The hours of daylight will continue to decrease until December 20, when they will reach the shortest period of the year, eight hours and 51 minutes. From that time until December 25 there will be no change, but on that day they will increase one minute. The end of the year will find an increase of three minutes.

Three senate vacancies in Ontario have been filled by the appointment of Archibald Campbell, M. P. for Centre York, Hon. N. Belcourt, M. P. for Ottawa, Daniel Derbyshire, ex-M. P.

Hon. J. C. Forbes received word Monday of the death of Rev. A. T. Firth at Trinidad, after a brief illness. The late Mr. Firth formerly belonged to Campbellton, having gone to Susamacher, Trinidad, as a missionary only a short time ago. Soon after taking up the work Mr. Firth was stricken down by yellow fever. He is survived by his mother, brother and several sisters, from whom he parted only two months ago.

Mr. Firth is a graduate of the University of New Brunswick, having taken his degree with the class of 1883. The next year he entered Pine Hill Theological College, Halifax, graduating from that institution last year. He was a splendid student and very popular. His friends will be shocked to hear of his untimely death.—Sun

Some United States capitalists have purchased some five hundred square miles of most valuable timber areas in Newfoundland for a consideration in the vicinity of three and a half millions. In the early spring they will establish ten or twelve large pulp mills, which number they intend increasing as the property develops.

Montpelier Argus: People who think they are getting bargains from the small order-houses should heed the statement made recently by a Montpelier granite manufacturer, who said that a monument advertised by a mail order house to be built for $93 could be duplicated for $50, and that the workmanship was the cheapest and roughest. This does not mean that cheap workmanship were employed on the monument but that the job were "roughed" out by cutters and not cut in the customary fashion where they go to firms and people who know a good piece of work. If all goods sold by such houses are of this calibre there is no question that mail order buyers are being soaked good and plenty.

Standfield, Conservative, was elected in Colchester by a majority of 203 over Hill, Liberal, on Thursday, Nov. 28th.

Signs of a mild winter multiply. According to one weather-wise editor muskrats have not even begun to build their winter quarters. Ducks have been slow in migrating. Deer have their thin fall suits on; the beaver have not begun cutting their winter wood supply; the owls have not yet withdrawn to the forest depths; the song birds have not all sailed southward; toadstools have few or no wrinkles; corn husks are not thick; the possum has only one curl in his tail this fall; the wild geese are still sojourning on northern lakes; jack-rabbits have not yet begun to drum on hollow logs; there is no thick down under the chicken's feathers, nor any bonny growth on her feet; black cats have no whites under their eyes; the gooseberry is fair and unspotted. And there you have the symptoms of an open winter.

Immediately after Collins had been executed Rev. B. H. Thomas was asked by a Transcript reporter whether Collins had confessed his guilt, and Rev. Mr. Thomas replied that there was no confession for publication. He said that Collins had made no confession the night before, which was very correct. Some time ago Rev. Mr. Thomas told a Transcript reporter that he understood the prisoner had confessed, saying that he committed the terrible crime in a fit of rage, Miss McAuley having angered him with repeated scoldings.—Moncton Transcript.

At a recent meeting of the Weirmen's Union, held at Digdegush, N. B., it was decided to hold the regular annual meeting of the Union, the first Monday in the coming month of December, when it is stated, several changes in the constitution will be considered. The Union failed completely during the last season in its effort to dictate terms to the Sardine Packers, although a heated contest was carried on for a time. At its next meeting the Union proposes to institute inflexible laws and regulations.—Eastport Sentinel.

Sydney, N. S., Dec. 1.—(Special)—At Saturday's meeting of the New Brunswick Iron Company a resolution was passed authorizing the sale of 2,000 shares of stock at $25 each. This was the only thing done. Cash from the stock sold will be used for development purposes.

For the next 10 days, Franley Bros. will give a special discount of 10 per cent. on Men's and Boy's Suits and Overcoats, bought for cash. They are working this special offer in order to clean out what few lines they have on hand, and make room for their immense stock of Christmas goods.

The properties of the New River Lumber Company, owned by Messrs. J. and L. B. Knight, were offered for sale at Chubb's Corner, Saturday at noon. The first bid was for $10,000. The property was withdrawn at $29,000. The McCookery farm at Bear's Head was withdrawn at $2,400.—Sun.

