FUTILE ATTEMPTS

Of German Press and Officials to Place Britain in Bad Order.

WITH UNITED STATES BEING MADE

By Misrepresenting Lord Pauncefote's Position Taken.

IN SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR

The Situation of Britain at the Time Fully Explained by Statement From Washington.

London, Feb. 12.—A deliberate at- tempt on the part of the German press and officials to prejudice the United States' opinion against Britain by the statement that Lord Pauncefote made repeated attempts to bring concerted pressure to prevent the Spanish war is explained from Washington. The British ambassador's action was not as a representa- tive of his government, but as dean of the diplomatic corps on request of the Austrian representative to submit his proposals to the various powers and endeavor to enlist their co- operation. Pauncefote said from the first nothing could result.

LOST HIS CABBAGES

Government Horses Made Raid on Walter's Garden at Eagle City.

IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD 1900

Since Which Time He Has Striven to Collect Damages

WITH LITTLE SATISFACTION

Today's Telegram Says Mr. Walter's Will Be Paid if He Lives Long Enough.

Seattle, Feb. 12.—Away back in November, 1900, O. H. Walters of Eagle City found that a herd of government horses had broken into his corral and enjoyed 200 of his cabbages. He presented a bill to the government for $20, and it was formally approved by Acting Regimental Quartermaster of the Seventh Infantry. Ever since that bill with accumulating memoranda has been going from department to department at Washington until it is now as copu- lent as a congressional record. Its last appearance was in the depart- ment of war, from whence the secre- tary sent it back to Col. Bird with the advice that a special bill would be presented to congress for its satis- faction, no department owning re- sponsibility and none disputing that Walters should be paid. A despatch from Washington today announces that it has been laid before the house committee on claims and notes "Mr. Walters will get his money if he lives long enough."

TIMBER RESOURCES.

It is gratifying to note the fact that the timber resources of this territory are far more extensive and valuable than was believed in the earlier days.

Along the tributaries of the Yukon, however, there are still splendid bodies of forest growth sufficient if properly protected to supply all demands for many years to come.

The timber which has thus far been taken from the Klondike and Stewart districts has come almost entirely from the immediate vicinity of the streams themselves.

When a proper system is introduced into the working of the lumber industry it will be found that thousands of acres of splendid timbered land will become immediately available.

In the meanwhile it only remains that proper care be taken to insure some measure of protection against the forest fires which in previous years have invariably prevailed during the summer.

There is plenty of timber in the territory if the sources of supply are sufficiently safeguarded.

The visit of Commissioner Ross to the capital should be productive of a vast amount of good for the territory. Mr. Ross has been in Dawson sufficiently long to acquaint himself with a great many of the most vital needs of the district and it may be taken for granted that his influence will be exerted at Ottawa for the betterment of local conditions.

President Roosevelt has declined to approve his own promotion to a brevet rank. In view of the fact that under the constitution the president of the United States is commander-in-chief of both the army and navy, it does not appear that Mr. Roosevelt will suffer in consequence of his modesty.

GRAVES OF CANADIANS

Killed and Buried in South Africa

The Nugget is reliably informed that the opening of summer will see one mill of at least 45 stamps running full blast. When such evidence begins to accumulate, the claims of this camp as a producer of ore will command a respectful hearing in every money centre in the world.

The words of the late President McKinley, uttered at Buffalo on the day preceding the one on which he was shot, seemed almost to have been prophetic. His successor has accepted the policies as outlined in McKinley's speech as indicating his own lines of action, and is following them out almost to the letter.

Dr. Alfred Thompson has taken a position with reference to the result of the late election which will commend that gentleman to the good graces of the entire community.

It is about time that some enterprising merchant should open a guessing contest on the date when the ice will break up in the Yukon. The announcement of such a contest is usually the earliest harbinger of spring.

The Prince of Profanity.

"Speaking of the generous use of cuss words," said the old conductor, "I allow old Bill Magillcuddy was about the commanding general of the grand army of profanity. Old Bill lived up Tray way, which may account for his peculiarity. But that's neither here nor there."

"I asked the man why he didn't live in a civilized land, and he asked me what was the matter. I told him how long it had taken me to reach him. 'You could have got here in fifteen minutes from the Twenty-third street ferry, New York side,' he said."

"You've circled the city when you could have come in a straight line. And that's all the satisfaction I got."

"So, as I say, I don't much blame old Bill for using language when he had to visit Brooklyn. I remember the last time he was down here. He was going back to Troy on my train. He had just come from Brooklyn, and he was making the air of the coach so blue it looked like a smoking car, which it wasn't. In the same car was a ministerial looking chap, who listened in horror to Bill's talk."

"The ministerial fellow stood it for a while, but finally, after the car started and Bill grew more and more profane, he stepped over to Magillcuddy and said, holding out a warning finger, 'Do you know, my poor friend, you are on the road to hell?'"

"Bill started out of his seat as if he had been shot. 'Just my dashed luck,' he said. 'I just bought a ticket for Troy.'"—N. Y. Herald.

THE PEOPLE HAVE WON THE FIRST ROUND

EDWIN HARRIS RELEASED

Only to Be Rearrested For Robbery.

Edward Mortimer, Held on Charge of Theft, to Be Heard Today.

Edwin Harris, who has been held at the barracks for the past two months as a witness in the Dominion saloon hold-up case, yesterday objected to another adjournment of the case and was granted a release from his voluntary imprisonment by Magistrate Macaulay. But as he is considered too important a witness to be allowed to go before the case is brought to trial he had no sooner obtained his liberty than he was re-arrested on a charge of being implicated in the Dominion hold-up.

In asking for his dismissal he stated that he had been held for two months and that he had consented to the enlargement of the case week by week, but as the case still looked a long way off he wanted his liberty.

The magistrate said he could do nothing more than grant his demand but stated that other steps might be taken to hold him if he refused to allow another enlargement, although that was a matter for the police to give their attention. Sergeant Smith stated that he thought within the next week the party being looked for in connection with the Dominion hold-up would be found and then the case could be proceeded with; but Harris still persisted in his request for release, which was granted by the magistrate.

As Harris started out of the court he was followed by Sergeant Smith and as he passed into the lobby he was formally arrested on a charge of vagrancy and was taken back to the guard room, where he will be held pending trial.

The case of Edward Mortimer was adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, on motion of Attorney Black, counsel for defense. Richard Brown was charged with assault by H. W. S. Burns, and while the complainant was not present to prosecute the case, Richard pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $5 and costs.

