CAMPBELLTON BOY TELLS EXPERIENCES

Was With Flight Pilot on Cruise and Vividly Writes of The Trip.—Other News

The following is a portion of a letter received from a Campbellton boy who is doing his bit at the front.
France, July 4th, 1916.
You have probably read about the last attack by Fritz at this part of the line as the papers gave quite a good account and some of the English dailies gave the Canadians a dandy write up.
We were back in rest when the fight started, but only stayed out two days and had to come in again as the Batts. then in were cut up pretty badly.
Fritz followed his usual method of attack, concentrating their artillery on the part they wanted to take. They did not expect to find any men left alive after the bombardment and came over expecting no opposition. There were not very many men left, but they put up an awful fight and Fritz had to fight hard for the ground taken. They gained their objective pretty well, but only held it for a few days and now we have taken back all the ground lost. The Canadians certainly kept up their good name made by the first contingent at this part of the line before, and the men in the front line sure deserve a lot of credit. The casualties were very heavy and have increased the number from C'ton quite a lot.
You will no doubt know that Austin Murray has been killed by the time this reaches you. It is really too bad and was quite a shock to me when I heard.
Was away on a cruise at an Aviation School last week and had a glorious time. We went up in a plane for about an hour and had a dandy flight.
Will try to give you some idea of what it was like.
The machine was a biplane called an FE2C. A two seater, the observer sitting in front and the pilot in rear. They give you a furled cap and goggles to put on and a heavy coat if necessary. After getting into the seat they strap you in so that it is not possible to fall out even if the plane turned upside down. The engine is then started and you start along the ground about sixty miles an hour or over and after getting a good start the plane shoots into the air.
The plane leaves the ground so nicely that it is quite hard to tell when it does and the earth seems to be floating away underneath. The planes can rise pretty quickly, getting up to 5000 feet in about twenty minutes. At that height the fields and ground below look like a checker board and you can see for miles and miles on every side. There is no feeling of dizziness or anything like that and you just seem to be floating along in space and although the plane has to go at 60 per or over you do not seem to be moving at all, but just floating. Some of the planes are connected up by phones, but ours was not so we had to talk on our fingers and the pilot pointed out anything of interest. He asked me if I wanted a dip and of course I said yes, but was almost sorry afterward that I did, as he tipped the nose straight at the ground and we went down at an awful speed. It made me feel awful queer under the belt, as though there was nothing left there but just a cavity. It certainly was a funny sensation and beats the sixteen inch sensation all hollow.
We then did a spiral up again and all at once we were in a kind of white haze and it struck me we had gone right up into the clouds. We dropped again and went over the firing line. The shells were breaking at some parts and looked like little puffs of smoke and we could see for miles along the line and into Fritz's country.
Fritz fired two shells at us but I did not hear them burst as there is an awful roar from the engine and rush of air, but the pilot showed me the black puff of smoke away to the rear.
We then beat it for home and made a good landing. I was all mixed up and did not know which way to go and could not hear anything for about half an hour. Altogether it was a great experience and I would not have missed it for anything.
The pilots have great control of their planes and have lots of nerve. They do some great work mostly with the artillery and quite often we see a scrap between two planes and it is quite interesting to watch.
We borrowed a gramophone from the Y. M. C. A. and are having some music in our dugout. It sure sounds fine and makes one almost forget there is a war on.
Saw Guy Lutz and Jim Thomas last week and they were both fine. They are in the C. A. M. C. and have done some splendid work. Also Maj. McKenzie and he felt pretty bad about Harry Ferguson and Frank Lockhart, although Frank is a prisoner and not killed as formerly reported. Saw

SCHOOL BOARD PLANS NEW SCHOOL

Will be Built on Town Site on Gerrard Street.—For Lower Grades

At a recent meeting of the School Board the matter of the erection of a new school or the enlargement of the present Grammar school was discussed, and it was thought best to provide for the erection of a new school building on the property belonging to the town on Gerrard St.
With this object in view the Town Council has authorized the deed of the said lot to the School Board.
The new school will be modern in all respects and will cost, it is estimated about $12,000.
In it will be provided classrooms for the lower grades.
As the town is growing rapidly in the west end it was felt advisable to place the school there, so the children could reach it in all seasons.

Chester D. and he gave me Vera's (this refers to Miss Dean, who is with Dr. Abbot's Medical Unit, Harvard College) address at the Base and will try to see her if I ever get my leave.
Was lucky enough to draw second on our list and the first man has been away and back again, but leave has been cancelled and suppose mine will come "Après la guerre", but you never can tell what's going to happen over here and it takes quite a lot to jar anyone who has been over here very long.

ANOTHER WRECK ON INTERCOLONIAL

Freight Train Meets Light Engine and Van Near Dalhousie Jct.

A head on collision, which did considerable damage to rolling stock, but fortunately did not cause any fatalities among the train crew, occurred at an early hour Friday morning, about a mile this side of Dalhousie Junction.
The trains in the collision were a north bound heavy freight and a south bound light engine and van.
It is stated that, through some mistake, the engineer of the north bound train was given a signal to pull out of Dalhousie Jct., which he did, leaving the conductor, with new orders in his hands, standing in the station. About a mile above Dalhousie they met the light engine. The main line was blocked for about six hours.
The north bound freight was in charge of Conductor Cormier and Engineer Baldwin, of Moncton. The south bound light engine and van were in charge of Conductor Horseman and Engineer Kerwin.
So far as can be learned the freight pulled into Dalhousie and stopped. Shortly afterwards the engineer got a signal to proceed, and did so, leaving the conductor standing in the station with orders which would have detained the train at Dalhousie to cross the light outfit from Campbellton. It afterwards transpired according to the report that the signal had not come as supposed from the conductor of the freight.
Both locomotives were badly damaged and a lot of cars were piled up on end, including a car of shell boxes, reported to be completely destroyed.
Driver Baldwin of Moncton was quite badly injured, but not seriously.

