"GOOD AND FAITH-FUL SERVANT."

One day, in a shabby little house. In a quiet little street, a woman died. Cheap, clean curtains hung at the windows. There was nothing about the house to distinguish it from its neighbors, except the flowing black symbol that hung crookedly on the door. In the tiny parlor, which, in spite of furniture removed, was stuffy, and crowded, the woman lay. The box that encased her was cheap, and the shabby silk dress that enwrapped her was old-fashioned. The Doorkeeper, who had come to help, wondered if the whimsical curve around her mouth, was caused by the revelation of her passing on, or if she had always worn it.

In the early morning hours, when

In the early morning hours, when all but the Sleeper had begun to stir, a big policeman rang the bell.

"I wonder if I could be seein' her ow," he said to the Doorkeeper. "I ouldn't like to intrude, but——" He now." he said to the Doorkeeper. "I wouldn't like to intrude, but—" He stepped lightly into the little room, and looked down on the quiet face. "It's many a hot cup of coffee she gave me on bitter winter nights," he said, "An' its many a cold drink of lemonade on boilin' summer days. I was on this beat a long time. I saved her kitten from a dog once, and she never forgot. Ah, well—she's restin' now, anyway." He went out, his face grim with pent-up emotion, in the cold, early light.

At night came two girls, one frightened and shivering, a brainless little sheep, born to be led; the other defiant of eye, and hard of mouth.

"I'd like to see her," she said abruptly. They went into the dimilighted room. Their complexions were works of art, and their finery, subdued though it was, to fit the occasion, flared like a red light in that quiet place. A breeze from the window blew a strand of hair across the face of the Sleeper. The defianteyed one bent and put it back.

"It always did that," she said, "blew across her face like thit,"

"Was she a friend of yours?" the Doorkeeper asked quietly.

"Oh Lord no! That is—she wouldn't have minded—she was a regular thoroughbred. She was aw regular thoroughbred.

"Oh Lord no! That is—she was a regular thoroughbred. She was awful decent to me once—bout the only person who was!" she added bitterly, "Come on. Kit; I'm glad I seen

"I'm glad you did, too, my dear," said the Doorkeeper gently. The deflant eyes flashed her a reckoning the tears came, making sad havoc with the wonders of her complexion.

The Sleeper wore no decorations, but, when the Doorkeeper listened to the little stories, it seemed as if a Distinguished Service Order should have been pinned on her breast. ## Wanted-A King!

Albania wants a king, "an Englishman, gentleman preferred." The salary is not stated, but the civil list of the new monarch, whoever he may be, is unlikely to be a very extravagant one, seeing that the entire revenue of the country amounts to no more than about £800,000.

of the country amounts to no hole than about £800,000.

This, by the way, is not the only occasion on which a European principality has been "in the market," so to speak. The late Duke of Edinburgh, afterwards Duke of Saxe-Cobourg and Gotha, Queen Victoria's second son, was once offered the throne of Greece, and so certain were the Greeks that he would accept that they actually had him proclaimed King at Athens.

Not only this, but a number of coins were struck bearing the new "monarch's" effigy. These are now greatly prized by collectors. It is perhaps unnecessary to add that, on news of these events reaching Windsor, the profered honor was promptly declined.

Some time previously the Greek throne had been offered to the grand-father of the present Earl of Derby, who also declined it. Following the refusal, the vacant throne was hawkfather of the present Earl of Derby, who also declined it. Following the refusal, the vacant throne was hawkedled, early light.

One small girl carried two faded oses.

Sir Henry pretended to treat the matter as a huge joke; whereat the delegates retired in high dudgeon. The af

This same crown was afterwards declined by Prince Alexander Vogorides, probably for a similar reason to that which had previously induced the Count of Flanders to decline the honor of ruling over the turbulent populace of the sister principality of Rumania.

Said this astute individual, when offered the crown by the President of the Council of Ministers: "If you can guarantee that I shall not be assassinated, as was M. Catargi, or interned for life in a dungeon, like M. Petrovski, my answer is "Yes." Otherwise it is "No." The Ministers looked askance at each other, then silently withdrew. withdrew

Not always, however, have offers of this description been declined. Many years ago Sir James Brooke, an ex-officer in the old East India Company's service, was offered, and accepted, the crown of Sarawak, in Borneo, over which country his descendant, the present Rajah Brooke, still reigns, it having been constituted an independent State under British protection in 1888.

The sponges are brought up by divers, some of whom work naked, while others wear diving costume. The sponges present a flesh-like appearance, and are covered with a firm skin in which tiny holes appear and disappear apparently at the animal's will.

