TOAST LIST
Chairman, G. F. Moores.

WHAT DOES CASHIN MEAN?

Will Mr. Bennett Explain?

Sir Michael Cashin, who is leading the Opposition against Sir Richard Squires in St. John's West, is attempting to develop class prejudice against our fellow-townsmen in St. John's because he is a Conception Bay man. Cashin has had distributed throughout the workingmen's section of St. John's an innocent-looking circular in big type in the following words:

"SQUIRES SAYS HE WILL NOT CAVASS THE BUMS AND SLUMS OF ST. JOHN'S. LABORING MEN ASK HIM WHY?"

This circular has been distributed by Sir Michael in certain sections of the city of St. John's. The people of Harbor Grace want Mr. Bennett to explain why Sir Michael Cashin is making that particular appeal to that particular section of the town of St. John's.

Piccott Will Head the Poll

Steady Manifestation of Liberal Strength in The Second City—Opposition Weakening Daily

PERSONAL VOTE BEING SOUGHT FOR BENNETT

Harbour Grace, April 16—The Liberal Campaign started at Bay Roberts this morning with the full team Piccott, Calpin and Simmons.

Saturday's committee meeting held by Bay Roberts supporters to meet Mr. Piccott, was a great demonstration of Piccott's popularity.

The Liberal committee rooms in Harbor Grace proper, are filled nightly and the greatest enthusiasm prevails.

Opposition supporters admit their cause is hopeless, and are now bringing all their energies to support Bennett personally on the split vote appeal.

St. John's voters are in doubt as to which of the candidates they should support. A reliable delegate visit the district and accompany the Liberal candidates, and witness their strong support for a few days.

Piccott heads the poll, Archibald will be at the foot.

The Humber Proposition Is A Big Constructive Policy

Establishing a Seventeen Million Dollar Industry in Newfoundland—Employment for Five Thousand Workmen.

The Liberal Party, asks endorsement of a constructive policy calculated to remedy the evils of the times. It is a policy that assures better times to our wage earners. It provides the means of increasing the country's wealth and of decreasing the country's burdens. It centres round the Liberal Humber Policy.

We recapitulate some of its chief features briefly, before passing on to a consideration of its specific advantages to those engaged in the fisheries who may not engage directly in the employment it affords, either as an alternative to fishing or as supplementary thereto.

The Liberal Humber Policy ensures the permanent establishment of a Seventeen Million Dollar industry in Newfoundland.

It provides the means for turning into wealth the unexploited natural resources of the country and of producing therefrom Ten Million Dollars' worth of manufactured products annually.

It affords employment for Five Thousand Newfoundlanders per year. It adds to the earnings of the workmen of Newfoundland the big sum of Four Million Dollars annually; It relieves pressure on the fisheries, it protects markets from over-supplies of Newfoundland fish, and so, ensures better prices for the products taken from the waters by our toilers of the sea.

But an outstanding and vital connection in which the Humber Industry secures practical benefits to Newfoundland is in connection with its effect on taxation.

That Industry once established and in full operation, will boost the Revenue of the Country by close on THREE MILLION DOLLARS.

Here's how they say the Tory Grafters have it planned in their dreams of more boodle:

RECEIVES FAREWELL ORDERS

Col. Martin, S.A., who has been in charge of the Army's operations in Newfoundland for the past four years has received orders from International Headquarters, to farewell from this territory and will be leaving here sometime in June next.

Colonel Martin is a splendid type of man and has done excellent work in this country, he has made many friends both in the city and other parts of the country who will sincerely regret to hear of his prospective departure.

NATIONAL ANTHEM

Big Industrial Development

The Hon. Sir. Richard Squires, the Prime Minister, desiring a mandate from the country for the enactment of the measure known as "The Humber Deal," decided to hold an election this Spring instead of next autumn and the Legislature was accordingly dissolved in February. The election is to take place on May 3rd.

The Humber Deal is a proposal for the establishment on the West Coast of a paper-making enterprise like that at Grand Falls, but twice as large. It's being fathered by Arm strong Withworth Company of London, one of the greatest industrial organizations in the British Isles, and promises to revolutionize the future of this country. The proposed mills will have an output of 400 tons of paper daily or 120,000 tons a year.

This will call for an original investment of about $20,000,000 half of which will be spent in Newfoundland, and after the mills are running the outlay will be about $6,000,000 a year, of which half will be spent in labor amongst the people.

