedded happiness.

JUNIOR LEAGUE FOOTBALL

HOLY CROSS 2
B.I.S. 1
Last night's football game played at St. George's Field between the Holy Cross and B. I. S. teams proved to be a hard fought contest, and ended in a win for the former by 2 to 1.

First Half.
Holy Cross won the toss and elected to defend the western goal, taking advantage of the fresh wind. Play opened up fast, with Holy Cross on the offensive, and inside of ten minutes Byrne found the twines on a long shot from midfield. The B.I.S. then cleared the ball to Holy Cross territory, but were unable to get inside of the backs, except on one occasion when the goal keeper made a clever stop. Play was then confined mostly to the eastern end of the field, and after several unsuccessful tries had been made by Holy Cross forwards, a corner was secured. The ball was nicely placed, and in the scrimmage one of the B.I.S. players knocked it into the goal, thus recording No. 2 for the Holy Cross. Half time then sounded leaving the score standing Holy Cross 2, B. I. S. 0.

Second Half.
Upon resumption of play the B. I. S. forwards confined the ball to Holy Cross territory, and after a short space of time, Power beat Moore, giving the B. I. S. their one and only goal. The Irishmen played hard after this to equalize matters, but their opponents had set up a solid defence and frustrated and further scoring. The game ended Holy Cross 2, B. I. S. 1.

To-Night's Game.
Should the weather become more favourable during the day, the Gaelic and C.Y.M.C. will try conclusions to-night.

ZBYSKO DEFEATED

WIGHTITA, Kansas, July 2.—Joe Stecher, of Nebraska, claimant to the world's heavyweight wrestling championship here, last night defeated Stanislaus Zbyzsko, veteran Pole, two falls out of three after conceding to his opponent the second fall when Zbyzsko threatened to leave the ring.

GREAT BRITAIN'S VICTORY

America Beaten in Lawn Tennis Match—Gilbert's Fine Play.
Great Britain beat America in the three days' international lawn tennis match, which concluded at Devonshire Park, Eastbourne, recently.
When play was resumed Great Britain was leading by two games to one. In two singles contests Great Britain lost the first, J. Hennessy (America) beating J. D. P. Wheatley, 7-5, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5, which made honours easy.
In the final contest J. B. Gilbert (Great Britain) beat R. Casey (America) 9-7, 9-7, 6-3. In the first contest both Hennessy and Wheatley played well. Play was mostly from the base line, and there were many exciting rallies, but the American was an easy victor.

TRAGIC MOTOR RACE

Two Pilots Killed in Endurance Tests of Touring Cars in France.
Two fatal accidents marred the Grand Prix race in the international triangular trials at La Mans, France.
First Guilbert, one of the pilots, was killed in a collision between his car and a lorry, and the Exchange; while the death of another pilot, named Mestivier, was caused by the simultaneous bursting of his two back tires, causing the car to overturn.
Major Seagrave, the English motorist, says Renter, abandoned the endurance trial at two o'clock yesterday morning. After a ten hours' run De-coucelle led with 52 miles.

A Dance will be held in the R. C. School House, Quidi Vidi, on Thursday evening, at 8.30, in aid of St. Joseph's Garden Party.

NEGROES ELATED OVER VICTORY OF PUGILIST WILLS

White Men Beaten Up in New York—Police Took a Hand to Prevent a Riot.
New York, July 3.—Elated over the knockout victory of Harry Wills, negro heavyweight challenger, over Charley Welmer, two groups of negroes early to-day beat up half a dozen whites, knocking two through a plate glass window and one into unconsciousness. Specially arrival of police prevented further disorders. All the negroes escaped.
Three men and a young woman were talking in front of a West 52nd Street house when several negroes passed, discussing, police said, the ease with which Wills scored the knockout.
"There's a white man about Welmer's size," one negro shouted, pointing to John Gaffney.
Gaffney was knocked senseless through a store front. His friend, Michael Earl, followed. Both were severely cut and bruised. The woman and her escort were not molested before police arrived.
S.S. Lake Como which left Glasgow on June 30th, reported by radio that she was 600 miles off here at 6 o'clock Monday. She is due early to-morrow.