LOTS OF FUN AT SAVOY

Where "The Masqueraders" Hold the Boats This Week.

A laughable farce comedy is on the board at the New Savoy this week entitled "The Masqueraders." It is brimming full of fun and ludicrous situations from start to finish, depicting the trials and tribulations of Fenator Hasselback, a German politician from New Jersey. The senator is played by Dick Mauretius in his own inimitable manner, the character of the injured husband being taken by Harry Sedley. Chas. Brown plays "Tragedian Mush" and Chas. Moran the tough from Toughville. Cecil Marion plays sweetly the character of the loving wife and Edith Bates that of Mrs. a la Shakespeare.

In the olio which follows are a number of excellent specialties. Lillie Edgerton is introducing some new and difficult feats on the trapeze, Kate Rockwell is seen in her famous Clarindy cake walk with the pickaninny accompaniment, and Dorothy Campbell sings some of her prettiest ballads. Dollie Mitchell looks more fetching than ever and Ollie Delmar is heard in new songs. Mauretius and Brown are doing a very funny sketch "Ireland vs. Germany." Cecil Marion appears in operatic selections and Sedley & Bates close the olio in a sketch of their own composition. The really excellent show is brought to a close with Nat Goodwin's well known farce "Love and War," in which the entire company appears.

RAILROAD BUILDING

Where Lions and Other Big Game Abound.

What Contractors on Uganda Line Have Experienced—Five Hundred Miles in Jungle.

Probably there is no other stretch of country on earth that could produce so many oddities in the way of queer men and strange beasts as the 500 miles of jungle, wilderness, and mountain which the new Uganda Railway, now nearing completion, will cross on its way from Mombasa to the shore of Lake Victoria Nyanza.

This line would have been finished long ago, if it had not been necessary, every once in a while, for the entire engineering force to drop work and go off on a lion hunt, repel an attack on the part of some savage native tribe, head off an invasion by elephants, or fight the deadly tsetse fly and the no less insatiable "jigger."

Since the work was commenced over thirty men have been killed by these animals, to say nothing of those injured.

Two lions in particular "bagged" so many victims that at one time the whole construction force struck work until the man-eaters were killed. On another occasion an official of the East African Protectorate and a soldier were walking along the line when suddenly a lion pounced upon them from the brush beside the track. The officer hastily ducked and escaped with an ugly scratch, but the beast killed the soldier outright before any attempt could be made to rescue him.

It was not long after this that Ryan, an official of the railroad, was attacked by a lion, which entered the compartment in a railroad carriage where he was sleeping, and in spite of his cries and struggles carried him off bodily into the jungle and there devoured him. While the excitement at the station where this happened was at its height, the cause of it returned, jumped upon the roof of the station where the railway hands were sleeping, and tried to get in by tearing off the corrugated iron sheets. During the night his roars of baffled rage could be heard only too plainly by the scared inmates, and in the morning the iron covering was wet with the blood from the animal's paws. Finding his efforts there fruitless, Leo had crouched for the rest of the night close outside the station door, where he occupied himself by gnawing into small pieces the station's whole stock of red and green signal flags. Only a short time ago another majestic looking beast jumped on the train and was shot in the act.

Perhaps the most awful adventure with a lion that ever happened in Africa took place on the Uganda line. Five native laborers had deserted, and, taking their guns with them, started back towards the coast. One night, while sleeping under a tree, they were set upon by several lions and promptly made the best of their way up into the low-hanging branches. Accordingly the lions sat themselves down under the tree and waited patiently until one by one the miserable men were exhausted or discouraged by weakness and hunger, let go their hold and fell to the ground there to be torn to pieces and eaten. One man only was able to hold out until the lions grew tired of waiting.

Elephant are a great source of trouble to the engineers of the line. More than once they have invaded the ticket office and stripped it bare of both furniture and tickets, or have overthrown embankments erected at great trouble and expense. The line will probably be finished some time in 1903—at present about 300 miles are open for business out of about 500, the passengers being principally porters and British soldiers and officials. The cost of the line has been estimated at £5,000,000.—London Mail.

The Greatest Rogue Living

Among the travellers who alighted at the railroad station in this city the other day was Paul D. Hart. He stopped only long enough to cross the platform and take a train on the other side of the depot and did not therefore renew acquaintances in Plattsburg.

Several causes united to produce this result, among them the fact that Mr. Hart was shackled with iron, hand and foot, to another man like himself clad in convict stripes. They were part of a company of fifty also ironed in pairs who were travelling from Sing Sing prison to Clinton prison for the purpose of balancing the populations of the State penal institutions.

Some years ago Paul D. Hart dropped off the train here and said he would like to buy a house for summer use. He brought a letter of introduction to Thurlow Weed and was introduced by that gentleman to several citizens as a business man of importance from Chicopee, Mass., seeking a healthful summer home for his family.

Mr. Hart stayed for some time, made some friends, cashed drafts for some $800 or more and then, drifted out of town as unostentatiously as he had come in.

His letter of introduction was forged, like his drafts, and the laugh was on Mr. Weed. This affair was of course only a commonplace confidence crime, and it does not even suggest the remarkable qualities which render Mr. Hart eminent, even great, in his line.

His name, by the way, is not Hart at all, but Edward O. Stoddart, and he lived in his youth at Chicopee, Mass., where he was employed by the Ames Manufacturing Company. He was a bright lad at school and a smart youth in the counting room, gifted with a flow of speech which approached garrulity, except that what he said about things usually amounted to something.

But he was dishonest from the core out, and he embarked in wrong-doing pretty early in life. He seemed to take that delight in crime which an ardent sportsman has in the chase. "The pleasure of beating people is," he says, "the highest employment I know: even to this day I don't care for their money so much. I like to get it by ways so artistic that they may be called classic. I am an emotional actor when I swindle a man or a woman, and I especially enjoy the effective roles I fill."

Stoddart, as it is best to call him for the purposes of this article, visited nearly all the States in the Union and the Dominion of Canada. In Canada he was arrested and served a term in the Kingston prison. Since then he has lived as much in prison as out.

Just at present he is serving a term of four years for a crime committed while in the Tombs last March which is fairly representative of his varied methods in knavery. He was locked up in New York for some offense, waiting trial, when he telegraphed to a woman in Toronto that he was in the Tombs under arrest as Paul D. Hart and that he was her husband (which of course he was not), and asking that she send by wire $400 to his attorney. She promptly responded with the money. The woman's husband was in New York, as Stoddart well knew, and having sent the money she hastened thither and drove to the Tombs to see her husband.

