Select Poetry.

My Creed and my Brother.

I will not ask my neighbor of his creed, Nor what he deems of doctrines, old or new;
Nor what the rites his honest soul may need
To worship God, the only wise and true;
Nor what he thinks of the anointed Christ,
Nor with what baptism he hath been baptised.

I ask not what temptations have beset His human heart; now self-abased and sore;
Nor by what wayside well the Lord he met,
Nor where was uttered, "Go and sin no more!"
Between his soul and God this business lies,
Not mine to cavel, question, or despise.

I ask not by what name, among the rest,
That Christians go by, he is named or known;
Whether his faith has ever been professed
Or whether proven by his deeds alone;
So there be Christhood in him all is well;
He is my brother, and in peace we dwell.

If grace and patience in his actions speak, Or fall in words of kindness from his tongue,
Which raise the fallen, fortify the weak,
And heal the heart by sorrow rent and wrung;
If he gives good for ill, and love for hate, Friend of the friendless, poor and deolate:

I find in him discipleship so true,
So full, that nothing further I demand,
He may be bondman, freeman, Gentle, Jew,
But we are brothers—walk we hand in hand,
In his white life let me the Christhood see,
It is enough for him—enough for me.

Interesting Story.

Jeanie's Success.

Concluded.

The tears were scarcely dry on her cheeks, and her mouth had a pitiful quiver as she handed the tiny bird to the lady, who received it with grateful thanks. She saw some sorrow was pressing upon the girl, and longed to help her, for she, too, knew the burden of trouble.

Jeanie felt the unspoken sympathy, and how it came about she scarcely knew, but in a few moments she was seated in the arbor, and, unconsciously to herself, in response to a few kindly questions, had given Miss Rothesay the clew to her trouble. And she was asked to come again to see her early in the week.

Meriba and Katherine Rothesay had been brought up in luxury and refinement by an uncle from whom they were led to expect they would inherit a large fortune. But the last days of the old man were so embittered by suffering that at times he doubted even the affection of his faithful neices; and, at his death, left all his property to a wayward nephew, who doled out a scant allowance to his cousins, and then left them to fight their own way in the world, by teaching a small school.

Afterwards it came to light that there was record of a later will in which the repentant uncle had done his neices justice, but, as this could not be found, it was supposed he had himself destroyed it.

With advancing years a hopeless disease settled upon Miss Meriba. Then the school was given up, and Miss Katherine with silvery hair and thinning cheek, herself took in fine needle work and tended her sister with many anxious thoughts for the future.

Only a few hours before had they talked of sending away Tibbie, the little maid-of-all-work; and then came little Jeanie Anderson with the truant bird and her sorrowful face.

The same thought had come to both the sisters; for when she had gone, after a few moments' silence, Miss Meriba said, sadly,—

"It's a sair coming down to the daughter of Donald Rothesay."

"Nothing honest can be a comedown to the daughter of Donald Rothesay," replied Miss Katherine, cheer-ly; "and an hour or two in the evening will rest my eyes from that trying needle-work." Then their eyes met with a bright smile, each brave for the other, and Jeanie's fate was settled.

What a wonderful new life was opened to the discouraged little millgirl when she was told that this gracious lady would be her teacher! How diligently she strove, with an added incentive to her labor, for it did not take long to learn to love the gentle lady. She rose early in the morning stole a bit from her nooning, and worked late at night. Her book lay open by her loom, and her mind was ever on the alert trying to grasp and conquer her task.

Dragging work it became at length, for the truth must be told. Those years of mental neglect and want of discipline taunted her with the hopelessness of her ambition; yet with dogged perseverance she plodded on, knowing not how she exemplified that great saying, "Genius is eternal patience."

Though she was troubled at her own slow progress in those days, Jeanie Anderson was getting something which in after years would tell for her as much as the learning she coveted so greatly.

Miss Katherine Rothesay had that peculiar and rare grace of spirit which communicates itself to others. Because she was kindly, noble minded and unselfish, all the kindliness, the nobleness and unselfishness in others were brought out. Being so gracious, so truly a perfect gentlewoman, the graces of real ladyhood seemed possible to Jeanie Anderson; and as the year went by they grew upon her unconsciously.