The Power Of a Smile.

"Grandma," said a boy of six, "what's that about you dip in the water?"

"My aunt, as you call it, was a dismal failure, though success was written in my grasp. I was a Southern girl on my father's plantation in Tennessee. One morning a Federal general and his staff rode up to our house and asked for breakfast. I was so bitter against them that I would have given them nothing, but mother had better sense. She gave them all they asked. They didn't leave us for a week. Where the general's troops were we didn't know, and since he wouldn't permit any of us to leave the plantation we naturally inferred that he wished to keep the Federal movement secret. One young fellow, an aid-de-camp, seeing me scowling all the while at him and his fellows, kept constantly joking me, trying to make me laugh.
He had the sweetest smile in the world, and although the more he persisted, the more I scowled, still from the first I was madly in love with him. I had never seen much of city people, and his refinement, his manly beauty and his military dress readily overcame my country girl's heart.

"The general established an office in the next room to mine, with nothing between but a door partition. One day I heard him dictating a dispatch which I knew to be of great importance. It occurred to me to take the information to our southern commander of the district, but I couldn't remember enough of it to make the journey worth the while. That afternoon I saw the aid coming out of the general's office, putting an envelope in his pocket, call for his horse and ride away. I mounted my Madge and rode after him.

In time I caught up with him and called to him. He turned, and seeing me, gave me one of those smiles that had won my heart. But I was determined nothing should interfere with my purpose, which was to get his despatch from him and deliver it to our general. He asked me what I wanted, and I said I had something to tell him. He rode up beside me. I had formed no plan and didn't know what to say or do. Seeing water trickling across the road, I told him I was thirsty. We left the road for a little distance to go to a spring, where we both dismounted. He plucked a large leaf and holding it into a cup, stooped to get some water. Quick as a flash I snatched his revolver from its holster at his hip.
He turned to see me standing with it pointed at him.

He thought it a bit of pleasantry and laughed at me; but, assuming all the steadiness of which I was capable, I declared my purpose. He only laughed the more. If he had made a move for resistance, I talked harshly to me I might have had the heart to kill him, for I realized the importance to my people of securing the paper. But he stood there looking at me with that amused imperturable smile, and it was the worst thing for my object he could have done. Then I braced myself for a desperate move and fired a bullet within a few inches of his ear.

"Try again, he laughed. Aim for the center of my forehead."

"I put another ball so near the other ear that I was frightened for fear I had hit him.

"That's better," he said, still unruffled. "The next shot will do the job."

"Then we both heard the tread of horses' hoofs up the road. We stood still, listening, and soon knew that horsemen were coming our way. My enemy for the first time looked serious.

"If they're Confederates you've got me he said, for once without a smile.

"My heart was beating wildly. Suppose they were Confederates. They would secure my getting the dispatch, but they would capture the messenger.

If they were Confederate citizens or guerrillas perhaps they would shoot him. Notwithstanding the importance of the information to be secured I felt that I could not turn him over, with the frightful risk that course involved. It was only one life among the many to be sacrificed in the struggle, but I couldn't sacrifice it, even for southern independence. But I resolved that if the coming horsemen proved to be Confederate soldiers I would call to them. If they were Federals my aunt, as you call it, was a failure.

"My enemy and I were so far hidden by trees that we were not likely to be noticed, but we could see the road through openings. We stood waiting alightly for the result. Nearer came the horsemen, and we could hear a clanking of saddles that told us they were cavalry.
Only one alternative remained. They were either Federal or Confederate.
Then suddenly the stars and bars emerged in to view. I had won.

"I turned to my enemy. He smiled at me. Not a bit of reproach, simply a smile. I turned to the Confederates and tried to call. I couldn't. Don't ask me whether my voice failed me or my heart failed me or anything else failed me. I simply couldn't.

"In a few seconds the troop had passed.

"It was my surrender. My enemy came up to me fearlessly, confidently (I was still holding a cocked revolver), put his arms about me, and my head fell on his breast. Then he lifted my face and gave me a long kiss on the lips."

The old lady paused. She had finished.

