PEPSIA CURE
A quiet looking young man was walking along the Strand the other day when he suddenly slipped on a piece of orange peel and fell into the gutter.
While he was in the act of rising, a swell, who was passing by (thinking to assume the bystander's role) said:
"Where did you fall last?"
"Where were you bred, was the unexpected reply."

Darkness before Dawn.
By the Author of "Madge Merri-son's Dream," etc.

Either read the somewhat ambiguous paragraph through, and handed the paper back to her comrator without a remark.
"Well," he said, "netled by her contemptuous silence, 'what do you think of that, eh? What is the man made of who could prefer mere pounds, shillings and pence to your lovely eyes and bewitching face, my sweet Basie!—taking her cold reluctant hand and pressing it to his lips."

Esther withdrew her hand sharply, and turning to him with frowning brows, said—
"Where is my uncle, Mr. Besant? Why has he not accompanied you?"
"At the present moment, my dear girl, he is sleeping off the effects of alcohol," replied Besant, with a short laugh. "But, even were he awake, he would not be far from enjoining visitor, for he always believes himself to be accompanied by a variety of undesirable companions. In short, Basie, he's in the early stages of delirium tremens, so you'll have to console yourself by trying to get on with the assiduous attentions of your humble servant."

"If he has taken to excessive drinking," said Esther coldly, "it has been your example then, for hitherto, although he certainly influences upon the nerves, at least he never indulged to excess."

"I assure you, my dear Basie, I personally have not the least desire that he should drink; on the contrary, I should infinitely prefer that he should not. He is far too conservative when he's in the cups; that is why I am staying at the Grange for a time, until he is well enough to be left alone. Well, Basie, now that your true knight has turned out to be nothing better than a fortune hunter, I think I may hope for a more favorable reception at your hands, may I not? You won't be so poor-spirited as to let him think you are wearing the willow, will you?"

"I don't believe a word of your tale," answered the girl, bursting into tears and hiding her face in both hands. "Go away, for Heaven's sake, and leave me alone! I cannot bear any more. John is the soul of honor. The remembrance of his honorable and noble eyes upholds me through all that you have made me suffer; fear, darkness, despair—all are endurable when I have his love. God! she exclaimed, stamping her foot with indignation.
"Leave me alone! I hate you!"

Besant stood watching her with furious jealousy in his heart. What would not he give to awaken in the girl a tithe of the love lavished by her upon his rival? He turned upon his heel and left her to darkness and her own sad thoughts.

Business connected with his farm called Besant away about eleven o'clock that night. The newly built ricks which had been stacked during the previous week were to be left for a period sufficiently long to enable them to settle down before they were thatched. That evening, one of his farm laborers came over to the Grange to acquaint Besant that the ricks were ominous, and were in hourly danger of catching fire.

"Have those blockheads laid the tar-paulins flat down upon the hay?" Besant said sharply. "They should have been at least four feet from the ricks. As it is, even if they don't catch fire, the hay will be as smoky as possible! There, get back as soon as you can, and if you're there before me give orders that all the stacks are to be left open to the air. I'll come on myself almost immediately."

The man departed, and Besant returned to Mr. Grimwade's quarters, where he found the latter hopelessly drunk and snoring astorously.

My long lost brother! I he cried.

Ask your doctor how many preparations of cod-liver oil there are.

He will answer, "Hundreds of them." Ask him which is the best. He will reply, "Scott's Emulsion."

Then see that this is the one you obtain. It contains the purest cod-liver oil, free from unpleasant odor and taste. You also get the hypophosphites and glycerine. All three are blended into one grand healing and nourishing remedy.

THE THREE GREAT VITAL FACTORS OF THE BODY OF OURS ARE THE HEART, THE NERVES AND THE BLOOD. It is because of the triple power possessed by Millburn's Heart and Nerve Pills of making weak, irregular beating hearts strong and steady, toning up run down, shattered, nervous systems and supplying those elements necessary to make strong, watery blood rich and red, that so many wonderful cures have been accorded to this remedy.

