Lady Wyvernes' Daughter.

CHAPTER XV.

He had lingered in Spain, for he loved the country. While at Seville, his valet left him and returned to England. He was going to visit a small town near, when he was thrown from his horse, and left almost dead at their castle gates. He was young and handsome, as were all the Lynnes, and gifted with an easy grace of manner that charmed and fascinated those proud, high-bred Spanish ladies.

When he was able to leave his room, he spent many hours every day in the society of Madame Monteleone and her daughter. From the mother he learned the ancient glories of the family; here they once had been second to none save their royal masters; and the young English lord found with surprise that the plainly-dressed lady, who lived in what he considered a gloomy old ruin, belonged to one of the noblest families of Spain. He saw they were very poor; there was no attempt at any disguise; but no queen ever wore state and splendor with more dignity than did Madam Monteleone her obscurity and poverty.

From the daughter he learned another lesson; the lovely face, the dark, almond eyes, haunted him; and he loved her with a wild devotion rare in an Englishman. It was the old, old story. What else could happen, given an old castle, a wounded knight, and a beautiful girl? Bianca forgot her high vocation, and fell as deeply in love with the English lord as he had done with her. A few meetings among the myrtle and orange-trees, and then Stephen Lord Lynne asked Bianca Monteleone to be his wife. He had no fear, as he gazed in her beautiful, loving face. He was rich and noble, there was no fear of refusal for him; but for many years Lord Lynne never forgot the look of distress, almost horror, upon Madame Monteleone's face, when he asked for her daughter's hand.

"My daughter!" she cried. "How blind, how foolish I have been! I never dreamed that you loved her!"

Skin Eruptions Are Usually Due to Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—no orange-taste. Try it today.

"You must go away and forget her. She can never be your wife!" "Why not?" asked Lord Lynne, calmly. "What objection have you to me?" "None," replied Madame Monteleone, "as regards myself, but my daughter must marry a Spanish noble. Her destiny has already long been settled."

"But she loves me, madame," again urged Lord Lynne. "Impossible!" cried the lady. "My daughter knows her destiny, and will fulfill it. She must not see you again."

The stern, ambitious mother adhered to her words, and Bianca was kept a prisoner in her rooms until the departure of Lord Lynne. Mother and daughter said but little on the subject. The mother appealed to her child's love and sense of right respecting all her high hopes and ambitious views. Bianca listened, and submitted in silence.

Lord Lynne left Serrano and returned to Seville, determined at any cost to win the beautiful girl who loved him so well. Once more alone, Madame Monteleone began to prepare for her journey to Madrid. But another obstacle arose. Bianca, who made no opposition to her mother's wishes, who had submitted silently to the loss of her lover, fell ill, and faded visibly day by day. In vain did madam summon physicians, and pay heavily for their advice. They all said the same thing; her daughter's disease was more mental than physical; and the distracted mother began to understand that her daughter was slowly but surely dying, her heart breaking for the loss of the fair-haired Englishman, who had brought such golden radiance into her gloomy life.

Lord Lynne persisted in calling every day. During Bianca's illness he was seldom allowed to exchange a word with Madame Monteleone; but one eventful day, instead of being dismissed with a few curt words, he was invited into madame's boudoir. There she told him frankly that her daughter's marriage with him would be a bitter grief of her life, the downfall of her hopes, the last step completing the final ruin of her race. Still, Bianca's life must not be sacrificed, and she withdrew her opposition.

Not another word did the stern lady utter, even when Bianca knelt at her feet to thank her. She would not assist in any preparations for the marriage, and the last of the Monteleones was led to the altar by her English lover in plain morning dress, and without any ornament. Her mother never blessed her—never gave her consent to the marriage. She said but those few words: "I withdraw my opposition." So Stephen Lord Lynne married Bianca Monteleone, and immediately the ceremony was ended he took her to Italy.

For one year Lord and Lady Lynne were perfectly happy. Bianca sighed when she remembered her mother in the gloomy castle of Serrano. She may be forgiven if her mind did not always dwell on that sad and cheerless picture. For the first time in her life she was happy; she was out in the fair, bright world, mixing freely with her fellow-creatures, admired, loved, and praised by all. Her husband adored her; never was love so passionate or so devoted as that of Lord Lynne for his beautiful bride. Her lovely face and sweet, graceful manners, her childlike simplicity, won all hearts. In Rome, in Florence, and in sunny Naples, she who had never in her whole life heard one compliment, now found homage and flattery everywhere. "It was impossible to be young and not enjoy the new and golden life opened to her. For the first time she wore magnificent jewels and costly dresses, that enhanced her beauty and made her doubly fair. She liked the grandeur that surrounded her; it was pleasure to dwell in sumptuous rooms, to tread upon soft, thick carpets; to gaze upon rare pictures and statues; to have servants ready to obey her slightest word. It was pleasant to be a young, idolized wife, whose every wish and whim were gratified.

In the first tumult of this new life, Bianca half forgot the hopes she had wrecked, the ambition she had betrayed. Once when talking to Lord Lynne of her mother, she suddenly clasped her arms round his neck and asked him to give up his English home, to bring his wealth over to Spain, and to call himself by her name of Monteleone; but he laughed long and loudly at the mere idea. "Wait, Bianca," he said, lightly, "until you have seen Lynneworld. Why, my dear child, you could put all Serrano in one corner of it. You must become English; I can never be a Spaniard."

Whatever she may have thought, Lady Lynne never expressed that wish to her husband again.

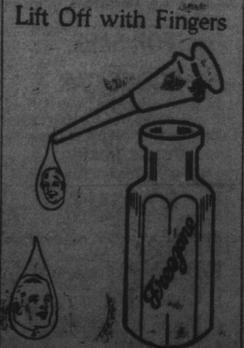

They had been married almost a year, when a sudden desire took possession of Lady Lynne. It was to return to Serrano so that her child might be born there. Lord Lynne said all he could to dissuade her, but in vain. She was too gentle, too yielding to persist in reverting to her wish when her husband had expressed disapprobation, but in a hundred ways he perceived how much she was really bent upon it.

They had spent a year of unalloyed happiness. Day by day Lord Lynne loved more dearly and deeply the beautiful, gentle girl, who had touched his heart as no other woman ever could or did. To make her happy, to watch her beautiful, girlish face brighten at his loving words, was the study and pleasure of his life. He divined her wishes, and executed them almost before they were uttered. They wandered about in those fair Italian cities, and life for them resembled the golden dreams of the lotus-eater.

"I wish I could understand, dear Bianca," said Lord Lynne to his wife one day, "why you wish to return to that gloomy old Serrano." "I cannot tell," she replied. "I do not understand what it is that seems to call me home, but my mother's face is always before me; and oh, Stephen, I would give anything for my little child to be born in my old home!" (To be continued.)

Navy blue is a favorite shade for youthful street costumes and pleasing is a usual feature.

CORNS Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit. Drop a little "Prezons" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Prezons" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the callus, without soreness or irritation.

After Separation of Fifteen Years.

DAUGHTER FINDS PARENTS IN PRISON.

Auburn, N.Y.—Mary Rizzo, 15-year-old school girl, knew she had a father and mother. For wasn't she just like her play-mates? And didn't they all have parents? But she never knew her's. They had disappeared from her life when she was still a baby, five months old. Friends of the family adopted her. They took her from Oswego, where she had been born, to Rochester. They raised her carefully, keeping the secret of her parentage a mystery.