The insile of the sponge, not unlike raw meat, is intersected by numerous canals and cavities. These are filled with a sticky, greyish-brown fluid known as "milk." This "trilk" must be taken out at once, for it is the only part of the animal that is actually alive. Should it be left, the sponge begins to decay and lose its elastic qualities.

At a fur auction held in St. Louis, the list of the different kinds of furs numbered sixty-two. It is remarkable that so many different furs are on the market. Among the offers were skins of monkeys and gazelles from Africa, ponies from the steppes of Russia, giant wolves from Siberia, polar bear from the Arctic, dog skins from China, kid skins and goat skins from Greece, Turkey and Near East countries, kangaroo and fox from Australia, and strange but useful peits of furbearers from many other distant lands. tant lands.

The Diary of a British Journalist

One of the funniest stories told by Sir Henry Lucy in "The Diary of a Journalist," is that concerning Mr. Lloyd George and his chauffeur. It was night, and Mr. Lloyd George was returning home through the country. The chauffeur was ordered to light the lamps.

As the process took some time, Mr.
Lloyd George got out of the car and went round to the back to see if all was right with the rear lamp. At the same moment the chauffeur, concluding that his passenger was inside, started off at full speed and the car disappeared in the distance.

"Yes, yes," said the porter, gruffly, "we've got six of 'em inside. You'll go out the gate, turn to the left, and you'll get home before morning."

Here are some more stories told by Sir Henry:

A Postcard Comedy.

An American lady, whose husband was a millionaire, saw a vase for sale in London priced $7,500. She wrote to her husband in Chicago, giving a glowing account of the treasure and asking him to telegraph if he were prepared to pay so much.

Jubilantly repairing to the auction room, she became the proud possessor of the vase. It was afterwards she learned that what her husband had telegraphed was, "No; price too high."
Lord Harcourt once showed Sir Henry a postcard which had reached him and which read: "Many thanks for your note with enclosure. Sir Edward's message sent to me at Members' Mansions was duly forwarded. We shall be up on Wednesday at noon and will lunch in the study. Ask Lang at stores to give you a tender steak (narrow cut, such as I choose), and boil some rice for one o'clock lunch." Inquiry brought a quite reasonable explanation. Interrupted when half-way through the missive, the lady, after a brief interval, returned to her desk and, being under the impression that she had started a postcard containing instructions the cook, continued the message on the card addressed and duly delivered to the be-wildered viscount. Most ancient of all accessories is the mirror, that reflecting bit of vanity which means so much in our daily life, as well as in our scheme of decoration. Its origin is shrouded in the twilight of mythology and our only real clews are the fragments which mother earth and the tombs have rendered back to us, sometimes in a fair state of preservation. The history of mirror-making in England might be said to date from 1670. From this time on, rapid strides were made in the manufacture of looking-glasses, those of the Queen Anne and Georgian periods being particularly notable.

Mirror glass in its early stages was blown," and beyond the length of three and one-half feet was too thin to serve as mirrors. In case a greater length was desired, it was necessary to add a second piece, and thus the longer glasses of the early eighteenth century were made in two pieces, one overlapping the other, or finishd with a molding to hide the intersection.

In the latter part of the eighteenth century, Chippendale-made mirrors of great charm were made, and it was the former in shield and eval shapes, usually in pairs.

During the earlier part of the Georgian period the revival of the Queen Anne mirror began, and by 1800 the lines of this model were much in evidence. Glass mirrors coated with tin have been found in Italy that were used in the days of Pompey, but just when and where silverbacked glass was first employed has never been definitely established. As early as 1873 the Germans had acquired a knowledge of glasse mirror work, and in the fifteenth century they invented a curious form of mirror construction called the "bull's eye."

In the sixteenth century the Venetians did much business in the manufacture and exporting of glasses with quicksilver backs, and in 1665 the French Government induced twenty of these glassworkers to come to

Canoe Route.

The cance route connects the Mackenzie waterway with the Yukon by the Peel, Huskie and Rat Rivers, Mac-Dougall's Pass, Little Bell and Bell and Porcuping sivers. Expensely for the Dougali's Pass and a mile or two up the Yukon River from the mouth of the Porcupine to the steamboat land-ing at Fort Yukon, the route is all downstream. The distance is, ap-proximately, 600 miles, made up as fol-lows: Peel, 15 miles; Huskie, 20 miles; Rat, 15 to Destruction City, with 40 15 to Destruction City, with 40 additional to summit; MacDougail's Pass, 3 miles; Little Bell, 12 miles;

The small lake at the head of the Rat river is first crossed. Next comes a short portage to a small stream, which is ascended for a mile or so After skirting the edge of a small lake and crossing another one a short portage is made to a narrow stream, which is followed a little distance. An over his protected is made to a narrow stream, which is followed a little distance, and over half a mile, however, to a very pretty little lake on the summit. The scenery is wonderfully fine here, and there is excellent fishing, grayling trout being very plentiful. From the summit lake a short portage brings one to Little Bell river.