With the example before us of the mills already in operation at Grand Falls, established by the late Lord Northcliffe, and his colleagues to provide paper for his various publications, nobody can doubt that this new enterprise will be the greatest thing for Newfoundland that has ever happened; and every well-wisher of the country has cause to rejoice that the Premier has been able to bring about the establishment amongst us of such a tremendously important labor-giving industry. The proposed mills will be among the largest on this side of the water, being only exceeded in size by two or three in Canada, where the business of paper making has now reached its greatest development of any country in the world.

At the same time this project is being started on the Humber City and Grand Falls mills are also planning to enlarge so as to increase their capacity fifty per cent. In other words, where they now produce 200 tons of paper a day they propose to enlarge it to 300 tons a day. This will mean a very considerable outlay in the construction of new mill buildings, and the erection of new machinery, and will also increase the permanent annual expenditure one half. This mill now employs about 1000 men all the year round, so that it will call for another 500 and with the Humber mill employing about 2000 more it is evident that there will be big opportunities for our working classes through these new ventures.

The improvement in the industrial outlook of the world will also help to revive operations at Bell Island on a large scale, and give an outlet Lord hath founded Zion, and the poor of his people shall trust in it." The service closed with the Benedicton and the National Anthem. On returning to the hall a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the Rector, Organist, Choir and church officials.

THE EAGLE'S TURNOUT

The S.S. Eagle finished discharging her seals last evening, the turnout being 10,761. This is not official as the specifications will not be ready till this afternoon. The crews share was sold to Messrs. Baine Johnston and Company, who paid $4.50 per quintal and the seals are being stowed at their Southside premises to be taken to Harbour Grace to be manufactured later on. The Eagle's crew are leaving for their homes in Bonavista Bay by the S. S. Watchful.

Stall's Books

Rev. T. Albert Moore, D. D., General Secretary of the Dept. of Social Service and Evangelism of the Meth. Church of Canada, who visited Newfoundland in Sept., 1917, in connection with the Social Congress, says:

"Stall's Books on Avoided Subjects have been standard works for such a long time that it seems almost unnecessary to say a word in their behalf. I believe they have accomplished great good, and are written with care and delicacy, at the same time with sufficient frankness for the modest discussion of these delicate subjects. They are safe books for general reading, especially if from the various books there is proper selection for the youth or adult, man or woman, as the case may be."

Journal of the Rev. Henry Gordon

TUESDAY, OCT. 1ST. Heavy breeze N.N.W.—impossible to stem out with our tow. Lay at anchor all morning, then decided to leave the tow and run back to Cartwright, till a better time came. In cranking the engine I got a severe blow on my wrist from a sudden back-fire.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 2ND. Wind still remains in the same quarter. Quite a number of the bay people waiting for a fair time. Gave a gramophone concert in the evening.

THURSDAY, OCT. 3RD. Wind veered N. E., and blew as hard as ever. Worked indoors. Another crowd came up in the evening.

FRIDAY, OCT. 4TH. Calm and chilly, with slight snow storms. About noon the news came in that a large steamer was coming up the run, and very soon afterwards S. S. Nascopee, the Hudson's Bay Company's Northern ship, steamed into the harbour. This is one of the great annual events of our lives down here. For myself, it means, in all probability, the chance of meeting some fellow parson, for this is the only means of travel that our Baffin Land missionaries have. I was quick on board, and was delighted to meet dear old Mr. Peck, who has dedicated a whole life to the North and (at over sixty years of age) still keeps at his post. With him was the Bishop of Moosonee. He is the first Bishop to visit Baffin's Land. One felt that the old man's labors had at last been rewarded. The Bishop was a most interesting personality, most of whose work is done by canoes, in which he travels for hundreds of miles up the big rivers of the interior. Middle-aged and of great strength, he seemed eminently fitted for his job.

SATURDAY, OCT. 5TH. Made acquaintance with three men of the North West Mounted Police, who were on their way home after two years' important service. In cranking the engine I got a severe blow on my wrist from a sudden back-fire. Thank God they were "white" men of the very best type that that force produces. Capt. French, who was in charge, showed me some unique photographs of the locality in which they had been. His companions were little if anything over twenty years of age, but made up in stature what they lacked in years. It does one's world of good to meet men like these, brave and clean and true. After tea, all hands assembled in the School-room, to bid farewell to the Swallow, who are leaving the coast after a long term of faithful service to the company. An illuminated address had been procured from St. John's and I got the Bishop to present it. I think everybody was sorry to say good-bye to them. For the first time this fall the ground was all white. Very cold night.

