GOOD YACHT OUTLAW IN A FINE FINISH

Fleet White-Winged Craft
Contest Erieau Supremacy

Magnificent Race Between Outlaw And The
Baden-Powell For Flag of Victory---
Progress of The Competition
---Incidents That Figured in the Event.

THE RESULT.

Chairman Jones, of Committee of Judges---It was a splendid race with honors very even. Both yachts deserve credit.

Commodore C. E. Beaton, of the yacht Outlaw---It was a clean well won race, highly satisfactory in every particular. We never doubted victory, but the B. P. really surprised us and did remarkably well.

Commodore W. R. Phillimore, of the yacht Baden-Powell---The contest was good and clean. The victory was fairly won. We have no excuse for defeat, but we don't think the result would always be the same.

Baden-Powell, Aug. 9, 1901.
Race between Outlaw and Baden-Powell.

First gun--3.10.30.
Second gun--3.15.30.
Outlaw crossed line 3.15.11.
Baden-Powell crossed line 3.16.10.
Baden-Powell, 20 seconds behind Outlaw.

FIRST ROUND.
Outlaw turns first buoy 3.27.21, second 3.37.30; 3rd, 4.04.5.
Baden-Powell turns first buoy 3.28.20; 2nd, 3.39.30; 3rd, 4.24.5.

SECOND ROUND.
Outlaw turns first buoy 4.13.30; second, 4.24.25; finish, 4.46.20.
Baden-Powell turns first buoy at 4.14.30; second, 4.25.40; finish, 4.47.30.

The race was twice around a triangular course, the buoys were passed to port. The lengths of the several legs of the triangle, were as follows: First leg, 11-8 miles, second 11-4 miles, third, 11-2 miles, 37-8 miles around the triangle, making a total of 73-4 miles for the race. The wind was about due east, and blew about twelve miles an hour at the start, dying away to about 8 miles at finish.

Outlaw actual time of sailing twice around course, 1h. 3m. 39sec.

Baden-Powell, actual time, twice around, 1h. 31m. 20 sec.

The first leg was a broad reach, the second before the wind, third a beat to windward. The B. P. seemed to have the best of it in windward work and the Outlaw slightly better at reaching. The boats appear to be very evenly matched, as the Outlaw won by only the narrow margin of 41 seconds.

E. T. JONES, Chatham.
A. E. JONES, Chatham.
THOS. A. REID, Saginaw

Thus do the judges officially describe the magnificent yacht race of yesterday in which the two fine boats---the Outlaw and Baden-Powell---with their capable crews battled for supremacy on the waters of Erieau. All morning the coming contest was the only topic on conversation. The decision of Captain Fellows not to race the Enterprise narrowed the battle down to the seasoned old warrior of the Eau waters and the promising and speedy more recent arrival. Opinion appeared to be evenly divided and the result showed that there was really very little to pick upon.

The course was marked out early. The first leg was n. by n. w. 10 degrees west, the second leg w. by s. w. 10 degrees south; and the third leg, e. by s. e. 20 degrees south. The wind at the start was blowing about 12 miles an hour.

Shortly before three o'clock the two yachts sailed slowly to the starting point. They were both greeted enthusiastically. Skipper Beaton sat in the stern of the Outlaw, and with him were S. B. Arnold, Chas. Dunn, George Merritt, J. C. Kerr, and W. Reid. At the tiller of the Baden-Powell was Skipper Phillimore and the crew were W. E. Campbell, Arch Park, Ed. R. Smith, W. H. Brackin and H. S. Northwood.

The judges were E. T. Jones, and A. E. Jones, Chatham, and Thomas A. Reid, of Saginaw, Michigan.

At the final gun the Outlaw got away first and immediately set top sails both reaching and going before the wind. The Baden-Powell followed briskly a few seconds later and used a large reaching jib. The B. P. did not use such canvas.

At the second buoy the B. P. set her balloon jib going before the wind, and the distance between the boats diminished.

Outlaw took in topsails and B. P. took in the balloon jib for windward work. It was a beat to windward for the home buoy.

The course was a most exciting one. The B. P. made every effort to catch the fleeing Outlaw, and as close was she that spectators at times believed that the Baden-Powell and the Outlaw had attained a lurch and. Skipper Beaton, however, succeeded in retaining his brief lead and went over the line 41 seconds to the good. Both yachts were given a rousing reception at the conclusion of the contest to the Planet. Skipper Beaton said the crew of the Outlaw never doubted the result.

"What did surprise us, though," he added, "was the splendid showing of Baden-Powell and the close rub she gave us. She was well sailed and has nothing to be ashamed of in the result. Our victory was well and cleanly won."

Skipper Phillimore takes the result philosophically and is in no way discouraged.

"We were beaten fairly and squarely," he told The Planet, "and we have no excuses to offer. It was a good clean race throughout and the Outlaw earned her victory. But we of the Baden-Powell don't begin to think that she could do it every time and we hope to have another brush some day."

The Planet interviewed the judges and they all were of the opinion: upon yesterday's showing, that there was little choice between the boats. "I wouldn't bet a cent on another race," said one of them, "until, at least, I saw how the wind was. I believe a heavy wind would assist the Outlaw."

TACKS TAKEN.
Archie Park says he thinks he'll sail a few more races before putting up that $50.

Abie Seaman George B. of the Outlaw, says the victory of that boat was due to the intrinsic "Merritt" in her.

The presence of the genial Charles on the Outlaw affords him ample opportunity to explain how it was "Dunn."

The crew of the Outlaw indignantly deny that it was the massive proportions of Arnold that shut off all the breeze.

Beaton to Merritt---I say there. I'll trade you the Winona for the Outlaw. What say you?
Merritt to Beaton---Nit. Not on your life.

Mrs. Kerr explains that Jack's appetite is very erratic on racing days. "He couldn't eat anything at dinner," the lady explained, "while at tea he couldn't leave anything."

Now if Phillimore had given his boat a coat of that famous lubricating oil the battle would have been won. W. R. must remember it's neglecting the small things that does the damage.

The mainmast of the B. P. is said to be tender and contain a decayed spot near the jaws of the gaff. Some were afraid it would break, but E. R. Smith took out one of his accident policies. "If you take one of those risks," says Ed., "nothing will ever happen."

Now, if Will Campbell had only brought along that fanning mill he promised to have on deck, there would have been a different result when the wind fell. The crew of the B. P. blame their defeat on his neglect in this particular.

MONDAY'S RACES.
On Monday, Civic Holiday, the yacht races at Erieau will commence at 1 p. m. sharp. They are:--

First race, for yachts 30 feet and over, twice around a triangular course. First prize, handsome flag.

Second race---for yachts of 18 foot class, twice round triangular course. First and second prizes, two flags.

Third Race---for yachts under 18 feet over all, once around triangular course. First and second prizes, two flags.

All of the above prizes are donated by the L. R. & D. R. R.

All yachtsmen are requested to meet at the slip dock at 12.30 sharp, to select judges and make final arrangements.

HE'LL SETTLE

If the Collector Will Only Call on A. I. McCall all Cos's will be Avoided.

A. I. McCall, Chatham's popular druggist, was at the Eau yesterday, and it is rumored he caught a small bass. Mr. McCall, however, positively refuses to say whether he did or not.

Some joke-loving friend caught on to the story and thought he would have a laugh at A. I.'s expense. He therefore procured one of Dr. E. Collins' Collecting agency blanks and filled it out thus:

NOTICE.
Chatham, August 9, '01.

A. I. McCall, Esq.,
Dear Sir---In looking over our books, we find that we have an overdue account against you amounting to $58.00 for bass (pink eyes) and as we have a chance to sell this to the O. E. Collins Collecting Agency, of Toronto, and do not wish to do so, please call and settle on or before the 12th or, we shall be obliged to sell them.

Yours truly,
CARETAKER OF EAU.

2405 Chinnery.

Mr. McCall received this letter out of the postoffice yesterday and as he is anxious to avoid any litigation in the matter he says he would be greatly obliged if Chinnery would call and receive his payment.

The steel framework of the McKinnon Dash Company's building at St. Catharines collapsed, and two men employed on the building, Messrs. Cunningham and Armstrong, were very severely injured.

OH, THOSE 'BURG GIRLS.

Wallaceburg Herald-Record.
A young man of Chatham says that when a Wallaceburg girl pins a flower on a young man's coat she always lifts her chin up and looks at it sideways, and "he fellow who doesn't tumble 'hen had better stay in doors when a funeral is passing for fear of being run over by the hearse."

THE BEAVER AND EAGLE

Invader and Cadillac Commence the Great International Cup Race.

The First Struggle to-day--Both Yachts in Splendid Trim.

Chicago, Ill., August 9.--Everything is in readiness for the cup races. The last halyard has been rove; the last coil of pot lead has been used; the last block has been carefully oiled, and to-night the crews of the two flyers that to-morrow begin the contest for supremacy are resting before the fray.