But how the girl has learned the truth. Her father and mother were in prison for murder.

It was a shock, the other day when she first visited Auburn, to find her parents behind the bars of the state penitentiary.

But they are alive, said the girl, happily, and I'm so glad. At last I know where my father and mother really are.

Of course, it's a terrible thing to be in prison, but it might be worse. It's going to be my chief ambition in life now to gain their release.

After he had learned that his daughter had discovered the truth, hidden from her for years, Vincenzo Rizzo, the father, appealed to Warden E. S. Jennings, and the warden arranged the meeting between the girl and her parents.

A prison waiting room is not a cheerful place. But it radiated happiness when Mary entered it. At last her dream was coming true. She was going to see her real parents for the first time in her memory. The rattle of the warden's keys, the creak of the heavy iron gate, the swing of the grey cell door were music to her ears. Her parents were coming. Grieved and worn by the five years behind the bars, they entered the room. But they were beautiful to the girl.

It was a reunion for the parents, not only with their child but with themselves, too. They had seen each other only once since they entered the prison in 1918.

Cannibals of Birdland.

HOW THE BUTCHER-BIRD LIVED UP TO HIS NAME.

The Red-backed shrike had their nest and their store of food in the heart of a thorn bush. They were smaller than thrushes, but size was nothing—they were fierce and terrible.

They were handsome, too, especially the cock bird. He had a grey head and neck with a black check-band which passing across his fierce eyes, gave him almost the appearance of wearing a couple of eye patches. His back was a rich chestnut black and his breast was a pale red, white his black tail was streaked with white. But his hooked beak and claws were cruel and savage.

Insects—other than large beetles—were of little use to these two; they wanted larger game, and this game took the form of young birds, mice, and reptiles such as frogs and lizards. All around the nest was evidence of this taste. Several mice, a few fledglings, and a great many beetles were impaled on the long thorns, to be devoured at leisure by the carnivorous couple. Truly these two were correctly termed "butcher-birds."

A Wonderful Flight. With astonishing swiftness the shrike left his lair and went in search of food. The flight through the black-thorn was astonishing because of the thousands of long, sharp spines that literally seemed to bar his way. One error of judgment on leaving the bush would have meant instant death to the shrike, in the form of adding himself to his own larder.

In a few minutes he settled on the bough of a tree deep in the wood. A large, glittering beetle hummed by, and the next moment the shrike had got him and flew back with his prey to the larder in the blackthorn.

Unfortunately for him, just as he was speeding into the home, he met his wife coming out, and on an instant a terrific battle ensued between these two. They fought like fends, until at last the male bird retired hastily to restore somewhat his ruffled plumage.

Quarrels Are Common. These family fights were nothing out of the common. They occurred perhaps half a dozen times a day, and the harder the two fought the more devoted they were to each other.

Beyond the wood was a distant farm, and passing it recently the shrike, who had only recently migrated to England from the warm south, had noticed a number of newly-born chick scampering about and scratching up the rich soil.

He would have stopped there and then but for the fact that his talons were already encumbered with the dead body of a small rat. He decided to pay it a visit now and increase the larger stock while his mate attended to her eggs.

Slipping forward through the trees in a sort of sliding flight, and looking something like a rainbow that had broken loose and got in among the trees, the shrike made for an elm that overhung the chicken run.

Chicken For Dinner. Perched there, and looking very innocent, he eyed the scene below. A number of hens were clucking to their chicks; and here the shrike showed his cunning.

Very neatly he proceeded to do the same. He clucked in a caressing way that quite deceived the hens and the chicks. Several chicks moved towards him, leaving the mother bird puzzled but not very alarmed at this mysterious repetition of her own voice.

Four chicks were straggling towards the deceivers and then, without warning, there was a flash of colour that seemed to fall from the tree to the ground and then back again. The three chicks that remained were very astonished—the fourth was past being astonished at anything.

McTigue Offered 20,000 Pounds to Fight Beckett.

New York, May 22.—Dr. T. McCarton, the fight promoter of Ireland, who staged the McTigue-Silk battle in Dublin, yesterday cabled McTigue an offer of £20,000 (about $90,000) to fight Joe Beckett at the race track in Dublin on August 18.

McCarton says if McTigue accepts Eugene Corri, the noted English sportsman, will be the referee.

A very smart and new silhouette is so straight that the ordinary blouses at the back is suppressed.

SIDETALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

THEY TIE MY HANDS.

I am thinking to-day, as I do about once in so often, of the many people who must have it in for me.

I am referring to the people who ask me to write about that is not of general interest which I do not feel that anything worth while to say, they will eagerly await my return, and do not sign.

My hands. I don't feel justifying up the whole column on that is of interest only to a small class.

On the other hand, I cannot write to explain and explain my silence as if he did me the courtesy to write.

He Beats Up His Daughter.

In a recent issue, one letter friend writes about the family quarrel between herself, a disagreeable man who got mad at his wife and beat her up because she was late and who habitually says anything doesn't suit him.

Another perfectly good girl, uses powder and an eye pencil, and evidently has no great respect for her home (strange as it may seem), and the mother fears that she is too much for the girl.

One sympathizes deeply with the harassed mother, but one feels that cases just like that are common enough to make a text.

Borrows Money at 100 Per Cent.

Nor yet does it seem as if I could write anything not already glaringly obvious about the case of a man who borrows money and makes small monthly payments and borrows money at the rate of 100 per cent. "And in his home is dire poverty. His wife hunted railroad tracks to get a few lumps of coal to burn last winter. She went to rummage sales to buy herself and the child shoes."

A man who habitually borrows money at such a rate is a fool. What good to try to reach his case by writing an article? How could he possibly have brains enough to benefit by it?

And what would it mean to the great run of people to warn them against a folly that not one man in ten thousand would think of committing?

Marriage Without Love.

Another woman wants to know whether I think it would be better for her to marry a man she does not love for the sake of home and children. Of which latter she is very fond. She gives me several details about herself, her position and the man, which make it an individual matter rather than one which could be dealt with in my column.

I hope these people whom I have spoken of will recognize themselves and understand why they have waited eagerly in vain.

And I hope many others of whom I have not spoken specifically, but who have asked me to write on similar personal and individual subjects, will

Gibbons Cuts Boxing Tour.

St. Paul, May 19.—Following a conference between Tommy Gibbons and his manager, Eddie Kane of St. Paul, it was announced that the proposed exhibition tour of Gibbons prior to his meeting with Jack Dempsey at Shelby, Mont., on July 4, would be cut to a week or ten days and be confined to such cities in Montana and Canada as can be reached by easy jumps.

Kane said the tour would be of no special benefit to Gibbons and there was always the possibility that it might result in injuries that could not be overcome before July 4.

Kane has left St. Paul for Montana to select a site for the training camp of the challenger. Several Montana cities are bidding for the privilege of having Gibbons train within their limits. Thus far Havre has the edge, both on account of its location and because of the fact that leading citizens of that place have agreed to buy ringside seats to the amount of $20,000 if Tommy will train at Havre.

It was announced to-day that Mrs. Gibbons and three children will accompany Tom to the training camp and that she will remain in Montana until after the battle at Shelby. Gibbons will return to St. Paul after his exhibition tour and take his family and such of his training partners as have not preceded him to the site selected for his training camp.

