Blair, Wilson, Anderson, Colter - who shall say that these men will not honorably and ably represent this constituency? Now that the contest is over, will any man calmly and soberly state in what way our representation would have been improved by the substitution of any one or all of the opposition candidates for one or all of the quartette named above? Has not the county done its duty by itself? The calm judgment of the people of this province will ratify the choice of this constituency.

The opposition made a tremenduous struggle. From the first it was more than a local contest. Opponents of the government in all parts of the province felt that if they could defeat Mr. Blair or even reduce his support from this county, a change of government would be inevitable. Hence they left no stone unturned to accomplish their object. They swarmed into the county and stumped it from school house to school house; they subscribed an immense corruption fund. Mr. Gregory and his local organ had proclaimed that this county had been bought up by the government, and believing it the oppositionists all over the province hoped to be able, by deluging York with money, to obtain a verdict which their sectional jealousy. arguments could not win. At every poll they had very large sums and offered for votes prices such as never were before offered in this country. But all in vain. They might as well have kept their money home; for the great mass of the people of York are too true to the county's interests, too well informed as to the political condition of the province; too manly and independent to be influenced even by the most lavish expenditure of money. If York could have been bought the opposition would have owned it on Thursday night. But this county was not for sale, and the vast bribery fund, raised in St. John, Westmorland and elsewhere was useless. That the result of the election on Thursday was the expression of the opinion of the unpurchaseable, honest vote of York cannot be truthfully denied.

Comparing the election with that in January, the fact will be observed that Mr. Blair does not lead Mr. Gregory by as great a number of votes as he did then. This is altogether due to the fact that a full ticket was run by the opposition, a good many of the votes which made up Mr. Blair's majority in January being from divided ballots. On this occasion, as the returns show — both tickets ran very squarely, the slight differences between the candidates being what might be called accidental. The only marked opposition gain in the vote of any locality was in St. Mary's front. It is not difficult to account for this change, which politically has no significa-

One of the most exciting elections ever held in York county was that of Thursday last. For the first time in many years two square tickets of four each faced each Intelligence came to hand on Tuesday last other before the electorate and the result was a contest of remarkable keenness. In Meanwhile traders are shipping all they can. an era of abundant prosperity. The gentle- of the sad death of Andrew McGlinchey, a the city it was hot work from start to finish. Very early in the day the opposition began to bid high for votes, and before the polls closed they had paid out a very large amount of money, without, however, being able to affect the majority which the government committees estimated upon. With all their great outlay they were unable to make a break in the government ranks. There was no serious disturbance of the peace during the day, in which respect the election passed off in most exemplary fashion. At the Gibson poll very much hot work was done. The Marysville influence was actively exerted for the opposition, with the result of changing about to a St. John paper respecting the new uni- Arthur, the 19 months old son of H. sixty-five votes over, and bringing the government candidates in a minority of one CRUELTY TO ANIMALS .- The directors of versal language. Money and other influences were lavishly used to accomplish this purpose-Nashwaak Village gave a splendid account of itself, however, and so did Stanley. and they so offset the vote in Gibson, that whereas in January the average vote for the government candidates in the Nashwaak parishes of St. Mary's and Stanley was 342 against an average of 487 for the opposition, on Thursday the average for the govern. ment ticket was 666 against 653 for the opposition, a very substantial and gratifying gain. Fredericton, Marysville, and Stanley gave the government ticket on Thursday an average of 1364 votes as against an average of 1122 for the opposition In January, these same polls gave the government 991 votes and the opposition 968, that is the majority for the government on Thursday was 242 in the districts named, There was an alarm of fire Saturday where in January their majority was only 23. It is not detracting from the importance of other sections of the county to say that the district named has hitherto been onsidered the great battle ground - the debatable section - hence this greatly increased majority for the government is very gratifying, and all the more so in view of the tremendous influences brought to bear at the Gibson poll. The opposition made a considerable gain at Canturbury station. Here they had a great brigade of canvassers with more money than they knew what to do with. O. Crockett announced publicly there on Friday that they had bought 161 votes. This was Mr. Gregory's vote. Mr. McFarlane got 162, and Messrs. Colter and Allen 163 each. According to Crockett the one vote in the one case and the two votes in the other were not bought. We give this man's statement for what it is worth, believe this young man's libel on Canterbury. In Temperance Vale the opposition also made river, the scow struck on a point, and the falling sparks. The fire was quickly sup- a considerable gain. In the other parishes the changes were not very material and call for no special comment. The average vote for the government ticket in the whole county was 3097; that for the opposition ticket 2741, giving an average majority for the government ticket of 356.

On Friday morning it was nearly impossible to find a man in town, who confessed to have voted the opposition ticket. as the owners never expect to have any use George Colter has not been seen in town since his defeat. He is understood to feel it very keenly.

Mr. Allen was around as usual on Friday. He tried to make the best of his second defeat; but he was a good deal like the little boy who, when he hurt his toe. said "he was too big to cry and it hurt too awful to laugh."

Mr. McFarlane was the only opposition candidate who was visible when the returns were coming in. He bore the discouraging reports about as well as could be

Mr. Gregory is mad all the way through. Four consecutive defeats are a pretty hard dose, and he has the additional burden of his own company. Others may de ceive themselves as to the object of the late campaign and the real motives of its instigator. He cannot. He knows, as he alone can know, how richly he deserves his repeated defeats.

AT THE GOAL.

They found him in the silent place By his own fancy peopled fair. Where gleamed on many a pictured face The light his own had ceased to wear.

Yet in the sightless eyes the while There seemed some costasy of trance, And on the rigid mouth a smile Of more than life's significance.

They looked upon the painted scene Fraught with the magic of his mind, The outlined purpose, clear and keen, That never now should sequence find.

Alas - they said - his hand is still That shadowed forth the growing though Powerless his subtle brain and will That life to deeper meaning wrought!

Alas! alas! - again they cried -To miss the vision almost found ! To fall upon the mountain-side So near the summit glory-crowned!

But still the dead eyes gazed before, Like one who sees the happy end ; And still the face transfigured wore The look they could not comprehend ;

For they that o'er him sorrowing bent. And mourned the life too early done, Wist not the smile's pale rapture meant The dream fulfilled, the glory won ! -KATE PUTNAM OSGOOD, in Harper's Weekly

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

I had a secret from Mr. Bowser for fully six weeks, and the fact so weighed on my conscience that, when he came home the other evening, I handed him a newspaper and remarked : "Mr. Bowser, will you do me the honor to read that little poem?" "Who is it by ?" he asked. "Read it."

He read it and pronounced it a little gem, and then I was weak enough to tell as a hoax. "Oh, you are, eh ! That accounts for it." "For what !"

"For the namby pamby style, the wildness of the rhyme, and the higglety pig-

For the next six evenings Mr. Bowsen was closeted with himself and that poem. Then, as I knew by his general demeanor stairs after he was asleep and found it in verse ran as follows:

The leaf is falling — the wind is sobbing, And the autumn is at hand so dreary and forlorn.

And the embers of the dying years must re mind all of us

That everything dies-everything