Americans are confident and say there is little doubt that the Cadillac will save the cup, and many of the visiting Canadian yachtsmen evidently believe it, for while they are willing to wager their money on the Invader they want to put it up at the rate of 2 to 5--a suggestion which but few Cadillac admirers have accepted. American enthusiasts are willing to bet 2 to 1 on the Detroit boat, but the Canadians are holding out for greater odds and there have been but few large bets made to-night. One Chicago yachtsman wagered $500 to $250 that the Cadillac would win, a number of Toronto yachtsmen taking the small end of the bet. The city is entertaining more yachtsmen than ever attended a fresh water race before. Two or three hundred Canadians are here to root for their boat and the Yankee yachtsmen far outnumber them.

At the Chicago Athletic Club there has not been a room vacant for three days and one or two of the large hotels report the same condition.

CANADIANS HAVE A GOOD CREW.

Commodore Amelia Jarvis, the man to whom the Canadians look to win the cup, is confident that he will win, apparently, in spite of the wonderful showing of the Detroit boat. "You have a splendid boat in the Cadillac," he said to the Free Press representative to-night, "but there was just the slightest smile playing about the corners of his mouth as he added, 'I have a very fine crew.'"

This is where the Canadians have their one chance of victory. For the Cadillac's crew, good as it is, is sadly in need of drill. At 10 o'clock to-night Capt. Thompson could not name his crew and they have never been together in the boat, and one of them has never sailed on her. The Canadians have been sailing every day for more than three weeks, and Commodore Jarvis says he has the finest crew that ever stepped into a Canadian cup racer. The crew of the Invader were in bed at 9.30 to-night. Both crews had a hard day's work today. The racers were docked in a floating drydock late last night and at dawn this morning the Detroit members of the Cadillac crew went to work on their boat, while a number of shipbuilders and finishers took charge of the Invader.

CADILLACS HULL SANDPAPERED.
Capt. Arthur Pettie, Sidney Russell and Frank Senter spent the entire day in sandpapering the hull, and after this had been done put on several coats of put lead so that to-night her underbody looked like a newly polished cook stove. The Chicago members of the crew spent the day on the club house veranda.

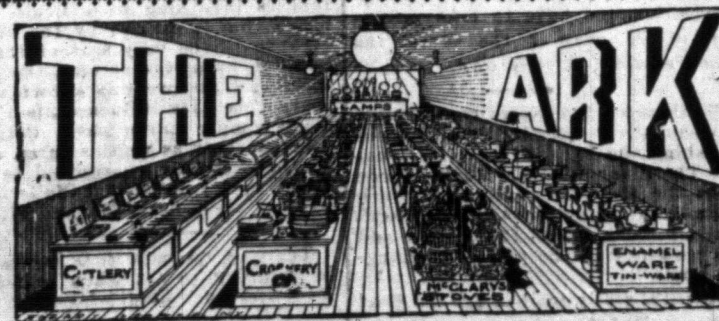

The Invader was different. In spite of the work done the hull was uneven, and in many places very rough. When the boats were exposed to view to-day they presented a strange contrast. The Cadillac looked short, stocky and heavy; while the long, slender, closely cutaway body of the challenger made the contrast very noticeable. The Invader presented much the prettier picture. She looked in the dock as though she could sail in circles around the Detroit boat, but people who go much on looks will probably be greatly disappointed.

CHALLENGER IS WEAK.

The challenger is weak, lamentably weak, is the verdict of Americans. As stated in the despatches last week she is very tender. When the dock was pumped out to-day several long bronze plates extending on each side of the hull up for about eight inches were exposed. They had been screwed on to strengthen the lower construction and from the fact that three or four long strips extend down on the fin it looks very much as though she had more lead there than her keel can hold. The fin is not put on well. The blocks to which it is fastened don't fit together smoothly and in many parts of the hull this same thing is apparent.

The boats were towed to their moorings at 7 o'clock to-night with

SATURDAY, AUGUST 11.

"THE OUTLAW"

The Planet heartily congratulates Commodore Chas. E. Beeson and the able crew of the good yacht Outlaw on the splendid victory of their boat at the Eau saturday. She is a fine little craft and earned her laurels in a clean and capable contest.

It is more to her credit that she met a foe more worthy of her skill, the sturdy youngster, the Baden-Powell, which also put up a magnificent race. Commodore W. R. Packer and his assistants have taught to mourn in the following manner. It was a fine keen contest, and both boats deserve congratulations.

CHATHAM'S TURN NEXT.

The Old Boys' Reunion at London is over. It was a huge success. Everyone knew that it would be. Old Boys' Reunions always are.

Hundreds of old boys and girls again visited their Forest City home. They were royally entertained. The visit did them good. None of them regret it.

And London reaped the benefit. They came there in hundreds. They spent their money freely at their old home. And they went away again to advertise it north, south, east and west with enthusiasm and zeal. Who shall place a monetary estimate on that advertisement?

London's experience should be an object lesson to Chatham. It should be our turn next. The recent proposal to hold a reunion here was abandoned owing to lack of time. Would it not be well to start right now a diligent, systematic preparation for the big and successful Old Home Reunion that the Maple City must have?

AFTERNOON REFLECTIONS.

Have you taken a stroll over to Tecumseh Park any of those bright summer afternoons? If you have you have seen the members of the Cricket Club preparing themselves by practice for their approaching tour.

But you have seen other things in connection therewith.

You have seen some players visit the crease, take their innings and depart. You have seen others select a comfortable bench and view the doings. You have seen many practice bowling and fielding. You have seen a few distributing advice. Yes, you have seen all this—and more.

You have seen one man carry out the nets, arrange and erect them. You have seen him carefully watering the green. You have seen him mowing the grass. You have seen him rolling the crease.

And the play of his team-mates continues meanwhile.

You have seen him devote a few moments to a young player. You have heard his kindly counsel to the lad. You have watched him as he takes the bat and points out the various true strokes. You were interested when he bowled the youngster a few trial balls.

And his team-mates are engrossed which also builds up the system that has suffered from them.

The players are nearly through practice now.

And we are told that the veteran cricketer is eccentric—some even call him a "crank."

It is the kind of eccentricity the world needs much of—and the calibre of "cranks" we can't do without.

And what Mr. W. B. Wells has done for cricket and the cricket club, we can all assist in doing for our young city. It's not alone to build up our own business interests, to look after our own selves and small circle, to secure our own batting and bowling. All these are good, but they are not enough.

We must have a strong foundation on which to build our personal and business success. We must have a loyal community and a definite, active interest in its upbuilding. We must make Chatham great, and the groundwork of the greatness of its merchants, manufacturers and citizens is assured.

Or—in other words—we must have the grass mown, the crease rolled and the pitch true ere we can successfully make runs.

THE STEEL STRIKE.

It is stated that up to date the steel strike in the States has entailed a loss of over five million dollars in the companies and nearly four millions to the men, and this is only the beginning of the trouble.

Up to the present many thousands men were out but President Shaffer has issued an order that to-day there is to be a general stoppage, and this will involve many thousands more.

It is needless to dwell on the far-reaching effect of such a outlook. The stupendous figures speak for themselves and the results cannot fail to be disastrous to both sides.

The firms are said to have a total war fund of $75,000,000, while the labor leaders also possess large resources.

The fact of the steel magnates combining in one huge trust was almost sure to result sooner or later in just such a clash with labor. When men see another set of men getting together for mutual advantage and profit it is only reasonable to assume that they also will get together for the purpose of presenting a solid front. That's human nature.

In the present instance Shaffer and his associates are not making a demand for higher rates of pay or for shorter hours—both as they at present exist seem to be satisfactory. They do not either object to the non-union plants possessed by the steel magnates, but what they do claim is that there should be the same wage rate in the non-union as in the union mills. The idea is of course to prevent the trust from finding it more profitable to run the non-union plants and the "Amalgamated association" of the Old Boys' Reunion at London is over. It was a huge success. Everyone knew that it would be. Old Boys' Reunions always are.

CURES CREATE

CONFIDENCE

That is Why Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills Have Won the Confidence of the People of this Continent—Read These Letters.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have the largest sale in Canada of any treatment recommended for diseases of the kidneys. They have won the confidence of the people by actually curing the ailments for which they are intended, and are known in nearly every home in the land. Scores of hundreds of people could write just such letters as these that follow:

Mr. James Clark, Concession, Prince Edward County, states: "Eleven years ago I was taken with pains in my back, settling in my hips and extending up my spine. The pain was very severe at times almost unendurable, and many days I was not able to do an hour's work. My weight was reduced from 190 to 160 pounds, and, though I had consulted many first-class physicians and tried several advertised medicines, I could get no relief."

"At this time my father-in-law told me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and said he knew they would cure me. I secured one box, and great was my surprise when I began to feel better after using only one box. I continued their use until I had taken about four boxes, which made me a sound man, and I also regained my usual weight, 190 pounds. I cannot say too much in favor of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which have done so much for me. I have recommended them to a number of my friends and have never met with one case where they did not meet with good success. My daughter, Mrs. Charles Phillips, has also been cured of a severe stomach trouble by the use of these pills."