Stoddart says the meeting was delightfully dramatic. Explanations were necessarily made. Hart was searched by Warden Hagan, a considerable part of the $400 was found upon him and he was, at once placed on trial for the new offense. He defended himself with some ability, denying the general facts, but of course conviction followed and the penalty on his heels. Had there been only this case to deal with Hart might even have escaped scot free, but another woman suddenly appeared from Indiana. She had not stopped to send the money that Stoddart had telegraphed for, claiming that he had been innocently locked up as a witness of a street murder, but had brought it with her. And from other sources money in various sums came for "Hart" in amounts from $50 to $200.

Stoddart complained bitterly of being sent from the Tombs; it was the ideal place, he said, to fool the wives of men who came to the metropolis.

"But how did you know the husbands in New York had wives at home?" was asked. "That is an unworthy question for an intelligent man," he replied. "The newspapers told me the men were here at the hotels. I assumed that they had wives at home. If a despatch was sent to a wife who did not exist the message wasn't delivered and I lost nothing."

Stoddart's most eminent knavery took place in Tennessee, where he forged his way out of prison. Various inaccurate reports have been made of it, but it will be seen by this truthful narration of the facts furnished by Gov. Cameron, of that state, and by Stoddart himself, that it was as daring and clever a piece of rascality as any out of the domain of fiction.

Stoddart had been down South on a foraging expedition, moving from place to place, because, as he says, he "had to always go somewhere else," when he was arrested for a forged check and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. This offense, committed at Murfreesboro, was marked by his peculiar methods. He advertised for mules—"the subscriber would buy for spot cash good mules seventeen hands high, from three to seven years old, brought to the Cheatham livery stables on the 24th inst. between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Mules must pass accredited State veterinary surgeon."

On the 24th Murfreesboro was filled with mules. They came from all the central part of the State, from Southern Kentucky, and from the blue-grass regions in droves, actually thousands of them. But there was no purchaser. He had disappeared on the Nashville train the evening before after buying oats and straw, hay and halters and engaging men to care for the mules and cashing various checks and drafts for a sum aggregating a thousand dollars or more.

The indignant Southerners cried aloud for his punishment, and Stoddart, having been caught, was lucky to escape into a convict camp, where he dug coal by day and slept on a chain by night.

"The life was," he says, "something awful," and Stoddart set about freeing himself as soon as possible. With some money he had smuggled into the camp he bribed a warden to furnish him writing materials, and he wrote a letter which he signed with the name of the Governor's closest political friend dated on the train on the way to Washington. The letter was in effect as follows:

"I wish you would release Edward O. Stoddart at once, now a convict working in Merrill's camp. Have him up to Nashville and give him a good lecture. His people are fine folks up in Massachusetts and my best friends."

"You had better let him have a credit of $200 and see that he goes right home. I have fully investigated the case and it is a proper subject for the action I ask, as I will explain," etc.

How Stoddart was able to imitate the handwriting successfully has not been discovered. Probably he had had correspondence with the Governor's friend and treasured a memory of his chirography for possible future use.

The chances were desperate, but Stoddart was in desperate straits, and agreeably to his hopes rather than his expectations the order for his release and the payment of his fare to Nashville came down in a few days. To this day Stoddart deprecates especially his failure to get to Nashville. He says it cost him one of the most interesting situations he had ever devised, namely, the chance to appear before the Governor with feigned humility and gratefully accept the $200 that "the Governor's friend" had asked for.

But the allurements of a barroom at a railroad junction on the way betrayed him and after he had spent the few dollars he had in his pocket he was arrested for vagrancy. He spent three days in jail and when released he was overdue at Nashville, and his trick had been discovered. He however, took to the woods and mountains, and after incredible hardships and perils got across the Ohio river and breathed freely once more.

When he has subsequently been arrested the police, anxious to get the reward offered for an escaped convict, have sought to return him to Tennessee, but Gov. Cameron always replied "not wanted," until wearied with having the man offered to him he at last informed the Pinkertons that "Edward O. Stoddart was too brilliant a man to be returned to his State. If he will keep out of it his pardon stands."

Stoddart has served time in Joliet, in Jackson, Mich.; Wethersfield, Conn.; Wilkesbarre, Pa., and probably elsewhere, and his prison career has been almost as notable as his criminal one.

As soon as he was immured he began with indelible industry to correspond with "all and sundry." If a will were missing he had it, or the rough draft made by the testator. If there were a mystery in a great crime he had the solution. If a child had been lost for years he could bring it home. Wherever anything was moving Stoddart took part with secrets of vast importance—to sell. When the post-office scandals were developing in Havana Stoddart was a "friend" of Neeley's—"knew him intimately at Muncie, Ind., and was in the plot. Trouble had come to himself and he was in jail. He had letters from Geely that would convict the defaulter, and if Postmaster-General Emory Smith would get him released he would clear the department of this Havana scandal," etc.

So specious were his professions that the Postmaster-General took the matter seriously and sent two special agents to Wilkesbarre jail to investigate. They took stock in Stoddart's story, and had it not been for a misdated forged letter from "Neeley" which was shown them Stoddart would have won his point.

Then Stoddart took a hand in the Gilman will case in Bridgeport, "having been present at the drawing of the will which let in the half-bloods."

So well did he play this part that he was brought to Bridgeport on his release from Wilkesbarre prison and managed to get several hundred dollars before the falsity of his alleged information was discovered.

He operated in this way all over the country, securing good returns, although failing of success often enough to discourage a less sanguine man. The chief trouble with his plans was that he never left himself a way of escape. His operations in prison show that. When discovered he was caught beyond hope. Nevertheless it was in prison that he delighted to work, and some of his begging letters were marvels of clever composition.

These he addressed chiefly to women of prominence in philanthropy and charity. His methods of approach were for most of these women simply irresistible. Watching the newspapers carefully he would clip out, for instance, something which such a woman was reported to have said and write to her that "her words had touched him with great force and truth and that no woman in the world had ever said these things with the force that she had."

Then would follow his own story, the narration being founded on fact or fiction to suit the case. More flattery was then administered in terms that showed him a man of education whose judgment was worth something. The correspondence being opened thus diplomatically, the outcome was an appeal for material aid to support the wealth of sympathy already bestowed, and the reply was rarely adverse.

