

INDICATIONS OF MURDER IN M'GREGOR CASE

Body Of Aged Digby Man Found In Woods With Skull Crushed And Pockets Had Been Rifled.

ONE MAN HELD ON SUSPICION

Halifax, Nov. 20.—The disappearance of Edward McGregor, who resided a few miles from the town of Digby, N. S., and who was reported missing since Oct. 11th last, is solved. The remains of the old man were found yesterday at Digby in woods near a lake. Decayed skull was crushed and his clothes were rifled.

CONSULS WILL NOT ATTEND

Representatives Of Foreign Nations Refuse To Accept Invitation To Vice-Roy's Reception.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—The feature of the drawing room held in the Senate chamber on Saturday evening by the Governor-General and Countess Grey was the renewed refusal of the Consuls-General of foreign countries to attend.

The question is one of precedence. The consuls are offended that they are placed after the mayor of Ottawa, in the order in which they are presented to the Governor-General. They claim that their mission to this country is diplomatic, and that according to their status in this country is higher than mere trade representatives.

NEW KING IS ACCOMPLISHED

London, Nov. 16.—Few royal personalities are there more interesting than that of the Crown Prince Maha Vajiravudh, who succeeds the late King upon the throne of Siam. The narrative of his life was told yesterday by an official of the Siamese legation.

TOLSTOI LOSES BATTLE WITH GRIM DEATH FOE

Aged Russian Philosopher and Thinker Passed Away Early Sunday Morning—Unreconciled With Church.

One of Greatest Writers of Modern Times Who Turned His Attention to Christianity in Latter Years—Contributor to British Press—Sincerely Mourned by Peasants.

Astopyia, Nov. 20.—Peasants all day long passed through the death chamber, hung with pine boughs, where Tolstoy lies. The great writer died early this morning, after a brave fight against great odds. Many of the mourners today knelt beside the bed. The silence at times was broken by orthodox chants for the repose of the soul of the dead.

BOY THIEF AT MONCTON

James Trites Of Boston Suspected Of Going Away With Horse, Carriage And Complete Outfit.

Special to The Standard. Moncton, Nov. 20.—James Trites, aged 17, who hails from Boston is said to be making a record as burglar and thief.

After serving his term he came to Moncton and got employment with William Magee, a truckman, living at Lewisville. He was at Magee's place last evening and afterwards came to town. Today he was missing, and with him it is supposed went a Lee Enfield rifle, a cartridge belt containing 90 rounds of ammunition, a hunting knife, and a belt from Mr. Magee's house, two robes from the barn of Wm. Cummins, of Lewisville, and a horse and carriage belonging to R. R. Colpitts, a Moncton book seller.

Trites was traced to Albert county and it is supposed he intended going into the woods. The Albert authorities have been notified, and 'tis thought Trites will be rounded up before long.

OWNERS ABANDON ANCIENT SCHOONER

The John Cadwallader Goes Ashore Near Richmond's Island, Maine—Cargo Taken Off—Cannot Be Floated.

Portland, Me., Nov. 20.—The two masted schooner, John Cadwallader, of Bangor, which grounded on Watts ledge, near Richmond's Island early Saturday morning was abandoned by her owners today and is being stripped by wreckers. Several attempts were made this morning to pull her off the rocks but it was found that a big hole had been torn in her bottom, and that she would sink if dislodged.

LEES COURT IS BURNED

London, Nov. 20.—Lees court, at Faversham, Kent, the ancestral home of the Earl of Sondes, with its priceless contents, was destroyed by fire Sunday morning. The damage is estimated at $500,000, but no intrinsic value could be placed on many of the treasures with which the house was filled.

SCHR. ARLIGHT IN HARD LUCK

Charlottetown Vessel In Collision First With Abbie C. Stubbs And Later Runs Ashore—$20,000 Cargo.

Charlottetown, Nov. 20.—The schooner Arlight is a vessel of produce valued at $20,000 loaded by Carvell Bros., and which sailed Thursday night of St. Pierre, is ashore at Flat River. The Arlight seems to have been unfortunate from the outset of this trip. It was at midnight that she left Charlottetown and she had only got outside the harbor when she met in collision with the three masted schooner Abbie C. Stubbs, of New York bound from Miramichi for Cuba with a cargo of lumber.

The cargo is insured with Hyndman and Co. The Arlight is a vessel of 103 tons. She was built in 1898 and is commanded by Capt. Pole of North Sydney. An endeavor to float her is being made.

BALLOON PITTSFIELD MAKES NIGHT FLIGHT

J. J. Van Valkenburg Qualifies As International Pilot In Fifty Mile Trip Over Berkshire Peaks.

Windsor Locks, Conn., Nov. 20.—The balloon Pittsfield, following a midnight trip from that city in Massachusetts, descended lightly in a vacant lot off Easy street on the outskirts of Windsor Locks, while the town was sleeping this morning, making the New England record for a first night landing and qualifying J. J. Van Valkenburg of Framingham, Mass., as an international balloon pilot.

FORMER FIRE CHIEF SUICIDE AT SAUGUS

Saugus, Mass., Nov. 20.—Despondent because of continued ill health, Chas. A. Blakely, former chief of the Saugus fire department, and for 14 years a town constable, committed suicide today in his blacksmith shop in the rear of the town hall. He took his life by shooting himself in the mouth. He is survived by a wife.

SPEAKERS ON ADDRESS TO BE HEARD TODAY

H. B. McGivern, Of Ottawa, Will Move Address—L. O. Bourdon to Speak For Opposition.

Special to The Standard. Ottawa, Nov. 20.—When the House of Commons reassembles on Monday the first business to be dealt with will be the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne. The debate is not expected to be lengthy this year. H. B. McGivern, M. P., Ottawa, will move the address and the seconder will be Ernest LaPointe, M. P., Kamouraska. L. O. Bourdon will speak for the opposition and he is to be followed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

STREET CAR MEN FACE MANSLAUGHTER

QUIET FOR THEODORE AT WASHINGTON

Washington, Nov. 20.—After spending a whole day and two nights in the capital city, the greater part of which was employed in being entertained and renewing old acquaintances in official and social Washington—the first chance he has had since he left here on March 4, 1909—Col. Theodore Roosevelt made a quiet exit early today for New York.

RECIPROcity DELEGATE DIES ON HIS RETURN

Henry M. Hoyt, Counsellor For U. S. Department Of State, Was Seized With Fatal Illness At Ottawa.

HAD BRIGHT CAREER IN JURISPRUDENCE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—Henry Martyn Hoyt, counsellor for the department of state, died at his home here this morning from peritonitis. Mr. Hoyt was taken ill in Canada while there relative to the reciprocity negotiations between the United States and that country. Since his return to Washington last Monday he had been confined to his home, and physicians called in consultation with the family physician considered the case extremely serious from the beginning.

Hundreds See Unveiling of Statue at St. Peter's Church

The new statue of the Guardian Angel was unveiled yesterday at noon in front of St. Peter's church with a very large number of people present. At 10.30 o'clock there was solemn high mass, and a sermon was preached by the Rector, Rev. Father Duke. The Angels, was the subject of the discourse. Immediately after the service the congregation proceeded to the front of the church to witness the unveiling of the statue. The statue was blessed by Rev. Joseph Borgmann, and he was assisted by Rev. Father O'Regan and Rev. Father Holland. A number of the smallest children in the Sunday school were also present, and at a given signal they pulled a cord and the statue was revealed. The teachers in the Sunday school with the larger scholars were also present. The City Cornet Band under the leadership of Prof. Waddington, played a prelude, after which those present recited "Holy, God we praise Thee." As the statue was being unveiled the band rendered "God Save the King."

DR. TORREY SPEAKS ON EXCUSES MADE Better to Spend Little Time in Church With Hypocrites on Earth Than Eternity in Hell With Them.

Dr. Torrey addressed two large audiences yesterday. In the evening the rink was crowded, and the doors had to be closed to keep the people out. An incident that created some interest, occurred during the afternoon meeting. When the preacher asked those present who wanted to come to Christ to stand up, there was no response, and one girl seemed to be much amused. Dr. Torrey in a prayer which followed, expressed surprise that any one should laugh on such an occasion and asked that the girl might be redeemed. In the evening the evangelist preached on "Excuses."

POVERTY NOT RESULT OF HUMAN DEPRAVITY Rev. J. J. McCaskill Offers New Explanation for Manifold Miseries of Present Day--Sign Petition for Russian.

The first excuse is this. There is too much to give up. That is absolutely unreasonable. You say, "Do you mean to say there is nothing to give up if one comes to Christ?" No, I say nothing of the kind. I never knew any one to come to Christ yet that did not have to give up something. The drunkard has to give up his drunkenness, the gambler his gambling; people who are following the frivolities of the world have to give them up. Not Hard to Give Up.