"Was the young officer grandpa?"
asked one of the girls.

"How did you guess that you little minx?"

Sociability.
Hawthorne in his diary, makes record of a day wherein he resolved to speak to no human soul. He went to the village, got his mail at the post office, returned,
and triumphantly records the fact that he spoke to no man. Is it any wonder that with all his genius, Hawthorne was a melancholy and essentially, an unhappy man? How much wiser and better the opposite course. Think of how much happiness you convey to others by kindly notice and a cheerful conversation. Think how much sunshine and sociability lets back into your own soul. Who does not feel more cheerful and contented for receiving a polite bow, a genial "good morning," a heartly shake of the hand? Who does not make himself happier by these little expressions of fellow-feeling and good will?
Silence and a stiff, unbending reserve are especially selfish and essentially vulgar. The generous and polite man has a pleasant recognition and cheerful word for all he meets. He paves the path of others. He scatters sunbeams wherever he goes. He makes society seem genial and the world delightful to those who else would find them cold, selfish and forbidding. And what he gives is but a tithe of what he receives.
Be sociable, then, wherever you go, and wrap your lightest words in tones that are sweet and a spirit that is genial.

OUR IMMIGRATION PROBLEMS.

Arrangements are already completed for a greater influx of people from other lands into these Canadian Provinces than ever before. The problem raised in face of this is:

Of what quality will the product be? Will it be such as can be readily moulded in our national life?

As the rivers always set towards the sea, so do these streams of immigration set towards the common centre of such a new national life as ours. But as the waters of the ocean are flavored by the salts of the Alkali plains and the sulphur of the mountain springs, so shall the life of this nation be seasoned by all the varied characteristics of this new life coming to us. God forbid that this seasoning shall ever become so complete as that which has taken place in New York, where the Hebrew has taken possession, and Christ is taken from text and song, and the Christmas carol, which has for so long come so sweetly from childish voices, shall be no more.

Let Canada keep control of herself and her national life and what a strong nation she may become when she shall have woven into her new life, the impulse of the Celt and the endurance of the German, the patience of the Slav and the daring of the Northman, the romance of Italy and the suavity of France, the buoyancy of Ireland and the shrewdness of Scotland, the thrift of the Jap, the frugality of China and the enterprise of England.

On the other hand there is cause for some anxiety, when we consider that, as these people come to us, we take them for better or for worse, for richer or poorer, with all their unthought ways, their laxity of morals, their alien ideas, their (in many cases) superstitions and ignorance.

Here are combinations of influences against which Canada will have to measure her highest ideals of manhood and her noblest conceptions of womanhood. Let her learn and profit by the sad lesson of New York, with Boston not far behind, if not in the same, then in other respects. What we have we will hold. We have the best, we hold the best.

EDUCATORS AND DRUMMERS.

There is quite a general agitation along the line of increasing the salaries of teachers and preachers. It is well, and comes none too soon. That these leaders in the intellectual life of our people should be so poorly paid is a disgrace, and the more speedily a change is made, the sooner the disgrace shall be removed.

People in a certain American city are feeling rather cut up because the superintendent of their schools has suddenly thrown up his job and gone to selling soap "on the road" at higher wages. Probably there are hundreds of other teachers who would do the same thing, if they had the chance. The cause of education is not properly financed when a drummer can make more than a good teacher. The cause of religion languishes, too, when a plucky pug with hands as big as Virginia hams can make more money in a 20-round prize fight than the average preacher gets in a lifetime.

A professional ballist goes up into the air a half mile and earns a hundred or so in 15 minutes. People who maul the piano for a living can get a couple of thousand an hour for pounding the devil out of their tortured instruments and showing their back hair to hysterical audiences. "Artists" with pinheads set on their shoulders in lieu of the regulation brain tank can balance on one leg on a rope 100 feet in the air and pick up $50 a day. But where do the teachers and preachers come in? The former do the country's most important work for a mere pittance, usually wearing themselves out, fortunately rather early in life, and dying just about the time the pookhouse yawns for them. The latter, living in a state of perpetual poverty, have no share in the prosperity of their congregations. About the only pay they get is a hope of a great reward hereafter, but that doesn't help things in this world. Many a half-starved preacher's heart is bitter as he looks down from his pulpit at his well-fed, well-dressed parishioners, and he his doubts as to whether "of such is the kingdom of heaven?"

