"A GOLD LADEN DERELICT" OR The Impecunious Adventuress.

CHAPTER I.

"I'm not going to say what I think of your performance, Kenneth, because I'm quite sure that Mercia has said it already," remarked Kate, with true sisterly reserve. Then, with equally characteristic feminine inconsistency, she added: "But, really, it was magnificent! I knew you would win! You always do when your side is in the right."

"A nice sort of reflection on our judicial system, my dear Kate," laughed Kenneth again, for laughter came easily to him just now, not only because of his triumph, but perhaps even more on account of something that he had seen in the hazel eyes which just now had looked up into his.

"Well, and what did you think of the case, John?" he continued, turning to his sister's companion. "Quite a drama in real life, wasn't it?"

"Yes, Kenneth," said John Ackersley slowly, and with just a suspicion of the northern burr in his voice, "but I hope this won't be the last act of it, and, though I'm no lawyer, I don't think it will be."

"Neither do I," said Kenneth, more seriously this time, "and certainly I hope it won't be. But now I shall have to ask you all to excuse me for two or three hours at least. I'll see you all at dinner at eight, if I can possibly scramble through and get home. I've asked Nevil, but he has another dinner engagement."

"What a pity!" said his sister, with just a snap of malice in her tone. "Nevil would have made such very interesting company to-night."

John Ackersley did not at all like this familiarity of Christian names, although he knew it was merely a relic of almost lifelong acquaintances and of old school days; still it tormented him a little, as was perhaps only natural under the circumstances.

Kenneth Markham uttered a general good-by and hurried away after the departing crowd, to get over to his chambers in Middle Temple Lane, where he knew that a solicitor by this time would be waiting for him with a brief which had to be mastered before morning.

As he went down the steps into the Strand, he heard the usual babel of shrill and raucous voices which flows westward in full tongue between four and five o'clock. For the first few moments he heard it with unheeding ears, then an unchin close beside him on the pavement screamed out, just under his ear:

"Great failure in the city! Startling news! Reported suicide! Ere y'are, sir"—and then, in a hoarse whisper of confidence: "It's Markham's that has gone, sir—father of him as won the big case 'ere to-day, Paper, sir? Globe, Telegraph, or Express?"

It was the voice of fate speaking through the lips of this ragged urchin. Failure! Suicide! Markham!

CHAPTER II. AFTER THE SHOCK.

Mr. Crudge, Kenneth's clerk, sitting in his little office, heard the door open with unwonted haste, and his employer came in with a globe clenched tightly in his right hand. He knew the news already, for a Star and a Telegraph were already lying on his table, and none knew better than he did how grievous was the blow that had fallen upon the man who had been the one friend and benefactor who had so far crossed the dreary life path which he had trodden.

Mr. Crudge was a spare, thin-faced man of middle age and middle height, with thin hair, honest eyes, and a head which, as to its upper part, gave evidence of considerable mental capacity. His nose, rather massive and somewhat arched, was that of a strong man, but the wide, loose mouth, and the narrow, shallow jaw, were those of a weak one, and that was one of the reasons why, at forty-five, he found himself more or less a failure in life.

His name, too, had been against him, by no means an uncommon occurrence in this curiously constituted world. His father's name was Crudge, and his mother, who had boasted of a remotely aristocratic ancestry, had insisted on having him christened Lancelot. The combination was, of course, hopelessly absurd, and he had suffered from it all his life.

Kenneth passed him without the usual kindly word of greeting, threw open the door of the anteroom in which lawyers and consulting clients were wont to wait, and went into his own sanctum. Mr. Crudge heard the key turned in the door, and then came silence.

The little American clock on the shelf behind him ticked off some three thousand seconds before his faithful patience became exhausted, and anxiety took its place. He turned around, and said to the clock, whose hands were arranging themselves to make it five of the afternoon:

"I can't stand this any longer. There must be something wrong with the governor. Either this horrible news has been too much for him, and he's fainted, or else—"

But the other idea was too terrible to be translated into words. He went to the door of the sanctum and knocked rather louder than usual, and to his comfort he heard a voice like and yet somewhat unlike his master's reply:

"Well, what is it? I can't see any one now. Oh, is that you, Crudge? Come in."

"Beg your pardon, sir; the door's locked."

"Oh, yes, of course it is. I forgot that."

Then he heard the key turned in the lock, and the next moment he was looking up with anxiously inquiring eyes at the white but still strong and sane face of the only man on earth whom he loved and revered.

"Oh, it's all right, my dear Crudge," said Kenneth, putting his hand on his shoulder, and making a somewhat sorry attempt to smile. "Yes, yes, I understand what you've feared, but you ought to have known me a little better: than that. Still it has hit me very hard. I don't know whether I mesmerised myself looking at that thing," he went on, pointing to the globe on his table, "but perhaps—"

"What time is it?"

"Just five, sir," said Mr. Crudge, looking up with added anxiety in his eyes.

"What! Five?" exclaimed Kenneth, his voice rising almost to a shout. "Good heavens! what a fool I am!

"What can I have been dreaming about when I have so much to do—yes, and to think about, too."

He rubbed the palm of his left hand across his eyes and forehead, and looked about him at the familiar walls and bookshelves as though he scarcely recognized them. Then he went on, more quietly:

"Dear me, dear me. Why, I must have been asleep, or something else. I ought to have been home half an hour ago. What on earth will they be thinking? Look here, Crudge—run up to the stand and bring me a hansom with the best-looking horse you can find. I shall drive to Wimbledon. Yes, and go to the post office. Wire home that I am coming, and send another wire to the city, and ask Hodgson, or any one who is there, to wire back full particulars of anything that has happened in Wimbledon. Hurry up, now. While you are gone I will have a rinse."

The orders were given in a quick, peremptory tone, which quite reassured Mr. Crudge. The brain which had done such wonders that day had thrown off the stupor with which this swift, unpeppable calamity had benumbed it. It was quite safe for him to leave his master alone now, and so, with a quickly spoken, "Certainly, sir," he disappeared.

YOU LOOK OLD WORN OUT TIRED OUT!

While the Cause Differs, the Condition is the Same

Your Local Druggist Guarantees Vinol to Restore Your Old-time Strength and Energy

Why do run-down, anemic, over-worked, tired-out men and women continue to drag around in this condition, unhappy themselves and making every one around them unhappy, complaining about their condition, when we guarantee VINOL, our non-secret cod liver and iron tonic, to create a hearty appetite, aid digestion, induce sound sleep, make rich, red blood, and in this natural manner create vim, vigor and energy.

There are thousands of men and women in Canada, once run-down, anemic and sickly, who are now strong, hearty and well, all owing to VINOL.

Mrs. James Stock, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, says: "I suffered from general debility and a nervous breakdown; I was depressed, weak and tired all the time. A neighbor told me about Vinol, and after all other medicines had failed to help me, VINOL built me up and made me well. I heartily recommend VINOL."

For all run-down, anemic conditions, weak women, over-worked men, feeble old people and delicate children, the druggist's guaranteed VINOL to make rich, red blood and build you up or return your money.

strong in disaster as it often is in death, Kenneth went into the little dressing room at the other end of his suite of chambers, and he washed his hands and sponged his head and face, just as he had done many a time before after a hard and exciting tussle in the courts.

Within ten minutes Mr. Crudge was back. He had a flask of brandy in one hand and a bottle of soda water in the other. He put them down on the table, got a glass, and said: "Cab's at the door, sir. Found him as I came back from the office. Horse just out of the stable, and a likely looking man. But you must have this first, sir. I know it's against your rules, sir, but must ask you this time positively. It's a long drive, you know, sir, and you've had a very long day's work."

By the time he had finished, the brandy was in the glass and the cork out of the bottle.

"You're a good fellow, Crudge, but you know—"

"Yes, sir, of course we know; but this time, if I may say so, it is really necessary. Allow me, sir, if you please."

And he held the glass nearly full of the sparkling, cool-looking golden liquid toward him.

Kenneth had always been one of the most rightly temperate of men, but at the moment his lips were parched, his tongue seemed a stranger in his mouth, and his nerves seemed aching about his muscles like slack cords. He took the glass and emptied it in two or three gulps.

"Thank you, Crudge," he said, as he put the glass down. "Yes, I think you were right. Now I am ready. You'll put out the lights and lock up, won't you? I'll telephone you first thing in the morning. Good night."

A couple of minutes later his cab had pulled up through the western traffic to Wimbledon, via Hammer-smith and Barnes.

CHAPTER III. THE SHADOW OF SHAME.

Heathcroft is one of those cozy, three-shaded houses, with a generous allowance of garden land, whose upper windows look out across the road to Roehampton, over Wimbledon Common.

It is a big, roomy, comfortable-looking house, built twenty years before the desirable family residence invented by the modern builder and the real-estate agent came into existence. It has a square, substantial tower, at the top of which is a four-windowed room, about sixteen feet square, study, library, smoking room and observatory, recognised as Kenneth's own private and particular domain.

As the cab rolled around into the carriage drive, Kenneth looked up and saw a red ray of light from the setting sun glowing on the western window, and before the cab had stopped at the door a cloud bank had drifted up from the south and the ray vanished, leaving the window blank and cold.

"Not an omen, I hope," he muttered, as he got out of the cab, "but it looked like one."

The door opened before he could get out his latch-key, and his sister, white-faced but clear-eyed, came forward to meet him.

"I suppose you've been to the city, Kenneth; but father is here, and Doctor Harding is with him. It has been an attack of heart failure, but he has been a good deal better the last hour."

