Britain Means Business in Her Dealings With the Porte.

A Peerage Goes Begging for the First Time on Record.

Rumors of Dr. Jameson's Coming Marri age Once More Revived,

Special London Cable Letter. London, Sept. 5.—The Irish National Convention at Dublin, which closed on Thursday, awoke only the faintest interest in England, and it must be admitted by any impartial observer that as a means of promoting unity in the Irish Parliamentary party, it was the biggest failure on record, and only served to widen the breaches existing among the various factions. Even the Liberal newspapers, which for years have had the cause of Ireland at heart, admit this. The Westminster Gazette (Liberal) thinks that as a result of the convention money from abroad will flow into the coffers of the Dillonites for a year or two. but it adds: "There can be no permanent supporter this side of Ireland until there is a united Irish party, and of this there is not the ghost chance unless the bishops and priests take the field.' EFFECTS OF PRISON LIFE. In connection with the assertion that Irish political prisoners have been driven insane by the hardships of convict life, it is interesting to note the report of the Government inspector of prisons, which not only flatly contradicts the statement, but shows to his own satisfaction that the prison management has precisely the opposite effect. The report quotes figures to show that the number of insane age daily population, 3,220, of convict prisoners for the year ending March 31, there were 11 insane convicts and only 27 deaths, all from natural causes, among them. IN THE SULTAN'S REALMS. The recent atrocities at Constantinople have been thoroughly and efficiently discussed by all classes during the week, and have aroused the wrath of Europe to such an extent that they part of at least some of the powers, and force the Sultan to make a radical change in the administration of the Empire. There is already evidence that the bugbear of a general Euro-pean war is no longer sufficient to guarantee Turkey immunity for its misdeeds. The warships of various nations are gathering in the Levant, respond to a sign from Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador at Constantinople. The latter arrived at his post yesterday, armed, it is understood, with definite instructions from the Marquis of Salisbury to compel obedience to certain demands upon the part of Great Britain, either in conjunction with the representatives of other powers or, failing them, to take action alone. That Great Britain means business is emphasized by the fact that prior to his departure, Sir Phillip Currie received a communication from the Queen for delivery, per-sonally, to the Sultan. In this com-munication it is believed Her Majesty conveys to the Sultan a kindly warning of the approaching storm. Abdul Hamid has a profound respect for the Queen, and her letters to him are never without effect. The language of Mr. Gladstone on the situation continues to be as vig-orous as ever, and there is no doubt that the spurring of the veteran Liberal chieftain has had its effect upon Lord Salisbury and his Ministers.

SOCIAL GOSSIP. Prince and Princess Charles of Denmark (Princess Maud of Wales) wearied of the dullness of Appleton Hall, are spending a week in town and have been enjoying themselves in bicycling and visiting the theaters.

The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough (formerly Conseulo Vanderbilt) are at present at Blenheim, where extensive alterations and improve ments have begun. The Prince of Wales has promised to visit them on Nov. 23, and will remain at Blenheim for a week. A series of battues and a county ball have been arranged for his entertainment. The broken engagement of Sir Robert Peel and Miss Ella Williamson, daughter of Lord Ashton, brought about by a letter from a lady who was a friend of Mrs. Langtry and Mr. Abingdon Baird, is still discussed, and comment has developed the fact that Sir Robert's projected father-in-law, although ele vated to the peerage at the instance of Lord Rosebery, has never taken out a patent of the peerage-that is to say, he has never obtained from the College of Arms, otherwise the prisoners decreases with the length of the College of Arms, otherwise the their imprisonment, and that the aversary documents, and he has not paid necessary fees, amounting to This is the first case on record in which a peerage has not been tak-

The rumor that Dr. Jameson is to marry the Dowager Countess of Dudley, daughter of Sir Thomas Mon-crieff, and widow of the first Earl of Dudley, who died in 1885, is revived frequent visits which the Countess has been paying to the prisoner in Halloway jail, and by fact that she showed the keenest in-terest in his trial.

SPORTING TALK. In spite of the belittling in some quarters of Rieff, the American jockey, the latter had his first mount for an English owner at Derby on Wednesday. According to the English racing papers Mr. Pierre Lorillard does not ntend to race again in America, until the permanency of racing there is better established. The Congress of Sanitary Institutes, who have been in session in New-castle, has strongly indorsed bicycling as being the means of banishing a vast number of the derangements women, and expressed the conviction that the average standard of the health of women bicyclists has undergone an appreciable elevation. MISCELLANEOUS. The Trades Union Congress of Great Britain will open at Edinburgh on Monday next and will close on Sept. 12. It is expected that about 350 delegates will be present and the German trade societies will also be represented, their delegates being Herr A. Von Elm, a member of the Cigar Sorters' Union, and manager of the Workers' Productive Association, of Hamburg. The American Federation of Labo has sent over two delegates. Messrs. Straeser and Sullivan. John Burns, Keir Hardie, and Henry Broadhurst, the English labor agitators, who caused so much excitement at Cardiff last year, will not attend. There are renewed indications of the agitation for the release of Mrs. Maybrick. The newspapers stated recently that the Lord Chief Justice, Baron er. Russell of Killowen, had sent an appeal to the Home Secretary, Sir Matthew White Ridley, adducing new evidence, and the mother of the prisoner, Baroness De Roques, has had an interview with her, finding Mrs. May-brick in very bad health. Li Hung Chang's Visit to Canada Arranged For.

Another Independent Conservative I dorses Government Action on Payment of Employes.

Ottawa, Sept. 5.-The attack of the Opposition upon the action of the Government in availing itself of the provision of the audit act authorizing the issue of Governor-General's warrants to pay wages due and to continue the services of the country pending the meeting of Parliament, was continued in the House yesterday. Though the subject was handled with ability by the gentlemen who championed the opposing side of the argument, it was impossible to sustain the interest, and as time wore on, the number of vacant seats increased, until there was a bare quorum of members in their places. Notable among the speeches of the day were those in which Mr. Russell, of Halifax; Mr. Britton, of Kingston, and Mr. McCarthy, justified the course of the Government, and opposed Mr. Foster's motion of censure. The curiosity of the House as to the position that the third party leader would take upon the question was satisfied by a brief but conclusive deliverance, in which both the policy and legality of the resort to the power conferred upon the executive by the statuti-were affirmed. Mr. Clancy and Dr. Sproule also spoke. In recognition of the day set apart in honor of labor,

He has invited the Controller of the Chinese, Mr. Parmalee, to accompany him on the trip, and the latter will take with him a petition from the Chinese of Victoria, praying IA Hung's intercession with the Canadian Government for the appointment of a consul at that port. The two will bring the distinguished visitor over to Toronto. From Toronto they will proceed to North Bay, going further west. ALERTS STILL SLIDING. The glory of the Alerts has departthis season at least. About 350 people, who still follow them in their waning fortunes, shivered in the grand stands and bleachers yesterday. There was nothing in the game to warm them up—absolutely nothing. The Hams won it in the first two innings, and nearly "busted" Sippl's phenom., Clarke. The very first man, Morrison, cracked out a home run. During those two dreary innings Clarke fired most of his balls at the setting sun, and when he got them over the plate somebody usually hit them. Three bases on balls, a homer, a triple, two doubles and four singles were responsible for eight runs. After that the Michigan man braced up and salted the Hams. pretty well. Smiling Mr. McGinnis, the pitching contortionist, had things all his own way, as have most of the pitchers who have faced the Alerts recently. The latter's first run was made by Sippi, who got a charity and scored on a passed ball. In the fifth a hit by Strowger, Snyder's base on balls, and Wood's single brought in two more. The last onely run was made in the seventh by Delaney, who got a base on balls and cleared the bases on Sippi's hit and Wood's grounder to Phillips. The official scorer was not present, unknown to the reporters, and the detailed score cannot be given. By in-

Toronto Globe: It was a rather poor lot of green hunters that were tried over the jumps in front of the stand at the exhibition grounds Thursday afternoon. Some objection was expressed at the heights of the jumps, three feet six inches, which were con sidered too low by a few of the exhibitors. In all there was a dozen competitors, and Adam Beck, of London, who has a peculiar faculty of bobbing up every year with something out of the common in the line of unscrphisticated hunters, made a clean sweep, carrying off all three of the ribbons The winner, a 4-year-old bay mare, wearing the appropriate name of Ladylike, is by Edinburgh, and was easily the best animal in the bunch. She took the jumps cleanly and neatly, and looked all over a good cut of a hunter. Queen Bess, a 3-year-old bay mare, by Maxwell, though hardly as good a performer as the red ribboner, shows signs of great promise. Leith, a 4-year-old, by Edinburgh, was thought good enough for the yellow ribbon by the judges. There was one thing that militated against the chances of the non-prize-winners, and that was their poor handling. The winning trio were splendidly ridden and made

THE IRISH CONVENTION. that the Dublin Irish race convention was a complete success.

