AN HISTORICAL SKETCH OF CAMPBELLTON

NEWER PORTION OF TOWN

The busy little village of Martin's Point, situated very pleasantly at the head of the great Restigouche river, and almost surrounded by low hills first came to notice about the year 1760, when a French fleet, chased up the river by the British, was captured three miles above.

In 1825, the Crown Commissioners surveyed off a site for a town, which received the present name, Campbellton, in honor of Lord Campbell, a Scottish nobleman. It will be interesting for Campbellton people to glance back at the history of their town, and to notice the various stages in its development from an insignificant little village to a sturdy town becoming more and more important every year.

Even before the village was given its present name, business prospered and especial attention was given to ship-building. In 1820 the Ritchie-Lambert Company had established a warehouse and offices on the old ferry wharf and were doing a thriving business.

The McMillan, Travis Company was terious erected a house of worship on Prince William Street. Rev. James Stevens was called to the charge and a manse was built on this hill.

In 1828 the Methodists began to hold service in an old school building on the site occupied by the present church which was built in 1884. In close succession the Episcopal and Baptist churches followed and 1888 a new Presbyterian church was erected, the former building being moved to the lower part of Water Street, to be used as a warehouse, but has since been required and used as a residence.

In 1875 the Hon. John McMillan donated part of the McMillan property on the hill to the Roman Catholics. Here a church was built and in 1891 a convent and hospital were added.

About this time, the town seemed to be going backward and the ship-building industry declined. As if to offset this a new interest arose. Factories were established at Church Point, where the Boom House now is, at Duncan's Point, and in the ship-yard opposite the Bank of Nova Scotia.

In 1867 came Confederation. Shortly

Our Town, It's Growth And Importance, It's Various Industries And It's Possibilities---The Best Situated in New Brunswick.

This development soon made it evident that union was necessary to promote prosperity, so in 1888 an Act was passed by the local legislature granting incorporation to the town of Campbellton; this Act was to go in force June 2nd, 1889. The first election was held June 18th, and Mr. John McAllister was elected Mayor.

Since incorporation the town has forged ahead rapidly, and many fine public buildings have been erected. Among them may be mentioned the Grammar School. In 1894 it was thought advisable to move the Grammar School from the shiretown to the larger town of Campbellton. Accordingly this was done, but the building in use proving too small, preparations were made for the erection of a first class school.

The work was commenced in 1896 and on June 22nd, 1898, the building was formally opened. It may be interesting to know that the site of the building was at one time part of the Andrew farm and noted for the quality of potato it produced.

Among the teachers in the early history of the school may be noted: Mr. William Crockett, who afterwards became principal of the Provincial Normal School, also head of Megin College, Quebec, and Superintendent of Education for New Brunswick.

Mr. Alexander Robinson, who is now chief superintendent of Education in British Columbia, and who this year received the honorary degree of L. D. from his Alma Mater, Dalhousie College, Halifax. Mr. Charles Stevens, who afterwards became an eminent doctor in the Western States, Mr. F.

JOHN McALLISTER, Ex-M. R.
Campbellton's First Mayor

A. E. G. McKENZIE.

McAllister, who subsequently practiced law in British Columbia, and Mr. A. E. G. McKenzie, a Campbellton boy, who last year received the degree of B. C. L. from Kings College Law School, St. John.

Also our late principal Mr. E. W. Lewis, one of the most brilliant classical scholars in the province, who for twelve years fulfilled his duty as head of our High School and principal of our public school.