Here is the case of Mrs. R. J. Arnold, Woodstock, N.B., who says: "I was troubled for some time with nervous prostration and general weakness, feeling irritable, debilitated and sleepless nearly all the time. My entire system became run down. As soon as I began taking Millburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I realized that they had a calming, soothing influence upon the nerves. Every dose seemed to help the cure. They restored my sleep, strengthened my nerves and gave tone to my entire system. I think them wonderful."

"Confound him!" muttered Besant, threatening, getting angry, without effect. "I think I'll look the baizer door, for if he wakes up he'll get noisy that woman Martha may hear him, even though she's gone to bed." He glanced at his watch. It was a quarter past eleven. "I can be back in an hour and a quarter if all goes well."

Besant stole down the stairs, locked the heavy back door behind him, and left his house. On arriving at Redcliffe Farm, he found all the rickyard astir. The tar-paulins had been removed, but one of the largest ricks was already smoldering, and bright little tongues of fire leaped out from the smoking pile.

regard to the young lady myself? Mr. Grimwade will not hear of a match between his niece and you; but he has no objection to your offering her to me, I am concerned. I'm sorry that I cannot help you in this matter, but it is out of the question."

"Do I understand you that you are against of Miss Vane's whereabouts?" said Desmond, his eyes flashing.
"I am, but I decline to gratify your curiosity," answered Besant, coolly and with the other's forbearance. "You may rely upon her being taken every care of until she is well enough to return, which she will do, since she never mentions your name in her letters. She is a charming girl—a little rustic, perhaps, but I do not object to that myself; it's refreshing!"

The state divisions of the League of American Wheelmen will take a more active part in political affairs this fall than ever before. There are many laws still to be passed in the interests of wheelmen, and the plan to be followed is to work in behalf of all candidates who have shown their friendship for wheelmen or who will give assurance that their assistance may be relied upon and to endeavor to defeat those who are in opposition. As the league has been working in the legislatures for several years, it has quite a list of political friends and enemies, and this will be made use of during the fall campaign.

The state divisions of the League of American Wheelmen will take a more active part in political affairs this fall than ever before. There are many laws still to be passed in the interests of wheelmen, and the plan to be followed is to work in behalf of all candidates who have shown their friendship for wheelmen or who will give assurance that their assistance may be relied upon and to endeavor to defeat those who are in opposition. As the league has been working in the legislatures for several years, it has quite a list of political friends and enemies, and this will be made use of during the fall campaign.

The recent seven century ride of Miss Jane C. Yattman over Long Island roads in 81 hours and 5 minutes broke the record, and it will probably stay broken for some time. During her ride Miss Yattman carried 1,000 and 40 miles was accompanied by a large number of friends and a large number of friends.

THE WAR IN THE TRANSVAAL.

The map shows the situation of the Transvaal, or South African Republic, and Natal, the British possession, which the Boers entered the moment hostilities were begun.

CHARLESTOWN TUNNEL, ON THE NATAL FRONTIER.

The British officials expected that the Boers would enter Natal at Charlestown. Between Charlestown and Laingsnek is a tunnel 2,213 feet long, through which the railroad runs on its way across the Transvaal border to Johannesburg. The railroad used to run over Laingsnek instead of through the tunnel, and the British relaid the old line so that if the Boers blocked the tunnel there would still be a railroad running north toward Johannesburg and Pretoria. The old road passes the graves of General Sir George Colley and Colonel Deane.

PRESIDENT PAUL KRUGER.

THE INDEPENDENCE OBELISK.

Paul Kruger, though president of one of the world's smallest republics, has won great fame as one of the shrewdest diplomats living today. That he is also possessed of rare courage is shown by his defiance of Great Britain. He is a very devout man, and, like David, he goes forth to meet the British Goliath full of confidence that the god of battles will give him the victory. One of the most interesting monuments in the Transvaal is the Independence obelisk at Paardekraal. After the British rout at Majuba Hill in 1881 the convention which led to the treaty of peace took place at Paardekraal.