At one time when a prisoner he was coquetting more than thirty of these correspondences, most of them with successful results. The ladies of Philadelphia's best society took special interest in him, and when he left Wilkesbarre jail he had from them a trunk of superior clothing, besides $200 which they had sent him, while from other sources as far away as California he had money in varying sums.

When, however, he struck the name of Miss Jeanette L. Gilder, the editor of the Critic, and opened up a correspondence on the customary lines, basing his address upon the sentiments she had declared in a signed article, he met with a serious obstacle. Miss Gilder is an old reporter and she investigated her correspondent and made "copy" of him in a way which almost ruined his trade. Stoddart has a contempt for mere literary people since then, which was increased by his more recent experience with Lillie Devereux Blake, who, having invited him to call and having considered his mission, smilingly handed him half a dollar. "She read me like a book," said the victim of the lady's pleasantry afterward.

In later years he has chiefly sought to swindle women, and he counts among his victims the highest ladies in the land. His facility in penmanship is something extraordinary and was the means of setting out of court the Harrison will case in Philadelphia. The cause turned upon the authority of a witness' signature, and Persier Frazer, the American expert, widely known for his appearance in the Dreyfus trial, had examined the writing and declared it to be that of the man whose name it was. A. S. Shields, the leader of the criminal bar in Philadelphia, had come into the case—and had recently been counsel for Stoddart, whose acquittal he had secured upon a forged check. He had in this way learned of Stoddart's proficiency with the pen and, calling a meeting of the principals and counsel on his side, he introduced Stoddart to them and a test was made by sending him to a side table and passing rapidly before him to copy seventy signatures at random. Mr. Frazer was forced to admit that fifty-seven of the forgeries were so exact that experts might well be deceived. It was as a result of this that the case involving millions was amicably settled.

Stoddart has figured as a campaigning exhorter and circuit-riding preacher in Arkansas and Missouri. It was in this capacity that he fell from grace and into the hands of the law at the same time in Osage county in the latter State. He was assisting, with signal success, the presiding elder of his circuit in conducting revival meetings when he became the guest of a prominent Methodist farmer, whom he asked to indorse a check on the Boatman's Bank, in St. Louis, for $125. This the farmer readily did, but when the check was turned into the local bank it called for $1,250, which was several hundred more than the farmer's balance. Payment was delayed, and the result of inquiries was the arrest of Stoddart. Being arraigned before the Justice of the Peace, Stoddart demanded that the proceedings be opened with prayer. He prayed for the court, the bank, the prosecutor, and especially for the persecuted, with such rigor and eloquence that he was paroled till next day in custody of his host. That night he started for the nearest State line and never stopped till he was in Hudson County, N.J., whence for his besetting sin he was sent a few weeks later to Trenton for ten years.—New York World.

How He Kissed the Bride

"The official value of an illegal kiss has been estimated variously by different courts and as it is just cause for a damage suit, I want to tell you how I rendered myself liable for such an action without giving you the right names," said a rug expert. "The joke was rather more on me than on the girl, because she was awfully homely and she does not know that I had no right to kiss her."

"I have always lived in New York, and I know absolutely nothing about Brooklyn. When I received an invitation to the wedding of my old friend Williams to Miss Bridge, of Brooklyn, I telephoned Williams my congratulations and told him I never could find my way to the church and then to the bride's home."

"You must come, old man," said he, "because I want you to meet my bride. She's a peach. You'll find the church about two inches off the map. Don't mistake another church around the corner for it. You don't care for the church service, so just arrange to get there at 8:30 when that part of the show will be over and follow the crowd that comes out. It will lead you to the bride's home, which is only three blocks away. I'll never forgive you if you don't come and drink my wife's health."

"Such an invitation as that was not to be dodged. The wedding was last Thursday night. I persuaded my sister to go with me and at one minute past six we left our home in evening dress. "If Williams had been married up a tree it would have been easier for his friends. We exhausted several trolley lines, and after leaving the last car and walking six blocks we came to the church at just 8:30 o'clock. We were exactly on time."

"The bride and bridegroom had just driven away and a large array of men and women in their best togs were filing out. A few got into carriages. Most of them walked and we fell into line. "I didn't happen to see any of Williams' friends. My sister very unkindly said that this event must have been the first of the social season for the bride's friends, because there was a very noticeable odor of moth balls in the air."

"After walking about eight blocks we reached the house. A group of Roger's statuary beamed out of the front window and from the open door came the subdued sound of voices. "As we entered a maid at the door directed us to the dressing rooms. When I came down to the ladies' dressing room on the second floor my sister said to me:

"Joe, I don't see a single soul here whom I know. I am not going down until some of Williams' friends arrive. These women all say 'bean' with a conscious gasp and shake hands on a level with your chins. I'm not up to mingling with that kind of a crowd unsupported. You go down and prospect around for the Shaws or the Butlers or the Andersons or some one whom we know and we'll make up a little party by ourselves."

"When I reached the parlor it was filled entirely with the bride's friends. There was a generous looking buffet in the rear room, and with several others I drifted toward it. I had been traveling for nearly three hours and I needed something to sustain me. "A puffy, fat man, who evidently was a member of the household, caught my eye, and between us we made a small bottle look empty in a jiffy. "Only on such occasions as this, my boy, do I approve of wine," he said, eyeing me with moist eyes. "This is indeed a happy occasion," said I, "and let's have one more, for I am tired."

"We drank to the bride and bridegroom and the puffy man squeezed my hand affectionately and told me to come to him whenever I needed a friend, which I thought was mighty kind of him. "I wandered around for half an hour without seeing a familiar face.

Then I went up to report to my sister. She decided to wait until some of our friends arrived, and I went to the men's dressing room to smoke a cigarette. There was my fat friend smoking and he greeted me with all the warmth of old friendship. "What do you say to a little brandy?" he asked. "Suit me, thanks," said I, and from a closet he brought out a bottle and some glasses. Brooklyn isn't as bad as she is photographed, I thought. "Not as a regular thing do I approve of brandy," said the fat man, "but this is a most extraordinary occasion, my dear—say, I've forgotten your name."

"I told him. "Friend of the groom?" "Yes." "Known him long?" "All my life." "Say, now, honestly, what d'you think of him?" "He is one of the finest boys that ever lived," said I, "honorable, ambitious and clean."

"Do you mean it?" "If I didn't I wouldn't have come all the way from Upper New York for his wedding," said I, and this then convinced the fat man. "He told me that he was the bride's father. He would always look upon me as his own son. He was proud to know his son-in-law's friends. They must make his house their own and would I, as a favor have just one more drink with him?"