Teachers, whether in the schoolroom or the pulpit, ought to be worthy of their hire. Mostly they are, and it is time this country woke up and paid them their wages.

BY THE WAY

Are your skates sharp? Some men never perceive a point unless they happen to sit on a tack. Look out for the fellow who has a great deal to say of his neighbor's failings.

Try and buy a building lot in town and you will find the town has recovered from the financial stringency we hear so much about.

A pretty girl is ever a feast for the eye, on the street, in the house, in the ball room, but a pretty girl on skates is a whole banquet.

A day or two may change the flowing water into a bed of ice, and the river of today may be the rink of tomorrow (open air of course.) Get ready.

"Stay home young man, and uncoil here the same energy that you would have to display in the west, and you can be as successful in the Maritime Provinces as in the west." This is the advice of Mr. Nathaniel Gay, a merchant of Pownal, P. E. I., has given after a trip through the west.

Skating brightens the eye, tints the cheek, gives a glow to the face, animates the spirit and offers the finest opportunities for exercise and pleasure. The flash of the ball room comes from the heated atmosphere—never quite natural—the glow on the skater's cheek, fanned into being by the crisp air, is nature's own handiwork—beautiful always.

"Wind your watch in the morning," said my friend, the watch maker.

"When a watch is wound up at night, coming out of a warm pocket and laid down or hung up in a cool place, the mainspring will contract by the cooling off the metal, being wound up slightly all the chance of contracting has been shut off and the spring is bound to break."

"If, however, the watch is wound up in the morning, having partly run down through the night, there is room enough left in the barrel to contract."

The present practice of giving public notice of such matters as town meetings, sales, "lecturers" etc., by posting one or more printed notices where the public is supposed to hunt them up and read them, is a medieval method, and ought to be supplanted by one more in keeping with the times.

The people look to newspapers now a days for information, rather than to a fence, or a bill board.

The interests of all parties concerned would be better served by requiring such matters to be daily advertised in the newspapers.

Another Strike Strongly Advised.

To the Editor:

Sir,—Strikes are not so desirable that we should seek them or advise them unthinkingly. But I would unhesitatingly advise a strike today among the depositors in our banks.

Money is scarce and commands a high rate as borrowers know to their sorrow. The banks, we are told, are restricting credit to the extent that they will increase the insignificant three per cent. Not much! And right here is a chance for a bank that will act independently and offer four per cent. It is such a rare and evident opportunity that we are surprised they did not do so before.

Should a strike among the depositors occur, I fancy it would cause no small embarrassment to some of our financial institutions.

Now who will be the first to act—the bank or the victim?

VICTIM.

A gentleman who has made a trip through New Brunswick has been giving his political impressions to the Campbellton Tribune. After giving about every county to the opposition he has this to say of one of our prominent and energetic citizens:

In Charlotte the Opposition have secured Dr. Henry L. Taylor, of St. George, who will run on a ticket with the present three opposition candidates. Dr. Taylor is the strongest man in Charlotte today, and his candidature makes it a question only of majority for the opposition in that county.

Last Saturday completed the packing business at the sardine factories for the season of 1907. The pack for the present season, (closed a week ahead of the legal closing period, on account of the scarcity of fish) has not been as large as that of last year, but the fish packed have been of excellent quality and the advanced price of goods will make the season about as profitable for the packers. The coming season will probably be one of the best in the history of the industry, if fish are plentiful, as the goods now on hand will be about exhausted, and the demand greater than in many years.---Eastport Sentinel.

About Drinking Hot Water

There are four classes of persons who would not drink large quantities of hot water. These are as follows: (1) People who have irritability of the heart. Hot water will cause palpitation of the heart in such cases. (2) Persons with dilated stomach. (3) Persons afflicted with "sour stomach." (4) Persons who have tenderness of the stomach, or pain caused by slight pressure. These rules are not for those who take hot water simply to relieve thirst, but as a means of washing out the stomach. Hot water will relieve thirst better than cold water, and for that purpose is not condemned. But hot water is an irritant, and in cases in which irritation of the stomach exists, should be avoided.