LORD SALISBURY, THE ENGLISH PREMIER.

Although the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, British colonial secretary, has been particularly conspicuous in England's quarrel with the South African Republic, the English premier, Lord Salisbury, is primarily responsible for Great Britain's aggressive stand. Lord Salisbury was born in 1830 and received his education at Eton and Christ Church college. As Lord Robert Cecil he entered parliament in 1883 and soon took rank as one of the ablest debaters. From 1874 to 1878 he was secretary for India under Disraeli. From 1878 to 1880 he was England's foreign secretary. When in 1885 Gladstone's ministry resigned, it was Lord Salisbury who was called upon to form a new ministry, and he is now premier for the third time.

PRESIDENT KRUGER AND HIS GUARD OF MOUNTED POLICE.

A BOER GENERAL INSPECTING HIS VOLUNTEERS IN THE TRANSVAAL.

These are the men British troops must face in their great war upon Oom Paul's republic. They are not showy, as they appear in the accompanying sketch, made by the Johannesburg artist of The Illustrated London News, but they are pluck personified, and they can shoot to kill. The Field Cornet's couriers have already ridden throughout the republic, and thousands of Boer sharpshooters are armed to the teeth.

A FAMILY OF BOER SHARPSHOOTERS AND PRESIDENT KRUGER.

"Gen Paul" Kruger, the shrewd president of the South African Republic, was born in the Transvaal 74 years ago and has been president since 1883. The Boer army is small. There are only about 20,000 men of military age, but every man and boy is a crack shot, as the British learned to their cost at Krugersdorp, Laingsnek and Majuba. The accompanying cut shows a typical Boer family group, every male member being a sharpshooter.

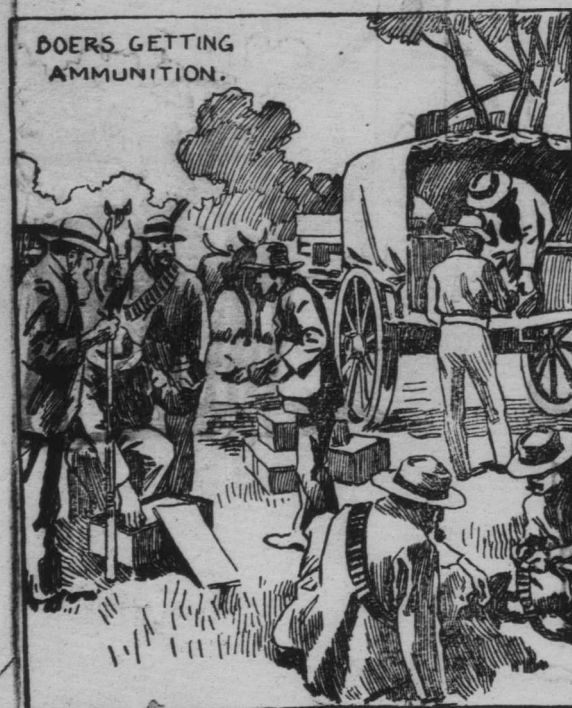

PRETORIA, THE BOER CAPITAL.

Pretoria and Johannesburg are the principal cities of the Transvaal. Pretoria, the capital, has a population of about 10,000 and is connected by rail with Lorenzo Marques, the Portuguese seaport on Delagoa bay. A railroad also runs from Pretoria to Johannesburg, the great mining city of the Transvaal, and connects with railroads traversing Cape Colony and Natal.

DURBAN, THE CHIEF PORT OF NATAL.

England is landing most of her troops at Durban, from which a railroad runs north to Pietermaritzburg, the capital of Natal; Ladysmith, Newcastle and Charlestown, the latter being near the Transvaal border.

BOERS GETTING AMMUNITION.