SUNDAY, OCT. 6TH. A fine frosty day, bright and calm. The Captain of the "Nascopee" very kindly held on till midday, so as to give us the great privilege of having the Bishop and Mr. Peck at Church. The Bishop preached and celebrated and needless to say there was more than one person, who will long remember the occasion. After service I had dinner on board the Nascopee, a sort of farewell banquet. About 2.30 the anchor was weighed and our friends departed.

MONDAY, OCT. 7TH. Turned out 4.15 a.m., and made another start for West Bay. Ran out against a strong tide to Pack's Harbour, where we found our tow nearly under water. The board was floating about. Having got things nearly right again, we set out for Cape Porcupine, where I had been promised I should find the frame of the building all ready to hand. After a pretty hard tussle against a head wind and a lull we arrived at the Cape to find that scarcely half the frame had been done. It was a bitter disappointment, after all the trouble we had taken, and it only remained to about ship and return home to Cartwright. We arrived back in the dark, cold.

TUESDAY, OCT. 8TH. Wind N.W. and fresh. School opened to-day, but only a few children turned up. Nearly all our children this winter are very little. After dinner I ran as far as Longstretch to fetch the teacher's girl, Tamar Coombs.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 9TH. Blowing fresh from SW. The Company's schooner "Thistle" set off up the bay. With a few passengers I ran across the bay to North River to bury old Mrs. Williams, one of the few remaining pure-bred Esquimaux, and one we can ill spare. She was a really fine character. At the same time I buried a new-born baby. One has very few funerals on this coast.

(To be continued.) Miss Mary Whiteaway went to Hr. Grace recently where she will spend a short vacation.

He grew restless and fidgety, some times so merry that the cabin, rung with his laughter; sometimes moody and thoughtful Favorite as he was among the sailors they were tired at last answering his perpetual questions about the probable time of touching land. Would it be in ten days, in eleven, in twelve, in thirteen? Was the wind favorable? How many knots an hour was the vessel doing? Then a sudden passion would seize him, and he would stamp upon the deck, crying out that she was a rickety old craft, and that her owners were swindlers to advertise her as the fast sailing Argus. She was not fit for passenger traffic; she was not fit to carry impatient living creatures, with hearts and souls; she was fit for nothing but to be laden with bales of stuff and wool, that might rot on the sea and be none the worse for it.

The sun was drooping down behind the waves as George Talboys lighted his cigar upon this August evening. Only ten days more, the sailors had told him that afternoon, and they would see the English coast. "I will go ashore in the first boat that hails us," he cried; "I will go ashore in a cockle-shell. By Jove, if it comes to that, I will swim to land."

His friends in the aft-cabin, with the exception of the pale governess, laughed at his impatience; she sighed as she watched the young man, chafing at the slow hours, pushing away his untasted wine, flung himself restlessly about the cabin sofa, rushing up and down the companion ladder, and staring at the waves.
As the red rim of the sun dropped into the water the governess ascended the cabin stairs for a stroll on deck, while the passengers sat over their wine below. She stopped when she came up to George, and, standing by his side, watched the fading crimson in the western sky.
The lady was very quiet and reserved, seldom sharing in the after-cabin amusements, never laughing and speaking very little; but she and George Talboys had been excellent friends throughout the passage.
"Does my cigar annoy you, Miss Morley?" he said, taking it out of his mouth.
"Not at all; pray do not leave off smoking. I only came up to look at the sunset. What a lovely evening!"
"Yes, yes, I dare say," he answered, impatiently; "yet so long, so long! Ten more interminable days and ten more weary nights before we land."

