CAMPAIGN OPENING

Hon. Geo. P. Graham and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux to Speak in Athens

Athens is to be favored with the first meeting in the federal election campaign. On Tuesday evening, August 8th, a meeting will be held in the Town Hall Athens, when addresses will be delivered by Hon. Mr. Graham Minister of Railways and Canals, and Hon. Mr. Lemieux, Post-Master General.

The meeting will commence sharp at eight o'clock and every elector is cordially invited to attend.

MEN BADLY NEEDED

A conference was held in Winnipeg lately between Deputy Ministers of Agriculture for provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan and the Dominion Government Commissioner of Immigration, dealing with the question of harvest laborers needed this year, and most conservative estimates place the number at from 40,000 to 45,000. Government reports show that winter wheat in Alberta and earlier district in South Saskatchewan and Manitoba will commence cutting before August 10th and harvesting will be in full swing by August 15th and 20th. The railway companies are taking action to co-operate with a view to obtaining the necessary labor, and in this connection the General Agent of the Grand Trunk Pacific advises that that Company can take care of 4,000 or 5,000 along their line by August 8th and 9th, and commencing August 15th as fast as they can be obtained.

TEACHING THE BLIND

When a grown person loses his sight, through accident or disease, he should be taught at once to read with his fingers. Sitting in darkness and idleness is enough to make any one despondent, but with the ability to read a book one can pass the time very comfortably. The task of learning to read occupies the mind and prevents the blind person from brooding over his misfortune. Having overcome the difficulty of learning to read without sight, the blind man gains faith in himself: he believes that he can do various kinds of work, and with patience and determination he finds that his belief is justified. Earning money by his labour, he has the satisfaction of knowing himself to be a useful independent member of society. In the case of blind children, or youths of either sex under twenty-one years of age, residents of Ontario, it is better that the teaching should be done at the school maintained by the Government at Brantford. There an ordinary Public School education can be obtained, with the addition of knitting, sewing, domestic science, basket and ham-mock making, the use of carpenter's tools, music and piano-tuning for those qualified to succeed in any of these lines. The test for admission is such defective sight as renders the applicant unable to read ordinary type, and there is no charge for board, tuition or books. Any reader of the Reporter who knows of a child whose sight is thus defective will confer a favor by sending the name of the child and the name and address of its parent to H. F. Gardiner, Principal O.I.B., Brantford Ontario.

Sweet Miss Margery

She leaned back languidly in her chair and somehow she thought struck Margery that she had never seen the little room look so small and shabby before. The delicate gleam of Vane's white garments contrasted strongly with her own dingy, dust-stained black dress, the placid beauty of Miss Charteris' face brought back the thrill of pain to her heart. How different they were! Who was she, to compete with such a woman. She roused herself from her thoughts as she met Vane's cold clear eyes watching her.

"I beg your pardon," she said quickly, yet with unspoken grace. "You have had a long drive; may I give you a cup of tea—or perhaps you would prefer some milk?"

She moved toward an inner room; but Vane stopped her.

"Neither, thank you," she replied coldly—she was growing more and more annoyed every moment. She was being treated with every courtesy, with all regard for etiquette, as though her hostess were a duchess instead of a common village girl; it was insupportable; she must hasten to break down that calm exterior which irritated her beyond measure. "Neither, thank you," she repeated. "I shall not stay long, it is, as you say, a tedious drive; but my cousin, Stuart Crosbie, wishes me to see you."

She bent her head to look at her frounce, but not before she had seen the girl's slight frame wince and her cheeks grow paler.

"That shot went home!" she told herself.

Margery stood immovable, her hand still grasping the chair. A few moments before she had thought it impossible to suffer greater mental pain than she had endured; now she was experiencing pangs still greater, for her wound was being probed. Weak, faint, from want of food as she was, she determined to be brave, to stand firm before this woman—her rival.

"I scarcely know how to begin," continued Vane, with well-assumed kindness and concern. "It is a delicate matter, yet I could not let my cousin Stuart. She hesitated for an instant, then held out her well-gloved hand. "Miss Daw," she said impulsively, "will you forgive me if anything I may say in the course of our conversation should vex you? I would not indeed willingly cause you any pain. Margery's eyes were fixed on the golden-tinged trees beyond the garden; she did not notice the outstretched hand.

"Why should you cause me pain?" she asked, in reply. "There is nothing in common between you and me."

Vane let her hand drop and her side: den pain, and her whole frame shak like this girl's control?

"I am glad you judge me rightly," she responded. "For I am and have been much distressed by my errand. Stuart has asked me, Miss Daw, to express to you his sincere sympathy in the loss you, Mrs. Morris, he begs me to tell you that he trusts you will apply at the castle now that you are left without a guardian. He has entrusted his mother's good-will on your behalf, and he sends you my small sum to assist toward anything you may require."

She held out a small packet as she finished, and had the satisfaction of seeing Margery's lips twitch with sudden pain, and her whole frame shake with passion beneath the insult.

"It was his intention to write to you as far back as last Thursday," went on Vane, "but he had the misfortune to break his right arm, and writing was impossible; therefore, as he thought you would require some explanation from him, he asked me to convey to you the message. I thank you for Margery's lips in cold strained tones.

"Then I may leave this?" Vane said interrogatively, rising and placing the packet on the table. "And you will promise to apply at the castle with respect to anything concerning your future?"

"I believe, but I am not sure, that Mrs. Crosbie has already written to some lady about a situation for you as maid."

Margery made no answer, and Miss Charteris waited a few moments, and then moved to the door, feeling strangely uncomfortable, and by no means victorious. She looked back as she stood at the door.

"You have no reply," she asked.

"Mr. Crosbie's explanation requires none," Margery answered, still in the same cold even tones.

"Then I will wish you good-after-noon."

"Stay!" cried Margery; and Vane turned toward her. "You have forgotten your packet," Margery added, pointing to the table.