"It was approaching the supper hour, and I finally persuaded my sister to come downstairs with me. The crowd around the bride and bridegroom was so dense that we could not penetrate it. "We fell in with the people who were going down to supper. That supper was all right, though we didn't know a blessed soul in the room. We had dined at 5 o'clock in order to get there, and we were hungry. "The conversation around us was about church socials, challenge ciphers and a Mrs. Somebody who won the Whist Club's prize by methods little better than downright cheating. When we went upstairs again the bride and bridegroom had disappeared to get into their travelling clothes. "I was feeling very comfortable and I again went over to the fat man and shook hands with him. "I am an old friend of the groom," said I, "and I haven't yet seen the bride. I intended to kiss her when I did."

"Kizzer, my boy, kizzer her. She's my daughter. She won't mind, no zer bit. You jus' stand on this stairway an' when she comes down you kizzer for yourself an' you kizzer for me."

"Williams had told me that she was a peach, and with this parental permission and the courage of wine I was determined to kiss her. The guests crowded the door with rice and old shoes, but I stood on the stairs. "Suddenly a commotion in the upper hall broke out and there were cries of 'Here they come! Look out for them!'"

"The bride came first with one of those loose raglan affairs with the hood drawn over her head. She bolted down the stairs, and when she was about to pass me I said: "One minute, please; I want a kiss."

"I grabbed her round the waist, pulled back the hood and—well after going that far I had to kiss her. In fact she seemed to expect it. I thought that Williams' peach looked decidedly frost-bitten. "The crowd at the foot of the stairs yelled approval, and I let her go, pretending not to hear the fat man's plaintive call: "Kizzer her again for me, my boy."

"He might do his own kissing. As I stood there, sobered by the view of the bride's face, a little man with side whiskers darted past me, and everyone pelted him with rice. I leaped over a rail and asked a man who was, that. He eyed me suspiciously as he replied:

"Why, the groom, Billy Johnson. "It took me less than a minute to bolt into the men's dressing room and get my coat. I didn't give my sister time to put her rubbers on. Chucking them in my pocket, I hustled her out of the house in a rush, feeling like a thief. It wasn't until we had walked two blocks that she said: "I don't know what to make of it. I didn't see any of Williams' friends."

"Of course not," said I. "I haven't been to Williams' reception. I led you to the wrong church, and I followed the wrong crowd, and I don't want you to mention the thing again."

"My sister's idea of the humor is sometimes strong, and she just escaped hysterics. "I'm glad it wasn't Williams' wedding," I said. "Why?" she asked. "Well, you know Williams said that the bride was a peach, and the fat man, her father, you know, said that it would be all right, so I stepped this bride on the way down and kissed her. She wasn't a peach, that's all. If Williams had married her I'd never gone there to call."

"My sister seemed to think it was all very funny and perhaps I would have agreed with her if I hadn't kissed the bride. She wrote a explanation of the affair to Williams, and he and his wife sent a joint letter from Atlantic City yesterday. They knew about the wedding and they assured me that the bride was only 43. I'll never see such chances at another Brooklyn wedding, you may be sure."

ED HARRIS ARRAIGNED

On Charge of Aiding in Dominion Hold-up

In Which Offense Mat Tomerlin Has Confessed to Being Principal.

Edwin Harris, who has been held as a witness in the Dominion saloon hold-up case for the past two months and who obtained his release yesterday only to be re-arrested, was brought before Magistrate Macaulay this morning charged with having aided and abetted Tomerlin and Brophy in the robbery. The Crown prosecutor stated that two necessary witnesses were absent from town and asked that an adjournment for one week be granted.

Attorney Smith, who appeared for the defense, made an objection to the re-arrestment of the case and asked that the trial be proceeded with at once inasmuch as Harris had been held for two months.

The magistrate stated that Harris had been held from week to week during the two months by his own consent and that yesterday he had made his first objection. Mr. Smith then withdrew his objection and the case was enlarged for one week from today.

Julius Gocher considered that he had been very harshly treated by this Wilkenhurst when the latter spoke to him in rather a rough way and called him (according to Julius' story) several unpleasant names, and as Julius sought redress for his wrong in the police court this morning, Julius' story was that he had had a business transaction with Wilkenhurst and the latter had been standing him off for payment. He went into Wilkenhurst's restaurant yesterday and asked for payment and had received, instead of the money, several bad epithets and been told to go his own way.

E. A. Wright was called as a witness but according to his testimony Julius had been the one who had called all the names and had hammered the table with his fist and acted altogether in a manner such as would lead the witness if he had been the other party to wallop him good. The magistrate gave Wright a good lecture on his stinging threats of what he would do and also told the other parties that it was not proper to call each other bad names and that it would be better if they refrained from it in the future, and with that dismissed the case.

CUTTER TURNED OVER

James Hall the Eldorado Magnet Meets an Accident.

What might have been a serious accident occurred at the corner of First Avenue and King street yesterday afternoon. James Hall, the Eldorado Magnet, accompanied by two ladies, was driving down the avenue at a rapid pace and failed to slacken the speed of his horse when the corner was reached. The horse succeeded in making the turn without difficulty, but the cutter was not so fortunate. It swung around the corner until the front wheel met an obstruction and the next moment the occupants were rolling over and over in the snow.

Riders caught the horse and righted the cutter and the ladies were picked up from the snow bank into which they had fallen.

It was found that no serious damage had been sustained and the party was soon en route down King street, the way disturbed by the accident.

How to Write to the Pope.

When you write to the Pope you must be in Latin. The style must not be classical, but the language is obligatory. Some sort of Latin must be employed. The letter must be addressed to "His Holiness Pope Leo XIII, the happily reigning pontiff." It must begin with "Beatus Pater," "Most Blessed Father," and must end with some expression of regard.

When it reaches the Vatican it has a chance of arriving at its destination unless some special precautions have been taken for the daily mail numbers 20,000 documents. An excellent way of getting a letter into the Pope's hands is to make use of envelopes, the outer one directed as above prescribed, and the inner one addressed to "His Holiness the Pope, the Head of the Universal Holy Roman Inquisition." A minor official who opened an envelope thus addressed would incur the penalty of excommunication. Such communications are handed to the Pope, who opens them and passes them on unread to Cardinal Rampolla.

Religion on Sulphur Creek.

