LORD MORDEN'S DAUGHTER
—OR—
THE TRAGEDY OF THE CEDARS.

CHAPTER XXXV.

"Not a scrap," replied Tomkins, "but quite a pile of money, which I've locked up in my desk. However, he'll soon be able to speak for himself," he added, cheerfully.

The doctor went away, and John Tomkins rubbed his hands together sleepily.

Meanwhile, the patient talked a little in his delirium, and it was always of Dora.

On the third day he was quite sensible, and opened his eyes wonderingly, upon the whitewashed walls of the cottage by the sea.

He heard voices in the room beneath, and the boom! boom! of breakers on the shore.

"Great Heaven!" he muttered. "What does this mean?"

He passed his hand wearily over his brow; then listened again.

Yes, there were voices below, but they were strange to him. The dialect was distinctly of the Essex countryman.

Gradually the mists cleared from his brain, and he remembered that the last he knew of life was when he was stricken from behind on Waterloo Bridge. He had just left his father with the knowledge—the awful knowledge—that that father whom he had always revered, was a slayer of his fellow-man, was a thief of the most contemptible kind, and the one who had suffered at his cruel hands was Dora's parent.

"I wonder," he thought, "if some footpad really assaulted me, and after robbing me, toppled me into the river, or whether I became maddened for the moment, and leaped into the water? Ah, my poor Dora! My darling Dora! What does she think of my absence? And yesterday was our wedding day! What time is it? I must keep my appointment with Fairfax—I must see Dora, and I cannot meet her with a lie upon my lips, with a secret in my heart. I must say to her, 'Dora, my father is your father's murderer! Can you bear to look upon his son again?'"

He shuddered, and raised on one elbow, to rap on the wall.

In a moment, John Tomkins appeared. He had been expecting this, and he walked quietly into the room, while Locksley stared at him inquiringly.

"That's right, sir; I am glad you've come round at last," he said, cheerfully. "I've spent three days by your bedside."

"Three days!" ejaculated Edmund.

"Every minute, sir, to say nothing of the nights. I can see you are a bit hazy, and taken aback like, so I'll just say at once that you are at Southend, and this is my cottage."

"Go on," groaned Locksley, despairingly.

"And it's nearly five days since I rescued you, at the risk of my life," continued Tomkins.

"One word," interrupted Locksley. "Have you communicated with my friends?"

"Now, sir, how could I?"

"My pocketbook contains letters," began Locksley, but added: "Perhaps it is lost."

"Oh, no, sir! I've put it up safe, but, of course, I couldn't think of opening it and prying into affairs that didn't concern me."

"Yes," Locksley murmured. "I am under the impression that I was struck behind my some street ruffian and knocked over the parapet of Waterloo Bridge. My mind is not clear, as I had just heard news which had partially stunned me."

"That's just where I found you—floating with the tide, as me and Will—that's my man—was rowing our barge, which was anchored close by. Your face in the dark nearly scared me to death, and after you'd floated past, I jumped into the river, and, after a fine tussle, got you landed."

"How can I ever repay you?" murmured Locksley.

Tomkins glanced toward the desk, wherein reposed his patient's pocketbook and purse.

"Why did you not hand me over to the police, or send me to a hospital?" the young man went on.

"Now, sir, that's where I'm perhaps to blame, but I could see you was gentleman, and I didn't know but what, in a moment of desperation, you'd tried to commit suicide. You might have been drunk—excuse me, sir—and I didn't know how the disgrace would affect you; so I says to Will: 'We'll hush this up, and may be when the gentleman comes to himself, he won't be ungrateful.' Then we brings you down here on the barge, tending you carefully all the way, and puts you to bed, sends for a doctor, and here you are! You might have had a rap on you head, a regular foul blow, because there's a dozen stitches in it now, but it wasn't for me to say how you got it. The doctor's been very curious, but I've been guarded, sir, for your sake."

"I am sure that I shall be eternally grateful to you," said Locksley. "Will you kindly assist me to rise?"

Tomkins regarded him with horror.

"I know what I am doing, Mr. Tomkins."

"John Tomkins, sir."

"Mr. Tomkins, you see, I am a doctor myself. The brief spell of fever is gone, but it will return again if I do not get back to London. If I may trespass upon your kindness, Mr. Tomkins, I would ask you to prepare me a bath of tepid water, and some strong beef tea. I shall then be ready to travel. This weakness will soon wear off."

Tomkins darted from the room, and for an hour Edmund was left to his own bitter reflections.

"Heavens!" he groaned. "What has happened in five long, long days? To me they are a blank. To my poor darling they may have been death! Yes, yes—I was assaulted by some coward hand, I remember the blow, the beneficent light, the roar of the waters in my ears. What a marvelous escape! What do I not owe this simple-hearted boatman?"

He slid from his bed, and glided to a small glass over the mantelpiece. What a change had taken place in him in a few short days! His face was white and drawn, and there was an ugly bruise half-down one side of his head.

"It was a vengeful hand that struck that blow," he thought. "And I must have been thrown into the river! I have not been robbed; I did not know that I had an enemy in the world!"

Then his thoughts went back to Dora, and he burned with impatience to be gone.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

It took three hours to complete the arrangements for Locksley's departure, for Mr. Tomkins' wardrobe was not an extensive one, and the town had to be visited for fresh linen and a respectable hat.

Finally, Edmund was assisted into a fly by Tomkins, and Tomkins took his seat beside him, for the stranger was too weak to travel alone.

"You are good to take so much trouble, and to waste so much time in my behalf," Edmund said, gratefully. "I will ask you to go as far as the Temple with me."

"Yes, sir; I will look after you all day, if you like."

"No, that will not be needed. I have a chum in the Temple who will take me home," Locksley told him, "and you will understand that I shall always hold you in grateful memory. I will not ask you at what you value your services, Mr. Tomkins; a man of so brave and generous a heart would be content with the knowledge that he has done good."

Mr. Tomkins began to look worried.

"But to me the service is inestimable," continued Locksley, "and not to be discharged by mere monetary considerations. Here, Mr. Tomkins, is a banknote for fifty pounds, and if you are ever in trouble, you know where to find a friend."

John Tomkins took the money, with a gasp of delight. To him the sum of fifty pounds appeared to be a fortune.

From Southend railway station, they went to Fenchurch street, and it was twelve o'clock when Locksley heard the welcome din of the London streets. From Fenchurch street they went in a hansom to the Temple only to find that the barrister's door was closed, with notice pinned to the panel to the effect that he would not be back until three.

"Help me back to the cab," said Locksley, very much disappointed. "I will go on to Hammermith."

"Shall I go with you, sir?" Tomkins asked. "You are really not well enough to travel alone."

"No, thank you; it is all right now. From Hammermith it is possible that I shall drive home, where my wife will be anxiously waiting for me."

His eyes were momentarily filled with a strange fire.

"That's Dora," thought Tomkins. "And he must be very proud of her, too, if I'm to judge by the fuss he made when his mind was wandering."

Tomkins parted from him reluctantly, though he was anxious to return to Scotland, to boast of his good luck. It was the nearest thing he had had to actual romance in the whole of his life, and there was the possibility that he would yet be wanted to give his evidence as to the rescue of Mr. Locksley in a court of law.

The hansom moved on again, and Edmund was glad to be alone, his mind was in such a whirl of hope, doubt, and vexed anticipation.

the lift to descend was being injured in the dining room on the first floor, into which he had rolled from the lift. His companion, seeing him disappear, had put his head down the lift shaft. The action of the man rolling from the lift into the dining-room caused the balance weight to descend, with the result that the head of the other man, at the top of the shaft, becoming wedged between the weight and the side, was cut open.

After considerable difficulty he was extricated, placed under arrest, and taken to hospital. The man who had fallen into the dining-room was also arrested and taken to Bishopsgate-street police station.

Healthy Women, Happy Homes

Good dispositions succumb. Irritability and snappy retort take the place of happiness and amiability. Sunshine is driven out of homes; in fact, they are often wrecked, and friends are estranged because women suffer with ailments peculiar to their sex. The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will overcome such ailments and restore health and happiness. Do not resort to strong stimulants or narcotics when this great strengthening, healing remedy made from roots and herbs is always within reach.

DIFFERENT TASTES.

The things that Peter Perk admires give me an oblong pain; he listens to my talk and tress, I talk to him in vain. He's seated at the head of his greenwood tree at closing of the day, from all his weary labors free; I go to him and say, "Oh, come and see my garden patch, it will relieve your gloom! My succotash is hard to match, my onions are in bloom!" "I do not care for garden truck," old Peter makes reply, "but come and see my Peking duck, and watch my goslings fly!" I read a book that's conquered fame, a tale of sleuths and crime, and tell him he should read the same, and have a joyous time. "All idle stories I detest," he answers, "they're a bore; a book of sermons suits me best—of these I have a store." "Oh, Peter, come! I sometimes say, 'and hear my photograph, some corking records came to-day—they'll make you weep and laugh.'" "I do not care to weep," he sighs, "I do not wish to grin; in yonder church, grand anthems rise, with a majestic din." And since we have divergent views on all things 'neath the sun, we jog along and never lose the friendship we have won. We nod politely as we go, on foot or in a car, but keep our distance, for we know how different we are. We know if we should argue things, between our divers huts, we'd soon be swapping left-arm swings and deadly apparatus. And so he reads his sermon book, and I read jazzy tales, each in his quiet nook, and balmy peace prevails.

Fads and Fashions

Radio diamonds of black braid trim a coat of navy blue reps. Many of the coats flare in front over embroidered tunic blouses. The inverted plaits gives freedom for movement to the slim frock. Delicate pinks, greens and blues are favored for warm weather. The same print in two colorings is effective combined in a frock. A frock of white muslin is quilted in black and trimmed in white organdy.

Lift Aids in Police Capture

An exciting chase over roofs in Lime-street, E.C., occurred recently, when large numbers of the City police were brought out to surround some buildings. Soon after ten o'clock two men were seen scampering over the roofs. By means of ladders tied together detectives mounted to a roof and gave chase for over half an hour. Finally they saw the men disappear through a skylight at the Beach of Grapes public house in Lime-street.

The detectives lowered themselves through the broken glass but could not see anyone. A few seconds later they heard moans, and on switching on the light they saw that a man who had fallen on to the service lift at the top of the building and had caused

Over 400 French Troops Killed in the Riff.

