Clifford.

Mr. B. Spahr is now back to the Mansion House, and will remain here, having leased his hotel in New Hamburg.

Last week Mr. Herb. Whyte got his left hand badly hurt in a root pulper, while in motion. He will be incapacitated for some time, but no serious results are anticipated.

Mr. James Simpson, a former employe with W. Carnegie on the Elora road farm was here from Manitoba for some days.
He has prospered in the West, and intends taking a load of horses back with him.

Mr. J. L. Lloyd, the cement contractor and his good lady, are now comfortably settled in the new home in Clifford on the corner of Nelson and Clarke streets.
Mr. Lloyd contemplates improving the property early in the spring and will make a beautiful corner there.

Mr. Abraham Witmer, of the Howick-Minto townline received a telegram from Pattletford, N. W. T., to the effect that his son, Wilfrid Witmer had died at the police hospital there on Monday. The young man was ill only a few days with obstruction of the bowels. It is expected the body will be brought here for burial.

HOW LONG.

Tell us, ye winged wintry winds,
That through our whiskers blow,
Is winter never going to end?

That's what we want to know.

Will warmer weather never come?

Oh, do not say us nay.

Or must we all be friz to death?

Say, gentle zephyrs, say,
Shall we be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease.
Or stand in drifts up to our eyes
The while our marrow freezes?

Come, gentle spring, list to our song, We'd have you know that if You don't appear ere very long We'll all be frozen stiff.

What Canada Would Do.

The officials at the Militia Department at Ottawa are not blind to the possibility that may arise in connection with hostilities in the Far East. If Great Britain becomes involved in the struggle Canada may have to defend its eastern and western coasts. The effective defence of the country would be the greatest service Canada could render to the British Empire. In the case of war it would leave the British forces free to strike a blow elsewhere.
There is reason to believe that inquiries are secretly being made as to the length of time it would take to mobilize and equip troops for the defence of those parts of Canada most open to attack.
It is no secret that Lord Dunderdonald would like to be in a position to place 100,000 men in the field in case of emergency. But the best that Canada could do just now, perhaps, would be to place 50,000 or 60,000 men in the field, all of whom, however, would not be armed with the Lee-Enfield rifle. But any deficiency in that regard could be quickly made up by the Ross Rifle factory which has now begun to manufacture small-arms. The Ross rifle is said to be a much better weapon than Lee-Enfield. It is fervently hoped that the occasion for a call to arm may not arise; but it is well to be prepared for eventualities. "Defence, not defiance," is regarded as Canada's motto.

DOLLAR WHEAT.

What tho' the cannons roar and shriek,
And battered ships go down?
What though the cruisers spring a leak,
And Japs and Russians drown?
The Yankee farmer grins with joy,
With happiness complete
He notices, my boy,
The signs of dollar wheat.

Once in nineteen years the moon forgets to get full in February. This is its year for forgetting.

It is stated in commercial circles that the dumping of American goods in Canada at a sacrifice, which was feared as a result of depression in the United States, has already begun.

It appears that a largely signed petiof the non-imposition of the proposed

We noticed the 17th bridge delegation going to Fordwich to have a tussle with the township council. The council by acquiescing with their demands would please some half dozen, and displease the remainder of the ratepayers of the township. We have the verdict of the county engineer who stated that it would take at least $7000 to build the bridge, against the promoters of the new road whose knowledge of bridge building does not extend beyond that of building a gangway to a barn.

Snow Flurries.

One mail a week is our average at present.

The railway between Guelph and Palmerston has been closed since Monday afternoon.

Wednesday's thaw took away a lot of snow.

The mail train is expected to arrive to-morrow.

The strangest thing about this winter is that the roads are always in a pretty fair state, in spite of all the snow storms.

Our section men were ordered to work all Saturday night, and all day Sunday.

Sixty-five bags of mail matter was received at the Walkerton post-office last Saturday afternoon. This lot comprised the whole week's mail.

The Grand Trunk has a gang of forty Dunkhobours and Italians shovelling snow between Cargill and Southampton. The Dunks are all short, stout fellows, fair complexion, and nearly all look alike.

A demonstration the danger of cellu-loid combs took place in Staffa Hibbert township, when, at a literary society meeting, a comb worn by Mrs. G. G.
Wilson took fire. Her head and one hand were badly burned, although friends quickly rushed to her assistance.

The most disastrous fire that Berlin has ever experienced broke out there on Tuesday evening of last week and resulted in the total wiping out of the factories of the Berlin Felt Boot Company owned by ex-Mayor George Rumpel.
The two four-storey manufacturies are completely gutted. The loss on the property is over $100,000, with insurance of between $55,000 and $60,000
the bulk of it in English companies.

You may not get all that is coming to you in this world—but look out for the next.

Never ask a man how he likes married life in his wife's presence if you want to learn the truth.

At Stratford, Elias Meekin was convicted of manslaughter, for not calling in medical aid to his daughter, who died from typhoid.

Probably some men meander around all night for the purpose of satisfying themselves that there is no place like home.

Even with his wonderful memory, the oldest inhabitant is apt to forget that he had inflicted his reminiscences on everybody he knows.

A young woman at Geneva, six times widowed and only 27 years of age, has just signed her 7th marriage contract.
The deceased ones were of various nationalities and in their all too brief opportunities taught her to speak French, Russian and German. She ought to be able to keep up a fairly interesting chat with hubby No. 7.

The death of the empress dowager of China, which occurred the other day, may mark the beginning of a new era in that vast country. She has always been at the head of the party which has kept China chained to the customs of ancient centuries, and now that she is removed from the scene there is open rejoicing amongst the faction who have been advocating the modernization of that vast kingdom. Japan has shown what can be done by a little nation in a quarter of a century of civilization. If a similar result follows the education of the mighty Chinese Empire what will be the result upon the world.