Gibbons is a home boy. He is always around his home when not away for matches, and for those he usually leaves at the very last moment and gets back as quickly as possible when the match is over.

Will Have Home in Shelby.

His beautiful new home in St. Paul was purchased only a few weeks ago, and he is just moving in. But Mrs. Gibbons, realizing that Tom would be missing his home life while training for a month preparatory to the titular bout, decided to take Tommy J., Jack and Dick and establish a home at Shelby until after the July 4 bout is over.

Jack Clifford, a St. Paul heavyweight, has been signed as one of Tommy's training partners, and two or three others are being sought by Kane, who wishes the challenger to have the best men obtainable for his workouts.

In the meantime preparations for the big bout are progressing rapidly at Shelby, according to latest reports from there. L. J. Molmby, head of the American legion of Montana, states that work on the arena to seat 60,000 persons will start at once. If the seat sale by June 15 warrants it, the arena could be increased to a capacity of 100,000 by running seats up the side of the natural bowl, one-half mile west of Shelby. It was pointed out to-day if 100,000 persons were accommodated, the arena would be more than 410 feet from the ring. Plans provide that the first thirty-six rows will include 10,000 ringside seats, facilities for the press and for the motion picture operators.

A LATE SPRING.

The day is dark and gloomy, the clouds are low and gray, my rheumatism is a rhenmy, and it has come to stay. I say to my Aunt Fannie, in accents stern and gruff, "Oh, where is Gentle Annie, who put up such a bluff? Methinks she should deliver the goods she advertised; this weather makes me shiver, I'm all demoralized." The wild wet rain is slouching against my cottage door, and muddy rills are washing around the Blue Front store. It is too wet for tillage, the farmers all complain, and people in the village admit a convex pain. The birds that should be singing on every bush and spray are wet and cold and springing no cheer-up, sunshine lay. My cow all day is bawling in water to her waist, and still the rain is falling with idiotic haste. Through every nook and cranny the winds like banisters wall; if I met Gentle Annie I'd chase her into jail. She talked of yellow roses of blossom and of bud, and now her gruff discloses a stretch of rain and mud. She talked of fragrant lilies, the helm that sunshine yields, of loping lambs and fillies in sponged pasture fields. And I remark to granny, "I'm weary of her tricks; I've soured on Gentle Annie—she's handing us gold bricks."

NOTICE—A Special Meeting of Guardians and Juveniles of the N.B.S. will be held to-morrow night, Thursday, May 31st, at 8 p.m. A large attendance is requested. Business important. By order J. R. ADEY, Secretary.

The King in Rome.

THEIR MAJESTIES VISIT TO CHURCHES.

A gala performance took place last night of Rossini's "Barber of Seville" at the Costantini Theatre, in the Via Firenze, for the King and Queen and the King and Queen of Italy. It was given by the city of Rome.

The whole theatre broke into loud clapping when the royal party entered the box and the applause lasted several minutes.

As usual, everyone was captivated by Queen Mary's regal presence. She wore a diamond tiara, and her breast was covered with jewels. Opera glasses were unceasingly focussed on her during the whole stay of the royal party in the theatre.

This morning the King and Queen were obliged to divide forces to carry out the programme laid down for them. The King visited museums and the Queen went to several of Rome's celebrated churches, first to St. Paul Outside the Walls. King George is the hereditary deacon of this church, where his stall is carved with the British arms.

Flags and Washing.

At the beautiful and ancient church of San Clemente, which is really three superimposed churches, the Queen was taken round by the prior, Father Nolan, and at the Irish Benedictine monks, who live at San Clemente Monastery, assembled to receive her. On the way the Queen passed the Temple of Vesta. All along the route people hung out flags, and in a number of humble dwellings the usual washing hung out.

In the afternoon the King and Queen visited the international horse show and in the evening there was a banquet and reception at the British Embassy for the King and Queen of Italy.

It is understood that the King and Queen expressed extreme pleasure and satisfaction at their visit to the Vatican.

World Court Question Puzzling U.S.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(By Canadian Press)—Controversy over the world court continues and in the last several days has been marked by new developments which indicate the question of what the United States will do it far from settled. In fact, the indications a month or more ago were much more favorable to a comparatively easy adjustment of the controversy than they are. President Harding was advised early in March that two-thirds of the Senate would be in favor of the Hughes plan for the world court, but there was a string to this proposition. This was that the administration plan would carry if the President could convince senators on an anti-league platform. It looks as if a majority of the Senate foreign relations committee would oppose the Hughes plan for entering the court. Moreover, an organization is being formed all over the country of the old anti-league forces for the purpose of fighting entrance into the world court on the ground that it is an adjunct or creature of the League.

Some powerful newspapers that supported President Harding in the 1920 campaign have turned against the idea of the "United States entering into the world court, under the terms favored by Mr. Hughes. Such developments as these make it clear the struggle over the world court issue is far from over. In fact, opponents of the court declare it is just beginning. Many Republican political leaders are manifesting worry over the issue, fearing it may yet split the party and the increasing number of democratic leaders are advising that the democrats hold aloof and let the Republicans fight it out.

Dancing in Church.

Christ Church, Carlton Hill, St. John's Wood, which is shortly to become the home of a well-known sculptor, who is having it converted into a comfortable up-to-date residence, is not the only known instance of a religious edifice being utilized for purely worldly purposes.

A chapel in Crosby-row, Southwark whose walls formerly echoed Wesley's voice, is now a paper warehouse bales of newly-made paper taking the place of pews and worshippers.

A Congregational church at Willesden has been converted into a draper's shop, the pulpit serving as a cash desk.

Up to within quite recent years St. Anne's Roman Catholic Church, New York, enjoyed a considerable reputation as a place of worship. Many famous people attended it, and some famous divines conducted its services.

Then its congregation dwindled to a very small number of people, until Edgar Rogers, Brigade Secretary, conveying on behalf of Field Marshal Lord Grenfell and the governing body their congratulations and good wishes to him on taking over the command of the Newfoundland Regiment and expressing their high appreciation of the flourishing condition of the C.L.B. Cadets in Newfoundland.

The mail also brought a letter from our old comrade Sergt. George Edgecombe whose address is care General Delivery Spokane, Washington, U.S.A. He is keenly interested in the C.L.B. still and sends hearty congratulations to Lt.-Col. Walter Rendell, C.B.E., on taking over the command. He also is pleased to hear that Frank Roberts' memory was being kept green by a trophy for wrestling known as the Frank Roberts Wrestling Trophy. Parsons, inspected the Company and promised all the help he could to forward Wabana's Brigade interests. Company J, owns their own Armory and the building is very useful for many purposes.

Foravante Company L has 24 on the strength for April. Pte. No. 722, Robt Miles, has resigned and left with his parents for U.S.A. Lieut. J. J. Bishop, O.C., is doing a man's part and carrying on splendidly under great difficulties. This Company is forging ahead.

The N.C.O.'s are Sergt. Thomas Blais; Corporals Geo. Ford, Samuel Blais; Lance Corp. James Best and Walter Tompkinson. Drill is held on Wednesdays and Saturdays, in the Topical lads are all anxious for Camp days. All ranks congratulate Major Lindsay, O.C. of Wabana, on being elected W.M. of Cliff Lodge. He will be installed June 6th. Wednesday night and Lt.-Col. Walter Rendell, C.B.E., Major Williams and other C.L.B. Officers are going over to have the annual official inspection of J. Company that day and will attend the installation ceremonies of W.M. "Doctor Jack" Coming to the Nickel. HAROLD LLOYD'S LATEST AND GREATEST COMEDY.