Vane took it up without a word. Then a thought seemed to strike her, and she turned the money round and round in her hand, hurriedly.

"Perhaps you will write to Stuart or to his mother?"

Margery's eyes met Vane's in an unflinching gaze.

"Write!" she repeated, with unutterable scorn and pride in the word. "There is indeed little in common between us. Such a question deserves no answer."

Vane's brows contracted. She smiled and walked quickly to the carriage, and entering it, drove swiftly away. Her musings were not altogether pleasant during the first mile or so of her return journey. She had succeeded and succeeded so well that she need never fear Margery Daw again; yet her spirit was vexed even at her victory, for, though she had forever separated Stuart and this girl, she had not lowered her rival to the dust, as she had intended.

This thought rankled for some time; then her mind wandered to the more important matter of dealing with Stuart. She had no settled plan; but, as he was still so unwell, there would be a day or two yet in which to arrange matters. For the present she must satisfy him with loving messages and explain that Margery was too distressed by her grief to accompany her back to the castle. She must see her influence in some way to have the girl sent from the village. It would never do to risk a meeting between Stuart and Margery, for though she judged the girl to be so honest, to say much, if indeed her pride would allow her to notice him at all, there would be sufficient to fire Stuart's anger and determination to learn the truth; and then—

Vane's face flushed at the thought of the humiliation she would undergo in such a case; and she registered a vow that she would never permit it to happen, Margery must go and at once.

Margery remained standing at the door as Vane walked down the path. She did not move, as, in a dim way, she saw Miss Charteris settle herself in the dainty carriage, nor did she stir as the ponies started briskly from the gate. But as the sound of their hoofs died away in the distance, she woke with a shuddering sigh to the grossness of the insults that had been offered her. Suddenly her strength failed, and, with a groan, she sunk back on her chair, burying her face in her hands. The thought of her loneliness had been bitter, her lover's false words had rankled in her breast; but the weight of Vane's humiliating words crushed her. It was almost greater than she could bear.

She tried to banish all tender recollection of Stuart from her, to think of him only as the one man who had darkened the glory of life for her, as the man who had plucked the sweet blossom of her love only to trample it under foot; but she could not succeed. Her mind would go back to those happy walks, those brief moments of gladness when they met, till it wandered to that day in World Wood, when with her hand clasped in his, she had sworn to love him always, no matter what came between them. Yes, she loved him—would love him to the end; though he had deceived and injured her, though he had treated her with such scant courtesy, and degraded her shamefully, her love was still the same.

She shook back her wealth of red-gold curls and rose to her feet; she was growing calmer. She reflected that she had yet to plan her future. She pushed the chair to the door-way and sunk into it. The sun was sinking behind the woods, the air was soft and balmy—its touch seemed like a kiss upon her cheek. The musical note of a bird twittering its "good-night" amid the leaves, the babble of the distant brook, soothed her. She leaned her weary head against the door, and began to think.

One idea stood out clearly—she must leave Hurstley. She dared not even picture to herself a future in the village where her eyes would rest on Stuart smiling at that cold, cruel woman—where she must sit down beneath a repetition of insult that had already roused her spirit almost to madness. No, there was to go, and soon. Ah, if she could, but rush away at once, and let the veil of darkness cover her humiliation! But whither and to whom could she go? Reuben could not take her with him. Mrs. Bright would welcome her for awhile; but she would not meet Robert—poor Robert!

Like a flash of light in darkness came the remembrance of Miss Lawson, and the letter from her sister.

Would it be too late? It was not a week ago, this must be her chance. She rose hurriedly, her limbs trembled, and tied on her bonnet. She would go to Miss Lawson at once; the place might still be vacant; she might start perhaps in the morning! The thought lent her strength, she forced herself to eat some food, though every nerve in her body was quivering from excitement.

The simple viands, the glass of milk, seemed to put new life into her; she left a message for Reuben at the next cottage, and started in her feverish haste for the rectory, leaving all thought of fatigue in the rush of eager desire and hope that burned within her.

Miss Lawson was seated at her window, writing, when her eyes fell on Margery's figure coming rapidly up the path. The governess noted the girl's pale cheeks, her countenance look of pain, and her heart thrilled with sympathy.

"Well, child," she said, as the girl came in.

"Miss Lawson—began Margery, and then her rapid walk told her, and she had receded to a chair.

The governess rose, untied her bonnet, and held a glass of water to her lips. She saw at a glance that something was wrong; but she asked no questions.

"You have walked too quickly, as usual," Margery was all she observed as she turned away with the glass.

"I wanted to see you," murmured Margery, then, after a brief pause, she added slowly, "You remember what you said, Miss Lawson, that evening we parted, you would help me? I have come to claim that promise. I want—"

"Tell me what you want."

"I want what I refused that night—to leave Hurstley—go away altogether. It is too late—oh, Miss Lawson, is it too late to go to that young lady?"

Miss Lawson looked at her keenly.

"No," she replied; "it is not too late. Strangely enough, I have heard from my sister again, urging me to persuade you. I can try it up."

Margery felt the first thrill of pleasure she had experienced during during the long dreary day.

"And soon—I may go soon?" she asked.

"The sooner the better—in fact, to-morrow, if you can be ready," Margery answered, with a weary smile, pushing aside her curls.

"Then I will telegraph to my sister in the morning, when you start. I will go with you to the station and see you into the train, and I think you had better get yourself one or two things when there; you can repay me out of your first quarter's salary."

Margery bent her lips to Miss Lawson's hand.

"I can never thank you sufficiently," she whispered; "you are too good to me."

Miss Lawson pulled away her hand with a jerk; but her face bore no trace of anger.