GEMS OF IMPURE RAY.

Ladies Bank Their Jewels 'and Wear Doubles.

A few generations ago imitation gems were unheard of...

Society women rarely wear their real jewels—which are usually kept at the Bank of England or other safe deposits—but have them duplicated in such wonderful imitations that only an expert could detect the substitution.

A jeweler who makes a specialty of what he terms "jewelry of reconstructed gems," has worked up a large business in copying the famous necklaces, tiaras, ropes of pearls, and corsage ornaments belonging to famous beauties, grand dames, and American heiresses.

In the first place, he sends a man to his customer's home, who makes a careful drawing of each valuable piece of jewelry, and from this design an exact duplicate of the original is made for, generally, about one-fiftieth of the price of the real gems.

The mounting in this finer class of imitation jewelry is identical with that used in setting the real stones. Often small real diamonds are used for the clasp of a string of pearls which are made by a manufacturing chemist, and sometimes even reconstructed stones alternate with real gems.

At the Royal Courts, the opera, and State dinners a large percentage of the magnificent gems worn are products from the chemist's laboratory, costing anything from £50 to £200—perfect imitations of, in many instances, priceless gems.

A JAPANESE VIEW.

In the course of an interview which appears in "Cassel's Saturday Journal," Viscount Hayashi, the Japanese Minister in London says:

"There is something solid and dignified about the average Briton that never fails to impress me; England is so progressive. As a city I consider London unique. In the first place it is so large, yet so orderly and well governed. It is an example of what your laws, the love of justice, and the loyal spirit of a great people towards their country and King can produce.

As a foreigner from the Far East, I can assure you that London at once arrests attention. I know Paris is a fine city; so is Berlin, and, for that matter, St. Petersburg; but as an example of city government, I think I may use that term, London is a study."

The real secret of Britain's position amongst the nations of the world, in the Viscount's opinion, is her love of justice and her laws and the sincerity of her citizens.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Sick headache, indigestion, loss of vigor, failing memory, nervousness are all infallible signs of weakening nerves and indicate that your nerves lack rich blood with which to build up their broken tissues. Dr. Agnew's Heart Cure leads and strengthens the heart and gives it the power to send rich blood coursing through the veins, when most diseases disappear as by magic. It relieves heart disease in 30 minutes and is a wonderful cure.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE BEATEN AGAIN.

Mary Malcolm's Life Was Measured by Days and Hours.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Had Her Able to be Out in a Week.

Another Remarkable Cure Brought Out by the Collingwood and Eglington Cases.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—(Special).—The interest in medical circles here over the cures of Mrs. Adams, of Collingwood, and Mrs. Philip, of Eglington, of Bright's Disease, has been given fresh fuel by another and yet more startling cure of that same terrible ailment. This latest case is that of a young girl, Mary Malcolm, who lives with her parents at 199 Masborough Avenue, this city.

DEATH SEEMED SURE. This cure is little short of miraculous. Miss Malcolm was in the clutches of Bright's Disease from May until September, and had sunk so low that her life was measured by days if not by hours. Hope had given place to a certainty of death, and her friends had turned to the sad task of preparing her grave clothes. These last ghastly garments are now in the house, but Mary Malcolm is a strong hearty maiden who can look on them without even a shudder of fear. Dodd's Kidney Pills effected the change. Here is the story as told by the girl's mother, Mrs. W. Malcolm:

"My daughter, Mary, who is now fourteen years old, was taken suddenly ill with Bright's Disease in May, 1902. We had the doctor and continued with him till September, 1902, when he said he could do nothing more for her. She was so swollen with Dropsy as to be almost unrecognizable.

CURE WAS QUICK. "From a book dropped in at the door, we learned of Dodd's Kidney Pills and as a last resort determined to try them. They gave her relief from the very beginning, so much so that in one week we were able to take her out to Munro Park for an afternoon.

"After taking four boxes, she was entirely cured and she has never had the slightest relapse. We can never say too much for Dodd's Kidney Pills, as they certainly saved my daughter's life."

And Mary, the daughter on whom Bright's Disease had pronounced the sentence of death, now a picture of healthy girlhood, smiled a cheerful assent to her mother's statement and chimed in, "If I am ever sick again I will take nothing but Dodd's Kidney Pills."

It is hardly necessary to add that proof piled on proof has convinced the public that Bright's Disease is curable and that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the cure; that if the disease is of the Kidneys or from the Kidneys the one unfailing remedy is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

CORK IN EUROPE.

While Spain still yields 32,800 tons of cork annually, worth $6,000,000, Italy's production has decreased to 4,000 tons ($250,000 worth). Italy used to have splendid cork forests, but they have been felled for charcoal and for potash. Seventy-five years ago England's supply of corks came altogether from Italy.

She says: "I suffered untold misery from rheumatism—doctors' medicine did me no good—two bottles of South American Rheumatic Cure cured me—relief two hours after the first dose."—50

A TREE THAT GROWS DISHES.

There is a tree in the West Indies that the natives say "grows dishes!" It looks like an apple tree. They call it the calabash. It bears very queer leaves and large white blossoms that grow right from the trunk and larger branches. After the flower comes the fruit, just as our apples or peaches do. But this fruit is in the shape of a gourd, only stronger and much larger, sometimes a foot in diameter. Now, see what a use the people of that country make of this fruit. The shell is so hard that all sorts of big and little dishes and drinking cups can be carved out of it. Even pots and kettles are made and used over the fire, but, of course, they cannot, last as long as our iron ones.