Harold Lloyd has started making big feature comedies, one of the greatest of which is, "Dr. Jack" which has been booked by the Nickel for early screening. Having been informed of the wonderful growing power of this comedy, we have been inspired to write the following poem:

SOME DOCTOR. If you're sick of this life With it's toll and it's strife, Remember that joy will come back; Just watch her the day When the Telegram will say: He's arrived here at last—Dr. Jack.

There are doctors in town, Yes, and some of renown, And others you class as quack; But the one full of pep, And the man with a rep 'Is the one you should see—Dr. Jack.

If you walk with a crutch And it hurts very much, To like to the corner and back, You'll laugh and you'll roar, And won't limp any more, As soon as you see—Dr. Jack.

If your boy, as a rule, Wants to play home from school, And you think he deserves a good smack, Just take it from me, You will learn when you see How he's cured by our friend—Dr. Jack.

You'll laugh till you cry, And you'll wonder why, That some folks a smile never crack, If you know such a man, I would be a good plan, To tell him to see—Dr. Jack.

Obituary.

JOSEPH SYMONDS. The passing of Mr. Joseph Symonds, the well known cabman, at the early age of 33 years, will be heard with profound regret by the many citizens of St. John's, who knew him. The deceased was taken suddenly ill on Monday morning last, and was removed to the General Hospital for treatment. Last night he showed signs of improvement, but at an early hour this morning he gradually grew worse and breathed his last at 4 a.m. The cause of death being due to Bright's Disease. He enlisted with "Ours," in the early part of the war, having embarked with "O. Co.," in April, 1915. He saw much active service, and was engaged most of the time on the regimental transport. The deceased leaves to mourn three brothers, William and Arthur of the city and Albert in Detroit; and two sisters, Mrs. M. F. Smyth and Mrs. John Robbins, to whom the sympathy of the community will go out in their hour of sorrow in which the Telegram joins. The funeral will take place from the home of his brother, Mr. Arthur Symonds, 102 Barnes Road on Thursday, at 2.30 p.m. Interment will take place at the General Protestant Cemetery.

Died Suddenly.

AGED LADY PASSES AWAY DURING SLEEP. The passing of Miss Elizabeth Leo a well known figure amongst the older generation took place suddenly yesterday at the home of Mrs. P. E. Wallace, Theatre Hill. The deceased had been lodging with Mrs. Wallace for some weeks past and had been out until 10 p.m. Monday, when she returned and retired to bed. As she did not board with the Wallace family it caused no anxiety when she failed to leave her room on Tuesday morning. At noon however, one of the household knocked at the door but obtaining no response assumed that she was still sleeping, and it was not until 2 p.m. that Mrs. Wallace, thinking that Miss Leo might be ill, entered her room and discovered that she was dead. Dr. John Murphy was called and stated that death had occurred during sleep and was due to heart failure.

The late Miss Leo was a daughter of Sergt. Michael Leo of the Royal Field Artillery; both of her parents were natives of Limerick, Ireland, and she is the sole survivor of a family of six. She was born on Duckworth Street near Fort William and is seventy-three years of age. The remains are now at Mr. J. T. Martin's Mortuary Rooms, from whence the funeral will take place on Thursday next at 2.30 p.m.

Pleasing Entertainment.

AT CANON WOOD HALL LAST NIGHT. The entertainment given by Miss Kathleen Fraser and her talented troupe of performers in the Canon Wood Hall last night was a marked success. The spacious hall was filled to its utmost capacity, and a handsome sum was realized. The object of the affair was to raise funds for the public school at Labrador. The programme consisted of songs, recitations, pianoforte solos, monologues and sketches. The entire presentation was a big success and fully merited the attendance which was a large one. The splendid entertainment will be repeated to-night in aid of the Mercy Convent at the K. of C. Memorial School Auditorium.

Lois Weber Picture

a Good Offering. Lois Weber, the only woman who has won fame as a director of motion pictures, is responsible for the production. She credits the story line to Marion Orth, but the development and direction are her own. In this picture Miss Weber gives us some of her very best work. She appears to have left behind her the rather sensational themes, the liking for long close-up views of weeping heroines, the tendency to become prosaic. Instead she gives us a cleverly acted story, simple in theme, well plotted, containing not too much sentiment to make it appealing and not too much melodrama, but enough to get it a dash of excitement. Most of the characters in the story seem like real persons. Lois Weber has always been something of a discoverer of talent, and nearly all the players in this production are new-comers to the screen having been only a few times seen before and in small parts. But one can compliment the director's judgment in their selection. Claire Windsor, who has the heroine's part, is pretty and unaffected with a charming personality and real acting ability. Mona Lisa, to whom falls the unpleasant and difficult role of the temptress, plays the part as well as anyone could. Her dark beauty is attractive, and she has poise and assurance. The male members of the casts are also well chosen. The story takes place in a small town, Miss Weber's favorite picture location. At the Majestic.

Inter-Club Billiards.

GUARDS WIN OPENING GAMES IN SECOND ROUND—C.E.I. HAS 10 POINTS LEAD. The second round in the Inter-club billiard tournament opened in the C.E.I. rooms last night. The Guards team won both games and reduced their opponents lead to 10 points. The first game was played by Hunter (Guards) and Fardale (C.E.I.) and Hunter won by 24 points. The breaks were:— Hunter (300)—22, 12, 19, 17, 11, 12, 15, 23—190. Fardale (276)—15, 12, 14, 10, 27, 10, 26, 11—125. The second game was played between Ellis (Guards) and Hallett (C.E.I.). The latter player opened play in splendid style, and increased the score on his opponent as the game progressed. Towards the close of the match Ellis, who was gradually cutting down his opponent's lead, made a pretty 23 break and won out by the narrow margin of 5 points. The breaks were:— Ellis (300)—12, 12, 14, 12, 21, 11, 23—105. Hallett (295)—15, 14, 26, 13, 12, 11, 15—108. The players to-night will be Angel (Guards) vs. Bartlett (C.E.I.) at 7 p.m. and Maddick (Guards) vs. Wills (C.E.I.) at 9 p.m.

The Passing of Mrs. Patrick Myrick.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—I noticed by last evening's papers the passing to her eternal reward, of an old and estimable lady in the person of Mrs. Patrick Myrick, who came to this country in the late forties from her native village, Knockfer Co. Kilkenny, Ireland, accompanied by her mother, two brothers, James and Patrick and two sisters, Mrs. Michael O'Brien and Mrs. Patrick Power. All the above have long passed to their eternal reward. The deceased, as I have often heard it from the older folks, was a splendid type of the young Irish girl of that time, as she was blessed, not with the things of this world but with a good religious education and her life was well spent. Her husband, who was wounded in the '41 election riot and afterwards appointed to the Cape Race Light and Signal Station, pre-deceased her about 27 years ago. She leaves a large family of sons and grand children to mourn her loss. May her soul rest in peace. —COM. St. John's, May 30th.

A String of Irish Memories.
Many stories of Irish life are told by Sir Henry Robinson, Bart., in "Memories, Was and Otherwise" (Cassell), a record of forty years of social work in Ireland.