Eczema on Leg for 25 Years

I have been treated by doctors for twenty-five years for a bad case of eczema on my leg. It did its best, but failed to cure it. My own doctor had advised me to have my leg cut off, but I said I would try the Cuticura Remedies first. He said, "Try them if you like but I do not think they will do any good." At this time my leg was peeling from the knee down. I had to walk on crutches. I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. After the first two treatments the swelling went down and in two months' use of the Cuticura Remedies my leg was cured and the new skin grown on. The doctor could not believe his own eyes when he saw that Cuticura had cured me and said that he would use Cuticura for his own patients. But for the Cuticura Remedies I might have lost my life. I am truly grateful for the wonderful cure that Cuticura wrought. I have many grandchildren and they are frequent users of Cuticura and I always recommend it most highly as a safe and economical cure for skin troubles.

(Signed) Mrs. J. B. RENAUD,

incidentally mentioned that she had met Mrs. Bright, who was in great distress about her son.

"What has happened to him, Aunt Constance?" asked Vane, with assumed indifference.

"I thought I said that he was in love with this girl—wished to marry her, in fact—and is so troubled at her refusal that he has determined to leave England."

"Ah!" ejaculated Vane, looking up suddenly, her cold blue eyes shining like stars. "Reuben Morris has gone to Australia, you say?"

"He starts at the end of the week; he left Hurstley for London this morning."

"And this girl is with him?" next queried Miss Charteris.

"She must be," Crosbie's cottage is shut up, the key has been sent to the Weald, and the neighbors tell me they saw both the man and the girl leave early this morning."

"Could Mrs. Bright give you no clue as to where her son has gone or intends to go?"

"None. She gave me his note to read, in which he merely says he shall leave England for a while. This girl has bewitched him. A marriage with him would have been the best she could expect—indeed, much too good for her," remarked Miss Charteris coldly. "What do you propose to do now, Vane?" she added, rising.

"Nothing. I have finished. Aunt Constance, the game is ours. Do you not see that this young man has gone to Australia with them?"

"Mrs. Crosbie removed her driving gloves slowly."

"I scarcely think that, Vane," she replied, "for Margery Daw has refused to become his wife. His mother is highly incensed and greatly troubled, poor creature, about it. No, I cannot think that, Vane."

"It will prove to be the truth, nevertheless," Miss Charteris said, quietly; adding, "and, as such, it is welcome as a full and complete solution to a difficult and disagreeable question. Poor Stuart—I am sorry for him!"

Mrs. Crosbie glanced at her niece, leaning against the open window, almost frail-looking in her delicate white gown, and could scarcely reconcile the strong, cold, relentless spirit with so lovely an exterior. For an instant a feeling of disgust at this girl's calm trickery and deceit, and at her own shame, leaped into her mind. Then her pride came to the rescue, and she consoled herself with the thought that Stuart had been saved from dishonor and trouble, and that Vane had done well. She bent and kissed her niece's delicate cheek.

"You are very right," she said, thoughtfully. "The problem is solved, and you have done it. I can not thank you enough, Vane."

"Do not thank me at all," the girl whispered. "You know why I did it—my love for Stuart that prompted me. Some day he will thank me, perhaps. Yet, for the present I fear he will suffer."

"With you near, Vane, that will not last," and with an affectionate glance, Mrs. Crosbie left the room.

The next day came, and Stuart still lived in his blissful dreams. Then with a rough hand they were ruthlessly shattered. Vane was reading in the colonnade that afternoon, when she heard hurried steps approaching, and, on looking up, saw Stuart, his face as white as his hands, and his hair as black as ink.

"What is it, Stuart?" she asked hurriedly.

"Vane, something has happened so strange and yet so absurd that, were I not so profoundly weak, I should laugh at it. My man Andrews has just told me that Mrs. Bright has left Hurstley early yesterday morning—for Australia, and Margery has gone with her. He declares it is true."

"True!" repeated Vane. "It is too absurd to credit to one instant, Stuart, how can you believe it?"

"She felt, as she sat in the twilight of the room that had seen her so often in her young, fresh content, that she would be satisfied if her name could be forgotten by Hurstley forever, if, with her departure, the veil of mystery that hung over her life should envelop her in its folds, and she might be lost."

Miss Lawson, turning from her writing desk, saw the plaintive look on the girl's face.

"What is it, Margery?" she asked, abruptly.

Margery broke her thoughts.

"I was wishing," she began, then hesitated, rose suddenly, and went and stood beside her governess, putting one little hand on the elder woman's. "You are so kind, so thoughtful," she said, gently. "You ask me no questions, do not examine me as to why I have come to-night. I must leave Hurstley, and at once; there is a reason, but I cannot tell you yet. Still, you will believe me and trust me, will you not? Yes, yes, I know you will. I have only you to help me now in the whole world, and you will not fail me."

"You wish me to do something more?"

"I want to be lost to Hurstley. I want no one but you to know where I have gone. I want you to keep my secret."

"Miss Lawson drew the girl into the fast-fading light, and scrutinized her face earnestly, almost sternly. The weary sadness in the beautiful eyes, the trembling lips, the wistful expression, told their tale. Miss Lawson was satisfied.

"Yes," she promised, "I will do as you wish—your secret shall be safe."

CHAPTER XIII.

Immediately on her return to the castle, Vane Charteris sought her aunt, and whispered to her the success of her mission.

Mrs. Crosbie willingly agreed to drive over early the next morning, and see what could be done with respect to dispatching Margery from the village; and Vane went up to her room, both satisfied and triumphant. Stuart's eagerness was felt by factors, thereby causing messages from Margery, which Vane uttered giggle and without the slightest effort; and so the first part of her plot proved most successful. She learned from her aunt that the mother and son had met, and that Mrs. Crosbie had carried out her part to the letter, thereby causing Stuart no little surprise and pleasure.

The news of Margery's disappearance came like a thunder-clap to Vane. She had never contemplated this denouement, and was a little puzzled how next to act, until Mrs. Crosbie, in recounting the occurrence of her morning's drive,

HE IDENTIFIED HER. (New York Sun.)