No Hope for Miners Entombed in Coal Glen—Petersen Will Not Undertake Contract Unless Subsidized—Newfoundlander President N. S. Methodist Conference.

FRENCH LOSSES.

PARIS, May 28. Premier Painlevé announced in the Chamber of Deputies to-day that the French losses in the Riffan war were 1100 killed, 1100 wounded and 37 missing. One-third of the casualties are French, the remainder Senegalese.

HOPE ABANDONED.

COAL GLEN, N.C., May 28. Four additional bodies were brought to the surface of the wrecked Carolina Coal Company's mine to-day, bringing the total recovered to 12. Hope has been abandoned for the 40 still under ground.

FLOODS IN AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., May 28. Serious floods were reported to-day to have occurred in the Queensland District in the southern part of New South Wales where five persons were reported drowned and about 100 families homeless.

WINNER OF WITHERS STAKE.

NEW YORK, May 28. American Flag won the classic Withers stake for three year olds at Belmont Park. Silver Fox was second and Gold Stick was third. American Flag is son of Man of War. The stake received $20,000.

PETERSEN'S CONTRACT.

OTTAWA, May 28. Sir William Petersen, who has contracted with the Dominion Government for a steamship service of ten vessels carrying cargo at rates to be controlled by the Government, this afternoon unreservedly agreed to a number of suggested changes in the contract, but said he would not agree to attempt the service without a subsidy because he would be up against a combine and have to wage a rate war.

FISHING SCHOONER DESTROYED ON BANKS.

HALIFAX, N.S., May 28. Capt. George Lohme, of the La Hare fishing schooner Margaret Zick, and his crew, landed at Cause to-day after being driven by fire and explosion on Quatro Bank last Tuesday. Capt. Lohme was badly injured in a powder explosion on board the burning schooner and lost his eyesight. The fire was discovered early Tuesday morning and while the members of the crew fought to extinguish it the vessel was shaken from stem to stern by the explosion of a keg of powder that had been reached by the flames. Capt. Lohme was nearest the spot and was blown into the air. The vessel was abandoned and the crew took to small boats, later being picked up by the La Hare schooner Cathleen Creaser, which landed them at Cause to-day.

Davidson Lodge, L. O. B. A.

HONORS DEPARTING W. M.

Last night at the regular meeting of Davidson Lodge L.O.B.A., Mrs. A. Hann, W. M. of the Lodge tendered her resignation, owing to her leaving St. John's to reside at Corner Brook. After the regular business had been transacted, a very pleasing presentation took place, when Mrs. Hann was the recipient of a purse of gold and an address beautifully printed on satin. The Recording Secretary, Mrs. Rebecca England, on behalf of the officers and members of the Lodge, made the presentation in a neat and touching speech in which regret was expressed at the severance. Mrs. Hann suitably replied. A number of presents were also received by Mrs. Hann from members of the Lodge. A social hour was spent after closing of the Lodge and speeches were made by Mrs. M. Bastow, Victory Lodge; W. H. Pike, K. Ruby, Learning Lodge and J. Wiseman, Royal Oak Lodge. Mrs. Hann takes with her to her new home the best wishes of her many friends.

Some Truths

About the Debts

(From the New York World)

Although the administration is compelled in theory to act as if the French debt to the United States had no relation to anything else in the world, the debt has in fact the closest possible relation to the whole web of international indebtedness. In actual negotiations and in any intelligent discussion of the question these complications have to be borne clearly in mind. For the United States is not dealing with a country which is purely and simply her debtor. The United States is dealing with a country which is not only the debtor of Great Britain as well, but is herself the creditor not only of Germany, but of seven or eight of the other Allies.

There are, therefore, certain simple fundamental facts which have to be kept in mind:

1. France owes the United States in principal and accrued interest about four and a quarter billion dollars.

2. France owes Great Britain about the same amount.

3. France is owed by Russia, Belgium, Jugo-Slavia, Roumania, Greece, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria not quite but almost the same amount as she owes to Great Britain or the United States.

4. She is owed by Germany under the Dawes plan an indefinite series of annuities which if capitalized might be valued at roughly the same amount.

In very rough and round figures the situation is as follows:

1. French debt to the United States four billion dollars.

2. French debt to Great Britain, three billion dollars.

Total debt, seven billion dollars.

1. Allied debt to France, two and three-quarter billions.

2. German debt to France, say, five billions.

Total debt to France, about seven billions.

These figures are only approximate, of course, but they are sufficiently accurate to reveal the important fact that what France owes is about equal to what she is owed. They also reveal two highly important considerations which American officials are inclined to overlook in their public discussions. The first is that since Great Britain is practically an equal creditor of France with the United States we can expect to receive only about half of anything that France is able to pay. The second is that the nations which owe France money are, most of them, very poor prospects for France.

France owes money to the nations which control the money markets of the world, and she dare not openly repudiate without endangering her credit. But France is owed money by nations some of which are openly hostile, some of her diplomatic allies which cannot be coerced, and some downright insolvent. France is in the unhappy position of being under financial pressure from her creditors and of being unable or prevented from exerting military pressure on her debtors.

It is plain that in one form or another, no matter how disguised, these controlling elements will have to be taken into consideration in any eventual settlement. They are not the only considerations by any means. Having made a settlement with Great Britain on certain terms, we shall have sooner or later to face the question frankly whether, as a matter of sound public policy, we can make easier terms with one ally than with another. If we do, it will mean the policy should then be openly avowed that the debt settlements are based not simply on the principle that what is owed should be paid but on the principle that payment is based on capacity to pay. This is clearly the principle which the administration has in mind. Its acceptance will mean, however, that not only the amounts to be paid annually by each of the debtors will be figured on a different basis but that the practical problem of the transfer of the amounts to be paid annually by each of the debtors will be figured on a different basis but that the practical problem of the transfer of the amounts in American dollars will have to be administered with due consideration for the foreign-exchange balances of each of the debtors separately. Unless, therefore, the administration and Congress are prepared to reduce the debts so drastically that they are easy for the debtors to handle, it is difficult to see how it can escape agreeing to set up some kind of debt tribunal like that created for Germany under the Dawes plan.

Fads and Fashions

The frounce often takes a dip to the back of the neck. Striped flannels and striped tubs are excellent for country wear. With the bright colored felt is worn a scarf of plain color to match. Many of the new materials are half brider and half a printed design. Sometimes, in one frock, stripes are used both cross-wise and length-wise.

Just Folks
By EDGAR QUERT
MONEY MATTERS.
This tale I write is neither strange nor it is passing strange. 'Tis but a tale of woman's wit and Time will never change; My Nellie, she is wondrous tall, most devout is she, But still in money matters she lights in cheating me.
She would not do one shabby thing, she would not steal or lie, The store man gladly trusts her, what'er she cares to buy; With him her word is good as gold, no bond could stronger be. But when it comes to money she downright fraud with me.
I, as her husband, seem to be the laws of trade, I should not when I lend to her need to be repaid; Nor should I hold her to her word, "I'd be a brute," she cries To charge her for the groceries, personal pocket buys.
And does she borrow five or ten to serve some present lack, She would be hurt most grievously asked to pay it back. But let me borrow "five" from her, rest she'd let me know. She'll wake me in the dead of night to speak of what I owe.
And yet I chuckle at her wiles, unable to hear her plead, For after all one common sense serve our every need. She knows and I know well what'er the cause may be, That when it comes to money she coax it out of me.

The Welfare of Children
Toronto, May, (By Canada Press).--The people with children are the real people, and their welfare must be made an object of the concern, says The Daily Star in an editorial. "It may not be possible to compel landlords to rent premises to a family with children, and it is not feasible to forbid them to dispossess a tenant because of the birth of a child--for other reasons for dispossessing the tenant will be invented. Yet, it will become necessary for the State to intervene in some manner, for the future of the race is suffering injury."
The foregoing was the Star's summary of an "eviction" case which is described as follows: "A short time ago a young couple came to Toronto from the West, bringing with them a sturdy little son, and last month another child was added to the population of the city. This young family occupied the portion of a duplex house which the other part of the city, and while the young mother was valuing, notice was received by their landlord that they must vacate the premises at the end of the month. Surprised at this, they inquired the reason and were informed that children were not wanted in one half of the house it was most impossible to get tenants for the other half. Had these particular children made any noise, done any mischief or been complained of by anybody? They had not. Still they were children, and that was the sum of the matter."
"When one considers how important in the making of a nation children are, it seems sometimes that they are not sufficiently encouraged and provided for in the modern scheme of things. Parents in acquiring a family are confronted with obstacles and loaded with handicaps. A nurse nowadays is paid as much per day as a family doctor used to be when the Mayor of Toronto engaged a baby specialist, and that child cannot be well born except in a maternity hospital, so that the dition of a child to the family means a cash outlay of several hundred dollars. After one such outlay of debt and keep out of it must do considerable saving before the next addition to the family. There is a general tendency to the discussion of birth control, but economic pressure is already exercising control of a decided sort. We would point out that organized society, the state has a special interest in the cradle and the cot, for on these depend the welfare of the state."

MILNARD'S LINIMENT FOR COLIC

Methodist Conference

CARBONBAR, May 28.

The morning was given to Committee work. At 10 o'clock the Conference was held, presided over by Dr. Line dealt with three controversial resolutions centering about the personality of Ignatius, Augustine and Augustine. In regard to Ignatius, it was, he said, possible to hold the doctrine of the divinity of Christ, so as to obscure His true humanity. There is a modern difficulty of the same sort. We must hold with equal emphasis. In regard to Augustine, Carlyle laughed over a sermon that split over a diphthong, but Augustine was a soul that hungered for God. Finding that longings were satisfied in Christ he fought a battle for the statement that Jesus is the Very God of Very God. The great controversy concerned the Holy Spirit was sent to man. The Eastern Church refused to grant the Holy Spirit was from Christ at His incarnation began, which has been the present social position in Russia. In the Western Church the problem was that of the Trinity. Augustine gripped the idea of the unity of the Godhead, and so doing the West from Mohammedanism, but at the same time somewhat the glory of Christ which had been neglected of the Scripture in the Middle Ages. The lecture closed with a beautiful personal testimony and a strong call to have fellowship with Him rather than knowledge of Him.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Sunday School report was presented by Rev. Oliver Jackson. It showed: increase in schools, 7; increase in Sunday School contributions $1,500; increase in contributions for the Religious Educational Fund, $244; and an increase in the number of young people's societies. Dr. Curtis presented the report of the Methodist Education, the chief feature of which was a contrast for all ages between 1905 and 1925. He said a number of pupils who sat in the Primary exams in 1905 were in the Intermediate, 236 against 110; in the Junior Associate, 20 against 11; and for the Senior Associate, 10 in 1905 and 46 in 1925. In the increase the Methodists fully shared, making more than their share of distinctions. The report was accepted in answer to a question Dr. Curtis asked a number of times. He was assisted by the Methodist College from St. John's. The report of the Women's Missionary Society was presented by Mrs. Robert Day. It is about the most interesting report we ever heard presented at a conference and won a rousing cheer in the first three minutes. More than that it was presented with a conviction that carried the conference to a top-knot enthusiasm. For the year past this Society has had an increase in membership and in the number of its members. The objective for 1925, she stated, was more faith, more facts, more funds—a programme heartily endorsed by several speakers.