The excuse is absurd because what you give up is nothing to what you get. It is very easy to give up tin when you get gold, and it is very easy to give up sin when you get God. It is very easy to give up painted glass when you get diamonds and rubies, and it is very easy to give up the baubles of the world when you get the real jewels of Heaven in exchange. I do not think that anybody ever gave up more for Christ than did Paul, and yet, when the chains were tried, and in prison, writing about what he gave up, he said, "What things were gained to me those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency that I have in Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ."

One Out of a Hundred. Then again, if there are hypocrites in the church (and I have no doubt of it), there are a great many good people in the church. Of course I use the term church not meaning any one denomination, but the whole body of believers in Jesus Christ. There are a great many people in the church, in fact, all the best people are there. But if there were a church or chapel consisting of a hundred members, and ninety-nine were good, straight, upright, downright, Christian men and women, and there was one poor, miserable hypocrite, you would overlook the ninety-nine good, straight, members and fix all your attention on the one poor, miserable hypocrite. Yes, you would! And do you know why you do so? It is because you are a hypocrite yourself. You are a hypocrite outside the church, and therefore you are looking for hypocrites inside the church to hide behind.

Tolstoi failed to recognize either of the physicians and asked, "Who are these strangers?"

When informed, he said, "What fine men."

Despite their natural reluctance to spread discouraging reports, the consulting physicians could not see their way to hold out a ray of hope. However they helped to lessen the pain of the aged patient, whose parting hours were mercifully free from physical anguish. His heart succumbed shortly after he had issued from under the influence of an injected stimulant. He died without regaining consciousness. In the interval between the last two attacks of cardiac failure, the patient seemed to be comfortable, and his face was clear of pain.

Throughout a heartbreaking night a motley crowd, made up of the most varied elements imaginable, pressed around the low hut. There were distant relatives of the aged author, Tolstians, villagers, and many churchmen among them. The Abbé Varsanofius, who did not lose hope until the end of seeing Tolstoi, and extending to him the olive branch on behalf of the church. All alike stood spellbound, knowing that a matchless personality was departing as the Sunday dawn dispelled the raw foggy November night. Virtually the whole population of Astopova was there.

(the defence of Sebastopol against the British and French allied forces. He first made a reputation in literature by a series of vivid sketches written from Sebastopol and when he left the army, soon after the Crimean war, he devoted himself entirely to literature. His War and Peace, a tale of the invasion of Russia by Napoleon in 1812, is regarded in Russia as his masterpiece, although his Anna Karenina, which appeared in 1876 and The Cossacks found greater favor abroad, while his Kreutzer Sonata, the keystone of the Christian faith, translations of which were published in 1890, attracted wide attention. Tolstoi also wrote much on education and published a number of short stories and reminiscences of childhood and youth, but of recent years he had devoted himself to religious teachings. He made "return not evil" the keystone of the Christian faith, and insisted that the literal interpretation of the Sermon on the Mount was the only rule of the Christian life. The religious views of Tolstoi were set forth in his Christ's Christianity and My Religion.

Later Works.

During 1893 Tolstoi wrote The Kingdom of God Within Us, an important work on the social question, and in 1895 he wrote The Four Gospels Harmonized and Translated. His other works included My Confession, Criticism of Dogmatical Christianity, What I Believe, What I Do, The Power of Darkness, (a drama) On Life, The Fruits of Enlightenment (a comedy), The Kingdom of God Is Within You, What is Art, The Christian Teaching, The Resurrection, The Slavery of Our Times, What Is Religion, and many other works on the most varied subjects.

In 1901 Tolstoi was excommunicated by the holy synod and in October, 1902, he deposited his memoirs and diaries with the curator of the Rumyantsev museum on the condition that they should not be published until ten years after his death, and in November of the same year he legally made over his whole fortune, including his real and personal estate, to his wife and children.

In 1895 Tolstoi wrote a powerful vindication of the Doukhor sect, which during that year had suffered great persecution for its religious professions. On the Russian censor refusing to permit its publication, Tolstoi applied to the London Times which printed the lengthy article in full. He continued from that time on to address his literary efforts to the British press.

Tolstoi was several times threatened with expulsion from Russia, and was several times, according to report, upon the point of being exiled. He seems, however, to have been treated with unusual leniency in view of his strongly pronounced views, especially set forth in a manifesto entitled "The people's rights."

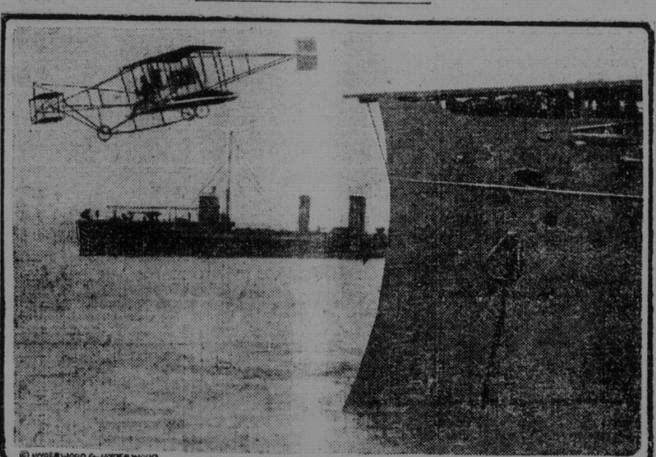

The Announcement.

Then came a quiet voice from the hut: "Leo Nicolaevich is dead. There was a moment of silence. Then every head was bowed, and there was sobbing on all sides. One called out: "His heart was burst by unbounded love for humanity" and this and similar phrases ran from mouth to mouth through the weeping group gathered there. Later in the day all the peasants in the district flocked here. No one was excluded from the death chamber, through which there was a constant stream of visitors, including many school children. The chamber is decorated with pine branches. The body has been embalmed and will be transferred to Yasnaya Polyana. All visitors have been given permission to photograph the body if they wish. M. Gumbert, the sculptor, will take a mask. It is said that Tolstoi expressed a wish to be buried on the hill at Yasnaya Polyana where he played as a child, but that the funeral should be a simple one, without ceremonial or flowers. The family, however, has agreed not to interfere with any honors that the public may desire to pay.

Friends of the writer have started a movement for the acquisition of the house where he died as a memorial. Grand Duke Nicholas Michaelovitch has sent a message to Countess Tolstai saying, "My whole soul is with you and your family at this sad moment." Numerous other telegrams of sympathy, have come from organizations and individuals.

Count Lyof Nikolavitch Tolstoi, usually called Count Leo Tolstoi, novelist and social reformer, was born August 28, 1828, at Yasnaya Polyana, in the province of Tula, Russia. When 23 years old Tolstoi entered the army and served in the Caucasus and in and telegraphic instructions have been despatched to the bishops informing them that regulations were not permissible. Burial according to the rites of the orthodox church is considered out of the question.

The government intends, according to the announcement, to cooperate with the church in the enforcement of its decision, although both the emperor and Premier Stolypin have indicated their desire that the great Russian be buried with the Russian rite. Repeatedly advances have been made which would permit the lifting of the ban of excommunication laid on Tolstoi in 1901. The Metropolitan Antonius himself sent a telegram urging Tolstoi to make his peace with the church, and representatives of the church were sent to Astopova for the purpose of bringing the count back into the fold. Messages from Optina, Shamardine and Astapova, however, stated that until the end Tolstoi was held a prisoner by the enemies of the church.

Play Houses Closed.

Moscow, Nov. 20.—The police today forbade theatres from suspending their performances because of the death of Count Tolstoi. Nevertheless the play houses were closed, because the actors refused to appear. At the Moscow Armenian church a public requiem was permitted.

Pittsburg, Nov. 19.—A recent interview, and possibly the last which a newspaper correspondent had with Count Tolstoi, was related by M. Arpad Pasztor, a distinguished Hungarian author and journalist, to the Associated Press representative here last Thursday night, in a very engaging manner. H. Pasztor is editor of "As Esti," semi official evening paper of Budapest, and on a tour around the world he is now in Pittsburg for a brief study of conditions among Hungarian immigrants here.

Only two months ago, in September, Mr. Pasztor, proceeding by train from Moscow, dropped off at Yasnaya Polyana, a little village about two miles from the last railway station in the Province of Tula, famous as the birthplace of the great Russian writer. "It is a poor village," H. Pasztor began to relate, "with perhaps 50 or 75 peasants' houses, surrounding a great open garden, a place in which Tolstoi built a school 20 or 30 years ago, and where he taught. There are two great columns of stone on either side of a high road leading to the garden, and on the left a lake with a few swans and small boats."