FRENCH REMOVE EM-BARGO ON OUR LOBSTERS

Interesting News for the Exporters of the Maritime Provinces. Will Mean Much

Halifax, July 22.—Official advice reached Halifax by cable that the embargo against Canadian lobsters entering France had been removed.
The lobster exporters of this Province are to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts in this matter and the decision has arrived too late to prove of any material advantage to the entire trade for this season the benefit that accrues in having the articles established as a food stuff instead of as a luxury is important.
Big preparations can now be made with some confidence for another season's operations. Now that France has apparently acknowledged the food value of lobsters it is not likely that the British Government will class it as a luxury.
During the last month the prices of canned lobsters has been gradually but surely declining, but this report will probably prevent any further decline in prices.
From inquiries among the trade we learn that an advance in prices is not expected. The chief consuming season in France is now nearly over, and the orders to supply French requirements during the fall and winter will not likely be heavy.
Already most of the pack has been shipped to the Liverpool and London markets and it is from these places that the bulk of the French orders at the present time will likely be filled.

FRANK VENIOT GETS THREE YEARS

Found Guilty of Stealing Fowl and Coat and is Sent to Dorchester

The trial of Frank Veniot, accused of stealing a number of fowl and a coat from the premises of George Dunn, took place last week and he was found guilty and sentenced to three years at Dorchester. His Honor Judge McLatchy presided and E. R. Richardson acted for the prosecution.
Judge McLatchy in his address to the grand jury pointed out that this session of the county court marked a new departure in the legal annals of Restigouche. For the first time twelve instead of twenty four grand jurors had been summoned from the body of the county.

POZIERES GERMAN'S STRONGEST POSITION

Erzingan Has Fallen to Russians. —Turks Fleeing.—Romania With Allies

(Special to Graphic)
London, July 27.—The British capture the strongest positions held by the Germans in the taking of Pozieres. General Haig's army demonstrates its superiority over Germans.
German divisional orders mentions three strongholds and Pozieres is last of them taken by British.
Turks flee from Erzingan and Russians in possession. Erzingan is strongest Turkish position in Central Armenia.
Russians continue their successful drive. River Storka crossed and enemy being pursued.
Italian front attracts little attention, but the Italians recently have been making good progress in Dolomite region.
Both Berlin and Vienna seem to be convinced that Roumania will enter the field with the Allies and in consequence anxiety exists in German capital.
London, July 26.—After three days of desperate hand-to-hand fighting, grubbing in mud and crumbling masonry, the Anzac soldiers of Great Britain's armies have finally taken the whole of the village of Pozieres.
"The whole of Pozieres is now in our hands," General Sir Douglas Haig reported briefly today.
"Westward the territorials have further advanced, capturing two strong trenches and a number of prisoners, including five officers. Elsewhere there is no change."
The war has seen no more desperate fighting than that which has resulted in the ejection of the Teutons from this French village. An important point on the main highway toward Baupenne, it was the objective of the first great thrust of the British offensive.
Late last week Australian and New Zealand soldiers gained a foothold in the village itself. A series of furious German counter attacks failed to dislodge them.
Clinging desperately to make-shift barriers to the southeast of the town—barriers for the most part made of the crumbling ruins of the town's houses—the British forces stubbornly repulsed their assailants and steadily pushed them back, almost brick by brick and inch by inch.
The rattle of machine guns fire was incessant, save when forces on both sides swarmed out of their barriers and with clubbed rifles and bayonets swayed back and forth in hand-to-hand grips.
Whole German Force Endangered
Threatened for weeks, the Germans had time to make replacements in houses for their machine guns, to buttress up their positions with concrete and steel. They turned a windmill to the northwest of the town into a veritable fortress, from which machine guns rattled death. Nearby was a cemetery, and among the graves of the dead were placed the terrible modern death-dealing implements of war. The cemetery is now a shambles above the earth.
Capture of the whole of Pozieres endangers the German forces fighting in the salient from Thiepval to Pozieres. It was noted here to-day that the Territorials, having ejected the Teutons from the village, immediately began a westward encircling movement, menacing the enemy contained in this loop of the line.
A retirement from this curve is expected. A further British enveloping movement eastward from Thiepval was anticipated today to increase the pressure on this "kink" in the line, forcing the Germans to straighten it out by a retreat.

ANOTHER DROWNING AT CAMPBELLTON

Ernest Aspriot of Paspebiac Fell Off Lumber Scow at Government Wharf

Another drowning accident occurred here Friday night last, when Ernest Aspriot of Paspebiac lost his life.
He with a number of other men were employed loading deals from scows at the government wharf Friday night, when in some way he fell over the end of a scow. Those working with him heard no outcry and saw no signs of him.
The body was recovered yesterday and Coroner A. Martin, M. D., held an inquest when a verdict of accidental drowning was returned.
The body was forwarded to the unfortunate young man's home this morning.

Most Boston stories are built up around the conventional tradition of the inviolate classicism of our American Athens. But, like most traditions, this tradition of Boston culture has little to do with the actual facts of contemporary life. Modern Boston is fairly well caricatured in a rendering of the twenty-third Psalm, which a young Bostonian recently offered her public school teacher. She followed the familiar text until she reached the last verse, when she concluded, with pious confidence:

"Surely, good Mrs. Murphy shall follow me all the days of my life!"

Judge—This man was a stranger to you! Then why did you pick a fight with him? Kelly—All my friends are away on their vacations!

A HURRICANE SWEPT SHIPPEGAN Hotel, and Old Building Destroyed and Other Damage

Shippegan, N. B., July 22.—(Special)—A storm of unusual severity struck this village about 2.30 a week ago on Thursday afternoon. The wind which had assumed the proportions of a hurricane, was accompanied by a real cloud-burst, which, with hail, thunder and lightning, was anything but pleasant to behold. Never before, in the memory of the oldest inhabitants, had such a storm been witnessed here. Much damage was done in the village and vicinity. A large hotel in course of construction here belonging to Mr. J. A. Robichaud, was completely demolished. Mr. Robichaud estimates his loss at $10,000.00. An old mill situated back of the Robichaud Hotel was blown down, and one side of the roof carried some distance. Many windows were broken. Fish houses and freezers on the wharf suffered some damage. Trees were uprooted, wagons overturned. Pieces of debris were hurled by the force of the wind, some being sent clean into the houses through the windows. A large boat was lifted up from the shore and carried up some distance. Very little damage was done to the fishing craft. Across the river from here, a large barn was destroyed and several other buildings more or less damaged.

Mr. Newton Hamilton, Campbellton, N. B.,

Dear Sir:—It is with the greatest regret that I have to write you particulars of the death of Private J. Hamilton, killed in action on June 16th, official notice of which you have no doubt already received.