At the evening session the reports of the Social Service and Evangelism and state of the Work Committees were considered. In discussing the latter the Conference reaffirmed its belief that lotteries and so-called lotteries were both contrary to the law of God and made emphatic protest against their continuance. In the discussion on the state of the work very cheering reports came, especially from the whole of Burin District, and a series of spiritual conferences were planned for early Fall.

"Always Use It, 'Tis the Best Soap Yet"

These words a lady looking at the splendid Ivory Soap display in the window on Saturday night expressed the view of thousands of women. Ivory Soap has long been known as the purest and most soothing soap. In hospitals doctors and nurses have been recommending the Ivory Soap for years. In hotels, where every effort is made to secure the best soap for guests, Ivory is invariably to be found. There are, of course, many more expensive soaps than Ivory (Ivory is very inexpensive) but there is no better soap than Ivory. There cannot be a better soap, for the Ivory cannot produce a purer lather than Ivory. If you have not started using Ivory, please do so today. The whole family will delight to wash in Ivory Soap. You can buy Ivory for five, ten and fifteen cents a cake. Ivory is obtainable at all stores, and is being specially featured this week in Bowring Bros. Grocery, 171, 173, 175, 177, 179, 181, 183, 185, 187, 189, 191, 193, 195, 197, 199, 201, 203, 205, 207, 209, 211, 213, 215, 217, 219, 221, 223, 225, 227, 229, 231, 233, 235, 237, 239, 241, 243, 245, 247, 249, 251, 253, 255, 257, 259, 261, 263, 265, 267, 269, 271, 273, 275, 277, 279, 281, 283, 285, 287, 289, 291, 293, 295, 297, 299, 301, 303, 305, 307, 309, 311, 313, 315, 317, 319, 321, 323, 325, 327, 329, 331, 333, 335, 337, 339, 341, 343, 345, 347, 349, 351, 353, 355, 357, 359, 361, 363, 365, 367, 369, 371, 373, 375, 377, 379, 381, 383, 385, 387, 389, 391, 393, 395, 397, 399, 401, 403, 405, 407, 409, 411, 413, 415, 417, 419, 421, 423, 425, 427, 429, 431, 433, 435, 437, 439, 441, 443, 445, 447, 449, 451, 453, 455, 457, 459, 461, 463, 465, 467, 469, 471, 473, 475, 477, 479, 481, 483, 485, 487, 489, 491, 493, 495, 497, 499, 501, 503, 505, 507, 509, 511, 513, 515, 517, 519, 521, 523, 525, 527, 529, 531, 533, 535, 537, 539, 541, 543, 545, 547, 549, 551, 553, 555, 557, 559, 561, 563, 565, 567, 569, 571, 573, 575, 577, 579, 581, 583, 585, 587, 589, 591, 593, 595, 597, 599, 601, 603, 605, 607, 609, 611, 613, 615, 617, 619, 621, 623, 625, 627, 629, 631, 633, 635, 637, 639, 641, 643, 645, 647, 649, 651, 653, 655, 657, 659, 661, 663, 665, 667, 669, 671, 673, 675, 677, 679, 681, 683, 685, 687, 689, 691, 693, 695, 697, 699, 701, 703, 705, 707, 709, 711, 713, 715, 717, 719, 721, 723, 725, 727, 729, 731, 733, 735, 737, 739, 741, 743, 745, 747, 749, 751, 753, 755, 757, 759, 761, 763, 765, 767, 769, 771, 773, 775, 777, 779, 781, 783, 785, 787, 789, 791, 793, 795, 797, 799, 801, 803, 805, 807, 809, 811, 813, 815, 817, 819, 821, 823, 825, 827, 829, 831, 833, 835, 837, 839, 841, 843, 845, 847, 849, 851, 853, 855, 857, 859, 861, 863, 865, 867, 869, 871, 873, 875, 877, 879, 881, 883, 885, 887, 889, 891, 893, 895, 897, 899, 901, 903, 905, 907, 909, 911, 913, 915, 917, 919, 921, 923, 925, 927, 929, 931, 933, 935, 937, 939, 941, 943, 945, 947, 949, 951, 953, 955, 957, 959, 961, 963, 965, 967, 969, 971, 973, 975, 977, 979, 981, 983, 985, 987, 989, 991, 993, 995, 997, 999.

Originals To-Night and To-Morrow Matinee and Night

LAST TIMES HERE.

At the Nickel to-night at 8.30 and to-morrow at 2.30 and 8.30, the Originals will offer their final performances of "Rapid Fire" by the veterans of St. John's. They leave on the express Sunday for Sydney, and will not play anywhere else in Newfoundland.

Patrons are reminded that this marvellous aggregation will give a popular priced matinee to-morrow, and in order to get some good seats reservations should be made at once. Crowds have been flocking to the Nickel all this week owing to the fact that the Originals finish their engagement on Saturday night, at the popular prices on the second week.

In "Rapid Fire" the "Originals" have spread their talent through a number of clever skits, chief among them being "Billeted in a Barn," a satire on soldier life in France; and that memorable laughmaker which took Canada by storm when the Originals first started on tour after coming home. There are many different kinds of entertainment and the ex-cruciating Bob Anderson. The Originals Quartette, Leonard Young, Thomas Dunn, Alan Murray, Bertram Langley, Jerry Bradford, Norman A. Blume, and the one and only Gene Pearson (The male Gull Cure!), all romp off with leaves from the laurel wreath.

The opening "God of War" scene, followed by the Bathing girls chorus starts the show off true to its name. Norman A. Blume is a scream, while Gene Pearson follows with the beautiful song number "Give me a little cozy corner," in which he is ably assisted by the Originals quartette. Bob Anderson, as always, keeps the audience in screams, while the "Songs of Long Ago," with Thomas Dunn's singing "My dear old mother's song book," and one after another the members do an old fashioned melody brings back the days when "Annie Rooney," "Last rose of Summer," etc., were popular. "Bible Stories" (Revised version) are told by Bob Anderson, Alan Murray and Jerry Bradford. These are but a few of the many good things in store for those who go to see "Rapid Fire" to-night, Saturday afternoon or evening.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

WHEN TEACHER IS CRITICIZED.

Johnny's mother is very much perturbed. He has an unfair teacher. That is she is unfair sometimes. For the most part she is a conscientious, hard-working woman who is really interested in her profession. But she is naturally rather crabbed and this tendency asserts itself, when she is tired and nervous, in impetuous outbursts in the class room.

The other day she caught Johnny whispering. Not an unusual nor unforgivable offense, but it had been a long hard day and she vented her feelings on Johnny by taking his report which he had just received, vigorously rubbing out the A he had gotten in department, and substituting a B in its place.

And Johnny Lapped It Up. "Do you think that was fair?" demanded his mother. "I think it was mean to mark him down for just a little thing like that. She's an old crank and she ought not to be teaching school. That's just a sample of the cantankerous, unjust way she treats the children in her room."

All this before Johnny, who drank it all in, accepting it as deserved blame for his wounded feelings. Now I am holding no brief for unfairness, and injustice in teaching. In fact I'm of a mind to write something along that line one of these days. I have emphasized in this column more than once the urgency of justice in our dealings with children. It is within our control in the home. But what about injustice which the child meets outside? How shall we teach him to deal with it there?

Not Specially Fair Either. Surely the method Johnny's mother used isn't going to be successful. She will only succeed in creating a grudge and an exaggerated sense of injury against his teacher in the boy's mind. And that isn't going to help either of them. Johnny's father tells with a chuckle that his father used to say: "If you get a licking at school you'll get another when you get home."

Neither wholesale approval nor condemnation of a teacher's punishment without a hearing for both sides is fair to either the teacher or the child. But if on inquiry it appears that the teacher has been unnecessarily harsh, what then? I like the attitude of the mother who happened to be present when Johnny's mother poured forth her grievance.

He'll Learn That People Are Mixtures. "Yes, I know it's exasperating," she said, "and I think Johnny's teacher is more or less of a crank. But she's a conscientious woman and a really excellent teacher in the imparting of knowledge, which is a knack in itself. There isn't anything she won't do to help a pupil who asks for help on his school work. And so I figure it out that it isn't going to hurt my boy to get a little rough usage. He isn't going to find the world all roses. He will learn from this teacher that a crabby exterior and real honesty of purpose often go hand in hand. And he'll learn, too, that it doesn't pay to be too sensitive in this work-a-day world."

In other words, Johnny and his friend are going to find out as they grow older that there are a lot of things in life that can't be cured and that just have to be endured. They've got to learn to take the world as they find it, to learn, as I have said before, that "people just are."

Sending Pictures by Wireless

(By A. C. HORTON)

New developments in radio transmission follow each other with such rapidity that it is difficult to keep pace with them. We are now able to converse across immense distances, we can obtain news of events in all parts of the world within a few minutes of their happening, and from the most remote parts of the globe, it is possible to listen to concerts, lectures, speeches, etc., from several countries.

Wonderful as are the possibilities of broadcasting, it is likely to be surpassed by the adoption of an invention known as the photo-electric cell, which enables the radio engineer to transmit light waves in the form of electric impulses, through the ether. It is now possible to take a photograph and reproduce it in the form of a newspaper illustration a thousand or more miles away, in very little more time than it would take to do it on the spot.