When the author first arrived in Ireland, he had a long train journey at night ahead of him. He was tired, so he tipped the guard to lock him in a carriage.

The guard promised to allow no one to disturb him, but at every station he opened the carriage door to give information of their whereabouts.

"This is Knockroghery," he would hallow; waking the traveller out of a heavy sleep. "No change. Here right where 'yare!"

The Soup Cure.

The Duke of Edinburgh once went round the coast of Ireland in H. M. S. "Lively," and finding on one place that the people were suffering from rheumatism and neuralgia, which the ship's doctor told him was the result of low feeding and poverty of the blood, he distributed a quantity of tinny soup and other delicacies.

Not knowing that the things were meant to be eaten, the people used them to rub into their shoulders. One man in whose house the author found an empty meat-extract tin spoke with heated breath of the marvellous properties of this mysterious preparation when applied in the form of a poultice for neuralgia.

The ship's doctor found one man with his shirt off undergoing a vigorous application of tinned soup to his back for lumbago.

Once in a country hotel, Sir Henry asked the boots to waken him at 8.30. He was aroused at seven o'clock by the man's shouting: "Would your honour like to be called now?" Learning the time, Sir Henry abused the boots roundly, and told him to be off and wake him at 8.30.

When next he awoke it was 9.30, and when the man was asked why he did not knock at 8.30, he replied: "I did, but you being that tired, I knocked 'em away for fear 'o' wake ye again!"

The landlord of a certain hotel, when making out a guest's bill, would say: "How much whiskey did ye drink since Thursday last? Will I put ye down for a bottle, or maybe a bottle and a half?"

"Certainly not," the guest would say. "I never had any at all."

"Then I'll put ye down for a bottle of claret, will I?"

"Do nothing of the kind. I've had nothing but ginger ale and stout occasionally."

"Well, we'll make it a dozen of each, eh?"

A Marvellous Memory!
During his Chief Secretaryship, Mr. Birrell, who had by no means a retentive memory for faces and names, stayed at an hotel in Killarney. He was introduced to a Mr. Fitzpatrick, one of the Local Government Board's inspectors. Mr. Birrell was as pleasant to him as he invariably was to everyone.

Next morning a Mr. Bentley, who had met Mr. Birrell the year before, came anxious to know if he would remember him. When Mr. Birrell, coming down the stairs, saw Mr. Bentley he walked over and began talking to him.

Mr. Bentley was more than surprised that Mr. Birrell should have recognized him on the spot, but when someone remarked to the Chief Secretary about his meeting with Mr. Bentley, Mr. Birrell replied: "Bentley, who is Bentley?"

"Why, that chap you rushed up to and shook hands with in the hall."

"Good heavens!" said Mr. Birrell; "I thought he was Fitzpatrick, the inspector."

A year afterwards Mr. Bentley was heard holding forth in a train on the subject of Mr. Birrell. "I haven't a word to say for his policy and all that," he said, "but there is one remarkable characteristic about him. Birrell never forgets a face!"

"Gentleman Jim" Wants to Buy Cincinnati Reds.

A telegram from James Corbett, former holder of the world's heavy-weight boxing championship, asking the lowest terms for the majority stock in the Cincinnati baseball club, was received at the club headquarters here recently.

It was said that the offer is a bona fide one, and that Corbett is backed by a number of business men who are desirous of entering major league baseball.

August Hermann, president of the club, is on a vacation and could not be reached. However, a statement of the owner of the majority stock said that his stock was not for sale. He said he believed he expressed the mind of the other stockholders in the club.

Doctors Now Watching Crazy "Little W"

THE FORMER CROWN PRINCE OF GERMANY TROUBLED WITH "WERNER"

WIRTINGEN, May 18.—The former Crown Prince of Germany, who recently examined him, reported that he suffers from severe dementia.

The dashing idol of the boulevards has turned to a recluse for comfort in his solitude, and the religion of an insane man.

His exhausted nerves are forced to listen for several vital services conducted by the ex-Crown Prince on a daily organ.

He is subject to alternate garrulity and taciturnity and puzzle his attendants.

It was these increasing eccentricities in "Little W" behavior that led to the removal of the Berlin specialists to him.

News leaked out that they had tested the prince's state. Their diagnosis, in a report, was substantially that "Mild mental disease; probable form of dementia, which will become progressive." It has been communicated to the ex-Crown Prince to the German Government.

The ex-Crown Prince has been ordered to take a "complete" keep quiet, and has been ordered to put himself under the care of his relatives.

His relatives, however, seem to want him about his mother, it is said, resented his le-making propensities and borrowing money from the Kaiser.

The ex-Crown Prince has been accustomed to a life of and excitement. He was no to the night life of Berlin. He went out to Geraldine Farrer, beautiful American singer, whose father uttered the stern warning done with that American.

There can be no union between Hohenzollern and a commoner. Later he was involved in a deal with Meta Hara, the dancer of Montmartre, who was by the French as a spy.

Meta Hara met "Little W" some German manoeuvres, and accompanied him to his secret in the Silesian mountains.

Kaiser heard of wild doings ordered the prince back to Germany, and had Meta Hara sent to France to continue her spying.

She ended it before a first after dancing the night out of cell. Will her royal lover also in a cell—a padded cell?

The ex-Crown Prince for beguiled his lonely hours by ing memoirs, helping the blacksmith, and laying out a plan.

His occupation gave too much for brooding, and his mind fringed a tinge of religious fanaticism.

He found a whole collection of religious works in the old vicarage Wirtingen. He deserted the vicar which a Berlin musical composer had sent him for Christmas.

An old-fashioned organ from the he coaxes wheezy hymn tunes, sometimes plays a tune through his valet-secretary, Heberlein, to ed to listen.

It is said he has been trying convert Heberlein, who is a member of the Greek Orthodox Church. It is certain that he compels other servants to attend his services in the vicarage house where they must sit for hours listening to the rantings of their employer.

Sheer fatigue on his part is the factor which brings these services to a close.

If the ex-Crown Prince is insane, he must be nearly so.

I shot a golf ball in the air. It fell to earth I know not where. Although it cut me to the soul, I gave it up and lost the hole.

For weeks and weeks I kept in quest That little ball I couldn't find. I thought it very strange and queer That it should wholly disappear.

And then, upon one summer day, A wealthy man I chanced to pass. He shot a ball into the cup. And I politely picked it up.

Upon the ball he stepped to climb In letters clear I saw my name. "Oh, little ball," I shouted then, "At last I have you back again!"

The rich man looked and muttered low: "I found that ball two weeks ago."

Two weeks ago!" said I. "Indeed, I didn't know you couldn't read!"

My Daughter, Twelve Years Old, Must See This Picture, Chicago Censor Chief Says of "TO PLEASE ONE WOMAN"

Office of THE BOARD OF CENSORS Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Dan Roche, December 8, 1920. Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Chicago, Ill.

My Dear Mr. Roche: You have asked me for my opinion of the picture, "TO PLEASE ONE WOMAN," and here it is:

I have never read an essay, nor heard a sermon which argued so eloquently against selfishness as does this picture. I have listed it among the pictures which my twelve-year-old daughter must see. I want to have her understand how far-reaching the results of selfishness may be, and I know of nothing that would drive this lesson home harder or keep it in her mind longer than this story.

All the arguments I might give her could not approach in convincings the effects of your picture.