There is little I can say to you that can mitigate your loss, yet it will be a consolation to know that he died bravely doing his duty in a manner reflecting great credit on himself, his family and his country.

He was instantly killed by shell fire while with his Company holding the line, and is greatly missed by officers and men, as all of our best are missed. He was given a soldiers' burial close to where he fell.

Please accept my sincere sympathy for your loss in his sacrifice for Canada, and believe me, Sir, Your obedient servant,

A. O. DAWSON, Major, O. C. "D" Coy.

A tight-fisted old man, feeling very sick, asked a friend to recommend a physician. The friend named a certain specialist.

"Is he very expensive?" asked the sick man.

"Well, not so very. He'll charge you $4 for the first visit, and $2 for each one after that."

The old fellow soon afterward walked into the office of the physician named by his friend, and upon being admitted to the consulting room planked down $2, remarking:

"Well, doctor, here I am again."

The physician calmly picked up the money and put it in a drawer, which he locked securely. The sick man looked on expectantly, awaiting the next move.

"Well, I'm ready to be examined," he said at length.

"I don't think it's necessary," replied the shrewd specialist. "There's no need to do it again. Keep right on taking the same medicine. Good day, sir."

"For my part, I don't see any more harm in a game of cards than in a game of chess."

"But I consider the associations."

"Why, at chess you play with two blackops, while at cards, of course, you play with four knaves."

A NORTH-SEA NIGHT

(From Answers)

"Hands to stations for night defence."

The words, clear and sharp, echo through the ship. There is the sound of bare feet moving swiftly across the wooden decks, the sudden secondary glimmer of night-sights being tested at the guns, the hasty rigging of miles of snake-like, flexible metallic tubing for use as voice-piping, and then—silence.

At the guns and searchlights groups of men stand and chat in low tones; on the bridges, aloft in the control-tops, and on every high point in the ship, lookouts, armed with binoculars, peer into the darkness, guarding the great battleship from attack by surprise at the hands of the wolves of the sea—the torpedo craft.

There is no smoking, no shouting of orders, not a glimmer light showing anywhere; for on a dark night even a match—the momentary glare of a cigarette-end—can be seen miles away, and will act as a guide to any prowling destroyer who may be searching for prey.

In the rear of each group of guns stands a man with a telephone head-piece strapped in place. He is in communication with the control positions, where the various officers who regulate the firing of guns during action have their several stations.

Suddenly down the voice-pipe comes the first order of the night: "Groups, stand by!"

The man repeats the words, and the sailors leap to their positions at the guns, wrenching the breeches open, standing with shells and cartridges ready to enter on the instant; while the searchlight operators grip the switches and stand ready to send the dazzling arms of light out into the darkness to show up any foe that may be lurking there, so that the guns may have a fair target to aim at—and smash.

"Range, eight thousand, five right!" The order is passed to the sight-setters, each of whom also wears a telephone-headpiece. There is the faintest glimmer of infinitesimal candle-power electric torches as the sight-dials are set to the ranges stipulated, and the shells thud home into the guns, the cartridges follow, and the breeches click in a business-like manner. The guns are ready. The next order is for the angle of fire.

"Train on Green one two oh!" says that far-off voice at the other end of the pipe. "ort guns train on Red six oh!"

The gun-muzzles flicker round until they bear on the named angle; the great, blank glass faces of the searchlights follow them.

For perhaps five minutes there is a deep tenseness over the ship; fingers itch to press triggers and to slam over switches; eyes ache as they strain through the telescopic sights, searching vainly in the darkness for the glimmer of shadow upon the black background of the night sky that shall tell of something moving.

"Anything that moves at night in war-time shall be fired on first; questions will be asked afterwards."

It is a golden rule of the sea service; whilst a battleship was making sure that the moving boat was not of her own navy that boat could dash off four of her deadly torpedoes, and the battleship might get her answer in the wrong way.

And then down the voice-pipe come the words which relieve, once more the tension—which tell that this is only a "dummy run," a necessary testing of the means of communication between tops and guns.

"Range for the night, one thousand! Train on fighting bearing!"

The breech-blocks snick open, the cartridges and projectiles are extracted and placed carefully in some position where they may be immediately snapped up and used, and then the crews, leaving lookouts as before, lounge round near their weapons and resume the interrupted yarn.

Eight bells—midnight—and the calling of the watch. Men who have snatched a few hours' sleep wrapped in blankets on the hard deck relieve their comrades at the guns, and the relieved ones forget for four hours that such things as destroyers even exist.

About 2 the cook and his mates appear like kindly genii from the recesses of the galley with steaming kettles of grateful and comforting cocoa and

It does not take long to discuss this frugal meal, and those who smoke long keenly for a moonlight night, when they may smoke, or dawn, when destroyers need no flares to guide them. And through the whole of the duskiness one can hear the low-tone hum of voices as men discuss the chances of leave or of getting a mail within a reasonable time, or the last consignment of magazines sent them from home.

And in their hearts of hearts each of the men almost prays for a night attack; a glimpsing of a dark, shadowy form out there in the blackness; the splutter of a searchlight, and then scores of others, until a flotilla of hastening, black destroyers is shown vividly up; the hall of gunfire, the madness of pouring shells through the guns as fast as they can be loaded; the terrors and thrills of seeing first one opponent and then another stop dead in her tracks, waiting for the end with perhaps a deep-bass accompaniment as a torpedo or two explodes down the line; the hastening of boats to the rescue; the totting up of the losses.

Almost every man tries to persuade himself that he would welcome some sights of this description as a relief to the hundreds of nights, he has spent doing exactly the same thing—watching and waiting for the enemy that never comes.

Four o'clock, and change of men once more. More yawns, more grumbles—a few minor ones about the "bally war"—and then, at long last, dawn.

And the same boatswain's mate who piped the men to stations for night defence draws out his whistle once more, and rushes along the deck, shrilling with all the might of his sea-trained lungs.

"Unrig night defence! Open all scuttles and deadlights! Hands prepare ship for day action!"

The snaky voice-pipes are unriggered and coiled neatly away; the smaller ammunition is returned to its magazines and shell-rooms; and the great turrets are cast loose, ready for immediate call, which may come at any time during the day.