"It was a beautiful late summer day with everything still green and in blossom as I approached the vicinity alone in search of the Tolstoi house. I located it, but I should have said it was not a Russian home. For I observed that several copies of The London Times lay on the lawn. I noticed that a lady sat on the veranda reading, and I presumed that she was the Countess Tolstoi. If so, I knew she was a born German—the daughter of a German professor—and I addressed her in German, asking if I might see the great novelist."

"Have you introductions?" she asked.

"No, madame, but are not his works introductions enough?"

"But," she demurred, "if that were all—the white—I am sorry, my husband is asleep now. From what country do you come?"

"Hungary," I replied.

"Indeed, our secretary, Markovitsky, is Hungarian too. You may speak with him. My husband is very old and weak and does not like to speak with visitors."

Met Eldest Son.

"At this she ushered me into the house, where I first met the novelist's eldest son, who is, perhaps, 45 years old. Learning that I was an author he admitted that he also wrote, but added that he abandoned authorship because it seemed impossible to

"I am sorry I cannot ask you to dinner," Markovitsky said, "but such invitations belong to the wife." He seated me in his own room, however, and there alone I noted thousands of letters done up in packages of 100 or so, which as was later explained are sent every month to the museum at Moscow.

His Talk With Tolstoi.

"While I was regarding these things the door opened and a tall man entered. From the white beard and hair and the peasant dress of blue trousers Russian shirt and great boots, I knew at once it was Tolstoi. He shook my hand and sat down opposite me. His eyes were such as one out of 10,000 men have, deep green eyes which penetrate one like the X-ray."

"You are Hungarian, I like Hungarians. My secretary is one, too. Where are you going?"

"To Japan to study art and to America to study immigration," I replied.

"Art? Art? Who knows what true art is? What is your profession?"

"A writer," I answered.

"And you write what?"

"Plays for the theatre."

"Oh, that is terrible," he exclaimed. "No one should write plays. Many of them poison the soul of the public. What other things do you write?"

"Poems."

"At this the aged novelist clasped his hands and wrung them in despair. "Poems? Oh, you unhappy man! Why is a man writing poems if he can write prose? Why does he make a prison of his sentence by 'rhyme and rhythm'?"

"But what," I interposed, "of such men as write the truth for the people as you do?"

"What is truth?" he asked, "nobody knows it and everybody knows. Everybody is seeking for themselves the truth and from this standpoint everybody may be a writer; I do not like literature—the modern literature, because all the authors are writing for the sake of money and not for ideas. They write cheap stories, catering to the public's likes and avoiding their dislikes. For M. Gorki and A. Gorkov are not writers, they are business men. You remember that in 1908, after writing The Resurrection, I advised that the right to publish my books be set free."

"But," he continued, "let me learn of your mission. I think it an interesting one. Why are the Hungarians emigrating?"

"Because all the land is occupied and the poor cannot have land to live on," I replied.

"This is the case in Russia, too, but I think in a hundred years from now it will be a crime to own land here. All the lands and fields will be common for the people. An American, Dr. Eliot (president emeritus) of Harvard University, has the best ideas on this subject. Have you read him? No? I am sorry, then, for you."

"With this the aged novelist cut short the interview by asking to be excused. "I am very old and tired and sometimes I am weak. Today I had a very bad day. I must go." He shook my hand and was gone.

His Daily Life.

"Secretary Markovitsky returned to me, and I plied him with questions about Tolstoi's daily life. He said: "He is up early every morning and eats little breakfast. He walks alone or rides horseback to the poor Russian villages. One often sees him halt in the road and, pulling pencil and paper from his pocket, make notes of his thoughts. His happiest moments are when poor villagers come to him as judge of some dispute. Today for instance he was arbitrator of some such trouble among 30 men. After walking or riding on such expeditions Tolstoi comes home to work, to write. Nobody asks him what he is writing because he reads what he writes soon afterwards to others, and if they have ideas that appeal to him he changes his. Invariably, however, he repents with the exclamation "But these are not my ideas and straightaway he returns to his own ideas. After the luncheon at noon he goes to bed until dinner time. Many visitors come every day, but few are received, and in the evening the family and neighbors have music."

"I asked Markovitsky about the imperial family's attitude toward Tolstoi."

"It is not true," he said, "that the Czar and the imperial family are enemies to Tolstoi. The Emperor likes him and is proud that he is a Russian. I think the Grand Duke Michael often pays a visit at Tolstoi's house."

"May I ask how you came to be physician and secretary to Count Tolstoi?"

"Why, I came along one afternoon just as you have done today to visit the great novelist. He asked me what part of his works I liked best and I replied: The Philosophical and Religious, whereupon he asked if I would like to remain with him. I have not been home since (sevent years ago)."

"I suggested that it must be difficult to live with a man of such strength of mind."

"On the other hand," Markovitsky replied, "I feel it the greatest of good fortune and a holy thing to be in touch with such a man."

"It was moonlight as I left the Tolstoi house and as I walked back to the railway station I think I summarized my impressions in this manner: 'House like a prison. Everybody a prisoner in Tolstoi's ideas. Nobody may take a free step there. His ideas hang over the hearth of the family like a tyrant. It is a cruel thought, but I added that it will be happier free.'

"The philosophy and religion" of Tolstoi will pass as a wind, but the romance of Tolstoi will endure."

EXTRACTS FROM AUTOBIOGRAPHY,

By Count Leo Tolstoi.

I am ugly, awkward, uncleanly, and, in the worldly sense, uneducated. I am irritable, a bore, to others rude, intolerant and as bashful as a child. I am almost completely ignorant. What I do know I have learned anyhow, independently, by snatches, incoherently, in a disorderly way, and all comes to—so little. I am self-indulgent, irresolute, inconstant, stupidly vain and hot headed, as are all people with a weak character. I am not brave. I am not methodical in my life, and am so lazy that for me idleness has become almost a necessary habit.

A conversation about divinity and faith suggested to me a great, a stupendous idea to the realization of which I feel myself capable of devoting my life. This idea is the foundation of a new religion corresponding to the present state of mankind—the religion of Jesus, but purified from dogma and mysticism, a practical religion not promising future bliss, but giving bliss upon earth. I feel that this idea can be realized only by generations consciously looking toward it as a goal. One generation will hand on the idea to the next and some day enthusiasm or reason will bring it into being. To act with a deliberate view to the religious union of mankind, this is the leading principle of the idea which I hope will command my enthusiasm.

SAINT JOHN, MONDAY MORNING, NOV. 21, 1910.

REV. C. J. McLAUGHLIN'S LETTER.

In a letter, addressed to the Editor of The Standard, which appears in the current issue of the New Freeman, Rev. C. J. McLaughlin, of Milltown, accuses The Standard of not devoting sufficient space to the Eucharistic Congress, when it was in progress in Montreal, and of giving undue prominence to matters which he regards as hostile to his church. This communication was originally sent to the editor of The Standard, but was not published in this journal for reasons which will later become apparent.

With regard to the reports of the Eucharistic Congress the writer says:—"All the leading journals of the continent send representatives. Daily seems to vie with daily in reporting the most minute details of the doings of the great religious gathering. Your 'Journal, however, and the other St. John dailies can give but a meagre report."

Anyone familiar with the routine of a newspaper office is aware that the space which can be devoted to any one subject must be governed by the amount of other important news to be handled. The Eucharistic Congress was held simultaneously with the Dominion Exhibition in St. John, and the celebration of the Bicentenary of the Church of England at Halifax. The Standard, in common with other St. John papers, devoted many columns of space to it. Had the event occurred at a more favorable time, it would undoubtedly have been given even more extended notice, but under the circumstances, we do not consider the writer has any just ground for complaint.

Rev. Fr. McLaughlin proceeds to criticize The Standard for devoting "a long leader in the editorial column" to copiously quoted extracts from not too friendly "journals, under the caption 'The Aftermath of the Eucharistic Congress.' This Aftermath comment," he continues, "was seemingly intended to take on the form of a serial story, and on Oct. 7th we have the very interesting article 'The Speaker's Mistake.'"

The extracts to which Rev. Fr. McLaughlin takes exception were the editorial opinions expressed by such prominent journals as the Toronto World, the Winnipeg Telegram, the Ottawa Citizen, and the Winnipeg Tribune. They had relation to incidents in connection with the Eucharistic Congress with which everyone was familiar. We have yet to be convinced that The Standard should exclude from its columns the opinions of its contemporaries on questions of public interest, because these opinions may not be pleasing to all sections of the community.