Her letters still went to Robert Mc-Farlane in Kirsty's handwriting, and there was to be a grand surprise for him when he came home in the summer. But with the summer came a sad accident to Robert. He broke his leg, and had to spend the weeks he had designed for Rutherglen in the hospital at Edinburgh. Then another year of study claimed all his time; and Jeanie still plodded on her up-hill way.

Robert asked her several times that year to let Kirsty teach her writing, and to study a bit in the evenings; but she would not take Miss Rothe-say's advice to let him know what she was doing; and the pride in which this resolve was taken grew stronger when at the close of the year, Robert had a chance of going as companion and tutor to the Highlands for the summer.

The opportunity came so suddenly he must go at once, or refuse. He went, and Jeanie, with a hurt feeling she would not acknowledge, said to herself, "He'll see for himself when he comes; I'll not tell him."

With this third year came an awakening to Jeanie Anderson. She had been a faithful and diligent student, and now she received the reward her earnestness had deserved. Instead of finding it a laborious effort to conquer her tasks, she grew to love learning for its own sake.

Miss Rothesay detected the superior quality of the mind that was slowly unfolding itself, and felt rebuked for the unspoken thought of pride she had resolutely put down when the teaching of the ignorant mill-girl first suggested itself to her as a duty.

The broadness of Jeanie's dialect was greatly toned down now, and she seldom made a grammatical error. Her companions at the mill took to calling her "Leddy Jane," a title which secretly pleased her, for, though jestingly given, she felt she was growing toward a cultured womanhood, which would one day demand recognition from all.

By a strange fatality, when another summer bloomed in Rutherglen it found Robert McFarlane again in the Highlands, hurried there ere his year's work was scarcely completed.

Miss Rothesay entreated Jeanie now to tell him her secret; but she persistently refused, and the good lady seeing the wounded pride in the girl's eyes, said no more.

When the autumn came Miss Meriba slowly faded away. There were no lessons then from books. The rich cousin opened his churlish heart a little and sent a sum which relieved a part of the great burden of those days.

Jeanie, who had grown very dear to the sisters, now left the mill altogether for a few weeks, and came to be a younger sister, gentle, helpful and cheerful to the life that was passing in pain away, and a strong, courageous support to the other.

One rainy afternoon, while the sufferer slept, Jeanie, lonely and sad, crept up to the little attic to look over some books she had seen stored there.
After straining her eyes over them for a while, she began to replace them in the box in which she found them.
Suddenly her elbow hit a sharp corner of the box; the book she held in her hand fell to the floor, and from between its time-stained leaves slipped a yellow, folded paper—the last will of Alexander Rothesay!

This was only a few days before Miss Meriba passed away; and she went in greater peace, knowing her old uncle's heart had turned lovingly to them at the last. Almost her last words were that Jeanie should stay with Katherine now.

There was no difficulty in proving the will and claiming Miss Rothesay's property. The old life of privation and sorrow faded into a tender memory, and a new one, made cheery and beautiful by the grateful love and care of the bright young girl, dawned for the gracious gentlewoman.

She had masters for Jeanie now; and in a few months, for the sake of the young girl, she gathered about her friends of culture and refinement, such as her altered circumstances enabled her to entertain in a quiet, simple manner. Contact with such people stimulated Jeanie's developing mind.

Through this year had grown a secret uneasiness in the conscience of Jeanie Anderson. She began to question her right to keep from Robert Mc-Farlane what she had done. Might he not with justice blame her for the concealment, and find it a hard thing to forgive?

Many a time she began to write him, but the old, sore feeling, that he had not taken even a day to come to her through these years, mingled with the pride of letting him see her for himself to what she had grown, kept her from finishing the letter. So the winter and the spring passed by; and Jeanie waited anxiously for that summer day which was to bring Robert with the honors of his university fresh upon him.

Jeanie's ambiguous phrasing of the change in her home had led Robert McFarlane to think she had taken service with Miss Rothesay. He had come to Rutherglen a day sooner than he was expected, and was walking slowly down the street, behind the hedge, when he heard, as Jeanie had once done, a voice reading in the garden.