Mr. Geo. Cummings, Barrie, Ont., one of the best-known engineers on the G. T. R., and whose run is between Toronto and Barrie, writes: "For years I suffered from kidney disease brought on by railroad life. The doctors called it 'railroad kidney,' but could give me no permanent relief. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, saying they had cured him. A few boxes of this grand medicine completely cured me, putting an end to the dreadful pains in the back and greatly strengthening the kidneys. I am a well man to-day, thanks to Dr. Chase."

There is no uncertainty, no experimenting about taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They have cured such a variety of cases, and have been so thoroughly tested during the past quarter of a century, that you can be absolutely sure of being benefited by their use. If you have been disappointed with other remedies you will all the more appreciate the gentle action of these pills. For years I suffered from kidney disease brought on by railroad life. The doctors called it 'railroad kidney,' but could give me no permanent relief. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, saying they had cured him. A few boxes of this grand medicine completely cured me, putting an end to the dreadful pains in the back and greatly strengthening the kidneys. I am a well man to-day, thanks to Dr. Chase."

Ambition has prevented many a man from making a success of small things.

The English "Society for the Prevention of Consumption," presided over by the Prince of Wales, was addressed by Sir William Broadbent, who stated that it was definitely known that every case of consumption began with a germ communicated from some other case. There is no such thing as inherited consumption. There may be local weakness which tends to consumption, but the germ has absolutely to be planted in that weak spot before consumption can ensue. This ought to comfort thousands of people who have "weak chests" or "coughs." They are not foredoomed victims of this dread disease. All that is needed to bid absolute defiance to this deadly scourge, is to be able to strengthen the weak lungs, and build up a strong body. The answer to this need is found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It so purifies the blood and increases the blood supply, that disease is thrown out to perfect health, which defies germs of every kind. People, given up by doctors, emaciated, bleeding of the lungs, with obstinate lingering coughs, are being cured every day by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery." It is a strictly temperance medicine containing no alcohol, whiskey or other intoxicant.

The men who succeed are those who arrive promptly on time.

The Asthmatic's Agony.

Wakeful nights, suffocating sensations, difficult breathing. Who can describe it? This disease, partly congestive, partly the result of microbe irritation, is no longer treated by nauseous, stomach destroying drugs, but by Catarrhoxone, that destroys the microbe, relieves congestion and relaxes the nervous irritability that renders breathing so difficult. The great discovery is known as Catarrhoxone. Its influence upon Asthma is simply marvellous. Catarrhoxone prevents as well as cures, and is the only remedy guaranteed to cure. Your money back if it fails. Two sizes at all dealers, 25c. and 50c.

GLORIES OF SOLOMON

Dr. Talmage Depicts Eventful Scenes of His Reign.

WISDOM OF THE GREAT RULER

The Talented Preacher Corrects Some of the False Notions about Religion and Represents It as Being Joy-Inspiring Instead of Dolorous—More Sweet Spices Should be Put Into Our Religion.

Washington, Aug. 4.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage corrects some of the false notions about religion and represents it as being joy-inspiring instead of dolorous. He says: "The Chronicles ix. 9. 'Of spices great abundance; neither was there any such spice as the queen of Sheba gave King Solomon.' Out there, glittering in the sun? Have you not heard? It is the house of the forest of Lebanon. King Solomon has just taken to it his bride, the princess of Egypt. You see the pillars of the portico and a great tower, adorned with 1,000 shields of gold hung on the outside of the tower—500 of the shields of gold manufactured at Solomon's order, 500 were captured by David, his father, in battle. See how they play in the noonday sun!"

Solomon goes up the ivory stairs of his throne between 12 lions in statuary and sits down on the back of the golden bull, the head of the huge beast turned toward the people. The family and the attendants of the king are so many that the catenars of the palace have to provide every day 100 sheep and 13 oxen. I hear the stamping and pawing of 4,000 fine horses in the royal stables. There were important officials who had charge of the work of gathering the straw and the barley for these horses. King Solomon was an early riser, tradition says, and used to take a ride out at daybreak, and when, in his white apparel, behind the swiftest horses of all the realm and followed by mounted archers in purple, as the cavalcade dashed through the streets of Jerusalem, I suppose it was something worth getting up at 5 o'clock in the morning to look at.

Solomon was not like some of the kings of the present day—crowned inebriety. All the splendors of his palace and retinue were eclipsed by his intellectual power. Why, he seemed to know everything. He was the first great naturalist the world ever saw. Peacocks from India stalked the basaltic walks, and apes chattered in the trees, and deer stalked the parks, and there were aquariums with foreign fish and aviaries with foreign birds, and tradition says these birds were well tamed and Solomon might walk clear across the city under the shadow of their wings as they hovered and flitted about him.

More than this. He had a great reputation for the conundrums and riddles that he made and guessed. He and King Hiram, his neighbor, used to sit by the hour and ask riddles, each one trying to guess the other's. The Solomon navy visited all the world, and the sailors, of course, talked about the wealth of their king and about the riddles and enigmas that he made and solved, and the news spread until Queen Balkis, away off south, heard of it and sent messengers with a few riddles that she would like to have Solomon solve and a few puzzles that she would like to have him find out. She sent, among other things, to King Solomon a diamond with a hole so small that a needle could not pierce it; asking him to thread that diamond, and Solomon took a worm and put it at the opening in the diamond, and the worm crawled through, leaving the thread in the diamond. That he made and sent a goblet to Solomon asking him to fill it with water that did not pour from the sky and that did not rush out from the earth, and immediately Solomon put a slave on the back of a swift horse and galloped him around and around the park until the horse was nearly exhausted, and from the perspiration of the horse the goblet was filled. She also sent to King Solomon 500 boys in girls' dress and 500 girls in boys' dress, wondering if he would be acute enough to find out the deception. Immediately when Solomon saw them wash their faces, knew from the way they applied the water that it was all a cheat.

Queen Balkis was so pleased with the acuteness of Solomon that she said, "I'll just go and see him for myself." Yonder it comes—the cavalcade—horses and dromedaries, chariots and charioteers, jingling harness and clattering hoofs and blazing shields and flying ensigns and clapping cymbals. The place is saturated with perfume. She brings cinnamon and saffron and calamus and frankincense and all manner of sweet spices. As the retinue sweeps through the gate, the armed guard inhales the aroma. "Halt!" cry the charioteers as the wheels grind the gravel in front of the pillared portico of the king. Queen Balkis alights in an atmosphere bewitched with perfume. As the dromedaries are driven up to the king's storehouses, and the bundles of camphor are unloaded, and the sacks of cinnamon and the boxes of spices are opened, the purveyors of the palace discover what my text announces, "Of spices, great abundance; neither was there any such spice as the queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon."

Well, my friends, you know that all theologians agree in making Solomon a type of Christ and in making the queen of Sheba a type of every truth seeker, and I will take the responsibility of saying that all the spikenard and cassia and frankincense which the queen of Sheba brought to King Solomon are mighty suggestive of the sweet spices of our holy religion. Christianity is a collection of sharp technical-doesn't come by accident. A fertile soil and careful cultivation are necessary to produce the towering stems and heavy ears.

Yet the farmer who understands that he can't have a healthy corn crop without feeding and weeding, seems to think that he can have a healthy body without either care or culture. But the body is built up just as the corn is, by the assimilation of the several chemical elements on which vitality depends. And what weeds are to the corn, diseases of the stomach and nutritive systems are to the body; they divert the necessary food supply from the proper channels, and the body becomes lean, sickly and ill-nourished.

The proper digestion and assimilation of food is a primary essential of health. By healing diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery increases the digestive and assimilative powers, stimulates the action of the blood-making glands, and sends to every organ of the body the rich red corpuscles, blood on which physical vigor and vitality depend.

I took two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for stomach trouble," writes Charles C. Egan, Esq., of Taylorsville, London Co., Va. "It did me so much good that I didn't take any more. I am so well pleased with it that I want to thank you for your kind information. I tried a whole lot of things before I wrote to you. There was a gentleman told me life there, how he had cured his wife. I thought I would try it. I did for I don't know how long. I would have done it if it had not been for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

ties and angular facts and chronological tables and dry statistics. Our religion is compared to frankincense, and to cassia, but never to nightshade. It is a bundle of myrrh. It is a dash of holy light. It is a sparkle of cool fountains. It is an opening of opaline gates. It is a collection of spices. Would God that we were as wise in taking spices to our Divine King as Queen Balkis was in taking the spices to the earthly Solomon.