A MOTOR COLLISION

Yesterday afternoon about five o'clock a collision occurred at the corner of Water Street and Beck's Cove, between a motor car owned by Mr. Mark Chapman of Spariards Bay and a motor truck owned by T. & M. Windsor. The collision occurred just as Windsor's truck was coming out of the Cove to turn into Water Street. The front part of Chapman's car was badly damaged. Both drivers escaped uninjured.

FOR PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO THEORIES.

Of forming societies there is no end. How about adding one more—a society for the prevention of cruelty to theories?

The cruelty to be prevented takes the form of overwork. A doctor or a psychologist gets a theory, very helpful in clearing up certain dark places in mental or physical hygiene. He has good reason to be proud of his theory and he wants to use his theory all he legitimately can.

A Breakdown From Overwork.

But if he would only stop there, and not overwork it, how much more good it would probably do! For an overworked theory is pretty sure to get so run down that it has a breakdown. If it has guts, it will probably recover from that breakdown but it may take it a long time, and it may never recover.

Here is the sort of overwork I mean. You have doubtless heard something about the theory of the inferiority complex, probably more than you care to hear. It is an interesting theory, we can all see that it has its legitimate applications. But why strain it with overwork? Why, for instance, try to make it explain the reason why, "Yes, we have no bananas today," became for a few months our national hymn. Do we need to say that because the banana man's use of "Yes" instead of "No" shows him an inferior person it gives us a sense of superiority and hence we like the song? Do we need to hunt out such an explanation as that? Isn't it simpler and more probable that the element of surprise and the element of absurdity, always two elements of humor, tickle our fancy? Just as "She said she wasn't hungry but this is what she ate" tickled it 20 or 30 years ago?

The Mother-Father Complex.

Then this mother-father complex business. This theory that children sometimes have so strong an affection for one or the other of their parents that it becomes a pattern which in one way or another affects their sex life. Doubtless, there is more in that than you and I can understand, but I think if it has the wide application that the discoverers of mother and father complexes would have us think, I don't doubt there are some children whose admiration for one parent has become an objectionably dominant force in their development, but I don't believe this is a common thing any more than physical deformity is common, and some of the diagnoses of this sort that I have read or heard seem woefully strained to me.

I Hope I'm Not In Love With Him.

Then there's this dream business of which I have spoken before. I have not read deeply enough to try and write about it, but I have read some of the dreams that are laboriously explained as symbols of sex desires and for my part I simply cannot believe that they are anything but jumbled thoughts, like the thoughts we think in the daytime only even less controlled. Why an elaborate explanation when a simple one fits so well? If I dream that the butcher went by the end of the street and would not stop and I chased after his automobile, why say that I have a suppressed affection for the butcher who is a sandy haired, unamiable person I have never liked? Why not attribute it to the fact that I forgot to telephone my butcher's order that day until it was too late and was much disturbed?

Oh yes, I know there are more things in Heaven and earth, Ruth Cameron, than are dreamed of in your philosophy. But at the same time I do believe there is such a thing as an overworked theory, and that when theories aren't overworked they can accomplish the best results.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.
TRUE WORTH.

That man is great, whatever be his labor,
Who wins the admiration of his neighbor.

Who, spite of purse or dress or pomp's domain,
Meets all mankind and wins its good opinion.

That man is victor in life's last December
If but the few his kindness remember.

True worth is not by genius fashioned solely,
Great souls are oft found among the lowly.

Brilliance of mind and skill of hand may crumble,
And lack the glorious courage of the humble.

Fortune by chance upon the shrewd may visit,
But gentleness proclaims the soul exquisite.