Hosepipes make their appearance, brooms and scrubbers make the deck snowy and sweet once more, and the long North Sea night is over.

Truly, not a very exciting night—a dull, monotonous, soul-wearying space of time, when men's thoughts turn to home and those they love! when the people of our idle sleep safe in their beds at night, just because the sure shield of the Empire is out there, doing its duty silently and without fuss, guarding the island shore, "that the people of our Empire may in peace and quietness . . . dwell in their homes, without fear of the ruthless invader."

GOOD FRUIT YIELD
New Brunswick's fruit crops are now reaching the best showing in years, and the apples, which are the most important part of this crop, bid fair to be a plentiful one. The great apple producing part of New Brunswick is the St. John valley from Woodstock down. The condition of the apple market is very bright. Transatlantic transportation conditions are better than they were a year ago. The crop of small fruit is also reported good. The strawberry season, which is drawing to a close, has been the best on record.

SERIOUSLY INJURED
At Charlottetown Tuesday afternoon, Mr. John Giroux met with a serious accident. He was breaking a young horse to harness with an older horse, harnessed to a heavy truck. The young horse became frightened and bolted. This caused the other horse to run also and Mr. Giroux could not guide them. The truck struck a post and threw Mr. Giroux down behind the horses on the whistletrees, where he was severely bruised. He will be laid up for some time. The heavy truck was demolished.

ANOTHER CAMPBELLTON BOY KILLED AT THE FRONT
No doubt many of your readers will be surprised to learn of another sacrifice made on the field of honor by another of our local boys. Louis Gagne was 22 years old when he enlisted from here and left Canada with the 12th Battalion, later transferring to the 4th. He was born at New Mills, N. B., and went to school there. He had been enjoying a few well earned holidays in the Old Country and had only returned to the front a day or so when called upon to make the final sacrifice. Louis has worked in several places in the valley and Matane and many friends will be sorry to learn of his sudden demise after spending fifteen months at the front. He had just come through a severe battle when the Canadian troops won some trenches from the Germans, in which he was in the bombing party.

SAVE THE TREES

The St. John Standard editorially refers to the enforcement of the law in Ottawa against persons injuring ornamental trees. In St. John lately a fine of $25 was imposed for this offence. In a second case a boy was fined $25, but the amount was allowed to stand on the youth promising to arrange to put in a new tree and making a $5 preliminary payment. A few examples of this kind in Campbellton might stop the scandalous destruction of private trees and property that occurs almost every week.

THE LUMBER INDUSTRY

A Toronto contemporary makes the timely suggestion that the Canadian lumber industry should prepare to take full advantage of the needs of Europe in the period of recuperation that will follow the ending of the war. There would certainly seem to be such an opportunity ahead for the industry, which, during the years following the great real estate boom that swept over the country, has not flourished as in the past. France and Belgium will require tremendous quantities of building materials to reconstruct the cities, towns and villages destroyed by the cannon. The destruction caused by the war has been thousands of times as great as the destruction in such great disasters as the California earthquake, and yet the Toronto paper remarks, the reconstruction which followed the misfortune of San Francisco was a boon to the industries supplying building materials in this country as well as in the United States. Outside of Russia, Canada perhaps has the greatest supply of timber. The demand to be made on her will be large. To meet this demand there should be some preparation now. As one of the chief centres still of the Canadian lumber industry, New Brunswick is particularly interested in the outlook in this commercial field.

ROADS IMPROVED

The roads between Campbellton and Matapedia have been improved to a marked extent during the past two weeks. There are yet some very rough sections. Between Campbellton and Tide Head the road is good. From Tide Head to Morrissey Rock the road is very rough and full of holes, which could be easily repaired. From Morrissey Rock to Matapedia there has been some improvements. This work has been done in the past two weeks.

British Officer Arrives to Enlist Inland Navigators

Ottawa, July 26—Another call for Canadians to serve the Empire in a work for which many of them are peculiarly well fitted has been received from the Mother Country. Five hundred men are wanted in connection with work to be performed on the inland waterways of England, France and Belgium. Lieut. W. H. Owens of the Royal Engineers, has arrived in Canada to enlist the men who will be asked to serve during the period of the war. They will not, it is explained, go as a Canadian unit, but their services will be utilized where most urgently required. River men and men versed in the navigation of inland waters are the class required. Arrangements for recruiting have not yet been completed but men in all parts of Canada desirous of serving in this new auxiliary branch will be given an opportunity to enlist.

TARDY, BUT TRUE

By ELSIE SEE.

It was well known in Plainville that Madge Ingram, who five years ago had refused to wed Jim Butler, the merchant prince of the town, was now getting a good salary as private secretary to a city lawyer. It was equally well known that the merchant's young wife of a year kept a servant and had an automobile and had charge accounts at the city department stores. Every time Madge came home for a vacation Plainville weighed the respective merits of her independence and the merchant's wife's affluence, but the shrewdest of the gossips did not suspect that a memory antedating her affair with Jim Butler meant more to Madge than anything that had come into her life.

One summer morning Madge alighted from the 6 o'clock train for her vacation without having told of her coming, as she preferred to surprise her parents by appearing unannounced for breakfast. She hurried up the quiet street and slipping quietly through the yard gate, she picked a handful of dewy nasturtiums before stepping around to the side porch and knocking at the kitchen door.

"My dear child! I just felt you'd come soon!" exclaimed her mother at sight of her.

"The same dear mother—can't be surprised!" laughed Madge, as they embraced.

"But I can be glad, and I am, dearie," said the mother, with a catch in her voice. "And here's crisp bacon and fried apples and hot biscuit just as if you'd ordered your favorite summer breakfast."

"And I'm ready for the breakfast, too," said Madge, with a happy sigh. "But where's father?"

"He's in the garden," said Mrs. Ingram, and the next moment Madge was in the garden, too, and in her father's arms. No sooner, though, had he begun to point out the excellence of his tomatoes and sweet corn than Mrs. Ingram summoned them to breakfast.

"What's doing to-day, mother? Is there a picnic?" asked Madge, after breakfast.

"Now, how did you guess that?"

"I saw Tom Jordan hauling some giant ice cream freezers and a lot of fruit up to the Maplewood pasture, and, oh, I saw a distinguished-looking man in grey tweed over near the hotel. He looked like a man of affairs above and beyond Plainville pieties."