The fact is that the duties and cares of this life, coming to us from time to time, are stupid often and insane and intolerable. Here are men who have been battering, climbing, pondering, hammering, for 20 years, 40 years, 50 years. One great long drudgery has their life been, their faces anxious, their feelings ennumbed, their days monotonous. What is necessary to brighten up that man's life and to sweeten that acid disposition and to put sparkle into the man's spirit? The spicing of our holy religion. Why, if between the losses and the dashes of the gleam of an eternal gain, if between the betrayals of life there came the gleam of the undying friendship of Christ, if in dull times in business we found ministers of spirits trying to do for us in our office and store and shop, every day life instead of being a stupid monotone would be a glorious inspiration, pendulating between calm satisfaction and high rapture.

How any woman keeps house without the religion of Christ to help her is a mystery to me. To have to spend the greater part of one's life, as many women do, in planning for the meals and stitching garments that will soon be rent again and deploring breakages and supervising tardy subordinates and driving off dust that soon again will settle and doing the same thing day in and day out and year in and year out until the hair silvers and the back stoops and the spectacles crawl to the eyes and the grave breaks open under the thin sole of the shoe—oh, it is a long monotony! But when Christ comes to the drawing room and comes to the kitchen and comes to the nursery and comes to the dressing, then how cheery become all womanly duties! She is never alone now. Martha gets through fretting and joins Mary at the feet of Jesus. All day long Deborah is happy because she can help Lapidoth, Hannah because she can make a coat for young Samuel, Miriam because she can watch her infant brother, Rachel because she can help her father water the stock, the widow of Sarepta because she cruse of oil is being replenished. U woman, having in your pantry a nest of boxes containing all kinds of condiments, why have you not tried in your heart and life the spicing of our holy religion? Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things, but one thing is needful, and Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her."

I have to say also that we need to put more spice and enlivenment in our religious teaching, whether it be in the prayer meeting or in the Sunday school or in the church. We ministers need more fresh air and sunshine in our lungs and our heart and our head. Do you wonder that the world is so far from being converted when you find so little vivacity in the pulpit and in the pew? We want, like the Lord, to plant in our sermons and exhortations more lilies of the field. We want fewer rhetorical elaborations and fewer Alexandrian words, when we talk about shadows we do not want to say adumbration, and when we mean queerness we do not want to talk about idiosyncrasies, or if a stitch in the back we do not want to talk about lumbago; but, in the plain vernacular of the great masses, preach that gospel which proposes to make all men happy, honest, victorious and free. In other words, we want a more substantial and less glib. Let this be so in all the different departments of work to which the Lord calls us. Let us be plain. Let us be earnest. Let us be common-sensical. When we talk to the people in a vernacular, they can understand, they will be very glad to come and receive the truth we present. Would to God that Queen Balkis would drive her spice laden dromedaries into all the sermons and prayer meeting exhortations!

More than that, we want more life and spice in our Christian work. The poor do not want so much to be groaned over as sung to. With the bread and medicines and garments you give them let there be an accompaniment of smiles and brisk encouragement. Do not stand and talk to them about the wretchedness of their abode, and the hunger of their looks, and the hardness of their lot. Ah, they know it better than you can tell them. Let us speak the bright side of the thing, if there be any bright side. Tell them that good times will come. Tell them that for the children of God there is immortal rest. One of us to come into their house with a nose elevated in disgust, as much as to say: "I don't see how you live here in this neighborhood. It actually makes me sick. There is that bundle. Take it, you poor, miserable wretch, and go to the most of it." Another way is to go into the abode of the poor in a manner which seems to say: "The blessed Lord sent me. He was poor himself. It is not me for the good. I am going to try to do you than it is for the good that you can do me." Coming in that spirit, the gift will be as aromatic as the spikenard of Christ, and the poor will be as fragrant with the spice.

Now, I want to impress you with the fact that religion is sweetness and perfume and spikenard and salutariness and health and happiness and frankincense and all sweet spices together. "Oh, you say," I have not looked at it as such, thought it was a nuisance. It had for me a repulsion. I held it back as I did. If I were a malodorous man, I have said if I have any religion at all I want to have just as little of it as possible to get through with. Oh, what a mistake you have made, my brothers! The religion that is a present and everlasting redemption. It counteracts all trouble. Just put it on the stand beside the pillow of sickness. It catches in the curtains and perfumes the air. It sweetens the cup of bitter medicine and throws a glow on the gloom of the turned lattice. It is a balm for the aching side and a soft bandage for the tongue stung with pain.

Why did you look so sad this morning when you came in? Alas, for the loneliness and the heartbreak and the load that is never lifted from your soul. Some of you are about feeling like Macaulay when he wrote, "If I had another month of such days as I have been spending, I would be impatient to get down into my little, narrow crib in the ground, like a weary factory child." And there have been times in your life when you wished you could get out of this life. You have said, "Oh, how sweet to my lips would be the dust of the valley!" and wished you could pull over you in your last slumber the coverlet of green grass and daisies. You have said, "Oh, how beautifully quiet it must be in the tomb! I wish I was there."

I see all around about me widowhood and orphanage and childlessness; sadness, disappointment, perplexity. If I could ask all those in my audience who have felt no sorrow and been buffeted by no disappointment—if I could ask all such to rise, how many would rise? Not one. A widowed mother, with her little child, went west, hoping to get better wages there, and she was taken sick and died. The overseer of the poor got her body and put it in a box and put it in a wagon and set it down the street toward the cemetery at full trot. The little child—the only child—ran after it through the streets bawling, crying: "Bring me back my mother! And it was said that as the people looked on and saw her crying after that which lay in the box in the wagon, all she loved on earth—it was the whole village—in tears. And that is what a great many of you are doing—chasing the dead. Dear Lord, is there no appeasement for all this sorrow that I see about me? Yes; the thought of resurrection and reunion far beyond the scene of struggle and tears. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them nor any heat, for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

Some one could not understand why an old German Christian scholar used to be always so calm and happy and hopeful when he had so many trials and sicknesses and ailments. A man secreted himself in the house. He said: "I mean to watch this old scholar and Christian." And he saw the old Christian man go to his room and sit down on the chair beside the stand and open the Bible and begin to read. He read on and on, chapter after chapter, hour after hour, until his face was all aglow with the tidings from heaven, and when the clock struck 12 he arose and shut his Bible and said: "Blessed Lord, we are on the same old terms yet. Good night. Good night." Oh, you sin parched and you trouble pounded, here is comfort, here is satisfaction! Will you come and get it? I cannot tell you what the Lord offers you hereafter so well as I can tell you what he offers you now. It doth not yet appear what we shall be.

Have you read of the Taj Mahal, in India, in some respects the most majestic building on earth? Twenty thousand men are 20 years in building it. It cost about $16,000,000. The walls are of marble inlaid with carnelian from Bagdad and turquoise from Tibet and jasper from the Punjab and amethyst from Persia and all manner of precious stones. A traveler said that it seemed to him like the shining of the enchanted castle of burnished silver. The walls are 245 feet high, and from the top of these springs a dome 30 more feet high, that dome containing the most wonderful echo the world has ever known, so that ever and anon travelers standing below with flutes and drums and harps are testing that echo, and the sounds from below strike up, and then come down, as it were, the voices of angels all around about the building. There is around it a garden of tamarind and banyan and palm and all the floral glories of the ransacked earth. But that is only a tomb of a dead emperor, and it is tame compared with the glories which God has builded for your living and immortal spirit.

Oh, home of the blessed! Foundations of gold! Arches of victory! Capstones of praise! And a dome in which there are echoing and their stolidity of the halleluiahs of the ages! And around about that mansion is a garden, the garden of God, and all the springing fountains are the bottled tears of the church in its wilderness and all the crimson of the flowers is the deep hue that was caught up from the carnage of earthly martyrdoms and the fragrance is the prayer of all the saints and the aroma puts into utter forgetfulness the cassia and the spikenard and the frankincense and the world-renowned spices which Queen Balkis of Assyria flung at the feet of King Solomon.

When shall these eyes thy heaven built walls

And bow thy knees behold, Thy bulwarks, with salvation strong, And streets of shining gold?

The Purse Hand Sought.

Griggs—Women are funny things. Wonder why a woman, instead of putting her purse in her pocket, and et, almost invariably carries it in her hand? Griggs—Perhaps she thinks that some man may come along and seek that hand in marriage.

It is very well known that the influenza is not an exclusively modern complaint, but I am not sure whether a curious reference to it by Bowen, the continuator of Fordun's chronicle, has been noted. Writing of the year 1420 he says that among those who died in Scotland that year were Sir Henry St. Clair, Earl of Orkney, Sir James Douglas of Dalkeith, Sir William de Abernethy, Sir William de St. Clair, Sir William Cockburn and many others, all by "that infirmity whereby not only great men, but innumerable quantity of the commonalty, perished, which was vulgarly termed the Quhele (the Quhele a vulgarism for quagmire) (Bowen, x. 22). Now, "quhele" in Scottish texts usually represents the sound of "wh" (properly aspirated). Therefore it seems that in the fifteenth century the influenza was known as "the whew." Just as it is known in the twentieth century as "the flu."