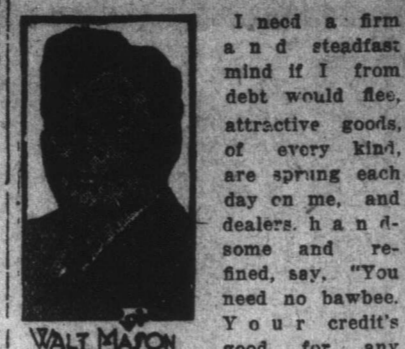

Chance may uncover genius, striking blindly,
But 'tis an inward glory to be kindly.

That man is great, whatever be his station,
Who truly serves his God, his home, his nation.

"Beauty is Only Skin Deep"

Therefore within the reach of every woman. The occasional use of Three Flowers Face Powder and skin creams will perform wonders in improving the complexion. At night the skin cream should be freely used, followed in the morning by Three Flowers Vanishing Cream and Face Powder. It only takes a few minutes and excellent results will follow in a very short time. Ladies who appreciate the best invariably use Three Flowers toilet aids.—July 7, 21

WALT MARION

I need a firm and steadfast mind if I from debt would free, attractive goods, of every kind, are spring each day on me, and dealers, in a n—some and peddled, say, "You need no hardware. Your credit's good for any wares on which your eyes may fall, so buy yourself two teddy bears, a classy basket ball, a carpet for the cellar stairs, a birdcage for the hall. We have some spotted kangaroos that we can sell on time, and we've a stock of bearded gus with pedigrees sublime, and cummerbunds and canvas shoes—you do not need a dime. Pick out whatever goods you like, a check, a churn, a chair, don't worry, for the love of Mike, because your purse is bare; just go kerwhopping down the pike, without a fear or care." In olden days when I applied for credit at the store, the merchant viewed me eagle-eyed, and looked my record o'er; and my appeal was oft denied, which made me sad and sore. The merchant asked how much I earned, how much I saved down, and had my patronage been spurned by any store in town; and when the sad details were heaped he came me with a frown. He would not trust me with a red unless some wealthy wight would stamp approval on my head, and say I was all right; old times, old ways, are gone and dead, and planted out of sight! Now salesmen chase me through the park, pursue me near and far, and cry, in sunshine and the dark, "How diffident you are! You do not need a German mark to buy a motor car!"

Vanishing cream, cold cream, face powder and the most fragrant perfume, all with the THREE FLOWERS odor will be found in the Three Flowers Travelite, that dainty and compact travelling kit prepared for vacation days. Fifty cents, any drug or dept. store.—July 4, w.s.f

Price-Fixing Baby's High-Chair

The chair we are sitting in as we write this, the chair you are sitting in as you read it, and even baby's high chair, may have been manufactured by one of the fifty chair makers who recently pleaded guilty of price-fixing in Chicago, and were fined from $1,000 to $5,000 each—a total of $166,000—by Federal Judge Cliffe. Furthermore, the radio cabinet, bedroom and dining-room sets, phonograph cabinet, refrigerator, and other furniture in your house or apartment may have been made by some of the 263 furniture manufacturers who were indicted by a Chicago grand jury a few weeks ago for price-fixing, together with the secretaries and assistant secretaries of three national furniture associations.

These indictments constitute "the most sweeping action of its kind ever taken," says a Chicago dispatch, and The Daily News of that city agrees that "not since the great tobacco, oil, and steel cases, more than a decade ago, have the Federal courts been called upon to deal with such an important case." The voluntary action of the chair manufacturers in pleading guilty, following their indictment several weeks ago, seems all the more interesting and significant in view of the fact that the Supreme Court ruled, a few days after the chair makers and association officials were charged with price-fixing, that trade associations do not violate the anti-trust laws in gathering and disseminating among their members information as to costs and quantity of production, provided that it does not interfere with interstate commerce.