"That must have been Tom Whitlow. He's here for a visit, and he dresses like that, and is staying at the hotel," Tom Whitlow, who used to—Madge hesitated, and her mother continued. "Used to drive Butler's delivery waggons. But they say he's made something of himself. He is manager of some mines out west somewhere, and I guess he deserves credit, for his folks were poor as Job's turkey."

"But Tom was bright and gentlemanly," said Madge quickly, "and he used to help me do my arithmetic problems, although he wouldn't talk to me outside."

"I guess he's still kind o' quiet," said Mrs. Ingram, "for they wanted him to make a speech at the picnic and he made excuses that he'd rather listen than be heard."

That afternoon Madge went with her parents to the picnic, and although she felt a certain pleasure in greeting her old friends and answering their unvarying questions about her health and her impressions of local improvements, she soon began to feel keenly that she was no longer in sympathy with their lives or they with hers. When people began to gather to listen to the speeches of the county candidates for office and of the local politician who introduced the speakers, Madge slipped away and went across the little stream and up the hill to the north, where she had often gone for wild flowers.

A thick undergrowth had changed the appearance of the hillside, but she soon found what she was seeking, a big oak tree, with a gnarled limb near the ground that formed a rough seat on which she had sat many times watching the birds and squirrels. As she walked around a thick clump of hazelnut bushes and sumacs to reach the grassy space underneath the tree, a tall man in blue serge, who had been sitting on the grass, with his broad shoulders against the tree, rose and removed his hat in respectful, but embarrassed, greeting.

"I hope I haven't startled you," he said, "and may I hope, also, that you would care to remember Tom Whitlow?"

"Not at all," blurted Madge. Then, in embarrassment, she hastened to add: "That is, you didn't startle me, and I'm glad to meet you again. But are you sure you know who I am?"

"You? Why, you're Madge Ingram. Pardon me—Miss Ingram."

"No—let's be Madge and Tom before we begin to be formal," said she, extending her hand. "You used to help me with my lessons, but you wouldn't talk to me. Won't you make up for lost time now by telling me of the interesting things you've been doing?"

"May I not tell you what I wanted to tell you years ago, but hadn't the courage?" His gray eyes were eager and his strong hand still held hers.

"May I not tell you that it was you who first aroused in me a desire to do things? Some of the girls at school made mouths because they had to stand beside me in class, but you never did. Those girls, later, looked over my head when they saw me driving a delivery wagon, but you spoke to me even then. And may I tell you that I her say that just as you were starting went away determined to achieve something that would make me worthy of even more than your friendly greetings? I worked away for a year, and then I heard you were going to marry Jim Butler."

He turned away and dropped her hand. In a different tone he resumed a moment later.

"I never opened another issue of the little old Plainville paper for fear I'd find the account of your wedding. I worked my way through the State University and into mining engineering. For years my work has absorbed me, and I've known nothing of what went on at Plainville, but last week in a railroad restaurant out west I happened to hear news of you. I overheard one woman tourist speaking to another as they sat at dinner. I begged Madge to make this trip with me."

She said, "but she thought she must go to Plainville. I told her she'd as well have married that merchant after all, but she says there's a lot of difference between going for a vacation and for a lifetime. So she's going to wait there the first two weeks in August."

"That must have been Elsie Wagoner," exclaimed Madge, "and what a coincidence that you should have heard her say that just as you were starting to Plainville!"

"But I wasn't starting until I heard that! It was knowing you were free that brought me here! It is because time in the past five years, Tom, and I've loved you ever since we were children that I've tried to make myself free," she said.

When Pigs. Were Cheap

IN your grandfather's day—ask him about it—you could buy a dressed hog for three dollar; a nice big pig. And a live pig would cost no more.

Everything in those bygone days was cheap—that is, the things of common use.

Clothes, boots, milk, bread, beefsteak, eggs, butter, lumber, farm labor, domestic servants—they all cost a good deal less than they do today.

It cost less to live—and less to be born—and less to die fifty years ago than today.

And it cost much less to publish a country weekly fifty years ago than it does today—very much less.

Yet you paid—or your grandfather did—just a dollar a year—the same as you are paying today. But the dollar must yield to the pressure of necessity. We must do now what we ought to have done years ago—raise the price of The Graphic to $1.50. The tremendously increased costs of paper, ink, supplies, and the more-than-doubled cost of living have made us furiously to think. And so, the price of The Graphic will in future be $1.50 a year.

Good Readers All

If you were in our place, and knew all we know about the higher costs of publishing you would wonder how we didn't make the advance long ago. We trust you to meet the new rate with a smile. Not for 50 cents a year will you say "Stop my paper."

McLAUGHLIN CARS WON HON- ORS IN RELIABILITY TEST

Had First Four in Ontario Tour, with Goodyear Tires

The reliability tour from the Canadian capital into the State of New York, which took place in June excited a great deal of interest all along the route. It not only gave motorists a chance to sample the terrible roads between Ottawa and Prescott, which was the first leg of the journey, and where conditions were made worse than ordinary by a heavy rainfall of eighteen hours directly before the start, following on several weeks of more or less continuous rain, but it also enabled an impetus to be given to the Good Roads movement in Ontario, as well as permitted of the celebration of the exchange of licenses between Ontario and New York State by a large body of motorists.

As to the reliability tour itself the McLaughlin cars carried off the first four prizes, and the contest must be regarded as a triumph for them and their drivers, as well as for the Goodyear tires with which they were equipped. The winner was G. B. McKay, who finished the run to Gouverneur with a perfect score of a thousand points, this car not even losing a point on the secret schedule run, which put paid to the aspirations of so many of the drivers. The fifth prize went to a Dodge car, and the sixth to an Overland; while the McLaughlin cars were the next three in order of finish on points, followed by a Russell, Ford, Chevrolet, and Buick.

The first prize was a silver shield presented by the Ottawa Free Press, who organized and managed the tour with an executive board representing the Ottawa Valley Motor Car Association and the Ottawa Motor Club. G.
B. McKay also won ten golden soundorns presented by C. H. Carlisle of the Goodyear Tire Company of Canada, and the silver cup presented by the McLaughlin Motor Co. E. E. Code won the silver cup given by the Mayor of Ogdensburg and the cup of the Mc-Laughlin Co. for the second entry, and F. Wilson the silver cup given by Mayor Porter of Ottawa and the Mc-Laughlin cup for their third entry.
Sam Rensenthal won the silver cup of the Overland Company for their best entry and J. W. Jette the Ford prize.