The new method of image transmission not only allows of photographs being reproduced, but by means of a specially constructed fountain pen, the transmitted picture can be reproduced in ink. It will thus be possible for newspapers to illustrate events happening hundreds or thousands of miles away within an hour or so, documents can be reproduced in facsimile, either in handwriting, typewriting or printed words, and actual signatures can be placed on them. Banks in various parts of the world will be able to verify signatures in the course of a few minutes, and police departments can send and obtain fingerprints and photographs of suspects and criminals without the delay caused by the post.

The rapidity of the process can be realized when it is noted that, quite recently a picture was transmitted from New York, 3,000 miles across the Atlantic, to the Marconi Station in London, and reproduced there in picture form, while the last portion of the picture was still being sent. Thus the first portion of a picture was being reproduced in a visible form while the last portion was being transmitted and meanwhile it had travelled over 6,000 miles.

The picture to be transmitted by radio is photographed on a positive film; that is, a print is made from the negative on a film instead of on paper, thus forming a semi-transparent medium which is attached to a glass cylinder. In intense beam of light from a lamp inside the cylinder is focused to a minute point and directed on to the film. The cylinder is rotated and travels along in the same way as a cylindrical photograph record, so that the point of light gradually moves over the whole of the surface. The light, in passing through the film, will vary in intensity, naturally, according to the density of the film. The high lights, being nearly transparent, allow the full power of the light ray to penetrate, but the portions of the picture in deep shadow offer sufficient resistance to decrease materially and even cut off the light entirely. The considerable range of light and shade in an ordinary photograph will give a corresponding range of light intensity where passing through the film. The beam of light, after passing thru the film, is focused through a lens on to the sensitive surface of a photo-electric cell which transforms the variation of the light into a series of impulses or waves; these variations of electrical energy follow exactly the variations of the light.

The photo-electric cell is dependent for its action on a peculiarity of potassium for discharging, under certain conditions, minute particles of electricity, called electrons, when subjected to light. The cell consists of a pear-shaped vacuum bulb coated on the inside with a highly-reflecting film of metal which prevents light entering except through a window. A deposit of potassium is concentrated on the metallized surface, so that the light from the window can come into contact with it, and when a beam of light is directed on this inner surface, which acts as a negative electrode or cathode, a flow of electrons is produced. The electrons are attracted by the positive electrode or anode, and thus form an electric current and complete a circuit. The number and the frequency of the flow of electrons depend on the intensity of the light, and on the flow of electrons depend the pulsations or waves of the electric current.

The current from the cell, in the form of weak but definite impulses, is passed through a series of amplifiers into a modulating device which transforms the impulses into a suitable form of transmission.

At the receiving station, the picture can be reproduced in duplicate on paper and on a film. The apparatus for transcribing the impulses gathered by the receiving aerial is similar to the wax record and needle of the early photograph, except that a covering of paper replaces the wax, and a delicately constructed fountain pen takes the place of the needle. The incoming electrical impulses are directed to a lever controlling the pen which makes a fine mark on the slowly revolving paper, varying in length and strength according to the intensity of the impulse.

A B-H English Paint can is merely filled with beauty. The very look of its contents as you pry the lid off suggests quality and the beauty that comes from quality. This first impression is quickly confirmed once you start to paint with it. Every brush-stroke is a pleasure. compares very badly with his confrere of the bus. He is like the big bully at school who takes a mean advantage of his size and weight. In a narrow road he usually sticks to the centre, from which he only moves at his convenience. If you are unable to pass him, and dare to suggest your presence by means of continual blasts on the horn, you will generally be the subject of his abuse. If the tram-lines happen to be the best part of the road he sticks to them, and, like a juggernaut, sweeps everything from his path.

Tradesmen's Jehus.
Next there is a type which has the characteristic of both hog and fool. He is the youth, varying in age from 17 to 25, who is generally engaged by the small tradesman to drive a light American van. His chief object is to get from one place to another in the shortest possible time. Cross roads have no terrors for him, he rarely uses his right hand in warning, and he is oblivious of any but himself and the vehicle he drives. If you meet a car racing round a dangerous bend at excessive speed on the wrong side of the road, in nine cases out of ten it is one of these vans. Its wings are usually shapely masses of bent metal, and the driver has no more consideration for your wings than his own.

Of the taxi-driver, I can say little that is good. Selfish to the extreme, he will take, but never give; and, if he forces you into trouble, his skill in handling his vehicle usually enables him to avoid hurt.

Another nuisance is the man whose sole idea is speed. He will cut in across you in traffic and force you to the kerb. He will race until he passes you, and then, having done so, will smother you in his dust until something else turns up for him to race. He ignores the ten-mile limit, and will pass a school with his klaxon as his only precaution. He sees something funny in making an infirm old man run across the road, and to kill chickens, and dogs gives him the opportunity to boast. Of all types, this is the most objectionable.

Ancient Montreal Landmark to Disappear

Montreal, Que., May. (By Canadian Press).—An ancient landmark in Montreal is being sacrificed to the residential needs of the city. The section of the ancient Mountain domain, the property of the Seminary of St. Sulpice since 1663, will be cut up into sub-division lots, and sold for the use of dwelling house builders. Here, in 1669, a township was established for the converted Indians, and in 1676, the Gentlemen's Fort was started there, which was still standing in 1857. The Two Towers, which date back to 1694, are the only remaining vestige of the old fort.

On the spot where the St. Jean the Evangelist School stands there was a stone house built towards the end of the eighteenth century, known as the Farm. Between 1840 and 1857 pupils of the Grand Seminary used this place as a country house. Later it was used for the same purpose by pupils of the college, and still later by the priests of Notre Dame Seminary.

THE EVENING TELEGRAM!

Motorists and Dangerous Driving

BOGS, FOOLS—AND OTHERS.

BY MAJOR F. A. C. FORBES-LEITH, Author of "By Road to India."

It is the aim of the majority of us who drive cars co-operate in making them safe and pleasant for all who, whether for recreation or business, are continually using the roads.

Unfortunately, there are a number—relatively small—who have no consideration for anyone but themselves. These I divide into two distinct categories—hogs and fools.

Both are equally dangerous, and, although we owe a great debt to the police for their never-ending zealousness in dealing with cases appertaining to the public safety, it is up to the motorist himself to take a great personal interest in matter that is all-important to him.

Let us analyse, briefly, the different classes of drivers. The hogs can be allocated to definite classes, chiefly according to the type of vehicle they drive, and in a day's wandering through the city, in difficult traffic, to study this problem, it is odd to find that those chauffeurs who have the most reason to hurry are those from whom we get the most consideration. The Gentleman of the Road.

I will quote as a model the omnibus driver of some of our great cities, and particularly of London. Whether the roads are dry or covered with greasy mud, he must run to a time schedule, the failure to keep which incurs penalties. I take off my hat to this hard-worked fellow, and hold him up as an example. He will always give way to the light car. If you meet him at a cross-road, he will usually motion you on. If you give way to him, you may generally be sure of a courteous salute of acknowledgment. If you drive behind him, he never falls in a sign, and, as yet, I have never heard abuse come from him.

We do not always realise the arduous nature of the work of this man, perched up in a very limited space in a hard seat with a straight back. Every time he lets in the clutch, he gets the equivalent of a punch in the back, and how many punches he must get in the course of a day one cannot calculate. Yet, in spite of his trials, I claim that the bus driver, generally, is the outstanding gentleman of the road.

But consider the heavy-lorry driver who drives a similar vehicle and has no time schedule to keep. Although there are exceptions to the rule, he

The Ladies!

Of the "others," I must write with care. I refer to the lady driver. I cannot say that they deserve classification in either of the two categories I have mentioned. But there! Dianas of the wheel have been accustomed to the axiom "Ladies first," and I am afraid that, on the road, they err too often by taking this rule for granted. This makes them over-assertive—a fact that detracts from their charm. Ladies, forgive me! But this is true. Pray, remember, that we would all give way to you without demur when necessary. In return, we would ask you not to take advantage of us.

Criticism is easy, but what of the remedy? The remedy lies with the motorist. When you encounter a flagrant case of dangerous driving, take courage to report it. Only by making examples of people who persist in driving to the public danger can we make our roads safe.

As Mr. Cairns, the famous magistrate, once said, "A chauffeur is a man in charge of a locomotive, who is as much responsible for keeping the un-written and written rules of the road as the engine-driver is of regarding his signals, and those who cannot do this are a danger to the community, and not fit to be in charge of a fine piece of mechanism."

These people are not only a danger to ourselves, but to our wives, our children, and all who belong to us. See then, yourself, that they are made to realise their responsibility.

Starting Fords.

Owners of the Ford product sometimes find considerable difficulty in starting the engine on a cold morning. Here are some "tricks" gained by practical experience. Scotch one of the back wheels, back and front, and jack up the other off the ground. Push the brakelever fully forward until the clutch engages. Then swing the starting handle, hard. The elevated rear wheel acts as a flywheel, and gives much greater impetus to the swing. Those who live in chilly places will benefit by removing plugs at night, and squirting a little paraffin into each cylinder.

Municipal Council

WEEKLY MEETING.

The regular meeting of the City Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councillors Martin, Outerbridge, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present.

After the Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed, the following matters received attention:—

Mr. B. Colton, on behalf of the St. Mary's Parish Building Committee, asked permission to use land in front of the present Parish Hall, Southside Road, for storage of materials to be used in the construction of a new hall which is soon to be commenced. The request was granted subject to the approval of the City Engineer, who will give the location.

Mr. C. J. Dutoit, on behalf of the Methodist Guards' Band requested permission to hold concerts in Bannerman and Victoria Parks, during the coming season. They are to be given permission on the same conditions as last year, and arrangements are to be made by the City Clerk.

A. E. Hickman & Company, Ltd., asked that an opportunity be given them of tendering for the supply of road oil. An order for this year's requirements has been placed. The sample submitted by this company, which was tried out last year, will be reported on by the City Engineer in the course of a few days and his findings will be forwarded them.

The following matters were referred to the City Engineer:

(1) Protest received from Mr. J. Burke against hopper being placed in front of his residence, Lime Street;

(2) Communication from R. Dwyer, Oak Farm, re the need of repairs being made to Dwyer's Bridge, and also calling attention to the dangerous condition of fence near the embankment at this place; (3) complaint of J. T. Butler as to the condition of sidewalk, Gear Street.

C. J. Winsor forwarded protest against the erection of Butterline Factory, LeMarchant Road, which he stated would seriously depreciate his property. He stated that he had been requested by many residents of LeMarchant Road, East and West, to submit to the Council a petition which they would be willing to sign. As permission was granted for this erection several days ago, the protest cannot be given consideration.