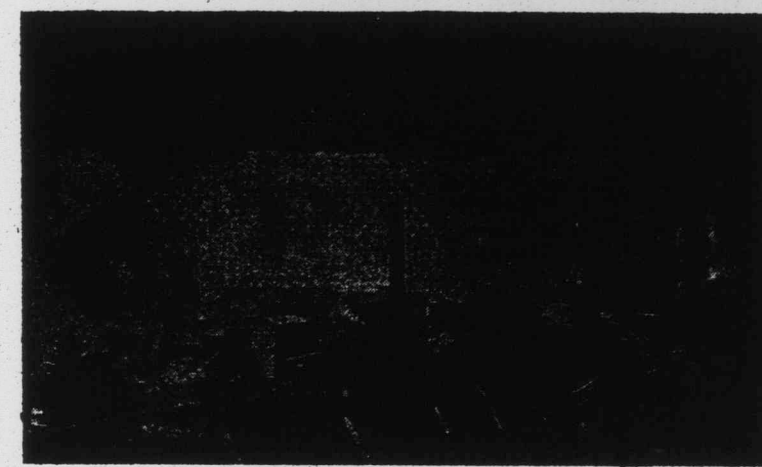

Other buildings of note are: the post office, one of the finest in the province; the Bank of New Brunswick; Bank of Nova Scotia and the I. C. R. buildings, although these last could be certainly improved.

In addition the fine private residences of Campbellton are silent witnesses to the prosperity, although in most cases, the usual accompaniment of "well-kept grounds" are as yet a negative quantity.

As regards transportation facilities, have the Intercolonial railway and the International, which is not yet completed. The Interprovincial Navigation Co. which has a fine new steamer, the Lady Sybil, on the route between Campbellton and Gaspé ports, affords good transport facilities to a large number of ports.

A ferry runs between Campbellton and Cross Point, so that travellers who leave our I. C. R. trains may ferry to the other side and go by Atlantic and Lake Superior line instead of the "Lady Sybil" line.

There has been talk of a proposed bridge, which will span the Restigouche and connect the International with the A. and L. S. Should this be carried through, it will greatly aid the building up of the town and before many years, Campbellton will be one of the cities of New Brunswick.

Telephone lines connect Campbellton with the surrounding district, and we can now use the long distance system, which has proved a great boon to the business men. Business has greatly prospered and several saw mills are in operation, also a foundry and a brick yard.

Until lately, the town could boast of a woodyard, but for some time past, this has been a thing of the past, and a vote has been cast for a brick yard, and a vote has been cast for a brick yard, and a vote has been cast for a brick yard.

The variety of the wood land around Campbellton, the fine rivers and streams and the excellent fishing and shipping facilities should appeal to a wide range of business interests.

THE BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA.

strongly to any party interested in furniture and finished lumber manufacture. There was at one time some talk of the establishment of a boat and shoe factory here, but nothing has yet resulted from it.

To intending settlers and to all home seekers, the fine fertile land around Campbellton, the opportunity for employment, our educational advantages, and religious privileges would appeal more strongly than to business men, but the varied resources of the country have been said about it, but it is to be different business interests provide at least one day we will have our traction for everybody, in whatever line of work they are engaged.

The North Shore has long been a particularly attractive summer home resort, but to the future. When the West is filled up and the eyes of all are turned to the East, which will probably be the case in a few years, the North Shore will have a great share of the new always has as many guests as it can accommodate and will encourage itself and take care of and many Americans have prospered until the history of the town secured private fishing stands and have of Campbellton shall be merged into built cottages for their own use. All the larger history of the city. Then this must necessarily tend to the north and not till then shall Campbellton rival advancement of its town itself, some for their own.

their rivals in this respect, and did a good business in lumber. Also a water power mill was operated at Oak Bay, just across the river. Pine was the chief lumber exported, and the great trees were cut down ruthlessly, only the very best of timber being used. This waste had to be finally stopped by the government, and is probably the reason we have so little pine on the North Shore today.

As early as 1802, a water power mill was in operation at Mill Pond, on the site of the present Liberty's mill. The date of its erection is not known, but by old records we know that it was there over a hundred years ago.