The Standard's comment was absolutely impartial. It merely referred to these incidents as raising "questions which will doubtless be the subject of much animated debate, even if there be no definite outcome." That this comment was justified may be seen by reference to our report on Saturday of the proceedings in Parliament. Questions were asked by Col. Hughes and Dr. Sprague bearing on the incidents referred to, and they will doubtless, as The Standard said, be the subject of much animated debate. Would Rev. Fr. McLaughlin desire us also to exclude the opinions of these gentlemen and others because they do not agree with him?

On September 26, the writer continues, "in your news column under large black and glowing headlines, 'the batty vapors of a Moncton preacher must be reported for the edification of your readers. On Oct. 21st, the uncouth and blasphemous utterances of another ministerial wanderer are served up as news on the front page, of course, and lastly Catholic shareholders and subscribers to The Standard must see on November 7th three columns devoted to the mad hallucinations and ravings of a professedly Christian body of men hurling their noisy anathemas and gnashing their teeth at the Mother Church of Nations."

Rev. Fr. McLaughlin would have The Standard report the proceedings of the Eucharistic Congress in full, but he would debar The Standard from reporting the opinions of men of other faiths, or the speeches delivered at a banquet of the St. John District Lodge L. O. A. on November 5, which was open to the press. From the standpoint of a newspaper, designed to publish the news irrespective of opinions, his attitude is indefensible. Had The Standard taken the ground editorially that the remarks to which he takes exception were justified, he might have had the right to complain that this journal was expressing opinions calculated to offend "two fifths of the population of the province." But The Standard took no such ground. If the Ancient Order of Hibernians or the Knights of Columbus, should see fit to hold a banquet and give voice to opinions more in keeping with Rev. Fr. McLaughlin's views, The Standard as a newspaper would give them equal publicity. The columns of this newspaper are open at all times for news of interest to its Catholic readers. We would welcome a greater willingness on the part of those concerned to supply it.

"mad phantoms of a diseased mind"; "Breeders of dissension and strife"; "A vile campaign."

Having read these opinions expressed by Rev. Fr. McLaughlin, we turned to the following question which he asked towards the close of his letter:—"Now, Mr. Editor, I ask you in all sincerity, does the discrimination of such vituperative utterances as I have specifically referred to in this letter make for better citizenship, or help build up that united Canada for which we are all striving and which we so ardently desire to see realized?" The Standard felt that it could best answer this question by refusing to publish Rev. Fr. McLaughlin's letter as it neither tended to further the cause of a united Canada, which he has at heart, nor to add dignity to the attitude of the Great Church to which he belongs.

SIR WILFRID AND THE SENATE.

If Sir Wilfrid's experience in his last appointment to the Senate is a bitter one, it is well deserved. Whether it will result in reflection and reform on his part is quite another thing, and exceedingly doubtful. The appointment of Mr. Louis Laverge, M. P. for Drummond-Arthabaska, and the circumstances surrounding it, show Sir Wilfrid and his methods at their worst. Not a glimmer of appreciation of the purpose and dignity of the institution as a part of our constitutional system appears to have crossed his mind. Nor did he display the least symptom of a realization of the high trust and great responsibility reposed in him as the virtual fountain of appointing power.

His highest conception of the Senate seemed to be that of a convenient device, to enable him to inveigle into a trap from which there was no escape, a man whom he had first disappointed, then cast off, whom he feared to face in open honorable fight, and whom he wished to utterly destroy by unfair methods. His apparent appraisal of himself as trustee for the people and guardian of the Senate's honor was that, as such trustee and guardian, he was at liberty to violate all conditions of the trust, and disregard all guarantees of the honor, by using both as a machine to carry out his own petty and personal ends.

Mr. Louis Laverge was elected by his district to represent them in the Commons for the term beginning in 1908. The electors might have made a better choice, but that was their own business, and we have no quarrel with them; 1910 came and was nearly spent when Sir Wilfrid became sore pressed by Bourassa. He must be crushed "coute que coute." Sir Wilfrid feared him, his vanity was wounded by him, his weaknesses pitilessly shown up, his popularity threatened, and his headship in Quebec placed in jeopardy. To prepare a pit for him and to entice him to enter therein and then to do for him once for all—that was Sir Wilfrid's plan. The most deadly pit he believed to be Drummond-Arthabaska, and he set himself to prepare the way.

There were two obstacles, the people's representative had not filled the term for which he was elected, and consequently had not fulfilled the trust for which his electors had chosen him—that was one. The other was as to what Mr. Louis Laverge might think a fair price for the sale of his trust held for the people, and handing it over, not to his people, but to Sir Wilfrid. Mr. Louis Laverge did not believe his value by over modesty in his demands. He would drop his trust and play into the hands of Sir Wilfrid for a seat in the Senate and a pension for life, nothing less. It was a stiff price. But then Sir Wilfrid would not have to pay it; the country would be made to provide. The sum was immaterial, to Sir Wilfrid. Senators live long, it is said, and Mr. Louis Laverge could count on say 15 years of green old age. Fifteen multiplied by $2,500 makes $37,500 plus travelling expenses (he will get a pass) plus yearly dole of stationery, French clocks, and electric vibrators—all this out of the country's pocket, not Sir Wilfrid's. Yes, it certainly was cheap looked at that way.

This little matter negotiated there was another difficulty—at least it would have been a difficulty to a trustee with any proper sense of his duties as trustee, and guardian of the people's rights in the Senate, and the Senate's place in the constitutional system of the country. The vacancy in the Senate was caused by the death of Senator Drummond, of Montreal, a representative of the English people of Quebec, a business man of great merit and wide reputation, and a man by education and ability fitted to adorn the Senate and represent the people. A high-minded trustee—acting for Canada, not himself—would have sought to choose a man at least equal to Senator Drummond, and to preserve to the English portion of Quebec their fast dwindling privileges and rights. No such scruples troubled Sir Wilfrid. What cared he for the people's rights or the Senate's effectiveness so long as he could kick Bourassa?

To a high-minded trustee another thought might have occurred. The virtue of a senate lies in its fair and able representation; its weakness in unfair, inferior and partisan representation. Today the Senate contains twenty-two Liberal-Conservatives, mostly between seventy and ninety years of age, and sixty-four Liberals, all but two of whom have been appointed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It might have occurred to a fair-minded trustee that under these circumstances, it would have been wise to fill a Conservative and English vacancy, by a Conservative and English senator. It did not so occur to Sir Wilfrid. Death subtracted one English and Conservative from the small number remaining, and Sir Wilfrid thanked death for providing an opportunity and straightway added to the partisan overloading, which is fast making of the Senate a bye word and reproach.

In the days of opposition the Liberal leader and the Liberal following were unanimous in their desire, and strong in their promises, to reform and strengthen the Senate—to make it a powerful and dignified body and a worthy part of our governmental machinery. Sir Wilfrid has debased and belittled one of the three great branches of our constitutional system, and appears to have done it deliberately and in opposition to the remonstrances of his friends, the criticism of his opponents and the just expectations of all Canadians who love fair play and desire good government.

The Standard's Old Reporter

I accompanied the city engineer on his weekly tour of inspection of the Loch Lomond water system, Saturday. Probably he did not learn much about the water system—it was dark long before we reached Robertson reservoir, but incidentally I discovered the key to the character of the city engineer—the explanation of his imperturbable serenity in the face of the storms of controversy that surge round the water and sewerage board, of why his apparent simplicity when besieged by questions is never construed by the older aldermen as lack of knowledge or technical ability.

We left the city at 3 o'clock. Out by the Little River reservoir we stopped for a while, and for a few minutes thought of the engineer, and became a country peddler. However, it appeared that the articles he produced from the back of the buggy were tools or gauges for the caretaker. The engineer looked around and we went on along the public highway. Presently we came to the new road built this summer to facilitate the work of repairing the concrete conduit. It runs away from the main road to about the middle of the concrete pipe, straight as a die, and is an object lesson in the art of road making through a swampy land. It has been built in strict accordance with the three principles of road making laid down by Good Roads: Campbell, drainage, drainage, drainage. The roadbed is arched to drain off the water; deep ditches extend the whole length of it; permanent culverts have been constructed where under-drainage is essential.

When we reached the conduit, the horse was stalled in a lean-to, and we followed back cityward along the line of the pipe for half a mile or more. Here and there we came upon places that had evidently been excavated during the summer. "We've had to uncover the pipe at lots of places to get at leaks this summer," said the engineer. "Most of them have been repaired without shutting off the water completely."

Many Small Leaks.
At every few rods we came upon pools of water, or thin streams trickling out of the embankment. "They indicate small leaks," said the engineer. "They are not serious, but I suppose we'll have to strip the pipe and repair them some day. Many of these leaks only develop, or show themselves in the fall of the year. We suppose the conduit contracts when the water gets cold and opens small cracks which close up again when the water gets warm."