"What?" said Kenneth, as he went in with her. "Heart failure! How on earth could he have got from the city?"

(To be continued.)

So that singers in the hotel may practice whenever they feel the urge, the Majestic Hotel, New York, has had a glass enclosed studio built in the roof garden, where the song birds can try out their voices without disturbing other guests.

Allies Create New Situation.

Will Help German Government --
Reds Broke off Negotiations --
Socialists Increasing Demands --
Lloyd George and Turkey --
Improvement in Sterling Exchange.

GERMANY AND ALLIES' ATTITUDE.

LONDON, March 22. (Via the Postal Telegraphs)—Negotiations were proceeding between the German Government and the Communists as late as Saturday night and were at that time making satisfactory progress. Later on, however, news came that they had failed, probably owing to the fact that the Independent Socialists had increased their demands on hearing of the situation in the west, where the Communists were gaining the upper hand. British news from Essen, Dusseldorf and Elberfeld indicates, says Reuter, that these three centres are in the hands of the Spartacists. There is something like anarchy at Essen, and there is no doubt that a considerable number of troops will be necessary to restore order in Western Germany. At Leipzig fighting is still in progress between workmen and the military. As regards the attitude of the Allies, it is understood that the establishment of order and the necessary measures for effecting this are under serious consideration of the Entente Governments. Lord Kilmarnock has already intimated that the Allies' attitude towards the Ebert Government remains unchanged, and that the Allies are quite prepared to continue such assistance as they are giving so long as there is in Germany a stable Government that can re-establish its own position.

IMPROVING POUND.

The Times expresses British satisfaction at the improvement of exchange, and the new estimation of the British position by the Americans. "In a little more than a month the value of the pound in terms of the United States dollar has risen from $3.20 to $3.50. This advance, amounting to nearly twenty per cent, has taken most people by surprise. Previously there had been a disposition in the United States to ascertain the condition of British finance with that of the rest of Europe. It was only the more thoughtful students in America who realized that Britain had paid a large proportion of her war costs out of taxation, had ceased borrowing, that her floating debt, though large, was less formidable than it was on the Continent, that Britain had set a limit to the issue of paper currency, and that progress in reconstruction was, in spite of many difficulties, already considerable. British finance is being disassociated in the minds of the American business men from the finance of the rest of Europe."

HELPING CENTRAL EUROPE.

Important negotiations are now, and have been for some time past, in progress between Allied representatives and the neutral governments of Switzerland and Holland and the Scandinavian countries with a view to the participation of these states in a scheme of credits now under discussion, the effect of which is to secure financial and economic rehabilitation of Austria and other central European states. The serious financial, economic and social condition of these countries has been recognized, and the neutral governments are keenly alive to the fact that the collapse of these countries would necessarily have effects which could not possibly be confined to their own frontiers or their own finances. Meetings of a satisfactory nature have already taken place in Paris, and Sir William Goode, British Director of Relief, leaves next week for the Hague and Copenhagen to confer with the governments of the Netherlands and Scandinavian countries regarding the details of the proposed scheme. It is understood that a representative of the United States government will participate in these conferences.

DUTCH BANKER'S SCHEME.

The Times welcomes the suggestion made by a well known Dutch banker, Westerman, president of the Rotterdam bank, Vereeniging, now visiting London, that a conference of international bankers should be entrusted with the task of drawing up a scheme for the economic rehabilitation of Europe, and thinks that "practical men are much more likely to evolve a workable scheme than a conference of politicians and diplomats; and the Council of the League of Nations would be well advised to adopt the course suggested."

CAIRO TO CAPE FLIGHT.

The Cairo to Capetown flight has been accomplished for the first time.

Colonel Van Rynveld and Major Brand, representing South Africa, in a Voer Frekker machine, supplied by the Union Government to take the place of Silver Queen the second which was wrecked at Bulawayo, left Bloemfontein on Saturday, reaching Capetown the same day. The total distance from the aerodrome at Heliopolis, five miles from Cairo, where the flight started, to Capetown, is 5,206 miles.

LLOYD GEORGE AND THE MUS-SULMEN.

An official report is issued of Premier Lloyd George's reception of the Indian Khilafat delegation. He assured the delegates that the Mussulman's case in respect of Turkey had been listened to with conscientious care by the Allies. The decision was only arrived at after weighing very carefully all arguments, all facts, all considerations and all appeals which came from Mohammedans in every part of the world. It was very largely affected by the opinion of India, and especially the Mussulmen in India. Let not any Indian Mohammedan imagine that we entered into this war against Turkey as a crusade against Islam. Turkey suddenly slammed the door in the face of her old ally and thus prevented our getting through to help Roumania and Russia. By that means the war was prolonged two years. The Allies were giving justice alike to Christians and to Mohammedans. Austria got justice. We did not propose to deprive the Turk of his lands, but neither did we propose that he retain power over lands which were not Turkish. Of the Armenian massacres, the Prime Minister said it is quite clear that the Turkish Government is incapable as at present constituted of protecting its own subjects.

The State and Motherhood.

Maternity Homes: Suggestions by the Ministry of Health.

A memorandum was issued recently by the Ministry of Health in Britain in regard to the construction of maternity hospitals and homes. It is advised that the period for which a woman should remain in the hospital or home should never be less than fourteen days after the birth of a child. It is desirable that the period should be extended to three weeks or even longer. Where a mother is unable to seek admission to a maternity home owing to family responsibilities some assistance can be given through "home helps," and the home or hospital may be able to recommend such women directly or give information as to where applications should be made.

DOUBLE BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

"Danderine" creates mass of thick, gleamy waves

In a few moments you can transform your plain, dull, flat hair. You can have it abundant, soft, glossy and full of life. Just get at any drug or toilet counter a small bottle of "Danderine" for a few cents. Then moisten a soft cloth with the "Danderine" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Instantly, yes, immediately, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will be a mass, so soft, lustrous and so easy to do up. All dust, dirt and excessive oil is removed. Let Danderine put more life, color, vigor, and brightness in your hair. This stimulating tonic will freshen your scalp, check dandruff and falling hair and help your hair to grow long, thick, strong and beautiful.

Cecil Roberts the English correspondent, had many novel experiences, but none that impressed him more than an entering Cologne to find that the enterprising German publishers had in anticipation of the army of occupation stocked up with books printed in the English language.

In Defence of Haldane.

CREDITED WITH SAVING PARIS AND THE CHANNEL PORTS.

Lord Haldane, the ex-Minister of War, who was so much maligned in the early days of the struggle, finds Mr. James Douglas jumping to his defence, declaring that history will credit him with his great share in the winning of the war. Reviewing Lord Haldane's new book, "Before the War," Mr. Douglas writes:

"History will show that Lord Haldane at the very crisis of our fate saved the world by organizing the Expeditionary Force, the Territorial Force, and the Special Reserve. He found chaos at the War Office. He evolved order. Read the fourth chapter. It is conclusive.

"Some day perhaps Lord Haig will say publicly what he has said privately about the Haldane reforms.

"Some day perhaps he will tell the British people that they owe their existence to those reforms.

"When the war broke out 'hours meant years,' and some day history will show that the fate of the world trembled upon a margin of 48 hours, and that this margin was secured by the swift decision of three men—Haig, Grey and Haldane. And the organizer of victory who gave the world that margin was Lord Haldane. Without that margin there would have been no Marne, no Ypres, and no deliverance from immitigable and irretrievable catastrophe."

Major General Sir F. Maurice in a review of the book also says that the machine which Haldane had created and set in motion on the outbreak of war saved Paris and the Channel ports. He goes on:

"Such is our debt to the man, recognized and honored by all soldiers, from Lord Haig downwards, who know the facts, as the greatest Secretary for War within memory, a debt which, to our shame, has been paid by ignorant abuse and venomous slander."

Twenty-Seven Children

AND ONLY THIRTY EIGHT YEARS OLD.

Frau Navoczny lives in a three-roomed apartment in the east end of Berlin, with no fewer than twenty-one children. Frau Navoczny, who is of Polish origin, is a young-looking woman of thirty-eight. "I think being always surrounded by children keeps one young," she said. "My family comprises three sets of triplets and four of twins. Then I have four others alive, but I have unfortunately lost six. Otherwise my family would number twenty-seven. My husband has good work, and allows me 200 marks a week (£10 at pre-war rates); five of the children also work, and are able to contribute something, while quite a number of people who are interested in my little family are very kind in sending me useful things. Thank heaven, my children are healthy. I must admit that it is sometimes hard to feed the whole circle. My husband can eat the week's ration of potatoes at one meal, and that means buying a lot at fancy prices. Meat? We have a nice stew on Sunday's regularly. We eat in three parties. We used to take some of all ages in each party, but we found that a mischievous triplet or twin would sometimes secure two dinners at the expense of one of his brothers or sisters, so now we sit down by ages. But they do eat a lot."

Too Great a Prize.

A Kentucky weekly paper, in speaking of a wedding, says: "The bride is a woman of wondrous fascination and a remarkable attractiveness, for with manner as enchanting as the wand of a siren and a disposition as sweet as the odor of flowers, and spirit as joyous as the carolling of birds and mind as brilliant as those glittering tresses that adorn the brow of winter and with heart as pure as dewdrops trembling in a coronet of violets, she will make the home of her husband a paradise of enchantment like the lovely home of her girlhood." Some tribute.