Penalties were comparatively few for even on the bad roads between Ottawa and Prescott which called forth
all the skill of each individual driver, there were few points lost and all finished with good high marks.

FEW ACCIDENTS.

Tire trouble and skidding caused the greater part of the woes and worries of the contestants and even of these minor troubles there were very few.
The first lap of the road, from Ottawa to Prescott, was enough to make even the bravest driver quail, but all who started went through in fine style.

It was the first reliability tour to enter the United States from Eastern Canada and the first organized party of tourists to enter New York State since the arrangement for the interchange of automobile licenses went into effect.

Plans have already been made to conduct the contest in 1917 by way of Ogdensburg, Canton, Gouverneur, Watertown and Alexandria Bay. The finish will be at Ottawa. Motor boats for the entire party have been promised for a day among the Thousand Islands of Alexandria Bay.—Adv. 1 wk.

NEW TAX RATE

The tax rate this year is $1.50 or ten cents more than last year. This increase is made up partly by increased assessment for school purposes.

DECORATION DAY

The members of North Star Lodge,
I. O. O. F. will meet at their hall on Sunday, July 30th and proceed to the Rural Cemetery, where the graves of their departed brethren will be decorated. The Campbellton band will head the procession. The Lodge some time ago sent to Major McKenzie of the 26th, a handsome Oddfellow design in brass to be laid upon the grave of their late brother Capt. H. W. Ferguson. The emblem was composed of a shield upon which are three links and the words "Capt. H. W. Ferguson
Member of North Star Lodge, I. O. O.
F., Campbellton, N. B. Died on the Field of Honor."

Catarrrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear.
There is only one way to cure catarrrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube.
When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflamation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists

mains to Bathurst.—Interment There

The funeral of the late Mrs. William Napier took place last Friday.

A short service was held at the

Mrs. Napier died, and the body was taken to the I. C. R. depot where a special train was in waiting to carry the funeral party to Bathurst, where Unfortunately, owing to a wreck on body was laid to rest beside that of her late husband.

Many attended from all parts of

BLACK CAPES OBITUARY

The Angel of Death has again visited our neighborhood and taken one of our most respected residents in the infernal person of John Campbell, after a lingering and painful illness which he bore with Christian fortitude and patience.

The late Mr. Campbell was born in Black Capes nearly fifty-five years ago. About six years ago, he began to complain of a pain in the arm, which later developed into tuberculosis in the shoulder. He went to the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, and was operated on. This checked the disease for a time; but in spite of all that medical skill and the constant attention of a devoted wife and kind friends could do, he died on the 21st inst.

He is survived by a wife, one son and two daughters all at home, two brothers, Donald and Neil of Black Capes, four sisters, Mrs. J. W. Campbell of Black Capes; Mrs. William Mc-Colm and Mrs. George Montgomery of New Richmond Centre and Miss Rose of Red Bank, N. B.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the funeral was largely attended, showing the esteem in which he was held. An eloquent, earnest and very impressive funeral service was conducted by the Rev. E. J. Rattee.
The interment was in St. Andrew's Church Cemetery, New Richmond.

The undertaker's part was managed by William McColm of Black Capes.
The pall-bearers were Gordon, Donald and Neil Campbell, William McColm, George Montgomery, and George
Campbell of Grand Caspédia.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family.

McMILLAN-MILLER

Black Lands, July 26.—A wedding of much local interest took place here on Friday evening, 21st inst., when John McMillan and Janet Nicholson Miller were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed at the Manse,
New Mills, by Rev. F. L. Jobb, pastor of the congregation. After the ceremony, the newly wedded couple drove to the home of the bride where a reception was held. Over forty guests sat down to tables loaded with dainties. The wedding gifts were many and were tangible proofs of the deep popularity of the bride.

OBITUARY

Many friends throughout New Brunswick will learn with sorrow of the death of Mrs. James A. Reid, which took place at Sarnac Lake, New York on Thursday of last week.

The late Mrs. Reid was in delicate health for some time and went to Sarnac Lake in the hope that the change would benefit her.

A husband and two sons survive.
The funeral was held on Sunday, and was very largely attended, interment being in the New Mills cemetery.

The bereaved husband and family have the sympathy of all in their be-avement.

LANCER CORPORAL THOMAS JOHN BLAMPIED of New Carlisle, N. B.

In these sad days when every newspaper contains a new list of those who have made the last great sacrifice, there are many whose memory will ever live in loving hearts, but whose deeds will be unrecorded. Their names and their deeds are written in Heaven.
At the same time there are some whose names deserve to receive special honour upon earth. Such was Thomas John Blamied of New Carlisle.

Born in Trinity, in the Island of Jersey in 1894, he came as a lad of fifteen to New Carlisle, and for five years worked as an article clerk in that place, winning not only the confidence of his employer, but also the love and esteem of all who knew him.

It can be truly said of him that he combined in his character, modesty, gentleness and sweetness of temper
with the highest and truest manhood.

Naturally full of life and gaiety, he possessed a deep seriousness of purpose which kept ever true to the highest.

He loved and followed the things that are true and pure and lovely and of good report, but he was always ready, in the spirit of the Master, whom he loved and served, to strive to win those who were wandering into danger and to lead them back to safety.

He was an ardent Temperance worker, taking a leading part in the work of New Carlisle Lodge, No. 74, I. O.
G. T., in which he held several important offices. He was a loyal member of the Church of England and a faithful and devoted Sunday School Teacher and Church worker.

His influence for good was all the more effective because of his unassum-ing character and he was a lion in courage when called upon to bear witness to the Truth.

From the outbreak of the war his heart was at the front and, as soon as he was able, he enlisted for active service, joining the 26th Battalion. He was instrumental in the formation of an I. O. G. T. Lodge among its members and in making this Lodge a helpful influence in the life of the Battalion.

From his letters from the front we know that he never wavered in his determination to serve his country to the limit of his power. He was killed by a shell on June 12th, 1916 and buried by his fellow soldiers from New Carlisle on the field of battle. So died a true servant of Jesus Christ, one of God's finest gentlemen, a knight "sans peur at some reproach," a friend whose love was closer than a brother.