SUNLIGHT SOAP REDUCES EXPENSE

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION. Damp lampblack will ignite from the sun's rays. The same can be said of cotton-waste moist with lard or other animal oil. Lampblack and a little oil or water will, under certain conditions, ignite spontaneously. Nitric acid and charcoal create spontaneous combustion. New printers' ink on paper, when in contact with a steam-pipe, will ignite quickly. Boiled linseed oil and turpentine in equal parts on cotton-waste will ignite in a few hours under a mild heat. Iron chips, filings, or turnings should not be stored in a shop in wooden boxes. The oily waste which is not infrequently thrown among them adds to the danger of fire from this source. The sweepings from the machine shop, if kept on-hand, should never be placed over iron shavings. This mass of disintegrated iron is enough to incite heat and

COUNTY AND DISTRICT.

Men don't as a rule like to lie; but their wives ask too many questions.

Senator Wark, of Fredericton, N. B. is the oldest legislator in the world. He was 100 years old last Friday.

The heirs of the late Mr. W. W. Hogg, of Paisley are trying to break the rather peculiar will left by that gentleman.

Over in the Albino colony, B. C. they get white bears, white crows, white minks, white kingfishers, white mallard ducks and white coons.

About three hundred new schools were started in the Northwest Territories during 1903. Most of these schools were filled by teachers from Ontario which explains in part the scarcity of teachers here.

A Milwaukee chemist discovered 99,000,000 bacteria on a dollar bill. If you have any bad ones that you want to get rid of, leave them at this office—we take them if they have 100,000,000 bacteria.

A letter dated in Walkerton, February 15, was received by a citizen a few days ago. It concludes as follows: "Awful cold weather, no coal, no coal oil, tobacco scarce, oatmeal a thing of the past, wells and pipes frozen up and still snowing and freezing—a fearful storm of snow blowing." Captain Bernier might get into polar form by organizing a relief expedition to Walkerton for practice.—Toronto Saturday Night.

A parrot and a dog were left in a room together. The parrot, out of mischief, said to the dog, "Sit him!" The dog seeing nothing else, went for the parrot and tore out about half his tail feathers before he escaped to his perch. The parrot after looking himself over and reflecting a little while said, "Poll you talk too much." There are many people old and young, who would do well to remember this story.

An exchange says: Girls employed in post offices are, as a rule, not famed for civility or attention to the public whom they are paid to serve. A man went to an office to buy some stamps and found a young woman with her elbows on the table gazing in abstraction into space. After waiting a few seconds he took off his hat and said in a deeply reverential manner: "Madam if you are engaged in prayer I will wait till you have finished." She attended him at once with an angry sparkle in her eye.

What appears to be a case of death by freezing, or foul play, was discovered at Oliphant six miles west of Warton on Sunday morning. An old lady named Mrs. Cochrane was found dead by her bedside, frozen stiff. For years the old lady has lived a secluded and, some say, a miserly existence, in a little shanty in the woods. She was the possessor of a good bank account, but it was generally supposed she did not keep any of her wealth in the cabinet. The severity of the recent storm and her helplessness made it probable that she was a victim of the weather. There was no wood and little to eat in the house. Inquest will be held.

It will be well if the war now in progress is confined to Russia and Japan. Chinese pirates are annoying ships of commerce, and may commit some acts that will lead to reprisals. Europe is excited—Spain is preparing; Germany practically assures Russia of her sympathy in the struggle, while on Saturday, Paris the gay capital of France was wild with excitement. Carefully watching the trend of events, Britain is on the alert, and preparations for the worst are in progress. To add to the unrest, the Albanians and Turks are fighting. Turkey is mobilizing a large force in Macedonia, and the Macedonians are getting ready. It seems as though but a spark was needed to set the whole of Europe aflame with war. While China at present is neutral, a leading official says that in one day she could abandon her neutrality. She has 30,000 troops ready to dash into the conflict, and as Russia took Manchuria from her, China may at any moment decide to assist the Japanese and secure her own territory again.

John Doig's Strange Experience.

The Listowel Standard tells a strange story at some length. In brief it is as follows:—John Doig of Fordwich drove to Listowel on Jan 29th. He sold a horse and intended, he said, to go home by train. To do this he would of course have to make connection with some point on the C. P. R., but instead of doing this he boarded a train going to Stratford. He had upwards of $100 on him. Nothing was heard of him for two weeks, when he turned up at the farm of his brother near Molesworth at two o'clock in the morning. He was and still is in a dazed condition and can give no account of where he spent the interval. His money was gone and he wore different clothing from that he went away with. Was he kidnapped?

All foreigners not authorized to reside in Spain are to be expelled under a new Government order with regard to anarchists.

The grants to public schools will in future be based on the salaries paid to teachers, and equipment, not on attendance as heretofore.

A Sullivan man recently killed a pig that had no heart. Where that organ should be there was a swelling of the main artery.

Mr. Waller, excise officer at Palmerton, committed suicide last week. His family was away at the time and he had been drinking heavily for a few days. A gun was discharged by the pressure of a poker on the trigger, while the victim lay on the sofa, and the charge pierced his heart.

A peculiar species of swindle has been in operation in western Ontario for some time. The police of various cities have received numerous letters about it, but as yet have done nothing. The writers of these letters say, that a very obliging agent called on them, took a photo of one of their dear ones, promised to return and departed. Generally he did return with a beautifully finished proof. Of course the bereaved ones in the family circle were enraptured with the proof and hurriedly dug up the necessary amount for a dozen or so of the finished product fully believing that the completed pictures would be sent. The smiling agent gracefully wrote out a receipt and walked off the money. And the cause of all the letters is that the agent never puts in an appearance again, nor does the finished product of the art company land in the homes. It is thought the headquarters of the company is in Hamilton.

Owen Sound council is after the cigarette business with a sharp stick and has passed a by-law making a license fee $250 per annum to sell them. The people voted upon it and carried the by-law by a majority of 450. It would be a good move for the sake of the youth if other places followed this example and thus practically shut off the sale of any enemy to every boy's welfare.

INCOME OF THE FAMILY CUT OFF.

Appeal from Friends on Behalf of a Poor Consumptive.