Speaking of the annual convention of the Irish National League of Great Britain at Dublin, Mr. John Dillon said that his offer to retire from the chairmanship of the Irish Parliamen-tary party still held good. He added, however, that so long as he retained the place "no man, whatever his opinion of his own abilities, shall remain in the ranks an hour unless he observed the principle of discipline."
"Reunion," he continued, "must precede any effort to force a concession of the Irish demands. Mr. Dillon said he would rather lead a party of 50, the members of which were united, than one of 70, each member of which was flying at the throats of his fellow-members. The past of anyone coming into the party and promising to work faithfully in accord with it would be obliterated, Mr. Dillon said, but so long as he remained leader he should insist upon the members adhering to the old doctrines of party unity.

The Irish National League of Great Britain elected Patrick Aloysius Mc-Hugh, M. P. for the north division of Leitrim, a Dillonite, as vice-chairman, in place of Timothy D. Sullivan, M. P. for West Donegal, who, as a Healy-ite, the meeting refused to re-elect.

Writing from Kosheh camp on July 22 our special correspondent says: We have now, south of Halfa, in this frontier wilderness, far from the base of our supplies, quite 20,000 mouths to feed, including civilian followers of the expedition, and, as our transport service has necessarily been considerably impeded by the outbreak of cholera along our entire line of communication, it is possible that our halt at Kosheh will be somewhat more prolonged than was at first ex-pected" Speaking of a ride to the south in the direction of Suarda, which he undertook with one companion, our correspondent graphically describes the desolation that reigns where men lived and cultivated the ground before the Dervish conquest. On our right stretched the broad belts of date palms fringing the river bank, among which we saw the huts of the former cultivators of the soil, long since dispossessed by the Dervishes, and here and there the white dome of some neglected mosque. At last, perceiving a large ruined village among the palms, we rode into it. It was evident that it had once been an important place. The belt of cul-tivation is here broader than elseheight, with turrets, and have well-built stair-cases, arched gateways and windows, in the construction of which blocks of sandstone have been used, probably taken from some ancient temple in the neighborhood; but all these deserted habitations are roofless. ## JOHN CAMERON, President and Mang. Dir.

London, Saturday, Sept. 5, 1896

A Distinguished Visitor on Canada and the Canadians.

The speech delivered by Lord Russell Chief Justice of England, at the recent gathering in his honor in the Dominion capital was a noteworthy deliverance. Among other sentiments the Chief Justice said that "The first thing that struck him up on this continent was its immensity grandeur, great natural resources great rivers and almost boundless plains, awaiting only the labor of man to turn to account those exhaustless which a bountiful Providence had placed within their reach. It certainly tended to make a man from Great Britain think less of him-self. It was a capital thing for a man possessed of a superabundant selfnceit. It ought to be part of the education of Englishmen, especially public men who have anything to do with the Government of Great Britain. to become acquainted by actual travel with the great colonies of the Empire.

If when he returns to Great Britain Lord Russell will take frequent opporupon his fellow-countrymen the propriety, when they cross the Atalways visiting the Greater that is to be found on this New York and Niagara Falls, and pooh-pooh the idea of a tour through this, the most interesting section of the great North American land. Lord Rosebery set an example to British public men when over twenty years ago, and then only in his 27th year, he made a tour round the world on British soil for the express purpose of making himself acquainted with the needs of the great empire of which we form a part He too has always recognized the immense advantages accruing to the public men of Great Britain from a personal visit to our of the Empire. Taking up some characteristics of Canadian life, the English Chief Justice said:

"He had been greatly struck with the completeness of their educational equipments in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa. He confessed to one fear in this regard, though he did not know whether his fear was well founded or not. They were turning out in great bodies year by year large numbers of lawyers, doctors and clergymen and other members of the learned professions. It was a great thing that they should have this wealth of learned but were they quite sure that their education was sufficiently practical for a class which must be backbone of any great society of men, the class from which the cities spring up, the agricultural class. They might obliterate their cities, but if they had a good agricultural population that population would soon rear them up again. He questioned whether Canada could afford to spare so many of her sons for the professions, many of whom went to the United States and other countries, and he asked whether devoted sufficient thought to training in technical schools and to agricultural schools in order to turn to the best account the agricultural

Lord Russell is right. In the past the Canadian people have been producing far more professional men than the limited population could find employment for. We have been educating them for our neighbors, and so well has the work been done that wherever cur young men have gone, whether as doctors, teachers, clergymen, lawyers, or in any other field of labor, they have taken front rank. The tendency undoubtedly has been to regard these professional occupations as alone worth striving to enter, and the greatest industry of all, for the successful pursuit of which equally efficient preparation ought to be made, has in a measure been kept in the background. But a change has been coming. Not only are the Governments today giving more and more attention to the staple industry of the country, and aiding its promotion by the provision of just such educational facilities as Lord Russell deems requisite, but in the formation of the new Dominion Government, whose guest he was, emphasis has been given to the determination of the Administration to keep agriculture in the vanguard. It must have interested the English Chief Justice to learn that for the first time in the history of the Confederation, the office of Minister of Agriculture is held by a practical farmer, who has made farming pay, as a result of his special training, even in recent years of depression. Canada means to progress in this, as in other regards. Continuing, differ and who are willing to co-oper-ate in all good, worthy, patriotic movements."

Lord Russell said: "He was greatly struck by the mulplicity of churches in Toronto, Monndicated the existence, not of cold tolerance, not merely the recognition of the equality of all creeds before the law, not merely the cold Christian recognition of the divine precept of loving your neighbor, but, as the ining the honest convictions of men who | consulted.

We would despair of the future of the race if the tendency of the times was in a direction contrary to that in- acts and other suicidal agencies? dicated by this eminent British judge. Every now and again, it is true, some foolish or crafty politician endeavors to trade upon ill-founded cries affecting race and religion, but recent events in Canadian history do not afford much hope for the success of firebrands in this land. The greater will be the prosperity and happiness of all classes if these mischief makers are squelched. Of course. Canadians will be interested to learn what this noted visitor, experienced in British parliamentary life, thinks of our chief legislative body. According to Lord Russell, neither better nor worse, nor anyhing else, than what they designated the franchise to be. Capada had a wide suffrage, and broad institutions based upon the people's will. He was much struck by the dignity and decorum of the proceedings in both branches of the Canadian Parliament, comparing favorably with those which marked any Parliament with which he was acquainted, and comparing most favorably with some.' Our destiny as a people, Lord Russell rightly says, depends upon our-

"He predicted a great future for Canada, which was largely in the people's own hands. He believed they would fulfill in good time the destiny Providence had in store for them. These were illustrating how it was possible for men of different races and diversity of religious belief, on the same soil, imbued by the same patriotic instincts, to join in the commor promotion of the best interests of their

The gathering at which the English Chief Justice spoke so entertainingly and instructively, was given by Premier Laurier and his associates in the Government. In proposing the Prime Minister's health, Lord Russell said that he "was much struck with the sentiments of loyalty and attachment to the old British institutions which have marked the Premier's every public utterance and private utterance as well everywhere he had gone as in Canada." In recent years Canadian officialdom in Great Britain did a good deal to prejudice the Canadian Liberal leaders in the eyes of the British people. Unprejudiced observers like Lord Russell will now be able to reveal the rue condition of affairs. The present remier has always been a most zealous advocate of those enlightened views on trade fredom and political fredom which have made Great Britain the foremost country in the world today, and the encomiums of the English Chief Justice were well deserved.

Preparations for the Reception of Lord and Lady Aberdeen

At the Residence of Mrs. Hyman -The Meeting at Music Hall-Co-operation Invited.

The local branch of the National Council of Women are busily making preparations for the welcome to be offered to their Excellencies, the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen when they come to pay London a visit, the former as the representative of the Queen and the latter as the president of the National Council. They invite the hearty co-operation of people of all shades of political and religious opinions in their endeavor to make a thorough success, not only of the pub-lic meeting at the Music Hall (the old Mechanics' Institute), Dundas street, on the evening of the 16th, but also of the reception to be tendered to their Excellencies on the following evening by the local council at the home of Mrs. Hyman, who has kindly placed it at the disposal of the council.

Invitations will be sent to the officers and dele, ates of each affiliated society, but other members desiring to be present must send their names to their president, who will obtain an invitation card for them. A hearty welcome will be extended to all who desire thus to show their respect to their Excellencies.

It is much to be regretted that the Opera House, with its larger accom-modation is not available for the public meeting which will be added by James Bell, John Bell and dressed by both their Excellencies. The committee hope that at the end of her address no one will leave the hall believing that the National Coun-cil is a veiled attack upon the "rights of men," or the "thin end of the wedge," wherewith to foist upon the world what is usually understood by the derisive cognomen, "the new wo-Rather will their president show, to quote her own words, "that we desire to take the golden rule as our motto, to make it the law of our lives. whether in or homes, in society, or in our united efforts on behalf of our

MOUNDS AT CATAHOULA

Were Used for Dwelling and Burial Places 1,000 Years Ago.