Three o'clock was the very earliest the man could get up to the store, so his wife asked him to meet her then.

"I don't know in what department I shall be at that time," she said, "but just before 3 I will telephone the clerk and inform him to have the goods near the entrance and if you will just step over and ask him to place it all right for you."

At two minutes past three the man sought information as to the whereabouts of the clerk.

"I have a message," said the clerk, from a woman who said her husband would inquire for her about 3 o'clock. Maybe it is for you. She said to tell you that she is in the store and that she is on Sixth avenue to finish her shopping because the clerks in this store are inundated with the place is ill-served and she couldn't find anything she wanted here any longer and never has been able to find anything here and this is positively the last time she will ever try to find anything here. Of course, that might not have been your wife."

"Oh, yes," said the man, "that was she, all right."

Fatal Catarrh. It Causes the Weak to Die Young and Invariably Leads to Incurable Consumption.

Catarrh has at least one fortunate feature—it can be cured by "Catarrh-ozone." In every case this remedy gives instant relief. Never was it known to fail in curing thoroughly.

Mr. Archibald Bass, of New Harbor, writes: "Catarrh-ozone proved a remarkable remedy in my case. I suffered terribly from catarrh in the throat and nose, and was so stuffed up every morning I could barely draw my breath. The mucus dropped back into my stomach, upset my digestion and kept me sick all the time. Catarrh-ozone relieved me in a short time and cured perfectly." Surely your case isn't worse than this. Catarrh-ozone will cure if you give it the chance. The complete outfit lasts two months and costs $1; this size is guaranteed to cure. Sample size 25c, at all dealers. Get Catarrh-ozone to-day!

"Never mind, she'll be here!" shouted one of the crowd on the beach.

"Never mind, then," replied the young woman. "I'll get to shore myself."

COMPARATIVE SPEEDS. (The Tatler)

"Waiter, what are you having carved on the photographer's tombstone?"

"Have you ever been to the Zoo?"

"No, sir, but I am so positive," he said, "I was just thinking how thrilling you'd find it to sit and watch the tortoises go whizzing by."

THE REAL SORROW. (Baltimore American)

"Did your operation cost you much pain?"

"Yes, but I didn't mind that so much as the dollars it cost."

GETTING BACK. (Louisville Courier-Journal)

"On your way," shouted the lady of the house. "I ain't got no wood to chop. There ain't nuttin' you could do around here."

"But madam, there is," retorted the warfarer, with dignity. "I could give you a few lessons in grammar."

APPROPRIATE. (Boston Transcript)

"Flee—What are you having carved on the photographer's tombstone?"

"Fog—Taken from life."

CONSOLATION. (New York Sun)

Knicker—My wife is always praising the men she rejected for me.

Becker—Never mind, she will praise you to her second husband.

SINGLENESS OF PURPOSE. (Washington Star)

"A man should follow a determined course regardless of criticism," said the resolute idealist.

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "but so many of you are that way only when you wait."

AT THE CLUB. (Lippincott's Magazine)

Lady President—What book has helped you most?

New member—My husband's check book.

AT THE SEASHORE. (Boston Transcript)

Ethel—The professor says that my bathing suit is exigent.

Alice—is that a compliment?

Ethel—I don't know. There isn't a dictionary in the hotel.

HIS FAILING. (Puck)

Major Gore—The Colonel, I am sorry to say, hardly ever knows when he has had enough.

Judge Bead—No, when the Colonel had had enough he doesn't know anything.

WHERE PROPERTY IS GOING UP. (London Opinion)

Prospective Tenant—I like the house, but I don't like the high building in front. It's such a dreary outlook.

Agent—Oh, but that's only a chipmunk factory. It might explode any day.

A man naturally has his hair cut when he doesn't want it any longer.

JOHN FISK ON IMMORALITY.

The faith in immortal life is the great poetic achievement of the human mind.

Belief in immortality is the one thing that makes this world habitable for beings constructed like ourselves.

The destruction of the sublime conception of immortality would be like depriving a planet of its atmosphere.

The crude primeval ghost world is always closely associated with the ethical side of life; out of this association have grown some of the most colossal governing agencies by which the development of human society has been influenced.

The fact that primitive man mistated his relation to the Unseen World in no wise militated against the truth of his assumption that such a world exists. Primitive theorizing is sure to be faulty (a primitive instinct is likely to be true).

The belief in a future life is coeval with the beginnings of the human race, in the history of evolution.

The belief in a future life is one of the differential attributes of humanity.

Man is not the only animal that possesses articulate speech and the power of reasoning; he is the only creature who expects to survive the event of physical death.

That wholesale takeplectism which is directed against whatever exists or has existed in the shape of an ancient belief whose violent outbreak of materialistic atheism of the eighteenth century, is surely one of the most mournful episodes in the history of human thought.

We yet sometimes are entertained by a belated eighteenth century naturalist who is fully persuaded that his denial of human immortality is an inevitable corollary from the doctrine of evolution.

The more we try to explain, the better we realize that we live in a world of unexplained residuals.

Those who seek to prove anything by the evidence of disembodied spirits who hold communication with certain mediums are not likely to make much impression upon minds trained to investigation.

How to Cure Toothache.

Any aching tooth can be relieved instantly with Nerviline. Fill the cavity with lard and dipped in Nerviline, and rub the gums with Nerviline also. If the face is swollen and sore, bathe the painful parts with Nerviline and cover with a flannel. This can't fail because Nerviline kills the pain outright and prevents it from returning. Stronger, quicker, more satisfactory than any other liniment, Nerviline has been the largest seller for nearly fifty years; try it yourself, 25c per bottle.

WILD STRAWBERRIES.