The following letter from an eastern town, addressed to the Secretary of the National Sanitarium Association, Toronto, explains itself:—"What steps require to be taken to place a consumptive patient in the Free Consumption Hospital? We have a poor man here who has consumption. He has a wife and family of five children. He has been sick and off work for four months already. The only source of income of the family has been cut off. I think the father would be better if he had the proper care, but here in the midst of his family it is impossible to give him proper treatment. If we can place him in the Consumption Hospital for care and treatment, then the people here can manage to look after the family until he is restored to health. He is able to go around, but is very weak."

We publish this letter to illustrate how great is the need for the Free Hospital for Poor Consumptives, established by the National Sanitarium Association at Muskoka. Just one year ago the first patient—a woman from Naples—was admitted into the hospital, and since then 169 patients have found a home within its walls. A great number of these are wholly unable to pay anything towards their maintenance, whilst the average from those who pay is less than one-half the cost of maintenance. There is no endowment, and the Trustees depend solely in the making up of the large deficit each month on the contributions of kind friends. With the increasing numbers seeking admission to the hospital, should the subscriptions continue to run short, as they have been doing for the past three months, the Trustees will have no recourse open to them but to close some of the wards. Sir Wm. E. Meredith, Kt., Vice-President of the Association, and Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee, will receive subscriptions for this much needed work.

The stringency in the news print paper market is getting more marked day by day, and a famine of paper is feared by publishers of the big dailies all over Canada. The severe winter has frozen up, or partly frozen up the water power of the pulp and paper mills, and the deep snow in the woods prevents the lumbermen from getting out the usual supply of pulp logs. In addition the war has stimulated the demand for daily papers and caused a much increased consumption.

The special committee of Huron County Council recommended, with reference to the communication from the counties of Kent, Elgin and Northumberland relating to the County Council Act amendments—That the present system of election of county councillors remain as it is under the Municipal Act of 1896, believing that the Act as it now stands is giving very general satisfaction.

Booker T. Washington, speaking recently of the many objections which negroes raise to an industrial education when it is first attempted, told this story:—"You know," said he "there are always persons who object, like the old colored deacon down in Alabama, who was hindering the growth of the church to which he belonged by protesting against every move for progress. Finally a special prayer service was held over him, and a brother prayed that Brother Simon might be purged of wickedness, his heart be swept clean of sin, and that he might then be taken into the New Jerusalem." "And then Brother Simon arose and said: 'I objec' to that'—Boston Post.

Some time ago the question of a divorce law for Canada was being discussed. If it should arise again, the following particulars regarding divorce in the State, as compared with that in this country, given by Mr. W. S. Harwood in the Toronto World should not be lost sight of: "If divorces in the United States during the three decades from 1867 to 1901 had been the same per capita as in Canada there would have been less than two thousand in the entire country. In other words, the divorces granted in the United States would have been reduced by 668,000. This enormous difference, appalling in its suggestion of national laxity, indeed to some, of national depravity, has perhaps, never been seriously considered by the people of the United States. The divorces of Canada have been secured upon the one fundamental ground of infidelity. Those secured in the United States have been granted upon grounds so many and so diverse, one hesitates from which standpoint to approach them—ridicule, pity, scorn or contempt."

A WOMAN'S LOVE

OR, A BROTHER'S PROMISE

CHAPTER IX.

It was nigh dawn when Hector and Alasdair turned their horses into the down-sloping road, six fathoms deep, with lava-grit, that wound between great chevaux-de-frise of flowered and fruited cactus, and ended in the cup of Caldera, the insurgent headquarters. On this hand on that pinnacles and masses of extinct volcanoes frowned and glowered, the deep shadows of them charged heavy with the mystery that broods for ever where life has been and is not. In front of them and behind the hollow where lay their halting-place, towered the mighty steps of the Grande Monte. The guiding stars paled fast, and through the gorges that cut seaward came ever and anon a following breath, cool and fresh and new, the breath of morning. The topmost peaks took the sun; their grey-black, and deep black, and black of death changed into wavering splashes of purple and yellow and amber and fitful crimson that slid down the gigantic lava glacis as water slips over smooth stone; and up from the hidden hollows crept quiet, unexpected little wisps of gossamer mist, to climb and climb until the quickening blue gathered them to itself, and they were no more. Cocks began to crow lustily, and once or twice came the tinkle of a chapel bell and the call of a herd to his goats. Down and down fell the light into the valleys, and down with it rode Hector and his foster-brother.

In the burning ages Caldera ("the Cauldron") was the crater of the vast volcano that is now Palmetto. Miles across and miles deep, it is a perfect cup. The sides are terraced with vineyards, cut with carefully guarded paths, and brilliant as Joseph's coat with patches of bright color, while at the bottom nestles a round of tender green, dotted in the centre with three tiny houses washed white and pale pink. On the right, like a broad streak of grey paint, runs from bottom to top a bar of unrelieved granite, half a mile wide—a ladder, whose perfect steps rise at intervals of three hundred yards or so. This is Atalaya, the home of the pierced by shallow niches, where dwell some three or four thousand barbarous mountain folk, exclusive, poor, and proud—the same to-day as when Columbus touched there on his westward way—making with the simple craft of savages common pottery of porous clay for sale in Palm City, and subsisting mainly on coarse onions and coarse crusts. Even such poor devils as these were not beneath the notice of the Hispaniolan tax-gatherer; a water-jar of their rough make they sold for two pence, half of which the Hispaniolan took. So there was small love lost between them—a word would set the Atalayas fighting-readly.

Not to the pink and white amid the green did the two riders turn. Keeping well to the left of the little fields, they held on for a split in the face of a grey cliff. Day was now full on the heights, yet down here, in all sorts of nooks and gullies, night lingered. Ten minutes' smart trotting brought them to the beginning of the gap, where they dismounted and led the horses over the boulders of a baranco. For a hundred yards or so they walked, then the mountain seemed to close above them, and all in front was darkness. Suddenly out of the black flared a torch. For this they made.