I have refrained from quoting at length Bowen's explanation of the cause of the epidemic, but there seems little doubt that the disease was identical with that with which we are so grievously familiar.

Barometric Bee.

Whoever observes these interesting insects finds it easy enough to foretell exactly the kind of weather to be expected. At least this is the opinion of many raisers of bees.

Generally the bee stays at home when rain is in the air. When the sky is simply dark and cloudy, these busy workers do not leave their dwelling at once. A few go out first, as though they had sent out messengers to study the state of the atmosphere. The greater number remain on observation until the clouds begin to dissipate, and it is only then that the battalions entire rush out in search of their nectar. A bee never goes out in a fog, because it is well aware that dampness and cold are two fearsome, redoubtable enemies. We do not mean, however, that the bee is a meteorologist in the absolute sense of the word. Its cleverness consists in never being taken unawares, for it possesses untiring vigilance. Often one may observe the sudden entrance of bees into the hive when a dense cloud hides the sun and even though the rain is not in evidence, Tired eyes, overworked eyes, are unmistakable. You are constantly reminded that everything isn't as it should be.

Your head aches, your eyes burn and there is a dull pain behind them. Reading and sewing are decidedly unpleasant, and any work that calls for unusual eye strain you would sooner pass by.

Three results from this week's advertising in The Planet, were as follows: On Wednesday, a silver watch that had been lost was returned to its owner, Thursday, a pocket book containing a sum of money, was returned to the owner by E. A. Mount, and to-day a young lady recovered her pocket-book containing a considerable sum of money. Everybody reads The Planet.

Henry Vines, of Tilbury Township, was in the city yesterday with a load of grain for the Canada Flour Mills Co. In conversation with Mr. Vines he said that the bean crop in Tilbury was in excellent condition, far unlike that of Dover. The farmers there were favored with a couple of good rains, which the early beans are a far better crop than the later ones.

AN UP-TO-DATE MERCHANT.

We would especially draw the attention of our readers to the "ad." of G. J. Peace, which is generally found on page No. 1 of The Planet, but which appears in this issue on page 5. Mr. Peace is at present holding a great August sale of shoes and is giving some good snap bargains. He would well pay any intending purchaser to call and see what Mr. Peace has to offer before buying. Mr. Peace is bound to be on the top of the latest in shoe city shoe merchandise, and leaves this afternoon for eastern points to purchase some distinctly new lines for his fall trade.

ABUSED HORSES

Deputy Humane Officer McGregor has Several Cases on Hand.

Deputy Humane Officer McGregor is on the alert these days for farmers who are mistreating their horses. He has a number of cases now on hand and has warned several offenders.

One man named John Richardson, who lives in the Chatham Township, brought a sick horse into town the other day and left it standing in front of one of the stores on King street. The suffering animal was soon noticed by the wide-awake officer, and taken in charge. Dr. Bogart, vet., examined the horse and found that it was very lame on its hind quarters.

The owner was warned that the horse was not to be worked and it was in better condition. Dr. Bogart would never again be fit for use. If something is not done in the matter Mr. Richardson will be prosecuted.

everything in readiness for to-morrow's race, which begins at 11 o'clock. The weather looks equally to-night and a falling barometer is not reassuring. However, it is hoped that the storm will break before the race starts, in which case a fresh southwest wind is predicted.

Commodore Jarvis' crew will be composed of Fred Turner, Vincent Hughes, James McMurray, Charles Lowes, Corbinians, and William Fisher, professional.

Capt. Thompson late to-night said he did not know who would sail on the Cadillac. "The crew will be selected from the following:—Harry Higginbotham, Ralph Hoagland, Arthur Pettie, George Wilds, Frank Senter, Thomas Chivers, Sidney Russell and myself. I expect Mr. Shaw and he will probably pick them out," he said.

Visitors are arriving on every train to-night and the prospect is that there will be a big turnout on the great boat Indians to-morrow.

THE START.

(Special to The Planet.) Chicago, Aug. 10.—The first of a series of five races for the international yachting championship of the great lakes is being sailed off Chicago by the Royal Canadian Yacht club's Invader and the Detroit Boat club's Cadillac.

The day broke fine and clear with a light breeze from the west, which gradually changed to northwest and freshened. At an early hour the unusual activity in the large fleet of sailing and power craft in the harbor betokened something out of the ordinary was coming off, and as the sun mounted higher the stir increased. The crews of the rival yachts put in an early appearance and every shroud, halyard and sheet, each block, turnbuckle and stay was closely inspected. Apparently everything was found satisfactory. Capt. Jarvis had his men hoist Invader's racing canvas before 8 o'clock and after critically regarding the "set" of each sail ordered it hoisted again.

Commander Davis had steam up on the revenue cutter Morrill, having received orders from Washington to patrol the course and keep a wide berth for the races. Commodore Geo. Warrington's steam yacht, Thistle, which will serve as judges' boat, was the next to make ready. Scotch steam launches and dinghies were plying to and fro between the landings of the Chicago and Columbia Yacht clubs and the fleet in the harbor, while numerous small passenger steamers lay along the piers, taking on crowds of sightseers to follow the race. Shortly after ten o'clock the big setamer, India, which is the Chicago Yacht Club's guest boat, came down the river into the harbor and lay to at the club's private landing, where over a thousand passengers poured on board.

At 10.30 the first gun was fired from the judges' boat, which then weighed anchor and steamed out of the yacht harbor to the starting buoy. Immediately the bustle and activity in the harbor was redoubled, and everywhere one looked craft of all sizes were slipping their moorings and getting under way. The two racing yachts already were out on Lake Michigan standing on end off the starting line and the judges' boat, a quarter of a mile outside the harbor. Each is a 35-footer, jib and mainsail rigged, that being acknowledged the best canvas for racers of this style.

It is rumored that the judges intended to remeasure each yacht's sail area this morning, but finally postponed the remeasurement, both ships agreeing that the result of to-day's race should stand, even if some slight change in canvas should be found necessary.

CADILLAC WINS.

Special to The Planet. Chicago, Ill., 3.30 p.m.—The American boat, Cadillac, has won the first race for the international cup, crossing the line 18 minutes ahead of the Canadian challenger Invader.

A stiff breeze was blowing and the result was never in doubt.

International Bible Lesson for Tomorrow—Gen. 15, 1-18—"God's Promise to Abraham."

Since our last lesson, Abraham with 318 armed herdsmen (cow boys) has rescued Lot and his neighbors from a powerful army by a night attack, rushing their camp, releasing the prisoners and their stock and goods; returning Melchizedek, Priest of God, meets him with refreshments and blesses him, and Abraham gives him one-tenth of the spoil. Naturally, in old age Abraham would be uneasy about his heir. God encourages him, makes with covenant with him and counts Abraham's faith for righteousness, for God makes man righteous through faith alone, while Satan ruins him by mistrust. (Read Romans 4, 3-9 and James 2, 18-21. God justifies man by faith through grace in Christ, men justify each other by their works of obedience and love toward one another.)

CHAPTER I

When President Hemmance of the Burton bank discovered that Martin Castleton, the cashier, had fled, owing the bank $50,000, he immediately called in the aid of the detectives and took every step possible to capture the criminal and a portion at least of the funds. Two weeks passed without bringing the first atom of information of the absconder. President Hemmance, worn under the large strain involved and was on the point of dismissing the detectives, who were probably nursing the job, when an anonymous letter reached him, stating that Castleton, instead of trying to reach Canada or crossing the ocean, had turned inland, gone to New Orleans and, ascending the river to a landing in Mississippi by the name of Southfield, had gone to the small town of Aldine.

He traveled under the name of Jared Cowperthwaite, giving out that he was prospecting through the country with a view of purchasing cotton land for investment. He would probably remain in that section for several weeks, and if prompt steps were taken could readily be captured.

It was foolish to give much credence to an anonymous letter, but our president was so impatient with the dilatoriness of the detectives that he proposed I should start at once for Aldine.

"You are strong, active and expert in the use of a revolver," he said, "while Castleton is none of these. I will attend to the requisition papers and have them forwarded to Governor McClaurin at Jackson, who will see that they are promptly indorsed and awaiting you at Aldine when you reach there. You will start at the earliest possible moment."

The foregoing will explain how it came about that on a dismal rainy day in autumn I left the Mississippi steamer Bonnie Belle at the Southfield landing, being the only passenger who went ashore at that lonely place. I hurried down the plank, value in hand and umbrella lifted. The steamer went chugging up the muddy Mississippi, and I made my way to the dilapidated inn, the only place of entertainment in the village of less than a dozen houses.

Disappointing knowledge awaited me. The town of Aldine, which was my real destination, was 20 miles inland, and a stage traveled each way on alternate days. It was on Monday that I reached Southfield, and the stage had left that forenoon. It would return on Tuesday and make its next trip to Aldine on Wednesday. I had therefore to decide whether to stay at the landing for a couple of days or to seek other means of conveyance. I concluded to leave the question of the stage and made myself as comfortable as I could at the inn, with its half a dozen rough loungers, white and black mostly, engaged in smoking, drinking the stuff that passed under the name of whisky and playing greasy cards.