Very truly yours, (Signed) W. F. WILLIS, Chief Censor, Board of Censors, Chicago, Illinois.

MOB VIOLENCE. Washington Post: The father of the victim of a vicious crime out in Missouri furnished a splendid example of respect for order when he appealed to a mob bent on violence to let the law take its course. If one so close to the tragedy could have seen so clearly, surely those not personally concerned should have been able to see the right way. But they didn't. The father's appeal failed, and a man was lawlessly slain to glut the mob's appetite for violence. Every act of this sort tends to defeat the end at which it is ostensibly aimed—the suppression of crime—for it is a crime itself. Such action prompts other persons who are lawlessly inclined to violate law in the indulgence of their passions. The Missouri father's stand for law may have lost out with the mob to which he appealed, but it was out with all right-thinking Americans.

Underground Fires.

HOUSES AND MEN ARE SOMETIMES SWALLOWED UP BY THEM.

An underground fire, which has defied all efforts to put it out, is smouldering and spreading near Shrewsbury.

It was first noticed some six months back, but nobody knows how it started, or on what fuel it feeds.

The most likely explanation, however, seems to be that underlying the spot is a bed of half-formed coal. Anyway, the unseen fire must have a big store of combustible material to draw upon, for even the recent abnormally wet weather has had no subduing effect on it, the water being simply vaporized by the intense heat.

Similar underground fires are not altogether unknown, especially in the colliery districts.

One, near Winesbury ate its way to a spot, beneath the outer suburbs of the town itself, causing the inhabitants to abandon their homes in panic. The corporation hired a watchman to warn people to keep away from the danger area, but one night the undermined earth caved in, carrying the unhappy man with it into the raging inferno below.

The story of this famous "Burning Hill" of Staffordshire is a curious one. Owing to the accidental firing of some abandoned mine workings, the heat of the surface-earth was greatly increased. Snow melted there as soon as it fell, even during the most severe winters; the grass was always green, and geraniums, fuchsias, and other semi-household plants flourished the year round.

Seeing this, some enterprising local gardeners established a school of horticulture on the slopes of the artificial Vesuvius, and numbers of rare Colonial and other plants were produced. One day, however, the subterranean fires went suddenly out, the soil resumed its ordinary temperature, the tropical plants died, and the school of horticulture was no more.

EIGHTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The Newfoundland branch of the W.M.S. opened its eighth annual meeting in Wesley Church, May 29th at 8 o'clock. Mr. Eugene Lindsay, our esteemed Branch President, presiding. After the preliminaries of opening, the calling of the role to which a large number of delegates responded, the Minutes of the Executive Meeting were read and adopted. Mr. (Rev. J. Joyce in a few well-chosen words welcomed the Delegates, and Mrs. Oliver Jackson replied. Creations were received from two ladies, representatives of St. Thomas's and the Presbyterian Churches. They spoke of their deep sympathy and interest in connection with our Missionary Movement, thereby forming a bond of friendship between the different societies of our city churches. Mrs. Blount, in an excellent paper gave us an interesting glimpse of the Study Book for the coming year, which should doubtless make us more desirous of delving into the mysteries which it holds in store for us. Mrs. (Rev. Fairbairn in a clear and interesting way, gave a very beautiful message from Miss Harris, our native missionary in Jenabow, China. Special mention should be made of the Missionary Readings by Mrs. Alex Mews, a most touching picture being drawn of the missionary leaving home and friends to bring the "Good Tidings" to those in greatest need. A social hour now followed, the ladies having a friendly time in making the acquaintances of delegates and friends. The evening meeting opened at 7.45, Rev. J. G. Joyce, Pastor of Wesley Church acting as Chairman. In his opening remarks he told the story of a young Chinese man who was very bitter against Christianity, but after watching the lives of the missionaries, became convinced of its truth, and is now one of the brightest gems of the Church of Jesus Christ. Mrs. A. E. Parkins, the Branch Treasurer, reported of the zeal, enthusiasm and work of the different societies, and assured the audience that the work was progressing and growing. The following are the figures:— Auxiliaries raised, $4,922.50 Circles raised, $1,842.08 Bands raised, $1,524.83 Total, $8,290.53

Mrs. Joseph Peters in her paper on "Things Told and Untold," made mention of the W.M.S. work beginning 40 years ago at Hamilton, Ont. Then we had but one Auxiliary at George St. Since then our work has advanced with rapid strides. The address of the evening was delivered by Rev. C. H. Johnson. He showed us how ultimately the Cross of Christ will dominate the world, and all the nations shall acknowledge God. Musical items were rendered afternoon and evening by Miss Nellie Maund and Mrs. C. H. Garland. Dr. Fenwick, Supt. of Missions attended both meetings and by his presence and words of encouragement, inspired us to greater service during the coming year. The Branch is honored in having accepted Miss Millicent Howes, a recent graduate of Mt. Allison University, as one of their missionaries. A highly talented young lady, who is willing to devote all her energies to so great a cause. Meetings continue morning, noon and evening, to-day.

Why Furs Cause Rash.

That furs do occasionally cause rashes and skin eruptions has long been recognized by skin specialists, but, although all such cases should be properly investigated, there is no cause for undue alarm.

In days gone by the wearing of furs was more or less restricted to the well-to-do classes, who alone could afford to buy the beautiful natural skins then available.

The animals killed for pelts were chiefly of the soft-furred variety, and the furs for the most part worn undyed. As these wraps were comparatively light, it was rare to find any skin trouble resulting from their wear.

Even in those days, however, slight and temporary rashes were not unknown, due to overheating and moistening of the skin caused by wearing furs in unsuitable weather.

Such cases have increased in number since the advent of the fast-travelling motor has introduced a demand for heavier and thicker wraps.

Nowadays almost every woman and child wears fur of some sort or other, with the result that the market is flooded with cheap dyed imitations of the more costly skins.

The dye in these has introduced a certain element of danger. The difficulty in dyeing is to fix the dye, and for this purpose substances called mordants are employed.

Cheap Dye Danger.

A definite skin irritation is set up by insufficient mordanted dyes, which run and inflame the skin of the neck and lower part of the face, causing a troublesome, itchy eruption.

THIS is particularly likely to occur when the skin becomes warm and moist with perspiration. When we consider the mild nature of the past winter it is not surprising that there has been more skin trouble than usual from this source.

Furs are most useful in a cold, dry climate, but they always collect moisture in a damp one. Women, however, will obey the dictates of fashion at all costs.

Other possible causes of the present outbreak have been suggested, such as germs on the cheaper skins—which are mostly rabbit—and the failure thoroughly to remove poisonous chemicals, such as mercury and arsenic, sometimes used in the dyeing.

Germs are, of course, always a possible source of danger in both expensive and cheap furs, and all poisonous should be carefully removed or their use forbidden.

We have only to consider on the one hand the enormous number of dyed rabbit skins now in regular use, and on the other hand the comparative

Why Salmon Leave the Sea.

(By PROF. J. ARTHUR THOMSON.)

It is a pity to spoil the word "migration" by applying it to other kinds of mass-movements. True migration is best illustrated among the birds; it is a well established seasonal swing between summer quarters, the nesting and breeding places, and winter quarters, the resting and feeding places. True migration is a regular ebb and flow. But this sort of mass-movement is quite different from a shifting of shoals of fishes from one part of the sea to another during a period of the year when there is no question of breeding. They are following the movements of the animals on which they feed, and these are influenced by changes in the physical conditions of the water, such as temperature.