After a time we came to sections where the earth had been freshly filled in. It was Ade's place where the leak occurred Friday, a week ago, when many people on the high levees were without water for a time. Evidently it had been a healthy kind of a leak. A great trench running down the side of the hill showed where the water had drained off.

"A big hole developed in the bottom of the conduit," explained the engineer. "In such cases there is nothing else for it but to shut the water off for a while. When the break is on top of the conduit, we reduce the flow of the water and put on a patch without the people knowing that anything is wrong."
After walking back to the team we drove in the other direction along the embankment which marks the course of the pipe line, and came presently to a dozen men constructing an under drain on the edge of the bed of Lake Fitzgerald—the famous dry lake drained by Mr. Murdoch some years ago in order to make the infusorial earth available for mercantile purposes. The workmen were covered with mud, ragged and austere. The engineer inspected their work, held a conference with the foreman, and we went on. "The best road," he remarked at Lake Latimer, it was dusk. The engineer made a short inspection there, and as darkness fell we started for Loch Lomond.

Pillars of Stone.
Ere long we were on the main road again, and presently I was aware of a great pile of rubble on the roadside. They were unexpected and decorative—symbols, perhaps, of the greatness of the city reaching out into the country for the source of one of the essentials of its health and safety—its very life. A city that erected those pillars out there in the woods evidently has the vision and the dream; the spiritual quality without which its material achievements would be of little value.

We drove between the pillars down to the dam, forming the Robertson reservoir. A fire smoldered in a pile of debris near the water side; the engineer went down, and stirred it to life; the flames leaped high, and a blood-red glare flashed across the waters of the reservoir.
We turned, went on to the caretaker's house at the head of the reservoir, and had supper. Afterwards, we walked on to Loch Lomond, where the engineer wanted to look over an old building belonging to the city, and returning, stopped at the Loch Lomond Hotel.

The Return.
We walked back to the caretaker's house, and soon were travelling cityward, behind the engineer's horse. The moon was up; its silver radiance lay over the world, giving to the scene roundabout the glamor, the mystery, the beauty of a vision of fairyland.

The road, covered with a layer of light snow, glittering before us, undulant, and erratic. On either hand the forest stood up spectrally in the moonlight; now and then through a sombre gap we glimpsed an expanse of lake, glimmering and beautiful in the play of the moonbeams, sombre and mysterious in the shadows.

All this was great, expectant, mute. The engineer talked of his plans to improve the water service—of his hope of getting some day a buzz-wagon to carry him to and fro over the system. The moon disappeared behind a cloud, and, at last, we swung round a curve, and the grey old city of St. John lay before us, draped in dusk, gorgeously decorated with countless lights, arrayed in rows in clusters, in patterns, fantastic and of barbaric loveliness, in the semblance of a coronet of stars about her brows, strings of golden beads upon her bosom, a zone of glittering gems about her waist, and furbelows of mystical fire about her skirts.

TAG DAY DEC. 2 FOR TUBERCULOSIS ANTIS

Inter-Denominational Committee Takes Up Project of Raising Money for Urgent Need of Work.

On Saturday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. E. A. Smith, Carleton street, a meeting representing all denominations was held to confer with the ladies of the executive of the local society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. Urgent needs of the society were presented to the doctors and the committee was deeply interested in the work, and it was decided that in order to raise a sufficient amount of money for the winter something must be done at once. On motion made by one of the executive, and carried, it was decided to have a tag day on December 2, this being the only way possible for raising the required amount of money before the winter set in. The society has already done marvelous work with the limited amount of money at their disposal, and they feel confident that the appeal which they will make through their workers on December 2nd will meet with generous response from the citizens of this city for a cause which so deeply interests and affects each and every individual in St. John.

RICHOIBUCTO VISITED BY I.C.R. MANAGER

Report That Kent Northern Will be Taken Over if Branch Line Policy is Adopted—Stock Farm Founded.

Richoibucto, Nov. 18.—Jasper Pine yesterday for New York, where he will remain for the winter. Mr. Pine was a prominent member of the Methodist choir and will be missed in musical circles. On Wednesday the government railway's managing board arrived here by special train and after looking over the property of the Kent Northern Railway, they left for Moncton in the afternoon. It is reported if the government takes over any of the branch lines, the Kent Northern is sure to be one of them.

After spending ten years in the County, George Amiraux came this week to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elias Amiraux. His brother James came last week from the same place where he has been for five years.

A large herd of cattle was brought here this week from Prince Edward Island for Richard O'Leary. Mr. O'Leary is establishing a big stock farm.

George E. Carl, of Rexton has invitations out for a dance in the public hall tonight in honor of his birthday.

Ernest Long, who is located in Dalhousie, is visiting relatives here.

C. Coleman, of Atlantic City, is in town for a few days.

Mrs. M. Waddell, who has been visiting friends in East Branch has returned to P. E. Island.

A. and R. Loggie have installed a new heating apparatus in their store. The work was done by Harry McGee.

Mrs. A. J. Cormier, Shediac, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. A. T. LeBlanc.

William Wryan, of Andover, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Ryan at Kouchibouguac.

Smallpox is still raging in St. Louis. It has reached Acadiaville where there are a number of cases.

W. E. Forbes shipped a carload of herring this week to Montreal.

HARVEY STATION.

Harvey Station, Nov. 18.—James Piery, of McAdam, is here today, buying potatoes. He is wanting a carload, and offers $1.50 per barrel, but as the amount for sale is small, there are not many moving yet.

Robert Dorcas, son of Andrew Dorcas, has returned from Minneapolis, on a visit.

Edward Swan is also home from Courtenay Bay, Vancouver Island. He owns a farm there and, though he has faith in that country, still has a special liking for the east.

Thomas Messer and son left today to work in the lumber woods near Forest City, Maine.

Miss Lottie McFarland, daughter of Thos. McFarland, South Tweedside, has recently been operated on for appendicitis in Portland hospital, Maine. At latest account she was doing well.

There has been a large quantity of hay and grain carried over the Oroquois Lake for the lumber camp in operation there. Mr. Morrison from Annapolis Co., N. S., is foreman of operations. Hon. Thos. Robinson's teams have to do considerable hay and grain for the new company.

Ed. Coburn, from McAdam, was here Tuesday on insurance business. Rev. Dr. Smith of Fredericton, and H. E. Girwood, of Prince William, addressed a largely attended meeting in the church here on Thursday evening. The forward movement in connection with missionary and other good work was clearly presented and duly emphasized.

On Monday there was a light flurry of snow accompanied with north wind. It was considered a good herring's day and as a result two moose and at least two deer were shot. They were large and in good condition.

Miss Louise Coffey, Acton, who has been visiting her parents for the past three months, returned to Montreal today.

Candidates For Ministry.

The examination of a number of candidates for the ministry was held at the rooms of the Church of England Institute during last week under the supervision of Archbishop Raymond. Present Session of Parliament Promises to be Interesting

SPEAKER MARCIL—"Just put on a bold front, Sir Wilfrid, and they won't notice that hole in your solid Quebec backing."

Ottawa, Nov. 19.—The third session of the Parliament which was elected in 1908 is under way. Third sessions are traditionally brisk and apart from tradition, there is much to promise that the session of 1910-11 will be particularly interesting.

To begin with the fundamental considerations, its length probably will be governed by the fact that the Coronation of His Majesty which will take place in June, will make prorogation necessary. The Imperial Conference will accompany the Coronation and this will render it necessary for the prime minister and one or two other members to absent themselves from Ottawa. It is true that the suspicion exists that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is by no means keen to attend the conference, but under the circumstances he hardly can evade that duty. It also is on the cards that the Coronation may be celebrated by the attendance of a considerable and representative delegation of the several parliaments of the Empire. Thus we arrive at the conclusion that the session should end about the end of May or the beginning of June.

Next is the fact that there have been few changes of personnel in Parliament. No senators have died and there is one new one, Senator Louis Lavergne, the man who made Drummond and Arthabaska famous, and additionally distinguished as being the uncle of his nephew, Armand. In the House of Commons the only change in membership is the appearance of Mr. Gillis to replace the aforesaid Uncle Louis.

Forecast of Legislation.

About the business? There is one thing which must be done. The bill to renew the bank charters is an inheritance from last session, and was left over. It absolutely must be passed this year as the charters are about to expire.

Next we hear of the following list of possible or projected measures:

A bill relating to terminal grain elevators.

A copyright bill.

A bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of explosives.

A bill to reorganize the printing bureau.

A bill to amend the Indian act.

A bill to amend the civil service act.

The elevator legislation represents what Sir Wilfrid Laurier thinks will do on one of the matters concerning which the grain growers conversed with him so weightily last summer. The copyright bill may be laid over, as it is a matter of concurrent legislation at Westminster, and Ottawa.