COMMUNISTS WELL ARMED.
LONDON, Mar. 22.
The Essen Communists number ten thousand well armed workers and troops, and this number is steadily increasing, says a despatch to the London Times from Rotterdam, quoting the Rotterdamse Courants' Essen' correspondent. The Communists have at their disposal big guns, armoured cars and airplanes. Communist troops also are in power at Dortmund, Borghum, Elberfeld, Barman Hagen, Iserlohn and Hattingen. The police and Government troops are too weak to do anything against superior number and better armed men.

MURDER SOCIETIES.
LONDON, March, 22.
Despatches from Ireland, during the weekend, show the murder of Thomas McCartan, Lord Mayor of Cork, to have produced an intense, if subdued, sensation throughout Ireland. London has been deeply stirred by the incident and the newspapers which, while unreservedly condemning the crime, maintain it does not differ from those which have long terrorized Ireland. It is declared that Ireland, for the moment, is largely under the domination of secret murder societies, members of which are sworn to kill those whom they believe to stand in their way, but who the conspirators are, puzzles the police as much as the public. It is remarked as a phenomenon that where murder societies exist, members after a while begin to be suspected of murdering each other.

GERMAN SITUATION CRITICAL.
Paris, March 22.
Negotiations between members of the Ebert Government and the party leaders of the German National Assembly and delegates of workers, which have been going on at Berlin, are declared in an official British report to have been interrupted, because of an increase in the demands of the workers. Spartan forces still control Dusseldorf, Elberfeld and Essen, where great disorder prevails. The situation is critical, and Southwest Germany is quiet, but some agitation is noted in the agricultural sections of Pomerania and Mecklenburg. Eight thousand persons have been killed since the German revolution broke out on March 14 and of this number 850 were killed in Berlin alone.

QUIET IN FRANKFORT.

All was quiet in Frankfort Sunday afternoon, says a despatch to the London Times from Brussels, but there was continued turmoil with loss of life reported in various parts of the country.

DUE TO SOLDIERS.
DUBLIN, March 22.

PURE SALT

Windsor Table Salt

'I AM MORE GRATEFUL TO Taniae than words can express, for it has given me health and happiness after twelve long years of suffering,' was the enthusiastic statement made the other day by Mrs. Olive Peltier, of Vermont.

"I am more grateful to Taniae than words can express for it has given me health and happiness after twelve long years of suffering," was the statement made the other day by Mrs. Olive Peltier, No. 26 East Allen Street, Winocski, Vt.

"I had been troubled so long with nervousness and sleeplessness that my housework was a drudgery and I got little pleasure out of life. My appetite left me entirely and at times I could hardly bear the sight of food and what little I did eat caused me severe suffering afterward. Gas would form on my stomach so badly that it affected my heart and I thought I had heart trouble.

"I was so nervous I would jump at the least unexpected noise and would drop everything I had in my hands. I got so weak and faint at times that I would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling over. My sleep was broken and restless and I was losing weight rapidly. I had little strength or energy and, as I had tried all kinds of medicines without relief, I had become very much discouraged over my condition.

"My husband had been taking Taniae and when I saw what wonderful results he was getting I decided to try it myself and now I think as much of Taniae as he does because it has helped me the same way.

"My appetite has come back and everything agrees with me perfectly. I am taking on weight rapidly and have already gained nine pounds; in fact, I feel perfectly well in every way. Taniae has done wonders for me and I am only too happy to tell others about it."

Taniae is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, and by the leading Druggist in every town.—adv then chief of United States naval operations, was the official who told Rear-Admiral Sims not to let the British "pull the wool over his eyes, and we would as soon fight them as the Germans." Admiral Sims testified to-day before the Senate Committee investigating the Navy's conduct of the war.

IMO-MONT BLANC JUDGMENT.
LONDON, Mar. 23.
The Privy Council judgment in the case of the steamship Imo versus French steamer Mont Blanc, and the cross appeal concerning the collision which caused the Halifax explosion in December, 1917, that the Council is clearly of opinion that both ships were to blame for reciprocal neglect to have reversed engines, and should have gone astern earlier. The appeal and cross appeal therefore both fail, and the judgment appealed from is affirmed with no order for costs.

MURDERED MAYOR'S FUNERAL.
CORK, March 22.
Fifteen thousand persons marched to-day in a procession, escorting the body of the late Thomas McCartan, Lord Mayor of Cork, from the Cathedral, where funeral services for him were held, to the cemetery of St. Finbarr, where the burial took place. Eight thousand Republican volunteers many of them in uniform, were in the ranks of the marchers, who paid tribute to the memory of the murdered head of the City Government, who was shot to death early Saturday morning by an unidentified assassin.

A New Wireless Service.

In a short while the Telegram will be able to treat its readers to an extra foreign news service, in addition to the regular cable messages, which will go on the same as ever. The new service will come from Great Britain direct to the Admiralty wireless station at Mt. Pearl. The messages, on the other side, will be sent from the Horsea Station, a great Admiralty wireless plant which supplies all the navy with news. This is called the Horsea Press. The other city newspapers will also be receiving the Horsea Press news.

NOTE OF THANKS.—Mr. Michael Hickey and family desires to thank Mrs. (Capt.) E. Benson, the Misses A. Power, J. Barron, H. A widow named Hewitt, 75 years old, who lived alone in London, died from suffocation after falling in a fit while undressing. She had spoken to no one except her doctor and landlady since the death of her husband and daughter eighteen years ago.

An exciting dream was probably the cause of the sudden death of Arthur John Anderson, 53, of London, England. The medical officer stated that Anderson's heart showed little sign of disease. Great excitement, such as that experienced in a dream, could have caused death.

airplane cannon, which is of Weight-Hispano design, was built to pierce armored airplanes, tanks, submarines and dirigibles. The motor is a modification of those used in the war. Unlike the airplane machine guns, which shoot through propeller blades, the airplane cannon is arranged inside the propeller shaft and shoots through the hub of the propeller. Two machine guns are attached to and synchronized with the motor for use in cases where the heavier shots would be unnecessary.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHY WOMEN CONCEAL THEIR AGE.

RUTH CAMERON

Someone asked the question, the other evening, why it is that a woman minds telling her age so much more than a man?

It seems to me the answer is almost too obvious to make—because advancing years make so much more difference in her attractiveness to the other sex than they do in the case of a man.

Perhaps you will not instantly accede to that, but look about you and notice what 50 years means to a man and what it means to a woman, and see if you do not agree.

Take a woman of 50. She is probably matronly looking; if her hair is grey, young men in the street care to give her a seat! She probably wears glasses, and I never yet saw a man who looked as well in glasses as she does without them; she may be very likable and companionable, but unless she is the one woman in a thousand, there is no suggestion of romance about her.

A Man's Grey Hairs Are no Draw Back.

Now take a man of 50. Let him have hair greying at the temples, or even all grey—that takes away some of his charm in the eyes even of a younger woman (I can remember when I wrote my first story at the age of 12 or thereabouts, my hero had iron grey hair); the years have given him features strength, and as strength is one of man's prime charms to woman, that is no drawback; if he wears glasses, as never noticeable on a man as on a woman. It would be perfectly natural and easy for a woman of 30 or even 40 to fall in love with such a man if he has a pleasing personality.

It Can Be Done.

But a woman of 50 must have an extraordinary personality for a man of 30 to find a suggestion of romance in her, to say nothing of actually falling in love with her.

Of course the thing has happened. I know of two very happy marriages where the woman was 50 or over and the man 30, but these were extraordinary cases—the women were remarkable women, one in ten thousand.

To be sure, all the interest of life does not consist in keeping one's attractiveness to the other sex, and advancing years do not mean the restrictions they used to mean in our great grandmother's day, when women put on caps after the first grandchild was born. But they do mean more restriction and more loss to a man than to a woman.

The Measure of a Woman's Age. There is a very familiar saying that a man is as old as he feels and a woman is as old as she looks. One must add to that, however, "and as old as her friends know her to be."

What's the use of looking 40 if some old friend who knows your age goes about telling people that you are wonderfully young for your age and asking them if they would ever realize you are 50?

No, if a woman can conceal her age, I can't say I really wonder that she does.

A Brooklyn, N.Y., resident, seeking a flat has had circulars printed saying his family of four was a quiet one; that they did not jazz and keep the house vibrating with a piano; that they did not have a mob of company, and that the rent was ready on the first.

UPS AND DOWNS.

W. M. MASON

All mortals have their ups and downs, in all the modern styles; one day they will 'neath Fortune's frowns, the next enjoy her smiles. I gambol when I have an up, and when a down appears, I try to drink my bitter cup without unmanly tears. Some men put up a gorgeous front when all things come their way; they blithely tackle every stunt, their curves are glad and gay. They move with an elastic step, the bluff they make is tall; we say, "These men are full of pep, they're winners, one and all." We've only seen them when the ups have filled their money vats, and they're as chipper as the pups that chase the village cats. But with the dismal downs on deck, they show up cheap and stale, and they invoke the name of Heck, and raise a plaintive wail. And we, who wondered and admired when they pawed up the dirt, confess that people make us tired who shrivel when they're hurt. Some people calmly take their joys, and do not tear their gowns, or make a woful, sobbing noise, when ups give way to downs.

THE KICK UNDER THE TABLE.

After a man has been married awhile and his wife has grown used to his manner and style. When she knows from the twinkle that lights up his eye. The thoughts he is thinking, the wherefore and why, and just what he'll say, and just what he'll do. And is sure that he'll make a bad break ere he's through. She has one little trick that she'll work when she's able.

He may fancy the story he's telling is true. Or he's doing the thing which is proper to do. He may fancy he's holding his own with the rest. The life of the party and right at his own best. When quickly he learns to his utter dismay. That he mustn't say what he's started to say. By his wife, who has taken a kick at his skin.