He has fought a good fight; he has finished his course; he has kept the faith. He awaits his crown and, in that crown, we dare to believe, will shine the love of many who have been helped by his influence and example to higher and holier things.

"Do you know the nature of an oath, madam?"
"Well, I ought to, sir. We've just moved and my husband has been laying the carpets."

An American lady at Stratford-on-Avon showed even more than the usual American fervor. She had not recovered when she reached the railway station, for she remarked to a friend as they walked on the platform: "To think that it was from this very platform the immortal bard would depart whenever he journeyed to town!"

Mendicant—Sir, I have paralysis, six children to support, my wife is sick and we are about to be dispossessed. Stalled Motorist—Piffle! Did you ever try to run a second-hand automobile?

PORT DANIEL CENTRE, P. Q.

Signaller Cecil F. Miller of 117th Battalion, Valcartier, was home for week end with his parents. Everyone was pleased to see him looking so well, and quite a number were at the station on Monday to see him off and wish him God-speed.

We also have with us W. J. Jardine, Esq., our genial bank manager. A great deal of satisfaction was felt when it was announced that our late manager was replaced by one who was widely known and very popular in his former term of office here.

Mrs. Jardine and family will remain guests of her parents until her house is ready for occupation at Paspebiac.

Mrs. T. M. Carlyle and little sons, (formerly Miss Stella Young) of Calgary, Alberta, has been the week end guest of her aunt, Mrs. Wm. A. McPherson.

A party of friends motored from Campbellton for the week end, including Mr. R. L. Sullivan, Misses Flora and Eva Harper, also Mr. Gordon Harper.

Mr. Sullivan and Miss F. Harper were entertained at Mr. Wm. A. McPherson's. Miss Eva and her brother remained with Miss Edith Lawrence.

Letters from the front indicate that Andrew McPherson of the 26th Battalion, who joined as Private has earned his third stripe and is now a Sergeant.

We wish him much pleasure with his promotion and that he may have the good luck to get through in the future as in the past.

Among the strangers in our vicinity we notice Mr. and Mrs. Tarr, Miss Winnie Doyle, Misses Lomer and Egg of Montreal; Misses Blatch of P. E. Island, Mr. Guay and grandson of Quebec.

The patriotic workers of Port Daniel are preparing an ice cream social in the Centre school house for Thursday evening. It is hoped that a good attendance may be expected and that a nice little sum may be realized. There is still need for a great deal more supplies for our boys at the front and workers are plentiful when the cash is there to provide material.

SHIVES ATHOL

The Ice Cream Social and Dance given by the Soldiers Comfort Association of Athol was a decided success. The sum of $62.00 being realized.

The ladies of the Association wish to extend their thanks to all those who so kindly helped to make the evening a success. To the members of the Campbellton Band for the music furnished free of charge, to Mr. Napier for the free use of his car in conveying the Band members to Athol, also to Mr. H. Daley and W. O'Hearn for their assistance in conducting the dance.

A restaurant keeper hung out this sign: "Coffee: Such as Mother Used to Make."

One morning a man entered the cafe, and as the waiter approached him he inquired, pointing to the sign: "Is your coffee really such as mother used to make?"

"It is, sure!" replied the waiter, convincingly.

"Then," said the man with a reminiscent look, "give me a cup of tea."

MISSIONS AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

The following paper was prepared by Miss Mabel Keith and read at the recent meeting of the Restigouche and Bonaventure Sunday School Convention.

The Aim of the Sunday School

Speaking of the Sunday School Professor Walter S. Athern says,—"The functions of the Church School are,—(a)—To develop intelligent and efficient Christian lives consecrated to the extension of God's Kingdom on earth, and (b)—to train efficient leaders for all phases of church work." To many the Bible is a message of personal salvation, the church is the ark of that salvation and the supreme experience of their own religious lives is the joy of realizing that they themselves are saved; to others, Christianity primarily a set of less encouraging certain virtues and discouraging certain vices; it is clear however, that this is not all of Christianity. If we judge by the words of its founder Christianity is a great propaganda. It cannot be otherwise. The very essence of Christianity is the sharing of one's best with others. But Christianity itself is always the best which a Christian has. The Christian religion contains within itself therefore the forces which continually tend to break bonds and flow into new territory. Christianity much express itself or it is not Christianity. So long as there are men who are not having a fair chance at Christian opportunities and blessings the highest form of Christian expression will be the sharing of the Christian life in all its fullness with others.

All of this outreach and effort on the part of the church either as a whole or as individual members may be termed missionary, and whether the work is done under some missionary board or otherwise does not change the character of the work. Trying to bring your child, your neighbor's child or a Chinese child into the Kingdom is the same kind of work, even the material with which you work is the same—the heart of a child. Away back in the beginning we are taught—"He made of one blood all nations". Sunday School teachers may not be content with pupils who are successful in a professional way and who are not investing time, energy and money in the work of the Kingdom. Social problems are unsolved. Immigrants come and go without coming into contact with Protestant Christianity because some Sunday School pupils never become concerned about the extension of the Kingdom. It is not therefore sufficient that pupils learn lessons, important as the lessons are. Pupils must be trained to render efficient service. Only in a field of service can a pupil find his highest development.

The question has been asked—"Do Missions belong to the Sunday School?" One may as well ask—"Do trees belong to the forest or water in the sea?" But why? Is it because Missions needs the Sunday School or the Sunday School needs Missions? The Sunday School has furnished volunteers, contributors, intercessors, personal workers and evangelists for the mission field in the past. Missions cannot get along without the Sunday School. Can the Sunday School get along without Missions? The Sunday School would be as handicapped without opportunity for missionary expression, as a chemistry teacher without a laboratory or a farmer without a farm.