Prof. George Beyer, curator of the Tulane Museum, returned yesterday from his trip to Fair Play Landing, Catahoula parish, in the interest of the Louisiana Historical Society and the Tulane University, where he went to examine a number of Indian mounds which were reported to be an the place.

but during the two weeks in which he was gone he managed to make four or five trips, and, while he does not consider that he unearthed anything very valuable, what he did find more than compensated him for his trouble. From the discoveries he made and the conclusions he drew therefrom, the mounds were built originally for dwelling places. As members of the family would die off they would be buried as near the residence as possible and on ton of this mound in sible, and on top of this mound, in order to keep the body out of the wa-ter, which constantly submerged the country. As the population increased the demand for space for burying pur-poses on the tops of the mounds grew greater than the supply, and the consequence was that the mounds were all the time added to, increasing their height, but not their circumference. The professor arrived at this conclusion by examining the soil as he du deeper and deeper, the topmost layer being exactly like that of the soil adjacent to the mounds, and so on down to the original height of the pile. As the layers were gradually piled one upon another a sort of terrace effect was produced, but time and the elements had gradually smoother the sides and the surface was almost took ones around. The base of the larger one was measured and found to be 156 feet, while its height was seven feet.

The soil of the mounds contains a great deal of animal matter, showing that they have been used for burial purposes. In his researches the pro-fessor found the ribs of a catfish. He also identified parts of human bones and one or two skeletons in tolerably good shape. The remains of bodies he found beneath one another, and he observed that the dead were buried facing the north.

The men of the race of mound builders were somewhat larger than the average man of today. Prof. Beyer concluded, from the size of the bones he has in his possession, that the skel-etons measured 6 feet 6 inches.

He noticed also when hunting for pottery that fragments could nearly always be found near the head of where the skeleton, or part of it, was found, from which he concluded that a vase was buried with each dead body. The small pieces of pottery which the professor has in his possession are very small, as they have been broken during these long years, not only by the cattle which have taken refuge upon the mounds, but by the roots of trees. As the soil is very hard, too, digging through it often breaks the pottery into pieces before

Sending Them Out

Though our stock is still incomplete, many are taking advantage of the new arrivals, and are already making their selections. This is a wise precaution. First choice is usually worth a consideration. Then you get just what you want, and those who come later have to be content with what they can get. Not that there is a difference in the material, but some have their choice of colors and styles. When buying our European traveler tries to secure just such styles and colors as he thinks will suit our trade; but, as you must know, he has to do considerable guessing at that. It seems that ages ago -it is not known when-a man, who has had erected to his memory grandest temple in China, divided the waters of the Min River in such a way that they fertilize the whole plain and make such an irrigation system that there can be neither floods nor drought. Kaunshien is at the base of the hills, and is the center for the trade of northern Tibet. Thence Mrs. Bishop went up the Min River, which Chinese consider the actual Yang-tsze, to Wei chau, and, turning up the Li-fan-ting River, reached the town of that name. Here the authorities did all they could to prevent her from entering the Mantsze country beyond. Stunning Posters-Do You Collect?

The fad for collecting posters may be only a passing whim, but it is cer tainly a very active craze just now, and advertisers seem vieing with each other to see who can get out the most artistic and yet striking productions to call attention to their wares. And there is unquestionably a great deal which enliven the billboards nowadays, making it easy to understand that a good collection would have much interest to the owner. A really good poster, to be a success either in the eyes of the advertiser or the collector, must have individuality enough to attract the attention of every passer by, the colors must be pleasingly harmonious and the poses graceful. and (though this matters not to the must be some approcollector) there priateness and connection with the goods or events advertised. Among the best sheets pasted up recently is the "Fibre Chamois Girls." It is unique and attractive, with its light, blending colors and graceful figures, catching the eye at once and holding it by its artistic claim. If what we hear is true about it being followed shortly by another equally fine design prepared in New York for the Fibre Chamois Company, the "poster fiend" may well rejoice at adding two such splendid sheets to his collection.

in Providence! "And how does your rule work?" asked his friend, after joining the captain in a hearty laugh.

"Well, ma'am," Capt. Saunders responded, instantly growing sober again, "words of one syllable I reckon I get right about half the time; words of two syllables, say about a third, maybe. And as for three syllables, and over, without the dictionary, why, I aint distrusting Providence, you understand, ma'am, but from what I gather, I've about come to the conclusion that the Lord calculates to have some poor spelling done, and is willing Jabez Saunders should take his turn at it.'

No matter how great the merit of an article or commodity may be, it is only by persistent pushing that it can be maintained in public favor. Business is a race; and the moment that a merchant or manufacturer ceases his exertions, that moment do his competitors begin to gain upon him.

The St. Croix Soap Manufacturing Company, of St. St-phen, N. B., makers of the well-known "Surprise" Soap, have established a reputation for the excellence of the article they turn out; it has spread throughout the Dominion to foreign countries. But they do not make the mistake some people do, in imagining they can maintain their position by their past reputation. First of all, they maintain the quality of their soap, and then, instead of diminishing they are rather increasing their advertising, as the readers of the trade and daily press can attest.

In their advertising methods they are unique as well as persistent. The accompanying cut is an illustration of a mammoth bar of "Surprise" which the firm has turned out. It is 3 feet 8 inches long, 2 feet 2 inches high, and 1 foot 2 inches thick. This mammoth bar will be placed on exhibition at the Industrial Fair. Toronto. Alongside it will be an $800 piano, and the man, woman or child who guesses nearest to the actual weight of the soap will secure the piano. The guessing competition will be free, coupons being served out to whosoever chooses to take one. The value of Surprise Soap is well known, but the St. Croix Soap Company are determined that it shall not only be well known, but that it shall be even better known. Hence the guessing contest.

Fierce Natives Make It Their Home and Indulge in Strange Customs.

The greatest valley in the world, according to Dr. J. W. Gregory, an English explorer, is the Great Rift Valley, which is an immense depression or trough, which runs through Eastern Africa, 4,000 miles "from the Lebanons almost to the Cape." "The Great Rift Valley," is the title of Dr. Gregory's book, which has just appeared in London. One of the most fascinating portions of this record of travel is that relaing of the Masai, the most ferocious of the African races. You never can be sure of your Masai, even when you have spat upon him and he upon you. That is how they swear eternal friendship. Dr. Gregory says-the harder one spits the more the other feels flattered. How it is done, and what the Masai equivalent for handshaking is, the traveler explains in this wise:

"The chief came up, and for the first time held out a 'knobkerry' cut from a rhinocerous horn to shake I, of course, shook it, glad of this expression of friendliness, though quite aware that if it stopped at this it meant nothing. But as I walked down the slope from the camp after the men he came up again, and this time not only held out his knobkerry, but as I shook one end he shook the other. After walking a few yards he repeated this more vigorously Then at last he held out his hand we shook hands, at first coldly, and then more cordially. Finally, after we had walked a couple of hundred yards, he repeated the process, and the chief spat upon me, a salutation which I returned with perhaps unnecessary vigor. I had been warned that whenever Masai retire from a conference without spitting the spit of peace, squalls may be expected. I was, therefore, much relieved when the friendly rite had been performed." But all this meant nothing, for that very night a band of Masai warriors, new buildings being sources of at-traction in themselves. The hand- ing snakily through the grass bent upon massacring the camp. But the traveler was ready for them, and they crawled back, leaving several of their lead upon the field.

Mr. Gregory's botanical and zoological observations are full of interest He seems to have solved one of the problems that have vexed African explorers for a long time—why there should be in some places vast heaps of bones of animals all mixed together. Some writers have attributed this to the results of a deluge, but Dr. Gregory says the bones are the remains of animals that, in seasons of drought, have fought around their water holes for their last drop .- New York Journal.

N. HUNT,

A few minutes she waited alone in the best parlor, charmed with its far-off and eastern scents, and then Madame Van Heemskirk welcomed her. In her heart she, was pleased at the visit. She thought privately that her Joris had been a little too strict. She did not really see why her beautiful daughters should not have the society and admiration of the very best people in the province. And Mrs. Gordon's praise of Katherine, and her declaration that "she was inconsolable without the dear creature's society," seemed to the fond mother the most proper and natural

We are fighting for Liberty. Heave ho! Rip the brown sails free!

At the second verse Mrs. Gordon ose and said: "Indeed, madam, I find bon from your hair" ny good breeding no match against "Only last week Joanna bought it And the tune is wonderful; it has the ring of trumpets and the roar of waves in it. Pray let us go at once to your daughters."