In the matter of land, north of Macklin Place (off Leslie Street), belonging to Mr. Jas. Ellis, which was the subject of considerable discussion at previous meetings, Mr. Ellis wrote, stating he wished to make his position quite clear and therefore submitted title deeds to the property. These will be enquired into by the City Engineer.

The Committee appointed with the City Engineer to visit LeMarchant Road and consider what could be done as regards the sidewalk, reported that in order to satisfy the many complaints received, it would be necessary to place a concrete curb and gutter along both sides of this thoroughfare from Parade to Pleasant St. The Engineer submitted an estimate, cost of the work, as follows: Laying concrete curb and gutter on both sides of Road, $9,100.00; Sidewalks of Tar, $9,100.00; total $18,200.00. As the Council is unable to undertake such a large expenditure, consideration was deferred.

Contract for the supply of uniforms for Municipal Inspectors was awarded T. J. Aylward, while that for the necessary plumbing work at the Bungalow, Bowring Park, was awarded J. H. Lakin.

PLANS

The following were passed subject to the approval of the City Engineer at whose office building permits may be obtained on application:—Extensions, Mrs. Rodgers, Hamilton Avenue; D. Whittle, corner Alexander and Water Streets; E. Evans, Cookstown Rd.; L. French, Field Street; Dwellings, P. Kennedy, McKay Street, provided he submit proper plan showing location to the City Engineer, and also that he undertake to pay proportion of cost for water and sewerage extension; Garages, O. E. Brown, Merry-meeting Road, and F. Lewis, Battery Road conditional ventilators being installed.

A Resolution of Condolence was passed and ordered forwarded to Hon. F. J. Morris, K.C., who for many years was legal adviser of the Council, in his recent bereavement.

The Medical Officer of Health reported that during the week the City has been free from infectious disease. Reports of the City Engineer, Sanitary Supervisor etc., for the week, were tabled and discussed.

Regulations for various departments were granted, and with the passing of accounts, the meeting adjourned.

The Scenes.

Act 1.—Morning, at Tim Mayo's home
Act 2.—Afternoon, same day.
Act 3.—Later, same place.

"The Game" is a play that is far ahead of anything we have ever seen in this nature of entertainment. It is a strong drama of politics, crooked and straight, and the plot has been brilliantly handled by the above well balanced cast. The story is built around a big theme and holds the attention of its audience right up until the final curtain. There is a pulsation of reality from the rise of the first curtain right to the last moment. The settings are right, the characters one and all speak naturally, there is none of the stressing for effect that invariably defeats its purpose. A splendid performance is given by Miss Archie Marks who plays the part of Nellie Mayo with a noticeable realism. Paul Brady puts some serious and able effort in the role of Tim Mayo and gives the part that beautifully natural touch. Miss Agnes Stutz has one of the finest character roles seen on the stage of the Casino in many years. Her acting is all that could be desired. Nettie Davenport plays well the role of Kate Desmond. Ray Wasmund, Walter DeLuna, Mickey Kane and H. Webb Chamberlain are each seen to excellent advantage in important roles. The play as a whole is a beautiful piece of dramatic interpretation and we advise all to see it before it concludes. This is the final bill of this popular Company who finish their engagement with tomorrow night's performance. Tomorrow afternoon a big matinee will be held for the benefit of the young folks.

The typical sports costume is the jumper blouse and skirt with the kick plait.

The Scenes.

Act 1.—Morning, at Tim Mayo's home
Act 2.—Afternoon, same day.
Act 3.—Later, same place.

"The Game" is a play that is far ahead of anything we have ever seen in this nature of entertainment. It is a strong drama of politics, crooked and straight, and the plot has been brilliantly handled by the above well balanced cast. The story is built around a big theme and holds the attention of its audience right up until the final curtain. There is a pulsation of reality from the rise of the first curtain right to the last moment. The settings are right, the characters one and all speak naturally, there is none of the stressing for effect that invariably defeats its purpose. A splendid performance is given by Miss Archie Marks who plays the part of Nellie Mayo with a noticeable realism. Paul Brady puts some serious and able effort in the role of Tim Mayo and gives the part that beautifully natural touch. Miss Agnes Stutz has one of the finest character roles seen on the stage of the Casino in many years. Her acting is all that could be desired. Nettie Davenport plays well the role of Kate Desmond. Ray Wasmund, Walter DeLuna, Mickey Kane and H. Webb Chamberlain are each seen to excellent advantage in important roles. The play as a whole is a beautiful piece of dramatic interpretation and we advise all to see it before it concludes. This is the final bill of this popular Company who finish their engagement with tomorrow night's performance. Tomorrow afternoon a big matinee will be held for the benefit of the young folks.

The typical sports costume is the jumper blouse and skirt with the kick plait.

Rotary Luncheon

The newly elected President, Rotarian Jim Ayre presided at the luncheon of the St. John's Rotary Club yesterday, and outlined a programme of suggested improvements of the functioning of the Club, and the anticipated plans already formulated for the summer's work to be progressively carried out. The new directors for the present year are: Rotarian W. Angus Reid, President; Rotarian R. G. Harcourt, Secretary; and Rotarian T. V. Hartman, Treasurer. Directors:—Rotarians D. M. Baird, Cyril Duley, C. E. Hunt, Dr. T. Mitchell, J. W. Morris, H. J. Russell and E. R. Watson.

A most interesting series of "two minute talks" were given by the following Rotarians:—D. M. Baird, H. Macpherson, Jas. MacKenzie, Dr. C. J. Hewlett, Peter O'Mara, Chas. Hutton and C. E. Hunt. The "talks" were delivered in a humorous strain and dealt with subjects of interest to Rotary. Such subjects as: "The pleasure I derive from my friends at the Rotary Club"; "Would I consider the St. John's Rotary Club a good insurance risk?"; "Does the Rotary Club need a new set of teeth?"; "Is the Rotary Club in tune with its members and the community?" "If the St. John's Rotary Club on 'Fire'"; "Are we on remand on trial or in jail?" were all cleverly dealt with by the respective speakers, and intermingled with the humour was the evidence of much "meat." The following is a gist of a few of the "talks":—"Is St. John's Rotary Club in tune with its members?" Well I think I can confidently answer that question in the affirmative. If there is one defect greater than another, either in a singer or in a musical instrument, it is to have either of them out of tune, it grates on one's nerves, puts one's teeth on an edge. I might say it harrows one's soul. So Rotarians beware when you sing out of tune. But if the musical sounds that we hear at our luncheons are not always harmonious, the defect is more than made up by that good harmonious fellowship that exists amongst us, we do not grate upon one another's feelings. A good Rotarian is a gentleman, and my definition of a gentleman is one who says or does nothing to offend another. Let me hope, and I think I can say it without being egotistical, that we can all be placed under that heading. It should be our aim to have our names inscribed on that list as it is another way of carrying out our motto, "Service over self."

The second question is: "Is the St. John's Rotary Club in tune with public sentiment?" Should there be a discord to be resolved in Harmony. Yes, I believe we are in tune with public sentiment, we have the public in full accord with us. There may be a kicker, a grumbler, a discordant note may be struck here and there, but as in music discords are absolutely necessary, in fact if there were only chords of sweet sounds, they would become very monotonous, we must have contrasts. If we were becalmed for a week with the sea like oil and a beautiful blue, cloudless sky above us, oh! how we would pray for a good blow.

So outside of Rotary, a little discussion, a difference of opinion, a healthy criticism is absolutely necessary for us. Otherwise we would become self-satisfied, continue in the even tenor of our way, get into a rut, stagnation would result and the Rotary Club would become a nonentity. The discord that should be there will be resolved in Harmony. These discordant sounds struck at us here and there, will rouse us from our lethargy and make us work more earnestly, and more unselfishly, to live up to these great Rotarian ideals.

Then we shall have the whole public sentiment with us, and the result will be a grand harmonious finale. We cannot afford to be too critical of each other; none expects perfection; and fault finding is but poor business. In life it is necessary to give and take. None of us is so perfect that we should not recognize this standard. As we now sow in life so generally do we reap, and as we sow in Rotary, so also, do we reap. We get nothing more out of life than what we put into it; we get from Rotary just exactly what we ourselves put into it. This law encompasses all humanity. The mind undeveloped is Rotary at a standstill. Let us foster Rotary principles by promoting its ideals.

A Push Pull Audio Frequency Amplifier

Quite often we receive requests for data on amplifiers of the push-pull type. People don't seem to understand when a push-pull amplifier is desirable or necessary. In our drawing above we show the connections of one stage of straight transformer coupled audio frequency amplification together with one stage of push pull amplification, in the second stage.

The first stage contains nothing unusual and is similar to all other amplifiers of the transformer coupled variety. The P and B terminals connect to the "output" binding posts on any set, or if your set has a jack you can connect two wires to a plug, insert this plug in the jack and connect the ends of the wires to the P and B posts on the amplifier.

The second stage contains two transformers and two tubes. These are arranged so that the tubes and transformers are in parallel and they count only as one stage. One transformer is marked "input transformer." The grids of both tubes connect to the G posts on the input transformers. The P and B terminals on the input transformer connect to the output of the 1st audio stage in this case by means of a two circuit jack. The second transformer is called the "output transformer." The plate of one tube connects to one terminal of the output transformer and the plate of the other tube to the other terminal. The output winding of the output transformer connects to the loudspeaker. The B battery connects to the midpoint of the primary of this output transformer.

The Work of the Imperial Economic Committee

A Paper Read Before the Board of Trade, at St. John's, May 29th, 1925.

Mr. President, Your Excellency, and Gentlemen—The Imperial Economic Committee is an organization recently constituted by the British Government, with four members representing the Mother Country, two representing each of the Dominions, two representing the Crown Colonies and Protectorates as a whole. Its work will be to promote the import of Empire foodstuffs into the British Isles and to assist in this the Baldwin Cabinet has decided to allocate one million pounds a year to be applied to such methods of stimulating this trade as the committee and the Cabinet approve. This policy has been adopted as an alternative to the actual preferences in import duties granted to certain Empire foodstuffs by the Mother Country the past six years, but which can no longer be retained because Mr. Baldwin, in the General Election campaign last fall, pledged himself and party to take no steps that might tend to increase the price of the people's essential foods.