GEN JOUBERT

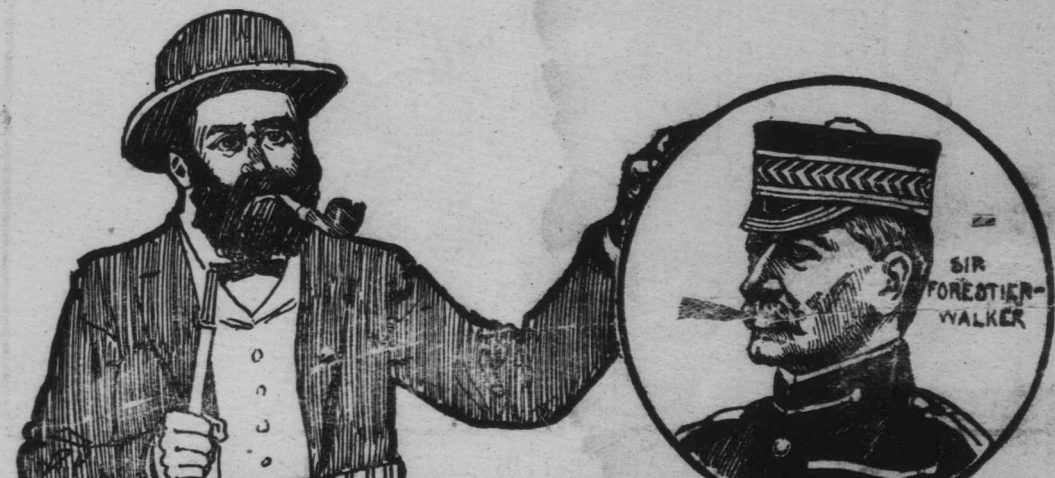

WAR PREPARATIONS OF THE BOERS AND GENERAL JOUBERT.

While England and the Transvaal were crossing diplomatic swords the sturdy burghers of the South African Republic were getting armed to the teeth. Many tons of ammunition and other war supplies reached them recently, and practically every man and boy capable of bearing arms is ready to fight at a moment's notice. General Joubert, who is a veteran of the Transvaal's two wars with England and vice president of the republic, is the leading military genius of the republic.

PRESIDENT STEYN AND THE ORANGE FREE STATE FLAG.

President Martinus Th. Steyn, or Steijn, of the Orange Free State, has already demonstrated that he is as plucky an individual as President Kruger of the South African Republic. He has taken the part of the Transvaal in its quarrel with England despite the fact that the Orange Free State, being nearer the English possessions than the Transvaal, must receive the first blow. President Steyn is a native of the Orange Free State and is about 42 years of age. He studied law in Holland and England and was chief justice of the republic before his elevation to the presidency in 1896. His republic has an area of 48,326 square miles, and the white population is about 80,000. The republic is bound by treaty to give assistance to the Transvaal in case of war.

A GROUP OF BOER RIFLEMEN READY FOR BUSINESS

These are some of the gentlemen with whom Great Britain is having difficulty in South Africa. They are Boer burghers. They are the best rifle shots in the world. They have guns in plenty and have a habit of carrying enough ammunition about with them to meet any emergency, as you will see by the picture. The man whose face is shown in the upper right hand corner is Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick Forester Walker, the new commander of the British forces in South Africa. He has seen service all over the dark continent. He has fought Zulus, Kaffirs and Mahdists, but he has never fought Boers.

MAP OF THE TRANSVAAL-NATAL BORDER.

Natal, the British possession, extends to the very border of the Transvaal and is threatened on the west by the Orange Free State. When hostilities were first looked for, the armies of the Transvaal and Orange Free State were concentrated on the borders near Natal. Charlestown is the most northerly British town in Natal. Between Charlestown and Laingsnek is a railroad tunnel 2,213 feet long. Charlestown was formerly the terminus of the railway, which now extends to Johannesburg. Near Charlestown are Laingsnek and Majuba Hill, scenes of former British reverses. Natal was settled by Boers in 1855, and in 1895 it became a British colony. The train from Charlestown into the Transvaal passes near the graves of General Sir George Colley and Colonel Deane, who fell during the British rout on Majuba Hill in 1851.