"Yes," said Miss Morley, sighing, "Do you wish the time shorter?"
"Do I?" cried George. "Indeed I do. Don't you?"
"Scarcely."
"But there is no one you love in England? Is there no one you love looking out for your arrival?"
"I hope so," she said gravely. They were silent for some time, he smoking his cigar with furious impatience, as if he could hasten the course of the vessel by his own restlessness; she looking out at the waning light with melancholy blue eyes—eyes that seemed to have faded with poring over closely-printed books and difficult needlework; eyes that had faded a little, perhaps, by reason of tears secretly shed in the lonely night.
"See!" said George, suddenly pointing in another direction from that toward which Miss Morley was looking, "there's the new moon!"
She looked up at the pale crescent, her own face almost as pale and wan.
"This is the first time we have seen it."
"We must wish!" said George. "I know what I wish."
"What?"
"That we may get home quickly."
"My wish is that we may find no disappointment when we get there," said the governess, sadly.
"Disappointment!"
He started as if he had been struck, and asked what she meant by talking of disappointment.
"I mean this," she said, speaking rapidly, and with a restless motion of her thin hands; "I mean that as the end of the voyage draws near, hope sinks in my heart; and a sick fear comes over me that at the last all may not be well. The person I go to meet may be changed in his feelings towards me; or he may retain all the old feeling until the moment of seeing me, and then lose it in a breath at the sight of my poor wan face, for I was called a pretty girl, Mr. Talboys, when I sailed for Sydney, fifteen years ago; or he may be so changed by the world as to have grown selfish and mercenary, and he may welcome for the sake of my fifteen years savings. And, again he may be dead. He may have been well, perhaps, up to within a week of our landing, and in that last week may have taken a fever, and died an hour before our vessel anchors in the Mersey. I think of all these things, Mr. Talboys, and act the scenes over in my mind, and feel the anguish of their twenty times a day. Twenty times a day," she repeated, "why I do it a thousand times a day."
George Talboys had stood motionless, with his cigar in his hand, listening to her so intently that, as she said the last words, his hold relaxed and the cigar dropped in the water.
"I wonder," she continued, more to herself than to him, "I wonder, looking back, to think how hopeful I was when the vessel sailed; I never thought then of disappointment, but I pictured the joy of meeting, imagining the very word that would be said, the very tones, the very looks; but for this last month of the voyage, day by day, and hour by hour my heart sinks and my hopeful fancies fade away, and I dread the end as much as if I knew that I was going to England to attend a funeral."
The young man suddenly changed his attitude, and turned his face full upon his companion with a look of alarm. She saw in the pale light that the color had faded in his cheeks.
"What a fool!" he cried striking his clenched fist upon the side of the vessel, "what a fool I am to be frightened at these things to me? Why do you come and terrify me out of my senses when I am going straight home to the woman I love; to a girl whose heart is as through as the light of Heaven; and in whom I no more expect to find any change than I do to see another sun rise in tomorrow's sky! Why do you come to try to put such fancies in my head when I am going home to my darling wife?"
"Your wife," she said; "that is different. There is no reason why that my terrors should terrify you. I am going to England to rejoin a man to whom I was engaged to be married fifteen years ago. He was too poor to marry then, and when I was offered a situation as a governess in a rich Australian family, I persuaded him to let me accept it, so that I might leave him free and unfettered to win his way in the world, while I saved a little money to help us when we began life together. I never meant to stay away so long, but things have gone badly with him in England. That is my story, and you can understand my fears. They need not influence you. Mine is an exceptional case."
"So is mine," said George, impatiently. "I tell you that mine is an exceptional case; although I swear to you that until this moment, I have never known a fear as to the result of my voyage home. But you are right; your terrors have nothing to do with me. You have been away fifteen years; all kind of things may happen in fifteen years. Now it is only three years and a half this month since I left England. What can have happened in such a short time as that?"