'A't work are they, but if you mind mot that you are welcome, indeed." Then she led the way to the large diving or dining room, where Kather-ine stood at the table cleaning the silver flagons, and cups, and plates, that adorned the great oak sideboard.

Joanna, who was darning some fine linen, rose, and made her respects with perfect composure. She had very little liking for either Mrs. Gordon or her nephew, and many of her ways appeared to her utterly foolish and not devoid of sin. But Katherine trembled and blushed with pleasure and excitement, and Mrs. Gordon watched her with a certain kind of curious delight. Her hair was combed backward, plaited and tied with a ribbon, her arms bare to the shoulders, her black bodice, and crimson petticoat neatly shielded with a linen apron, and poised in one hand she held a beautiful silver flagon covered with raised figures; which, with patient labor, she had brought into shining relief.

"Oh!" cried the visitor, "this is indeed a piece of plate worth looking at. Surely, child, it has a history; a romance, perhaps? La! there are words also upon it. Pray, madame, be so obliging as to read the inscription." And madam, blushing with pride and pleasure, read it aloud:

"Hoog van Moed: Klein van Goed: Een zwaard in de hand-

Of small estate; A sword in the hand-Such are the arms of Guelderland!

"You must know," continued Mad-ame Van Heemskirk, "that my hus-band's father had a brother, who, in a great famine in Guelderland, filled one hundred flat boats with wheat of Zealand-in all the world it is the finest wheat, that is the truth-and nelp he sent to those who were ready to perish. And when came better days, then, because their hearts were good, they gave to their preserver this flagon. Joris Van Heemskirk, my husband, sets on it great store; that Conversation in this channel was easily maintained; Madame Van Heemskirk knew the pedigree or the history of every tray or cup, and in reminiscence and story an hour passed way pleasantly indeed. Joanna cid not linger to listen. The visitor touched neither her liking nor her interest; and besides, as everyone knows, the work of a house must go one, no matter what guests open the one, no matter what guests open the door. But Katherine longed, and watched, and feared. Surply her friend would not go away without some private token or message for her. She turned sick at heart when she rose as if to depart, but Mrs. Gordon proved herself equal to the emergency; for after bidding madam an effusive "Good-bye," she turned suddenly and said: "Pray allow your daughter to show me the many ornaments in your parlor. The glimpse I had has made me very impatient to see them more particularly."

The question was one entirely in sympathy with the mood and the previous conversation, and madam was pleased to gratify it-also pleased that, having fully satisfied the claims of social life, she could with courtesy leave her visitor's further entertainment with Katherine and return to her regular domestic cares. To her, the visit had appeared to be one of such general interest that she never suspected any motive beneath or beyond the friendliness it implied. Yet the moment the parlor door had been shut, Mrs. Gordon lifted Katherine's face between her palms, and said: "Faith, child, I am almost run off my head with all the fine things I have listened to, for your sake. Do you know who sent me here?"

"I think, madam, Captain Hyde." "Psha!" Why don't you blush, and stammer, and lie about it? 'I think, madam, Captain Hyde,' " mimicking Katherine's slight Dutch accent. "'Tis to be seen, miss, that you understand a thing or two. Now, Captain Hyde wishes to see you; when can you oblige him so much?"

"I know not. To come to Madame Semple's is forbidden me by my fa-"It is on my account. I protest your father is very uncivil." "Madame, no; but it is the officers; many come and go, and he thinks it not good for me to meet them." "Oh, indeed, miss, it is very hard on Captain Hyde, who is more in love than is reasonable. Has your father forbidden you to walk down your garden to the river bank?" "No, madam.

"Then if Captain Hyde pass about two o'clock he might see you there."
"At two I am busy with Joanna." "La, child! At three, then?"
"Three?"

The word was a question more than an assent; but Mrs. Gordon assumed the assent and did not allow Katherine to contradict it. "And I promised to bring him a token from you; he was exceedingly anxious about that matter. Give me the ribmot be true The girl's face was so sincere that Mrs. Gordon found herself unable to ridicule the position.

"My dear," she answered, "you are a miracle. But among all these pretty things is there nothing you can send?" looked thoughtfully Katherine cround. There was a small Chinese cabinet on the table; she went to it, and took from a drawer a bow of orange ribbon. Holding it in her hand she said, "My St. Nicholas ribbon!" "La, miss! I thought you were a Calvinist. What are you talking of the saints for?" "St. Nicholas is our saint, and on his day we wear orange. Yes, even my father, then, on his silk cap, puts on an orange bow. Orange is the Dutch color, you know, madam." "Indeed, child, I do not know; but, if so, then it is the best color to send to your true love." "For the Dutch, orange always. On the great days of the kirk my father puts blue with it. Blue is the color of the Dutch Calvinists." "Make me thankful to learn so such. Then when Councilor Van Heemskirk wears his blue and orange, he says to the world: "I am a Dutchman and a Calvinist." "That is the truth. For the Vaderland and the Moeder Perk he wears their colors. The English, too, they will have their own color?"

"La, my dear! Englands claims every color, but, indeed, even an English officer may now wear an orange favor, for I remember well when our Princess Annie married the trouble was that the ex-reeve had had young Prince of Orange. Oh, I assure you, the House of Nassau is day in January, and had written close kin to the House of Hanover: much and made many prophecies. and when English princesses marry Dutch princes, then surely English officers may marry Dutch maidens. Your bow of orange ribbon is a very proper love knot."

"Indeed, madam, I never—" again, child; my service once more to your mother and sister," and so, with many compliments, she passed, chatting and laughing, out of the house.

Citizens Hold a Well-Attended Indignation Meeting.

Mr. Macdonald Scored by Half a Dozen Speakers

Resolution Passed to Sustain the Council in Their Procedure.

The indignation meeting of the people of London West to protest against the action of Mr. Parkhouse, and those who had instigated the issuing of the recent writ against the village and the members of the council was held last night in Collins' Hall. There was a large attendance of ratenavers. was a large attendance of ratepayers, who showed the greatest interests in the statements concerning the condition of the village finances. Neither ex-Reeve Macdonald or Deputy Reeve Moore were present.

Reeve Saunby called the meeting to order and explained the purpose for which it had been called. He named Mr. Wm. Smith as chairman, and that gentleman took the chair amid loud

Mr. Smith lamented the fact that the village had been thrust into a lawsuit by a man who had not 5 honorable. He said the village needed honest men at the head of its affairs, and he hoped the ratepayers would deal vigorously with the matter and express an opinion as to what course they would pursue. The suit been entered upon a rotten foundation, and he was glad to see the village emerging from darkness into light. He had lived there 40 years and could hold up his hands before heaven and say he owed no man a cent, and had never robbed the village; but could the men who had entered the action say the same thing? They needed men of principle and honesty, but they had been brought there by men who had been brought there by men who, he said, had neither. He referred to the London Gun Club ground lease agreement, and said the men who made the agreement to let the ground for $15 per year were drunk and didn't know what they were doing. Much had been said about the consolidation of debentures, but he would go further and say that there was something back of it all. He referred to the crooked condition of the books in recent years, and closed by saying a deputation, consisting of the mayor of the city and Reeve Saunby should interview the Government upon the consolidation scheme. Ex-Reeve Wm. Spence said he had heard a rumor to the effect that the writ would be withdrawn if the councilors would fall into line over the consolidation scheme and make good the sinking fund money. He denied that he had ever received money while a member of the county council, as Mr. Macdonald had stated in his letter. The things set forth in that letter were only the emanations of a mean mind. He referred to the numerous lawsuits, and said that money had been uselessly spent upon Mr. Laing to audit Mr. Lord's books. The council were not satisfied with Mr. Duff's audit, but were forced to go back to it, and to this day it was the only square audit they had. No man could accuse Mr. Nichols of doing anything wrong, because no one who went over the books could find a trace of dis-Mr. Nichols had made mistakes, but these had cost the village some $600, and nothing had been accomplished. At the time Mr. Bartram was clerk the council wanted to get a new clerk, but he told them they had further use for Mr. Bar-

Voice—Did you want Mr. Bartram o make a political speech? Continuing, the speaker said Mr Bartram's dismisasl had cost the village another $300. He wanted to know if there was anything in Mr. Macdonald's career to show the good services he talked so much about. The Houghton case, he said, cost the corporation $1,360, and the Foster case 1995. Again the breakwater dam had cost $1,200, and another suit $450. It was better to have everyday business men at the head of village affairs than those who were so smart that they couldn't do anything except through law.

Ex-Councilor Hammond asked if Messrs. Hamilton and Andrews were not responsible for the Nichols busi-Mr. Hamilton said that he and Mr.

Andrews had voted to go on with the investigation after the suit had been entered by other parties.