A man came to meet them: short, stout, stubby-bearded and fiery-eyed. "Sanor Grant," he cried. "San Bernardo bless you!"

"You did not expect me, Colonel Torrielli?"

"No, by the Virgin! Not now. We have had never a word of you for three or four days, so I was looking for a surprise visit. But you find me ready. The regiment of Figueras is here. We have been busy all night, I can tell you. I am hoarse as a raven. Difficult—yes, it is difficult to instruct five hundred men when you have but twenty rifles for the lot. But I have got over that. Ah! sanor, if we only had their hands as itching for the guns. One night with the real article, and they will face any force double their number—face them and thrash them. They can shoot, you know, our heroes; but Mausers are different from fowling-pieces. Yet even knowledge of fowling-pieces tells."

As he talked they entered the cave. In a side nook near the entrance they left their tired horses. Far the cave stretched, and high it lifted, and all was black as the jaws of night, save for the flare of half a dozen torches set in iron loops clamped into the solid rock. Full a hundred yards wide was the cave, and it was at least the same in height. They walked between two rows of sleeping men, four deep: men in the dress of quartermasters, vine-dressers, carpenters, house-builders, goat-herds, and so on: sleeping soundly on the hard floor, worn out with their military exercises. Torrielli had been in the Hispaniolan army, and he had no notion of how to husband the strength of his men; and besides, he knew the time was short, so he worked them hard.

Half-way down the lane of slumbering men, Hector stopped. It was to Alasdair he spoke, and he used the Gaelic, the speech of his youth, the speech he never used save when he was moved beyond his wont. (It is strange that though a Scottish Highlander may not have used his mother-tongue for many years, let him be stirred to his utmost feeling, and out wells the Gaelic, either to height of love or to hell of hate; tender in endearment or fierce in imprecation, and in either vehemence unapproachable.) And truly this was a scene that might have moved a pessimist of pessimists, a cynic of cynics. Like children they slept; every characteristic expression of the day, all hopes and fears, all anxieties and perturbations, all personal attributes of vanity and arrogance or weakness and cowardice, sublimated and resolved by the magic of sleep: Maddalena and Palmetto forgotten; sleep their only queen, their only country drowsiness. And over their dark masses, where only the scarlet or bright blue of a faja made half contrasts, fell the fitful flare of the torches, hiding more than revealing—on the breast of one a crucifix, on the breast of the next the tattooed name of his sweetheart, on the cheek of a boyish third the faint down of dawning manhood, on the uncovered head of a fourth the whitening hair of age. And all these thoughts Hector, are ready to yield a life-blood for Maddalena, a woman, a queen on whom they had never gazed—to yield it for love of liberty—material benefits, the calculating cynic would say; and Maddalena, a mere shilboleth, would say the same cynic.

With a wide wave of the arm Hector indicated the slow-breathing sleepers to Alasdair; and in Gaelic: "See, Alasdair, brother of my heart, they will fight for her, they will die for her. Father, mother, wife, children, all they give for the queen—those that have not seen her, these that have not seen, and I that have seen, that know—"

Alasdair's single eye glowed like a coal, and in Gaelic he too, spoke. "God be good to thee, Hector, son of my mother's breast, that hast drunk of my mother's milk, the madness is on thee too. Is it indeed she?"

"She it is, Alasdair, and none other. Thou speakest of madness, and true is thy every word. Madness it is, yet better the foolishness of the wise than the wisdom of the foolish. O! man, Alasdair, when thou lookest upon her, the marrow shall melt in thy bones, and the spirit go out of thee to a breath to cool her brow; thou shalt be servant of her, even as I, ghillie and cup-bearer and shield and footstool, yet lord of all men that love her not."

"Yea, yea," answered Alasdair. "Is she then so fair?"

"Fair!" laughed Hector. "I had thought that in the old tongue I could say anything, could tell thee of the sun and of the moon and the stars, and the red heart of life; but even the old tongue is savorless and empty to utter one little thing of the fairness of Maddalena. All the stars of night are in her eyes, all the tenderness of night is in her hair, all the kingdoms of the earth are in the cup of her little hand. Yet is not her fairness the only snare; she is a saint for purity and a woman for warmth in one; the glamor of the fairies, the wise ones, is upon her, yet is her breast the house for a man's heart. O! man, Alasdair, I'm a bairn that wants the bonnie star, and a king that despises the earth. By God! my father's son would not be more."

"Your father's son could not be less," said Alasdair. "Maybe, maybe. O! man, there's no pleasure in life without her. The day is dark, and there is no peace in the night: I can but bear in mind that I have touched her hand, and that the grace of her loveliness was upon me. For any man that is enough: it is more than enough for me, whose heart was a wood of withered trees until she looked upon it, and it grew as full of singing birds as Rothiemurchus Forest at the pairing time."

"And the Queen," said Alasdair, laying his hand on his brother's arm, "has she no mind towards thee and thou a Grant?"

Hector smiled sadly at that last little touch of Highland pride. "Queens do not mate with their ghillies, Alasdair. I am no more than that Tush! do not answer me, I am no more than that. When thou shalt have seen her, had been caught up for a moment in the soft summer of her eyes, thou wilt understand how a man asks no better fate than to be the stool for her feet, than to be the least one of those that die to pleasure here."

For the first time since Hector had set eyes on Maddalena, and had felt the thrill of her in his blood, he gave utterance to the full thoughts that were in him: before there was none to whom he could speak; now he had Alasdair, and the old happy tongue of boyhood, the rare language of dream and honey-sweet mysteries and blood-close bonds, the speech of strange lyrical intonings, bore him and his heart and his passion as on a spring spate, and flung him high to the very heavens. This free confession of his surrender to the divine dream of Maddalena eased him, and gave him the deepest pleasure his life had known.