How To Wash Curtains.—Lace or the popular bobbinet ruffled can very easily be laundered at home if one knows just how to go about it. First of all, they should be shaken out and the dust carefully removed. Then they should be washed with warm water and soap the same as a sheet or tablecloth, only, of course, a little more carefully. Then they should be put on a curtain stretcher to dry. Both the ruffle and the body of the curtain should be laundered in the same manner.

A housewife can manage very well without scales if she will follow this simple plan: One ordinary teaspoonful of flour is 4 ounces, so that four teaspoonfuls make 1 pound. Sugar is heavier, so do not take a full cup of it to make 4 ounces. Shredded suet is so light that a teaspoonful weighs only 2 ounces. With a very little experience you will measure ingredients very accurately in this way.

Have You Tried Making Tea Like This?—Among the various ways in which tea can be brewed, an authority recommends the following: Moisten an ounce of tea, finely ground, with cold water, and let it stand for twenty minutes. Then pour on the tea a scant pint of boiling water, and in one minute it is ready to drink.

An obedient husband, not very far from Boston, was objecting a short time ago to doing certain work about the household, and quoted scripture texts to his wife, showing that the household duties should properly be assigned to the woman. The good wife had been trained in the Ladies' Auxiliary, of our Young Men's Christian Association, and quickly replied by reading to her astonished husband 2 Kings, xxi, 13 "I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipes a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down." That husband, without a murmur has, wiped the dishes ever since.

A COUNTRY VISITOR.

The New York Man Felt Above Him, but Changed His Opinion. One of the most successful wholesale dry goods merchants New York city ever saw had the peculiar habit of regarding as his inferior any man who was engaged in a business less genteel, as he held, than his own. In his employ was a young Vermontor, who felt highly elated when one day a man from his native town who was visiting the city called on him. The man was somewhat crude in his manners, but he had piled up a fortune in the hardware business and in buying up at a discount in times of panic commercial paper which he believed was good. The youth introduced the Vermontor to his employer.

"What business are you in?" asked the dry goods prince as the two shook hands. "The tin-a-r-r business," drawled the Vermontor. Without a word the dry goods merchant turned on his heel and bobbed into his private office. He didn't recognize this ware merchant as desirable acquaintance.

OLD TIME CELEBRATIONS.

Happiness is the Order of the Day. Tranquility of the Night. The first of the year is a priceless record of the history and manners of their times. In the papers of 1786 the accounts of public rejoicings show that these were very in number, and that the method of keeping them differed widely from our ideas of festivities. Washington's birthday was perhaps the greatest holiday. "Industrious citizens," we are told, "appropriated the hour of noon for the celebration on Wednesday. Each family enriched the domestic meal with bountiful provisions, and gay spirits and temperate and undisturbed joy pervaded all classes."

The Luscious Grapes. The grape, whose purple blood man for centuries after discovery has converted into wine, is a Persian by birth. Its cradle was on the sunny hills to the south of the Caspian sea, and there the ancients ate it and enjoyed its acid taste. The men of Central America to a dry powder and ate it with relish, half as a medicine, half because they liked it. And then those days went by, and we hear of the renowned grapes of Palestine, which grew in immense clusters and weighed fifteen pounds to the bunch. Noah planted the vine immediately after the deluge. The book of Genesis mentions bread and wine, and the Israelites complained that Moses and Aaron had brought them out of Egypt into a dry and barren land where there were neither figs nor vines.

A Difficult Feast. Have you ever tried to stand upright on a log perhaps a foot across the butt out in an open lake, keeping your balance to every roll and dip of the log? Well, if you had you would realize better the marvelous balance of the man who not only has to do this, but also maneuver other logs down the current with a long pole pole, chain booms together with unnumbered fingers, and, in fact, do the whole of his dry's work while balancing on a twisting, twisting, half submerged tree trunk.

Immeasurably. "You'd better get out. Here comes that Miss Boreham, and he's got a story he thinks is new that he'll insist on holding you."