My observations now are somewhat of a review of the circumstances which led to this policy of the British Government, based upon my knowledge of the matter as a result of having been associated with the Imperial Economic Conference of 1923.

and automobiles and Australian dried fruits will be large beneficiaries under the preference proposals in his Budget. I quote in part his preferences to the subject:—

"It is our policy to give effect to the proposals of the British Government at the Imperial Economic Conference of 1923 in so far as these do not involve any new or additional duties upon food of any sort or kind. Accordingly, I now submit proposals for the removal of the existing duties on Empire tobacco from one-sixth to one-quarter of the full duty; for an increase of the preference on heavy wines from one-third to two-thirds; for an increased preference on the surtax on sparkling wines from 30 per cent to 50 per cent; and as to sugar we propose to restore the preference to the level at which it was before the reduced duty of last year—namely, 4s. 3d. per cwt.—and also to provide that the preference shall remain in force for so long as the full duty does not fall below that level. . . . We have thus carried out every pledge in the fullest and most precise manner given at the Imperial Economic Conference, subject, also, to those other pledges given at the General Election in regard to the taxation of the necessary foods of the people."

Attempts to improve trade between the different portions of the British Empire by means of preferential tariffs or similar agencies go back many years. The first really practical step was taken in 1898, when Mr. Fielding, the Canadian Minister of Finance, provided that goods imported into Canada from the British Isles should enjoy a tariff rebate or preference of 25 per cent off the regular duty. Australia followed in 1908, New Zealand in the same year, and South Africa did the same in 1914.

The movement in the Mother Country for a preference to the Overseas possessions, took a vital aspect in 1902 when the late Joseph Chamberlain, then Secretary for the Colonies, (as a result of having visited South Africa on a pacification mission after the Boer War), advocated a policy of tariff reforms, a feature of which was to be a tax on foreign wheat to stimulate the development of Empire-grown wheat and its consumption in the British Isles.

Students of political history of 20 years ago will remember that the defeat of this policy was largely effected by the cry that "your food will cost you more!" illustrated by cartoons showing the big loaf, which the British workman was pictured as then enjoying, and the little loaf which it was suggested would be his portion if Tariff Reform became the law of the land.

The war produced new conditions and in 1916 what became known as the McKenna duties (from the then Chancellor of the Exchequer) were imposed, a rate of 3 1/2 per cent being levied on imported motor cars, clocks and watches, musical instruments, movie films, etc. These duties were devised for conserving space on steamers for more necessary articles, and promises were given that after the war they would be repealed, but from the start they were regarded by many as the thin end of the wedge of protection. They were followed after the close of the war by the Safeguarding of Industries Act, a measure designed to prevent foreign countries, notably Germany, from dumping goods into England.

At successive Imperial Conferences the question of Imperial Preference was discussed and favorable resolutions were adopted and in 1919, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, intimated a small beginning of Imperial preference, but one which, he claimed, offered opportunities for trade development. On the McKenna duties on manufactured articles, he proposed a preference of one-third, and on consumable commodities, apart from alcohol, a preference of one-sixth, in each case to be given by a reduction of the existing duties. Thus, on tea, on which the duty was 1s. the preference would be 2d.; on cocoa it would be 7s. a cwt.; on sugar 4s. a cwt., and on dried fruits 1s. 3d. a cwt. Special preferences were to be allowed to Empire-produced wines and spirits, increasing the duty on foreign spirits by 2s. 6d. and reducing the duty on colonial wines. This measure remained the law of the land until the Labor Government last year repealed the McKenna duties, but, as I have already said, Mr. Churchill restored them in his recent Budget.

1920 and 1921 when the post-war depression was most acute, the question of further developing trade within the Empire was actively advocated by prominent British public men, the late Mr. Bonar Law being a strong supporter of this policy, and when elected in November, 1922, as the Conservative Prime Minister after the disruption of the Coalition, he pledged himself to explore every avenue likely to stimulate trade within the Empire, and to take no steps towards the reversal of the free trade policy of the country, in the matter of foodstuffs, without an unequivocal authorization thereto at a General Election.

In the endeavour to attain the first of these results he decided to convene an Economic Conference, and this was held in the autumn of 1923, in conjunction with the Imperial Conference, fixed for the same time. Mr. Law died meanwhile and was succeeded by Mr. Baldwin, the present Premier, and it was by him that the Conferences were opened.

At the Imperial Conference our Prime Minister of the day, Mr. Warren, was our representative, with Sir Marmaduke Winter, one of his Executive colleagues, as his associate at the Economic Conference. It was in England at the time in connection with the Labrador case, and was drafted for duty in an advisory capacity in conjunction with the then Acting High Commissioner, Captain Victor Gordon, because of my acquaintance with some of the questions to be considered, through having prepared the Colony's case in 1914, for the consideration of the Dominions Royal Commission on the resources and trade of the Empire, which visited here just before the war. The extent and variety of the work to be done forced Mr. Warren to give most of his time to the work of the Imperial Conference proper, and its Committees. Sir Marmaduke Winter attended the sittings of the Economic Conference and its Committee for part of the time, but was then obliged to return here. Captain

Gordon attended in the same way, but had the regular work of his office to keep up, so it came to pass, that it was my lot to speak for the Colony at the sittings of the Economic Conference when the question of preference came up for discussion. That I was not altogether a failure in that capacity will probably be agreed from the fact that Mr. E. R. Edson, the Secretary of the Conference, in writing to Mr. W. J. Carew, our Premier's Secretary, on the 10th of November, 1923, in the closing period of the session, on the matter of the Reports observed that "Sir Patrick McGrath made an important speech about Preference, and another about Wireless, and according to the proposed scheme both of these speeches will be published in the Blue Book in the form of verbatim extracts and not as preface."

I trust I will be pardoned the seeming egotism of quoting this, but after the Conference ended my fitness for the post was questioned in "another place." I did not reply then, but I utilize the opportunity now to present the quotation as an answer.

At the Economic Conference the following matters were discussed:—Shipping taxation, immunity of State enterprises, Co-operation in Financial assistance to Imperial development, co-operation for technical research and information, carriage of goods by sea, import and export of live stock, Overseas settlement, Imperial preference for public contracts, commercial, Diplomatic, and Consular services, commercial travellers' samples, trade catalogues, statistics, Imperial shipping problems, Air communications, Cables and Wireless, State owned Atlantic Cables, Preference to British cable and Wireless Companies, Patents and Trade Marks, Forestry questions, valuation of goods for Customs duty purposes, reciprocal enforcement of judgments, Empire currency and exchange, workmen's compensation, the creation of an Economic Committee, and last, but not most important, Imperial Tariff Preference.

The discussion of Preference or other methods of promoting greater Empire trade was our chief topic at the Economic Conference, and one could not but be struck with the similarity of the problems that beset the various countries represented there,—great and small, in the New World and the Old, in the Northern Hemisphere and in the Southern. We are wont, here in Newfoundland, to consider ourselves still "the apostle of historic misfortune" in regard to fishery matters, but Premier Bruce, of Australia, told us a tale of woe equally disturbing.

From Australia they export enormous quantities of chilled meat for consumption in the British Isles, but owing to high prices of labor in Australia, high shipping rates, difficulties of distribution in England, etc., the Australian product is being steadily displaced by that from Argentina. Only a few weeks ago the head of a large company in this Australian trade, stated that his company had on its ranches in Australia seventy thousand head of cattle which it would not pay them to kill because they could not profitably transport the meat to the British Isles. One of the reasons, apart from cheaper labor and freight, why the Argentina article is able to undersell the Australian, is that the Argentina combine owns and controls 3,000 meat shops in the British Isles, and is thus able to force its own goods into consumption at all times. Mr. Bruce suggested that Britain initiate a scheme for regulating the trade by a system of import licenses, somewhat on the line of our fishery regulations of 1920.

THURSDAY—"Gloria Swanson," in Her Greatest Picture, "The Humming Bird."

New Zealand had similar troubles over her exports of mutton and dairy products, and those interested will find some very informing observations on this in the last issue of the Round Table Magazine. Canada had the question of the cattle embargo, which was settled satisfactorily, and others as to the shipping of wheat, fruit and foodstuffs. Ultimately this group of problems was referred to a sub-Committee on which I acted for Newfoundland, and our report after reviewing the whole problem very thoroughly, with the aid of experts from the Food Bureau of the British Ministry of Agriculture, was unanimously against any attempt at measures of Government control, a decision which the Conference endorsed.

Then the matter of preference was taken up and the Minister of Trade, Sir Philip Lloyd Greame, set up three conditions which should apply to any preferences which might be offered:—

1. They should refer to Empire food products only.
2. The foodstuffs to enjoy the preference should be such as would meet all requirements of the British market.
3. These foodstuffs should be such as would not damage the position of the Home producer.

Subject to these conditions he then submitted the further proposals in regard to Empire preference, which were as follows:—

- (a) the doubling of the existing preference of 2s. per gallon on wines; (b) the levying of a duty of 6s. per cwt. on foreign raw wool, while allowing Empire wool to be imported; (c) the levying of a duty of 10s. per cwt. on foreign salmon, lobster, crayfish and other sea products; (d) the levying of 10s. per cwt. on foreign fruit in the same way; and (e) the levying of a duty of 6d. per gallon on foreign lime, lemon and other juices and syrups under the same conditions.

His original proposal as to fish was contemplated as salmon, in the case of Canada, as you know, trades very freely, but Mr. Burton, the South African Minister of Finance, asked for inclusion of cray fish and I asked the inclusion of lobsters, which secured at once. I then took up Hon. George Graham, the Canadian Minister of Railways, who was also Canada's representative at the time. (Mr. MacKenzie King being the member of the Imperial Conference for and Sir Lomer Gougeon having been sent to France), that we ask for the duty on fresh, chilled, frozen, smoked salmon, and submitted the following:—

Orphans Entertained Last Night

Last night was a gala night at the Church of England Orphanage. The Methodist Guards' Band, accompanied by the Prince's Orchestra and a large number of well known city artists visited the Shannon Munn Memorial Institution and gave the little folk a delightful programme of vocal and instrumental music. The musicians and their friends were conveyed to the Orphanage in motor cars arranged for by the Orphanage Club.

The Concert began at 8.30, with Hon. Dr. Mosdell acting as Chairman. The first item on the programme was a march "Solid Front," by the Methodist Guards Band, conducted by Bandmaster C. Peet. Other selections played in good style by the Band during the evening were: "Honey Girl," "Paper Up," and "Soldiers of the King." The Prince's Orchestra, under Mr. W. Davey, also created great enthusiasm amongst the delighted audience of boys and girls with their excellent renditions of popular dance music.