If he picks the wrong fork for the salad, he knows that fact by the feel of his wife's slippery toes. If he's started a bit of untellable news. On the calf of his leg there is planted a bruise.

Oh, I wonder sometimes what would happen to me if the wife were not seated just where she could be. On guard every minute to watch every trick. And keep me in line all the time with her kick.

Caught by Ink.

FRAUDS DISCOVERED BY WRITING FLUID.

In a recent case, Mr. Charles Mitchell, the famous expert on inks, gave evidence regarding pension papers which were alleged to have been forged. Although the ink used throughout looked exactly the same to the ordinary eye, the expert showed that a number of different inks had actually been used.

Few people know that practically every kind of ink is different from every other kind used at the present day, and that any ink used now can easily be detected from ink used, say, a hundred or two hundred years ago. The forger has not only nowadays to imitate his victim's handwriting, but he has got to be careful to use his victim's actual ink unless he wants to be bowled out.

In a case a short time ago, for example, Mr. Mitchell showed that a will which was dated and had the appearance of being written in 1898 had actually been written ten years later, and from that very fact alone was proved to be a forgery!

The Cline of the Red Ink.

Dozens of cases of forgery for old age pensions have been proved by Mr. Mitchell. Evidence of age in many cases had been accepted from entries in the family Bible, and the ink expert showed that many of these entries, though dated seventy years before, had actually been written a few months before the pension was claimed!

One of the most remarkable trials in which the whole case turned on the question of ink was that of Humphreys in Edinburgh. Humphreys claimed to be the Earl of Stirling, and in support of his claim he produced a number of documents supposed to date back to the seventeenth century and early eighteenth century. One of these documents was dated 1639, and had comments on it in red ink by the supposed Chancellor of that day. Red ink wasn't invented till 1780, a hundred and forty years after the document was supposed to have been written!

Brinkley, the Croydon poisoner, was brought to the scaffold largely on the evidence of the ink expert, who showed that the will of Brinkley's intended victim was signed with no fewer than three different inks, showing that it had been signed and witnessed at three different times instead of all together, as the law demands.

Old Ink is Best.

Nearly all modern inks are made from a mixture of galls and coppers, which combine to form a kind of iron. It is this combination which gives the black appearance to ink. This mixture in the first place is almost colourless, only turning black after the writing has been exposed to the air for some time. To make it appear at once upon the paper, therefore, the mixture is coloured in various ways, making the famous blue-black inks now used everywhere. Nearly every manufacturer uses a different kind of colouring matter, and this is one of the ways in which the inks differ, and can be detected by the expert.

In the old days ink used to be boiled steadily for a long time to make it black, but in those days ink was made by the housewife as part of her ordinary duties, and many quaint ink recipes can be found in old cookery books.

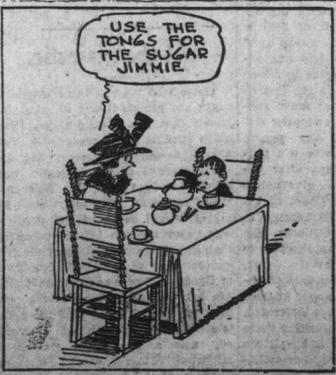

The best inks in the world are the oldest. They were chiefly made of lampblack, like the present Indian and Chinese inks. Many ancient Roman documents which are preserved in museums, though two thousand years old, have the writing on them as black as the day when it was written.—Pearson's Weekly.

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor; C. T. JAMES, Editor

TUESDAY, March 23, 1920.

His Excellency The Minister.

An occasional, unconscious bit of humour comes to us out of the visit of our Ambassador Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Europe in the person of the august Minister of Marine and Fisheries...

The letter, which shows the conferring of the title and dignity of Excellency, is a translation from the Portuguese, enclosed in a communication to a fish buying and exporting firm in St. John's...

Failing acquiescence to his demands, His Excellency the Minister made it plain that he would hand over the importation and sale of all Newfoundland fish to one firm, and to emphasize his threat announced that he had already appointed his sole agent in Lisbon...

cy the Minister of Fisheries has been carried out with and by the expressed sanction of the Newfoundland Government, or it has not. The question to be answered is whether Mr. Coaker on his own responsibility or with Cabinet approval has run amok in Europe and created a situation fraught with much danger to the export fish trade of this Dominion and its people.

TRANSLATION.

Oporto, 20th February, 1920. Dear Sirs.—A meeting was held yesterday at 3 o'clock of all the Codfish Importers in this market, which was presided over by His Excellency the Minister of Fisheries of Newfoundland, Mr. Coaker. Mr. George Hawes, of Alicante was also present. The purpose of this meeting was for His Excellency the Minister to know whether the Codfish Importers had any remarks to make or objections to raise in connection with the recent decree made by the Newfoundland Government to regulate the exports of codfish.

As we are informed that the appointment of the International Mercantile Co. as exclusive importer is subject to the Newfoundland Government's sanction, we think that the Lisbon importers should hold a meeting with the object of protesting against the policy which is being adopted, and that the said nomination should be cancelled.

We are very much surprised to conclude from the above that you were not aware of all the arrangements made by the said Minister with the International Mercantile Co., because, if you knew you would certainly have been able to prevent such a thing from taking place.

We also beg to inform you that the said Minister has left Oporto this morning for Paris.

Unquestionably the product has a firm hold on the public taste, and backed by the established worth of the product is gaining daily many new friends. More than one grocer in the city has been selling on an average a case of "Klim" per day.

Hon. W. F. Tuberculosis Among Soldiers.

The Secretary of the Women's Patriotic Association begs to enclose the following letter from the Military Hospitals Commission, which has been sent her with reference to a statement made at the meeting of the Women's Patriotic Association on the 1st March. St. John's, March 19, 1920.

Dear Madam.—With reference to the statement made at the meeting of the Women's Patriotic Fund (sic) on Monday 1st instant:

"That there were so few cases of Tuberculosis among ex-service men, that there would be no justification for the expenditure of the £7,000 for the Recreation Hut in connection with the new wing for soldiers and sailors at the Tuberculosis Sanatorium."

I have the honour by direction to state that there are at present one hundred and seventy-seven ex-soldiers suffering from Pulmonary Tuberculosis. 50 are in Hospital. 10 have refused treatment. 35 are considered improved, but not sufficiently to allow them to do work of any kind, and they are in receipt of a total pension. 12 are considered to be in a quiescent condition. 15 considered to be in an apparently arrested condition. 30 considered to be in an arrested condition, and 25 apparently cured.

This does not include ex-members of the R.N.R. of whom there are quite a number. Probably our greatest problem is that of dealing with tuberculosis, as every week men are being sent to us with a query "lung condition of incipient Tuberculosis"; and have to be cared for by this Commission if the disability can be shown to be aggravated by or due to service.

McMurdo's Store News.

Among latest arrivals we note a shipment of McMurdo's Cold Cream of Roses in collapsible tubes. This Cream is a variant on our regular Cold Cream sold in pots, and is largely used by those—not a few—who prefer a soft cream with a greater than usual amount of water incorporated therein. The style in which it is put up recommends it to others. While to still others its very moderate price attracts others. We have nothing at any near value at the price on our shelves. Thirty cents a tube.

A New Monument Afoot.

Readers of the Telegram will be interested to know that there is just now afoot a new movement which has or will have a bearing on the matter of Prohibition. What the movement is cannot be told, for those who are at the back of it do not care, at present, to say. Whether it is another anti move or a Pro is not definitely known and could not be ascertained. More detailed information is promised our readers as soon as it can be gathered. It is known, at any rate, that the movement is altogether unlike any that have been made in this country in connection with Prohibition before.

Newfoundland's Gift.

Stanzas from a poem by C. Fox, in "Sailor Town," published by George H. Doran Company, N.Y.—Dedicated to Newfoundland's Dead in the World War.

Gifts from a full garner—wealth from a brimming store—
How shall these things be offered from a seagirt land and poor?
—who have neither gold nor jewels, cattle nor corn—
I (says Newfoundland) give the lads I have borne!

Tell o' the Banks when the white fog spins a shroud there,
Tell o' the Gulf when the Fundy gales are loud there,
Tell o' the ice-pack grinding south by Labrador—
These things have I paid . . . yet will not grudge my part in war.

Rone o' my bone—and in bitter pain I bare them!
Blood o' my blood—oh, it's cruel hard to spare them!
Splendid sons of seamen—more than life to me—
No new thing is sacrifice to them which use the sea!

Salt is the sea-crust on our land's wave-fretted shore;
Salt, salt seas, they bring our seamen home no more,
Salt, salt winds, they'll blow them home no more to me—
Well we know the taste of it those menfolk use the sea!

Mr. Warwick Smith Replies to Mr. Beresford.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir,—In your issue of this day's date appears a letter headed "Another Opinion," and signed T. F. Beresford. As to his attack upon Dr. Blackall, I leave that to the doctor himself to answer.

I desire to contradict flatly the insinuation contained in the expression Mr. Beresford makes use of in his letter, namely, "foolish twaddle he palmed off on the very gullible audience last Friday." I cannot conceive how Mr. Beresford, an Englishman who arrived in this country only a year ago, and who has spent his time here teaching children at the Methodist College, has sufficient knowledge and experience to step up a Newfoundland audience. If he were used to meeting the business men of this city he would not call them "gullible." I question if there was ever a public meeting in St. John's of a more representative character. Representative men engaged in commerce, banking, law, medicine and teaching, as well as intelligent and skilled workmen were there, and not only were they present, but they stood to their feet to vote in favour of the resolution. Clergymen of the highest standing in the community approve of the movement, and it is supported heartily by men of all classes and creeds. To call such men as these "gullible" is to slap a direct insult at men, many of whom contributed to the Methodist Campaign Fund and whose contributions in past years provide the wherewithal to pay Mr. Beresford his salary.