Strawberries have improved very much in flavor since the 18th century. Until then the only strawberries eaten were wild strawberries of a kind which would never find a market nowadays. In 1480, however, they were beginning to be cultivated, for Holnshel records under that date a particularly fine crop grown by the Bishop of Ely on the grounds of his palace, now covered by Hatton Garden.

He quotes the Duke of Gloucester as saying to the Bishop, "My lord, you have very good strawberries in your garden in Holborn. I require you to let us have a mess of them."

This account was copied almost verbatim by Shakespeare in "Richard III." Still, even the Bishop's fruit would not appeal much to modern connoisseurs, for the garden strawberries at that period were only transplanted wildlings, the plants being sold at about 4d. a bushel.—London Chronicle.

Wilson's Fly Pads are sold by practically all druggists, grocers and general stores throughout Canada. They kill many times more flies than any other article.

STREET MEETINGS.

(Montreal Witness)

We must have in Montreal one law for every form of religion and if the Jews want to hold a religious meeting they have as much right to as any other body, and must be protected in that right with the utmost power of the civic authority. The acting Mayor draws a distinction, a very reasonable one—between marchers like those of the Salvation Army, who never attack anybody, and those who hold meetings for no other purpose than to act upon this distinction. Even if the addresses were always in language familiar to the police, the people would not be prepared to make police officers judges of what may or may not be spoken. Nor can the judgment of religiously accounted safe courts be applied.

ALMOST AN ANGEL.

(Washington Star)

George Ade was talking at a wedding in Chicago about matrimony.

"Matrimony is perhaps a little too much identified," he said, "with the sacredness of June sunshine, since the idea of changing sides is so much connected with the fact that they are not capable of anything of the sort."

He then in hearty sympathy with old Brown, to whom young black said at a wedding:

"I can never thank you sufficiently, my wife came here making one of me with her first batch of confections."

AN EXPERIMENT.

(New York Sun)

Nurse—What's the matter?

Johnny—The baby is a fable; I threw him on the floor and he didn't bounce a bit.

LOYAL TO BROCKVILLE

Last week an election campaign liar in Brockville sent out a despatch to the effect that Hon. Geo. P. Graham was likely to accept a nomination for Ottawa. When shown the despatch, the Minister of Railways and Canals made the following straightforward and emphatic statement:—

"It is the first time I have heard of it. I could not get a nomination in Ottawa if I wanted it, which I do not. If I am a candidate it will be in Brockville, but the party convention will first have to decide whom they desire I have no intention of leaving the constituency."

The same despatch transfers Mr. A. E. Donovan, M. P. P., to the field of Dominion politics and mentions Mr. John Webster as his probable successor as candidate for the Ontario Legislature.

THE MODEL ENTRANCE

A list of successful candidates who wrote on the Entrance to Model exam., was issued by the Department of Education on Saturday last. In the whole province only 60 passed, and there are 14 Model Schools.

Successful candidates are reminded that the Model Schools open on September 5 next, and that those who wish to attend in order to qualify for limited third-class certificates should make application before August 15 to the Deputy Minister of Education on a form to be supplied by him.

Applications will not be accepted by those who will not be eighteen years of age on or before December 31, 1911. Candidates for admission to North Bay Normal and Model School may ascertain from the Deputy Minister of Education the terms on which they may be admitted.

ELECTIONS SEPTEMBER 21

The Canadian Parliament dissolved on Saturday last and on Sept. 21 the electors of this fair Dominion will have an opportunity of declaring whether Sir Wilfrid Laurier or Mr. R. L. Borden shall rule.

It is admitted on all sides that Canada has prospered under Sir Wilfrid's administration, and many are satisfied to "let well enough alone," but the Liberal Government is disposed to enter into a pact with the United States under which it is confidently predicted there will be a large expansion of Canada's trade with that country in natural productions at prices that will inure greatly to the benefit of our farmers.

The issue between the two political parties is plainly outlined, and if this trade proposal were discussed on its merits electors should have little difficulty in reaching a conclusion, but there is evident in some quarters a strong disposition to evade consideration of the proposal from a business standpoint and focus all attention on its possible effect upon Canada's status as a part of the British Empire.

The preliminary skirmishing of this campaign has been characterized by unusual bitterness, and from now until Sept. 21 Canadians will seek the truth amidst discordant cries.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The second meeting of the Athens Branch of the Ontario Women's Institute was held in Athens town hall July 29th. The interest taken in the Institute by the ladies of Athens and vicinity was shown by the large attendance. After the business of the organization was dealt with the regular program was begun.

Mr. A. E. Donovan, M. P. P., gave an address dealing specially with the benefits to be derived from such an organization, the far-reaching influence of women, and the legislative advantages of the Ontario women.

Mrs. (Rev.) F. A. Read spoke on the "Use and Abuse of Spices," strongly condemning highly seasoned foods, especially for children.

Miss Jessie Taplin, Mus. Bach., favored the Institute with two piano solos. Miss Vera Fraser of Ottawa sang two solos, Miss Nellie Earl being her accompanist. Mrs. Fraser of Ottawa gave a humorous reading. An elocutionary and musical selection was given by Mrs. Fraser and daughter, Miss Vera, in which marked elocutionary ability was shown.

The afternoon was spent very pleasantly and profitably and the next meeting of the Institute will be eagerly anticipated by the members.

Cow Suided

Gananogue Reporter: One day last week one of Mr. C. E. Britton's cows, on his island, got at some paint in a can and ate a quantity of it. Mr. Britton was not aware of the fact for several days, when it was too late for the medicine administered to be of use, and on Sunday it was noticed that the poison was having its effect, as the animal appeared to be suffering and acting strangely. During the afternoon she walked to the edge of the shore and stood looking over the water as though deliberating, and then plunged in. The water was deep, and though efforts were made, the animal was drowned before she could be rescued.