Starved by Hunger.

Or again when the Scandinavian lemmings have devoured everything edible they go on the march in search of food, and a small band will soon become a great army. But this is not migration. It is comparable to what has often taken place in human history, when the setting in of aridity, or something equally disquieting, forced the people to trek to new countries. In some cases, we admit it is difficult to know what word to use. Thus, a swarm of locusts is often no more than a mass-movement spurred by hunger; the horses have eaten up every green thing and they must press on, first on foot, and afterwards on wing.

Periodic Mass-Movements.

Thus, in Algiers the locusts appear in vast numbers in the early months of the year, coming from the Sahara, and return to near the Equator in winter. In the same way there are several kinds of monkeys in India that ascend the Himalayas in summer to a height sometimes of 10,000 feet, and descend to the low ground in the winter. This is a periodic mass-movement, but it has no close connection with the birth of the young ones. It seems, then, that we may distinguish true migrations, as in birds and fur-seals, which are regular, seasonal, and connected with breeding, from regular movements that have no such connection, and also from irregular irruptions or dispersals, which are due to over-population and lack of food, or to some change for the worse in the physical conditions. Leaving birds by themselves, let us picture some of the different kinds of movements among other creatures.

Ballooning of Spiders.

Very interesting is the mass movement of small spiders, so often seen in autumn, but sometimes occurring at other seasons. Several kinds of small spiders climb on to tall plants on a breezy morning and, standing with their heads to the wind, pay out three or four threads of silk—the gossamer. When these are long enough the wind tugs at them; the spiders let go and are borne through the air, sometimes for miles. The details do not concern us here, but the spiders eventually sink to earth and their ballooning threads, that have served their purpose, are entangled on the surface of the fields and meadows. One point is that the significance of these aerial journeys is to transport the spiders to a new area, from a crowded region. It may be, to one with more elbow-room. It is an exploration rather than a migration.

Migration of Fishes.

When the salmon have become large and lusty in the sea, they make for the rivers prompted by the urge to breed. They press up against the streams, after surmounting low waterfalls and overcoming strong rapids, and they are fasting all the time, notwithstanding their great exertions. To put it in slightly metaphorical words, they are moved by "love" rather than by "hunger." They continue their journey till they come to suitable gravelly beds, where the female makes a furrow and deposits the eggs, which the male fertilizes with the milt. After a slow development, which does not concern us here, the eggs develop into fry, which become fry, which become parr, which become smelt, which in their second or third year become restless and make for the sea! This again is true migration.

The Lamprey.

The lamprey, which is at a lower level than a fish, is interesting in its movements. There are some kinds—Brook Lampreys—that remain always in fresh water, as many trout do; but the Large Lamprey, which grows to be a yard long and as thick as one's wrist, feeds and grows in the sea, but comes up the rivers to spawn.

Now, the Large Lamprey's story differs from that of the salmon in this, that both parents die after spawning. Yet we cannot exclude the marine lamprey's movements from the rank of migration on the ground that the adults do not survive to make a return journey to the sea.

The same remark applies to the movements of the Common Eel, which are the converse of those of the Sea Lamprey. The eel grows large in rivers and ponds; they spawn and die in dark, deepish water far out in the Atlantic; the larvae, after about three years of changeful development in the open sea, ascend the rivers as eelers. The adults never share in the return journey, but the story as a whole illustrates true migration.

To sum up: (1) When vast numbers of dragon-flies, butterflies, spiders and so on, up to rats and serpents, suddenly appear, but not regularly, in a region where they are not common, this indicates a dispersal and an incursion prompted by hunger, either due to over-population or to some unpropitious change in the physical conditions. (2) When troops of reindeer or bands of monkeys or schools of octopuses or shoals of fishes regularly come and go from certain places to certain places, at different times of year, this indicates an answer-back to seasonal changes. Such mass-movements might be called periodic wanderings.

Freak Laws Multiply.

Freak legislation is still going strong. In various States of the American Union it is now a crime to adopt daylight saving. That is to say those who disregard standard time by setting their timepieces an hour ahead are violating the law and may be fined varying sums up to $500. It is not mentioned whether or not one is fined for getting up an hour earlier than usual, but presumably that also carries its penalties, as would going to bed an hour earlier. And then suppose one's timepiece gets out of kilter and runs fast, what is one to do under such circumstances?

The Doctor Was Right

When the good old family doctor was asked about baking powders, he said: "Use Royal. It is made from Cream of Tartar and is absolutely pure. You could dissolve a couple of teaspoons of Royal in water and drink it with benefit. That's a health test which few baking powders can meet." The doctor was right.

track at a curve, street car service was held up for two hours, and pedestrians were soaked by the mad rush and the depth of the water. Some thousands hurried to the scene to witness the sight, and for two days the place was an object of curiosity. Horses in wagons were at some points driven through the flood, but the water came up to the horses' breasts at almost every point and it was difficult to make way. Every building on Windsor Street below St. Antoine Street, including the Queen's Hotel, Grand Union Hotel, and several other large buildings suffered considerable damage, which could not be estimated as a result of the water which swept into their cellars and even into the ground floor in some places. Stores and restaurants, as well as a drug store on the corner of Windsor and St. Antoine Streets, suffered from the flood. White police officers at the scene at the time of the break claim that there was water to the height of over ten feet in one place when the huge geyser of water shot up from the city mains and swept downhill. Others claim that water to the depth of at least four feet swept into the ground floor of their premises and caused considerable damage. Constable Demers, of the traffic department, was on duty at the corner of St. Antoine and Windsor Streets when the flood commenced. Constable Demers stated that he was standing on his usual post in the centre of the street when he heard a crackling sound and saw the street around him begin to rise and fall. Realizing the cause of this, he ran to a drug store to telephone, and it was while he was notifying the authorities that the impending burst that the flood was released with a roar.

Collage and suits of every style are a beautifully finished and guaranteed stock of new will.