Reeve Saunby said he came to the ouncil when the flood suit was on, and had been practically baptized in lawsuits. They had been trying to settle the Nichols matter, and just as they got near a settlement they were served with another writ. He thought that if they could be held responsible for the previous council's transactions, they were responsible for the village since its incorporation. Mr. Smith-Is he a brother to Bun-

Mr. Saunby said Mr. Macdonald had jumbled himself out of the council. In the published letter of Mr. Macdonald that gentleman had referred There, there! I can really wait no longer. Someone is already in a fever of impatience. Tis a quaintly pretty room. I am happy to have seen its curious treasures. Good-bye, a bag of wind. He hoped the rate-payers would stick by the council, who were doing their best. There were one or two other fellows, he said, who were like wasps, and halfa-dozen wasps could make it warm for a fellow when they took it into their heads. They had to show up on Nov. 10 or judgment would be given against them in default. He thought an effort should be made on legitimate grounds to have the parties withdraw the writs, and if this didn't to, they would fight them. If they went to the Government about the matter of debentures they would simply say, "There is the law; let it take its course"

Some one asked if Mr. Parkhouse was a ratepayer, and the answer was "Not at all."

"Not at all."

Mr. Duff said he was prepared to fight the matter out, and he would come out on top. He said he furnished a list of the people who had subscribed towards helping Mr. Spence to fight the writ issued by Mr. Macdonald. On this list the name of the deputy reeve appeared for $10, which deputy reeve appeared for $10, which he failed to pay. He didn't admire a man who would make statements in the press that he would not make on the public platform. Mr. Nichols' lawyer was not quite so anxious to settle the case now as he was once. Mr. Laing had been paid a large sum of money, and he thought the money so paid had been obtained under false pretenses, and should be returned. He said a Mr. Maddonald had written him said Mr. Macdonald had written him Yet in the face of actions of that kind he would write a letter to the public press in the strain he had done. There were no law costs in Mr. Macdonald's time because they were covered up in other accounts. Huston case could have been settled for $25 and the Foster case for $40. Mr. Macdonald was never elected reeve of the village, but ursurped the power. He withdraw the waite and the power. power. He withdrew the writ against Mr. Spence a day or so before he would have been legally entitled to the seat. Mr. Macdonald, he did not think, owned any property in the village. He had heard it said that Mr. Macdonald was bound to get even with the council because the bailiff cents' worth of interest in the place, had been put in to collect his taxes, and characterized the action as dis-Mr. Macdonald as an example to other delinquents, because he was reported to be a rich and influential man and an ex-reeve. When a man took an action like the recent writ transaction he should put up good security, and not checks that were no good. If they had the debentures at the present time they could be sold for 3 1-2 per cent.

Mr. Hamilton said Mr. Nichols had branded as a thief and a robber, and he wanted the law to take its course because it would prove him either an honest man or a rogue, and he came out the former. Mr. Macdonald had called him a funny man, but if Mr. Barnum had not died quite so soon he would have had Mr. Macdonald in his collection. He said, as reeve, Mr. Macdonald refused to sign an order to place the sinking fund money in the Molsons Bank. If any ratepayers thought Mr. Macdonald more capable of performing the duties of reeve than the present one they were welcome to their opinion. He knew a man in the village who had a relic of Mr. Macdonald in the shape of a check for $50, which was given him as payment on account, and when the man went to the bank there had been no funds, and he had the check yet. Another source of complaint was Mr. Macdonald's failure to obtain an account for services in Toronto. Mr. Campbell said he had been called down for using harsh measures to collect taxes, for if Mr. Macdonald couldn't pay them the poor people could not be expected to do so. He had told them if they didn't like his style they could take the books. Mr. Clugston stood up and said: "I move we examine Mr. Macdonald and see if he is not a fit patient for the asylum.

A chorus of voices rang out, "Put the motion," and then they cheered.

Mr. Collins said the only thing the council had done wrong was striking the rate too low.

Mr. Campbell moved, seconded by tained by the ratepayers here tonight to do whatever they deem proper to stop the course of the law." This carried unanimously, and the meeting broke up.

'Bystander," in Toronto Weekly Sun. Canada has been enjoying the honor of a visit from British Justice in the person of its chief representative, Lord Russell of Killowen. The Lord Chief Justice represents an influence felt not by England only, or by the British Empire, but by the civilized world.An American judge of the Supreme Court, when he was told that the flag of Great Britain was advancing in Africa, said: "I rejoice to hear it; for wherever the British flag advances, with it advances the empire of law." Above all the military trophies and administrative achievements of British Empire in India, is the fact that over that vast country where, before the coming of England, unbridled tyranny and plundering anarchy held divided sway, law now reigns, and that without due legal process not a grain Factory. Beds weighed; samples of rice can be taken from the humbiriven. Manufacturers of hair matress and goose feather pillows. Furgreatest of all the glories of England is that through ages of judicial iniquity, dark tribunals, secret denun-ciation, torture and arbitrary imprisonment, she preserved the principles at least of public justice and personal liberty. He who represents the traditions and the majesty of English justice here, as Lord Russell worthily does, might feel himself always assured of the most respectful and the heartiest welcome. Nor would Lord Russell find himself among judicial brethren unworthy of association with the British ermine. Canada has at least the blessing, always inestimable, doubly inestimable in a democracy, of a respected and trusted judiciary.

ZOLA DESCRIBES ST. PETERS. How the Great French Realist Views

terior glimpse and reverie. We quote | their leisure time in reading and writnow from Zola's "Rome" his nicture ing, as if they were at home. Then of the interior: On the afternoon of that same day Pierre decided to visit St. Peter's. He stars. And some determined the vice, no doubt—was beginning in the Campella Clementina on the left. Pierre, however, heard nothing; he was simply struck by the immensity of the edifice, as with raised eyes he slowly walked along. At the entrance came the giant basins for holy water, with their boy angels as chubby as Cupids; then the nave, vaunted and decorated with sunken coffers; then the four cyclopean buttress-piers upholding the dome, and then, again, the transepts and apses, each as large as one of our churches. And the basilica triumphed, beyond discussion, recognized and admired by everyone as the largest and most splendid church in the whole world. Pierre still wandered on, gazing, overcome as yet not distinguishing details. He paused for a moment before the bronze statue of St. Peter, seated in a stiff, hierarchial attitude, on a mar ble pedestal. A few of the faithful were there kissing the large toe of the saint's right foot, Some of them carefully wiped it before applying foreheads to it, and then kissed it again. Next, Pierre turned into the transept on the left, where stand the confessionals. Priests are ever stationed there, ready to confess penitents in every language. Others wait, holding long staves, with which they lightly tap the heads of the kneeling sinners, who thereby obtain 30 days' indulgence. However, there are few people present, and inside the small wooden boxes the priests occupied Pierre again found himself before the solitude, under its gigantic, flowery baldacchino, the casting and gilding of which cost two and twenty thousand pounds. But suddenly Pierre remembered the ceremony in the Campella Clementina, and felt astonished for he could hear nothing of it. As he drew near, a faint breath, like the far-away piping of a flute, was wafted to him Then the volume of sound slowly increased, but it was only on reaching the chapel that he recognizes an organ peal. The sunlight here filtered through red curtains, drawn before the windows, and thus the chapel glowed like a furnace, while resounding with the grave music. But in that huge pile all became so weak, that at 60 paces neither voice nor organ could be distinguished.

Diamond Exhibit

Beyond doubt the greatest exhibit of diamonds ever seen in this country is now displayed at the Industrial Fair

It is the property of the well-known house, Ryrie Bros., of Diamond Hall, The articles displayed range all the way from $5 to $30,000 each. The lastnamed piece is a magnificent necklet containing 154 diamonds. the total weight of which is 50 per cent heavier than the celebrated Kohinoor diamond now in possession of her Majesty

The display of rings is almost be-wildering, and includes everything from a neat little solitaire diamond at $5, up to $2,500 each—all manner of styles and combinations. Those visiting this great fair will miss one of its best features unless they make a point of seeing the ex-

School Trustees Give the System Some Hard Knocks.

The Petition Against Principal Kirk Filed.

Mr. Kirk Says He Will Not Cram Pupils -Important Meeting of the School Board Committee-Mr. Kirk's Reply.

The "cramming" system of education was knocked down and jumped graves." He disapproved the petion unmercifully by the school trustees at a meeting of No. 1 committee last night. The discussion grew out of Principal Kirk's reply to a petition in confidence that he would never let his which the signers asked that their children be allowed to attend some school other than Aberdeen, or that ing. Mr. Kirk be removed from that to another. The petitioners set forth that their children had failed to pass the entrance examinations for three or four years, and that they could not afford to keep them there longer. The names attached were Wm. Wilson, F. San-T. A. Atkinson, Wm. Young, James Westervelt, G. Bowman, Geo. Trace, S. Read and T. Waistell. Most of them were present to voice their complaints, and the stuffy little room in the City Hall was so full that school trustees had to sit on the window sill. The committee decided to hear the peti-Mr. Thomas Evans said there had been a good deal of dissatisfaction with the school for some years. They did not wish to injure Mr. Kirk, and had taken action quietly. Mr. Evans admitted that his son had been absent 31 days at one time, but it was owing to sickness. The boy had made no progress since he went into the school. He was 14 years of age, and had twice failed to pass. Mr. Evans said the objected to the system in vogue. He was unaware that his child had been placed in grade 7 without examination until he saw it in The Advertiser.