These men, however, were skilled in reading weather signs, and they assured me that the following day would be clear and cool. Although the roads were bad I had decided to spend the next day in tramping the 20 miles provided the sun showed itself. The work was not formidable, and it was more pleasant than lounging at the old inn that was built a half a century before the war.

The morning was a delightful. In that latitude and at that season one expected hot and oppressive weather, but the sunshine had a tinge of coolness that made the day an ideal one. My slim umbrella valise in hand and my slim umbrella serving as a walking cane I set out for Aldine as soon as my early breakfast was over.

I soon found myself in one of the most lonely and deserted sections of Mississippi. Here and there the white cotton bolls showed at the side of the road, but only now and then could a glimpse be caught of the low flat buildings where the negro quarters near. For the first five or six miles I saw only two persons, and they were colored men, tramping across the fields, who looked curiously at me without speaking.

By this time I began to feel the warmth of the sun and to find my task a harder one than I had expected. The road was washed out in many places, while deep gullies caused me to make hasty detours through the fields. Several of the bridges, too, were so shaky that I crossed them with hesitation and misgiving.

Probably a little more than half of the distance was passed and the sun was high now when I came to a fork in the road, where I paused in doubt whether to turn to the right or left. Each highway seemed to be equally traveled, though but for the action of the storm this might not have been the case.

No one told me anything about this, I muttered, setting down my valise, and I'm blessed if I know which road to take. I can't afford to make a mistake.

The one to the left led through a scrappy patch of woods, while that on my right traversed a more open country. Still there was a measure of learning which led to Aldine, and it is probable that, in accordance with the rule, I should have taken the wrong one had not help appeared at the needed moment.

Through the straggling woods to the left a horseman appeared, coming toward me. As he drew near we scrutinized each other closely. He was of about my age, much better dressed than was usual in that region, and, like every one in the south, was an excellent horseman. I could not help smiling at a noticeable peculiarity. That was his personal resemblance to me. His dark hair, mustache, eyes, nose and contour of the face were so like mine that I am sure I must have attracted his attention the instant.

However, without referring to it, I saluted as he rode up and asked him to direct me to Aldine.

"Follow the road to the right for about nine miles," was his reply. "I have just come from Mapleton, which is five miles behind me."

"Well," I said, mopping my forehead with my handkerchief. "I hope it is better than the one between here and Southfield."

"I am sorry to say it is worse. You have a hard tramp before you."

I looked mournfully up and down each highway.

"There seems to be so little travel in this section that it is useless to expect some one to give me a lift."

"Occasionally we have a wagon going east or west, but it isn't likely you will see any today except the stage which is traveling in the wrong direction. How would you like to ride on horseback?"

He suddenly asked the man, as if a new thought had struck him.

"Nothing could suit me better."

"I'll sell you this animal and outfit cheap," he added. "You can see he is a fine one."

"I noticed that when you first appeared."

"I am in great need of money," said the stranger, "and you can have him for $50."

The price was absurdly small, but the bicycle had not at that time penetrated that part of our Union. Without stopping to think how President Hemmance would view this piece of extravagance on my part I accepted the offer.

"You will have no trouble in selling him for four times that price," remarked the owner, slipping from the saddle. "If it were not that I am hard up, I should not consent to part with him."

In truth I was so afraid of his withdrawing the offer that I quickly completed the sale. The money was paid over, he helped me to vault into the saddle and to fasten my valise and umbrella behind. Then waving me goodbye he turned and walked rapidly up the road toward Mapleton, from which he said he had just ridden.

I was delighted with my bargain. The horse was a blooded animal, with beautiful, tapering limbs, long mane and tail and possessed great speed. He was a dark chestnut, mettled and with a good disposition. Whenever the road permitted, he broke into a swinging canter that was the poetry of motion.

"What a stroke of fortune!" I said to myself. "I am tempted to take him home with me, for there couldn't be a finer saddle horse, but if I sell him I must be for a good deal more than I paid."

A half hour later I met the stage from Aldine. It was a rickety structure and did not contain a passenger. The driver was huddled on the front seat, smoking a clay pipe, and as I turned aside to make room for him his grizzled face lit up, and with a queer, twisted smile, he called:

"Howdy, Hank?"

I laughed in reply, but did not halt, and nothing more passed between us.

A couple of hours later the little town of Aldine was reached. It was a more dismal and woe-begone place than the steamboat landing. There were just seven houses, though to complete the picture I had to include two ramshackle affairs which contained no occupants. I rode up to the hitching post in front of the old tavern, where two men sat, each with long shock hair, grizzled yellow in color and beard of the same hue. Their hats were like inverted cones, and the hair of one showed through the top, while their garments were suggestive of the tumbled tramps of the north. They were sitting cross-legged and smoking corn-cob pipes.

One of them, however, was the land-lord, for he slouched forward to take charge of my horse.

"Howdy, Hank?" he asked, repeating the words of the stage driver.

"I am well," I replied, honoring him with a few days."

"All right," he replied, starting to water my horse preparatory to taking him to the stable.

"Where is the postoffice?" I asked.

"Have you forgot that it's in Barnes' store jist 'cross the street?"

I walked thither and asked the wan, bleached woman for a letter for Edward Kenmore. Without speaking she mournfully handed me one whose address I recognized as being in the handwriting of President Hemmance. Thus it ran:

I am sorry to say I was deceived in the information which induced me to send you on a long and expensive journey. It has been proved that Mr. Castleton never left the city of New York after committing his robbery. He was arrested three days ago and most of the missing funds have been recovered. Beyond a doubt he will receive his share.

Inasmuch as all the money expended on your trip will be a loss to the bank, you will see the necessity of using the utmost economy and with less so time in returning home. We are so crowded with business that we are greatly in need of your services.

CHAPTER II.

I smiled as I read this letter, so characteristic of President Hemmance's frugality of mind. Although most of the stolen funds had been recovered, he was worrying over the comparatively slight expense to which I was subjecting the bank by this trip into the interior of Mississippi.

The anonymous letter referred to had been forwarded from New York to Aldine, whence it was remailed to Mr. Hemmance. He was so pleased over the prospect of securing Castleton, the deserter, without their help that after my departure he showed Inspector Byrnes the letter. That sagacious man instantly suspected the truth. The letter was a blind, and though the hand was disguised, he soon convinced the president that it was written by Castleton himself. With this clue the criminal was soon located and arrested in New York. This side issue of my narrative may be dismissed with the statement that the mercenary received his just deserts and is now doing a long term in Sing Sing.

"I see no reason for hastening my return," I thought as I placed the letter in my pocket. "I have had no vacation this year and am entitled to two weeks anyway. One thing is certain—New York is up, and I shan't surprise myself if I am delayed somewhat longer."

The afternoon was drawing to a close when the landlord returned from the front porch with me, beside his cory, who was silently smoking his corn-cob.

"Waal, Hank, how's things been with you?" he asked heartily as he proceeded to refill and light his pipe.

"It was different that he had mistaken me for some one else, and I was in that frame of mind that I humored the mistake."

"I've never felt better. How is it with you?"

"Tollyble, tollyble; I can't complain. The old woman is troubled with the rheumatism, but otherwise she's as well as ever."

"And your boys and girls?"

"My boys and girls!" he repeated, frowning his bewildered face toward me with an expression of astonishment. "Have you forgot that Tom and Mag Bullfinch buried their last chick during 'vacation'?"

"I beg pardon; I ought to have known better."

"I s'pose it's 'cause you've been away for some time," ventured the landlord's cory.

"That must be it," I hastened to add. "Of course, I remarked my host."

"Squire Gager is purty gin'rally right 'bout such things. Did you leave your father well, Hank?"

"Quite well, thank you."

"Ain't married ag'in, eh?"

"No; I think there's no likelihood of that."

"Folks round here said as how he was getting quite sweet on Widder Perkins, up that way."

"Oh, he has always been friendly with her, but I don't think either of them has any idea of marrying, though I should be pleased to see 'em suit a match."

"They'd make a likely team. The widder has some property and no children, while you be the only one belonging to your father, and I reckon you're old 'nough to look after yourself, eh, Hank?"

"I should be ashamed if I were not."

"It's a queer 'bout Major Hugh Beyer," remarked Squire Gager. "He made a splendid record in the war under Joe Johnston, but he acts as if he was 'shamed of it, fur you know he won't let any of us call him 'major' when he oughter been a gin'ral."

"If my father had reached that rank or had become even a colonel, I respect he would not object to the title, but there isn't much in a simple 'major'."

It will be admitted that I was picking up information. I had learned that I was supposed to be Hank Beyer, son of Major Hugh Beyer, who lived some where in the neighborhood. My companions were Squire Gager and Landlord Tom Bullfinch, whose wife's name was Mag, and they had no living children. Moreover, my father was suspected of holding matrimonial intentions toward a certain Widder Perkins.