Worse Than He Felt. Cutting—I suppose it did make you feel mean. Dabbs—Will, I should say! Why, I felt like a plugged nickel! Cutting—Ah! But what a blessing it is that we never feel quite as bad as we look.

Missing Trouble. More people would snap their fingers in the face of trouble if trouble didn't have such a sudden way of swooping down on us.

When a man needs your advice he generally wants your praise.—Chesterfield.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. Buy with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, and both are imperative, with essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure

man said, flinging the dead hens at her feet. A deck of blood flew upon Miss Gatty's faded frock. Noting it, the man said a word. "Please excuse me. I've been acting the brute. But those berries were my pride."

"Thank you, but I haven't got a wife—not yet," Mr. Lalor said, with a grin. "You must be thinking of my sister-in-law. Patsy keeps house for me, but she hates the place and wants to leave. I think I'll let her—and see if I can't have peace and neighbors. Don't you think we ought to be neighbors? I do. So I've brought these," pointing to the berries. "Won't you give me some radishes to take home for my luncheon?"

"To be sure, I'll be so glad!" Miss Gatty cried, springing up, quite forgetting her state, and darting toward her dear garden. She meant to go alone, but Andrew Lalor was right behind her. Long before the radishes were shown she had hurried all her dresses, past, present and to come. Before he left she had told him all about Susanna—Susanna, who was the youngest, but had no mamma who could be her shoulders. All unconsciously she had told him many other things—things that set him meditating and smiling all the way home. Once or twice, too, he blushed and gnawed angrily at his mustache, muttering: "Lord, to think that I offered her money! Took her for a quare-some old maid! It's going to take time to live that down, but I'll do it as sure as I'm six feet two!"

"You must not worry thinking I am lonely," she wrote. "I'm quite too busy keeping the hens as they should be kept. And really I am finding out that we have very good neighbors."

"Susanna paddled that last sentence, at least until she came home to find Mr. Lalor established in the privilege of keeping ward over the forage tags of the White Lancers. Her eyes twinkled comprehension as she shook hands on presentation. He caught the twinkle and answered it boldly with: "Please may I have your sister Helen? I knew it would do no good to ask before you came home."

"Why, yes; I think you may," Susanna said, the twinkle deepening. "But do you think it is quite fair—this way of playing beggar my neighbor?" "You're really responsible. You hens have taught me to take what I want regardless of bounds," he flung back at her. Susanna laughed outright and answered honestly. "If they really did it I'm mighty glad."

When we reach the higher studies of foreign languages we are told to seek diligently to learn to think in the alien tongue, as well as to read and write it. That is, we are expected to catch the meaning of the strange words without any connection with English or English speech.

From this one may come to appreciate the experience of a certain Portuguese negro. He was asked, not very long after his arrival in the United States, if English was difficult for him. "Oh, no," he said. "I learn her very quick."

The Fearful Possibilities Of The Press.

Among the destructive agents in the wasting of the world's forests in recent years, the printing press stands pre-eminent. The experiments of Keller, in Germany, in 1844, by which pulp was produced by grinding wood, and the further experiments of Watt and Burgess in England in 1854, when pulp was made by a chemical process, resulted in greatly cheapening the cost of paper, especially those classes used for newspapers. The method of converting wood into pulp by mechanical grinding was introduced into the United States about 1870, and in ten years this process brought down the price of news print from 9 cents to 4 cents per lb. Since then the improvement of processes and the extension of the industry have further reduced the price till recently it sold at 2 cents a pound. This cheapening has made possible the enormous increase in the size and circulation of the modern daily newspaper—one of the marvels of the age, and as fearful in its possibilities of evil as grand in its possibilities of good to the world. To satisfy this hungry demand of the daily press, the forests of spruce, fir, balsam and poplar in the United States have been slain by countless States, until now those who have studied the situation begin to realize that America's supply of cheap pulp is at an end, because the remaining areas of pulp timber are either inaccessible or insufficient.