The indictments of these manufacturers charged price-fixing and curtailment of production to maintain high prices and destroy competition, by means of a "gentlemen's agreement," and the fact that three weeks after the indictments were returned some fifty chair manufacturers pleaded guilty indicates to the Indianapolis News that "the Government had a case so strong that successful defense was regarded as unlikely." To the Department of Justice, according to the New York Journal of Commerce, the outcome indicates that "the Sherman Anti-Trust Law is still effective to prevent the abuse of those engaged in industry of the facilities afforded by trade associations." Continues the Indianapolis paper:

"In addition to the fifty defendants that already have pleaded, six other chair-manufacturing firms have yet to act. All the concerns either were members of, or allied with, the National Association of Chair Manufacturers. It, of course, has legitimate functions as a clearing-house for trade information, but what has just happened indicates how easily the dividing line between a right and wrong use of data may be overstepped.

"Since the illegal acts designated by the Government against the chair manufacturers extend as far back as 1913, and violations were listed in the last three years, the penalties fixed, far from being severe, would seem to be light. Even the firms paying the maximum fine of $5,000 will have been assessed but slightly more than $400 annually for conspiring against the public welfare. If the control of prices was effective at all, it is a fair assumption that increased profits more than offset that sum. The firms, however, are reported to have been fined in accordance with the relative amount of business they did and their financial standing.

"Two other groups of furniture firms are yet to be tried and there can, of course, be no opinion as to whether they also have failed to respect the statutes. The aggregate business of the whole group has amounted to about $15,000,000 annually, another fact that ought to be considered in estimating the degree of punishment that was fixed.

"It is a good thing," believes the Pittsburgh Gazette Times, "to submit an occasional anti-trust suit to the courts, for they bring into the open questions of importance not only to the manufacturer and seller, but to the consumer." In the present instance, remarks the Cleveland Plain Dealer:

"The Government's activity may be indicative of a new trust policy; of an intention to insist upon a return to the days of rigid enforcement of the laws designed to assure free competition in the production and distribution of goods."

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR CORNS.

Little Jack Rabbit by David Cory

It seemed to me as your Uncle Dave sat down to write this story that he heard some of you boys and girls ask: "What has become of dear Uncle Lucky?" Come to think it over, it is some three or four stories since I've mentioned that nice old gentleman rabbit. However, nothing is wrong with him, not even a touch of rheumatism in his little pinky toe. Old Man Rheumatism seldom makes trouble for people in July. He waits for a cold, damp weather, that's what he does, and no mistake. But dear Uncle Lucky had forgotten all about him as he hopped out to the garden to tell the Old Red Rooster to replace the broken picket in the fence with a new one. Then hopping into the Luckymobile, the nice old gentleman rabbit waved his paw to Little Miss Mousie, his careful housekeeper, and sped down Lettuce Avenue. On the corner of Cabbage Street he stopped to buy a bag of peanuts from the little old lady duck who sat all day on an empty box by the side of her little stand.

"Beautiful morning," said dear Uncle Lucky, as he handed her 5 Cent Cents. "How's business?"

"Might be better, and then, again, it might be worse," quacked the old lady duck, smoothing her calico apron. "I shall be glad when I can get lollypops from the Big Brown-Bear. He tells me they are almost ripe and that the Lollypop Tree is loaded with them."

"He ought to know," chuckled kind Uncle Lucky, climbing into the Luckymobile. Then politely hitting his precious wedding stovepipe hat, away sped the old gentleman rabbit. But, Oh dear me! All of a sudden around the corner came Squirrel Nutcracker, pushing a wheelbarrow full of nuts, and before surprised Uncle Lucky could turn aside, crash! went the Luckymobile into the wheelbarrow, and helter-skelter went the nuts all over the street.

"Goodness gracious meebus!" exclaimed poor Uncle Lucky, putting on the brakes, "what have I done?" But what happened after that, he needn't have asked himself that question. No indeed. For there lay the wheelbarrow upside down, and there lay the nuts scattered here and there and everywhere, and there sprawled Squirrel Nutcracker on his back, his little fur cap in the gutter and his silver watch hanging out of his vest pocket.

"Why didn't you blow your horn?" asked the excited old squirrel, as he pulled himself up on his feet.