The missionary expression is then, not only the proof that the pupil is Christian but also a means by which the character is developed. Granted then that Missions (in the largest sense in which the word is used) needs the pupils and that the pupils need to study how they may give themselves in service, in order to develop well rounded Christian lives, how can we best meet these needs? In the construction of a building it is necessary to have a plan, materials, and workmen. So in the Sunday School the missionary essentials are a definite, clear cut plan, materials or equipment with which to work and a missionary committee to make the plan effective by the use of materials. Missionary atmosphere should be constant in the school. This may be created by the display of pictures, maps, mottoes, charts, diagrams and like visible objects which take no time from the Sunday School session but which present their message to the eye. Just now the Sunday School teacher has a splendid opportunity to get in some fine work on Missions. We could not have better material with which to work than Paul's missionary journeys," yet we may be like one S. S. teacher who when asked "Do you have definite missionary instruction in your school?" said "No" and at that time they had the same lessons that we have now. She did not appreciate the missionary character of the material with which she was dealing. If the full significance of the Bible material is grasped we cannot escape the teaching of Missions in the class.

Did you know that there is reason to believe that every one of the twenty-seven books of the New Testament was written by a Missionary? Probably more than half of them were written by missionaries while engaged in missionary service. Thirteen of these are ascribed to Paul. They grew out of his life as a missionary. They were occasioned by situations in the mission field. Every letter was written to a foreign group or to a convert of a missionary. The Book of Revelation was written to foreign churches. Every apostle lies buried outside of his native land. The only one of the Twelve who did not become a foreign missionary became a traitor. It was the New Testament that brought the Old Testament to the world. The Epistles are in purpose and authorship missionary while the Gospels present the Magna Charta of the missionary propaganda out of which all the books of the New Testament grew. We have then an almost inexhaustible supply of missionary material in the Bible. Also a warrant why Missions belong to the Sunday School. Beside the missionary atmosphere which is so necessary to missionary education, instruction may be given from the platform. For this purpose one may use the programmes prepared by the different missionary educational societies or give chalk talks. If the Superintendent or some teacher has the ability to tell a story well, instruction may be given in this way. There are so many missionary stories and you know how a story will stick to the memory. I saw a splendid thing not long ago that would fix in the memory the story of any missionary doing work in Africa, especially if you were taking up "Uganda's White Man of Work" or the "Life and Work of Livingstone". It was the map of Africa colored red, with a sword—the point of the sword pointing toward the top of the map. Across the hilt were the words "God is great"—one of the fundamentals of the Mohammedan religion. Mahomet came to conquer Africa with the sword. There was another side to this however. The map was black with the sword in white, turned with the point to the bottom the map, forming a cross instead, with the words "God is love" written across the beam. Africa being conquered by the sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God. The missionary is the one who wields the sword. Of course, if all our Sunday Schools were using the graded lessons this work of missionary instruction would be much easier. In the Primary Department one can use the sand tray. This can easily be made by sawing the legs off an ordinary kitchen table and filling it with sand. A splendid book for the Primary is "The Great Big World" or "Missionary walks in the Zoo." Another, "Children in Blue and what they do" describing life in China. The Junior period would demand history, biography, stories of deeds of deeds. Did you ever have a Junior boy ask after you had finished telling a story that you hoped would illustrate the point—"Did that really happen?" and if you were not sure about it—well—the telling of it was so much wasted energy. For the Intermediate Department, there would be splendid material in "Uganda's White Man of Work" for boys and "Under Marching Orders" for girls. Boys of this department might some Sunday impersonate Mutess and Stanley—the black man pleading with the white for some one to tell him more about the white man's God. For the Senior Department—"Servants of the King", for the Adult Department, text books on Africa, India, China, Japan, Korea or the Moslem world. For the Sunday School teacher and Superintendent—The Sunday School Teacher and the Programme of Jesus" by Trull. Then you would have your entire school getting missionary instruction. There is a splendid plan of graded missionary instruction given in "Missionary Methods for Sunday School Workers." Education is incomplete, however, with mere instruction. Missionary education to make its highest contribution to character development much provide opportunity for interest to find expression in practical ways such as prayer, giving and service.

The great need of the hour is prayer. We will never know how to pray until we pray. We need to be definite in our prayers, naming some particular missionary or sphere of interest. Prayer cycles might be formed promising to pray daily for some definite object. There has been issued by the Presbyterian Board of Home and Foreign Missions a prayer cycle which is suitable for children. Then there is what is known as the Prayer Covenant. On one side of the card is written a covenant promising to pray, and on the other side suggested things to pray for. "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." It is highly important for the best good of the child himself that he should be lead to express his interest in missions in some direct and tangible way. It is not fair to be always giving information without a chance to express his interest. During the Russian-Japanese war a returned missionary was addressing a crowd of children from the East side of New York City and showing what good could be done by sending comfort bags, picture post cards and so on to the Japanese soldiers. At the close of the boys followed the speaker and said "Us fellows is going to send some of them things to them Japs." Information aroused interest, and interest like gathering steam in a boiler sought some way of escape and expression. We need not go to U. S. to find examples of this kind. Our Canadian boys and girls have been expressing their interest by knitting and making comforts for our soldiers. The point is, they were expressing their interest and their interest increased in proportion as they gave. If one is interested enough to give $25.00 for the support of a Bible Woman he will have just $25.00 worth of interest. This reminds me of a story of a woman who put .5c on the offertory plate in church and coming out complained of the poor sermon, whereupon her small boy asked "Well, mother, what could you expect for a nickel?" One of the best ways of deep-

HUSBAND SAVED HIS WIFE

Stopped Most Terrible Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Denison, Texas.—"After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept dragging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's step-sister told me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies. They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. C. O. LOWERY, 419 W. Monterey Street, Denison, Texas.

If you are suffering from any form of female ills, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

ening interest is to have the pupils earn what they give and there are so many ways. Pupils should be taught to give systematically. Then when they have given they have a right to know to whom the money goes. A girl asked "Why can't those Chinese support themselves?" not knowing the money was used for the support of missionaries. This may have been an unusual state of ignorance. A mile of pennies would be a good objective for the County for next year. It has been estimated that $3,489 pennies would make a mile. ($348.90).

The Sunday School will accomplish its highest purpose only as Sunday School teachers and workers recognize the essentially missionary character of their work. Working in an institution the purpose of which is to produce men and women of missionary passion, making use of a text-book, the message of which is missionary, and dealing with boys and girls whose spiritual life demands the missionary expression of the work of the S. S. teacher can be successful only in the measure in which it is filled with the missionary spirit and content.

"You married a rich wife, didn't you?" asked Jones of his friend. "Yes," he sighed, "but she's not declared any dividend yet."