A few days ago Rev. W. G. Mahon of the Klondike Methodist Missions opened up a series of revival meetings in which he has been most ably assisted by Capt. Wilcox of the Salvation Army. At the very outset Mr. Mahon gave the people to understand that "Salvation from the Guilt and Power of Sin" would be the theme of the meetings and during one whole week of the intensest interest the standard was never lowered by either Mr. Mahon or the captain. Holiness possible in this life through the blood of Christ was presented night after night in song and story and quiet yet earnest pleading, till tears were seen in many eyes and people were led to pray for mercy and cleansing. It is safe to say that never before in the history of the creeks has so much spiritual interest been awakened as that which has been stirred up on Sulphur creek during the past week. While trying to present Christ to sinful men Mr. Mahon and Captain Wilcox have won the confidence of the people and it is our sincere wish that their high and holy standard may never be lowered in the Klondike.

Ancient English Wisdom.

The following piece of quaintly worded, sententious wisdom, inscribed in black-letter painted in red, was discovered beneath modern plastering on an old half-timbered house at Tewkesbury:

"Three things pleseth Both God and man—Concord? Betwene brethren, Amytie between nayghbours; And a man and his wife that agreeeth well together.

"Fower things hurt much the life of man, Tears, Smoke, wynde, and the worst of all, to see his friends unluckye, and fose happye.

These fyve things are rare sene: A fayer yonge woman without a lover, A yonge man without myerth, An owld uesseror without money, Aney greate fayer without theffes, A fare hame without musick."

The Pulpit vs. the Bar.

An eminent American lawyer now deceased was sadly given to intoxication. On one occasion he entered a church while a minister was holding forth on the future punishment of the wicked.

Fixing his eye upon the lawyer, who was reeling near the door, the preacher exclaimed: "There stands a sinner against whom I will bear witness in the day of judgment."

At this the lawyer folded his arms, planted himself as firmly as he could, and addressing the man in the pulpit, electrified the whole congregation after this fashion:

"Sir, I have been practising in the criminal courts for 20 years, and I have always found that the greatest rascal is the first to give state's evidence."—The Scotsman.

Will Compel Retraction.

A vaudeville artist employed in one of the local theatres is in receipt of a letter from Clotilde Rogers dated at San Francisco in which the information is imparted that instead of being behind the bars doing time in Walla Walla, she is very much alive and very much at liberty. She says further that she intends returning to Dawson over the ice and immediately upon her arrival she will compel a retraction of the article published some weeks ago in a local contemporary, which said she was undergoing imprisonment, or there will be a libel suit begun that promises to be interesting.

Commendable Work.

The N. A. T. & T. Co. had a force of men at work yesterday removing the packed snow and ice from the sidewalks on all sides of its property. This example should be followed by every property owner in town, as the time is not far distant when the surface of the snow will be melted by the sun and then freeze at night and be dangerously slippery. The caked snow should be removed from every sidewalk in Dawson before it begins to soften.

Survey Being Protested.

Yesterday afternoon in the gold commissioner's court was heard the case of Cudahy et al vs. Oker et al. The action is in the nature of a protest that is being made over the acceptance of a survey covering 28 and 29 above on Bonanza.

His Last Week.

The present is Mr. Ralph Cummings' last week with the Bittner Company. He leaves for the outside early next week and will open with his own company in Rochester, New York, the first week in April. Next Sunday evening Mr. Cummings' friends will tender him a farewell testimonial benefit at the Auditorium at which time the beneficiary will be seen in a number of character sketches new to Dawson audiences. The program being arranged will be one of the best yet seen in the city.

The Pope's Health.

New York, Jan. 27.—Signor Lapponi, the Pope's physician, in view of the constant reports of the Pope's ill-health, said to a Rome correspondent of The Journal:

The Pope is in excellent health, both mentally and physically, and is looking forward joyfully to the fetes which celebrate his twenty-five years pontificate. These fetes, which begin the last of March, continue one year in order that pilgrims from all parts of the world may attend.

As an instance of the Pope's clear memory, at a recent reception for the Roman aristocracy the Pope observed Marquis Patini and said: "I remember you well, Marquis. We met the first time at Ostend station fifty years ago. You were with your father."

Khedive's Ball.

New York, Jan. 27.—The social season has just opened with the Khedivial state ball at the Abdin palaces, cables the Cairo correspondent of the Journal. It was a splendid function, attended by 2,000 guests. Many Americans were present. The Khedive opened the ball with Lady Cromer and conversed interestedly with the Americans. The chief guest was the Grand Duke Boris of Russia, while Prince Lichtenstein, Prince Oldenburg and the Earls of Dunraven and Sheffield were also in attendance.

Big Run at Billiards.

New York, Jan. 27.—W. H. Sigourney, the champion amateur billiardist of the Pacific Coast, has just made a run of 121 in a 14-inch balk line game at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, where he is practicing for the amateur Athletic Union tourney for the billiard championship of America, class A.

Charles S. Norris, another entry in the same tourney, and the champion of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, contested the game with Sigourney and played very good billiards, his average being 9 32-37. Sigourney required thirty-eight innings to complete his 400 points, and his average was 10 20-38.

No News of Condor

Victoria, Feb. 11.—H.M.S. Egeria has returned from a long cruising trip along the Pacific coast with no news of the overdue ship Condor.

Sale of Lipton's Canvas.

New York, Jan. 27.—A job lot of sails and rigging belonging to Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht, Shamrock II, which was left from the fire at the yard of the John L. Rolyns Co. in Brooklyn a few weeks ago, has been sold for $430. There was a large crowd of speculators on hand, but the whole lot was sold to one man. The sails were made of the finest canvas and linen and one of the sets is said to have cost $8,000. It is believed that there are several thousand yards of the cloth not injured by the fire.

Lots of Them Willing.

"They seem to be making a lot of fuss over this girl who travelled 2,500 miles to marry," she remarked. "Isn't it unusual?" he asked. "It may be unusual, but there is nothing extraordinary about it," she answered. "Why, I know girls who would travel twice as far for the same purpose, if assured of success at the end of the journey."—Ex.

INVEST BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE

Lone Star Stock Is the Best Investment Ever Offered to the Public.

We claim we have the mother lode. Can you deny these facts. The mines are situated at the head of the two richest creeks on earth—Eldorado and Bonanza. Gold is found on every claim on Bonanza creek, and up Victoria Gulch to the quartz mines. If it did not come from this ledge, where did it come from?

The gold found in the creek is the same as that found in the ledge.

The gold is found in slide matter on Seven pup. Where did it come from?