And who voted "No"? A bare three or four, and the only one that I, the chairman, could see with pluck enough to stand up was a member of the Prohibition Vigilance Committee.

Now, let me inform Mr. Beresford that untruthful statements and uncharitable aspersions only hurt his cause. Such a statement was made at the Prohibitionists' meeting on Sunday, March 14th, by a clergyman who is a native of Newfoundland, having been born, as I was, in Notre Dame Bay. That statement was very much resented. Mr. Beresford's slur will be more deeply resented.

The clergyman in question made the statement (so the newspapers report and so I am informed by those then present) that these behind the movement were there simply to satisfy their appetites for strong drink. The result of this rash, untrue and uncharitable remark was that a lady—officially connected with one of the largest Methodist Churches in this city—asked her husband, who is also of the same faith, to appear and publicly state his intention to take an active part in the campaign. Now, remember this gentleman and lady were strong prohibitionists. They have children attending the college in which Mr. Beresford teaches. The lady is well-known for her philanthropy, and both husband and wife are in close touch with the poor of this community. The lady especially interests herself in helping working women and girls.

This special knowledge, no doubt, converted them from being extreme prohibitionists to becoming, like myself, advocates of regulated drinking for those who consume alcoholic beverages. Now, that which turned these sympathizers into strong and active supporters of the movement was the remark of the reverend gentleman above referred to.

Insult never pays. I shall try to keep all personalities out of this campaign, and I hope that people who profess to follow more closely than others in the steps of Him Whose Name is Love will not have again to be reminded that in this campaign they are expected to be truthful, courteous and Christian.

Yours truly,
WARWICK SMITH.

Commander Fenn Lectures to A. B. C.

There was a very large attendance at the service of the George Street Adult Bible Class on Sunday afternoon to hear the address of Lieut.-Commander Fenn on the British Navy—its origin and growth. Such a subject could not fail to attract wide interest and particularly when treated by one so competent to deal with it. Lieut. Commander Fenn was on active service during the war, but with the modesty characteristic of naval men, brought into his address very little of his personal experience, but spoke eloquently of some of the outstanding acts of heroism and devotion to duty, which will live through the centuries as an inspiration to our race. The speaker began with an interesting review of British sea power, showing the different stages in the development of ships and methods of warfare, and described how many of the present day customs and rules of the sea came into being. Mention was made of the prominent naval actions of the past, which by reason of the courage and indomitable perseverance of British stock, had contributed largely to shaping the course of the centuries. The audience was given a graphic description of the methods employed in protecting the British Isles during the war, and the many ingenious means devised for combating the submarine menace, which in 1917 was so dangerous to our existence as a nation. At the conclusion of the address a vote of thanks was heartily tendered to the speaker.

Our popular soloist Mr. Carl Trappell, made a much appreciated contribution to the programme.—Com.

Culpable Negligence.

In reply to a message of ours to the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, regarding the treatment of the West Coast mails, we have been informed that the Sagona is being placed on the Cabot Strait in conjunction with the Kyle, and this is hoped to somewhat relieve the situation. But we would point out that the situation will be out aggravated should these boats continue to pass by Port aux Basques from North Sydney without landing the West Coast mails. Since the 14th January we have had only two foreign mails, averaging barely one a month, and when these have arrived, they have been some two to three weeks old. Trains have been at Port aux Basques waiting for mails and passengers, but the boat passed on direct to St. John's, thus depriving the people of the West Coast of their mails for another week or more. We are aware that for some time certain influences in the Capital have been advocating the St. John's-North Sydney route in winter time, the sole object of course, being to avoid any delay in the city mails. We, however, seeing that such would tend to the neglect of the West Coast, have protested, and will continue to do so, until such time as the interests of the West Coast have been duly protected. If direct mail service is desired from St. John's to a point in Canada, then let such be maintained without any interference with the Cabot Strait service.—Western Star.

Ingraham Arrives.

WITH SHIPWRECKED CREW.

The steam tug D.P. Ingraham arrived from the scene of the wrecked steamer Tewkesbury yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Leaving the wreck at 5 p.m. Saturday the relief vessel was forced to shelter at Trepassay until 5.40 Monday morning. Capt. Prideaux states that the Tewkesbury struck the rocks at 2.30 o'clock on St. Patrick's morning, the weather at the time being very thick. He was below and asleep when the ship went on the rocks, and was awakened by the second mate calling "all hands on deck." Arriving on deck it was seen that the steamer was fast aground and that abandonment was absolutely necessary. Two large lifeboats were provisioned and made ready, and at daylight the ship was abandoned. At 9 a.m. the houses and beach at Peter's River could be made out through the fog and a landing was attempted. Owing to a heavy sea running the boats were badly broken and the occupants thrown into the water, were rescued by the fishermen of Peter's River and Middle Gut. The shipwrecked people were brought to the homes of the fishermen, where they were shown every consideration. On Friday last the Ingraham was at Peter's River, but heavy seas prevented the fishermen from launching their dories, so that the work of embarkation was delayed until Saturday at low tide. A start was then made for St. John's, and while passing the wreck, it was seen that it had broken off abait the bridge deck. There arrived by the Ingraham Mr. Fred. H. Ellis, Manager of the Tug Company, who surveyed the wreck on behalf of Messrs. Bowring Bros., Ltd., Lloyds Agents, also Captain J. Prideaux and crew of forty, and two lady passengers. None of the cargo can be salvaged as it all nitrate and of course worthless owing to being soaked with sea water. The ships fittings may be salvaged, although it is practically certain that Sunday's breeze finished her. Barring minor injuries, all of the crew are quite well and thankful to be alive. Captain Prideaux states that but for the heroic conduct of the Middle Gut and Peter's River men, some of the crew at least, would be drowned, and he and his crew are deeply grateful to them. The Captain and crew will leave for their homes in the United Kingdom by the first boat offering.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—Mr. Warwick Smith, Chairman of the Anti-Prohibitionists, (for such Mr. St. John, their Secretary, admitted them to be) occupies nearly a column of this morning's Daily News in a reply to the letter of Mr. Beresford. From it I cull the following two paragraphs:

"And who voted 'No'? A bare three or four, and the only one that I, the chairman, could see with pluck enough to stand up was a member of the Prohibition Vigilance Committee. No one questions the courage of this youth, for did he not, armed only with a revolver and a lead pencil, accompany the crew of a British man-of-war in an attack on 'moonshiners' at Flat Islands, Bonavista Bay?"

He ends up his letter with these words:

"Insult never pays. I shall try to keep all personalities out of this campaign, and I hope that people who profess to follow more closely than others in the steps of Him Whose Name is Love will not again have to be reminded that in this campaign they are expected to be truthful, courteous and Christian."

All I have to say, Mr. Editor, is that, judging from Mr. Smith's letter in today's News, he is having a frightfully hard time "trying" to keep all personalities out of this campaign.

Yours sincerely,
J. R. SMALLWOOD.

A Trenchant Reply to Mr. Beresford.

Editor Evening Telegram.

My Dear Sir,—I must beg you to give me space in which to protest against the nature of the letter which appeared in some of the papers of to-day from a Mr. Beresford. I do not know why it is, but whenever any citizen dares to raise his voice against prohibition, certain of the prohibitionists think it right to become personal and offensive. And this is what I object to in Mr. Beresford's letter.

He describes my remarks addressed to the meeting on Friday night last as twaddle, characterizes the people assembled as very glib, insinuates that my stand against prohibition is inspired by greed and lust; with unctious pride he deplores that I belong to the same profession as his exalted self, professes horror at the frightful example I am setting to teachers and children under my superintendence, and more beside. One can almost picture him in the tabernacle exclaiming: "I thank Thee that I am not as this fellow teacher of mine, greedy, gluttonous, selfish; I fast three days in the week and on the other four days I drink no wine!"

He informs the public—who have known me for well nigh 30 years—that I am a B.A. of the University of London, a teacher of many years' standing and an Anglican Inspector of Schools. What all this has to do with prohibition, I know not, but Mr. Beresford must have thought that in this peculiar way he might lead some of the glib to regard me as a black-leg, whose opinion counted for nothing.

He proceeds, then, to liken the drinking of a glass of ale to ramming a child up a chimney, putting women to work in mines, spitting on the floors of busses and the like. Perhaps I am dense beyond the average but I do not see the likeness. It is cruel to ram children up chimneys, injurious to women to make them work in mines, and spitting in public places is not only a filthy habit, but a danger to public health. I have yet to learn, however, that the drinking of a glass of ale is wrong in the eyes of God or man. Prohibit what is wrong by all means, but why prohibit by brute force that which is not wrong? When Mr. Beresford can satisfy me that the proper use of any of God's creatures is wrong, then I will take my stand by prohibition in relation to it.