"Why, why didn't you look before you tried to cross the avenue?" asked Uncle Lucky. "I never saw you until it was all over, and then I had to turn my head backwards."

Just then up came Little Jack Rabbit and the four Cottontails. "Well!

"Beautiful morning," said dear Uncle Lucky.

"pick up the nuts," they shouted, and while Squirrel Nutcracker righted the wheelbarrow, the five little rabbits gathered up the nuts and dropped them in.

When the wheelbarrow was once more filled, kind Uncle Lucky invited everybody to the candy store for a lollypop soda. After which the old squirrel took his load of nuts to the Three-in-One Cent Store and the five little bunnies hopped into the Luckymobile. And in the next story you will hear the brakes, "what have I done?" But what happened after that,

Trotsky
HIS PAST AND FUTURE.
(By H. W. LEE.)

Nicolai Lenin and Leon Trotsky are the two names universally associated with the coup of November, 1917, which gave the Bolsheviks control of Russia. Even in their own country, where other Bolshevik leaders are equally well known, Lenin and Trotsky were, from the first, the two outstanding personalities. Now Lenin is dead; Trotsky is living. He is only 48, though his photos show that he has aged during the last few years; but, despite his "illnesses," he is alert and vigorous. What will his future be?

As a young man Leon Trotsky took an active part in the Russian revolutionary movement. In 1899 he was sentenced to four years' exile in Siberia, but escaped before the term expired and, for the next few years, lived mostly abroad. The words "Bolshevik" and "Menshevik" had then no significance. It was at the Congress of the Russian Social-Democratic Party in London in 1903 that the differences between the Bolshevik (Majority) and Menshevik (Minority) revealed themselves. They divided on their policy towards other parties in the movement against Tsardom, the Bolshevik attitude being one of independence amounting to antagonism, while the Menshevik attitude supported collaboration with all anxious for the overthrow of the old despotic regime. At the time Trotsky did much to soften the bitterness between the two sections and to prevent the widening of the breach; and though his doctrinaire Marxism no doubt threw him towards the Bolsheviks, he held aloof from them until after the March Revolution of 1917.

The abortive attempt at revolution in 1905 had brought Trotsky well to the fore. He then became president of the short-lived St. Petersburg Soviet. His popularity in that connection probably made him favourable to the Soviet form of administration which was adopted later. Tried and sentenced to exile for life in Northern Siberia, he escaped after two years, and lived in Vienna till the outbreak of the war. Expelled from France in 1916, refused permission to enter Switzerland, arrested in Spain and imprisoned for a short time, he arrived in New York in 1917. The collapse of Russian Tsardom in March, 1917, drew Trotsky to Russia, as it did almost all the revolutionists. On the way he and his family were arrested at Halifax, N.S., and interned with war prisoners. That action of the British authorities turned Trotsky against the Allies, for he was furious at the treatment he received. Possibly fuel was added to the fire by the fact that he was released from internment at the urgent demand of Dr. Paul Milkov, then Foreign Minister of the Russian Provisional Government, to whom Trotsky was strongly opposed. Trotsky reached Russia, but not with the permission and assistance of the German General Staff like Lenin and his companions.

Neither in his "War and Revolution" nor in "The Bolsheviks and the World Peace" did Trotsky take a pro-German view of the Great War. Both were written before the Russian Revolution. From his cosmopolitan standpoint all Powers were to blame, and the working classes of the nations involved had no real interest in the colossal struggle. Nevertheless, he recognized differences, though in his opinion they were not fundamental, between the absolutism of the German, Austro-Hungarian and Russian Empires, and the "bourgeois democracies" of Britain and France. "German absolutism represents a feudal-monarchical organization, resting upon a mighty capitalist foundation which the development of the last half century has erected for it. Germany's barbarian petrograde political system gives her a great military supremacy." Trotsky ridiculed the notion that the war was one of "defence" for Germany.