A quick flush leaped to his brow, as he quietly parted the hedge, and looked in. An elderly lady in deep mourning sat there; but it was the younger one who read with such appreciation and interest, in perfectly modulated tones—the young lady with a white dress and violet at her throat, who wore Jeanie Anderson's well-remembered features, crowned with a charm he had never seen, that subtle nameless grace of culture.

In a few moments she closed the book, and said quickly, as if it had been an underlying thought all the time,—

"Miss Rothesay, I fear I have made a great mistake in not telling Robert about my studying, and the rest."

"I felt so all the time," was the gentle answer.

"If he should find it hard to forgive me"—

She did not finish the sentence; but arose and went towards the house with the refrain of that old mill-song on her lips:

"Should he no come back again."

Very quietly Robert McFarlane stole away. He was the one to be forgiven; and this sudden revelation smote on him with a quick painful, consciousness of what he might have lost had "he no come back again."

In these past years the thought of Jeanie Anderson, with her mill-garb and untutored mind, had grown to be an undefined pain to the ambitious student; till, at length, he had bravely faced it, and fought the battle out with himself—loyalty against pride!

Then had the memory of the little girl, who had so generously shared with him her store of hard-earned money, shamed him completely; and he felt humbled that one untrue thought had come to him.

He was fresh from the struggle now; and though this wondrous reward was before him, no wonder he dared not take it just then, and that ever after he felt that it was more than he deserved.

The wise and wholesome restraints of parental love, of family ties, of a good government, of public opinion, and even of social observances, are the best possible preparations for that self-restraint which is the rock on which all true liberty is built. No slavery is so abject and humiliating as that which claims us in servile obedience to our own appetites and passions, and no power on earth can free us from such bonds except the power of self-restraint. This power, like all others, is developed by continual exercise, and he who resists or contemns all external restraints shuts himself out from this development.

The peculiar tenderness of the Irish towards the weak and unfortunate has for centuries been marked and admired by foreigners who have made their acquaintance in their own land. One who visited the country in the exciting times of the Repeal agitation relates an incident of one of the monster mass meetings of the people, which illustrates this amiable trait of Irish character:

One sight in the midst of that tremendous spectacle of crowding, crushing humanity was so wonderful and beautiful that I shall not soon forget it.
In the very centre of that jammed-together throng, I observed one small point unoccupied, which always moved on and on as the crowd moved, but always remained open. What, I asked, can that be? Or why is that little spot there left free? The riddle was soon explained.

In the centre of that little unoccupied space I beheld a cripple! I love the Irish people; but never in my life did I see anything which so much entitles them to the love and respect of every philanthropic, feeling heart as this;
making a space and giving free room to the helpless, pithless cripple in a crowded multitude, through which the strongest giant would in vain have struggled to force his way.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JUNE 19, 1885

IMPOSITION.

Statute labor on the roads was commenced this week, and now that they have commenced work the attention of the people is directed towards the new road to the dyke and a great deal of dissatisfaction is manifested that this road should be placed on the Wolfville Section. The road is almost entirely a private one being used by owners of the dyke and of no use whatever to the village. But a very small number of the Dyke proprietors belong to the village and it seems hard that the village should have to expend money much needed on its public roads to make and keep up a road only used to subserve the private interests of parties living outside. That the Village will put up with this we doubt, but we would advise that whatever is done to relieve us of this imposition be done unitedly and in an efficient manner according to established law or precedence. In union there is strength, and a united and well organized people working against imposition must succeed in a municipal government of the people by the people.

This matter and many others which have come up and are continually coming up in Wolfville should be strong arguments in favor of the incorporation of the village if merely for the advantage of self-protection.

SANITARY.

We notice a deepening of feelings of indignation among persons living near and having to pass "mud bridge" in coming to and going out of the village. From a moral standpoint the doings in that neighborhood are to say the least, disgraceful. From a sanitary standpoint it is even worse, for while, from the nature of the evils indulged, the immoral condition of the place can have little influence outside of itself, the effect of the filth and foul odors emanating from it on all sides must, during the hot weather, seriously affect all within reach of its breath. Every wind that blows from the direction of that row of tenements comes to the nostrils of the passer-by and permeates the residences of those living in the vicinity laden with odors of the vilest type. What can be done it is difficult to say. The persons who own the houses want to make all the money they can out of them, and as their tenants are for the most part poor, the rental will not afford the necessary sanitary improvements. We see one way out of the difficulty. If our people are of the right stamp, and wish to sustain the high standard of morality they are trying to raise in the community, let them buy the buildings and have a big bon-fire. It might possibly be a waste of that property, but it certainly would be a gain to all other property in the vicinity and remove a heinous blot from our fair village.