Mr. Kirk replied that Mr. Evans' boy, Percy, was promoted provisionally to grade 8, because his father wanted him to try the entrance examination, and had promised him a bicycle if he passed. He was passed from grade 6 to 7 in 1894, and his grade 7 work was only half done. The boy was not very strong, and before the examination he was very sick. Having let Percy go up, Mr. Kirk said he had to admit a large number of smaller boys to his room, and permit them to try the entrance examinations, without being fully equipped. Mr. Alexander Mason said his boy was in his 16th year, and had failed for two years in his examinations. According to the general showing of the school there must be something wrong His son was a strong boy, and ought

Mr. Kirk replied that George Atkinson was taken into his room without passing in grammar. He took George the hope that something could be made out of him. The whole fault of the school lay in the grading, which had turned it upside down, but this year they had finally come up to the standard. He never said he had bad material to work on, but he did say that children were admitted to his room before they were ready.

THE PRINCIPAL'S REPLY.

Mr. Kirk then read a statement showing that the pupils in question were absent in the six months' from 20 to 66 days. He had been greatly handicapped. Many of his promising pupils obtained situations and left. Owing to the arrangement of the grades he had to fill up his class by taking seventh grade candi dates. But a greater difficulty still was irregularity of attendance. He had been passing children from 11 to 13 years of age, and why older ones had not passed no one could tell. There were differences in capabilities and in application. As for the complaint about his system. Mr. Kirk said had been teaching 26 years, much of the time in a Model school, and he knew the theory. He had never taken second rank before. He declared emphatically that he would not cram his pupils. If the board wanted the cramming system enforced, they must seek another principal. Dr. Campbell said the children passing from Mr. Kirk's room were of lower age than any in the city.

DEFENDED BY THE INSPECTOR Inspector Carson spoke in Mr.Kirk's favor. He pointed out that Aberdeen School was laboring under the disadvantage of a small staff and the over crowding of the lower rooms. The average age of the pupils passing from Mr. Kirk's school was under 13 1-2 years. In two schools whose success was undisputed, the average age was over 14 1-2 years. The average was one year and two months lower in Mr. Kirk's school. If Mr. Kirk's work had been unsatisfactory he would have recommended his dis-

"There is no ground whatever for any complaint against Mr. Kirk," said Trustee Greenlees. "No man could have done better. I am glad to hear one teacher give his honest opinion that the cramming system is a failure. Mr. Kirk is a badly maligned man.'

Wilson said he thoroughly indorsed Mr. Kirk's opinion on educa-tion. They are the products of the cramming system. Many of the teachers are helping to fill the

It declared that the committee believed no grievance existed; heartily commended Mr. Kirk's methods of teaching; recommended parents to endeavor to get their children to attend school more regularly, and decreed that those transferred from Aberdeen school return there at once. Mr. Griffin thought that the trouble would be smoothed over by atlowing the Mason, Evans and Atkinson children to go to Simcoe street school. He pointed out that Mr. Mason, especially, was a heavy taxpayer, and should have some sideration. Trustee Keenlevside had been previously granted permission to remove his boy from Aberdeen school, and the committee could not refuse it to others.

A Terrible Experience With Heart Disease, Yet Cured by Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart.

Do not our largest sympathies well out to those who suffer from heart disease? It comes so suddenly, and its symptoms are usually so distressing that the direct agony is experienced by the patient. The case of Mr. L. W. Law, of Toronto Junction, Ont., who was unable to lie down in bed for eighteen months owing to smothering spells and palpitations, is by no means exceptional. Who would have thought the case could be cured, and yet one bottle of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart removed trouble in this case. It gives such speedy relief that even where the symptoms are less dangerous, it ought at once to be taken as a means of driving this terrible dis-

Formal Opening of the New Western Fair Buildings.

Citizens Justly Proud of the Great Improvements Accomplished.

Tour of Inspection-Speeches on the Grand Stand-Good Words for Mr. Jas. H. Brown.

"Every dollar was well laid out" was the expression heard on all sides as prominent ratepayers were piloted through the grounds and building at Queen's Park yesterday afternoon by the directors of the Western Fair Association. There was no ratepayer there who regretted marking his ballot for the bylaw granting the $25,000 for the erection of the new structures and other improvements. Two crowded street cars left the City Hall at 4 p.m., bound for the park, carrying a number of the directors of the association and their guests, among whom were some of inent citizens.

When the party reached their destination a tour of inspection was begun. Mayor Little, first vice-president of the association, in the absence and gave interesting facts relating to the new buildings, such as dimensions, accommodation, cost, contractors' names, etc. The visitors expressed the liveliest satisfaction in everything they saw. The slight changes made the Agricultural and Horticultural Halls were noted. Then

POULTRY BUILDING.

Continuing the circuit, the Poultry Building was next taken in. Here was recalled the fire of last year, as the old building was then destroyed. The new one has been made out of the old Dairy Hall and greatly increased in size. The 40-foot addition and woodwork of coops were put up by Wm. Lucas for $460. Ed. F. Howie moved the building to its present position for $74. The fronts of the coops were supplied by the Dennis Wire and Iron Works for $230.

KING STREET ENTRANCE. As the King street entrance was passed its artistic appearance caused much favorable comment. Here are the new ticket offices and police station. The work was done by W. E. Scott & Sons for $296 50. CATTLE SHEDS.

When the party entered the Cattle Shed they became enthusiastic in Inspector Carson's inquiry re night schools caused Trustee Logan to along the west side of the grounds attending Aberdeen this year, but two move that no night schools be opened from King to York street, a distance 135 feet. They are each 60 feet wide, a five-foot addition having been made on both sides, and now stand to a level with the railway platform, which is built along the rear. The work was done by E. F. In the new horse building the greatest of all the revolutions have taken place. In previous years it was almost an impossibility to see the horses in their stalls. Now a perfect view can be obtained from the promendown the center of the building. Mr. James H. Someone noticing the bunks, which are above the asked Mr. Brown what he had done with the ladders. Mr. Brown quickly scaled the front of the stall, and showed that there was no need of adders by which to climb into the bunks. The stalls are patterned after those at the World's Fair. The double stall department is 300 feet by 66 feet, and contains 177 stalls. It was built by Tambling & Jones and W. L. Lucas $4.737 and $325 respectively. The single horse barn is 630 feet long and 35 feet wide, with 204 stalls, and the contractors were J. Broadbent, $3,800, and Wm. Reynolds, $238. The interior has been whitewashed by the W. H. Heard Spramotor Company's spraying machine, and the intense whiteness adds greatly to the impressive sight as one looks down the long perspective. THE GRAND STAND.

What the English People Will and Will Not Have.

Lord Russell Says if Prohibition Is De cided on It Is Only Just There Should Be Compensation.

Montreal, Sept. 4 .- Lord Russell, the Lord Chief Justice of England, who has been on a visit here, has been interviewed. In the course of some talk reference was made to the Liberparty in England having made ocal veto a plank in the political platform-a plank which caused their defeat at the polls.

That is the utmost length they will go. But the question of compensation was even more difficult to deal with than the question of local veto. There was a difference of opinion on this subject. The effort of the American tin plate factory at Elwood, Ind., to force a reduction of 15 per cent in the wages of the 300 men employed in the mills" resulted in a victory for the strikers, the company signing the scale. The New York Jewist striking tail-Evansyme, ors attend church services daily. The men have held meetings nearly every day for three weeks, and have listened often for eight or ten hours of the day to speeches, many of which were so long that no ordinary audience could sit or stand through them. They never saw such assemblages in Russia or Poland, the countries from which they came; never till they got to New York did they know of such a thing as freedom of speech; never in their native places did they enjoy the great and glorious American right to go on strike. Another peculiar feature of this strike of Jewish workmen is the constancy of the strikers to their leaders. Adolph Strassen says: "The trades unions, both in England and in the United States, paying their members out of work, strike, traveling, superannuation, sick and death benefits, hold their members intact. They are not affected in the same degree by periods of depression as the unions which do not pay these benefits. At the first sign of a revival of trade they are ready to take advantage of the situation by demanding an increase in wages or a reduction in the hours of labor. They usually possess the financial strength to maintain it. The trades unions built on old lines, for trade purposes only, cannot hold their membership intact because the average union man will not contribute, unless the amount is returned to him from time to time in the shape of benefits.