Mr. Beresford tells us that some time ago he visited the shipyards of Lord Furness (a friend, I presume) and there found that drunken men could not do as much work as sober men. He need not have gone there to find that out. Everybody recognizes that. But the point at issue is not drunkenness but rather the means of abolishing it. Mr. Beresford knows very well that had prohibition been forced on the British public during the war, the shipyards would have been closed and the war lost. I hope it is unnecessary for me to say that with all decent folk I abhor drunkenness. It is an offence and a sin, as are gluttony, adultery, lying and slandering. Where prohibitionists and I disagree is in the means to be adopted in removing drunkenness from mankind. The prohibitionists think that it can be removed in the Prussian way—by force of arms—and I am of opinion that it can only be overcome in the same way as gluttony, adultery, lying and slandering and other sins are overcome—and that is by the exercise of a man's free-will. A man who becomes temperate as the result of his own victory over himself is indeed a conqueror, but he that abstains, because his hands are tied, may be a poor creature at best.

I am entirely opposed to the principle of prohibition for reasons that appear to me sufficiently lofty and I protest against the habit of certain prohibitionists of blackguarding those who differ in opinion from them. Cannot the issue be discussed dispassionately? There are surely two sides to the question and I think both sides should be carefully considered. I cannot here recite all my objections to prohibition, but I dislike it for these among other reasons:

- (1) it is unnatural;
- (2) it is contrary to the Creator's way of dealing with human weakness;
- (3) it imposes on men an unnecessary restraint, leading to resentment, discontent, rebellion;
- (4) it leads to offences that are worse than occasional drunkenness on the part of a comparatively small number of people, that is deceit, fraud, smuggling and disregard for the law of the land on the part of many people.

If Mr. Beresford will reflect, he will conclude that few, if any, of the virtues are comprised in prohibition. It is the application of force. He must be ready to concede that those who hold my views may still be virtuous citizens, and possibly worthy examples to their fellows.

Yours faithfully,
- W. W. BLACKALL.

Essex,

THE CAR OF THE FUTURE.

Even though you may have never ridden in the ESSEX, you must have heard of its qualities that make it a favorite with both those who have owned light weight economical cars and those who use large costly automobiles. The reason is readily understood. It lies in the fact that ESSEX combines the advantages of both. It is light in weight, moderate in cost and economical in maintenance and operation. Those are the advantages of cars of its weight class. But it also is finely finished. Its endurance matches the costliest cars. In performance very few excel it in either speed, acceleration, nimbleness or hill climbing.

Why not get acquainted with the ESSEX now?

What Do You Think of This?

A grocer whom we asked to buy Del Monte Baked Beans said: "I have a lot of beans in stock which I can't sell and I won't buy any more until I get rid of what I have." Don't you think this grocer is unwise? He proposed to send his customer to his competitor for Del Monte Beans. He admits that his customers won't buy the beans he has, he admits that they would buy Del Monte Beans if he had them in stock, and consequently when his customers want Del Monte Beans they will go elsewhere to get them. What will happen to this grocer if his customers buy ALL their groceries elsewhere?

The New Dentistry

By F. O. D.

(In Toronto Saturday Night.)

Old-fashioned philosophers who used to go about telling everybody that there was nothing new under the sun, cannot have had much to do with dentists, or they would have discovered that a dentist can think of something new every time you go in to see him. Dentists are the real discoverers and innovators. They are always blazing new trails—usually down someone's nerve canal. And "blazing" is right—that's the way it feels. Life for a modern dentist is just one brand-new theory after another, and the rest of us—well, the rest of us are the materials of experiment, the guinea-pigs of his scientific laboratory.

Personally, we are not a philosopher. For one thing, we still have our teeth—most of them—and no one can be a philosopher till he has got rid of the things Real wisdom is toothless. Serenity of soul is the keynote of the philosophic temperament, and if any man says that he can be serene in a dentist's chair—we hate to be rude, but that man lies in his throat, also in his molars and bicus-pids.

The reader may judge from a certain note of bitterness which seems to have crept into these opening paragraphs, that we have lately been calling on our dentist. And we have—more in sorrow than in friendship, though we had really intended our visit to be a formal and social one. You see, we happened to be passing his new office or studio or dental morgue or whatever they call it, and we suddenly remembered that he had given us a very kindly and pressing invitation to drop in and see it.

Besides, we had often heard people expatiate on the wisdom of calling on one's dentist every six months or so, and it occurred to us that it might be a good idea to flash our incisors and eye-teeth upon him—oh, purely as a matter of form. We hadn't the slightest notion that anything required attention, or we would probably have put off our visit for another year or so. All we wanted was a general survey of the ground, so to speak—a little light prospecting, but no sinking of shafts or other heavy mining operations.

That was our idea, but the moment we sat in the chair and felt the patent head-rest grip us by the medulla oblongata we began to feel that we had made a mistake. To begin with, we were horribly impressed by the completeness and efficiency of our dentist's new outfit. Everything was so very clean and cold and shiny, and it was all run by electricity. Everywhere one turned, little motors met the eye, and they seemed to us in our nervousness to smile with a hideous complacency at the thought of the dreadful things they were going to do to us. Especially were we fascinated and horrified by the largest motor, which stood right beside the chair. Long arms stretched out from it, and at the end of these arms were cunning little places into which dentists fit the instruments of torture that they use for purposes of excavation. It looked like a fat and particularly malevolent spider, with a sting in every leg.

Our dentist explained it all to us with modest pride, and we tried to take a detached and scientific interest in the demonstration, but we had little joy of it. We felt too much like a heretic to whom Torquemada was displaying the smooth working of a nice new rack in one of the dungeons of the Spanish Inquisition. In fact, we told him so.

Our dentist smiled in a far-away fashion, and casually picked up a steel probe from the new patent tray which the electric monster held out to him. Then a cold professional look came into his eye, and we knew that there was nothing for it but to lean back and deliver our honest open countenance into his hands, keeping it more open than usual.

Lightly the steel hook played about our pearly graders, scraping and probing and occasionally slipping into unexpected and undesirable openings and getting a good firm hold on the nerve. Whenever this happened our dentist said, "Ah ha!" in a very knowing way, and we said—but naturally we couldn't say much with a thing like that in our mouth. We were limited to a very expressive grunt, but we thought rapidly and with some heat.

Nothing seemed sacred to that infernal probe. It insisted on prying into teeth which we have always regarded as peculiarly private possessions, never displaying them even in our moments of wildest hilarity—we make a practice of never laughing back of our bicus-pids. And we don't often laugh even that far back in these days of Prohibition.

"I see you have two or three gingival cavities," said our dentist after a pause, as though he had been figuring out whether or not we were strong enough to hear the dread tidings.

That word "gingival"—we made him spell it out for us—was horribly impressive. It sounded painful even to the uninformed ear.

"What causes that?" we asked in trepidation. "It hasn't anything to do with gin, has it?" If it had, we were going to prove a complete alibi, of course.

"Oh, no, nothing like that," he said reassuringly. "In fact, gin might act somewhat as a preservative."

But that does us no good—not with the price of preservative where it is now.

He explained that the "gingiva" was the gum, and that a "gingival" cavity was one right on the edge of the gum. The precise location of the cavity, however, was not our immediate concern. What we wanted to know, was how much it would hurt.

"Well, that is usually a very sensitive part of the tooth," said our dentist with philosophic calm, "but I will try to make it as pleasant as possible."

And with that he reached over for one of the tentacles of the electric octopus.

It was not very pleasant. We feel that we can say this with entire conviction and with the assurance of sympathy from any of our readers who have had a similar experience. If there is any place where a live tooth seems to be especially alive and angry, it is in the gingiva. In fact, we are sick of our gingiva altogether, and anyone that wants it can have the whole darn thing. A nice pink rubber one would suit us a lot better.

Merrily the electric motor purred like a cheerful tarantula, and when our squirmings became too violent our dentist lifted its leg out of our mouth for a brief respite, during which he tried to distract our attention by discussing the exchange situation and the last violin recital at Massey Hall and other topics of the day. But we didn't distract worth a cent. We felt too much like a helpless merchantman waiting for a German submarine to hit us with another torpedo.

It may be that modern dental methods and machinery are a great improvement on the primitive system of other days, and that the new dentist is a skilled scientist compared to the burly mechanic who used to wrestle with our youthful molars. But still there was something to be said if the dentist could hold you down and keep his big foot going on the treadle of the drill—well, he won't usually do it, for dentists in those distant times were husky and able practitioners of catch-as-catch-can. Once they got a half-nelson on you, you were lost, but you were free to do your worst. Everything was fair—if you couldn't jab him in the stomach with your elbow, perhaps you could reach up a free foot and kick him back of the ear. These were regarded as ordinary professional risks.

Naturally such a procedure would be unthinkable nowadays. The modern dentist is too detached and impersonal. His work is all a matter of mechanics, like modern warfare. There would be no more use getting angry with him, than there would be for a soldier to swear at the artillery officer who, six miles away, makes a lot of complicated calculations and proceeds to blow him into the casualty report.

"Now that's all for the first tooth at present," said our dentist, "and we'll start in on the second. The cavity is not quite so deep"—our feelings brightened a little—"but teeth are always more sensitive nearer the surface."

That is the sort of bowless fellow the modern dentist is. Never is there any trace of the this-hurts-me-more-than-it-hurts-you attitude. He sympathizes with his patients about as much as an entomologist sympathizes with the bugs he sticks on pins.

Vainly we pleaded with that man. We tried to tell him we were in no hurry about that second tooth, and we would just as soon leave to nature the task of sinking the cavity down to the point where it wouldn't hurt so much. We even got our watch out and looked at it earnestly, and said we were afraid the Managing Editor was expecting us for an important editorial conference. But we could see we were making no progress.