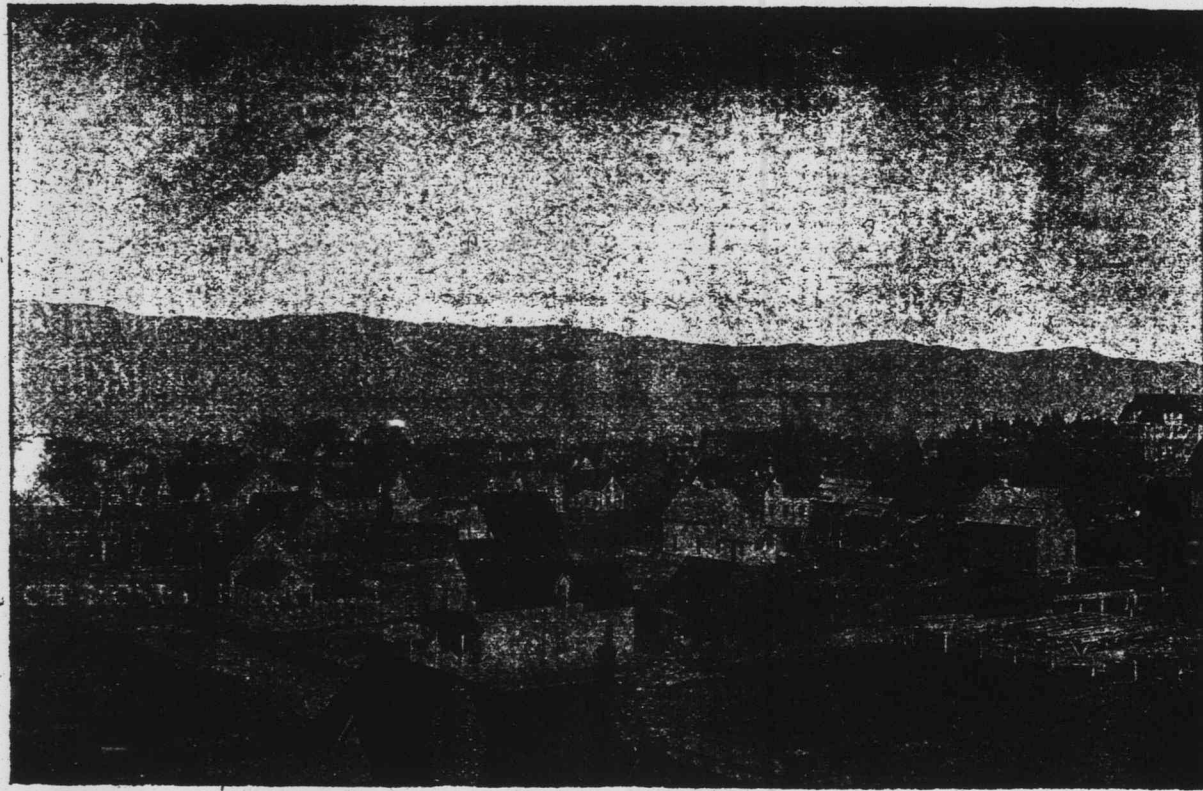

The little town made great progress in the years between 1820 and 1840. At this time labor was plentiful and trade in a flourishing condition. Ship-building, as we have noticed, was one of the most important industries and a shipyard occupied the site of the present Shivers' Mill. Many men were employed in this work, and the population increased rapidly.

Until the year 1821 there were no churches but at this time the Presbyterian church was built through Campbellton, connecting it with the large cities of other provinces and providing excellent freight and passenger service, thus making Campbellton one of the most important stations on the line. Telegraph lines had also been built, making connections with the outside world, and with these improvements the town soon became an important shipping port and commercial centre for the surrounding country.

A steamer ran between Campbellton and Gaspé and another boat plied between Campbellton and Matapédia. It has been said that the real growth of the town dates from this period, and although at times since progress has been slow, yet on the whole, the growth of the town has been surprisingly rapid, both in area and population.

In a "Historical Sketch of Campbellton," published by the "Northern Enterprise" in 1888, it states that "new branches of trade sprang into existence, labor was well employed, and within the past fifteen years especially, the town has trodden itself in area