Among the strong personalities which a movement brings to the front no two will be alike. The stronger their characters the more clearly will differences show themselves. At first, Lenin was none too confident of Trotsky, at whom he thought unduly favourable to the Mensheviks. Lenin considered him sometimes as "a man who blinds himself with revolutionary phrases." Yet there can be no doubt that, in the actual working of the Bolshevik insurrection, Trotsky was complementary to Lenin. The one supplied the guiding lines of political and economic policy, the other improvised efficiently, the forces and organization necessary for seizing power, and inspired them with ruthless disregard of all consequences save immediate success. In his "Lesson of October, 1917," Trotsky mentions that Lenin thought Moscow more suitable than Petrograd for starting the Bolshevik insurrection, while he (Trotsky) was certain that Petrograd, by reason of the "pull" of the capital over Russia, had the stronger claim. What is more, Trotsky succeeded at Petrograd with little or no bloodshed, whilst there was fairly severe fighting at Moscow. Trotsky ordinary discontent was arising. Trotsky described how Bucharin, chief editor of Pravda, had suppressed the complaints of Lenin, just before his death, about the immense Soviet bureaucratic apparatus, by refusing to publish Lenin's article; and how, as Lenin insisted upon seeing the article, a special edition of Pravda—one copy—was printed to pacify the dying dictator of Russia.

Trotsky's "Problems of Life" was another thing not relished by the extreme Communists. They considered that some things in it savoured of "bourgeois ideology." He did not fall in with the notion that "proletarian culture" must be completely separated from all that had gone before. "The Russian proletariat is poor in class history and class tradition. This undoubtedly facilitated its revolutionary education up to October, 1917. It causes, on the other hand, the difficulty of constructive work after October. The Russian workman—except the very top of his class—usually lacks the most elementary habits and notions of culture (such as tidiness, instruction, and punctuality). The Western worker possesses these habits." He utters a warning against State incursions into family affairs in regard to which "great caution" must be used. "We want our young generation in the first place to develop into good, highly qualified workers, devoted to their work. It must grow up with the firm conviction that its productive work is at the same time work for Socialism."

But it was his "Lessons of October, 1917," that upset the rulers of the Russian Communist Party most of all. In it he disclosed that Lenin and he were diametrically opposed to all other members of the Central Communist Committee in the critical days of October-November, 1917. He refers to Lenin as saying, "It is not very difficult to be a revolutionary after the revolution has broken out and conquered." This points to the fact that both Zinoviev and Kamenev drew back from the enterprise, and tried to separate themselves from the Lenin-Trotsky group, as their letter "On the Present Moment," of October 11th, 1917, clearly shows. Trotsky also declared that the tactics of the present Central Committee had no logical connection with the tactics of 1917, to which fact he attributed the disastrous attempts at revolution in Bulgaria and Germany.

The official central Communist organ, Pravda, attacked Trotsky furiously, and defended Zinoviev and Kamenev in a way which bore out all that Trotsky had said. Certainly no triumvirate holding dictatorial powers could remain indifferent to such an attack. "The Lessons of October, 1917," was confiscated shortly after its issue from the Soviet State Printing Works, though not before a considerable number of copies had been sold. It was announced that Trotsky had again fallen ill—seriously ill—and had been officially ordered to a warmer climate. Anti-Trotsky resolutions filled the pages of official Soviet publications. Not only his "Communism" but his administration of the Red Army was called in question. Finally he was removed from the Presidency of the Revolutionary Military Council, and Michael Frunze, who stopped the advance of Admiral Kolchak and defeated General Wrangel, was put in his place. On January 20th of this year Izvestiya and Pravda printed a long letter from Trotsky in which he expressed his willingness to place himself at the disposal of the Communist Party, and to accept whatever Party work might be given him. The triumvirate had triumphed.

