Interesting Remarks in Regard to British Columbia—Its Advantages and Resources.

The following are some of the remarks made at the meeting of the Royal Colonial Institute, London, in February last, apropos Rev. Canon Beaudan's paper on "British Columbia—a protuberant of Colonial development."

Mr. A. Staveley Hill, Q. C., M. P.: I obey your call, Mr. Chairman, but I may say I came here for the purpose not of addressing you, but of listening to the lecture of my friend Canon Beaudan, who kindly showed me over some interesting parts of Victoria some three years ago. I went out to British Columbia in the year 1880, having read and heard of the wrong done to the sealers, and as a member of the House of Commons, and in taking an interest in Colonial matters, I felt much disposed to see what was the real state of things. I made a journey over the island, or a great part of the island, to see what was its climate and its possibilities in regard to immigration.

As though they never faded there the climate is so exquisite, the country so beautiful, that the land is becoming, and will to still greater extent become, a residential place, not only for British Columbians, but also for people in the United States, who will find there a far more healthy and beautiful home than anywhere to the South. I remember standing on the terrace of the house of my friend Senator Macdonald, and looking across the Strait to the snow-topped Olympic range of blue hills, and the glorious forests, and I may say I do not believe there is to be found a more beautiful home than that one outside Victoria. With regard to the sealers, I went out to inquire, first, not to the animals killed in what is called pelagic sealing; secondly, how far there was a destructive diminution of the seals themselves, and thirdly, whether there was wastefulness in the mode of killing. My conclusions were embodied in some letters which appeared in the Times, in which I showed that the number of seals is not diminishing, but that they are to be found in Behring Sea in even greater numbers than before. I further showed that the mode of killing is not wasteful, but I also came to the conclusion that there is to be a greater preservation of seal life it is to be brought about, not by any restriction in a vascular manner, but by the system or season of sea-sealing, or the killing in the open, but by regulating more carefully the mode in which the seals are killed on the Pribilof Islands. Talk of the Victor sealer being a great monster who is the poacher—the man who kills on the nest, or the man who kills in the open field. I am glad to hear that the arbitration clauses under the treaty have been accepted, and that the killing of the Victor sealer is not a wasteful but a proper mode of obtaining and bringing to market a useful article of commerce. In conclusion, I will only add that, while I believe there is something charming climate, and no better place for immigrants, this is not a country for great wheat farms or large cattle ranches. It is a country adapted to the raising of the smaller cultivators, and nowhere will the charming climate, and no better place for immigrants, this is not a country for great wheat farms or large cattle ranches.

Mr. A. W. HAYES, M.L.C., Newfoundland—Your secretary was kind enough to ask me to make a few remarks on the paper. I have not seen it, but I have anticipated by previous speakers. It has been alleged that the death of these young seals on the Pribilof Islands is caused by Canadian killing the mother seals in the sea. No, I do not think that. In the present year Canadians have been allowed, at any time, to seal within 120 or 150 miles of those islands. It is utterly impossible, therefore, that the death of any seal on the Pribilof Islands can be laid at the door of the Canadian sealers. On the Atlantic side, the seals do not go to the islands for the purpose of bringing forth their young, but on the contrary, it is an extraordinary amount of intelligence—almost inspiration, for it is more than instinct—the old mother seals pick out the most inaccessible parts of the ice flows, and there the young are all born within a few days of each other—always about the end of February. After suckling their young, they take to the water and go away fishing, while the ice in which the young lie is drifted by wind and wave, sometimes as much as 15 to 20 or even 50 miles in the 24 hours. In the meantime, as I have said, the mother seal is away fishing; but every night she returns, and it is certain that in the 12 or 14 hours she is away she cannot go further than 60 miles, and in that distance she is able to pick out her own baby, nor, so far as is known, making a mistake. Suppose that in London 300,000 babies were born in one week, and that for a certain time their mothers were taken away from them. On their return, how many of the mothers, do you think, would be able to pick out their own babies, especially if the sea were no particular dense or mark? It is not the seals do. One point in connection with this seal question, and the complaint that has come in connection with the death of these is the work of the sealers on the coast.