A WOLFVILLE BOY AT THE FRONT.

The following is from a letter written by Mr Wm. H. Evans to his sister Miss Maria Evans and will no doubt be read with interest by his many friends in Wolfville. Although the 68th regiment was not called upon to help suppress the rebellion still it is pleasing to know that King's county was represented in the Northwest, and that King's county boys were found ready to go to the front in defence of their country when called upon:

South Branch of Saskatchewan, N. W. T., May 24, 1885.

Dear Sister,—I received your letter of the 5th yesterday. It is the first letter I have got since the 13th April. I left Winnipeg on that date for the field of action. We came in the cars five hundred miles when we were unloaded at Swift Current—a station on the C. P. railroad. There were fifty-five teams of us and two were picked on to start at once for the S. B. of S. S., a distance of thirty miles. From Swift Current to Battleford is two hundred and twenty miles. My load was eight tents and rations for ten men for eight days—the other team took the men—so every thirty miles I left a tent, as there are men scattered all along the trail between Swift Current and Battleford. My load got quite light before I got to Battleford. There were two hundred teams, six hundred soldiers, twelve mounted police, six mounted cow boys, and cavalry with two galling guns (a galling gun is got up the same as a cannon and fires twelve hundred shots in a minute), and three cannons. We arrived in Battleford in six days and a half when we were to make the distance in ten. As we made it in such quick time they styled us the Flying Column, Col. Otter in command. The cow boys went ahead. After we were out three days the cow boys came on to a band of Indians of about forty. The Indians fired first so the cow boys went after them (all Indians are mounted or mostly all) and shot two Indians. As it was just night, the cow boys had to come back as their ponies were tired after a day's march. That was the only excitement until we reached the Indian reserve, called "Stony Reserve," where we halted. The mounted men went up to the Indian agent, Payne's place, where they found him murdered with his wife and child (his wife was a squaw, daughter of some chief). Not an Indian was to be seen. We were then in the woods eighteen miles from Battleford; a great number of log-houses in this settlement. About ten miles further on we came to Freeman and Freeman's cattle ranch, where Freeman was shot while fixing his wagon, because he would not give them a fast horse he had. Freeman shot three Indians the night before who were trying to take his horse out of the stable. The Indians drove all his cattle away and shot his hogs because they are hard to drive. That night we camped two miles out of Battleford. About seven o'clock we could see the smoke raising—the Indians heard we were coming so they set fire to Judge Rolough's house and it burnt to the ground, they had raided the Hudson Bay Stores and took all the catables away. They took the carpets and unrolled them, had a war dance, then ran their ponies over them; railed the houses and destroyed all the furniture. It was a shameful sight to see furniture, such as easy chairs, bedsteads, pianos &c., scattered in all directions. It appears that they have a great dislike to feather-beds and pillows for they took sticks and beat them all to pieces. I stopped in Battleford two days when about eighty of us were sent back. I got back about ninety miles when one of my horses took sick. I layed off three days and when I was about ready to start again, there was a medical staff of eight men come along, footsore and tired, and wanted me to drive them to Battleford. So I went back. We arrived just in time for the Drs to be of use, for the day before they had a fight at Cut Knife Hills, forty miles west of Battleford, where there were nine killed and ten wounded. One of the teamsters was shot dead, another shot five Indians. Teamsters do not have to go into the battle-field unless they want to. Each teamster is armed with a rifle and revolver to be used in self-defence. I came back again to Short Station, where I started with the Medical Staff, and where I have been freighting from to Miller Station until about a week ago. In my route I have to go through four miles of woods and five miles of sand hills. When we were about entering the sand hills we saw two men coming, mounted. We stopped and waved our hats but they did not answer it, so we got ready for action. They were coming at full speed. We signalled for the last time and they answered us, and it was well that they did for we might have done something that we would have been sorry for. When they came up they told us that twenty-one teams of oxen and seven of horses had been captured and teamsters. We thought of our loads and skipped too for the South where we are all now for the last four days. We expect to start back to-morrow or next day. They got a despatch that Poundmaker (that is the Chief's name) has given up the teamsters and wants to make peace. This is the last trip they are going to make this way to Battleford as the water in the river is rising and they are going to send freight to Clark's Crossing by boat. There are one hundred and fifty teams going together and twelve scouts, not going through the woods until Col. Otter sends out his regiment to escort us through. I think I will be back to Winnipeg in about five or six weeks. I often think of you all in N. S., especially when I am on guard with my rifle on my shoulder, yawning as I go up and down my beat, looking out for Indians, or Nichies as we call them, and when I lay down with my rifle, bridle and whip at my head ready to skip. I thought it was hard at first, but one associating with hard characters soon gets into their ways and rather likes it. I am enjoying good health. You must excuse this poor ink, for I have made it out of cold tea and powder out of a cartridge. etc. * * *