PUBLIC MEETING

The people of Athens and vicinity, irrespective of party lines, will be pleased to learn that our member Hon. Geo. P. Graham, is to address a public meeting in the town hall on the evening of Tuesday next, August 8.

As a cabinet minister and head of one of the busiest and most important departments in the Government of Canada, our member has had little opportunity of meeting and mingling with his constituents, but he has played a prominent and worthy part at Ottawa and his course has been followed with interest by all, and the valuable services he has rendered are duly appreciated.

He will be accompanied here on Tuesday next by the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux.

Arrangements are being made for orchestral music and a pleasant, educative gathering is anticipated.

"Who," asks a reader, "are the hardest worked and poorest paid class of laborers?"

Well, we have not made a careful examination of all the labor reports and conditions may be radically changed from what they used to be, but our recollection of thirty or thirty-five years ago is that the farmers' wives of that date held the record for long hours of labor and poor pay.

The average farmer was not mean to his wife in those days, but circumstances seemed to make it necessary for the wife to do as much work as three women ought to have done.

Often she rose at between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning and got breakfast for her husband and maybe two or three hired hands. After breakfast she milked about six cows, strained the milk and put it away in the milk house.

During the forenoon she walked away her time churning a few gallons of cream in the old-fashioned dash churn. Maybe the butter came in half an hour, maybe it didn't. Then there was the butter to work and be fashioned into rolls.

Of course the house had to be swept and the beds made. Bread and pies had to be made and baked. On Monday the washing had to be done. Before it could be finished dinner had to be prepared for a lot of men with appetites that would make that of an anaconda seem meagre and stinky.

While the men took the noon rest the woman washed the dishes and carried the empty crocks down to the spring house. In the afternoon, in berry time, she picked a bushel or two of berries and rested herself putting them in cans for winter use.

Then she got supper ready and after that washed the dishes again, swept the house, milked the six or seven cows, and from that on to 10 o'clock mended torn garments, put patches on the boys' pants, darned the farmer's socks and sewed the buttons on his shirts.

She worked on the eight-hour plan, two shifts per day of eight hours each. It was no particular wonder that many a farmer's wife at forty looked like a woman of sixty. Her hair grew prematurely grey and the lines of care and worry came into her face while it still ought to have been fresh with the plumpness of youth.

An increase of the farmer's landed possessions means for the farmer's wife an increase of labor. He could hire help, but it was hard to get hired girls on the farm. It is perhaps much better now. We sincerely hope so, for in the old days the farmer's wife worked more hours and worked harder while she did work than any other laborer we knew anything about.

BOILER EXPLOSION

Puts Saskatoon in Darkness and Cuts Off Water Supply.

Three Men Hurt—Newspapers Unable to Publish Last Evening.

Saskatoon, Sask., July 31.—Three men were injured, two seriously, and the city is in darkness indefinitely as the result of a boiler explosion at the city power plant early this afternoon.

The boiler had been leaking all morning, and power was shut off pending repairs, but the leak got worse, and the fires were ordered to be drawn. While being drawn a boiler tube exploded clouds of scalding water and superheated steam immediately enveloping the whole boiler room.

I. Sullivan, a coal wheeler, received the first blast, being blown over a coal pile, but luckily escaped with bruises and a scratched hand. Immediately after came a discharge with the combined force of the three boilers, which were connected, the centre being the source of the trouble, the whole force aggregating 450 horse-power.

Andrew G. Sangster, superintendent of power; Harry Johnson, chief engineer; and Jack Kemp were the three men involved, the first and second named being badly scalded all over the body. Johnson had the flesh scalded almost off both arms and hands, and Sangster was also terribly scalded. Both are in the city hospital, but their chances of recovery are not yet stated.

The explosion tied up the newspapers, which this evening were unable to publish. As the superintendent and chief engineers were injured and only subordinates left to handle the trouble, it is impossible to state when the plant will operate again, as the only means adopted for relieving the tension thus far has been the calling into requisition the services of the forty-horse-power city traction engine, ridiculously inefficient.

The city is devoid of water supply, and business in all shops operated by city power is at an absolute standstill.

DROPPED DEAD

Companions and Conductor Thought the Man Was Intoxicated.

Stratford, Ont., despatch.—Death came in sudden form to B. Plumb, home unknown, to-day, when he fell dead in No. 3 train from Toronto, which arrives here at 12:13 o'clock. Little is known regarding the deceased, who was about 35 years of age, save that he boarded the train at the Union Station, Toronto, along with one A. Watkins. The two men had applied for employment at the Grand Trunk Railway Employment Bureau, Toronto, and both were accepted as helpers and ordered to report at Stratford Grand Trunk Railway shops.

According to Watkins' story, four other men met Plumb and they all sat in the smoker of one of the coaches. One of the four had flasks of whiskey and Plumb drank freely and all appeared to be in the best of spirits. Between Haden and Hamburg he rolled off the seat to the floor, between two seats, but did not strike his head, sliding down easily. The conductor and brakeman, who witnessed this part of the tragedy, thinking the man was badly intoxicated, tried to lift him, but decided to let him lie there and told Watkins to help him off at Stratford.

On arrival here Watkins found that Plumb did not respond to him and called the conductor, who found the man was dead, and a will was sent to Coroner Montoith and Dr. L. Robertson.

"There is not enough money spent on the militia, and I think that Roberts and French were right in what they said."

CONFESSION OF A MURDERER

Young Bell Boy Tells of Killing Aged Wall Street Broker.

Intended to Chloroform and Rob Him to Get Money.

Chloroform Bottle Label Led to the Arrest of the Young Lad.

New York, July 31.—Paul Geidel, a 17-year-old bell boy—slight of stature, sharp featured, and with the smooth, sallow complexion of the youthful cigarette smoker—was arrested here early to-day as the murderer of William Henry Jackson, the aged Wall Street broker, who was found brutally killed in his hotel apartments on Forty-fourth street yesterday.