Claims for damages amounting to $1,000,000 have reached the City Hall. The now notorious pipe is the same which caused two deaths on St. Urbain street in 1921, and which figured in the Demonstigny street flood, which pelted even to the walls of the Star Chamber. In the latter, several property owners and tenants filed claims for damages in the Superior Court. The city denied responsibility, but the cases were upheld. The Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court likewise maintained this attitude and the Privy Council held that the appeal from these decisions should be rejected. The water main which had been the cause of so much trouble runs along St. Antoine Street, Dusby Lane, Le-tour, Vitre, up St. Urbain to Demonstigny, then to Dolormier Avenue. The distance covered is about two miles. Although nine distinct blow-outs have occurred in this main, the city is not inclined to abandon it, as the cost of replacing it would be approximately $1,000,000. An alternative plan was suggested three years ago, when the city was advised to reinforce the main throughout its entire length with iron hoops about a foot apart, with a view to preventing such occurrences as have happened of late, with consequent heavy loss. The authorities are still as mystified as ever, and cannot offer a solution of the phenomenon. It was suggested on opening the main that the recent break was two feet wide by four feet long. Friday, May 18th, the 24th anniversary of the founding of Montreal by Maisonneuve. The Executive Committee of the city placed a wreath at the base of the Monument on Place D'Armes to the intrepid explorer, while another wreath was placed on the Jean Mance Monument on the grounds of the Hotel Dieu Hospital whose anniversary falls on the same date. A similar celebration will take place on the 24th May at Lafontaine Park, when the valiant Dollard des Ormeaux, who routed the savage Iroquois at the Battle of the Long Sault will be honored. The "dope" business is still going strong and gaining addicts to its ranks every day. The glamor of secrecy hangs everlastingly over Chinatown. There is a master hand directing operations and the police only get the drugs. The Drug King is strong, powerful and mysterious. The victims rounded up by the police are an easy prey to the cruellest and most cunning trade in the world. The users of cocaine are not all of the street-of-the-police-kind and many are members of Society who don't have to frequent the "dives" or the pool rooms and lunch counters to get their portion of the white powder. Several doctors are strongly in favor of the Government's taking over the manufacture of the drugs, having their own chemists and special staff of assistants to attend to the distribution to doctors and hospitals. The police, who have been asked for a solution, declare there is no hope for a decline in the system of attacking the users as is now in force. Like the doctors, they are inclined to believe that Government control would be an improvement, as in that case anyone in possession of the drug could be arrested and condemned, provided the person having in possession had no Government permit. The police would know at once by an examination of the parcel, whether the holder secured it legally. The Government stamp on every grain sold would satisfy the police. Of the fifty-odd deaths with verdicts rendered by Coroners' juries, placing the blame on narcotic drugs, the police declare most of them were due to carelessness in handling a dangerous concoction. Seeking relief from bodily ills, the victim, in his mad haste for ease, takes too much for his weakened condition and dies. The man who professed the "cure" is held responsible, whereas the victim brought on the collapse by habitual use of cocaine or morphine. "What we call the cocaine addict is being made faster than we can ever hope to overtake," say the police. Publicity has created a new sensation, the desire to make the test. When it comes to cocaine, a lot of people are from "Chinatown" and have to be shown. The result is another crop of "fends" for the next year. Chinatown has no "King of the Dope Dealers." There is no "Queen," but there are many satellites, and not all of them are of the yellow race, according to the police. "Cocaine Daisy" is in jail. When she has done her time down on Fullman Street, she will be deported to the United States, and henceforth Canada will be forbidden to the first woman denounced by a mother to two Montreal police as a menace, on the ground that she had tried to entice a young girl into taking drugs. The woman, who was recently sentenced to jail and deportation to the United States after pleading guilty to vagrancy is not a drug trafficker, but a confirmed addict whose distorted mind apparently has led her to try and entice a girl of about fifteen whose mother complained to the police, the result being the offending woman's arrest within 24 hours. "I want you to try and save my children from this terrible menace," reads the letter written by the woman, whose name obviously cannot be published. "We are trying to raise our children to be honest and decent citizens, but we are poor and therefore have to live in a poor neighbourhood. "Now this woman, who lives in a foul den across the street, has been trying to entice my eldest daughter into taking drugs. My little girl told me that once the woman called her, and when she went over, there was a man there sticking a needle into his arm and the woman asked my little girl if she would like to try it. Please do try and get rid of this danger." A negro trafficker in drugs was sentenced to 18 months in jail. The report reached the home and had to batter down three doors before they gained an entrance, after disguised constables with other guests who attended a drug party given by the negro had come out of the house. La Caza's spokesman of "Allen Agitators," says: "The immigration of people who come to swell the number of our artisans and thus compete with our countrymen is opposed and rightly. Immigrants carrying with them any trace of infirmity or infectious disease are opposed—again rightly. But the moral health of our splendid population and our economic welfare should also command our strictest attention. That is why we approve wholeheartedly of the Government measure against fomenters of trouble and social unrest. The tenth opening of Camp Alverna for the summer season of 1923 will take place on July 2, remaining open till the end of August. It is operated a short distance from St. Saviour des Monts, in the Laurentian Mountains. The camp is conducted under the direction of the Alverna Catholic Association. Boys between the ages of ten and eighteen years, provided they are acceptable to the camp committee are eligible to attend. Though the boys live a camp life entirely, precautions have been taken for healthful and sanitary living conditions. Medical service is always convenient, and daily Mass is held for all those who wish to take advantage of it. Both the Montreal Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs lend their support to the camp. The Committee for the current season is as follows: Rev. J. L. O'Rourke, Chancellor of the Archdiocese, chairman; D. G. Shanahan, M. E. Day, L. P. Bradley and H. J. Thistlewaite. Struck on the head by a golf ball when a lady player made a stroke on the golf links at St. Bruno, Que., 11-year-old Eugene Larose, caddy, living at Beloeil, Que., was fatally injured and died soon afterwards. The boy was rushed to McEaster's, Que., for treatment by Dr. Archambault of that place, but succumbed to fracture of the skull. Coroner Lapierre of St. Antoine de Hopelieu was notified of the accident, as were the Provincial police. Investigations will be made. These are making a common practice of holding up taxi cab drivers. A

There are 4 grades of roofing felt selling in Newfoundland, "BARRETT'S" is guaranteed the highest grade. "Barrett's" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts have been in use in Newfoundland for more than 50 years. The best roof known in America is a "Barrett" roof, "Barrett's" felt ONLY is used in putting on a "Barrett" Roof. Ask any Architect. "Barrett" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts are really made of felt saturated with genuine coal tar—the 2 and 3-ply felts have a layer of coal tar pitch between each ply. "Barrett's" felts are made to give good wear, therefore they cost more than roofings made of paper saturated with diluted asphalt. If you use "Barrett's" felt instead of common felt, a new roof covering for your house may cost you $2.00 more for the whole roof. Roofs covered with "Barrett's" felt are secure, the extra cost of one or two dollars (for the entire roof) is money well spent. Which felt do you intend to use? Architects, Builders and Contractors prefer "Barrett's" Felt.

chauffeur of the Kennedy Taxi Company was held up at 2.30 in the morning near the Montreal Locomotive Works at Longue Pointe and beaten on the road. The "bad man" left the chauffeur on the road and made away with the car. They went about one hundred yards and then abandoned the car. The driver phoned to headquarters and another taxi was sent. The thugs got nothing for their trouble, and the chauffeur had all his money in his pocket and made his report when he reached the office of the Company. R. J. LOUIS BUDHIDY. Consuls Put Manufacturers Wise. Look up the word "consul" in the Encyclopedia and you will find that the mercantile consul is an agent appointed by the State to reside in foreign countries for protecting the interests of its merchants, travellers and mariners—also for supplying information, through the Government, for the guidance of trade and commerce. It is this latter part of their work which is of such immense importance to the country. For instance, some little time ago a large shipment of tinnet goods was sent to an English firm to Hong Kong for sale to Chinese on the Mainland. It was rejected, yet the firm's agents on the spot examined a number of the tins and found the contents perfectly good. What Was Wrong. It was the consul who was able to "put them wise." He pointed out that the labels were dirty and disfigured by damp. He told them that the Chinese rule is to open every case, remove the wrappers and examine the outside of the tins. The least blemish to the label involves the rejection of the tin. Another British firm sent needles to China, but was unable to sell them. The consul who was consulted pointed out that the needles were wrapped in blue paper. Blue is a mourning color in China, and therefore almost Finally I ventured on a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and kept on using it. At last we were rewarded by the steady healing of the sores, and finally he was completely relieved of them.