Year by year, the United States pulp manufacturers have to further away for their supplies of timber within their own territory, and year by year they have had to draw to an ever increasing extent upon the forests of Canada for pulpwood. During the year ending June, 1907, the United States imported pulpwood from Canada to the amount of 650,366 cords, or enough to manufacture 520,000 tons of newspaper. While its imports of ground pulp from Canada were 149,827 tons, valued at $3,230,272. Besides this it imported pulp from other countries, chiefly Norway, to the amount of 63,283 tons valued at $3,118,585, largely chemical pulp. These are official figures of the United States, but while the Canadian official returns show an export to the United States of 452,819 cords in the nine months ending March, 1907, or at the rate of over 603,794 cords for the year, it is the opinion of the "Pulp and Paper Magazine of Canada" that the actual quantity of pulpwood shipped to the United States amounts to from 800,000 to 1,000,000 cords per year. Reasons for this estimate are given in a paper to be found in the Canadian Forestry Association's Report for 1906. According to a special report of the United States Census Bureau the consumption of domestic spruce wood used by United States pulp mills increased 47 per cent, in quantity, and 122 per cent, in price in the five years from 1900 to 1905, while the consumption of Canadian spruce wood by United States pulp mills increased 102 per cent, in quantity, and 150 per cent, in price in the same period. The general cost of wood used for mechanical and chemical pulp was more than doubled in the five years named, for every variety of pulpwood except domestic poplar. Canadian poplar had increased 176 per cent. If these percentages could be applied to the conditions in 1907 the increase would be still greater.

Putting Away Furs and Woolens Tansy is a sure preventive of moths. Sprinkle the leaves freely about your woolens and furs when putting them away for the summer, and the moths will never get into them. When I was a child my grandmother used to send me to a tansy-patch on the hill with a large basket, in which to bring home plenty of tansy leaves. In the garden were five hair-covered trunks, studded with brass nails, filled with her best blankets, flannels, sheets, etc. I remember how grandmother took the extra supply out of these trunks in the garret once a year, hung the article on the clothesline down in the orchard, beat them and put them away again to lie amid the tansy leaves another year. The fourth generation of her posterity are sleeping under the same blankets and coverlets now, which proves the efficacy of that remedy of olden times.

From a Woman's Point of View "The wedding gown," explained one of the dressmaking catwalks of Paris, "should be first and foremost a triumph of line. The silhouette is the thing. A floating vaporous veil beneath which one derives a slender silhouette achieved by clinging, sweeping, unbroken folds that is the ideal for the bride. Now satin, especially such satin as the manufacturers give us today, is a perfect material for the purpose."

It is hard to get a separate coat that will do any service and not have it loose. There is only one such coat to get and that is a "light-fitting slater. The trouble with 'all coats that are loose is that they will not go over blouses without crushing them. A dressy top coat would have to be made to be loose and all best ones are made in Japanese and Arab fashions. Those for the street are made of rough cloth in some serviceable color. Try one that is almost half-fitting, curved in at the waist with three seams down back and single breasted with pockets below each hip.

For Halloween, darken the parlor and put plenty of vines and even tiny trees in it to give it a woodland effect. In one corner have a gypsy girl presiding over a large kettle from which she hands to each a sealed envelope holding a written prophecy for good or evil. If she could chant a little song it would be all the better. Another gypsy girl should tell fortunes by tea leaves in a cup. A prize might be given to the girl who can tell the most thrilling ghost story. For costumes, have gypsies, in red skirt, soft white blouse with sailor collar large hat trimmed with field flowers, red stockings and black slippers. An insurance broker got a request a few days ago for an immediate call upon one of his wealthy women customers. "I've had a fire," she explained, "and I want you to make my claim at once. It is very important and is embarrassing to me until it is settled. You see my 'false' teeth—such a beautiful set they cost me $25—I laid them on the dining table. My servant girl, so careless, she picked up some papers, my teeth among them, and tossed all into the fire. And such lovely teeth and I'd had them so long they just had become set to my palate perfectly and were worth to me twice what they cost, so I think you ought to get $50 for them."

The claim is in the company's list of "not allowed" and the broker is "a horrid old thing." Here is a significant contribution to the general discussion on the attitude of the non-church-going public. A few weeks ago a member of a New York, West Side church brought up 25 sitings in his church and offered them to persons not connected with the church who would agree to occupy the seats regularly. Up to this time only nine of these sitings have been accepted. The public opinion is generally in favor of the church going to profit by anything that savors in the least of charity.