The best pay found in Gay Gulch is at the head of the gulch, below the quartz mines. There are eight gulches heading at the Lone Star mines. They all carry gold. Where did it come from?

Lone Star stock is the best investment ever offered to the public. Buy now. The books will soon be closed and you will be too late. Don't let the man who knows it all tell you that there is no quartz in this country. The fools who make that statement have no bank account, which is the proof of their wisdom.

Every placer camp in the world turned into a quartz camp. Cripple Creek was a placer camp. The men who knew it all were there. They made the same statement. A carpenter found the quartz after the wise men had left.

Have you ever visited the Lone Star mines? If not, you have no right to even think. Go up and satisfy yourself. Yours for business and a quartz camp, LEW CRADEN.

TREADGOLD CONCESSION

New Order Is Posted in Gold Commissioner's Office Which Takes the Place of the Much Discussed Section 10—The Octopus Has Many Strings on Yukon Country.

What is known as the Treadgold concession, the most colossal octopus that ever fastened its tentacles on the gold bearing gravels of the Yukon territory, is again making its presence felt, and from an order in council received recently from Ottawa and posted at noon today in the gold commissioner's office it would appear that the hold given the concessionaires on the country is even more far reaching than was at first anticipated. The order referred to is the nature of certain amendments to the previous order in council granting the concession to Treadgold and his associates and as certain sections are rather ambiguous it is not known at present the precise interpretation that will be placed on them. The order was posted so late in the day that it was impossible to see either Gold Commissioner Senkler or the acting assistant, Mr. Pattullo, and learn their intentions in regard to the matter. A number of the clerks in the office are of the opinion that the new order results in the closing of Bonanza, Bear and Hunker creeks and their tributaries to further location.

It will be remembered that in the original order all vacant ground contained within the concession reverted to the concessionaires, but it was subsequently held that in order for the Treadgold people to acquire the grants for such ground it was necessary for them to stake each individual piece and apply for record the same as is required of any free miner. That clause, known as section 10, is rescinded and the following is substituted therefor:

"The right subject to no payment except the royalty prescribed upon output, to obtain for and work all mining locations now or hereafter abandoned on Bonanza, Bear and Hunker creeks and their tributaries.

"All such locations shall be deemed to be vested in the grantees on the 1st day of January, 1902, but the grantees shall not receive the entry for any of such locations until they shall have expended the sum of $250,000 as herein provided, nor shall they work any of the said locations until the provisions of condition 2 respecting the delivery of two thousand (2,000) miner's inches of water, have been fulfilled. In default of the delivery of two thousand (2,000) miner's inches of water as provided in condition 2 the right of the grantees to the said locations shall forthwith cease and determine."

Section 3 of the order pertaining to the right to the water in Rock creek is amended and the concessionaires are given the prior right to the water up to 2500 miner's inches.

Condition 2 under section 13 is repealed and the following substituted:

"The grantees shall deliver within the district during the summer season of 1905, not later than July 1st, 1905, a flow of water of 2,000 miner's inches equal to 3,000 cubic feet per minute for distribution along the line of a conduit constructed from the south of Bonanza Valley to Grand Forks, at such an elevation above the Bonanza creek as will afford a pressure due to an effective head of not less than three hundred feet at any and every point throughout the length of such conduit. Such flow shall be continuously maintained and be available during at least sixty days of such season and each season thereafter during the period for which this franchise is granted as set forth in condition 7 hereof, and in default thereof the exclusive and prior rights of the grantees shall cease and be determined. In case of unavoidable accident to the works of the grantees they shall be entitled without forfeiture to a reasonable time for effecting repairs; provided also that if the grantees shall be delayed or their operations interfered with by floods, war, civil commotion, strikes, accident to machinery or works, or by the act of God or other causes over which the grantees have no control, and so prevented from complying with the conditions of this clause they shall be entitled to extension of time equal to the periods of delay."

Condition 3 of the same section is also repealed and the following substituted, with the addition of another condition to be known as 3a:

"The grantees shall supply water to the owners of claims within the district subject to the regulations hereinafter contained."

The additional condition referred to is as follows:

"At any time after the 31st of December, 1905, if the grantees have complied with the terms of condition 2 as above set forth, the Minister of the Interior may in respect of any portion of the district except those already by that date served by the grantees' works require the grantees to elect whether they will proceed with the construction of works to furnish a reasonable supply of water for mining purposes for such portion of the district or abandon in respect thereof their exclusive right to supply water; and if the grantees are not within six calendar months from the receipt of the notice of such requirement prepared to proceed with the construction of works calculated to furnish a reasonable supply of water for such portion of the district, then the exclusive right of the grantees in respect of such portion of district may be revoked and determined by order of the Governor-in-Council."

One of the most important changes is the repeal of regulation "F" and the substitution of another by which the charge which the grantees shall be entitled to make for the use of such water on each placer claim shall not exceed 25 cents per miner's inch per hour.

Another regulation is added by which the rights of miners working on any creek below the intake from which creek the concessionaires are taking water are not interfered with. It is known as regulation "G" and is as follows:

"Whenever the grantees divert and take water on any creek or tributary, and free miners bona fide working claims on such creek or tributary below any point at which the grantees divert and take water on such creek or tributary may collectively require the grantees to leave in such creek or tributary for use in working the claims of such free miners the lawful amount of water naturally flowing in such creek or tributary at the grantees' point of intake, as prescribed by clause 6 of the regulations for the diversion of water in the Yukon Territory, bearing date the third of August, 1898."

The new order further provides that the plans of the grantees' works shall be submitted to and approved by the governor-general in council before the works are actually proceeded with.

The arrival of the order and its contents have provoked much comment among those who have seen it and the public will anxiously await the interpretation of Commissioner Senkler as to whether or not the order means the immediate closing of Hunker, Bear and Bonanza to further locations. All winter the Treadgold people have had a clerk employed taking a transcript of the vacant ground within the limits of the concession and also those claims which are liable to revert. If it is now held such claims can not be re-located the concessionaires will have acquired hundreds of claims many of which are of undoubted value.

The will was drawn up and executed while the deceased was in St. Mary's hospital last year and bequeaths his entire estate to his wife, Mrs. Sallie McCook, of Philadelphia, Pa. impossible to issue probate papers to either one until one or the other renounces the trust imposed. It is not within the power of the territorial court to issue probate notice to Mr. Te Roller and at the same time one to Mrs. McCook that would be effective in Philadelphia. The probate can be issued to the two jointly or to either one upon the renouncing of the other. The difficulty will probably be overcome by Mrs. McCook renouncing, Mr. Te Roller will take out the probate and then send Mrs. McCook power of attorney to act as she deems best.