EL PASO, Texas, March 23.—Another murder has been committed in the Boque, in this city, near the spot where two strangers were killed four weeks ago. Benito Castro is the victim this time. According to his wife's statement, Albert F. Brown, Marcos Medina, Eduard Ortiga, and Virgilio González appeared at the Castro house, at an early hour, and demanded money to pay for their expenses. Castro was aroused and told to dress and accompany them. This he proceeded to do, and Brown and Gonzalez left the house with their guns. Castro was getting into his clothes, his wife, fearing trouble, closed and locked the door behind them, and refused to open it until ordered to do so. Without further ceremony they began shooting through the door. At the first volley Castro gave a cry and fell to the floor mortally wounded. The shot is assigned for the killing. The sheriff to-day captured all of the parties who were present, but he is feared, has escaped into Mexico.

The Colonist

FRIDAY APRIL 1 1892.

THE TREATY RATIFIED.

The news of the ratification of the Arbitration Treaty must have been an agreeable surprise to those on both sides of the national boundary line who believed that Great Britain and the United States were on the verge of war.

As the agency is over, people, particularly those interested in the seal industry, will naturally ask, what is the next thing to be expected? The sealers were told in the notice they received from the Colonial Office, on Tuesday, about intermediate regulations restraining the catch of seals.

It is satisfactory to know that this troublesome dispute is at last on a fair way to be settled. While it remained open there would be always uncertainty and always danger that the irritation and disagreements would make the relations between the two countries very unpleasant.

Even if the arbitrators decide against the claim of exclusive jurisdiction by the United States, regulations may be drawn up and put in force for the preservation of seal life in the Northern Pacific, which may not meet with the approval of the British Columbia sealers.

As an instance of the abundance of fish, I may mention, that in laying-to in forty fathoms of water, within two miles of shore, three boats, each with a large crew, employed by the Government steamer in which I was traveling caught 500 pounds of fish in twenty minutes, comprised of halibut from 80 to 100 pounds in weight, and rock cod from 10 to 15 pounds.

With so many sources of information open to him we are surprised that the leader of the Opposition professed ignorance of the value of the deep-sea fisheries of the province, and spoke in such a way as to lead his hearers to believe that they were hardly worth developing.

Arbitration is certainly the best, as well as the most reasonable way of settling disputes of this kind, but arbitration does not mean peace in every sense. It is, on the contrary, means an active warfare of wits, and the party which relies on the goodness of its cause and allows the other side, as a critical time and on important points, to have the ear of the arbitrators unopposed, will be just as likely to be defeated as a strategy which carried on an active war in a sly way, and was not prepared to make the best use of its position and to take advantage of every slip made by the enemy.

UNPATRIOTIC OPPOSITION.

We see that the Opposition has resolved to treat the bill to encourage the deep-sea fisheries as a party measure. This is to be deplored, as it will prevent the scheme being discussed strictly on its merits.

is not the business of the Government to become a partner in a concern of this kind. Mr. Beaven seems to think that the Government is setting within its function in undertaking to develop the deep-sea fisheries of the province, but instead of trying to find out whether the means which the administration proposes to adopt are calculated to accomplish the purpose intended, he questions whether we have any deep-sea fishery to develop!

The Leader of the Opposition spoke as if he had never heard anything about the fish that swarm in the sea that washes our shores. One would think from the expressions he used in the debate that he was a "tenderfoot" who had not been in British Columbia long enough to get even a superficial knowledge of its capabilities.

But Mr. Beaven ought to know that our sea fisheries have been sampled, so to speak, both by Americans and British subjects, and that they have discovered enough to lead them to conclude that the supply is practically inexhaustible. A British Columbia gentleman who did some exploring, informed the writer that a large area of the sea near the coast is literally swarming with cod-fish.

It is evident that there is some error in the theory of the unrestricted reciprocity men and their dupes, the annexationists, that they have left out of their calculations some very important facts.

ESQUIMALT'S FORTIFICATIONS. Sir Stafford Northcote did British Columbia good service when he moved the following resolution in the British House of Commons: "That this House urges on Her Majesty's Government the necessity that exists for taking immediate steps to secure the completion of the works required for the protection of the harbor of Esquimalt."

More than that the Imperial Government ought to him we are surprised that the leader of the Opposition professed ignorance of the value of the deep-sea fisheries of the province, and spoke in such a way as to lead his hearers to believe that they were hardly worth developing.

With so many sources of information open to him we are surprised that the leader of the Opposition professed ignorance of the value of the deep-sea fisheries of the province, and spoke in such a way as to lead his hearers to believe that they were hardly worth developing.

A COMPARISON.

The Ottawa Citizen, which, by the way, has become a very lively paper, contains a comparison between eastern border counties on both sides of the national boundary line, which those who believe that a market of 65,000,000 will be sure to enrich all who have access to it, independent of every other consideration will find it difficult to comprehend.