It is hardly possible to pass the act and leave it in abeyance until put into force by proclamation. The bill relating to the Indian act is to make it easier to procure surrenders of Indian reserves and in view of the business at the St. Peters reserve it may need to be looked at just a little carefully.

What else? Everything else—the fighting. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has followed in the past the pleasing custom of opening a constituency shortly before the convening of parliament. The theory was that the constituency would dutifully return a Liberal; so that his first piece of business on the opening of the house would be to introduce a new member, representing the latest victory. Thunders of applause from the part of all good ministers; the government would feel that it had opened the conversation of the session with a good repartee. This year something has gone wrong with the works, the constituency was duly opened and it was selected with unusual care. Then the backward, ignorant, illiterate, stupid, unintelligent, unprogressive lot of electors, three-quarters of whom hitherto have been Liberals, went wrong; and the premier's first occupation this session will be to see the introduction of the wrong man elected by the aforesaid perverse electors, whom the Liberals loved so till the close of the polls on November 3rd. Thus the opening will bring to all men's minds the interesting fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier seems to have lost his grip on Quebec.

Conservatives Organized.

Another fact which is to be noted is that the Conservative party will meet parliament with a new chief whip and a new organization. The party faithful for many years, and has not spared himself in doing so, has found that advancing years have not been a sufficient reason for him to retire. He has not, however, left the house, and it may be predicted with safety that steps will be taken to show him in some tangible way that he turns aside to rest with the gratitude and kindly regard of his party associates. He has been replaced by Mr. George H. Perciey and it is evident that the appointment was judicious. Mr. Perciey, who is a business man of large affairs, has the means and the leisure to take his usual appointments to the Liberals' numerous gifts of organization already have made themselves felt. It is apparent that the administration of the party, if such a term be permissible, will be admirably managed. The appointment of the assistant whips is daily expected. There will be a general change in the internal economy of the party; also there will be fewer whips than before, with a partial abandonment of the provincial division and there will be a rearrangement of duties. Dr. Roche, one of the former whips, will retain his post. Mr. Goodere is to represent the mountains. John Standfield of Colchester, N. S., will be included among the whips. C. A. Magarath will be permanent chairman of caucus and T. W. Crothers chairman of chairmen.

Manitoba Boundary.

A matter which is likely to be heard from is that of the Manitoba boundary. The westerners are not likely to allow the persistent injustice with which the province has been treated to lie quiet very long, and the cordial relations between Sir James Whitney, and Mr. Roblin will help to bring the subject to the front.

It may be predicted with confidence that the Opposition will maintain its scrutiny of the government's administrative record. The need for that scrutiny is more evident than ever. Mr. Charles Murphy spent one part of last session in helping to vote down resolutions offered by the Conservatives urging a proper investigation of the spending departments, and another part in secret investigations of his own into the printing bureau. In the recess the scandal of the stealing there burst forth into publicity, and Mr. Murphy has been forced to meet parliament with a declaration that a department under his care has been rotten with stealing, waste, mismanagement, and to offer the excuse that fifteen years ago the Conservatives were responsible for the said department.

There is every incentive for the Conservatives to press the probe in deeply. It is in a season like this that such investigations attract the attention of the electors. In periods when the machine of a powerful ministry grips the situation the average man feels the situation to be so hopeless that his attention to specific details is languid. But when the ministerial machine is going to pieces, each fresh proof that the cabinet has lost control of its spending departments rouses his interest, and his reprobativeness. Today the situation is that Laurier has lost his hold on Quebec, and that scandals are accumulating. It may be surmised that early in the session the agile Mr. Pugsley may be given an opportunity of explaining that remarkable vindication at St. John which he firmly and bravely surrendered to the odious Mr. Mayes ten thousand dollars to which he had just been voting the said Mayes had no manner of right at all.

On the whole it should be a very fairly interesting session.

It is understood that Samuel A. Shanks, of 28 Murray street has been recommended for appointment to the position of caretaker of the Suspension bridge. Mr. Shanks is an experienced of the longshoremen's association and a prominent worker for the local government in Lansdowne ward.

Property Transfer.

A property deal of much interest is reported in the acquisition by R. G. Halsey of the land, corner of King and Canterbury streets, on which is located the premises of the late R. G. Halsey. The corner is a firm having a long lease of the property, and it is presumed their tenancy will not be disturbed. The corner is a historic one, it was the home of Benedict Arnold when he resided in St. John, and in later years was occupied by McKenzie, the old tailor whose murder on the Blue River road for non-payment of a debt, was one of the historic crimes of St. John. In later years, another famous tailor house, Messrs. Garrett & Skilken, was located there. The property came into the possession of George Bragg, a well known resident, who owned a large building which was used as a police court, a public hall and for other purposes. From Mr. Bragg the property passed to Mrs. Merritt, wife of J. P. Merritt, and has now come into the possession of R. G. Halsey.

Strong Russian Melodrama at Nickel

Ever since Jules Verne wrote that wonderful drama "Michael Strogoff" there has been a keen demand for more of this kind of fiction, based upon incidents and stories in Russian political circles. Today at the Nickel the Biograph Stock Co. will produce one of the most elaborate of these plays entitled "The War of the Gods" during which the despotism and intrigue of the Czar's government in a forcible and elaborate manner. There will be an Edison neck melodrama under the homely caption "A Jar of Cranberry Sauce," and a funny motion picture story "Almost a Hero." The travel film for the two days will be A Day in the Flowery Kingdom (China). Miss Foley and Mr. Mayson will both have new numbers, and the orchestra a whole budget of American novelties. During the week the Nickel will inaugurate a new and improved all-features film service. Read the advertisement regarding the "Tri-Let" contest.

The many friends of Dr. J. A. Draper will learn with sincere regret that he is seriously ill at his home Mecklenburg street. Last evening his condition was regarded as critical.

Miss Montgomery Here.

Miss L. M. Montgomery, the Prince Edward Island writer, was in the city Saturday as the guest of her uncle, Rev. L. G. MacNeil, Duke street. She arrived on Friday from Boston and left again for her home in Cavendish, P. E. I. While here she said that her visit to Boston was for the purpose of arranging with her publishers for her new book, which is to come out next summer. The scenes in her latest work are, like the others, laid in Prince Edward Island, but it introduces a set of characters entirely different from those whom her readers have grown so fond of in Anne of Green Gables and succeeding books. Speaking of her future plans, Miss Montgomery said that she felt that she was entitled to a rest before starting on another story. In the meantime she would put in the time quietly at Cavendish.

Lorneville S. of T.

On Saturday evening a largely attended public temperance meeting was held at Lorneville. The chair was occupied by the W. P. of the local division and the meeting was addressed by G. W. P. Henikar and the grand scribe, Rev. W. R. Robinson. After the meeting closed with the National Anthem the division at Lorneville opened and after routine business was transacted, a very interesting programme was carried out, it being the occasion of a fraternal visit by a large number of Loyalist Division S. of T. members from the city. Messrs. Carson, Hamilton, Daly, Grant, Thomas, and Jack, with the Misses Nichols, Carson, Daly and Hamilton taking part. Before the visitors retired a committee of ladies of Lorneville entertained them, providing refreshments.

YALE WINS A MORAL VICTORY

CAPT. DALY, OF YALE.

Blue Weaker Team, but Held Crimson to No Score--Costly Fumbles Cost Harvard Victory.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 19.—A drawn and scoreless battle was fought out on Yale field this afternoon between Harvard and Yale. To the adherents of the blue it was a moral victory for their team had proved too strong for the powerful crimson team which had come here confident of victory.

Harvard was always the aggressor, and Yale made few consistent gains. The punting was disappointing as a whole, although in the first period it gave promise of being a feature. From the spectators' point of view, the features of the game were the variety of plays used and the fact that the ball could always be seen. The forward pass was used by Harvard five times, of which three tries were failures and of the other two only one made a gain and that simply eight yards.

Yale did not use the play. The game was played in the shortest time of a championship contest on the field, lasting less than one hour and three-quarters. The scene, which had as its setting a patch of green turf with banks of humanity four sides, scintillated with colors. The singing was effective and one of the striking color effects was when the Harvard cheering section in the west stand outlined a great H in red and white pennants, waving them to the singing of a college air.

ACADIA AND MT. A PLAY OFF

Game to Decide Intercollegiate Championship to be Played in Truro on Wednesday—Acadia Practicing.

Wolfville, Nov. 18.—Because the Mount Allison-Acadia football match resulted in a draw, a playoff will take place next Wednesday afternoon on neutral ground. It is likely the game will be played in Truro.

Wherever the playoff for the intercollegiate championship takes place, it will be a game worth watching.