The estate of Mr. McCook in the Yukon territory is of comparatively little value, consisting only of an undivided one-half interest in 30 above on Sulphur, undivided one-half interest in the hillside claim adjoining the upper half, left limit, of 36 below on Hunker, pair of gold scales, a set of the Encyclopedia Britannica, $262 in the Canadian Bank of Commerce, $48 in the Bank of British North America, and a promissory note for $100 of extremely problematical value.

DAWSON'S U. S. CONSUL

Mr. H. D. Saylor Arrived This Forenoon.

Sick With Cold Contracted Coming in—Young in Years—Ripe in Experience.

Mr. H. D. Saylor, the consul of the United States for Dawson, who was appointed by President Roosevelt to take the place of J. C. McCook, arrived this morning on the W. P. and Y. R. mail stage.

Mr. Saylor is confined to his room at the Cecil Hotel by a severe cold which he contracted last night, but he hopes to be around in a few days and assume his official position.

Mr. Saylor is a citizen of Pottstown, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and although a comparatively young man has been prominently before the public for a number of years. He is a lawyer by profession and has held several prominent official positions in his native city and state, having been assistant district attorney for Montgomery county, member of the city council for two terms, city solicitor, four years in the state senate from the 12th senatorial district.

In 1898 he was appointed United States consul for Matanzas, Cuba, by President McKinley, and was at his post when the war broke out. When Spain relinquished her claim of sovereignty and Cuba became a part of the United States, the consular offices were as a matter of course closed and the officers consequently released of their positions. Mr. Saylor was appointed by President Roosevelt consul of the United States for Dawson on December 16 and started on his journey on the 30th of January, since which date he had been travelling continuously.

In speaking of the unfavorable reports concerning himself some time since, Mr. Saylor says:

"I simply come as the consular representative of the United States for the Yukon territory, for the purpose and with the intention of filling the office for the best interests of my people; and not for the purpose of opening a political controversy concerning Pennsylvania politics. That matter was fully passed upon by the President when he appointed me, and so far as I am concerned I consider the matter closed notwithstanding the unmanly attack that was made upon me prior to my arrival."

MARRIED LAST NIGHT

Alderman-Elect Norquay the Lucky Man

Matrimonial Honors are Added to His Political Success Achieved.

Dr. Horace Norquay, who was elected alderman of Dawson city on the 6th inst., attained further honors last night by taking unto himself a bride in the person of Miss Matilda Bashan.

The bride is from the city of St. Louis, while the groom is a native of Manitoba. He was educated in Winnipeg, in which city he has spent the greater part of his life.

In 1897 he came to Dawson with the rush of that year and since that time has been closely identified with the business interests of the city.

For a time he practiced medicine and afterwards opened a drug store, in which business he has prospered from the beginning.

Dr. Norquay was a nominee on the amalgamated Citizens' and People's party ticket, and when the ballots were counted it was discovered that he had received the largest number of votes cast for any candidate.

The many friends of the doctor and his bride will join in wishing them the greatest happiness and success through life.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodworth, Attorney C. M. Woodworth, accompanied by his bride, arrived in Dawson this morning after a pleasant journey from Calgary, where the wedding occurred.

Mr. Woodworth left Dawson on the 13th of October and has made an extensive journey through the United States and Canada, visiting the principal cities of both countries and going as far south as Florida, where he stayed a week.

While enjoying all the pleasures his trip afforded, Mr. Woodworth was not by any means idle while he was outside, but made a thorough study of the political situation at Ottawa and made considerable progress in the affairs which were the real purpose of his trip.

In speaking of the political situation and the chances for representation and other legislation for the Yukon Territory, Mr. Woodworth said: "I found the cabinet about equally divided into two factions. One party led by Plunger has been corrupted by Yukon Gold so that it is almost impossible to gain any concessions from them, while the other party is absolutely incorruptible and are anxious to lend their assistance.

"The majority of the Liberal party are unaware of the corrupt methods that have been used in legislating for the Yukon.

"We will certainly have one member of parliament, and the whole of the Conservative party and a portion of the Liberals will be favorable to two representatives.

"In regard to a completely elective council there is more doubt. Mr. Sifton is unwilling to lose control of this territory and will go to almost any length to defeat the measure. I expect that Sifton will have to be turned down before such legislation will be granted.

"I expect to have the concessions on Bonanza and surrounding creeks thrown open to the prospector. The concessions I am working on include the Doyle, Matson, Bronson and Ray, Boyle, Milne, Slavin and Gates.

"Half of the cabinet will support me in regard to the concessions and Commissioner Ross informed me that he would also assist me in this matter."

Mr. Woodworth looks extremely hale and hearty and says that while he has enjoyed his trip immensely he is (like all the rest) glad to get back to the activities of Dawson once more.

Cab Owner Killed
Toronto, Feb. 12.—Francis McGrath, a cab owner, was accidentally killed today.

DUFFERIN DIED TODAY

At His Ancestral Home in Ireland.

Was Surrounded By the Members of His Family—A Splendid Career.

London, Feb. 12.—The Marquis of Dufferin died this morning at his home in Clondeboyne, Ireland, where he has been slowly sinking for weeks.

He had never recovered from the shock due to the death of his son, Lord Henry Temple Blackwood, and the worries consequent upon the scandal connected with the London and Globe Corporation, in which he was innocently implicated, completed his breaking down. All the family were at his deathbed except his youngest son, Lord Henry Temple Blackwood, who is with his regiment in South Africa. The funeral will be strictly private at Clondeboyne on the 15th inst. Lord Clondeboyne succeeds to the title.

Lord Dufferin has held an important position in British public life for many years. In 1873 he was sent as Governor-General to Canada, where he remained for a period of 7 years. Later he was appointed ambassador to Russia and subsequently he occupied a similar post at Constantinople.

From 1884 to 1888 he was Governor-General of India and in 1891 he was appointed ambassador to France.

He was born at Florence, June 11, 1826, and succeeded to the title in 1841. His entrance into the diplomatic service was made in 1855 when he went with Lord John Russell to Vienna.

In 1864 he was under-secretary for India and two years later accepted a position in the war office. From that time forward he was constantly engaged in important missions and gained a high place as one of Britain's great statesmen and diplomats.