The past, in that moment among the sleeping hundreds, faded and was gone: nought but Maddalena stayed. The years of youth made the background against which the Queen stood radiant: the years of toil and struggle, the years of brain-sapping routine in London, the years of uneventful plod—these were blown out of sight and mind as a common curl of smoke. Remained only the beauty of youth, the dreams of it, long days among the heather, long nights on the lochan, memories of Dee and Don, of King's old Crown and rooks cawing in the elms of Chanony; remained these only—these, and the Queen. That was all his life had to show; the rest was naught; that was good, and of men he was proudest. The future was to come; death was sure, and love, and some share of fighting. The greatest can have no more, and if they but will, the meanest need have no less.

"But has she no mind towards thee?" persisted Alasdair.

"Have I not answered thee, blind mole?" said Hector with a laugh. "Queens do not mate with their ghillies."

"Happiness comes not always of mating: I did not speak of that. O! Hecke, man, I would make a supper off my dirk to please thee, and I would have all the world, and the queens of it, of the same mind."

"Brother of mine, we be all creatures of a dream: and what is true and what is not true we know not. But I have looked in her heart—O! the fair place it is—like a bed of roses in a garden of the hills, and I saw growing there the flower that shall yet lie on my breast for remembrance—roses of love and roses of sorrow."

"God save us! Saw ye that?"

"I said that we be all creatures of a dream, and what is true and what is not true, we know not. But that I saw."

"May the day be far, Hector, that shared my mother's milk."

"May the day be soon, Alasdair, son of the breast that suckled me."

"Even if that be thy pleasure, God give it thee!"

THE GREAT SMITH FAMILY.

It Beats the Joneses, the Browns, and all Others.

If numbers make for greatness then is the Smith family incontestably the greatest of all the families inhabiting these islands says the London Daily Mail.

The price of Smith is writ large upon the pages of the new Post Office London Directory, for in the "court" sections are enshrined the names of 504 Smiths, to which may be added 21 Smyths, and 9 Smythes. There are individually recorded here 36 ladies whose sole appellation is plain "Mrs. Smith."

At the head of the family list stand a Judge, a Baronet, 2 Knights, 2 Members of Parliament, an Admiral, 3 Colonels, 1 Lieutenant-Colonel, 1 Major, 4 Captains and 13 Reverends, all of the name of Smith.

In the much larger "commensal" section of the directory are found eighteen columns of Smiths, each containing the names of about ninety individual Smiths; so we may take it that there are at least 1,600 Smiths inhabiting the commercial world of London.

A large number of permutations and combinations of Smith are to be found. Thus we have Smith and Smyth, or, with the addition of the genteel "e," Smythe and Smythes. In the plural we have Smiths, Smithes, Smythes, Smythies. In the comparative degree, Smithier, Smithest, and Smyther; there is also the active forms Smithem, Smithem, and Smithett, also Smithson and Smithson.

Foreign forms are Smit, Schmit, Schmitt, Schmid, Schmitz and Smith. There are doubtless other variants, but the above are all that the eye of the untrained man is likely to detect, further differentiation may be left to Smith experts.

The Joneses muster but 295, of whom 42 are plain "Mrs. Jones." There are 203 persons named Brown besides three named Browns and 57 Browns. The Robinsons are nowhere, by comparison.

NONE SUCH.

"I'm looking for a painless dentist. Can you recommend one?"

"I never knew any that didn't hurt at least once."

"When is that?"

"When his bill comes in."

"I remember your wife as such a dainty and pretty little thing, Humly, and yet they tell me she has turned out a fine cook." "Turned out a fine cook? She has turned out half-a-dozen of them within the last three months."

"I don't doubt that the readin' of it's all right," said the customer, "but it ain't the book I'm looking for—the cover don't suit me." "My dear sir," said the bookseller, "will you kindly describe just the book you're after?" "Well, to be plain with you, I want a book that will do to put in a handsome new house."

LION AND TIGER HUNTERS

LADIES WHO RIVAL MEN IN THIS GREAT SPORT.

Society Queens Who Have Hunted Big Game in the World's Wilds.

In these advanced days one need never be surprised to learn that the lady whose grace and charm are the admiration of West-end drawing-rooms is still more in her element when shooting big game in India or the Rockies, leading the field over a stiff country in the wake of the hounds, wrestling with salmon in Scottish rivers, or tramping, gun in hand, over leagues of moorland says London Tit-Bits.

Few men have such a record of adventure in pursuit of big game as Mrs. Alan Gardner, the pretty and charming wife of Colonel Alan Gardner, who a score of times has had nothing betwixt her and death but the barrel of her gun. She has shot fierce tigers in India—indeed, she has written a thrilling account of "A Day with the Tigers"—lions in India, Nepal, and Assam, and bears in North America. She has led for months at a time the rough life of a wandering hunter in Somaliland, Abyssinia, and Australia; has stalked deer and caught record salmon in Scotland; and yet, true to the strange contradiction of her sex, she is noted for her skill in delicate needlework and as a delightful society hostess.

But Mrs. Gardner has a fair and formidable rival in the Duchess of Somerset, who has spent many a delightful month roughing it with her husband among the wilds of the Rocky Mountains, tracking and shooting grizzlies and revelling in the wild life so graphically pictured by

FENIMORE COOPER.

Another duchess who is an expert with the pen, and who, indeed, has few superiors even among men, is her Grace of Bedford, who as a girl was noted throughout India for her skill and daring as a markswoman. The Duchess is a true sportswoman, who scorns to have her game driven, and is supremely happy when tramping the moors in search of it in the company of her husband and dogs.