ASSESSMENT ROLLS.

To the Editors of the ACADIAN.

Your correspondent, "Above-board," probably knows that one copy of the Assessment Roll shall be posted in "some public and conspicuous place" for the information of the people. It is obvious that while publicity is desirable, the safety and advantage, to the rate-payers, of the information sought to be conveyed, would not be attained by posting the book on the hay scales, though that would probably meet the demands of the law. I think the course pursued is to post a copy with the Justice in each Ward, appointed to prepare Highway Labor returns. They are:

- For Ward 1, C. R. Northup, J. P.
- " 2, John P. Lyons, "
- " 3, Everett Kinsman, "
- " 4, James Bishop, "
- " 5, Henry J. Chase, "
- " 6, William Eaton, "
- " 7, D. D. C. Reel, "
- " 8, J. W. Hamilton, "
- " 9, John W. Taylor, "
- " 10, Nelson Patterson, "
- " 11, Thomas Mark, "
- " 12, Douglas Bent, "
- " 13, J. S. Pines, "
- " 14, Joshua Beardsley, "

Then each overseer's clerk has a copy; and in each Ward, the Collector therein has a copy with form of his tax collector's book, so that there can be no difficulty in getting any information in re the assessment Rols; and the charge of "secrecy" is false and misleading.

VOTERS' LISTS.

To the Editors of the ACADIAN.

At present the ordinary citizen of this Electoral District has a hazy idea that he ought to be on the Voters' List and that it was somebody's duty to put him on it; but not uncommonly he finds in the end, when most eager to give his vote, that his name has been left off, especially if he was thought likely to exercise the franchise differently from the wishes of the framers of the Electoral List. This manner of disfranchising electors has reached a high degree of perfection in this District, rendering the labors of our Legislators quite useless. NOTA BENE.

Old Dr Johnson was a benefactor. Seventy-five years ago he invented what is now called Johnson's Anodyne Linctament, the wonderful success of which in the cure of diseases of the head, throat and lungs is truly astonishing. No family should be without it.

It is reported that the late eminent preacher, Dr W. R. Williams, of New York, left a library of 25,000 volumes. Thousands of dollars might be annually saved to farmers if they would give freely of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders to their horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, and fowl. They prevent disease and promote the growth. We said Sheridan's. Those put up in large packs are utterly worthless. Sheridans in large cans $1.00.

CURED.—Mrs. Bingham writes: "I have suffered with a cough for over 12 months. Eagar's Phospholine cured me."

EUREKA!

Found! a Plum Tree that will not Black Knot!

The Masters Plum Tree has stood the test 40 years in Kentville, King's County, Nova Scotia. Chas. A. Masters, of Kentville, found this tree growing on lands now owned by Judge G. A. Blanchard forty years ago, and removed the tree to his garden in the village, where it now stands a healthy bearing tree, and is now owned by me. There are scores of trees throughout the village in bearing from 4 to 20 years old which bear every year, and not a vestige of black knot appears on one of them. The tree is an annual bearer of rapid growth, growing tall not spreading. The Plum is quite large, purp color, and of excellent quality. It is the best preserving plum grown, and sells higher than any plum brought into the market. Last year, while the crop was immense, this plum readily brought $4.00 per bushel, $2.00 more than any other variety offered for sale. We have several hundred first class trees to offer for the Fall planting. That this is the best and most profitable Plum Tree to plant that is grown in the Dominion of Canada, and that it will not black knot we refer the planters of this delicious fruit to F. S. Masters, Barrister, of whom we purchased the original tree; also to Chas. A. Masters, G. A. Blanchard (Judge), J. R. Blanchard, H. B. Webster, M. D., J. E. Moulouey, M. D., Otho Eaton, John Byrne, T. E. Smith, J. A. Shaw.