Little Bell river has a deep, narrow general rive of two of stiff paddling against a strong current is required to reach the Fort. There is a trail leading from the mouth of the Porcupine, which may be used as an alternative. There are three trading posts at this tion, hospital, church, school and two restaurants. THIS IS THE DAY.

"Let me see," meditated the little neighbor, finger on her notebook, eyes on the calendar. "First Thursday in the month. Yes, this is the day to look over the cellar."

Seeing my astonishment, she continued laughingly: "You think it is queer to have a particular day for looking over the cellar," don't you? Well, let me tell you, it is not.

"After I had kept house long enough for the newness to wear off I became perfectly discouraged about ever keeping everything in order. I'd sarefully sweep my house all over and then discover that the silver should have been polished. I'd siock my larder with all kinds of goodies and find that the storeroom should have been put in order. I'd spend a week over the much-needed sewing or canning and the whole house seemed demoralized.

HUGE WORK WELL DONE BY FARMERS.

The Finance Minister's Report Shows Prosperity While the Rest of Europe Lags.

Of all the paradoxes in Europe, France undoubtedly presents the most remarkable one at the present moment. With Germany economically battered and helpless, capitulating at the end of eight months of useless resistance in the Ruhr, and England, by virtue of the loss of a great part of her German trade staggering under the burden of idle factories and almost 2,000,000 unemployed, France, the nation which suffered most during the war, is now almost back to normalcy.

No first-rank nation on the Conti-

No first-rank nation on the Conti-nent is so close to pre-war times as France. The Frenchmen themselves did not realize it fully until this week, for the Nationalist bloc in the Chamber of Deputies at the coming national elections. For obvious reasons, however, it was not in the interest of the country to talk too enthusiastically regarding the flourishing condition of France; at least, not for world consumption.

Credit Given to People.

The necessity of collecting reparations from Germany and getting the best terms on other war debts would make an advertisement inadvisable. But within the small agricultural area of seath extern Exercise. of south-castern France, the Finance Minister did not hesitate to give the greatest credit to France's millions of small farmers and tradespeople, who went quietly back to work to restore the country to its pre-war standard.

went quietly back to work to restore the country to its pre-war standard.

To actual observers, France's evolution since 1918, from a country like almost all the others in Europe, with its social foundations badly cracked and suffering from hundreds of symptoms of the terrible aftermath of the war, to a nation which has regained its economic and to some extent its financial status was an evolution in which the credit was really due to the farmers and tradespeople whom de Lasteyrie complimented.

All classes of Frenchmen settled down to hard work as soon as the armistice was sounded. Like the israelites who followed the counsel of Moses to rise before sun-up and go abroad to receive manna from heaven, the Frenchman followed his instincts. The manna has fallen abundantly, but it literally required getting out before sunrise to gather it. The French peasant farmers have done more than that: They have worked long after sundown.

that: They have worked long after sundown.
Unlike Germany, choking herself nationally with a fruitless struggle to escape reparations, and unlike England, depending on extensive foreign trade to keep the wheels of industry whirring. France's restricted industrial machinery and labor have been fully needed for turning out materials to be used in domestic reconstruction.

Steady Grind of Work.

Industrially, as well as agriculturally, therefore, the country thrived, but throughout the period the entire population has been engaged in a steady grind of work necessary, both for moral and material gain. De Lasteyrie, announced that France's unemployed had dwindled to practically nothing at the beginning of the year, and since then the country faced such a labor shortage that she was compelled to admit foreign workmen.

The greater part of those lands destroyed in the war are again under cultivation, with a specially large wheat acreage, and a cattle increase of more than 1,000,000 head since 1919. "France is to-day in full agricultural regeneration," said De Lasteyrie, "and is not only self-supporting in the matter of food supply, but is clearly on the road to becoming a great exporting nation. From the industrial point of view France has recuperated from the effects of the war with stupen our rapidity." The unfavorable balance of 'tade

ARMISTICE ANNIVERSARY AT MONS

An Historical Sketch.

BY H. WISELY BRAGG.

As time passes by, the significance of November 11th will gradually become more appreciated and this anniversary will always be primarily connected with Mons. For Mons is naccount of the heroic stand made there by the British Army in 1914, and by the psychological entry of the Canadians on the eve of the Armistice, November 11th, 1918.