But now-a-days the list of society women who are clever shots, and who can bring down a stag or pheasant as well as most men, is a formidable one. The Duchess of Hamilton and Lady Tweedmouth are rival queens among deer-stalkers, and it is difficult to say which of them has the greatest number of the finest stags to her credit; and among other shots almost equally good are the Comtesse de Paris, the pioneer of lady-shots in England, the Marchioness of Breadalbane, and Adeline Duchesse of Bedford.

Of famous lady-anglers the name is legion. The Duchess of Fife, an enthusiastic and skillful angler, holds the record for the greatest number of salmon ever caught by a woman in one day. The Countess of Wilton once took 120 lb. weight of barbel from the Thames within three hours, thus establishing a record for lady wielders of the rod.

SOUTH OF THE TWEED.

Ever since Lady Annesley landed, at her first trial, a 12 lb. salmon, she has been one of the keenest of anglers, and spends months every year with her rod in Scotland and Ireland. Lady Westmorland has had a wonderfully successful career as an angler, and little, if at all, less expert are the Duchesses of Portland and Bedford, Lady Limerick, and Lady Bridge, while possibly the best lady-fisher in the three kingdoms is Miss O'Connell, sister of Sir Daniel O'Connell, of Killarney.

When our grandmothers were young the very suggestion that a lady could, under any circumstances, be a mistress of hounds would have sent them in horror to their smelling salts, and yet to-day it is recognised as quite a proper thing that a woman should fill this essentially masculine office; and that she fills it excellently there can be no doubt.

There is no more daring follower of the hounds in Wales than Mrs. T. H. R. Hughes, who took over the control of the Neuddiar Foxhounds on her husband's death, and who, a season ago, swam her horse across a swollen river, while the rest of the company, men and all, made a cautious detour over Llunfair Bridge. The Duchess of Newcastle has for many years been "master" of a fine pack of hounds at Clumter, which

SHE HANDLES SPLENDIDLY.

Miss Edith Somerville has proved as clever a master as her Grace of Newcastle since she has controlled the West Carbery Foxhounds, her own pack; and she has rivals in Ireland in several lady masters and whips of harriers, such as Miss Isa McCintock, Mrs. Stapoole, and Mrs. Brisco.

Lady Hecq Campbell, who is certainly one of the pluckiest huntswomen in England, is a master of harriers, and a story is told of how, when three men armed with stones defied her to pass over a certain gate, she tossed her head with a laugh, shook her horse's reins, and took a flying leap over the gate, to the open-mouthed amazement of its custodians.

Lady Gifford has acted as "master of the hunt," both in Sussex and Northumberland, for many a season; Mrs. Cheape, the popular Worcestershire "Squire," and one of the finest horsewomen living has for many years been master of the Bently Harriers; and among other well-known lady-hunters of recent years are Mrs. Fryse-Rice, who acts as her own "huntswoman" in Cambridgeshire and Miss Hilda Lloyd Price, the finest horsewoman in Wales, who has for long acted as whip to her father's harriers.

THE PLOTTERS OF SIBERIA.

In Exile the Russian Revolutionist is a Conspirator.

Siberia is not exempt from the spirit of insubordination so strongly manifested throughout Russia, says the London Times. The exiles, as well as the general population, are striving to organize resistance against the authorities. The number of escapes and attempted escapes is increasing. Helping hands are extended on all sides. In England and in other countries money is collected and sent to Siberia so as to facilitate the escape of political prisoners.

The jailers themselves and the troops or police are sometimes purposely careless in the execution of their duties. That some persons in authority sympathize with the revolutionists is further demonstrated by the fact that a recent circular, though headed "absolutely secret," has nevertheless fallen into revolutionist hands. It is entitled:—"Instructions given to the Governor of the province by His Excellency the Governor-General of the town of Irkutsk, Count Koutayssoff, in 1893." This document is worded as follows, and it gives a picture of what this high official himself thinks of the present situation:

"According to the reports concerning the surveillance of the political exiles who have reached the place of their exile and who are there submitted to public control, I remark that their frequent escapes and the unauthorized journeys they make, going even beyond Siberia, are due to the lack of proper watchfulness. The authorities content themselves with sending official reports. According to the information supplied, taking as a basis the reports of the Department of Police of Aug. 1 and Sept. 14 last, which are numbered 7,201 and 8,205, it is easy to see that the exiles have direct relations with the revolutionary league. They take an active part in the criminal work done in Siberia by the League committees. The object, therefore, for which these persons were exiled has not been attained.

The lack of proper watchfulness is more particularly evident in the districts of Minusinsk and Atchinsk, which are within the government. At Ensisseik not only do the exiles often escape or travel to other places without being authorized to do so, but it has been clearly shown that the exiles Krackoff, Dr. Heyelna, Pokrovsky, Arkhanguelsky, and others entertained direct relations with labor groups.

"In order to put an end to the criminal action of the political exiles I recommend all the police agents in the country who are under my authority to watch continually the private life of the exiles. For this purpose a police must be organized for the surveillance of all places to which exiles are sent. This police must draw up a daily report on each exile according to the accompanying formula. Those individuals who by their manner of living give rise to the suspicion that they are acting for criminal groups should be subjected without warning to examination. The commissioner of police of the district should give orders for these examinations, indicating at the same time their motive. The examinations should be made frequently. It is absolutely necessary to read the entire correspondence of the political exiles. Individuals who are suspected of bad political intentions must not be allowed to live in the same houses as the exiles, but should be sent away from the exiles' quarters."

HE'D LICK TOMMY.

Teacher—Bobby, if your father gave you three cents and gave your brother Tommy five cents, what would it make?

Bobby—Trouble.

"What is the matter?" asked lawyer of his coachman. "The horses are running away, sir." "Can't you pull them up?" "I'm afraid not." "Then," said the lawyer, after a judicial delay, "run them into some thing cheap."

FARM-FIELD AND GARDEN

IMPROVEMENT OF STOCK.