On the vocal side the programme included the following items:—"Anchored," by Miss Lena Driscoll; "Swanee River Dream," R. Redmond; "When Honey Sings An Old-Time Song," Miss K. Hayes; "Carry me back to Old Virginia," E. Snow; "Rose of my Heart," H. Chaplin; and "Absent," by Messrs. Chaplin and Redmond. A specially interesting feature was an instrumental solo, played on an ordinary hand-saw, by H. Diamond.

The restrained, but spontaneous and whole-hearted enthusiasm of the children, their evident thorough enjoyment of the proceedings and their cheerful responses to the witticisms of the chairman, were a delight to all connected with the affair and were ample reward to the Bandmen, the members of the Orchestra and the other friends who shared in the event. Encores were played by the band and were liberally responded to by all the performers in a whole-hearted desire to provide the kiddies with the greatest degree of pleasure that could be furnished in one evening. The behavior of the boys and girls was particularly good and was the cause of many compliments to Mr. J. Andrews and to Mrs. White, the Superintendents.

The piano accompaniments of the evening were played by Misses M. Doran and Jean Joyce. After the musical programme concluded, Hon. Dr. Mosdell expressed appreciation for the kindly interest of the visiting musicians in the well-being of the orphans. He spoke of their good offices on behalf of the other institutions and asked Bandmaster Peet and Mr. Davey and their assistants to accept the thanks of the Superintendents, the children and the managers for their kindly thought and effort. Mr. H. Chaplin responded on behalf of the Band and associates, and expressed appreciation to the Orphanage Club for providing motor car transportation for the half hundred who shared actively in the evening's programme.

The evening's events concluded with a lavish spread of supper for the children and their performers. It was provided by the lady assistants of the Guards Band and was a fitting wind-up for the healthy appetites that accompany sound juvenile physiques such as were in evidence amongst the boys and girls of the institutions. A feast of music succeeded by a feast of good food made a happy combination for the orphan children.

The Orphanage Club, the musicians and their associates express thanks to Messrs. C. C. Pratt, James Pratt, E. Snelgrove, Hon. John Davey, D. R. Thistle, T. W. Sparkes, G. Hutchings, who assisted Hon. Dr. Mosdell, B. B. Stafford and E. Lawrence, of the Club, in conveying the visitors to the institution by motor cars.

Have you entered yet? No. Are you going to? Yes. What for? The Three Mile Road Race for the "Stafford Cup" in St. Mary's Garden Party Sports on June 17th. I am also going to try the One Mile and the "How-do" Race. Atta Boy!

Items to Sir Philip Lloyd Greame, and I raised with himself the matter of a preference for our cod liver oil, but he would not agree to putting this on the preferential list, holding that as it was used largely as a medicine, the imposition of a duty on the foreign article might result in hardships on the sick.

Later I accompanied Mr. Warren to a conference with officials of the Board of Trade in regard to these matters, and we made the best fight we could in the endeavour to widen the scope of preferences so far as this country was concerned; and we were promised the most favorable consideration.

The Economic Conference closed in November with an agreement that the Baldwin Government would recommend at the next session of Parliament, as part of its budget programme, the granting of the preference already stated. Shortly afterwards Mr. Baldwin decided that he would submit a general policy of protection to the electorate, so he dissolved the House and appealed to the country. The agitation against him was along the lines of that which had done duty twenty years previously. The appeal of the big loaf under free trade, against the little loaf under protection, which had proved so powerful in 1905 was equally effective this time, but was varied by a warning as to the increase which the cost of curvants would make in the price of the baby's bun.

You all know what happened—the defeat of the Baldwin Government, the rejection of Protection as a fiscal policy for the second time in twenty years, and the installation in office, if not altogether in power, of the British Labor Party under the leadership of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

He and his followers are avowed Free Traders; and so are the Liberals, who helped maintain him in office, but still the desirability of stimulating trade within the Empire was so apparent and the possible effect on the Dominions of a cancellation of these preference proposals so serious that the Labor Government decided to leave them to a free vote of the House of Commons; and when the Laborite Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Philip Snowden, introduced his Budget on the 23rd of April, 1924, he stated this and further that the Labor Government would not disturb the existing preferences in effect since 1919. It is very significant, I think, that whereas the Conservatives, or Protectionists, numbered only 258 in the House of 615 and the Liberals and Laborites 367, the preference resolutions were only defeated by six votes. This decision, however, ended for the time this effort for better inter-Empire trade.

In the House of Commons on October 2nd, 1924, a statement was tabled showing the amount of Customs duty collected at the full and preferential rates respectively, on account of each of the commodities both as to consumable articles and those under the McKenna duties to which Imperial preference applies. During the year ended 31st March, 1924, the articles were: Oils, Cocoa, Coffee, Dried Fruits, Spirits, Sugar, Molasses, Glucose, Saccharine, Sugar composite articles, tea, tobacco, cinematograph films, wines, clocks, watches and parts, motor cars, motor cycles and parts, musical instruments and parts. The total amount of duty at the full rate was £39,000,000 in round figures, and under the preferential duty £27,000,000. Of these articles sugar contributed £27,000,000 at full rates and £7,000,000 at preferential rate. Tobacco contributed £47,000,000 at full rate, and £3,000,000 at the preferential rate. Films contributed £283,000 at the full rate and only £1,000 at the preferential rate. Clocks, watches and parts contributed £40,000 at full rate and only £1,000 at preferential rate. Musical instruments and parts mainly pianos contributed £322,000 at the full rate and only £1,000 at the preferential rate. Motor cars, cycles and parts contributed somewhat over a million pounds at the full rate and £400,000 at the preferential rate.

In the autumn of 1924, the Labor Government was, in turn, defeated and another general election ensued. Mr. Baldwin in his appeal to the country then, in which, as you know, he was victorious, pledged himself that, if elected, he would take no steps to change the tariff policy of the country as to foodstuffs. Thus it became impossible for the Conservatives to revive the preferences of 1922 but they decided on an alternative, to provide a sum of £1,000,000 annually, to be placed at the disposal of an Imperial Economic Committee, to be used in stimulating trade in Empire foodstuffs. The Baldwin Government also, after assuming office, appointed a Royal Commission on the Food Supplies of the British Isles, under the Chairmanship of Sir Auckland Geddes, formerly British Ambassador at Washington, which has been sitting for some months, and which is expected to report shortly. Its conclusions may have a bearing on the subject of Empire produced foodstuffs, but this report must, of course, be awaited.

One of the last acts of the Economic Conference of 1923 was the creation of an Economic Committee, in which the Mother Country and all the Overseas possessions would be represented, its duties being "to consider and advise upon any matters of an economic or commercial character, referred to it by any of the constituent governments." All the Dominions, except Canada, agreed to participate, Canada's refusal being dictated, it was understood, by a fear that the Opposition party at Ottawa would make political capital out of it. The Labor Government, on the ground that the Economic Conference was not itself unanimous on the matter, declined to approve this creation, but the committee was reorganized recently with Canada included, and is now considering ways by which this money can best be spent. Capt. Victor Gordon, our High Commissioner, is representing Newfoundland; and, as already stated, he recently sent the correspondence to the Government and invited suggestions as to how part of this money could be secured for this colony. The Prime Minister did me the honor of sending me these documents and asking for my views thereon, (because of my being at the Economic Conference), which I gave, and I understand he also forwarded them to the Fisheries Department and subsequently submitted the whole to the Board of Trade for its observations.

What the views of the Fisheries Department or the Board of Trade may be I do not know and the opinions I now advance are mine alone and are given for whatever they are worth. Little or much. As I see it, the British Government is providing an annual bonus of five million dollars to be gained by shipping to the British Isles necessary foodstuffs which can be sold at prices that will ensure a reduction in the cost of living for the toiling masses there.

The question for us is how we are to qualify for, or even, a share of that bonus? If the concession is limited to foodstuffs in the strictest sense of the term, one important item will be shut out, but if it is extended to "consumable articles," we may fare better.

We have to ask ourselves, in the first place, can we find an opening in the British Isles for our cod, herring and salmon in the forms in which we export them now, or can we adopt new methods which will appeal more to the British consumer. That is a question which those interested in the export of these products should be best able to answer. We have the fact that such markets as we once enjoyed in the West of England are gone, and that no effort appears to be made to regain them. If then we have to adopt new methods, what form should they take? Should we concentrate on the shipping of fish—fresh, or frozen, or chilled, or canned? Apparently each has its advocates, and I fear if each is to pull his own way not much will be done, because the amount we can expect to get is not likely to be very large, and it is to be used advantageously, it should be applied in one direction. That no situation is hopeless can, I think, be proved by the fact according to a statement by Mr. Omsby Gore, in the House of Commons, on April 2nd, that Nigeria, which produced only a handful of 218 tons of cocoa in 1901, increased its export of cocoa to 37,000 tons last year, while the record of cotton growing within the Empire is similarly encouraging.

Whether the conditions which Sir Philip Lloyd Greame laid down at the Economic Conference as applying to the preference will apply to this bonus I do not know, but Lord Peel's statement, quoted by me in my opening remarks, was made in the House of Lords in reply to a complaint that the interests of the Home producer were not being regarded in the scheme for which this Economic Committee was being set up; and Lord Peel's reply was that the Government would be very careful to protect the interests of the Home producer and would not agree to any proposals which would injure these interests.

It seems to me that we have one consumable article that merits all requirements. I refer to cod liver oil. Britain's purchases of Norwegian medicinal cod liver oil for the nine years (1915 to 1921), averaged 1,225,000 gallons annually, against 65,000 gallons of Newfoundland oil annually, or in the proportion roughly of twenty to one. In other words Britain buys twenty gallons of Norwegian oil to every gallon of Newfoundland oil which she purchases. Of ordinary cod liver oil Norway sells 1,963 tons to Britain annually, while we sell still less, only 1,160 tons.

Here is an enormous market waiting for us to capture it, and my recommendation to the Prime Minister was that we should suggest that a grant out of this £1,000,000 a year might be made to enable an advertising campaign to be put on in the Mother Country to popularize Newfoundland cod liver oil an Empire product, against Norwegian cod liver oil, a foreign product.