"Oh, of course, just as you please," said our dentist with true scientific indifference, "but it would be too bad to lose that tooth by unnecessary delay. You see the dentine is soft and—"

Hopelessly we lay back in the chair once more. Again did the electric spider stretch out its horrid leg at us, and—just then the power went off! The lights went out, the motor stopped purring, and the whole electric arsenal of torture was as harmless as an old lady's work-basket. The good old Hydro-Electric had saved us! Of course, it was only a respite, a mere postponement of the dread hour, but it is wonderful how welcome these little interruptions can be. Jauntily we hopped out of the chair, and began to put on our overcoats. But your modern dentist can always think of something else.

"By the way, you have a tooth there with a dead nerve," said ours "and you'd better have it X-rayed before you come back. It may have to be pulled."

Pulled!—after all the agony we had gone through getting that nerve killed, and all the money we had spent having the hole filled up with precious metal. It was the most comfortable tooth we had in our head, the only one we knew would never hurt us again. And here he was proposing that we should go to a strange man and let him take pictures right through our face—were we to have no privacy left at all?—and then come back and have that good old tooth removed with violence. Nothing doing.

We said it with emphasis, but our dentist was unperturbed and persistent. "Modern investigation has shown," he said, "that focal infection is the cause of rheumatism, heart-disease, arterio-sclerosis, and—"

We capitulated at once—the new dentistry is too much for us. What's more, we went and had ourself X-rayed. We held a silly little red plaque in our mouth while a cool devil made electric sparks a foot long and then showed a hideous blue tube with a swollen middle down within an inch or so of our cheek. It wasn't painful, but one felt so darn silly.

Now we have for our dentist several little snapshots of our teeth which make them look like part of the German devastations in Belgium. So far as we can make out, every blamed one of them will have to be pulled—their expression is positively awful.

A "Demountable" Ship.

STRANGE VESSEL WILL BE BUILT OF ITS OWN CARGO.

The brain of the well-known Canadian financier, John Arbuthnot, of Victoria, B.C., has conceived a new type of ship for the transportation of vast quantities of lumber. He has labelled it the "demountable ship" and it will be about the most weird craft that ever sailed the Seven Seas. In reality it will be nothing more than a huge raft, built up in the shape of a boat with the cargo itself. Two gasoline engines will propel the craft, aided by sails spread from four masts, stepped in the cargo.

The first ship of this novel type is now being constructed on the Pacific coast and is destined for Australia. Its voyage across the boisterous Pacific will be watched with great interest. If it proves a success other craft will follow, in which event the process of shipping lumber offshore will be revolutionized. The fact that Lloyd's has decided to take a risk and insure the craft seems to augur well for its success.

Mr. Arbuthnot designed the ship in order to overcome the shortage of tonnage and also the high freight rates, which are the bugbear of the lumber industry at the present time.

The first of Mr. Arbuthnot's demountable ships will be 350 feet long, with a beam of 60 feet, and a depth of 25 feet. It will contain 5,000,000 feet of lumber. It is the designer's ultimate hope that craft, 600 feet in length and containing 10,000,000 feet of lumber, will be constructed.

The vessel can be completely built in the water. With the first ship, however, Mr. Arbuthnot has decided to begin it on an improvised slip on a bench adjacent to a mill and after getting it shaped to launch it and carry on the construction. The ship will be flat-bottomed and will have three keels, the main keel running the entire length of the ship, and the other two keels about three quarters the length. On the keels large crosswise timbers will be bolted closely together. Then will follow eight layers of timbers running the entire length of the ship on top of which will come another layer of crosswise timbers. Iron rods will be run from the keels to this layer of cross timbers and other rods will be driven through the cargo from side to side. In this manner the rigidity of the craft will be obtained. By extending the perpendiculars the necessary overhang for the clipper bow and stern is obtained.

The two gasoline engines will develop about 1,500 horsepower, and it is expected that in favorable weather the ship will make about seven knots an hour.

As soon as the ship reaches her destination she will be taken to pieces. The lumber will be cut into marketable sizes. The engines, rigging, bolts, chains, rods and cabin fixtures will be sent back to the port where the ship was built for use in the construction of another craft.

Mr. Arbuthnot says that the loss of timber through the necessary borings made in the cargo will be only a fraction of one per cent. On the other hand, he says, that there will be an enormous saving in the cost of shipping lumber.

Hard on the Lieutenant.

The company marched so poorly and went through their drill so badly that the captain, who was of somewhat an excitable nature, shouted indignantly at the soldiers:—

"You knock-kneed, big-footed idiots, you are not worthy of being drilled

Have Pretty Teeth

Remove That Dirty Film

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Free A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent, to show you how to end film. See below.

Look in the Glass

Look at your teeth in the glass. Then brush them in this new way for ten days and look again.

There is a film on your teeth—a slimy film. It clings to the teeth, enters crevices and stays. The tooth brush does not end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. So it stays between the teeth and elsewhere and may do a ceaseless damage.

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film.

Dental science, after years of searching, has found a way to combat it. Able authorities have proved it by many careful tests. Now the method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent, and leading dentists everywhere are urging its daily use.

A 10-Day Tube is now supplied to everyone who asks. Test it and see what it means to you.

A Week Will Tell

The results of Pepsodent will be a revelation. A week will show you that there is a way to whiter and safer teeth. For your sake and your children's sake, make this test and see.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

But pepsin must be activated. The usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. So pepsin long seemed barred. Science has now overcome this trouble by discovering a harmless activating method. It is that method which makes possible this efficient film combatant.

You can prove the effects, and quickly. Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how the teeth whiten—how they glisten—as the fixed film disappears.

Compare the results with your old methods. Learn what clean teeth mean. Then let your own mirror tell you what is best. This test is most important to you. Make it at once. Cut out the coupon now.

G. W. V. A. Meeting.

IMPORTANT ADDRESS BY THE CHAIRMAN.

A very largely attended meeting of the G. W. V. A. was held last night. Lt.-Col. Bernard presiding. His Excellency the Governor, who was present, addressed the men on their duties in civil life. His address will appear in full to-morrow. The Chairman said in part:

COMRADES:
Although strictly speaking this is not a time for a general report upon the work of the Association, your Executive Committee feel that circumstances demand a few remarks on matters which are of interest to us all, as members of the G. W. V. A. With this in view, I shall ask you to bear with me for a few moments, while I give you a few details among other things about the present standing of the Association, and the attitude of the Executive Committee towards certain controversies which have appeared from time to time in the press—controversies at a common understanding of which we ought to arrive to-night.

Membership.

Owing to an unfortunate loss of certain data during the summer months of last year it has been found impossible to arrive at a correct estimate of the number of members of the Association; certain steps, however—among them the weekly publication of membership lists have been taken to ascertain who are on our roll; and it is hoped that within a few weeks this part of our work will be satisfactorily completed. The records handed over by the late Executive show a membership list of roughly speaking 1500 less than was reckoned at the time. This error may be explained in part by the fact that when the Books of the Association were audited in December last, a surplus of some $600.00 was found which could not be satisfactorily accounted for, but which may have represented a number of subscriptions not entered in the books.

When it is considered that about 8000 men offered their services to the mother country, the number of paid-up members seems to be far below what might have been expected.

Financial Statement.

The Financial position of the Association on February 12th of this year shows that when all debts have been settled, the Association will have a credit balance in the Bank of $1585.82. This does not include the sum of $4161.60 which has yet to be collected on account of the Drive, during the next five years.

The income for the current year can only be very roughly estimated, since for the greater part it depends on revenues from subscriptions; while the expenditures—including those in connection with the Club will not amount to less than $4500. How to meet these expenditures is a question which has exercised the minds of your Executive and about which we solicit your opinion and advice to-night.

The Club.

As you are all aware, the Club Rooms were declared open by H. E. the Governor on January 29th last, and have been fairly well patronized since then. A marker has been temporarily engaged at a salary of $50.00 a month and an allowance of $300.00 a year, has been made to Comrade Matthews in consideration of his having undertaken to be responsible for the heating and cleanliness of the building. After having thoroughly examined the Financial standing of the Association and studied ways and means for increasing its income, your Executive Committee decided to raise the subscriptions for membership to $2.00 a year, which sum gives each member the right to use the Club Rooms. Even if we reckon on a membership roll of 1500 which is, in our opinion, a high estimate—this leaves a deficit of $1500, $500 of which will be met by rents received for the use of the lower room. The present weekly income from the card room is about $10.00.

While on the subject of the Club, it may be well to mention that the attention of the House Committee has been drawn to the fact that cards have been and are being played for very high stakes. The Executive Committee wish to state very emphatically that, while they in no way object to the playing of cards for such small sums as do not materially effect the pockets of members, they strongly deplore the idea of playing games for amounts which very few, if any of us can afford, and the loss of which is bound to bring discomfort and dissatisfaction to many homes. They, therefore appeal to your sense of what is right, from a moral as well as a material point of view, and ask you to give your full consideration to a resolution concerning the Club, which will be brought before you later in the evening.

Broadly speaking in the matter of pensions, Newfoundland comes an easy second, and it may be worth while for all of us to consider this fact from all points of view and to ask ourselves whether in all fairness to the taxpayers we can with justice press our request for an increase in Dependent and Disability Pensions. It may be news to some of us that one million dollars is expended yearly on returned soldiers and sailors, in other words, every man, woman and child in the Island pays a tax of $4.00 towards expenses connected with ex-service men.