The situation is by no means settled. Trotsky may be hiding his time. He was present at the Congress of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics which opened at Moscow on May 12th. He was proposed for the "Presidium" (Congress Bureau) and, coming on the platform, he was received with enthusiastic and prolonged applause. It is announced that he has been appointed chief of the Concessions Commission, and a member of the Supreme Council of National Economy, and that the boycott on his works has been removed. It is hardly likely that he will silently acquiesce in the "iron discipline" of the Communist Party after what has happened.

An old friend of mine, a German Social-Democrat who has followed the Socialist movement in all its phases for more than forty years, said to me some time ago, "You will see Trotsky in Park Lane yet, barring accidents." And Trotsky has been appointed chief of the Concessions Commission.

frankly acknowledges that he was right and Lenin wrong.

A. V. Lunacharsky, the Bolshevik Commissar of Public Instruction, in his "Revolutionary Silhouettes," says, "Lenin is perfectly fitted for sitting in the President's chair of the Soviet of People's Commissars, and guiding with genius the world-revolution, but obviously he could not handle the titanic task which Trotsky took upon his shoulders, those lightning trips from place to place, those magnificent speeches, fanfares of instantaneous commands, that role of continual electric fire, now at one point and now at another of the weakening army. There is not a man on earth who could replace Trotsky there."

Leon Trotsky became Foreign Secretary at the outset of the Bolshevik dictatorship, until the Brest-Litovsk Treaty with Imperial Germany was signed. The signing of the Treaty was due to Lenin's "thesis," published in Pravda of February 23rd, 1918, in which he urged that it would be a rash adventure to enter upon a Holy War against German Imperialism on the chance of a social revolution breaking out in Germany in the next few months, for meanwhile defeat would mean more onerous conditions for the future development of the Revolution in Russia. At the meeting of the Central Soviet Executive on February 24th, some bitter things were said against signing the Treaty. Alexandra Kolontay and Karl Radek were among those who strongly opposed the signing of it, the former declaring that Lenin was compromising with Imperialism. The signing of the Treaty was carried by 112 to 84 votes, with 24 abstentions at five o'clock the next morning, only a few hours before the expiration of the German ultimatum.

Trotsky was absent. He had appealed for refusal to sign "a disgraceful peace with the German tyrants." His demand that the German General Staff should undertake not to transfer troops from the Eastern to the Western front was, of course, rejected by the German General Staff, and Trotsky was hoping that a refusal to sign the Treaty would have roused the working classes of Western Europe to revolutionary action. Signing the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk did not stop the German advance towards Petrograd, and the seat of the Bolshevik Government was transferred to Moscow. Then arose the urgent necessity for creating an army in place of that which the Bolsheviks had done their best to destroy; and in the organization of the Red Army and the enforcement of military discipline which he, in common with his colleagues, had denounced and undermined, Leon Trotsky undertook and carried through a stupendous task.

Nicolai Leon died on January 21st, 1924. He had already uttered warnings against the growth of the Soviet bureaucracy; and soon after his death signs began to appear of the breach between Trotsky and certain prominent Bolsheviks which reached an acute stage at the end of last and the beginning of this year. The "troika," the triumvirate of Zinoviev, Kamenev, and Stalin, who practically control the Russian Communist Party—the real masters of Soviet Russia—took advantage of Trotsky's absence to change considerably the personnel of the Military Control of the Red Army, so that its chief should not be surrounded by too many personal friends. About a month later Trotsky issued his "Memorandum" in which he scathingly laid bare the growing deterioration of the Russian Communist Party. It was "false in the core and unhealthy." A "secretarial hierarchy" had grown up which controlled everything, and the mass of the party knew of decisions only when they took the shape of requests or commands. Hence, extra-

Shure and Why Not?

"An American stranger in Ulster once asked a Belfast man what the 12th, of July celebrations really meant. "Have you never heard of the battle of the Boyne?" inquired his friend. "An answer in the negative brought the further inquiry: "Have you never heard of Derry Walls' or the battles of Aughrim and Newtownbuter? "I can't say I have!" said the American. "Ah! go home, man, and read your Bible!" was the plying reply.