An Experience That Drove a Ghost-Seeing Engineer Mad.

Jerry Pierce Had Seen Ghosts There for Ten Years.

When He Saw Living Beings on That Piece of Track He Kept on at Full speed and Killed the Lovers.

From the Chicago Post. This is the story of an old engineer, Jerry Pierce, who died recently at Donaldson, Ind.

About five miles east of that place was a deep cut through a hill of sand and gravel. The railroad company needed the gravel for embankments. and bought the hill to the south of the track. A switch was put in, and was shoved over as the gravel was removed. They took it away in flat cars, and Jerry Pierce was the engineer who hauled the gravel train. That hill had been the site of a farmhouse one time in the early days. Indeed, the farmhouse was still standing—though dilapidated—when the railroad men bought the land. People said that the house was haunted. It had been a rather pretentious affair when erected, and good people must have lived there. Indeed, the family that occupied the big red house was one of the best of the pioneers. The man's name was Corse. His wife was from the Pimeroy family, and her people were almost aristocrats.

There was an epidemic of smallpox away back there in the wilderness days, and it invaded the Corse famiy in the big red farm house. Two children, a boy and a girl, died and were buried in the orchard. There were no cemeteries then. Later, years later, the family moved away. Tenants came to occupy the house and gather the fruit in the orchard. The graves were forgotten. Neighborhood histories were lost in more recent events. Old people died and were laid to rest in cemeteries. New people came in and cleared away the forests. Then came the railroad, and the company bought the hill field in which stood the red house, now old and dilapidated. And day after day the hill melted away as the gravel track was pushed near, and the army of shovelers, like a line of ants. ate away the embankment. And one day, when the pupils of the little schoolhouse were out at play, a great thing

The sloping face of the bank caved down, and the end of a blackened wooden box protruded. It quivered there a moment, and then another por-tion of the loose sand and gravel came away, and the blackened box slid half way down, turned over, parted and lodged. And from it came two skeletons-and in the yielding sand they traveled to the bottom. The Irish shovelers quit work and gathered about those glistening reminders of earth's mortality. The children came up from the schoolhouse and watched—gaping—the unusual scene. The foreman asked whose graves were these. No one knew. Even the old residents were puzzled. Very few remembered that Farmer Corse had ever occupied the place. None recalled the smallpox plague. And while the messengers were hurrying about searching for those who, could they but know, would have hurried here to give sepulture to these shovelers to go back to work. They would not do it while the bones lay there. The incident appealed to their superstitions. They were certain these who once were mortals had no rites of church before their taking ground where the bones lay. So Jerry Pierce, exasperated, tossed the bones in the blackened fragment of box and dragged the whole across the tracks. He felt a tug of regret at his heart even as his grimy, oily hands grasped the old black walnut. There was a wave of sensibility that swept over him. But in a moment he hardened his heart against it and roared at the workmen and gave the relics that should have been sacred one final toss, and then he went back to his engine. And the shovelers, who were afraid of him, seeing the dead had no terrors. went on with their work and com-pleted it. But by night the news had reached Farmer Corse-grown Judge Corse now-and he had come with a conveyance and with coffins, and had taken away the remains of children who would have been 40 years old had they lived to that day. Jerry Pierce was taken from the gravel train after a while, and given charge of a regular freight between Crestline and Fort Wayne. And because he was sober and honest and industrious, they gave him an express train on the western division

And it was along about then that could hold up his hands to a meeting he saw the vision for the first time. of his followers and say that they One night he had just passed the site were hard with labor. Power has been of the old red house, and was thinking of anything else on earth than and carrying with it the homage which that incident of the black wooden was once paid to kings. at the fireman with opening senses.

"Didn't you see them?"

"What was it, Jerry?" asked the fireman kindly, for he was scared.

"What is it, Jerry?" asked the conductor, running forward from the now motionless train. Jerry got down and went back. Why, he knew the tie they stepped on and he found it. He told the trainmen and the passengers, and they all looked, treading the level floor of the old gravel pit and finding nothing.

the level floor of the old gravel pit and finding nothing.

Jerry knelt down and examined the pilot with his lantern, There was no trace of a contact. He would say nothing. He climbed into the cab and gave the signal for starting. The conductor could not understand him. He made up the lost time and ran into Chicago on schedule. And he asked for a lay-off next trip and got asked for a lay-off next trip and got 'I've been a little too steady," he

After that it came repeatedly, not often, of course, but perhaps a dozen times in ten years. Sometimes two appearances came near together—within a few weeks. Again, it was more than a year from one to the next. He never could know. He might be in ex-cellent health. He might be feeling dull and dispirited. There was no warning condition. It might happen anywhere in that ten miles of which the gravel pit was midway station. For five years he never failed to stop. It was too plain. He could not steel himself to go on, certain as he was of the spectral nature of the vision. He never spoke of it; but they had come to understand.

And then, finally, he saw it one night, and shut his eyes, and caught the air-brake lever and bowed his head—and went through it without stopping. But for an hour he was so nervous he could not oil his engine. And yet in time he grew so he could see that apparition-always the same -without a move to throttle or brake bar. Of course it affected him. He could not see it without a gasp and a season of chill. But he knew nothing was there, safe enough, and he would not move. The only chance about it was that the youth and maiden seemed never two times alike. The change was difficult to describe. Very little added age was observable, but there was a difference in their appearance and in their way, and in the direction they followed walking. So that one night when he came upon them for the last time he had no warning. He had not seen just this pair. The dress and the manner were new. He was very much tailer than she was. She was very much more slender. Of course came smiling upon the track, right where the wagon road crosses diagonally instead of straight across. as it should. And of course they were very near together, his head bowed above her, and their hands clasped, and their steps slow. Jerry Pierce saw them and closed his eyes and ceased breathing, and wished the ghostly thing would leave him sometime. And the fireman shrieked, and leaped to the whistle rod and struck at the brake bar and motioned the reverse lever over-and the jolt came. They had struck. Jerry Pierce told them it was nothing. He had been having this sort of thing since ten years ago. It was fancy. He raved about the folly of stopping the train, even while they composed the forms of the young man and the young woman at the side of the track, and inquired for physicians among the pas sengers. He raved all the rest of the trip. Why should they keep him in the baggage car? Who was running the engine, anyway?

And that was the beginning. Fo years he was helpless-hopeless. cowed whenever he heard the low thunder of the west-bound midnight express. No other train troubled him. ne heard that nothing could stay him. After that he recovered gradually, and for the last ten years has been quite rational.

He has talked little, worked at odd jobs about town, gardening some, but declining all offers to take charge of engines. Whether he had escaped the phantom of those two self-occupied young people before death came on no one knows, for he would not discuss the matter.

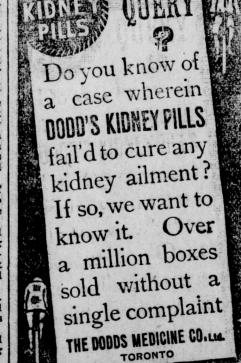

A man against whom not a word could be said, a man who had been at the bedside of every sick person in this town for the last ten years, a man who has suffered more than we can understand, we shall give him sepulture Sunday, and about his open grave none but mourners will gather.

A BULLET THAT CLIMBED HILLS

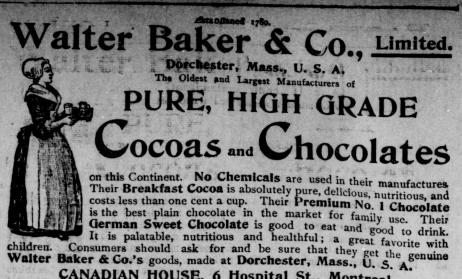

Pearson's Weekly. An Indian correspondent tells of an incident which came under his official notice as magistrate of Hosan, Madras. A European was hunting black buck on a hillside, when he obtained a shot with his Martini-Henry carbine. The result of the shot taught him a lesson about the dangers of long range bullets. In a valley 1,151 yards away beyond two rather high hills, and a ittle pond, a native was standing with his head bowed and his hands clasped behind his back. The bullet broke the wrist of this man's hand. In the investigation which followed the course of the bullet was traced accurately. In firing at the antelope, the bullet had hit a stone on the hillside and gone bounding end over end over the first hill.

At the next hill another place where bullet struck was found. Here a badge of nobility. Lincoln's high length, and he ran right past the old the bullet leaped up into the air almost perpendicularly, and when it most perpendicularly, and when it came down in the rice field it hit the man's wrist, broke the bone, cut a gash in his body, then dropped to the gash in his body, then dropped to the ground a spent ball.

Jack and Jill's First Visit to the Seashore.