To the soldier in the Canadian Corps it represented the first captured city which was carrying on normal life, for, on account of the coal mines which surrounded the city and the fertile agricultural lands, the Germans had throughout the war encouraged production. The destruction is and about Mons was caused mainly by the Germans who, in 1914, wilfully destroyed, as a means of terrorizing the citizens, about two hundred housed, while in 1918 some thirty bridges were also a Polytechnic Institute for problown up in order to hamper our advance.

Years ago Mons was a walled city, surrounded by a moat; and when at what we are, as we take them.

Good health is a reason for rejoicing. One who has all the vitality he needs for the day's work goes to it exultantly, as a strong man rejoicing to run a race. It is fine to feel adequate to whatever comes. But mankind is grateful for the inspiring example of great souls that in feeble bodies nobly persevered, and left on earth results worth far more than anything done by human beings who acted as if pleasure and the sensual appetites were all of life.

The last thing to be thankful for is wealth—in the sense of the accumulation of dollars without the development of charcter. To-day, as any of, us sits down to a table amply spread, the satisfaction will be not in the feast before him, but in all the "invisible guests" he has made happy. A Thanksgiving is not warranted by what we take from the human society of which we are a part. We give thanks to-day in proportion to the things that we have given first to others.

We should be grateful to the Power that is suppreme over our lives for things that we have given first to others.

We should be grateful to the Power that is supreme over our lives for what has been denied us as well as for what was bestowed. We thought we must have what we asked for; and often we have seen afterward that if our wishes had been granted it would have brought us serious harm.

It is no proper celebration of Thanksgiving merely to gorge ourselves to repletion and to gloat on what we have about us and shut quite out of the happy picture the distressful circumstances of a part of the world in the extremest anguish of suffering. For a land at peace, enjoying a prosperity that is enormous as compared with much of the remainder of earth, we should be devoutly grateful, for indeed the lines are cast unto us in pleasant places, and an Old World

Intestinal parasitism of fowls is brought to attention at this season of the year because the most striking phase of the disease is often seen this time.

This disease is vastly more prevalent than tuberculosis, with which it its chronic form it may be confused clinically, and from an economic standpoint it probably ranks second only to roup.

In order properly to understand the disease the following brief description of the chronic form is given since it may precede or follow the acute form. The sick animals become thin, although the appetite is even increased and is accompanied by an intense thirst for cold water. The droppings are thin, contain considerable yellow slime, and are passed in small quantities, but at short intervals. After a time other symptoms develop. The sick animals become dull and listless, remain apart from the rest of the flock—the feathers are ruffed and the wings droop, the appetite is lost and the birds allow themselves to be easily caught. Impaired organic functions lead to extreme emaciation and a fatal termination usually follows, when the subject is but a mere shadow of its former self.

It is not the chronic form, however, that we are primarily interested in at the moment, but with a form so acute as to be very misleading. Suddenness of onset and great prostration usually lead to the assumption that the birds have consumed poisonous material. This belief is further favored, in many instances, by the fact that no previous indication of disease has existed.

In so far as we have been able to learn, these attacks are always associated with sudden changes in weather conditions. The usual history is to the effect that birds are found in a prostrated condition, comb and wattless suddenly become after the deal of the carry of the fight when reduced by adverse influences.

By this it would seem that the birds are able to hold their own against the parasites under favorable conditions, but are unable successfully to carry on the fight when reduced by adverse influences.

MAKE UP YOUR MIND TO GET WELL.

Perhaps you have heard of the French gentleman called Dr. Emile Coue, who is not a doctor of medicine, yet is having a great deal of attention because of what he has to say about getting well of disease. He has written a book which is enjoying a wide sale in this country, partly because it is very well advertised and, of course, we know that it does nay to advertise. ten a book which is enjoying a winsale in this country, partly because it is very well advertised and, of course, we know that it does pay to advertise, no matter whether it is pure-bred chickens or a book on getting well.
The advertisements say that his plan has helped to greater health, happiness and success, "countless thousands, from the rheumatic octogenarian to alling children." It is frankly admitted that the plan is one of autosuggestion, and it is claimed that in all Europe and much of America, Dr.
Coue's formula is on every tongue. It might be well, for it is a pleasant formula and easy to repeat. The words are: "Day by day, in every way, I am getting better and better."

Like the sugar-coated pills of our childhood this is an alluring prescription. There are two questions that naturally arise, however. First, does it do any good? Second, can it do any harm?

Question number one can only be answered with proper consideration of the case to which it is proposed to make the application. Should this be a case that is not of a progressive and destructive character it will do good.
The very act of bravely summoning your spirit to declare that you are winning your way to health removes some of the inhibitions of fear and gives a better chance for cell repair and construction of new tissue.