THE ACADIAN

(WOLFVILLE, N. S., JUNE 19, 1885.)

Local and Provincial.

Rain is much needed.
The weather during the past week has been very hot and dry.

Light and dark Printed Cambrics in handsome patterns at Burpee Witters.

FIRE.—An extensive fire is now running through the woods at North river, doing a great deal of damage.

The usual influx of summer tourists has begun, and quite a number of strangers are in the Village this week.

RELIGIOUS.—Rev. Mr Day will preach in the Methodist Church next Sunday, morning and evening.

A party of our fishermen went to Davison Lake yesterday, but did not get back in time for any "fish stories" this issue.

I. O. G. T.—The annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, I. O. G. T., will be held at Kingston Station on Tuesday, 23d June.

GOOD FISHING.—Elias Kebo, of White Rock, has caught seventeen salmon this season, such to the annoyance of other fishermen.

The bridge which was removed from the front of the Baptist Church a few weeks ago, has been put back in its place this week. It looks as though it was a good deal submerged.

SALMON.—Jacob Pick, of White Rock, while fishing for trout in the mill-pond at that place, caught a salmon weighing eight pounds. He succeeded in landing him, though he had one arm in a sling at the time.

The much talked of Colorado potato beetle has made its appearance in Wolfville. Mr John Harris showed us some of them the other day which he had in a bottle and informed us that he had seen a great many of them in some potato fields.

HEAVY.—Messrs Jas. and Owen Kidson, of Church Street, Cornwallis, have a pair of steers just twelve months old which weigh 1900 lbs. We understand they are fitting them for the exhibition this fall. We doubt if they can be beaten in the County.

GASPEREAU AHEAD.—A few weeks ago we gave an instance where a hen set in fifteen eggs had hatched fifteen chickens. Mr Elijah Eagles, of Gasperau, says he can beat that easily as he set one of his hens this spring on eighteen eggs and hatched nineteen chickens. Don't try to beat that.

We learn that Mr S. C. Moore has lately gone into the nursery business. He has just finished setting out 10,000 root grafts, which he procured from the well known firm of J. F. Rupert, New York State. They comprise apple, pear and cherry, and are of the very best varieties. We wish him every success in his new venture.

HYMENEAL.—In another column will be found the notice of the marriage of John W. King, Esq., assistant manager of the Windsor & Annapolis railway, and Miss Rachael Redden of Kentville. The happy couple left for St. John immediately after the ceremony. The train was highly decorated with flags and wreaths in honor of the occasion. Mr King is well and favorably known in this county and by railroad men all over the continent, and his many friends will be pleased to learn of his marriage. We wish him much happiness.

Clubbing Offer.

Having made special arrangements with the publishers of a number of the leading periodicals of Canada and the United States we are enabled to make a large discount to subscribers. We will send any of the publications named and the ACADIAN one year for the following prices, which as will be seen is in some cases giving two papers for the price of one. Local and Provincial.

We believe there is to be no celebration of the 1st of July at Windsor this year. What is Wolfville going to do about it?

We understand that Evangeline Division, S. of T., intend having an excursion to Parrsboro' by steamer in a few weeks.

We would direct attention to A. C. Redden Co's. new adv. in another column. The "Domestic" is a fine machine and we would advise our readers to call and see it.

The commissioners of streets have notified the rate-payers of the eastern portion of the section to meet for work at Mud Bridge next Monday morning.

DROWNED.—Martin Cleveland, aged 16, son of Mr Alex. Cleveland, of this place, was lost overboard from the ship "Karoo," when ten days out from New York for Antwerp. The sad news was not received by his parents until last week. We tender our heartfelt sympathies.

