Child of the Angel Wing.

"O! sing me a song as I fall asleep," Said a little one with a lustrous eye, a Or tell me a tale of the flowers that peep

That peep in the spring when the birdies sing, Or tell of the child with the angel wing, Who walks in the garden of paradise!"

I sang him the song -I told him the tale, And watched by his couch while we thought

That steadthy and bright near his pillow crept; darkness. No glance of human vision can Then my words grow faint, and my voice sank pierce the dark profound.

And I said, in thy dreams may the scraphs let us pursue our mighty journey through

But he whispered soft as I rose to go-" O ! tell of the child of the angel wing !" Then I sang again-but he restless grew.

And tossed his young arm as he wildly spoke, And a burning red in his forehead flew, As the moon went down and the morning

One name alone in his feverish hours, Was breathed in a whisper that pierced the and expanded, and its millions of suns now

And he never knew that she knelt by him Whose san went down at his dying bed! He has gone where the scraphs sweetly sing-His story was brief as the sunset dy He waiks with the child of the angel wing, In the flowery gardens of paradise!

FOR THE PROVINCIAL WESLEYAN. The Winter Wind.

It sweeps o'er the graves of the early dead, Of the smale of light and the loving tone, That now the embrace of the tomb hath won.

It sighs where in summer the sunbeams play, linging their banner o'er leaf and spray; Where now the cold footsteps of winter hath pascel, And the blossoms have died at the breath of the beauty of his works.

It awakens some chord in his aching breast,

That home-voices alone may sooth to rest.

The Old Oak-Tree.

Some thirty miles or so below Philadelphia, on the Jersey shore of the Delaware, there is a little village called Pennsgrove, and a pier jutting out into the river. About half mile above this pier there is a venerable oak-tree, lifting up its mossy gnarled branchover the very margin of the sfream. When the summer sun is warm, its grateful hade affords an inviting place of repose, at the same time busying the eye and the mind the green hills of Delaware, dotted with farm uses as far as the eye can reach, while just opposite are seen the clustered dwellings and spires of the city of Wilmington.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY. WEDNISDAY, Pela 1

The House met at 10, and adjourned inusediately to allow the Railroad Committee to resume its labours.

The Hon. Provincial Secretary addressed the House on the subject of the Fisheries and the necessity of adopting an address, praying Her-Majesty to sign NO TREATY on this subject without it being first submitted to the Colonial Legislature's for their approval.

The Hon, Provincial Secretary also laid on the table a despatch from the Duke of New Castle acknowledging the receipt of the memorial of the Citizens of Halifax against the surrens der of any of our exclusive Rights in the Fisheries-assuring the Mayor and Citizens that their rights would be " carefully considered" in any treaty entered into.

The Address proposed was phanimously agreed to, amid many expressions of apprehension lest Her Majesty should be advised to assent to any treaty on the subject of the Fisheries, without previous consultation with the Colonial Legislatures. Messrs., L. M. Wilkins, T. Ceffin, and Hall, PREA FOSCHATI, No. 146 William Street, New York, had a green on one of his legs, that had been a source of great innoyance to him for many years. The Doctors, after every effort to cure it without success, told him that it ought not to be bessled! as the system was deranged, and the bad humours caused by the use of mercury, must have an outlet to work off! He used one Fifty cent bottle of the Mustang Liniment, and the legf is sound!

The Little Shovet.—A poor woman had a supply of coal laid at her door, by a charitable neighbour. A very little girl came out with a small fire-shovel, and began to take up a shovel-full at a time, and carry it to a bin in the celler.

"Do you expect to get all that coal in with that little shovel?"

She said, "Yes, sir, if I work long enough?"

There is no labour too great for industry to accomplish, and it is not so much that tools as the spirit with which we use them that gives us success.

ha The angel stooped to kiss the child,
When, lo! at the touch the baby smiled!
And just where the unseen lips had pressed,
A dample lay in its sweet unrest,
Sporting upon his cheek of rose
Like a ripple waked from its repose
On a streamlet's breast when the soft wind blows.
And the angel passed from the sleeping one,
For his mission to earth that day was done.
A fair face bent above the boy—
It must have been the boy's own mother,
It must ha