Miss Morley looked at him with a mournful smile, but did not speak. His feverish ardor, and freshness and impatience of his nature were so strange and new to her, that she looked at him half in admiration, half in pity.
"My pretty little wife! My gentle, innocent, loving little wife! Do you know, Miss Morley," he said, with all his old hopefulness of manner, "that I left my little girl asleep, with her baby in her arms, and with a few blot ted lines to tell her why her faithful husband had deserted her?"
"Deserted her!" exclaimed the governess.
"Yes, I was an ensign in a cavalry regiment when I first met my little darling. We were quartered at a stupid seaport town, where my pet lived with her shabby old father, a half pay naval officer, a regular old humbug, as poor as Job, and with a love for nothing but the main chance. I saw through all his shallow tricks to catch one of us for his pretty daughter. I saw all the pitiable, contemptible, palpable traps he set for us dragons to walk into. I saw through his shabby-genteel dinners and public-house port; his fine talk of the grandeur of his family; his sham pride and independence, and the sham tears of his bleared old eyes when he talked of his only child. He was a drunken old hypocrite, and he was ready to sell my poor little girl to the highest bidder. Luckily for me, I happened just then to be the highest bidder; for my father is a rich man, Miss Morley, and it was love at first sight on both sides, my darling and I made a match of it. No sooner however, did my father hear that I had married a penniless little girl, the daughter of a tipsy old half-pay lieutenant, than he wrote me a furious letter, telling me he would never again hold and communication with me, and that my yearly allowance would stop from my wedding day.
"As there was no remaining in such a regiment as mine, with nothing but my pay to live on, and my pretty little wife to keep, I sold out, thinking that before the money was exhausted, I should be sure to drop into something. I took my darling to Italy, and we lived there in splendid style as long as my two thousand pounds lasted; but when that began to dwindle down to a couple of hundred or so, we came back to England, and as my darling had a fancy for being near that tiresome old father of hers, we settled at the water ing-place where he lived. Well, as soon as the old man heard that I had a couple of hundred pounds left, he expressed a wonderful degree of affection for us, and insisted on our board ing in his house. We consented, still to please my darling, who had just then a peculiar right to have every whim and fancy of her innocent heart indulged.
We did board with him, and finally he fleeced us, but when I spoke of it to my little wife she ignored it and only shrugged her shoulders, and said she did not like to be unkind to her 'poor papa.' So poor papa made away with our little stock of money in no time; and as I felt that it was now becoming necessary to look out for something, I ran up to London and tried to get a situation as a clerk in a merchant's office, or as accountant, or book-keeper, or something of that kind. But I suppose there was the stamp of a heavy dragon about me, for do what I would I could not get anybody to believe in my capacity; and tired out, and downhearted, I returned to my darling, to find her nursing a son and heir to his father's poverty.

Describes Humber As Visionary

On Tuesday last Sir Michael Cashin issued a pamphlet to electors of St. John's West in which he described the Humber as a visionary proposition...

"YOU ARE NOT GOING TO BE BLUFFED INTO VOTING FOR A VISIONARY PROPOSITION."

Was Grand Falls a "visionary proposition"? Pay a visit into that splendid inland town and see that mighty enterprise, the paper mills of the Anglo-Wild Development Co.

Sir Robert Bond was the man who succeeded in his programme of industrial development, and Grand Falls is the result.

Sir Robert Thorburn's merchant government opposed the building of the railway, but the people insisted on it.

Hr Grace District Is Indignant

Saturday night last Tory propagandists were busy spreading a yarn John's West to come to Hr. Grace.

It was stated that Cashin's campaigners had assaulted Squires and Campbell during their rounds, and that, seeing the hopelessness of continuing the fight, Campbell was dropping out altogether and Squires was refusing to go in nomination there.

The messages also stated three thousand people gathered at the railway station to greet Bennett when he returned to St. John's on Saturday.

CARBONEAR, April 16—Tories here were jubilant Saturday night and yesterday, when reports were phoned and telegraphed from St. John's that Squires was forsaking the West End of the City for Harbor Grace.

CROSBIE'S PAWN Archibald's Deception Exposed

Dear Sir—Will you kindly grant me space in your much appreciated paper to make a few remarks concerning the Opposition candidates who are now seeking our suffrage.

At the last election he was sent to the House of Assembly by a large majority of the voters of this district as a member of Sir Richard Squires Government, but did he respect the wishes of same people who sent him there? No!

Every elector of Bay Roberts, Colley's Point, Country Road and Shearstown owes it to himself, his children coming after him, this day he ignored their rights when he refused to place the man they wanted on the ticket.

Crosbie says he will get them (the electors of Bay Roberts West) when he wants them.

His estimate of the intelligence and independence of the electors of this place is very low, indeed.

He believes man can be purchased like cattle, and so he attempts by promises and bribes to induce the electors to support Hickman, Bennett and Archibald.

Why Don't they Repay The People?

THE CASHINISTS asserts that the policy of the Squires Government in guaranteeing the cost of supplies so that the fishermen could be outfitted in 1921, resulted in "wholesale and barefaced frauds."

Three Tory merchant candidates, Hickman, Monroe and Harris, received $74,000 from the Government under that policy of Government guarantees.

These three merchants have repaid only $4,000 of that amount between them. They, therefore, still owe the Government of Newfoundland the sum of $70,000.

The people, of course, had to find that money and have to pay the interest on it.

Surely it is up to these three Tory merchants to repay the people what they owe them, before asking the people to give them their Votes.

The Cloven Hoof Exposed

Mr. W. A. Munn claims that decent living conditions demanded by sealers, drove Merchant Capital out of seal-fishery.