An hour after the arrest, Police Commissioner Dougherty and District Attorney Whiteman brought out from the room where they had been closeted with Geidel, a long, typewritten confession, which, they said, the lad dictated and signed, giving a full account of the crime. Robbery was the motive, according to the lad's statement, but the murderer got only $8 in cash, and a gold watch, which he pawned for $18 more.

Geidel was a bell boy at Mr. Jackson's hotel, the Iroquois, until last Friday, when he was discharged. He was without money. On going to his rooming place, he noticed a bottle of chloroform, which has landlady had purchased a few days before in order to kill painlessly an ailing pet dog. It occurred forthwith to Geidel, the confession says, that he might obtain money by chloroforming and robbing the aged broker, who was reputed to carry large sums about with him.

The confession, as given out by the police, continues substantially as follows: "Late Wednesday night I entered the basement of the hotel and walked unobserved by the rear stairways to the tenth floor. I climbed into the bathroom of Mr. Jackson's apartment through a transom in the corridor. He awoke as I was preparing to drop the chloroform-soaked rag over his face, and instead of going unconscious at once with the drug, he began a desperate fight. I hit him hard in the face and he sank down helplessly. Then the chloroform did the rest. I went through the room and his clothes, took the little money he had and his watch and hurried out as I had time for. My clothing was badly stained, and I took it to a tailor to be cleaned. My soiled shirt I threw in a garbage barrel on a side street. Then I went home. I am glad now that it's all over. The suspense has been terrible."

The finding of the empty chloroform bottle in Mr. Jackson's apartment afforded the clue that led to Geidel's arrest. The label on the bottle had obliterated, showed that the chloroform had been bought by a Mrs. Kane of West Fifth street, New York. Mrs. Kane admitted that she had purchased the chloroform and said that the bottle was in her bathroom. Later, when she looked at it was missing.

"Why, Paul Geidel, one of my roomers, must have taken it," she said. "He was asking me about it the other day."

Geidel, who was in his room, was immediately arrested, after a little grilling by the detectives, and admitted the crime, which he had committed the night before.

SUDDEN END.

Miss Marie Hockey Expired in Swimming Tank at Woodstock College.

Woodstock despatch.—A sad accident, which resulted in the death of Miss Marie Hockey, of Waterloo, occurred this afternoon at Woodstock College, where the Young People's Missionary Conference is in session. Miss Hockey, a delegate, had been playing tennis, and, getting heated, went to the swimming tank about 3 o'clock with a friend, Miss Sadie Hutton, of Berlin. Miss Hockey went into about four feet of water, and though she acted peculiarly, her friend, who was not in the water, thought she was only playing. Suddenly Miss Hutton saw something was wrong and called for help. The engineer came and the body was taken from the bath, where it floated, face downward. Doctors were summoned immediately and artificial respiration tried for some time in vain, and she was pronounced dead. The doctors consider death due to heart failure or syncope, as no water appeared to be in the lungs. Miss Hockey was a capable swimmer, but Miss Hutton could not swim.

Deceased was the third daughter of Rev. J. E. Hockey, of Waterloo, and was a pupil at the Berlin Collegiate, and about 19 years of age, and a missionary enthusiast. Rev. Mr. Hockey arrived to-night to make arrangements for the funeral.

WANTS A FINGER.

Mrs. Reginald Waldorf, of Philadelphia, Ready to Pay Liberally For It.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 31.—Mrs. Reginald Waldorf, of Philadelphia, a wealthy young widow, an accomplished musician, is willing to pay several thousand dollars for a new index finger. She is here to recuperate from the effects of an operation by which her right forefinger was amputated after becoming infected by an accidental cut with a rusty knife. She appealed to Dr. Fred R. West, who has advertised for a finger. He named no price, but says his patient is willing to pay liberally.

Mrs. Waldorf feared that she could never play piano or organ again when she found that she must part with her finger. Now, however, she is taking hope. A plaster cast of the left index finger has been made and accurately dimensions taken, and Dr. West says he is going to find a finger.

Here is the kind of finger Mrs. Waldorf wants: Index finger of right hand; length, 3 inches, distance from finger top to palm; thumb joint, 2.7-16 inches; proximal joint, 2.4 inches in circumference; middle joint, 2.5-16 inches in circumference; distal joint, 1.1-16 inches in circumference.

LIFE SENTENCE.

Prisoner Gives Judge Whitford Tongue Lashing Before Receiving Sentence.

Denver, July 31.—Frank J. Henwood was to-day sentenced to the penitentiary for life for the murder on May 24 of George E. Copeland, whom he accidentally shot while firing at Sylvester Von Phul, in the barroom of the Brown Palace Hotel. Henwood arose, when asked by the court if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, and replied: "Judge Whitford, I have been for seven weeks in the county jail with over 100 prisoners. Every one of those men is afraid for his life to come before you for trial. You have the reputation of being a biased, prejudiced judge, whose only idea is to convict the men who are brought before you. I know and you know what constitutes a fair trial and I have not had that from you."

Henwood said he had been a true friend of John W. Springer, but yet the court permitted the introduction of improper evidence to show ill-will relations between him and Mrs. Springer in order to blacken his character in the minds of the jurors.

When Henwood had concluded his tongue lashing the court pronounced sentence, which is the extreme penalty permitted under the jury's second degree verdict. He will remain in the county jail, pending an appeal to the supreme court.

STUDENTS FAILED

Medical Students Who Passed Examinations Yet Plucked.

Medical Council Cannot Understand How That Should be.

Toronto despatch.—Spring examination 1911 results: Primary 83 57 36; Intermediate 195 96 109; Final 148 129 21.

This extraordinary statement contained in a report submitted to the Ontario Medical Council this morning by Dr. Lane, of Malloytown, made doctors from all over the province stare at one another in blank amazement. The College of Physicians and Surgeons now want to know the reason for this paradox—why a man should know so much and at the same time know so little.