Jack and Jill were two of the pretmost anything but walk and talk. Her tiest little horses you ever saw in your joints turn. Her head turned so that Love that doth count its gift is a life. Both had the glossiest black she could look either way in a manner coats and long silky tails, and the only which Ruth thought very cute and cunway you could tell them apart was ning. But as she kept on Ruth all at once heard a little snap. As she turned the head back again an ugly crack that Jill had a little white star on her forehead and Jack had none.

"Don't," said Bessie, as Ruth still tried to turn the flead. a pretty cottage for the season, she said to John, the coachman:

"John, you can give Jack and Jill a good run around the field this morning; it will do them good." When Jack and Jill found themselves with only light ropes around their necks, absolutely free to run and jump around the green field, no poor children sent for an outing on a Fresh-Air awhile." She went out of the room, leaving Ruth feeling very miserable, indeed. Here was Mariana, Bessie's Fund ever seemed more overjoyed than they. Jack straightway got on his back and rolled over and over on the grass in his delight, Jill immediately following suit. Then, after they were tired of this sport, Jack stood still a momen sniffing the fresh salt breeze in the sunlight, and then off he galloped the whole length of the field and then back again, forward and back, and Jill came galloping after, but, as you will be glad to know, neither fell down and broke his crown.

Presently both Jack and Jill stopped to take breath at the stone wall nearest the beach. They saw the cool waves breaking along the smooth, hard sand, and Jack turned his head to Jill as if to say, "Shall we?" and Jill nodled back as plainly as could be, "Yes, let's! what a lark!" And then, with one bound, the two little horses jump-ed over the wall and daintily trotted down the long slope of the beach. At the water's edge they stopped again, side by side, and Jack lifted up one hoof in the air, and again looked at Jill as if inquiring, "Do we dare?" and again Jill responded "Yes," and the two horses put two feet in the cool, refreshing water, and two more, and walked slowly out into the sea, more and more pleased as they felt the and more pleased as they felt the waves breaking gently against their warm skins. Finally they were in me I might. I let it out, and, oh, the shoulder-deep, and again Jack turned cat caught it, and that was the end as if to say, "What do you say now?" of that poor little bird. Cousin Bertha "Let's swim," responded Jill, as plainly as possible, as she gave a delighted room and was going to cry all day, snort and began to move her legs in I felt so badly. But pretty soon she and out. So the two horses, with faces seaward, swam and swam, as delighted as two children with their very bad we can't afford to fret about as delighted as two children with their first experience of the water, but adapting themselves to it as no two man, was becoming more and more alarmed. He had watched the horses go down to the beach, and had expect ed that, of course, they would turn back as soon as they reached the water. To his astonishment, they went further and further in, paying no attention to his loud exhortations to re-turn, and when he saw them swiming off, as if they fully intended visiting the old country before their return, his consternation knew no bounds, for knew their strength would give out long before they could cover even the distance they had gone. Over the stone a first interview with a Chinaman wall leaped John, and along the beach the quarter of a mile to the United States Life Saving Station he ran as ed is a new entertainment. A gentle-

A REGULAR CRIPPLE.

The Story of an Old Settler in Dufferin County.

Suffered Terribly With Rheumatism, and Had to Use Mechanical Appliances to Turn in Bed-Friends Thought He Could Not Recover.

From the Economist, Shelburne, Ont. Almost everybody in the township of Melancthon, Dufferin county, knows Mr. Wm. August, J.P., postmaster of Auguston. Mr. August, now in his 77th year, came to Canada from England forty years ago, and for 38 years has been a resident of Melancthon. During some 30 years of that time he has been a postmaster, and for eleven or twelve years was a member of the township council, for some years holding the position of reeve. He has also been a justice of the peace since the formation of the county. It will thus be seen that Mr. August stands high in the estimation of his neighbors.

In the winter of 1894-95 Mr. August was laid up with an unusually severe attack of rheumlatism, being confined to the house and to his bed for about three months. To a reporter of the Economist, Mr. August said: "I was, in fact, a regular cripple. Suspended from the ceiling over my bed was a rope, which I would seize with my hands, and thus change my position in bed or rise to a sitting posture. suffered as only those racked with rheumatic pains could suffer, and, owing to my advanced age, my neighbors did not think it possible for me to recover. I had read much concerning Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and at last determined to give them a trial. I commenced taking the pils about Feb. 1, 1895, taking at the outset one after each meal and increasing to three at a time. Within a couple of weeks I could notice an improvement, and by the first week in April I was able to be about as usual, free from the pains, and with but very little of the stiffness left. I continued the treatment a short time longer, and found myself fully restored. It is now nearly a year since I discontin ued taking the Pink Pills, and I have not had any return of the trouble in that time. I have no hesitation in saying that I owe my recovery to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

These pills are a perfect blood builder and nerve restorer, curing such diseases as rheumatism, neuralgia, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' Dance, nervous headache, all nervous troubles, palpitation of the heart, the after effects of la grippe, diseases depending on humors of the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. Pink Pills give a healthy glow to pale and sallow complexions, and are a specific for troubles peculiar to the female system, and in the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses. Dr.Williams' Pink Pills may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y., at 50 cents a box, or six for $2 50. See that the company's registered trade mark is on the wrapper of every box offered you, and positively refuse all imitations or substitutes alleged to be "just as good." Remember no other remedy has been discovered that can successfully do the work of Dr.Williams' Pink Pills.

If he saw the rat coming out of the trap. he gave no sign of it whatever, but lay as still as if he were dead. The rat, too, didn't see the snake until he approached the fatal corner,, which he did with that business-like gait peculiar to rats seeking holes. As I sat perfectly still the rat was in no great hurry, so that he did not run blindly on the snake. He got within a foot of his enemy before he seemed to notice him; then, with a rat-like inquisitiveness, he sat up on his haunches, sniffed trembingly to be sure if it were really a snake. As he did so the puff-adder became alarmed at his size, and gave vent to a loud, blowing hiss, at the same time drawing back his head with the nose inclined downward, ready to strike. The hiss alarmed the rat, which jumped past the snake, uttering a squeak of alarm. But the reptile was quicker than the quadruped, and struck him nicely while still on the jump. The action of the snake was so quick that he must be said to have struck the rat rather than have bitten it. He did not hold t at all, so that it continued its slighty interrupted journey; but alas! it had the venom injected into its lungs, and before it reached the place where I sat it tottered over to the other side of the room and lay down dying, resting on its side behind a pile of books on the floor close by the wall, in such a position that it was completely out

Now when flowers are blooming all around us, what can we speak of that is more interesting than the delicious perfume which they exhale? In adding that to the elegance of form and the brilliancy of colors, nature seems in his mouth and swallowed it down to concentrate in flowers all the means of delight that are at her disposal. Consequently the love of flowers is perhaps the most general sentiment in all humanity.

The rattlesnake, the copperhead and One might write volumes on the perfume of flowers without exhausting the subject. Let us confine ourselves to the most interesting facts and the easiest to observe. The greater portion of flowers give out their aroma constantly throughout the day. Very feeble in the bud, the odor reaches its maximum power at the moment of full bloom, and then slowly decreases until the death of the plant, after which it remains in part. ROSSLAND WILL STAY. But this is not a general law. Sometimes the phenomenon is traced to the period of fecundity. By putting pollen on some odorous flowers the perfume dies.

But still more intermittent periods are noticed. The corolla and the cactus send out their perfumes every half-hour from 8 o'clock in the morning until midnight. Several kinds of orchids present the curious phenomena of changes in the nature of their perfumes in the course of a day. For instance, the laelia elegant has an odor of tuberose in the morning, and of gardenia in the evening; the cypripedium de schlime, an odor of the warm climates have more abundant, naturalists have investigated the question whether there was any re-There is a smelter at lation between the color and son Knowing the Ancient Speech of Cornwall.

There is a woman in the county of Cornwall, England, who speaks a language known by no other person in one world. It is the ancient language of Cornwall and once was spoken by hundreds of people.

Dowy Pentreath is the woman in question, and she lives in the town of Monshale, in Cornwall. She was born in 1806. Notwithstanding this fact, sine is very vigorous, and her memory is good. The Cornish language is a branch of the Celtic tongue, which was once widely spoken throughout the European world. It began to decline about the first quarter of the last century, being superseded by the English lan-guage. At the beginning of this century there was no more than two heads of families who could speak the language. The father of Dolly Pentreath was one of them. He was a fisherman by occupation. Up to her twentieth year she could speak only Cornish fluently, while her English was just about as intelligible. When she grew up there was no one with whom she could converse in Cornish except her father, and after his death -in 1830-she was the sole one in all Cornwall, in fact, the whole world, who could converse in that language.

A Bonn professor states that he has traced the posterity of an alcoholic ancestress to the present day. Of her 834 descendants, he was able to trace 709. Of these 106 were illegitimate, 162 begging their trade, 64 passed most of their days in workhouses, 181, being women, gave way to dissolute habits, 76 were criminals, and 7 were condemned for murder.