To the farmer who has his land in good condition to furnish what is necessary for the proper care of live stock, and has become convinced that it would be to his advantage to make a start in the work, the next question is, how shall I begin? This looks like an easy question to answer, but it is not, as it must be settled with due regard to his financial standing and other circumstances connected with his surroundings. If he does not have capital to buy good stock, he at least has time to grow it, so that he must determine which he shall depend upon most in his work. If he decides in favor of time he will, as a rule, find it the safest plan, as very few men can go into the market with a sum of money, purchase freely in any line of stock, and feel entirely satisfied with the result. We have seen a good many herds and flocks started in that manner, and many proved failures. Those that did not were saved by changing their breeding stock after they had learned to buy what they wanted and not what the other man wanted to sell. To the man who starts in slowly, and studies the business carefully, there is little danger of loss and good opportunities for doing

A PROFITABLE BUSINESS.

If the farmer has some ordinary native, or unimproved female stock on hand, progress is comparatively easy and not at all expensive when the returns are considered. He purchases or uses the improved sires owned by his neighbors of the particular breed he thinks most suitable for his purposes. Having made the first cross he should stick to the same breed, selecting each time some of the best females to add to his flock or herd, and replace others that are not up to his standard. If sires are carefully chosen each succeeding cross will show an improvement, and by the time he has females with four straight crosses of an improved breed, he has animals that are practically as useful to the farmer as if they were pure bred. His added cost to secure such animals, compared with the unimproved stock would have cost him, would be in a little better feeding, the cost for use of improved sires, and better shelter than is usually given scrub stock. This would only be a small part of the benefit he would receive from the improvement he had made. Whether the improvement had been made in cattle, sheep or hogs the results would be equally good. Meanwhile he had learned the business of caring for the stock, making the best selections for carrying on the work of improvement, and at a minimum of cost. This is the safest plan for the new beginner, and substitutes time, which he has, for money that he does not have. He does not run in debt and have to pay interest. The danger is that he will not persistently follow the course and will shift from one breed to another so that his stock becomes mongrelized, and no better for practical purposes than when he first began its improvement. Or he may get a half-blood male that looks so good that he decides to breed to him, and a greater mistake could not be made, as the progeny is nearly certain to show more of the scrub dam than of the half-blood sire.

FIRST MARKED OUT

It should always be borne in mind that unimproved animals, or scrubs, are strongly bred, as they are the result of their environment. They have been neglected, and nature, which never makes mistakes, adapts them for their surroundings. The more they are neglected the more worthless they become to man, and the better fitted they become to stand hardships and privations. Thus the improved heifer if turned loose in the woods, in a few generations becomes a razor-back, the Shorthorn or Hereford lean, gaunt and muscular as a Texan long horn, and the mutton sheep gains in speed and activity at the expense of fleece and mutton. The tendency of all live stock is to revert to its natural condition when left care for itself, and the Holstein Jersey that gave milk nine or ten months in the year, in a few generations dries up as soon as its calf weaned. It has been the skill of the breeder, added to shelter and generous feeding that has given us the improved breeds of live stock, and made them so valuable as producers of

FOOD AND CLOTHING.

As soon as the feed becomes scant and no shelter is provided, the animal reverts to its natural form, and while enabled to maintain itself unable to do any more. The conditions that produced the improvement in the first place must be continued or all that has been gained will be thrown away. It is therefore important that the farmer arrange to provide food and shelter before starting to improve his stock, for if he does not he will never realize much benefit from his work.

Good live stock on a farm has a moral influence that should not be ignored. Its tendency is to make better farmers, and to interest the farmer and his family in improving their surroundings. It also develops sociability, for good cattle or sheep, or hogs, will always draw the attention of neighbors. It also acts as a strong incentive for the farmer to improve their stock also. Good stock, therefore, is always doing missionary work in a neighborhood, and is a benefit to the entire community. A good farmer will not long be content with scrub stock, nor will a scrub farmer ever keep improved stock. If he starts in, one or two things will happen, either the farm improves or the stock deteriorates and soon becomes worthless. The kind of stock a farmer keeps is therefore a pretty good index of the kind of farming he is doing.

FERTILITY OF ORCHARDS.

From an article on fruit growing by a correspondent, we take the following remarks on the necessity of keeping up the fertility of the soil in orchards:

"We have often heard the question asked as to what would be the best fertilizer for orchards, and I know in many cases the answer has been brains. Now in the use of brains as a fertilizer I think we would do something more expensive than commercial fertilizer, as we call it. We cannot make a free use of their brains in studying out what they shall do. The soil and the plant food it contains are something like a bank. As long as your deposit is good your checks are honored, and the larger your deposit the better your credit. We can see from this that the soil is a kind of storehouse for plant food to be taken up and used by the crops. The soil where we grow trees has been mostly derided of by the breaking down of the rocks, although there is an immense amount of plant food there, very few of which are in available form food more than enough to last two or three years and give maximum crops. The thing for us to do is to learn how to get the most food out of this soil and how to have at all times an ample supply. You have many times been told what kind of food plants need. Chemists have told us we want some potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen, and of course these are required. We find, however, something more than this in the soil, and the fruit grower calls it humus.

The case of Mrs. Husband is not unlike scores and hundreds which are repeated to us. There can be no better evidence as to the thoroughness and effectiveness of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mrs. E. Husband, Moore street, St. Catharines, Ont., states:—"I was seriously afflicted with indigestion and stomach trouble for sixteen years. Finally I became so bad that I could scarcely eat anything without suffering terrible distress. Gradually I grew weaker and more emaciated; and though treated by three doctors and a specialist I received no benefit.

"After a time a pain began in the right side, which medical men said was liver trouble. I never got relief until I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and they helped me at once. By using about a dozen boxes I was entirely cured. I owe my cure entirely to this treatment and make this statement with confidence and hope that some poor sufferer may benefit by my experience."