But question two is also worthy of consideration; for the plan can do harm. You may be fighting some morbid agent that is both progressive and destructive. It may be some active and virulent disease, such as diphtheris Science has discovered an anti-

CAUSE OF BACKACHES

Every muscle in the body needs a supply of rich, red blood in proportion to the work its does. The muscles of the back are under a heavy strain and have but little rest. When the blood is thin they lack nourlahment and rebel. The result is a sensation of pain in these muscles.

Many people are frightened into believing that backaches are due to kidney trouble, but the best medical authorities agree that backache is very seldom due to kidney trouble. In fact not more than one backache in a hundred has anything to do with the kidneys. The whole trouble is due to thin or impure blood, and those who are troubled with pains in the back or loins, either frequent or occasional, should look to the condition of the blood. It will be found in most cases that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by building up the blood and freeding the starved nerves and muscles will banish the pains and make you feel better in every other way. How much better it is to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for your blood than to give way to unreasonable alarm about your kidneys any doctor can make a test in ten minutes, that will set your fears at rest, or tell you the worst.

All dealers in medicine sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville. Ont.

Anticipation

Much of the pleasure in life comes from a forecasting imagination. from a forecasting imagination. The satisfactions of vacation travel, to choose but one example, lie as much in prospect as in retrospect. It is fun to read the literature of places we may never see, to discuss and compare alternative routes, to consult the experience of others and "com-pare notes" with those who went and returned.

the experience of others and compare notes," with those who went and returned.

Says the cheerless pessimist: "I have learned to expect nothing. Life has taught me that if you expect nothing you will not be disappointed." But the man who has such a gloomy philosophy behind his modus operandi is likely to find the "No Admittance" sign hanging out for him at many a door instead of the proverbial "Welcome" on the mat. People dislike a confirmed grouch, a chronic knocker as an associate in work or play. We do not ask that teammates shall dwell in a fool's paradise of Pollyanna sunshine all the time, but we want those who take the cheerful forward look and have the disposition to make the best of things, and, as the Scot says, "Whustle o'er the lave o' it."

Why was hope implanted in the human breast, to spring eternal there, if we were not meant to believe that the best is yet to be, and then to labor with all our might to make that belief come true in fact? As eyes were made for seeing, the heart was meant to hope. The chief incentive to persevere and to make progress is not that which is—a fortune made, an ambition realized, a success attained—but that which may be. A man in business keeps going because he sees to far horizons, and his ambition carries even farther than his vista.

To guard the baby against colds nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a mild laxative that will keep the little one's stomach and bowels working regularly. It is a recognized fact that where the stomach and bowels are in good order that colds will not exist; that the health of the little one will be good and that he will thrive and be happy and goodnatured. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

So it is in all affairs of life. If only so it is in all affairs of life. If only we dare and endure sufficiently, we shall not be disappointed. Deprive a man of expectancy and you shatter the mainspring of the whole machinery of his being. But you cannot deprive him of that central, primal force unless he wills it so.

The span of life is increasing—we live longer than we used to do, according to igures given by the New York Medical Journal covering the part twenty years.

In 1900 the average expectancy of human life was 49.2 years; in 1910 it was 51.5; and in 1920 it was 53.3, a gain of over five years in twenty. "Bayer Cross."

The cries of no animals approach more closely-that of the human voice than those of seals when lamenting the loss or capture of their young. They emit a wailing and affecting cry, similar to that of a woman in deep grief.

YOUNG DAUGHTER MADE WELL

Mother Tells How Her Daughter Suffered and Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vancouver, B.C.—"My daughter is a young girl who has been having severe pains and weak and dizzy feelings for some time and had lost her appetite. Through an older daughter who had heard of a woman who was taking it for the same trouble, we were told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My daughter has been taking it for several months and is quite all right now. It has done all it was represented to do and we have told a number of friends about it. I am never without a bottle of it in the house, for I myself take it for that weak, tired, worn-out feeling which sometimes comes to us all. I find it is building me up and I strongly recommend it to women who are suffering as I and my daughter have. "—Mrs. J. McDonald, 2847 26th Ave. East, Vancouver, B. C.

From the age of twelve a girl needs all the care a thoughtful mother can give. Many a woman has suffered years of pain and misery—the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance of the mother who should have guided her during this time.

pain and misery—the victim of thought-lessness or ignorance of the mother who should have guided her during this time. If she complains of headaches, pains in the back and lower linbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervous-ness or irritability on the part of your daughter, make life sasier for her. Lydis E. Pinitham's Vegetable Com-pound is especially adapted for such conditions.