Very probably this will be criticized as ignoring our great fishery products, but I suggest that there is ample room for those associated therewith to show how we can get our codfish, herring and salmon across, at rates which will meet the needs of the British people. What cold storage facilities for shippers of fish are available at present, and to what extent are they utilized? Can our codfish be collected and shipped in a form which will pay? Is the experiment of last year in regard to the shipment of chilled salmon likely to be successful and to grow into a substantial industry? Can our herring be packed or handled in a way to ensure successful competition with the Old Country product?

These are all questions which seem to me to call for prompt and judicious consideration by the Trade. We are certain to be faced with keen and resourceful competition from the other Dominions for a share of this bonus, and will have to "make good" in the fullest sense of the word, if we are to secure a part of it.

Lastly, let me say that it seems to me the British market is one well worth going after. While it is unpleasant to read from day to day of Britain's unemployed and the problems involved therewith, it should not be forgotten that Britain is keeping alive her unemployed, by paying £100,000,000 a year in order to do it. Moreover, she is paying nearly £1,000,000 a day in interest on her debt; she is, indeed, the only country in the world which is making a real, substantial effort to pay her debts. Her people are carrying a burden of taxation three to four times as great as their neighbours in order to do it. Mr. Churchill's recent Budget shows that last year in the British Isles, despite all the adverse factors which existed, the deposits in the Savings Banks there increased by £11,000,000 and the purchases of National Savings Certificates by small taxpayers were £3,000,000 more. The national debt has been reduced in five years by £70,000,000 a year and the rate of Government borrowing has fallen from 5-1-2 to 4-1-2 per cent. The Mother Country has weathered many an economic storm in the past and is weathering the present one. Nobody who has read the description in Green's "Short History of the English People" of conditions there after the Napoleonic Wars, and contrasted them with those existing to-day, can doubt Britain's eventual economic restoration.

Our people will, I think, welcome the opportunity which this generous offer of the British Government affords us to increase our trade in foodstuffs with the Mother Country, and I trust that this review may contain the germ of something that will assist the Board of Trade and the Government in formulating some suggestions which will enable us to attain that object.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR ACHES AND PAINS.

Series of Super Features for Nickel

COMMENCING MONDAY WITH "HIS HOUR" ELINOR GLYN STORY.

The Nickel Theatre inaugurates a series of super productions commencing on Monday next. The first of these great films will be Elinor Glyn's great story entitled, "His Hour."

A bonafide Prince! A General who actually served as aide de camp to the former Grand Duke Nicholas; a Duchess born to the title and numerous other brilliant members of the old Russian court circle all plays in "His Hour" which is a Metro-Goldwyn picture.

Royalty appears in roles that are really a part of them, wearing the jewels and ermine to which they were so long accustomed and which were so melodramatically snatched from them when the Soviet came into power during the World War.

"His Hour," which Mrs. Glyn wrote while visiting the royal family in St. Petersburg, is a colorful drama of love and pathos, and is brimful of the brilliance always to be found in Mrs. Glyn's writings.

City Employees Lend Helping Hand

A number of municipal employees anxious to help along the work of building the new wing at the C. B. Orphanage attended the rock shed last evening and as a result about 40 tons of stone were conveyed to the site. The men were most enthusiastic and worked with a will and offered their services again. Mr. Hearn of Signal Hill also sent his horses, Constable Dowden, was present and on behalf of the Orphans, the managers and the Orphanage Club thanked the men for their assistance.

"The Mysterious Witness" at the Majestic Theatre

A story of tense dramatic values, told with a bold simplicity and interpreted by a sterling cast, is "The Mysterious Witness," featuring Robert Gordon and Elinor Fair, which attracted a large audience at the Majestic Theatre last night.

Screening a well known and well loved story is usually a pretty task, for the producers by so doing lay themselves open to comparisons with the original that are frequently uncomplimentary.

The feat of keeping in the film version all the strength and charm that made the story popular has been accomplished in the picture. The spirit of love, sacrifice, adventure, has been augmented one hundred per cent, and the story has taken living form upon the screen.

Robert Gordon not only plays the role of the youth Johnny Brent—he is Johnny, with all his appeal of youth, fine, glowing courage and noble spirit of sacrifice. You're not ashamed to grope for your handkerchief and wipe away a tear or two when Johnny is arrested for a murder he didn't commit; your heart goes out to the mother waiting at home for news of her boy; you want to get up and cheer when Johnny establishes his innocence by an amazing bit of ingenuity, and you want to walk right up into the screen and help Johnny punch in the face of the ranch-owner Bill Carney for getting him into all the trouble!

The admission fee alone is justified by the selections of Adams and Cheney and the entire bill, from every standpoint, was one which was very much enjoyed by all present. To-night it will be repeated, also to-morrow afternoon.

For pain in the back—try Juniper Pills—25c. at STAFFORDS.—apr27,1mo

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR THE GRIPPE.

Little Jack Rabbit by David Cory

Please wait just a minute, Boys and Girls. The new ribbon I bought yesterday at the Three-in-One Cent Store for "Remmy," my old typewriter, has become twisted. It's a wonderfully beautiful ribbon, red, white and blue. When typed the paper looks almost like a rainbow, but not quite, for a rainbow has seven colors—please remember.

Now that this ray ribbon is running smoothly I'll start right off to say that as soon as dear Uncle Lucky had ended his talk over the telephone by promising Little Jack Rabbit that he would be over in a minute or three to take him for a ride in the Luckymobile, the dear old gentleman bunny put on his old wedding stoppage hat, and after trying a blue silk polka-dot handkerchief over the top and under his chin so that mischievous Billy Byesee couldn't blow it off his head, he hopped out to the garage in the rear of his red-shingled house on the corner of Lettuce Avenue and Carrot Street.

"Is there plenty of gasolene in the tank?" inquired dear careful Uncle Lucky as he hopped onto the front seat.

"Cock-a-doodle-do, There's gas enough for two," answered the Old Red Rooster, clapping his wings against his crimson feather waistcoat.

"Then goodbye," shouted the old gentleman Rabbit, rolling out on Lettuce Avenue and down that beautiful street until he came to the Shady Forest. Every now and then, and sometimes often, he honked his horn as a merry little squirrel darted across the Windy Trail or maybe Jenny Wren hopped too close.

By and by, after a while and a bump and a smile, but not quite a mile, he came to the Sunny Meadow, where he drew up at the little white gate in the fence that surrounded the dear Old

Bramble Patch. Then out he hopped and up the little path through the bushes to the back door of the tiny white bungalow in which his small bunny nephew lived with his pretty mother, Lady Love.

"Howdy doodle-do," laughed tummy Uncle Lucky, making believe he was the Old Red Rooster as the sweet little lady rabbit opened the door.

"Where's my bunny nephew?" asked the dear old gentleman bunny, kissing Lady Love on the cheek where a red rose was in bloom.

"Here I am," answered a voice, and there stood Little Jack Rabbit, his khaki cap already on his head, his knapsack over his shoulder and his

Don't Say Paper, Say the Evening Telegram.

Abes Aid the Law
PROVED BY INK
 Several hundred pounds of banknotes were recently in a well known business house the cashier of which was burning a mass of banknotes when he was called to make a payment. Instead of burning some notes to the safe he became mixed with the waste and the cashier's story, at least, was the cashier's story. He had previously doubted his honor and the manager charged the cashier with the charred paper which in the grate could not be seen as the remains of banknotes. To go to prison, the cashier engaged a chemist detective, who, after a few hours' experimenting, found that part of the ashes were made up of bank-notes and even the numbers of them. The detective was acquitted.
Invisible Writing.
 Was this done? Modern methods of treating charred documents with Sir Humphry Davy's residue near Vesuvius in Italy, the residue which in early Christian times showed lava and ashes upon the towns of Pompeii and Herculaneum. Sir Humphry tried to recover the faded rolls of papyrus characters on which were of great value. He used the animal skin by means of glue jelly to the back of the document, powdered with the residue, and then he washed the document with a solution of caustic soda. About 120 manuscripts were treated, and although some were lost, the remains of the documents which caused the loss of the documents were recovered. Recently in some banks, offices, and almost identical agreements that were baked to a brittle mass in the safe, the charred parchment was obtained in a slow current of steam and coated with a gelatine solution which so strengthened the sheets that the stencils could be removed. The stencils were then washed with water, and the documents were then treated with a solution of caustic soda which is kept a secret. The important characters were made legible, and the documents were enabled to republish many thousands of copies. On charred paper is a great deal of information, and sometimes the writing stands out clearly on the white ash of the paper. Human eyes do not see as much as the camera. It has been found that characters of minute quantities which will fog specially prepared photographic plates. The characters, although visible to the naked eye, act like a lens between the paper and the plate which shuts off the action of the camera. When the plate is developed it is found to be foggy over the characters marked with ink. The chemist to read it is written on the documents. In a notable case there was no direct evidence to connect anyone with the murder of a woman, but postcards and fragments of newspaper were discovered. Faded characters on the fragments appeared to be the same handwriting as that of the postcards, and a photograph published in the Press traced the writing to a man who was arrested and charged with murder. He possessed a copying-ink pencil, and a chemist detective proved the characters of the lead to be the same as those used on the burned papers. The chemist denied that he had written the characters which would have incriminated him, but eventually confessed he had done so.

Nothing Like These Results A Year Ago or Now

It is no trick to build a car that will go 65 or 70 miles an hour if it has a power plant big enough to haul a freight train.

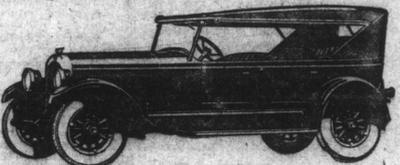

It's a great achievement to get over 70 miles an hour out of a motor of 5-inch bore and 4 1/2-inch stroke, with gasoline mileage safely above 20 miles per gallon.

And that's the wonder of the Chrysler Six—a wonder so different and so superior that Chrysler was forced to build over 32,000 cars to meet the first-year demand.

Of course you don't want to drive your Chrysler over 70 miles an hour. In fact you may never go that fast. But there is something you do want that only a speed-ability of 70 miles can give.

That something is sure, steady power for steepest hill or deepest sand, a pick-up to flash you out of a traffic tangle, sturdy, dogged pull so you can throttle to five, even two miles an hour, on high without "backing."

That's Chrysler performance in a nutshell. You surely must drive the car. It's the only way you can fully appreciate that it is the best built car you ever rode in. We are always eager to demonstrate the Chrysler.