The intercollegiate football series between the U. N. B., Mount Allison and Acadia was started in 1892. Both aggregations are greatly dissatisfied with Wednesday's game. Acadia because Mount Allison's score was the biggest kind of fluke; the New Brunswickers because they say that Acadia's free kick was rather a severe penalty for the offence committed. Mount Allison's touchdown was perfectly honest as far as they were concerned; they were not supposed to keep the spectators from behind Acadia's goal; the carelessness of the garner and blue in neglecting to keep the spectators in their proper places was responsible for the New Brunswickers' score.

Those who witness the game next Wednesday in Truro, will receive full value for their money; it's going to be a battle royal from start to finish. If it chances that the score is even when time is up, which is very likely to be the case, the teams will struggle until the championship is won.

Both teams were away of color in the Wolfville game, and both fifteen are capable of putting up a much better exhibition. The aggregations were so evenly matched on Wednesday that long runs, trick plays and combination work were out of the question.

Captain Robinson of the Acadia squad, had his team out practicing yesterday against the strongest aggregation that Captain "Bob" McKean, of Horton Collegiate Academy could produce. "Bob" knows the weak points of his team now, and is determined that there will be nothing weak about his lineup when they face Mount Allison Wednesday.

Charlottetown, Nov. 19.—The football season closed today with the announcement that the Abegweit football team, which had tied with St. Dunstan's college team for the championship in the league series has carried off the trophy and the championship of P. E. Island by defeating the invincible red and white aggregation by a score of 6 to 3.

Today's game was the hottest played of the season, the Saints being bound to win from the start, and only the stiffest playing captured the trophy. At half time the game stood St. Dunstan's college 3, Abegweits 0. In the second half the Abegweits rushed matters and won six points. During the game the Saints roughed it at times. Julian Keoghlan, St. Dunstan's college, was injured by a blow on the head, but is improving, although suffering a temporary loss of memory.

M'AVITYS WIN ALL FOUR AT BLACK'S

T. McAvity's team captured all four points in the Commercial league series on Black's alley, Saturday night. The scores were: T. McAvity & Sons. Forsyth ... 76 81 88 245—81 2 3 O'Brien ... 80 88 105 270—90 0 Howard ... 81 86 75 232—84 4 Harrison ... 81 73 83 233—84 1 3 Fothery ... 88 93 76 257—85 2 3

GOBB AHEAD OF LAJOIE

Tyrus Had One Point to the Good in Batting Average—Jackson First in Twenty Games.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Jackson of Cleveland might have been a disputant with both Lajoie and Cobb for the prize automobile for hitting in the American baseball league during 1910, but for the limited number of games in which he appeared. In the official list of batting averages, made public today, he heads the list with a percentage of .387. He appeared in only twenty games, however, and was not eligible for the prize. Cobb is second with a percentage of .387, and Lajoie third with .384. Philadelphia heads the clubs in batting with .266, Chicago being last with .212. Lajoie played in the greatest number of games of any particular year in any year, his record being 91 times at bat in 159 games.

E. STERLING BEAT OUT A HANDICAP

The handicap road race of the Y. M. C. A. Harriers on Saturday afternoon, proved fast and exciting, although owing to various causes the entry list was small.

Sterling proved too strong for his opponents, finishing the four and one-half mile course in the fast time of 25.10 and two minutes and ten seconds ahead of horseman, who lost considerable time by essaying to climb the long hill on Dorchester St. Pendleton finished a good third, but lost his hand up to Wetmore, who kept on his legs for nearly the whole distance, losing only five seconds on Pendleton's spur at the finish.

This will probably close the season for our outdoor racing by the Harriers, but it is the intention of the club to take up these races as soon as the ice goes off the ground in the spring.

T.A.A.C. OUT OF RUNNING FOR CHAMP.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 19.—Out-lucked and out-played, the T. A. A. C. fourteen, O. R. F. U. senior champions, went down to defeat at Rosedale this afternoon by 22 to 3 in the semi-final game for the Dominion championship.

Varsity had the game well in hand all the way and the crimson were never dangerous.

CONTEST FOR PRESIDENCY OF THE A.A.U.

New York, Nov. 20.—At the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union, which will begin tomorrow at the Hotel Astor, there promises to be a strong fight made in the selection of a president. Last year when J. E. Sullivan retired after a three year term, there were two candidates in the field, Everett C. Brown of the Central Association of Chicago, and Henry G. Pennington of the South Atlantic Association of Baltimore. In the interest of harmony Mr. Brown withdrew and Mr. Brown was elected. It was said by delegates today that it was understood President Brown would only serve one term and Mr. Pennington would be elected to succeed him. It now turns out that President Brown's friends are pushing him for a second term, and the Baltimore delegates and those from other southern states are canvassing other delegates in an effort to get votes for Pennington. The union expects to get through with its work tomorrow night.

PAGE TO FORM NEW CANADIAN BALL LEAGUE

(Montreal Star) The Montreal City Baseball League, which proved such a success financially and otherwise, this past season, will, in all probability, figure in the proposed Canadian Baseball League promoted by their president Joe Page, for which a meeting to organize has been called for November 20, at 2 p. m., at A. G. Spalding & Son, 443 St. James street.

Now that the City League have DeLorimier Rink grounds for next season on which they will likely play every Saturday and Sunday, a schedule will be so arranged that four of the teams will play alternate weeks in Montreal, while the other four will visit four towns in the proposed league, thus giving to the baseball enthusiasts of these towns not only a baseball league to play in, but eight different clubs to meet twice or more in the season, and at the same time allowing them games in their town every week, without the necessity for travelling in order to play return games, a state of things that has long been wanted. Already Farham, Granby, Three Rivers, Sorel, St. Johns, St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, Ottawa and Hull, and other cities have been either seen or mentioned in connection with the league, and no doubt after the meeting, Canadian baseball fans will, in all likelihood, have plenty of chances to see some clean, fast and classy baseball matches throughout Quebec Province next season.

M'GRAW SIGNS FOR 5 YEARS WITH GIANTS

New York, Nov. 16.—John J. McGraw, who has been manager of the New York nationals since July 19, 1902, yesterday signed a five year contract with John T. Brush, president of the club to continue as the commander of the Giants.

In the eight seasons that McGraw has been manager of the local team it has finished first twice, second four times, third once and fourth once. This is the first time McGraw ever has been signed by the local club for a term longer than two years.

COLLINS TELLS HOW TO STEAL

Base stealers, beware of Ed Walsh! This bit of advice, if offered for the old-timers of the American league, is certain to fall on deaf ears, writes Eddie Collins, in the Chicago Record-Herald. But the youngsters making their first appearance against the White Sox star can well afford to take a tip. I have made a close study of the pitchers and catchers of all the clubs in our circuit, and to my way of thinking Walsh is the king of them all when it comes to freezing an opponent to first base.

To many baseball fans have the idea that the catcher is the main spring of the battery—the players supposed to nip off all aspiring stealers. This is true only in part. Remember when Nick Altrock was in his prime? How many American league speed merchants stole in games with Nick on the slab? Not many, if my memory serves me right. Altrock had a baffling delivery that kept the runners almost glued to the bag. With Walsh it is a case of perfect near-balk, and this motion keeps the opposing players always within a few feet of the sack.

Walsh Most Feared. Now then Walsh gets into trouble by overstepping the bounds with this movement. A balk is the punishment, but it's seldom you hear of the big fellow committing this offense. In all my experiences I have found the White Sox pitcher the best man at this style of work. With Frank Smith it's just the opposite. Smith has a delivery that carries him well toward the batter while winding up, and once this motion is under way it's a simple matter for the runner to jump to a comfortable lead.

After taking this lead, if alone on the path, I seldom watch the ball. Instead, I keep both eyes on the man at second, who most likely will take the throw to nip the stealer. This study exercised almost in the twinkling of an eye, and coupled with the hook slide, in most cases enables the runner to reach second in safety.

In base stealing, as in any other line of work, the player who makes up his mind to succeed in nine cases out of ten has his wish gratified. Make up your mind to get there, regardless of results and go through with the determination. That has been my experience.

The hardest knocks always come at the start of the season, before the body has become toughened from frequent slides, but these "raspberries" wear off in a short time. It's a severe test of one's strength, but I have never felt any ill effects from any steals.

Luck enters largely into the success of base stealing. Some weeks I pick off at least one bag dally. Then other weeks I find it a physical impossibility to risk even a single base. The base stealer necessarily needs to be a ten-second sprinter. While at Columbia in my college baseball days, I never travelled the country under eleven seconds. Harry Davis of our club is admittedly a slow man on his feet, yet he has stolen several bases by taking a dangerous lead and watching the pitcher. "Bonnie" Bush, of the Detroit club, is a very fast man who has perfected the hook slide, which bewilders the best of second basemen.