At Opposition meeting here Wednesday night, Mr. W. A. Munn of St. John's made a statement that sealers bill introduced by W. F. Coaker, with the aim of securing better food and living conditions for men was destroying capital interest in seal-fishery.

This is in line with claim that opposition policy is destined to bring fishery back to conditions of 25 or 30 years ago. This is the expressed object of the merchant, opposition party.

Men are you anxious to place yourselves again into the hands of such merchants as W. A. Munn, who aim at reducing you to the same degrading conditions of slavery as existed under the old supply system?

No! a thousand time, No! We have fought for and gained our independence and mean to retain it by returning the Squires party to power and ensuring industrial development.

HELP SQUIRES MAKE THE HUMBERHURM

Mr. G. Hurst Transferred

The news of the transfer of Mr. Gerald Hurst, one of the most popular members of the Western Union Cable Staff, has brought feelings of regret to the community.

Since coming here some years ago, Gerald has been an enthusiast in all athletic sports (football being his specialty), and now the news of his departure brings sadness to those with whom he was closely connected especially the members of the Scout Football Team.

When it became known that he would be leaving so soon, the young people arranged a Farewell Party which was given him in Snowden Hall on Wednesday night, April 18th. Various games were played and the old songs were sung heartily. After a dainty lunch was served, a presentation was made to him by Miss Myrtis Dawe, on behalf of the gathering, spoke a few choice words, of Gerald's popularity since coming into our midst and wishing him "Good-luck" and "Godspeed" as he leaves our community. This speech was endorsed by the singing of "For he's a jolly good Fellow."

After several games the event closed by the singing of "Old Lang Syne" and "God Save the King."

NOTE OF THANKS.

The relatives of the late Mrs. Fanny Chard desire to thank the many kind friends for the sympathy expressed either by word or action during her illness and at the time of her passing. Also the following who sent wreaths to adorn her casket: Mrs. Alice Bell, Mrs. James Bowring, Mrs. John Bowring, (of Thos), Mrs. Peter Keefe, Mrs. A. E. Mercer, Mrs. John Bishop, Mrs. Helen Bowring, Mrs. John Bowring of Thos, Mrs. Bertina Bowring and Mrs. Clara Bowring.

An Appreciation

Mr. Gerald Hurst wishes to thank the young people of Bay Roberts for their thoughtfulness in arranging a Farewell Party in view of his departure to Canada. Also many friends for their kindness to him during his stay at Bay Roberts.

Obituary

In the passing of Fanny, relict of the late Samuel Chard, we may truly say a mother in Israel is gone.

After an illness lasting over two years, during which time she experienced much pain and suffering—without a murmur or complaint she calmly awaited the end which came on Tuesday April 10th at 8.30 o'clock p.m.

Over eighty years on the sea of life she had encountered many a storm, but early in life she had entrusted her bark to the care of her heavenly father and with him as Pilot and sail set to the heavenly breeze was wafted home to the haven where she would be.

She was a kind and devoted wife and fond mother of seven children all of whom survive her but one, Emma, the eldest having died some years ago in the U.S.A. She leaves to mourn her loss one son and five daughters viz: Mr. Joseph Chard now at L'ack, Labrador, Mrs. George Gerrett, Botwood, Mrs. Fanny Oleson Denmark, Mrs. John French, C. Point and Mrs. Samuel Bowering, Vancouver, B. C., eighteen grandchildren and seven great grandchildren. Also two sisters, Mrs. Charlotte Bowering and Mrs. John Bowering, sr., of Coley's Point.

The funeral took place on Thursday, the 13th inst, from the residence of Mr. Joseph Bishop, Bay Roberts, where she has been tenderly cared for during her last illness by her daughter, Mrs. Bishop. Her remains were followed by a large concourse of people to the Methodist Church and cemetery, Coley's Point, where interment was made, the Rev. S. Baggs officiating. Rev. Baggs spoke from the words, "I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, etc. Rev. 14:13." He referred to the deceased as having finished her work faithfully and with no uncertainty as to her acceptance with God. Thus she passed on to her reward.

According to her request one her one of her favorite hymns was sung with much feeling at the graveside. Two stanzas of the hymn are:—

"These, these are they who in the conflict die, Boldly have stood amid the hottest fire

Jesus now says come up higher Washed in the blood of the Lamb

Safe, safe upon the ever shining shore Sin, pain and death and sorrow all are o'er

Happy now and ever more Washed in the blood of the Lamb.