We notice that the elms planted last year by the trustees of "Willow Bank Cemetery" are nearly all growing and will make a beautiful avenue if left alone, but we see that one of them has had the top broken off during the past few days. They should be looked after at once and no trouble spared in finding out and punishing the guilty party.

We have had a great many enquiries from our friends in reference to the translation of the closing sentence in the serial, "Wired Love," which was concluded in our issue of May 29th. We therefore give it so all can read for themselves.

or, My little darling. My wife.

Three men, James, Samuel and Michael Dunn, of Brule, while coming up the harbor yesterday (Tuesday), about one o'clock, in a row boat, observed a man's body on the shore near the Quarry wharf, lying with the feet toward the bank. They came to town at once and reported the fact. On examination Alex. McEaehren identified the body as that of his son Angus who fell off the brig Champion last fall just outside the harbor. The head and one arm are off the body.—Pictou Standard.

On Saturday night the house of Capt. Seymour Malcolm, of Hantsport, was entered, and a sum of money and jewelry stolen. Thief entered by a window, and must have either been an adept in the business, or one very familiar with the house, as the money was in a bureau in Mrs Malcolm's sleeping room and it would seem that he went direct to it, as there was nothing else disturbed. But in making his escape he lost part of the money and a gold pin just outside the window.—Hants Journal.

SAD.—A sad drowning accident occurred at Medford, in this County, on Thursday last, the 11th. A little seven year old son of Mr Albert Coffin left school unknown to the teacher and, it is supposed, went to the river bank, unfastened a boat that was there and started for a sail. Some time after the boat drifted back to her moorings and search being made, the body of the boy was found in the bunt of a weir belonging to Mr J. S. Sandford. The boat had probably been carried away by the tide and the boy being frightened, jumped overboard to save himself. Had he remained in the boat he would probably have been saved, as it drifted back with the next tide. The funeral took place on Sunday. We sympathise deeply with the bereaved parents.

OPPORTUNITIES.

Work while yet the daylight shines, man of strength and will; Never should the streamlet glide useless by the mill. Wait not till to-morrow's sun beams upon the way, All that thou canst call thine own lies in thy to-day. Power and intellect and health may not always last; "The mill cannot grind with the water that is past."

Oh, the wasted hours of life which have drifted by, Oh, the good that might have been, lost without a sigh; Love that we might once have saved by a single word; Thoughts conceived, but never penned, perishing unheard. Take the proverb to thine heart, take and hold it fast. "The mill cannot grind with the water that is past."

OLD FOGYISM.

The rubs, disappointments and sorrows of a hard world make lotus land a necessity, and what most interests us is always seen through a lotus land mist. Youth looks forward, age backward, through this magical haze. What is ambition in the one becomes old foggism in the other, and both are living in air-castles and develop their best thoughts and actions in this unreal abode. Fashion has changed much, but it has not changed the deeper tissue of the heart, or the deeper nerve organization of the brain. It has written the ban against sentimentalism, but real sentiment remains untouched by its decrees. Fashion itself has its old foggy dreams, and the world-hardened cynical old dowager herself, who has closed her ears to praise or censure, nods paralytically before her fire, and finds her lotus land in the flaming coals. An old foggy is not old, though he be a patriarch as to years; age may have shriveled his flesh, robbed him of his teeth and distorted his joints with rheumatism, but the sap of youth is untouched in his heart. He is the real and only successful alchemist; he has discovered the virgin earth called "old foggism," and by its aid is enabled to convert all the baser metals of life into pure and uncorrupted gold. (Boston Gazette.)

—Half an hour after a painter had finished painting the front steps of a house on Fremont street, and had put up a board with the warning "paint!" in large letters, a boy came along and gave the job a thorough looking over. Had the painter painted, or had he not? Did that sign on the board mean paint on the steps or around in the back yard? He pondered over these things for a long five minutes, and then decided to investigate. If this was an old gag, all right, if it was a new wrinkle he wanted to catch on early.

Without stopping to spit on his hands the boy boldly advanced up the walk, removed the board, and walked up the five steps and down again. He left tracks and he smelt paint, but it needed more than this to convince him. A woman came around by the side-gate. She had the broom raised over her head in both hands. She brought the brush part down on the boy's head as if she meant to drive his heels through the pine planks, and as he fell against a tree-box and rolled into the gutter she yelled: "Them steps has been painted!" "Y-es," replied the boy as he started off for a walk, "but I wouldn't hardly have believed it!"