Tyrus Cobb who topped the list of stealers last season, is the hardest base runner in the game to nab at second. He has wonderful speed, and is singularly blessed in the co-ordination of mind and muscle. This combination will carry any athletic victory, but I propose to give Tyrus a merry chase for the American league base-stealing laurels next season.

When opponents attempt to steal on our pitchers, and it's my duty to cover second for the throw, I usually straddle the bag, to make the runner come straight in. In this way I take some chances of being spiked, but the danger is greatly minimized if the second sacker assumes the right position, and this knowledge comes with experience. You rarely hear of Bobby Wallace being spiked. The St. Louis veteran has tagged them all in his time, and I doubt if he has many scars to show as the result of collisions with stealers.

Take the case of some of our great catchers—men who are noted for their pegging abilities. With these artists backing up a crafty pitcher, equally versed in the art of bluffing a would-be stealer, we seldom hear of many thefts. Both leagues are rich in back-stops of this class.

Many stealers taking advantage of the weakness of an opposing pitcher, have travelled midway to second or farther, only to find the second baseman or shortstop waiting there with the ball after spearing a perfect throw from the catcher. Archer's method of pegging while in a squatting position makes the club catcher a formidable opponent for stealers. From this attitude Archer is enabled to throw without wasting a second's time.

The greatest danger in stealing is the finish. Many players have wrecked their whole careers by sliding wrong and breaking a leg or an ankle. Still the spikes, always at fault, must remain, for without these "razors" the players would have a hard time getting up speed.

ONE FALL FOR ANDERSON.

Moncton, Nov. 20.—There was a big crowd at the Grand Theatre last night to see the wrestling match between Sam Anderson of Boston who claims to be the middleweight champion of the world, and Sandy McLeod, Scotch champion. Anderson got the first and only fall in 51 minutes 22 seconds. They wrestled 30 minutes longer without getting the advantage when as it was midnight Chief of Police Rideout stopped the match.

AROUND THE CITY

Reported by Police. Enis Hartley and Percy Atchison are reported by the police for working in the city without a license.

Seaman Attend. Last night there were a large number of the steamer Virginian's crew and others at the Seamen's Institute, and a sermon was preached by Venerable Archdeacon Raymond.

Seized With Fit. Saturday night about 9:30 o'clock Stanley Belyea fell in a fit on Elm street, and was carried into Thos. Durrick's drugstore. He was afterwards assisted to his home.

Furness Liner At Halifax. The Furness Line steamship Kanawha, Captain Kellman, arrived at Halifax yesterday from London. She will come to this port with a large general cargo.

Band Anniversary. Tonight in the St. Mary's church school room the St. Mary's band and friends will celebrate the seventh anniversary of the band. Refreshments will be served and there will be a musical programme.

Young Girl Arrested. Saturday night about 9:30 o'clock Policeman McCollum arrested Rose Murphy, aged 17, charged with loitering with lying and lurking in an alley off Brussels street and not being able to give a satisfactory account of herself.

A Narrow Escape. Saturday afternoon Charles Nye was arrested on Charlotte street on the charge of drunkenness and begging money on Union street. The man was very nearly being seriously injured before he was arrested. He caught hold of the shafts of a passing team and was dragged for some distance along the street.

Found By Police. A book found on Main street and a shop book found on Brussels street were handed to the police on Saturday, and await the owners at the Central Police Station. A lady's satchel containing a purse and some papers was found in the country market on Saturday by Albert Hatfield, and handed to the police. A gentleman's kid glove was found by the police on King street Saturday.

St. Mary's Band at Church. The St. Mary's Brass Band last evening attended the church in a body, it being their seventh anniversary. The church was crowded to the doors by a large congregation and the band under the leadership of Charles H. Williams, occupied the front seats. During the service they rendered a number of sacred selections. Venerable Archdeacon Raymond preached an able sermon.

Gospel Temperance Meeting. A Gospel temperance meeting, which was largely attended, was held last evening in the Sons of Temperance hall, West End, under the auspices of Granite Rock Division, I. O. T. James Campbell occupied the chair, and a very stirring temperance address was delivered by the Rev. Jacob Heaney, pastor of the (Carleton Methodist church. A number of gospel temperance hymns were sung.

Heavy Ferry Traffic. The effect of the opening of the winter port season was apparent to a slight extent yesterday in the increased ferry traffic. Although the travel was not so heavy as it will be later in the season, yet it was sufficiently large to furnish an idea of the interest the people of the city take in the winterport. During the afternoon it is estimated that 2000 people visited Sand Point where the big Allan liner Virginian was lying at her berth.

Decide Against Moving Pictures. There was a large attendance in the St. Peter's Y. M. A. rooms yesterday afternoon, when there was a most interesting debate. The subject was, "Resolved, that moving pictures be prohibited." James G. Burke led for the affirmative and was assisted by James Martin and A. P. Delaney. For the negative Joseph Gallagher led, and was assisted by George McCuskey and Frank Walsh. Maurice D. Coll was the judge, and he decided that the affirmative won. It was the first debate of the season, and one will be held each month.

Col. Blaine's Birthday. Lt. Col. Arthur Blaine is receiving congratulations. Yesterday the youthful colonel reached the age of 81 years. Col. Blaine says that while he is not as young as he was a quarter of a century ago, yet he does not feel old. The colonel does nine hours work every day and has rarely missed a day through illness since he passed the half-century mark. Col. Blaine was born in the north of England and at the age of 15 years came to this city where he has since resided. Shortly after his arrival in St. John he entered the employ of J. and A. McMillan, printers and book binders where he is still employed.

KING'S DAUGHTERS RECEIVE REPORTS

Delegates to Dominion Convention Give Interesting Account of Experiences—Supplies for Campbellton.

On Saturday evening at the Guild, the King's Daughters held their quarterly meeting. At the close of the devotional exercises a new member was received into the order. The circles brought reports of work after which the reports were given from the Dominion Triennial Convention held in October, at Ottawa. They occupied about an hour, and dealt quite fully with many phases of work. Views of Ottawa were shown fresh, also a large photograph of the convention, taken in front of the Ottawa King's Daughters Guild. This photograph showed delegates representing every province in the Dominion. Seated among them was the International President of the Order, Miss Kate Bond, whose presence at the convention was very inspiring and helpful.

The November business meeting had carried the motion to assist the Campbellton fire sufferers this fall, and it was decided to appeal to its members and ask them to purchase good garments. Both outer apparel and underwear are desired, also any other donations for home comfort. Both circle members and individual members are asked to send these articles early this week. The members of Lend-a-Hand Circle spoke of the moving picture exhibition they were giving in the Opera House on December 5 and 6. This is to aid special local charity. The energy with which they have entered upon this work was instanced by the production of a large number of tickets which were distributed for sale.

W. C. T. U. Entertain Sailors. A meeting under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. was held at the Seamen's Institute on Saturday evening. R. Morton Smith presiding. Songs were rendered by Mr. Durk of the Dr. Torrey mission and Mr. Griffiths. Rev. W. F. Gatz of Queen Square Methodist church addressed the men on the subjects of temperance and self control and the ladies headed by Miss Bullock served light refreshments at the close of a successful meeting.

St. John Business College. The number of men students entering during the last three months far exceeds that of any corresponding period in the forty-three years' history of the college, and has necessitated the engaging of three additional teachers. Evening classes this evening from 7:30 to 9:30.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. C. D. Trueman. A well known resident of the city and a life long member of Centenary church, died yesterday afternoon in the person of Mrs. C. D. Trueman. She was born in New Brunswick. Mrs. Trueman was 62 years of age, and had been ill only for a week. On Monday last she caught cold and pneumonia developed which caused her death. She was a daughter of the late James Jordan of Woodstock, and is survived by her husband, two sons, and one daughter. Her sons are Norman, of this city, and Stanley of Brooklyn, while her daughter is Mrs. Chas. A. Hallett of Montreal, who is Miss Jennie Trueman was well known in musical circles in this city. Mrs. H. G. Jordan of Brooklyn, is a sister of the deceased. The deceased lady was a consistent member of the Centenary church, and had many friends who will learn of her death with sincere regret. The funeral will take place on Wednesday at 2:30 p. m.

Charles Kesler. The death of Charles Kesler, who has been confined to his bed at the Salvation Army Metropole for some time, occurred Saturday night. The deceased had been suffering from consumption for the past two years, and had been looked after by the Salvation Army people. While able to get around he was provided with light work, but for some months past had been confined to his bed in a room isolated from the lodging house, and cared for by the Army officials. An effort was made to have him placed in the hospital, but this institution has no accommodation for this class of patients, and there is no sanatorium in the province to which he might have been sent. Mr. Kesler was born in New York and had been a sailor before he was incapacitated by disease.