I should like to say that in the opinion of your Executive Committee, the officials of the C.R.C. are doing their utmost to meet the many demands which come to them daily, that they give their earnest and sympathetic attention to each individual case, and that far from deserving any severe adverse criticism they are worthy of the thanks and gratitude of the members of this Association. Naturally they are not beyond making mistakes, and thus they would be the first to admit; but broadly speaking, we feel that they have the interest of the ex-service men at heart, that they are open to discussion and even persuasion in the case of deserving men and ready to press what they consider just requests, before the proper authorities.

Let us be fair; let us look at things from all sides and judge accordingly. I am firmly convinced that the C.R.C. are on the whole doing their best for us, are we on the other hand fulfilling our part of the bargain? Can we say that we have made the most of the opportunities offered us by the C.R.C. and the public generally? Here is a case in point. After a great deal of trouble and with some pressure, 45 berths for the seal-fishery were obtained for returned men. On the 10th of March, that is the day of sailing—20 of these 45 men failed to put in an appearance and civilians had to be obtained at the last moment. Is that playing the game? Do you think that actions such as that I have just mentioned will tend to give us the sympathy of the Government or in plain language tend to damn the lot of us?

The Publishing of Military Records.

You will no doubt have noticed the attitude of your Executive with regard to the publishing of Military Records; little more need be said about the matter, except that we hope the action we took will meet with your approval. I should like to add, however, that your Executive Committee wish it to be clearly understood that they disclaim all connection with private correspondence such as from time to time appears in the press, unless such correspondence has first been submitted to them for approval. They feel that they cannot associate themselves as a body with quarrels and controversies of a private nature. May they be allowed to remind you in this connection that "Unity is strength."

The Constitution.

A draft of the new constitution lies on this table—a very comprehensive and concise document to the compilation

It was announced that the Government would favorably consider the granting of a 20 per cent. increase in the case of totally disabled men, and that the advance for orphans and children of deceased men would be dealt with later. A resolution to stop the playing of various games at the clubrooms for high stakes was unanimously passed. The meeting approved of action being taken by the Executive of the Association in connection with the publishing of conduct sheets. A committee, consisting of P. Daniels, H. A. Anderson, L. C. Murphy, H. H. Ross, H. Pitcher and another member was appointed to act with the Executive in consulting the Government as to increases. A vote of thanks was heartily accorded His Excellency the Governor, who remained till 11 o'clock, and the meeting closed with the national Anthem.

Handel's "Messiah" First Heard in London.

On Wednesday, March 23, 1743, Handel's oratorio, the "Messiah" was for the first time produced in England, at Covent Garden Theatre. Born at Halle, in Saxony, on February 23, 1685, Handel lived in Italy from 1706, but in 1710 came to England, where he found his work more welcomed; dying in London on April 14, 1759, he was buried in Westminster Abbey. George Frederick Haydn took twenty-three days to compose this oratorio in the autumn of 1742, and it was first performed at Dublin, where the receipts were given to the churches of that city. A pension was granted to Handel in England, which was later on doubled. Some time previous to his death he became afflicted by total blindness, but this had little effect upon his spirits, and he continued not only to perform in public but even to compose all within a week of his death. He composed several great oratorios, "Israel in Egypt," "Saul," "Samson," "Judas Macabaeus," "Joshua," "Solomon," and "Jephthah"—but the most celebrated is the "Messiah." His first commemoration was held in Westminster Abbey on May 26, 1784, when King George the Third, with Queen Charlotte and about three thousand persons were present. The band included two hundred and forty-five instrumental performers; and the receipts of three days amounted to £17,746. The centenary, or hundredth anniversary, of Handel's death, was celebrated by a great Handel Festival in the Crystal Palace, in June 1887, with two thousand seven hun-and ninety-three musicians; and the receipts amounted to about £23,000, of which £15,000 were profits. Handel festivals were afterwards held there every third year with great success.

Near East is Ablaze.

NATIONALISTIC MOVEMENT GAINING STRENGTH.

Meagre despatches are continuously finding their way out of the Levant, by various indirect routes, reporting armed outbreaks in nearly all parts of that trouble region—Egypt, Syria, Arabia, Mesopotamia, Persia, the Caucasus, Asia Minor and the Balkans. There is silence on the western front, but gunfire a-plenty in the Near East.

Each of these local outbreaks may portend little or much; taken all together they are of a significance arresting the attention of thoughtful persons everywhere. Evidently armed conflict is at present on the increase in the Levant. Paris decisions are not being complacently accepted by the masses of the East. Given a modern gun and taught to use it in the war, the Oriental is making it a powerful argument for what he deems his own rights.

This mood of rebellion against Europe is no small thing. To-day Asia appears to be aflame with militant nationalism. The war cracked the crusts that held it down. In defence of "self determination" it will fight.

This is the big factor in the present Near Eastern situation. Decisions by the Supreme Council at Paris are futile if the nationalities concerned will not accept them.

The case is gravely complicated by the fact that none of the European powers claiming protectorates or possessions of these aroused and now bellicose Orientals can afford either the money or the men necessary to keep them in a reasonable degree of subjugation and order. French and British soldiers are displaying an alarming fastidiousness as to when and where and whom they will fight.

ARMED ACTIVITY.

There are at present four major centres of armed activity in the Near East, with half a dozen other scenes of recurring outbreaks. Each of the later would have been deemed serious in pre-war times and fully written up in the press. Now a busy censorship does its best to keep the disturbing tidings from the people back home.

These four fighting areas do not include revolutionized Russia, nor yet the bellicose Balkans or the cantankerous Caucasus. Persia and Arabia also are excluded, although there is gun-fire a-plenty in both places. Morocco and the other North African colonies are also earning considerable gunpowder, but they, too, are outside of the scope of the present article. What may be termed the big fighting is going on in the following four places:

1. Australia, which is the Western and Central part of Asia Minor and is sometimes called Turkey proper.
2. Mesopotamia, which has Bagdad for its capital city and includes the Garden of Eden.
3. Syria, better known in America as the Holy Land, stretching from Egypt up to the Taurus Mountains, and from the Mediterranean to the Arabian Desert—although subdivided by Anglo-French treaties.
4. Egypt itself, the most homogeneous of all the regions affected.

The Nationalist movement in Turkey has grown into a fighting force. Forays and skirmishes are frequent. All of the Allies are in disfavour with the Nationalists, who want America to have a mandate for the regions in dispute.

TURKISH CAUSE BRIGHTER.

In the meanwhile any sort of an overwhelming outbreak may take place in Anatolia. The Allies appear to have agreed to preserve at least the outward form of Turkey, which is incompatible with the retention of Western Asia Minor by the Greeks. Upon this Mr. Venizelos, who is a power in Paris, insists as a sine qua non.

Partisanship grows more bitter with every passing month, and the case of the Turks is strengthened by all delay, especially as the Turks are finding many defenders among the Europeans and Americans who have gone to Turkey since the armistice. There is no use blinking this fact. It may be due to the more attractive personalities of the Turks who meet foreigners, or their ability to set forth their people's claims, and it may have no relation to Turkey's past crimes as a nation. Other races in Asia Minor are not so fortunate in the impression they make upon Westerners. The practical effort is that the Turkish cause looks brighter with every passing week of inaction. This is news that will give no pleasure to Britishers.

Down in that part of the Bible lands with which the Book of Genesis largely deals, where the Garden of Eden was, and where Noah dwelt and Abraham was born, known to-day as Mesopotamia, there is fighting of a more momentous character than the public suspects.

LIFT OFF CORNS WITH FINGERS

Doesn't hurt a bit and costs only few cents

Magic! Just drop a little Freezone on that touchy corn, instantly it stops aching, then you lift the corn off with the fingers. Truly! No humbug! Try Freezone! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle for a few cents, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses, without one particle of pain, soreness or irritation. Freezone is the discovery of a noted Cincinnati genius.

Mainly About People.

"Uncle" Elmore Dennis, who has driven a car at Jackson, Mich., for the past six years, is the oldest automobile driver in the United States, if not in the world. He is now in his 93rd year.

It is the intention of the former Kaiser to present Amerongen with a small hospital. He is busy inspecting the improvements being worked on his proposed residence at Dorne. He intends to surround himself there with three rows of barbed wire. It has been uncovered that many of the letters of the Kaiser to "Nicky," the Russian Czar, were written under the influence of Prince von Bulow, who used his power to control the Kaiser's volubility.

The wonderful endurance of men in successful battles to thwart death is evidenced in Sir Ernest Shackleton, who has survived horror, starvation rations, terrible cold and imprisonment of ice, all to find out what existed at the North Pole. Notwithstanding these inhuman hardships the quest has a lure that is irresistible and the Shackleton explorers cannot be kept from the polar search, for when one dies another takes his place.

Among the big literary men in the Jesuit order is W. J. Lockington, who has contributed several books to the remarkable Roman library of this Catholic order. There are thousands of books, all written by the members themselves covering the whole field of human intellectual efforts. The latest work from Father Lockington is on Ireland. G. K. Chesterton, the famous English author, calls the book: "The Resurrection of Ireland."

Life on the Ocean Wave.

It was Murphy's first trip across the Atlantic, and he felt unspeakably awful. He failed to connect the fact of his being on the briny ocean for the first time with his agony. The doctor came to him as he tossed about in his berth. "Cheer up, man," he said, heartily. "I know you're feeling bad, but you're not going to die." Murphy opened horrified eyes. "Not going to die?" he wailed. "Faith, doctor, I thought I was! That was the only thing that kept me alive."

Did You.

Did you ever tumble around in the dark to look for a match and find the chairs each have twenty-seven legs? And the bureau, on which you left the matches has disappeared entirely. —Baltimore Evening Sun.