Dr. E. Ryan, of Kingston, expressed the opinion that it was a condition of affairs which called for immediate action and suggested that some of the subjects in the medical curriculum were not properly taught in the university or that some of the examiners were not doing their duty. Students who are able to pass their final examinations were plucked in the intermediate and the percentage of failures in the intermediate this year was so large—over sixty per cent.—that an investigation should be made.

Sir James Grant, of Ottawa, concurred in this view and intimated that the intermediate examination might be eliminated altogether.

Dr. A. E. Accol, of Belleville, thought there was too much theory and too little of the practical about the examination, and while the Medical Council was well able to look after its end of the examination he suggested that more practical work might be done.

Dr. Ryan, Kingston, thought the time had come when the student who had successfully passed his examinations should not be harassed and inconvenienced and his money taken from him simply because one or two examiners held certain views.

Dr. Jarvis, of London, said that one student who had been plucked in London came to him with a real grievance. He had failed in his examination but the examiners had written "very good on his paper."

On the motion of Dr. Edward E. King, the following committee was appointed to deal with the re-organization of the council: Dr. Ryan, Queen's University, Kingston; Dr. J. MacCallum, Toronto University, Toronto; Dr. MacCall, of Belleville; Dr. E. E. King, Toronto; Dr. T. W. Varden, Galt; Dr. James MacArthur, London, as territorial representative; and Dr. E. A. P. Hardy, Toronto, homeopathic representative.

Chicago, Ill., July 31.—Harry Darnell, veteran balloonist, dropped 700 feet to death in the presence of 5,500 horrified men and women this evening during the holiday festivities at Electric Park, Plainfield, Ill.

Mr. Darnell's particular feat, as advertised, was not so much his ascent in the balloon as turning a double somersault while high above the earth and catching the crossbar of a trapeze by his toes.

Seated in the long hanging ropes high aloft could be seen the apeek that the crowd knew as Mr. Darnell. The spectators caught their breath as they saw the body suddenly revolve twice in the air among the ropes.

Then something happened. The apeek dropped to the end of the trapeze ropes, caught with one foot, hung there for a moment as the balloonist clutched wildly for a hold, and then shot like the stick of a skyrocket to the ground.

It was but a moment later that a crash and splash told that the body had fallen in the shallow water of the Du Page River, in the centre of the park.

Several men waded into the water and pulled the limp body out of two feet of mud in which it had been embedded.

TORONTO COUNCIL

Turns Down North Toronto Annexation Scheme—New Harbor Beard.

Toronto despatch.—By-law providing for expropriation of the Canadian Pacific Railway corner at King and Yonge streets received a six months' hoist, and Railway Company granted permission to proceed forthwith with the erection of its new office building.

Annexation of North Toronto decided against on a tie vote after long and acrimonious discussion, a motion that the question be referred back to the Board of Control being declared lost on the same division.

Controlle Church and Messrs. Lionel H. Clarke and R. Home Smith appointed as Commissioners of the new Harbor Board.

Council reports adversely against the immediate extension of Victoria street to Charlton street.

Contract for laying the second intake pipe was awarded to Roger Miller & Sons, although William Leslie submitted a tender for $9,900 less. Work will undoubtedly be rushed on the new pipe.

Tenders for rubber hose were referred back for consideration.

CRUELTY TO GIRL.

Louis Desautels and His Wife Sentenced at Montreal to Ten Years.

Montreal, July 31.—Ten years in the penitentiary was the sentence given to Louis Desautels and his wife for cruelty to the latter's child, a little girl eight years of age.

Evidence showed that the child had been brutally beaten, the mother's favorite weapon being a frying pan. In addition she had great patches of her hair torn out by her brutal mother. The child has been in the hospital for several weeks in a most critical condition. The doctor's evidence showed that the child had thirty-three bad bruises on her body. Her scalp was torn, and she had a very dangerous wound on the side of her head. Several neighbors gave evidence. The audience in court cheered when the sentence was pronounced.

HONORED AT PARTING

On Wednesday evening over a score of members of Rising Sun Lodge A.F. and A. M. marched from their lodge room to the home of Dr. J. F. Purvis and honored his departure from Athens by presenting him with an address, read by Mr. E. S. Clow, W. M., and the gift of a gold headed cane, presented in behalf of the members, by I. C. Alguire, Sec'y. The address, which was handsomely engrossed and illuminated by Mr. B. S. Cornell, expressed the members' appreciation of his services to Rising Sun Lodge and their regret at his departure from Athens, closing with best wishes for his future success. Dr. Purvis replied very feelingly to the kind words of the address and said he would ever bear in remembrance the happy relationships that had existed between himself and the members of Rising Sun.

ALL SOLD

A week or so ago our readers will remember there were announcements in these columns of Real Estate for sale in Ottawa by F. X. Laderoute at $6.00 a foot frontage.

Every one of the lots—over 200 in number—were snapped up in three days.

This is a phenomenal sale even for Ottawa, but Mr. Laderoute has such a reputation for putting only reliable propositions on the market that the moment these were announced there were preliminary enquiries regarding them and later, an immense sale.

Any person desiring Ottawa property is advised to communicate with Mr. Laderoute, whose address is corner of Bank and Queen Sts., Ottawa.

FOOD - FOR THOUGHT

Who pays the enormous expense of those show-rooms in our towns and cities? Is it not the people who buy pianos there?

Why buy from them when you can get just as good, and in many cases better, from me, delivered Free from the factory to your door? This is one of the reasons I can sell you a piano for less money than you pay at any show-room.

All kinds of instruments taken in exchange. We defy competition for the money in all grades. Get my prices before purchasing, for they are certainly very low for strictly high grade pianos.

Also agent for Raymond, New Williams, and New Home Sewing Machines.

P. S.—Pianos sold on instalment plan when wished.