—No woman will love a man better for being renowned or prominent. Though he be the first among men, she will be prouder, not fonder; as is often the case, she will not even be proud. But give her love, appreciation, kindness, and there is no sacrifice she would not make for his content and comfort. The man who loves her well is her hero and king. No less a hero to her, though he is not to any other; no less a king, though his only kingdom is her heart and home. It is a man's own fault if he is unhappy with his wife, in nine cases out of ten. It is a very exceptional woman who will not be all she can to an attentive husband, and a very exceptional one who will not be very disagreeable if she finds herself willfully neglected.

—"I should like to write for your paper," said a brisk young man who asked to see the editor. "Bless you, my boy," said the penpusher, emerging wearily from a wrestling match, catch-as-catch-can, with the name of a Russian general, "you need not write for it; just hand your money to the cashier, first door to the right, and he'll send it to you all right," and he plunged into a sea of exchanges, while the young man, after falling into the coal closet and walking into a wardrobe, managed to find the door leading to the street and escaped with what money he had about him.

It is impossible to ascertain how far virtue will predominate until opposed by temptation.

To our Customers in Wolfville and elsewhere. We have not had time to paint our Store, whitewash the hitching post, or straighten up our wood pile this spring, but we have cleaned up the old paint, washed the windows, and are selling that unsightly pile of wood as quickly as we possibly can.

What has kept us so busy? Why we have been selecting, receiving and putting in shape one of the finest stocks of Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, a n Furniture, etc. that we have ever had the pleasure of showing in this place before.

WOLFVILLE, APRIL 16.

THE BOOKSTORE!

Eagle Building, Wolfville, MAY 19th, 1885.

Riel has been captured and the papers announce that the Rebellion in the North West is practically at an end. This is encouraging news and makes all loyal people feel good, but it is only a cipher in comparison to the joy we have felt during the last few months as we have supplied our customers with Room Paper at less than cost and seen them depart full of that joy and happiness which can only come to those who feel that they have done a good deed.

True it does not pay in dollars and cents to sell at cost but it does pay in the satisfaction we have of making families happy and homes clean and pleasant.

And still the great work goes on. People are coming daily and hourly to buy. They do so and go away happy. Probably never in the history of Wolfville has Room Paper been sold so cheaply as now. We have been (and will continue till our present stock is exhausted) selling our papers at the same prices as we paid for it at the factory in England. You cannot afford to lose the opportunity.

Just think of it, Room Paper at one-third the price you have been paying all your lives. Oh verily, in the words of Burdette, what is home without its wall paper.

We have no second price and ours is a "bona fide" cash sale. Come early! come 3 or 8 times a day, but come! and we will make you smile.

Ever keeping in mind the fact that we must work for the welfare of our customers we have after two years of patient waiting been enabled to secure the services of Mr. John F. Herbin to carry on a Watch Making and Jewellery business here. We can assert confidently that although he has spent two years and a half in the west he is perfectly harmless and that he can clean and repair your watch and repair your Jewellery with that neatness and thoroughness which can only be attained from a life-long study and practice of the trade. Give us a call and see for yourself. All his work is guaranteed and must give satisfaction.

When you come for your room paper at one-third the usual price bring that Watch that wont go and that clock that points to half past six and strikes 25 when it is only 3:15 and you will be able to get to Church in time to make a full inventor of Deacon Smith's wife's spring bonnet and silk dress and Squire Jones' whole outfit before your beloved pastor has thought of commencing on sixtieth. Oh yes time is a great herb but must be correct in its habits to be properly appreciated.

By the way, if John wants a new School Book you might also bring some change with you for we can fit him all out for the next term in about two minutes; and who knows but that he may some day be some kind of a governor if he lives and uses our books to advantage.

Ours is a work of love and we are bound to do it so long as people have homes to beautify, children to educate, and watches, clocks and jewellery that wont keep time.

Don't forget, we live in the Eagle Building and it is next door to the Onion House.

Beware of cheap imitations. Ask for the Western Book & News Co.'s and see that our name is on the sign over the door. None other is genuine. Yours, muchly,