All this was interesting, but not equal to that which speedily followed. That old sage was entitled to certain privileges was proved by the next remark of the landlord, who removed his pipe from his mouth and asked with a chuckle:

"And how's Esther?"

The question was a startling one, and but for what he had said a few minutes before I should have suspected he referred to a sister or relative, but it was clear that he had a tender relation in mind. I blushed and answered offhand, with a light laugh:

"She's as blooming as a peach, the queen of her sex."

"A right little girl and no mistake," was the landlord's answer, and the squires

"She'll have a fine plantation when the colored drops out."

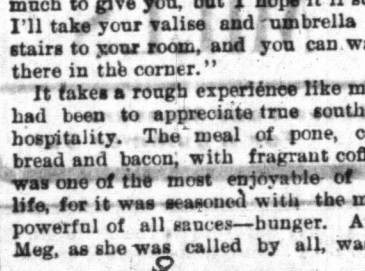

It seemed now that the farce had gone far enough, and I was on the point of breaking into ringing laughter and assuring my friends that I was not only not Hank Beyer, but had not the remotest idea of the personality of the young gentleman, whom I had never seen or heard of until that afternoon, but these delightful old fellows begged knowledge so fast that it was delicious to drink it in.

However, I could not forget I was ravenously hungry, having eaten nothing since leaving the old inn at Southfield that morning. I therefore asked the landlord how soon it would be convenient for him to furnish me with a substantial meal.

"I'll see," he replied, passing through the door on his right and returning in a few minutes with the welcome words:

"You can go in now. We hain't much to give you, but I hope it'll suit. I'll take your valise and umbrella up stairs to your room, and you can wash there in the corner."

It takes a rough experience like mine had been to appreciate true southern hospitality. The meal of pone, corn bread and bacon, with fragrant coffee, was one of the most enjoyable of my life, for it was seasoned with the most powerful of all sauces—hunger. Aunt Meg, as she was called by all, was a feet, and then it seemed as if a dozen men swarmed into the barroom. Amid the babel I could hear Landlord Bullfinch ordering them to keep back and not invade his house against his will. But the savage mob would not be deterred, and the oaths grew louder and fiercer.

I did not correct her, for to do so was likely to cause a flurry that would interfere with the fine dinner to which I did justice.

Aunt Meg was passing around the head of the table when the uproar first broke upon us. She stopped abruptly and listened. Then I saw her seamed countenance grow white, as if under the impulse of a great fear.

"What's the meaning of all that hubbub?" I asked, with never a suspicion that it could have any reference to me.

"I'm afraid, Hank!"

At that instant the door of the dining room was dashed inward with a violence that almost carried it off its hinges and Landlord Bullfinch bounded in, his shaggy face the picture of terror.

"My God, Hank, they're after you!" he gasped. "Run up stairs and jump out the window. Mebbe you can get your horse out of the barn."

I rose from my chair with my hand on my revolver.

"They're after me, you say. What do they want of me?"

"They're going to lynch you, Hank! I tried to hold 'em back till you got a chance, but it's too late."

CHAPTER III.

Amid the fright of that moment the feeling was strong upon me that a grotesque mistake had been made. Why should these people wish to do me bodily harm? I had committed no crime since my entrance into the state of Mississippi, and men could not be stirred to such violence by any cause other than an outrageous violation of law.

But the peril was imminent, and I had scarcely time to draw my weapon and back against the wall when the mob swarmed in after the landlord. As the foremost were making for me I leveled my weapon and called out:

"Halt! the first one lays a hand on me will be a dead man!"

The bravest persons do not rush to certain death. There was a pause, although the men in the door kept pushing forward until there was danger of the leaders being forced against me. The countenances were like those of the cattle during the commotion. Anger, fierce resolve and an almost irresistible yearning to clutch my throat were stamped on the faces, some of which were bearded, some clean shaven, while among the savage group were several who were not yet out of their teens. Their attire was coarse and slovenly. Most of them wore in slouch hats, without coat or vest, with trousers tucked in their boots. Two had rifles in their hands, three carried revolvers, while as many more grasped short, thick clubs, and a fourth gripped a fence paling.

If a hand to hand contest opened, I might knock down a number, but I could not hold out against a determined attack.

Three persons in the group attracted my attention. Aunt Meg had fled before the mob, but her husband and Squire Gager remained. They were powerfully excited, like the others, but less demonstrative. The landlord was struggling to keep back the rush and begging his money, and he sold him to me for $50."

I said more, but not a syllable was audible. Every one seemed in danger of apoplexy from furious merriment. They struck one another, flung their hats down, and one caught up a plate from the table and shattered it over the head of Landlord Bullfinch, who seemed aware of the proceeding. The uproar lasted for several minutes, when Dungan managed to make himself heard. His remarks may be characterized as pointedly personal.

"I never knewed a horse thief that wasn't a coward, Hank, if you want to save your neck from the noose, you'll have to get up a better yarn than that."

"Let me ask you a question," I said in deadly earnest, for it looked certain that the matter was to be settled by a fight.

"Waal, what is it?"

"You would not stand by and see an innocent man hanged, would you?"

"We ain't going to hang any innocent man. We've got hold of the worst horse thief in the state. We ain't making any mistakes there, Hank."

"But you are. That resemblance between me and this Hank Beyer is very close to clear. Nevertheless he is another person altogether. I have in my pocket the warrant for the arrest of our absconding cashier, and I can prove my identity by other papers."

I lowered my weapon and started to bring out the documents, when Dungan waved his hand to keep up this fooling.

"We don't want to see any of the papers that was stole or fixed up for this business."

"But the real thief, the genuine Hank Beyer, is standing in this room with me."

Before any explanation could be made of this remark, I pointed my finger at the young man by the door and said impressively:

"There stands the criminal for whom you are looking. He is the real Hank Beyer."

FRACTIONAL.

"I am told that you've been married before, Mr. Booter," said Miss Bunting to her proposer.

"Yes, er—yes."

"Your first wife had at least a portion of your heart?"

"Yes—er—yes."

"That's what I thought. Well, I couldn't consent to marry a half-hearted man."

WILD AND WOOLLY WEST

R. S. Smyth Describes its Many Distinctive Features.

Rapid Development in Every Respect is Noted—An old Chatham boy doing well.

Dear Planet,—have you room? or can you make room, for a short gist of chat from this section of the wild and woolly West? Thanks! Here goes. Let me say, as a starter, that this particular part of the West is not the wild-eyed affair most easterners suppose it. They see in their dreams, perhaps, or in their recollections of early western trips, a great unending stretch of rolling prairie, unbroken by anything but an occasional herd of grazing, lowing kine, coyotes howling diabolically in the background, and all that sort of thing. But, in so far as the Pincher Creek district is concerned, they must guess again. Last year I rode across country thirty miles from Pincher Creek, to southward, and travelled in a nearly straight line. There were the ranchers here and there, and nothing else. However, the scene is changed. Farmers are flocking in to the supreme disgust of the rancher—and nearly all the available land within twenty-five miles of the town, to the south, is taken up in quarters, halves and sections. Much of it is fenced, the balance will soon be. Houses are springing up everywhere. Taking a survey from the top of a high knoll, I counted fifteen houses in sight, but not one of them being finished. From this your readers can form some slight idea of the present rate of settlement.

The fencing, as a matter of course, destroys the range, and the small rancher must move, and move quickly. There are some who consider removing even to the Peace River in the hope of being left alone for a few years. The man who would come west now to take up ranching on a small scale, must seek a location in the farther north. So far as this district is concerned, farming is the order of the day; and, to ranch here now, the settler must be prepared to buy much land, as there is virtually no open range. Otherwise he must cultivate the acquaintance of the dairy cow, buy a cream separator, and sell eggs.

I was near the Kootenai lake last week. The near view of the mountains, was a relief after so much of the prairie for so long, but my desire to visit this charming body of water nestling like a jewel in the rugged mountain pass, gave way before the prospect of canny-like mosquitoes and swarms of "bull-dogs." Six miles from the lake these pests were bad enough, and I ventured no nearer. I spent a day dallying with the trout instead, and proceeded on my interminable horseback trip.

I made it a point to look up your one-time townsman, Charlie Dyson, Mr. Dyson, who was recently married, has acquired a very comfortable home, and his work and careful management have made him independent. He still carries on his work as a blacksmith, however, and has more than he can do. Charlie is a steady and competent blacksmith, and retiring from the active work of life. "But," he says, "a man must keep putting away his gold for the future, maybe." Charlie's idea of "putting away" fits my conception of down-right hard work to a nicety.

You have perhaps been informed of the serious accident which recently happened to Mrs. Berry, relict of the late Wm. Berry, a former Chathamite. Mrs. Berry, at the ranch of her son-in-law, Mr. Harry Jenkins, on the Kootenai River, was feeding a young colt, when the animal lunged forward. Mrs. Berry's arm was broken at the elbow joint, by being bent backward against a post near which the unfortunate lady was standing. She is, I am pleased to state, doing as well as could be expected, though it is probable that the elbow will always be stiff.

Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins live in the east at the time; but Doctor Jenkins was upon his place, next below on the river, and Miss Jenkins and Mrs. Berry's elder daughter, Mrs. James Beaumont, proved very capable and efficient nurses.

Crops of all kinds are in good fix here at present, and there is every prospect of a heavy yield for the new farmers. Brome grass does exceedingly well here, which is a blessing under the new restricted conditions in which the ranchers are placed. As I write, two samples of it stand in a corner near me. Some of it is quite over six feet high. Experiment here has proven it expedient to sow timothy with the brome grass, the main benefit claimed for this mixture being the increased gratifying results during the first two years.

It is so long since I've written you, and there is so much unsaid, so much to say, I scarcely know what to do about it all. Under these circumstances the best thing to do is to quit.

Yours respy,
ROBERT S. SMYTH.

AT CANADA'S FINE CAPITAL

J. W. Young has Met With Many Interesting Incidents.

An old Maple City Military man and a Young Baptist Preacher Chat of This Fair City.

Rushing into Ottawa on an evening train gives one very little idea of the marvelous natural beauties of the capital of the Dominion. The C. P. R. enters from Carleton Place, through the Ottawa valley, which is low lying, and the passenger has but little chance to see anything of the city or the river, beyond a glimpse of the latter at Britannia, one of the many summer resorts where the residents of this beautiful city enjoy themselves. I confess that I was disappointed when I first saw Ottawa, but I haven't been long in changing—notwithstanding it is said first impressions are the best.

This is the first large city I have visited of which I have desired to become a resident. Ottawa is simply grand in scenery and picturesque in situation. But more of this later.

After deciding on a western vacation trip, the first thing that I thought of was a ticket. Knowing that the C. P. R. was the line of railway that had first crossed the virgin prairie of the Canadian West Country, and being also aware that W. H. Harper was the city passenger agent of the C. P. R., I at once consulted him and found that I had done just right. When you travel west, east, north or south, consult ex-Ald. Harper. He has been a railroad man his entire life and knows all about railroads—and a few other things. His advice is invaluable.

The time-table was another problem that confronted me. When I first secured a record of the time that trains go on the C. P. R. I thought of those who had tried to square the circle and would have given up in despair had not a bright thought struck me, and I sought the aid of Mr. Harper's assistants in his office. Under their guidance the meaning of the figures and names were unveiled and became something more than mere digits and words. Thus it was brought about that the time-table was understood.

Notwithstanding it was Friday this trip west was begun. Being an unlucky day it rained. It was also the last of August, and I plus 11 made 13. How horribly suggestive of impending trouble were all these evil omens.

At London Major A. G. Smyth boarded the train. He was on his way to Lake Umbagog, 12-13 miles from Orangeville, to spend the summer with his son-in-law at the latter's summer residence. This lake is the head waters of the Credit River. Mayor Harrison, familiar with many Chathamites at the time of the Fenian raid. He was then district quartermaster and visited Chatham in connection with his military duties. The late Rufus Stephenson, ex-C. P. was captain of one of the companies and the Major claimed him as a warm personal friend. He remembered that the late David Smith, killed afterwards Colonel, was quartermaster. Mr. Thompson was paymaster. The deputy adjutant general of the district was Mr. Taylor and he lived in London. Fooding the brigades was Colonel Moffatt, father of Thos. Moffatt, once of Chatham, now of South Africa. Major Smyth has a Penian raid medal with two stars for services rendered. He also has a medal given to his father, for twelve battles in which he fought in the Peninsular war.

At Woodstock the Baptist minister at Galt took a seat next by. He is a young man and proved good company. Unfortunately he didn't tell me his name. However, he knew many Chatham people, including Judge Houston. This minister was a college mate of the Rev. Thomas Cornish, now of Pontiac, and as a student was stationed at Dresden 16 months. He preached in Rev. J. J. Ross' pulpit three years ago while the latter was away on his holidays and while in the Maple City was the guest of Hugh McDonald, Raleigh street. He pointed out the house near which was dilapidated by a hurricane. That is, the house was. The building the track, while we were passing, is an awful wreck. The structure is of brick; yet the roof had been torn off by the force of the tempest, and the four walls remain standing, to show what the wind can do. At Toronto, Chas. Hackney, a former Chathamite, met me, and I spent a very pleasant night at his home.

Saturday morning at 9.15, the services of the C. P. R. railway were again sought, Ottawa being the objective point. Unfortunately, I found no congenial passengers on the train, but the country was new and interesting. The news butcher took a money interest in me and tried to sell his whole stock in trade. It recalled to my mind that I ever travelled alone. I was somewhat of a little had then and I had just 50 cents pocket money. The news and edible vendor had some mince which he wanted me to buy, just because I was going so far from home, and I believe I would have plunged with all my pile had this money not been packed carefully away in the bottom of my grip by relative who knew my failing.

AFTERNOON SESSION

Our City Council Transacts Business in the day Time.

A New Flg. for the Civic Building—Other Doings at the Aldermanic Board.

The City Council held a special meeting yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. There were present: Mayor Sulman and Aldermen Cowan, McCoo, Mounter, Marstack, Edmonson and Fleming.

A petition was received from a number of ratepayers to have part of Park street watered.—Referred to the Clerk.

A communication was received from Mr. Maude, Secretary to the Governor-General, informing the aldermen that the Duke and Duchess of York would not be able to visit Chatham.

Another was read from Lewis & Richards, solicitors for Arch. Park and others, re the William street sewer.—Referred to Board of Works.

A communication from P. B. Fetterly re dog tax was referred to Finance.

Another from E. W. Watson was also referred to Finance.

Ald. McCoo asked if the plan of the King street pavement at the corner of William street was a permanent job.

He was informed that it is not. Ald. McCoo complained out because of some local contractors that jobs that should be let for contract are done by the City Board of Works.

Ald. Marshall said that there was only one case, that of the Collegiate Institute sewer. The work is being done by the Board of Works and charged to the Collegiate Institute Board.

Mayor Sulman notified the Council that the reason that the city flag was not put out on the day of the death of the late Empress was because the flag was not in a condition to be put up, being entirely torn to pieces. He had ordered a new flag, which arrived yesterday. It is now flying at half mast on Tecumseh Park.

The Mayor called the attention to the bad condition of Tecumseh Park. Paper scattered all over the Park, the benches are broken, and the fountain needs repairing.

The matter was attended to by the committee.

Cowan—Edmonson, that Mr. Watson be allowed to trim trees under the supervision of the Chief of Police.—Carried.

Marshall—Mounter, that the Board of Works be empowered to purchase 200 feet of rubber hose to be used in flushing sewers.—Carried.

Cowan—Edmonson, that the Mayor attend the meeting of Mayors in Toronto, which will be held to discuss municipal matters.

DOUBTFUL RUMOR

That Lord Kitchener Has Been Wounded in a Skirmish With Boers.

London, Aug. 10.—The War Office has received no advice giving color to the rumor circulated by a news agency in the United States, that Lord Kitchener has been wounded in a skirmish with the Boers.

The rumor is officially discredited. Lord Kitchener's customary despatches reached the War Office yesterday (Friday) afternoon and contained no reference to any accident to him.

CATARH.

Catarh is a system disorder which requires local as well as general treatment. You get this if you take Powley's Liquefied Ozone. It acts beneficially on all the mucous linings of the body; stimulating, healing. Regular doses taken internally build up the system. Used as a spray it dries up the discharge quickly.

Mr. Fox, of Bolton, Ont., had an especially disagreeable form of catarrh. His recovery was remarkable. This is his own version of it:

"You say 'Ozone is Life.' Those are the truest words you ever uttered. For several years I have been troubled with catarrh of the head, and I have tried a number of remedies which gave me no relief. Finally it settled in my throat and stomach. My doctor failed to do me any good, and I can safely say that death was staring me in the face. I was induced to give Ozone a trial, and the result was marvellous. In two months time I felt better and weighed more than I had for the last ten years. I can say that the catarrh in my head and throat was completely cured, and my stomach set in order once more. This happened in February, 1900. Furthermore, I would dwell on the merits of Ozone. This spring I got a heavy dose of quinine in my throat. I went at once to Mr. Rutherford and got some more Ozone. In a few days I was completely cured of the quinine. Thanks to Ozone, I would also recommend it for taking during colds, or out of the head or scalp. In fact I cannot speak too highly of Ozone. I have induced several people to use it for various diseases, with good results. I will be pleased to answer any questions, as to the merits and healing powers of Ozone. (Sgd.) ROBT. FOX, Bolton, P.O. Ont.

If your case is a long-standing one don't give up. Powley's Liquefied Ozone has cured where the disease was worse than this one recorded.

If you care to write us for further information your letters are strictly confidential.
